"TO MARKET, TO MARKET TO BUY . . NEARLY ALL WENT

Nearly all of them went this week, to market somewhere, and on the list was W. T. Hix and Travis Hestilow started off by attending the Frigidaire convention in Dallas the early part of the week.

Then, George Painter, of Painter's took off and spent a couple or three days, and some money in the Dallas-Fort Worth markets.

Byron Leaird, Jr., and Miss Verna Walters and Mrs. Byron Leaird Jr., like it, and are still in markets above mentioned.

Later in the week, C. E. Alvis Sr., of Alvis-Garner Company took off to Dallas and Mrs. Kit Bridges, and Mr. John Garner of Dallas will assist in the buying.

Our market came to town, Ralph Ritcheson, formerly of Gatesville, and now with a Waco-Dallas paper house visited the printing industry, Thursday.

Presbyterian Add Educational Annex To Their Church

Along with the present building "boom" the First Presbyterian Church has just started the construction of an educational building to be annexed to the church, according to R. W. Ward, chairman of the church's building commit-

The building will house two departments of the Sunday School, which in recent weeks has become completely departmentalized according to the latest educational standards.

Other improvements are being made, including changes to the interior of the present building, and landscaping of the church lawn.

At the completion of this work, an "open house" is planned, which will be in three weeks, or longer.

Grand Jury Makes Report to Court: 33 Indictments

Signed by Jim Gault, Grand Jury Foreman and H. A. Davidson, Secretary, a report has been turned in to Judge R. Bates Cross, and is as follows:

"To the Hon. R. B. Cross, Judge of the 52nd Judicial District:

Now comes the Grand Jury of the District Court of Coryell County, Texas for the January Term, A. D., 1941, and respectfully submits the following report:

We have been in session 8 days and have examined 130 witnesses. We found 33 true bills, of which 32 are felonies one is a misdemeanor.

Our thanks are due to the Hon. R. B. Cross, District Judge, for his splendid charge and guidance during our session, as well as to the District and County Attorneys, the Sheriff and his Deputy, our Bailiffs and in fact to all those who contributed to the usefullness or pleasure of our work together.

On the whole, this County and its citizens are to be congratulated on the absence of crimes of a serious nature such as murder, rape county will continue to settle their differences by process of law.

Since our section now has a number of miles of paved highway a part of which is on a route to the Army Camp at Brownwood, we are likely to be faced with the menace of more drunken and reckless drivers which are to endanger the lives of our families and friends. We urge complete co-operation with the State Highway Patrol in its efforts to rid our highways of this menace, as well as with the local officers.

It has been called to our attention that over the entire State of Texas there are numerous instances of the burning of automobiles surance. This needless and criminal waste costs everyone that pays insurance premiums and we earnestly solicit the cooperation of the insurance agents in choosing their risks with care, and the general public in the investigation and apprehension of those who frauduently burn insured property.

Though frequently mentioned, we urge as prior Grand Juries have, that stock raisers fire brand all stock so that identification will be certain in case of loss or theft.

Having completed our labors we respectfully ask that we be discharged this the 22nd day of January, A. D., 1941.

Signed JIM GAULT Secretary: H. A. DAVIDSON.

INTER-DEPENDENT

Two weeks ago, a half dozen Gatesville businesses closed on account of the flu. We refer to the churches schools and moving picture houses.

Some folks hereabouts didn't think their closing would bother them and their businesses would go on, just the same, without any loss whatsoever. The first week was not over—no, had hardly started—before they found out by sad experience they actually "missed" these closed institutions.

Now, what we're about, is to remind, that no matter if a little hole-in-the-wall, and it closes, EVERYBODY in Gatesville and Coryell County PAYS. Now, under a 5-year plan a la Russia or some other government-do-itall-country where everything is a monopoly, one of EACH business would be O K. That, however, is not the so called "American Way of Life", we hope.

Money, even pennies, spent IN Coryell County helps MAKE Coryell County, as well as your, and my business.

WE are glad these institutions have re-opened!

That Pearl Ball Club is going great guns, and Friday night, Ireland and Pearl boys and girls played the Irelanders, no scores were given by our "informer" but anyhow, Pearl girls nosed out the Ireland Lassies by four points, and Pearl Boys had to be content with a 1 point lead.

Monday night, the Lions Luminous Lumbering Loopers divided into two sections will entertain the cash customers. They're going Painter, Erle Powell, Jesse Yates, H. B. But distance lends were business visitors in Waco charm and we spend all our extra pennies in the other town and journey homeward to make more money so that we can come back again. Never do we realize that we are continually carry the money made in Gatesville away and giving the profit dollar to the other city.

