Ted Harris, now of Brady, and formerly Sports Editor of the News, along with former Sheriff Joe White are pictured in the September 8, 1940 edition of the New York Daily News, Sunday edition.

This story, on a double page is entitled "Will Justice Triumph?"

The story is by Peter Levens, and covers the so called "Blankenship mystery of Coryell County" The New York newspaper mentions the following, Mrs. Ethel Blankenship Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. George Middick, Joe Dean Blankenship, and his wife, Bernice, and others connected in the case, including Jeff Davis, Leslie Thompson, Justice of the Peace, Eli Goodson, Rev. Aubrey Turner, Mrs. Cora Stanley, Jim Blankenship, William Davenport, Glenn B. Gammel.

Former Sheriff Joe White, Mrs. Ethel Blankenship Johnson, Grandpa Middick, Julia Evans are all pictured along with the story, as well as the general store and filling station, and the Middick home, near Copperas Cove are pictured.

Under the picture of Ted Harris, the following "cut" lines are carried: "THE PRESERVES WERE POISONED", Ted Harris, reporter of Gatesville, Tex., holds jars of preserves and chow-chow which the Blankenships received thru the mail several months before their deaths. Chemical analysis showed that the preserves contained a lethal dose of strychnine. Harris holds the two jars in a box and has papers in his hands.

This now famous case, according to the New York News is still unsettled, and the head reads "Law Stymied in Texas 'Candy Bar' Killings".

Newland Home Is Featured In Trade Paper

"Home Oddities" by Weil, which is featured on the back cover of W. F. & J. F. Barnes Lumber Co.'s trade publication, "Home", features the Alice Newland home near Gatesville.

The house, according to the cartoon is "82 years old and not completed . . . This home was first a two room log cabin . . . Fifteen years later three more rooms were added . . . A few years later a part of a second story was added . . . The Grandson of the builder plans to finish the house soon . . . (Fort Gates, Texas)"

Now, we've been to Fort Gates and probably seen this house, but didn't know about it. There are many "strange stories" circulating in Coryell county—always interesting reading—but rarely uncovered.

A.A.A. OFFICE SAYS FARMERS HERE LOST MORE THAN $19,000 IN 1940

Farmers in Coryell county, one of the 19 counties of this extension district, have lost $19,239 by failing to earn that much of the $44,697 maximum soil-building allowance set up for them under the 1939 AAA program. They did earn $25,458 or 57 per cent of the amount available.

Maximum soil building allowance is set up for each cooperating farm, based on the non-depleting cropland acreage, vegetable allotment acreage, commercial orchard acreage, and non-crop open pasture land acreage. Farmers, to receive payments, must put into effect on his farm these practices, approved by the AAA.

Robertson county leads in the counties in these payments and Lampasas was the lowest county.

Until November 30, 1940, farmers may complete the turning under of soil building crops, completion of terraces, etc., which will work toward earning their soil building allowances for 1940. Only the farmers earning a total soil-building allowance are eligible to sign an application for payment prior to November 30, 1940.

WACOAN TELLS CORYELL COUNTY HE COULDN'T RUSTLE THERE

A Wacoan questioned in connection with cattle thefts in Coryell county insisted that he had a satisfactory alibi.

"Alright, let's have it," agreed an impatient investigator.

"I couldn't have stolen cattle here on that night; that was the night I stole three cows near Wor-in connection with theft of approximately 300 cattle since the first of the year. Detectives in Waco said 30 calves recently were stolen from John Strange of Waco and Will Strange of Mart at their farm near Riesel.

Three Limestone county thefts and one Coryell county have been cleared up so far. The arrests were made Friday.—Waco Times-Herald.

4-H BOYS JOIN F.F.A. BOYS IN ENCAMPMENT AT RABY PARK FRIDAY

Friday morning a group of 4-H and FFA boys and their parents met in Raby Park for their annual encampment, each boy arriving prepared for a swim.

