NOTICE: Any erroneous reflection upon the character or standing of any person or firm appearing in its columns will be gladly and promptly corrected upon calling the attention of the management to the article in question.

American should ponder. We need more of them, for the dangers confronting this great republic cannot be over emphasized.

The profundity of the events now transpiring not only in Europe but in Asia, Africa and in our own hemisphere as related to the life of every American citizen is almost incomprehensible to perceive.

Repercussion of the European struggle upon the daily lives of Americans will be more apparent in the future when our men and boys are drawn into the armed services for compulsory training. The tendency of the last seven years for citizens and communities to the citizen and his property are subjected to government control in the interest of national defense.

ject to governmental control in the interest of national defense.

This marks a fundamental and historical departure from the traditional American way of life. But those fully cognizant of the changes that have taken place in the last 12 months of century-old institutions that have been either destroyed or abandoned in the mad rush of events in Europe, recognize the need for this country to be alert and to meet change with change wherever necessary.

Lamentations over the passing of an era in 1929 were loud and long among the American people. But the face of America will be more irretrievably changed and altered by the events now sweeping the world like some consuming tempest than it was by the temporary collapse of the American economic system at the beginning of the last decade.

This war represents a gigantic test of strength between the ideals in which we believe and the principals to which we adhere, on the one hand, and the opposing ideals and principles of government by dictatorship on the other hand. The winning philosophy of government will dominate the social, political, religious and economic life of the world for an indeterminate future time.

These words represent no war-mongering, no hysteria-inciting propaganda. They represent the cumulative opinions of every realistic person in this country.

The world has stumbled into an awful plight. We in America are an integral part of this world and we shall not be able to isolate nor to insulate ourselves from the repercussions of the conflict in Europe by any conceivable measures, including the erection of a 20th century Chinese wall.

Only a mental wall created by the attitude and will of a brave and united people, determined, as are the gallant Briton, to sacrifice all in defense of cherished institutions, can keep from our doors the charging steed of Mars, ridden by a kleptomaniac ex-corporal.

That is the wall that the American people must erect if they are to survive. This column wholeheartedly approves of all of the defense measures now underway in this country.

But the fallacy of mechanical walls unsupported by the will of a people was proved in France. We in America are charged with the inescapable duty of maintaining the wall which this country is erecting for its defense.

ATTIC TO CELLER HAWKEYE TRIP WELL WORTH MAKING

A little attention now may mean the difference between comfort and discomfort when cold weather sets in. Homeowners are advised to take a personal "Cooks Tour" of their home to check every part of the house from cellar to attic and all points in between.

The tour should disclose the things that need to be done to provide the most comfort during the indoor season. For example, the furnace . . . is it ready to heat your home evenly and comfortably? There are many things you can do to make home more comfortable . . . look to your home's insulation, storm sash, weather-stripping . . . watch out for broken glass, drafty doors or windows, leakage of heat.

Your roving eye should consider the plumbing carefully, be sure that that the proper precautions are taken to prevent freeze-ups and bursting water pipes, and leaks should be taken care of to keep water bills down and prevent damage to plaster or wood. Faucets and fixtures may need attention. Wiring and outlets should be checked.

An extremely important bracket for your personal satisfaction as well as in regard to the value of your home. Check condition of paint, ceilings, plaster, and hardware, such as doorknobs, etc.

Do not wait until cold weather sets in before you start repairing your home.

A MESSAGE FOR ALL

In the proclamation fixing the registration day for conscripted men, President Roosevelt declared: "America stands at the crossroads of its destiny."

"Time and distance have been shortened. A few weeks have seen great nations fall. We cannot remain indifferent to the philosophy of forces now rampant in the world. The terrible fate of nations whose weakness invited attack is too well known to us all.

"We must and will marshal our great potential strength to fend off war from our shores. We must and will prevent our land from becoming a victim of aggression."

The thought and substance of these words are particularly impelling and apropos at this critical hour in the history of the world. They are words over which every

WISE HOME BUILDERS CHECK LOTS THOROUGHLY BEFORE PURCHASE!

