Jury Case At Trial Now: One Other Settled

During this term of district court there haven't been too many jury cases, and opening yesterday morning, was one of the first ones.

The case was The State of Texas vs. Nelson Cox, charged with D. W. I. and testimony was being taken in the case at a late hour yesterday afternoon.

The only other Monday business was the settlement of the case, J. S. Brown vs. United Employer's Casualty Company, a suit on compensation.

Our informant, District Clerk Carl McClendon said there might be a few other cases, divorces, principally, which would finally wind up this term of court.

Ran Wilde and Hit Leaird's Show Window

That's about all anyone knows about it, and it wasn't the famous Ran Wilde, but somebody ran wild and their car crashed into the show window at Leaird's Department Store, furniture side.

It happened about 1:00 a. m. Sunday morning, and although there are clues, no one has been taken in for the offense, if it was one.

Things were moved out of the window, and the glass has not yet been repaired or replaced.

Births

A son, Charles Parker III, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Parker White in a Burkburnett hospital Sunday, August 4. The baby is a great grandson of Mrs. Pearl White of this city.

Mrs. Webbie Quicksall and Mrs. Grant Williams and two sons, Billy and Gene, of Randlett, Oklahoma have been visiting Mrs. Quicksall's mother, Mrs. J. B. Shows, and other relatives here. Mrs. Williams, who will be remembered as Miss Bethel Quicksall, and Mrs. Quicksall are former residents of Gatesville. They were accompanied home by Chester Franks, who will make an extended visit in Oklahoma.

Walter R. Adams Honored For His Poetry

Walter R. Adams, Ireland and Coryell County's poet-laureate has again been honored, by his work being selected for publication by Kaleidograph in their Tenth Book Publication Contest.

His winning script is Bachelor's Poppy.

The contest brought in 262 type-scripts from practically every state in the Union, and more than the usual number from Canada.

A brief biography of Mr. Adams is as follows:

WALTER R. ADAMS, author of BACHELOR'S POPPY, co-winner in the KALEIDOGRAPH Tenth Book Publication Contest, was born at Purmela, Texas, and received his education in Ireland High School and Baylor Normal College. He taught school for several years, but now is occupied as a bachelor-farmer along Plum Creek, which has been celebrated in many of his poems. He is the author of one book of poems, THE DEAD LIE DOWN, and co-author of SIX OF ONE (And Half-Dozen of Another), a collection of the work of six men and six women poets.

His poems have been published in Carillon, Holland's Magazine, Country Gentleman, New York Braith-Waite's Anthology and various others.

He has membership in the Texas Institute of Letters, The Poetry Society of Texas, through which he has won numerous awards, and an honorary membership in the Fort Worth Poetry Society. He is known also as a writer of prose and for his critiques of poetry books. His address is Ireland, Texas.

BEAR CLUB RODEO OPENS: BIG SHOW DUE

The Cowhands and Gals will have another big day, or days this week.

The Bear Club Rodeo opens this week.

Using the famous penitentiary stock, and with "Shorty" Grugan, big time rodeo clown, the show is expected to pack-em in.

It'll pack'em in the new rodeo arena near the Municipal Stadium, and they say there's plenty of parkin', not to mention sparkin' space.

Highlights of the show will be the Gatesville Quadrille composed of Gatesvilleites, who have made a distinct bang at Central Texas rodeos this year.

Miss Sue and Dick Jones of Houston are spending this week with Mr. and Mrs. Tom Davidson Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Young and daughters, Mrs. James Farquhar of Coleman and Miss Virginia of Dallas have returned from a very pleasant trip to Florida where they visited their son and daughter-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. H. Durham Young Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Anderson of Pidoke have just returned from an extended vacation in Colorado and New Mexico, including Taos, Denver, Colorado Springs and other points. They didn't say whether they saw Mr. Willkie or not.

SMALL FARMS SHOULD GROW MORE CROPS OF GREATER VALUE

The farm census for the year 1940 is likely to show an increase in numbers of both large and small farms during the past five years. Tractors have displaced tenants, whose farms have been combined to make larger units. These larger farms are now being worked with wage hands. But while many tenants have been forced off of family sized farms by the iron horse, Cousin Willie, Brother John and Uncle Ezra once employed in town, are back on the farm with their kin folks. Two million people have moved to farms since 1935, with kin folks coming back from town and sons growing up on the farm, thousands of farms already too small to produce a good living, have been sub-divided still further. Today we have hundreds of thousands of farms so small that it is a problem for the land to support in decency the people who are dependent on it for a living.