Ed Foster, well known farmer of the Osage community spoke to the boys after the swim, and then a luncheon was served in picnic style.

After lunch Dan E. Graves, of The National Bank of Gatesville, talked on honesty in life. Edgar Franks expressed the appreciation of the school board, of which he is president, for the good work the boys are doing and that the school board would at any time help them to continue.

M. T. Payne, District Agent, explained the importance of the work, and how it has won recognition over the nation for both boys and girls. Guy Powell, County Agent spoke about the coming stock show and fairs.

Closing the day, C. E. Alvis, Jr., County Attorney gave the boys pointers on life saving.

BANKER-GOLFER NIPS HOLE-IN-ONE: IT'S EXCLUSIVE

Yes, it's exclusive, when you hit a ball the size of a big pecan and it goes 150 yards, more or less, and rolls into a 6-inch cup.

Pete Patterson did it the other day, and he's a southpaw, which makes it even more strange.

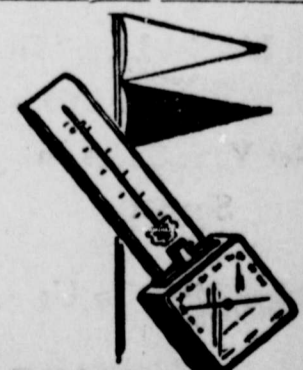

W. T. Bannister, of the AAA office also did it on the local Golf Course. The Hole-in-One Club has only a very, very few members anywhere.

Incidentally, here, local golfers have a chance to enter a tournament at Marlin Saturday and Sunday. It's the 15th Annual Central Texas Golf Tournament. There'll be barbecue, and prizes.

Jack Hearn has been visiting in Denton, Fort Worth and Dallas.

AGREEMENT WITH ENGLAND

Democracy no longer can be considered as being on the defensive in the struggle for world supremacy against totalitarianism when the governments of the two greatest democratic states are able to consummate an agreement which strengthens both immeasurably.

Britain is better prepared to resist invasion and to protect her life-providing convoys, and the United States is now three times as strong in its defensive position, as a result of the agreement to exchange 50 overage American destroyers to Britain for leases on vital air and naval bases in this hemisphere.

The immediate consequences are of primary concern to us at the moment, but the future potentials can not be overlooked, such as the possible union of the American and British nations at some distant date.

For Britain, the addition of 50 destroyers to her fleet at this time will tide over the period that must elapse before her new destroyers can be launched. Better patrols can now be maintained in the Channel waters against a possible German expeditionary force, and the convoys which bring foodstuffs and essential raw materials to British ports from all parts of the world will be afforded better protection.

But this is not the only immediate and important aspect of the agreement to Britain. It is safe to assume that the effect upon the morale of the British people of this gesture of amity and co-operation between the Anglo-Saxon peoples will weigh more significantly in Britain's favor than the actual value of the destroyers themselves.

By making available these destroyers to fill one of the weak links in Britain's defense, the United States has definitely signified its intention to lend all possible aid to the British in their struggle for survival. This the British will be quick to recognize, and the fact that the vast resources of this republic have been aligned with the strength of the mighty British Empire will impel the British to further endeavors to win the war.

Among the subjugated peoples of Europe and in the French colonies of Africa, many of which are still debating whether to join the forces of General de Gaulle and his refugee French government in London, repercussions of this agreement also will be felt.

New hope will be instilled in these people with the knowledge that the power and resources of the United States, both material and diplomatic, definitely have swung into the balance with the democratic peoples of the world.

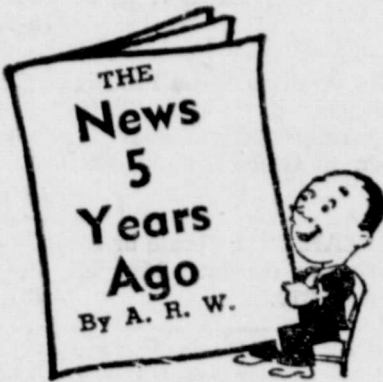

For the United States, the agreement triples our defensive strength. Our outposts have been extended hundreds of miles into the Atlantic, from Newfoundland to British Guinea, affording our naval and air forces the opportunity to strike at any invading force before it reaches the vicinity of our Atlantic seaboard. Without these bases, it would be impossible to repel an invader before he had reached this hemisphere.