If you're looking around now for a lot on which to build next Spring, the first essential is finding a real estate company or agent in whom you can place complete confidence. The business of buying land has many aspects not usually encountered in ordinary purchasing and since a homesite possesses so many direct influences on your future home life and happiness, every detail surrounding its purchase requires careful consideration.

Your reliable agent will agree that location is one of the most important considerations in buying land. Your lot should be near good transportation, grocery store and markets, schools and churches . . . each one of these being an essential to one or more members of your family. The lot should also be convenient to a fire hydrant in a community that poses an efficient fire department.

Of course you want electric, water and gas service, so be sure such connections can easily be made to your lot. Streets and sidewalks are other essentials for fully improved property, and the bring up a thing that frequently surprises the hasty buyer assessments. Be sure you find out the state of the property, whether improvements already in and assessed for have been paid, and whether there is likelihood of further improvements being made for which you will be assessed when you possess the title.

Examination of the title is advisable to be sure that it is free of and encumbrances or clouds that might effect your ownership. Your agent should check this thoroughly, and probably will recommend a further precaution of insuring the title.

Check the lot for size, see whether an accurate survey has been made of the property and the lot lines are clearly marked. Check also for drainage—both your own lot and those of the neighbors adjoining. Trees and shrubs are desirable though not essential, and the quality of the soil is a point for garden fiends to consider.

FALL IS THE BEST TIME TO FIX-UP AND REMODEL

Not only can you do vital things for your comfort in the Fall, getting the furnace ready and storm sash in, but also Fall is a perfect time to do lots of things. For example, painting. The weather in autumn is apt to be ideal for painting . . . dry, warm and besides that, there aren't those plaguey little bugs that come around to get on freshly coated jobs.

With a long stretch of indoors weather ahead. Fall certainly is the ideal time to remodel, too. Just think how nice a new game room would be on those long winter nights, and with the Mrs. spending more time indoors, too, she would certainly like to have her kitchen brought up to date. Another remodeling possibility is your attic. Those of you who have nothing but old cobwebby trunks on your second floor will be surprised at the smart and lovely rooms you can make up there at low cost. The basement, too, has possibilities. One of them is a recreation center with chairs, a bar and games for winter entertaining, or perhaps you are a camera fan, in which case you'd go for an equipped dark room.

Best part of these things is that they can be had for comparatively little money. Any of the contractors and building supply dealers will be glad to help you do what you want to.

Gardening fiends are busy these days, getting in their Fall planting, and preparing those flowers that spend the winter indoors. And in this department, too, you'll find friendly dealers ready to help with advice and materials. Better get busy now on your Fall home activities.

Clubwoman: Wageman

Homewoman—

SHE'S THE SAME PERSON, when she goes to a store.

At her club meeting, it's kind of fun to hear some radical lecturer "prove" that most manufacturers are slickers, most store cheese is chalk, and most advertising is ballyhoo.

But watch the clubwoman when she starts buying. She wants her money's worth and she gets it. How? By first consulting the advertisements. Then by choosing the products she knows—the trade-marked, nationally advertised products that have been on the market for years.

Those trade-marked, advertised articles are the ARISTOCRATS among all the things she buys—or that any of us can buy.

Sport News

Six-man Football has not yet presented much, since the majority of the schools with these teams have not yet started.

Flat's prospects, according to Coach Mohrmann don't look too hot, and he has only 3 lettermen to form the nucleus of his new six. These are Whigham, Poe and Blackshear, none of which are first stringers.

Coach Mohrmann said the boys would be faster and a better blocking club than the 1939 edition, however, and the workouts will open Monday. His first game is with Pottsville, Friday, October 4, at Flat.

Pottsville, tho in Hamilton county has been added to the six-man schedule, and will be a dark horse in the County Six-Man Football League.

Other schools have not been heard from, and these include Turnersville, Oglesby, Copperas Cove, Ireland, and possibly Jonesboro. However, they'll begin activities soon, and the fans will get plenty of "chatter" about these clubs.

Now, in our own bailwick, Coach Pruitt has just about let up on fundamentals, and has started the boys "calling numbers". Nothing is certain as to a line-up.

Wouldn't it be nice for the town's businessmen and women and al lothr fans, if "somebody" would turn the lock on the North Gate.