A farmer seeking a living by growing low valued crops on a very small plot of ground is badly handicapped. Yet, there are thousands of such farmers, and it is not likely that they will be able to obtain more land. The only alternative open to these folks is to do the best they can with the land they already have.

There are at least two things that a farmer on a small plot of land can do to enlarge his business. First of all, he will grow those crops and raise those types of livestock that will most completely utilize his labor. It has been proved time and again that farm income is closely related to the total number of day in the year the farmer works. The most important item a small farmer has to sell is his labor. It is worth more than his capital investment in land. Hence he should so use his land that it will completely utilize his time. For this reason, dairy cattle are usually much better adapted to small farms than beef cattle.

AUSTIN PRINTING FIRM PAYS FINE FOR FURNISHING LEGAL ADVICE

The Steck Printing Co., through their attorneys, acknowledged guilt in Bosque county and paid a fine of $100 in the court at Meridian, this for "unlawfully practicing law," this practice used in connection with seeking to secure all sorts of "bond issue" printing. Information from Meridian reads:

"The Steck Company for many years has been offering a service to counties, cities and school districts 'to prepare the legal proceedings necessary to be executed in voting or authorizing the issuance of proper securities' desired by said subdivisions, and also in nearly every instance, printed or lithographed the bonds or warrants.

"It was charged that the practice of a corporation furnishing legal services is contrary to law and in violation of the Penal Statute of the State of Texas, and more particularly in violation of the Article 430a of the Penal Code of the State of Texas.

"Since the Attorney General prescribes the forms and all the procedure necessary in the proper issuance of bonds and warrants, any ordinary country lawyer is capable of making up the bond or warrant transcript, and a big majority of the country printers are equipped to print the bonds and warrants, but the complete legal and printing service offered by this concern by its well-versed salesmen, captured most of the orders regardless of how much the cost.

"The complaints filed in this county against the Steck Company, said to be the first ever filed in any county in Texas, are based on contracts with Clifton Independent School District for $100.00 fee for legal services or proceedings in connection with the issuance of schoolhouse bonds.

"The other was for a like service performed for Cranfills Gap Independent School District of Cranfills Gap, Bosque County, Texas, but the fee in this case was not mentioned."—Texas Press Messenger.

Leake Ayres Fifty Years as Local Banker

In any city, town or state it is an unusual occurrence for a man to stay in the banking business continuously for 50 years. The month of August, 1890 marked the beginning of the banking career of Leake Ayres, who is now president of the National Bank of Gatesville.

His first position, as Mr. Ayres termed it, was that of "roust-about," which he began at the age of 17 years. At that time the bank was under the name of the Citizens National Bank, which was located on the same corner as the present bank.

Mr. Ayres' first official position was assistant cashier, to which he was promoted in 1901, and in June 1919 he was made cashier. Serving only three years in that position, Mr. Ayres was elected president of the First National Bank in August, 1921 to succeed the late Dr. J. R. Raby.

For 17 years he served as president of the First National Bank, and two years ago, when that bank and the Gatesville National Bank consolidated, he was elected president of the consolidated bank.

During his 50 years in the banking business, Mr. Ayres has made a wide circle of friends who hold him in the highest esteem. His remarkable personality and lovable traits of character have made him one of Gatesville's leading business men.

Coryell County News
Gatesville, Texas
Gentlemen:

Will you please change the address on the News to my new address.

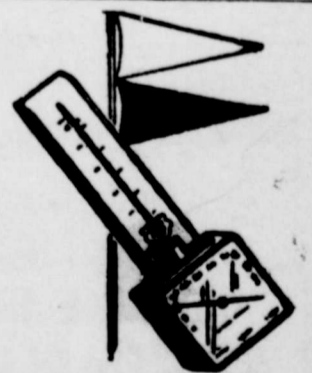

I surely have seen some beautiful country out here and in Oregon. Deep blue lakes, surrounded by tall and stately pines and firs, and in the far distance, snow covered mountains draped in clouds finely spun by Mother Nature. It is beautiful. It is the most beautiful country I have ever seen, but still I'll live in Gatesville. I like the Army very much.