This is the chief significance of the agreement to the United States. For without bases in which to refuel, effect minor repairs, and take on ammunition, water and food, the mightiest battleship is important—more helpless than an automobile without petrol.

Any European antagonist of this country now will hesitate before embarking upon the conquest of this republic, or, for that matter, of the Western Hemisphere. We now have two lines of defense on our Atlantic seaboard—the first on the newly acquired bases, the second on our own shores—on which to offer resistance to present or future Hitlers.

DOUBLE RANGE ANTI-KNOCK in the New Sinclair H-C

Now at Sinclair dealers you can get a new Sinclair H-C which has Double-Range Anti-Knock!

Every motorist knows that there are two important ranges of acceleration where you need knockless power. The first range is from 10 to 45 miles per hour for ordinary pick-up in traffic. The second range is from 45 to 90 miles per hour where you need extra high anti-knock for sudden spurts of speed to pass other cars on the highway.

Some gasolines may give high anti-knock in one range but not in the other. Now Sinclair has developed a gasoline that gives you high anti-knock not just in one range, but in two.

With this new Double-Range anti-knock you also get quick starting—rapid pick-up—smooth power—and longer mileage. The new H-C is truly an all-around gasoline, the result of many years of continuous improvement in refining.

See your nearby Sinclair dealer. Try out the new Double-Range H-C today. A complete tankful will give you a personal demonstration in your own car.

For performance, no gasoline at regular price is superior to the new H-C.

WHITHER HITLER?

As Adolf Hitler's long-heralded invasion of Britain fails to materialize, speculation increases about the future course of World War II. Peace seems to be out of the question until one of the belligerents is destroyed or so weakened that he must capitulate. Neither Britain nor Germany is yet approaching that state, according to reliable information. What may we expect in the way

A WALTER WANGER production • Directed by JOHN FORD

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

Aboard the frontier stagecoach to Lordsburg, N. M., on a certain Spring morning in 1885, are old Doc Boone, inebriate surgeon; Dallas, a dance hall girl; Gatewood, a pompous frontier banker; Peacock, a timid little whiskey drummer; Mrs. Mallory, an officer's wife who is traveling to join her husband before her child is born; and Hatfield, a punotious gambler from the South. Buck, the driver, and Curly Wilcox, U. S. Marshal, are atop the coach; and all are tense at the news that Geronimo, dreaded Apache chief, is on the war-path. They pick up the Ringo Kid, handsome young fugitive from the law who is bound for Lordsburg to "shoot out" his feud with the Plummers. At the first station they find that their cavalry guard has been ordered away, and Curly calls a conference to determine whether or not to go on.

Chapter Three

The council of war was brief and decisive. Only Buck and Peacock voted to return. Mrs. Mallory insisted on going ahead to join her husband, Apaches or no Apaches. Gatewood also was loud in demanding continuance of the trip, standing on his "legal rights". Doc Boone snapped his fingers at danger, and Dallas was completely indifferent to whatever might happen. As for Curly, he cast two votes — one for himself and one for Ringo — to go on.

"Where's my husband?" she demanded frantically.

This much decided, they sat down to a hurried luncheon while the horses were being changed. Ringo, who in the coach had already shown a quiet but respectful interest in Dallas, sat next to her at the long table, but most of the others ostentatiously drew away as far as possible.

"Looks like I got the plague, don't it?" Ringo remarked to Dallas. "Well, you can't break out of prison and into society in the same week. . . . Thanks for not movin' away like they did."

"It's not you," she said quietly. "Please — don't go away. But why do you keep looking at me like that?"