Old legs don't climb fences very well, and old knees, not to mention clothes, won't take the drop from the top of the fence very well.

We'll have to commend Coach Pruitt for the close attention to the fundamentals he has been teaching the boys, and the way he does it. If they follow his instructions, there can be no squawk from fans on how they're playing. He knows his okra.

The SKY PARADE

CHAPTER I

STEP right this way, ladies and gentlemen," shouted the lean and dapper chap in the checked suit as he smiled dazzlingly upon the crowd of country folk which jammed the midway of the county fair grounds. "This is no swindle—no falsification of facts. Right here you will see a scientific theory tested and proved. Step right this way!"

A few people began to desert the other attractions and gather round the speaker. Prominent among them was a small tousel-haired boy eating a candied apple on a stick.

"That's right, my friends, step right up and improve your knowledge of science," cried the Barker. "We shall attempt to prove that the human hand is quicker than the eye."

Then as the onlookers laughed and groaned at this stale inducement he calmly took three walnut shells and a bean from his pockets and deposited them on a small table in front of him. Then, perceiving that the inquisitive child was still present, he frowned and added:

"Run along, little boy. This is no place for you."

"Crazy idiot!" he shouted as he regained his feet. "I'll have the law on him for that."

"That was my Dad," the boy volunteered proudly. "And over there," he continued, "that man walking with that other man up close to the plane on the ground—well, he's my friend an' the other one's my god-father."

"It's all a little too much for me," was the cold answer. "But let's go right over and have a word with your parent." He stormed toward the race track of the fair grounds, which had been converted into a temporary flying field.

"Are you the parent of this brat?" he demanded of Scotty Allen as the latter climbed out of his plane and pulled off his goggles.

"Has he been annoying you?" Scotty's voice was apparently severe.

"Has he been! Say, he's got eyes like a cat. Cleaned me out at my own shell game. And then you come along and make me fall all over my equipment and smash it. Listen, mister, I want five dollars' damages."

"Five dollars is one of my fondest dreams also," Scotty answered. "No money," volunteered Speed Robertson, another pilot in the air circus, as he sauntered up, grinning impishly. "But we could make you a partner."

"You mean a job?" cried the gambler in delight. "Your gang could do with a Barker. And then you need a mechanic, than which there is no better than your new-found friend, Flash Lewis." He bowed grandly.

"Are you a mechanic?" Scotty's blue eyes opened in amazement.

"Am I a mechanic?" Flash turned to Speed. "He asks me if I'm a mechanic! Why, gentlemen, if it weren't for my one great passion, I should—at this very moment—be employed at the Lockwood plant."

"Drink?" Scotty winked at Speed. "Alas, no." Flash bowed his head. "The twinkling nut-shells. I can't resist 'em and I never know when to lose. The foreman at the plant seemed to resent it. But maybe you will give me another chance. It won't cost you a thing."

"Consider yourself alred," grunted Speed. "We didn't have any money to pay our last mechanic so he quit today. There, my good fellow." He presented Flash with a dollar bill. "There is an advance on your salary . . . probably the last you will ever get."

"Hey, wait a minute," cried Scotty. "What are we using to eat with?"

"Our new 'arking mechanic is taking us to dinner," was the reply. The four of them were seated at a hot dog stand when Casey Cameron, the third member of the "War Aces Flying Circus," dashed up, towing a pretty girl by the wrist.

"Scotty! Speed!" cried the newcomer. "I've been looking everywhere for you. Never occurred to me you could eat."

"Meet the meal ticket," Scotty replied. "Mr. Aloysius Lewis—Flash to us. Our new barking mechanic."

"Glad to meet you." Casey tried to hide his astonishment. "And as long as introductions are in order, allow me to introduce you to Miss Jerry Croft, the greatest little parachute jumper in the country. If we add Jerry to the set, I'm willing to bet the circus will go over big instead of dying on its feet. Let's try it in Claremont tomorrow."

"Please give me a chance." The girl's dark eyes took in the entire group. "I think you're all swell and I'd like to join up."

"Well," hesitated Scotty. "I'm afraid it would be pretty tough on a girl—traveling from town to town with us. It's bad enough to have my son, Jimmy, missing school and all that sort of thing. Still, the circus does need an added attraction if it's to keep out of bankruptcy. Stunt flying doesn't seem to be enough any more."