Yours sincerely,

JACKSON REUNION

On last Sunday, August 4, the S. A. Jackson family, relatives and friends met for their annual reunion, at the new bridge on Coryell Creek about eight miles east of Gatesville.

The morning was spent meeting and greeting relatives, some present for the first time in twenty years.

One cousin, J. F. Punchard, of Warrensburg, Mo. had not visited our reunion in twenty-six years, remarked that he had talked so much his voice was giving out. Anyway he managed to make the day and was still talking when he left in the afternoon.

Mrs. S. A. (Sol) Jackson was the most honored, being the oldest one present, nearly eighty-five (85) years old, and also the only one of the older generation living.

At noon lunch was spread, and everyone really enjoyed the fine lunch and congenial friendship that prevailed throughout the day.

In the afternoon the older ones sat in the shade and visited while the younger people went swimming and reported a fine swim.

Those present were: Mrs. S. A. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Jackson and family, Marshal, Evelyn and Joe Lawrence, Oglesby, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Jackson, Leon Junction, Mr. and Mrs. Wade Jackson and children, Lonnie and Nelda Fae, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Jackson and daughter, Sherlean, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jackson and daughter, Gladys, all of Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Jackson and daughter, Virginia, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Jackson, all of Troy, Mr. J. F. Punchard of Warrensburg, Missouri, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. McKinney of Gatesville, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Gipe, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Wilkson, all of Moody, Miss Alma Green and brothers, Price and Grover Lee, Oglesby, Mrs. Betty Crafton Brice, Artesia, California, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Stodghill, of Riesel, J. C. Roedler of Gatesville.

When the time came to go home everyone went away happy and talking about coming again another year, the time and place to be decided later.—By one present.

CHALLENGE TO DEMOCRACY

Test of the durability of any institution is its ability to adjust itself to new conditions which challenge its right to survival.

Civilization is continually moving forward and movement implies change. As civilization progresses, it imposes upon its component parts the necessity of dying by the wayside or of acclimating itself by a constant process of adjustment to new conditions.

Rome fell because it became surfeited with its own power and wealth and was unable to withstand the onslaughts of more virile races. The British Empire, the greatest conglomeration of races and territories ever to exist under one flag, survived the democratic upheavals of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries because far-sighted statesmen yielded to colonial demands for independence.

Capitalism perished in Germany, Italy, and Russia in the twentieth century because it was incapable of meeting the needs of the people for work, food, clothing and shelter in the economic chaos of the post-war period.

By accepting widespread social reforms which altered or abolished century-old institutions in England, the British were able to preserve a capitalistic economy until a few weeks ago, when Winston Churchill decreed governmental control of the entire national wealth for the duration of the war.

Relatively few of the states of the earth adhere today to the monarchical system of government which prevailed almost universally in the seventeenth century and through much of the nineteenth century. In its essence, monarchy was incompatible with the new spirit of freedom, equality and fraternity which had its modern genesis in the American colonies and in France with the overthrow of the Bourbons and the establishment of the first republic.

Because monarchical government in such states as Spain, France, China, Russia and Turkey refused to compromise with the new thought which came to pervade its peoples, this form of government was consistently overthrown and supplanted by republican governments.

The one notable exception was Great Britain, where the throne relinquished its prerogatives to a popularly elected House of Commons, retaining for the monarch certain ceremonial and social duties which did not interfere with the right of the people to govern themselves through duly chosen representatives.

These are examples of institutions which have perished because they found themselves unable to cope with new and modern conditions and examples of institutions which were capable of accommodating themselves to these conditions and thus of surviving.

Today, democracy faces a similar challenge and there is grave doubt whether government of, by and for the people has prepared itself spiritually and morally to meet the challenge.

In less than half a decade, state after state in Europe adhering to democratic forms of government has been struck down by a ruthless force recognizing none of the basic tenets of democracy.