"Just tryin' to remember. Ain't I seen you somewhere before?" "No! No, you haven't! But I know who you are—I guess everybody in the Territory does."

"Yeah, I used to be a good cowhand, few years back. But—things happen, and now I'm headed back to jail. . . . But not till I finish a job in Lordsburg!"

The stagecoach was soon off again, Buck urging on his horses and nervously looking to left and right as the equipage with its little band of travelers rolled across stretches of plain and around mountain roads, guarded only by Curly's shotgun and such miscellaneous weapons as the male passengers possessed.

Gatewood was just as loud as ever, railing against the "impertinence" of the soldiers in leaving the stage to return to their post. Hatfield, sympathizing with Mrs. Mallory in her plight, cursed the driver every time the coach hit a bumpy spot in the road; but when Dallas offered the tired gentleman her shoulder to lean upon, she declined with frigid dignity. And as for Ringo, he grew more and more puzzled at the attitude of the others, toward Dallas, especially when Hatfield gallantly offered his private silver cup to Mrs. Mallory for a drink of water from Buck's canteen, but refused it to the dance hall girl.

But in spite of Buck's nervousness and Peacock's prayerful vigilance, the run to Apache Wells was completed without an untoward incident, and Buck triumphantly guided his horses into the innyard just as the sun was beginning to set.

"Howdy, Chris," he croaked gleefully to the pot-bellied Mexican in charge of the station. "Seven hours from Dry Fork—that's fast driving, amigo!"

"You come without soldiers?" demanded Chris in amazement.

"Sure, we wasn't scared," proclaimed Buck. . . . Say, where's the cavalry that was to meet us here?" "Ain't no soldiers," replied Chris laconically. "Soldiers gone."

"Where's my husband?" demanded Mrs. Mallory frantically.

"Captain Mallory—where is he?"

"Was leetle skirmish with Apaches last night," said Chris, jerking a thumb toward the hills. "Soldiers take Captain Mallory to Lordsburg. He get hurt, maybe."

Lucy Mallory stood stock still, her lovely, chiseled face a mask of tragedy. Dallas, touched by the girl's plight, forgetting her own slights, gently placed a hand on her arm.

"Mrs. Mallory, let me—"

"I'm all right, thank you," said the Southern woman, drawing away. But scarcely had they gone inside the inn to consider what to do next, when Mrs. Mallory uttered a low, sighing moan and slumped to the floor. For a long moment they all looked at the still form, horrified; then Curly rushed forward and gathered her up in his arms.

"Doc! Doc Bonne!" he cried. "Come on, we're gonna need you!" But Doc Boone was swaying against the bar, tipsily balancing a drink in his hand.

And while Hatfield muttered under his breath about the "drunken swine of a physician," and Gatewood raged at the delay, the old medico bawled for "quarts of black coffee—good and strong!" And an incredible amount of it he drank—cup after cup of the steaming, aromatic fluid—until at last he straightened up, took his bag, and went toward the cheerless bedroom where Curly had taken Mrs. Mallory to face the immortal battle for her own life and that of another she bore within her.

of strategical maneuvers during the next month and during the next year? Of course, what we may "expect" and what may happen can be two entirely different things, but in war speculation is often interesting if not conclusive.

Hitler cannot claim to have won this war until Britain is destroyed. Invasion as a means of reducing Britain has not yet been attempted, for any one of many possible reasons. Large-scale air attacks have caused no appreciable damage to military objectives, and the "blockade" by German submarines and aircraft of Britain's coastline has miserably failed.

Can it be that Hitler has met his match in Britain, as did the mighty Napoleon. The doughty little Corsican reduced all of Europe, except Russia, to his will but was unable to subdue the British and eventually was destroyed through the diplomatic, naval and military maneuvers of the selfsame Britons who are defying the Nazi legions today.

Can 20 miles of Channel water stop the mechanized armies of the Austrian corporal from attaining their objective of the conquest of Europe and ultimately of the world? Despite the potency of air power as a modern military weapon the answer of this question is that the Channel has stopped Hitler to date and may continue to do so until his power on the continent collapses.