"Aw, Dad," whispered Jimmie as he sat lost in admiration, looking at the girl over his forgotten ham sandwich. "Sign her up, why don't you?"

And that, of course, settled that.

"And this little dark-eyed beauty is none other than Jerry Jump-up Croft, the one and original parachute jumper extraordinary of the world," Flash ballyhooed the circus at the Claremont fairgrounds next day. "Absolutely fearless, this little lady—hey, where are you?" He glanced round to discover that Jerry, parachute strapped to her back, already was climbing into Casey's plane. "Well that little lady will bail out from the terrific height of fifteen hundred feet. They're getting in the plane now. Step this way folks. Dare-devil Casey Cameron and the lustrous Jerry Croft are about to take off."

Just as the old ship took off with a roar, Jimmie came running up.

"Speed, Speed," he called. "Jerry forgot this." He held up a large book and hurried on. "We was in our room at the hotel an' I was hearin' her lessons. An' then, all of a sudden she jumped up an' kinda hugged me an' then run out. I been lookin' for her to give her book."

Speed took the volume from him and stared, too horrified to speak.

"PARACHUTE JUMPING IN TEN EASY LESSONS," was the title.

"She was swell. She knew pretty near all the answers," said Jimmie.

"Pretty near! Goshalmighty! I bet she's never bailed out in her life." Speed started to shout at the plane, then shrugged and hurried to the telephone to call an ambulance.

"She's hesitating," Flash was shouting to the crowd as he craned his bony neck to follow the flight. "She isn't going to jump. Yes, she is. She's standing up on the wing. She's getting ready. . . . There she goes. . . ."

"She's going to be all right, isn't she?" The boy gripped Speed's hand and shook it desperately as his friend kept staring at the sky.

"She's coming down fast." Flash was yelling. "Her chute hasn't opened. She's having trouble with the ring. She's falling, but you'll see. Don't be alarmed, ladies and gentlemen. Jerry Croft is an old hand at this game of thrills."

LIBERTY CLUB

When the Liberty Club members think of "Fleeta", they are reminded of four qualities. They enjoyed another manifestation of these last Tuesday as she gracefully, swiftly, quietly and efficiently performed her duties as hostess. Somehow it all seems so simple and easy for Mrs. Fleeta Wright. She is one of our most capable matrons. We find her always at the right place at the right time.

She was assisted by Mrs. Audley Harris and Mrs. Eustace Harris and the Junior 4-H girls, who did the serving. The course consisted of sandwiches, pickles, olives, cookies, and iced tea with mint.

Mrs. Bishop Sanders furnished the floral decorations, giant dahlias curled zinnias in a profusion of colors from her own flower garden.

The Club members appreciated the visitors from Hamilton: Mrs. J. W. Barnett, Dr. Martha Swanger, Mrs. Ada Rosentrator, Misses Hattie Stamford and Lois Jones.

Mrs. Eustace Harris was also a visitor. She is an ex-member of our club. We are trying hard to convince her that distance is not an obstacle to membership in Liberty Club. We need more, not less, members like "Annie". Another ex-member of equal value rejoined at this meeting, Mrs. Clarence Bunnell. She has always been one of our most useful community promoters.

Two new members, Mrs. A. H. Calhoun and Mrs. Gayle Calhoun were wonderful additions to the Club. Members like these will make our club even more successful and useful.

The oldest member present at this meeting was Mrs. Nelse Blair. The profound respect her neighbors have for "Aunt Emma" is expressed in an often repeated statement, that during the fifty years that she has lived among us, no one has ever heard her speak a harmful or disparaging statement of anyone.

Our oldest and most beloved member, Grandmother Stansell, will enjoy her ninety-seventh birthday September 29. It is the custom among our club members to visit Grandmother on her natal day and to leave their various tokens of love and respect. In spite of her years, she is still alert and active. Prof. McFadden took her for a ride in the new Hamilton-Liberty school bus this week.

Mrs. Ermon Hill asked for the Club meeting September 24 and she announced a shower for Mrs. Alvin Kautzsch on that date.