From 1933 to 1938 the democracies of Europe as a group possessed such overwhelming power—military, naval, financial, industrial—that unitedly they could have swept Nazism and Fascism from the face of the earth. Instead, they chose to permit the madman of Berlin to destroy them one by one until now he has all of Europe at his feet.

France, the strongest bulwark for democracy on the European continent, is gone. France is gone!! How tragic is that statement in its implications, to free men in all parts of the world!

Why is France destroyed as a factor for peace, stability and freedom in Europe? Why has Britain lost her traditional allies on the continent and with them her lines of defense?

We in America can well ask these questions, for we adhere to the same general order of government and economics as Republican France and Great Britain and we too may be challenged in the future by the same forces, domestic and foreign, that destroyed France.

Patently, France lacked and men and planes and guns sufficient to counter the German attack. But France also attempted to fight without two of the necessary requisites to victory in any war: a spirit of self-sacrifice among the people and a war economy. The former prevented the establishment of the latter.

The German economy has been geared to a war basis at least since 1935 when Hitler decreed compulsory military service. The German (Continued on page seven)

The Poorest Place to Tell a Lie!

IT has been said by some of our radical reformers that advertising misleads the public.

Such accusations fall under their own weight.

The poorest place in the world to attempt a lie is in the advertising columns of American newspapers and magazines, and in American radio programs.

In the first place, our publishers and broadcasting companies wouldn't carry dishonest advertising. They outlawed it long ago.

In the second place, such efforts to mislead would be conducted in full view of the public and of the officials empowered to apply fraud laws.

In the third place, dishonest advertising is as inefficient as dirty football. It does not pay.

Informed people have lost interest in the advertising-baiting books and speeches of the radical self-appointed reformers since one after another of them has figured prominently before the House Special Committee on un-American Activities.

OPENING GAMES IN NEWS BASEBALL CUP
RACE PLAYED AT STATE YESTERDAY

As The News goes to press the opening games of the News Baseball Championship Series are being played on the State Training School Diamond. Facing each other in the opening tilt are the Pidcoke Cokers and the Mound nine which should be one of the hottest contested games of the Tourney, and in the second clash the Blackfoot Indians bump up against the Jonesboro Eagles in a game that should be equally as interesting.

The double elimination system is being used, which means that a team must be defeated twice before they are definitely out of the race, and any team that wins two straight games clinches a spot in the final playoff.

These games are free to the public and should continue at the rate of two each afternoon until Thursday or Friday of this week when the 1940 Champions of the County will be crowned. Make it a point to see some of these championship tilts as they probably won't be equalled for several years to come.

The County Baseball league is being sponsored solely by the Coryell County News and each year they offer a trophy to the winning club in the race.

Mr. and Mrs. Happy Lee had as their guests Sunday Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Hill and family of Levita, Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Carroll and family of Izora, and Mr. and Mrs. Grady Hill and family of Harmon.

BRACKETED—

man people are resigned to the sacrifices necessary to achieve their war objectives.

But even after the outbreak of war in September, 1939, France and Britain did not adopt total war measures designed to prepare their peoples and their economies for war. Labor and capital were not conscripted in France until the last minute—and in a literal sense it proved to be the last minute for the French Republic. The French leaders made no attempt to impose the sacrifices essential to a successful prosecution of the war. Where Hitler fought the war with men and guns, France and Britain attempted to fight it with money—and with not too much money. With some ten billions of dollars of assets available for the purchase of war materials in the United States, the Allies refused until Hitler marched into the Low Countries in May to place large orders here for planes and other equipment to complement their own production. Then it was too late.

What is the lesson for the United States?

The lesson is that democracy will fall here, too, as in Europe, if we permit ourselves to stumble into the pitfalls which destroyed France and the other democracies. Democratic government must rejuvenate itself by a process of self-analysis which will prepare it to adjust itself to the new conditions now confronting it. Recognized weaknesses must be ruthlessly discarded, tradition and sentiment notwithstanding.

Precisely what does this involve? It involves a willingness by labor to accept fair remuneration for its output of energy and to cease extorting industry for exorbitant wages that consume profits and destroy the profit motive.

It involves abandonment of the policy of capitalists of making "safe" investments in such non-productive spheres as government bonds. Capital must be applied to the production of new wealth.