Probably Hitler can continue to fight for one year, perhaps two. But there is a limit to the resources at his command, although he has access to the riches of France and of the Balkans. Europe has never been self-sufficient in modern times, either in foodstuffs or in such essential raw materials as oil, cotton, rubber and tin.

If the war is prolonged indefinitely through the successful resistance of Britain, where is Hitler to obtain these materials to replenish the carefully hoarded supplies which will be exhausted over an extended period of time?

Unlike Britain, he has no surface fleet to import to his ports the materials which he lacks. And substitutes can be produced only in limited quantities and at enormous cost.

Hitler, and his equally poor ally, Mussolini, could solve this problem if they could destroy British power in the Near East. This done, they could draw cotton from Egypt oil from Iraq and Iran, and establish sea connections with the Far East for the importation of tin and rubber.

For it is a reasonably safe bet that if Britain loses her strongholds in Egypt and around the Suez Canal, she will be rendered impotent on the sea except possibly in her home waters.

Thus, the fighting which the British and the Italians are waging in the Near East cannot be overlooked in its effect upon the final outcome of the war. Indeed it is not an overstatement to say that the outcome of the Anglo-Italian war is crucial both to Hitler and to the British.

The sea connections of Britain with her empire are still intact and the winter months will make the task of the convoys an easier one. So while Hitler and Mussolini are exhausting their precious supplies and their manpower, the British, if they can hold out until winter, can draw vast quantities of supplies from all their dominions and colonies and from the United States, not to mention the thousands of pilots who are training for European service in Canada and other parts of the Empire.

This is one aspect of the war, one of the most important ones, I might add. It sums up to a brighter picture for Britain and her chances than has heretofore been possible to make.

LIBERTY CLUB

Grace Elam, Reporter
Liberty Club had another very interesting and successful meeting at its community center August 27th. Two features made this meeting doubly interesting. The most important was the instructive lecture by Miss Jones, our demonstration agent. When she had finished, every woman listener had resolved to improve her home landscaping by making beautiful curved walks and drives. Miss Jones is a very forceful and convincing teacher. She never visits our club without really giving each listener something to take home with her—something that will make the rural home brighter and better.

The other feature was produced by the girls and young women. It was a rousing election by the primary plan. Miss Lois Jones and Miss Josephine Parrish were checking clerks, using the black boards on opposite sides of the room. Mrs. Calvin Perryman, acting as recording clerk, was placed between the others. Miss Pauline Glaze and Mrs. Loy Gene Brown, the tellers, distributed, collected and called the ballots. As usual, the young people made a hilarious game of the entire procedure. Much merriment was provoked by their announcements, "There ain't going to be no run-off", etc. In most casts there were no run-offs, but the precedent was broken by the presidential election. Since our club territory is almost evenly divided between Hamilton and Coryell counties, there is always a little innocent rivalry as to which county elects the president. In the "run-off" Mrs. J. B. Jones, representing Coryell, was only two votes behind the Hamilton candidate. All nominating and electing was done by secret ballot. It was evident that each group had previously chosen its candidates. The following officers were elected: Mrs. Bessie Brown, President; Mrs. J. B. Jones Vice-President; Mrs. Calvin Perryman, Secretary, Mrs. Hill Parrish, Council Delegate; Miss Grace Elam, Reporter.

Our Club was nappy to receive a new member, Lucile Freeman Harris, bride of Audley Harris. She has been reared in the Purmela community. Knowing her great value as a leader in all worthwhile community activities, we have covetously watched the courtship of these splendid young people, which culminated in their recent marriage. Great things are expected of you, Lucille.

Mrs. Fleeta Wright will be hostess for our next meeting, which will be held at the Grace Elam home, September 10th. A miscellaneous shower for Mrs. Audley Harris will be the high-light of the occasion. All friends of the Harris and Freeman families have special invitations to attend this meeting. This includes people from other communities, who might wish to attend.