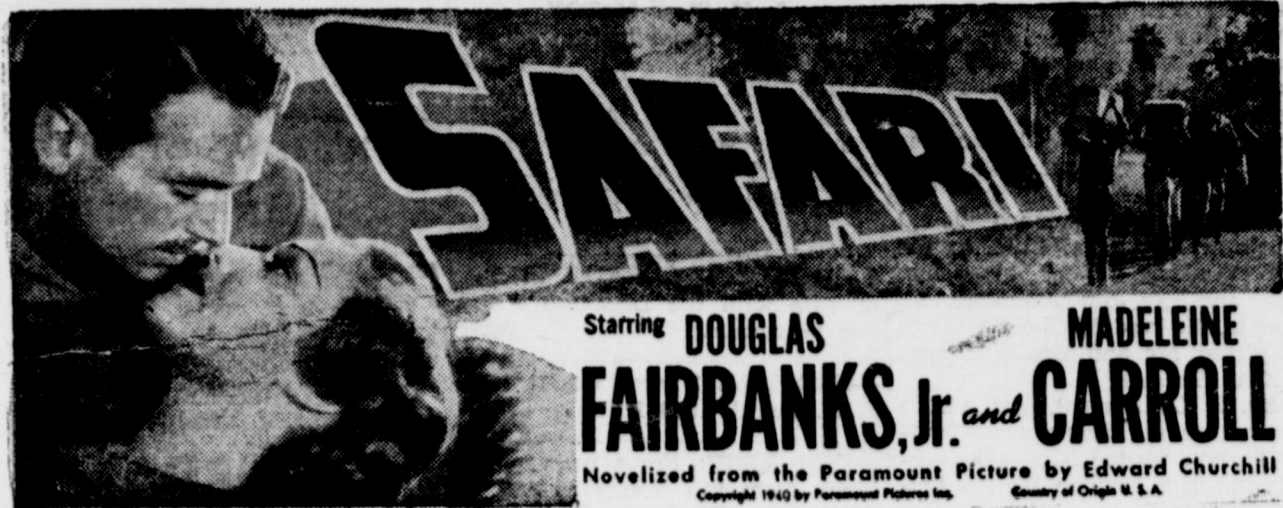

Big Government, government by coercion, must be avoided and the trend toward state socialism halted as big business was itself brought under control in the interests of society by legislative action.

an ideal—the ideal that each and every man is entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness in these United States.

If these principles had dominated French life for the last twenty years, Paris today would be a free city. If the American people and their leaders accept and apply these principles to their collective and individual lives, this hemisphere will remain forever free of the tramp of Nazi boots.

What Helps Business Helps You!

The people must re-adopt the spirit of the signers of the Declaration of Independence who were willing to sacrifice both life and property for the preservation of

SYNOPSIS

Linda Stewart is startled when she is told by a primitive medicine man in a native village in the interior of Africa that the safari guide, Jim Logan, will "pass through the valley of the shadow of death but will emerge unscathed." Linda, guest of Baron de Courland on safari, has hoped that the baron would propose, and has been showing interest in Logan to pique the baron into doing so. De Courland is a multi-millionaire, and Linda, after once having fallen in love with an aviator like Logan, wants peace and security—she thinks.

CHAPTER VI

JOCK McPHAIL took his leave of the baron, Linda and Logan at the village the next morning. He would remain to sell his wares. They would go onward on the boat into the interior of Africa on the hunting trip.

After several more days of travel, the boat reached the headwaters of the river. Then, with natives carrying the packs, the baron, Linda and Logan arrived at the permanent camp, tired from the trek through the brush country, over the mountains and through dense, fever-infested swamps.

The camp was situated in the center of a circular fenced clearing, within which was a central thatched roof cottage which served for cooking, dining and lounging. There were several other huts, to be used by Logan's guests. When the safari advanced on the camp several natives, bare to the waist but wearing gaily decorated cotton cloths wrapped around them like skirts, rushed out. They jumped up and down excitedly as they saw Logan.

Logan pointed out his retainers as Dopey, Sleepy, Happy, Bashful, Doc, Sneezzy and Grumpy, the cook. He told the baron and Linda to pick their personal servants. Linda chose Happy, the smiling one.

"And you take Sleepy," Logan advised the baron.

The native boys took the dunnage to the various huts. During the hustle and bustle, de Courland said:

"I think I'll cool off with an alcohol sponge."

"And," Linda exclaimed, "I'll baptize my collapsible bath-tub!"

Happy escorted Linda to her cottage and Sleepy took the baron to his. Logan headed for his quarters, thinking of a refreshing shower and pulling off his shirt as he went.

A few minutes later he had finished and dressed again. He went to Linda's cottage and found her and Happy struggling bravely but futilely with the tub. She wore a towel bathing robe.

"Seems like an awful lot of trouble just to take a bath," Logan said.

"Happy, bring soap and towels. Linda, you follow me."

He led her to the circular contraption he had used for his shower, told her to go inside and remove her robe. Then he directed natives to climb up the ladder beside it and dump water down on her, letting it spray through holes in the bottom of a five-gallon can. This operation proved successful and a few moments later Linda emerged, cool and refreshed.

"I've never had such service!" she exclaimed, happily. "Thank you, Wemba—Happy—" She indicated the natives. "And you, Jim."

Linda returned to her cottage to find the baron waiting impatiently for her and eyeing the improvised shower with distaste.

"Come in, Charles," she invited.

The baron followed ungraciously, his eyes smouldering.

"I wanted to know if you were comfortable," he said, lamely.

"Oh, very. Jim's shown me everything."

"Yes, I noticed," he declared, smiling wryly. "You do not find him presumptuous?"

"Why, Charles! Of course not!" She feigned surprise. She explained about the bath tub and its failure, and added: "You mustn't be silly, Charles. After all, we're his guests—"

"On the contrary, my dear!" De Courland struggled to subdue his jealous resentment. "He is my employee."

Linda waved him back as he advanced.

"Please go, Charles," she asked. "I must dress."

"Of course," He forced a smile. Then he departed.

Beyond the compound, natives worked over Logan's small biplane, examining the fittings, stowing the tarpaulin covers, and pouring gasoline into the wing tank. Logan supervised the operation with a trained, critical eye. When he was sure that the ship had been serviced properly and contained enough fuel he got into the rear cockpit. Wemba twisted the propeller and the motor took hold, coughed and idled. Then the native stowed a large knife, Logan's rifle and some food in the baggage compartment.

Logan was about to shove his throttle forward when he heard:

"Look this way, please."

Linda was busy taking motion pictures with a small camera.

After she'd finished, she advanced to the ship and asked:

"Is this Susie?"

"This is she," Logan replied.

"I fly plane, too," Wemba said, proudly, patting his chest.

"Does he?" Linda asked Jim.

"I taught him. Always good to have a spare. He's pretty good, too. Calls himself the black buzzard."

Linda laughed.

"Where are you going?" she asked.

"Oh—check up on some game."

She looked over the ship and then up at Jim. Then she asked, eagerly:

"May I go, too?"

"Sure. Why not?" He turned to Wemba. "We'll be back for dinner," he said.

As Wemba handed Logan a large revolver in a holster and a cartridge belt, Linda looked back toward the compound, as if looking to see if the baron was watching her. She smiled to herself as Logan alighted from the plane and helped her into the rear cockpit.

"Good luck, massa," Wemba called, in his native tongue.

on a small farm is large per acre yields of crops and livestock with high productive capacity. Even though you can't have a bigger farm, there is no reason why you shouldn't have "bigger acres" which will grow more corn and cotton and carry more and better cattle and hogs and poultry.

The Farm Security Administration in Texas and Oklahoma is offering to co-operate with individuals and groups who will sponsor a movement to encourage this sort of farming. Of course, there is nothing new in telling folks how to farm. It's an old story to farm people. Already some of them are not farming half as well as they know how. But, as Farm Security Administration stresses, farmers have gotten so filled with the idea that they must have a bigger farm that they won't believe they can make a better living off a little farm. Something now is needed to dramatize good farming on a small acreage. Farm Security Administration proposes to do this by sponsoring county contests for small farms with prizes and publicity for the winners. Suggested rules for such a contest have been drafted, and FSA officials are inviting newspapers, chambers of commerce, civic organizations, and county land use planning commit-