We could have the very same coma, Washington, and brother, things at home that we go away to get, if we would only remain at home and demand a good quality of merchandise from the merchants. They would have a volume of business which would permit quantity buying, and they could retail the goods cheaper to us. This cooperation of merchant and consumer would be a valuable benefit to each.

We point with pride to a school maintained; we enjoy riding on well paved streets; and we are proud of our city at Christmas when it is so beautifully decorated. It is the merchants who should be thanked for these things, for it is they who pay the taxes and make the contributions for them. So why should not we do our part by our town by helping our merchants so that they may in turn help the entire town. If practicability is not enough to convince us of our need to trade at home, then layalty certainly should. Lions "Funnies" Meet "Bunnies" On Court

They're going to call it Basketball. We doubt THAT!

Well, two teams of big overstuffed Lions are to meet in deadly combat (they'll all be dead in 10 minutes) Monday night shortly after the opening whistle.

Its a comic-charity contest, for some good reason, but our informant didn't give all the low-down, and our guess is, that that's better.

You'll see no basketball, but it's guaranteed, certinteed, and approved by the AMA, GHkeeping Magazine, the GM&SF and the CCN. Ain't that enough?

SCOPE OF PROJECT WORK THIS YEAR

Summarising the efforts of the Future Farmers in project work and supervised practice, we find that the feeding of livestock leads the list with 19 boys feeding 24 choice feeder calves, 19 boys feeding 50 hogs for home use and market, and 6 boys feeding 34 lambs for mutton and show. Fifteen boys have 20 gilts and sows for pig production with nine head registered. Other leading project work includes 24 boys with 135 acres of corn, 8 boys with 55 acres of oats, with total crop projects exceeding 225 acres; 8 boys with 400 baby chicks, and 6 boys with 225 hens for egg production.

GERMAN STRATEGY

Presence of 600,000 crack German troops in Rumania may be the prelude to a lightning Nazi attack man forces in Bulgaria, poised for Cowan; four brothers, Gus, Alvin against Britain and her allies in possible attacks in several directhe Balkans and the Near East. While the possibility of a Nazi feint toward the Dardanelles to weaken British alertness in their tight little isle must not be overlooked, it must be remembered that Hitler's axis partner is in serious straits and that assistance from Berlin is acutely needed.

From Rumania, Hitler can send his legions through impotent Bulgaria to attack the Greeks in Macedonia, forcing them to abandon the campaign in Albania which threatens to destroy a sizable Italian army. Or the Fuehrer can seek to gain mastry over the strategic Dardanelles and the Bosporus, now controlled by Britain's friend and ally, Turkey.

An attempt at the latter objective certainly would involve Germany occasions have proved their in Abilene February 23 through 27. mettle in battle against superior odds in numbers and equipment. 15 different states were present If successful, a war against Tur- for this event. FROM OUR

COUCHERRUMAN

The meetings of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs are attracting even greater interest than the impending inauguration, and properly so. The Committee is holding hearings on the so-called "Aid to the Democracies" bill. It is meeting in the large Caucus Room where the House itself met last Fall while the workmen were putting braces under the roof of the House chamber. Even here it is impossible to find space for the hundreds who want to see and hear the proceedings. This, of course, evidences a healthy interest in the question, but I can not but feel that quite often we go so far in our efforum that we really overlook the self. Each member of Congress has primary purpose of public hearbeen alloted seven tickets as have ings by legislative bodies. For instance, this bill is admitted by all -friend and foe alike- to be of we have probably a dozen requests vital importance. The Committee that must pass on details should have every bit of helpful information that it can get about the subject. It is perfectly proper that it should hear from every person in public or private life who can give information, but it can add nothing to the information that the Committee has to call people whose opinions have been repeatedly expressed in the press and over the radio. It seems to me that some of the members of the Committee and particularly three or four of the Republican members are trying to use these hearings as a means of carrying on a public argument rather than as a means of getting information.

> It does seem clear, however, that every witness who has testified so far, and who has any special opportunity to know the facts, as for Secretary of War, Knox; and Secretary of Navy, Stimson, have agreed that speed in whatever action we take is absolutely essential. It will do no good to aid the Democracies unless our aid reaches them in time for them to use. It is now too late to aid Czechoslovakia. It is too late to aid Norway or Holland or France. If we delay it may be too late to aid Greece or China, or even Great Britain. Another point that has been brought out with great emphasis has been that any half-hearted measures will be worse than nothing. If we are to aid the Democracies we must do it in a large way. A little aid like a little knowledge is a dangerous thing. A little aid carries with it all the risks of "all-out" aid as far as offending the dictators is concerned. In addition, it invites attack by incurring the contempt of the dictators, and most serious of all, it makes probably the loss of the cause we seek to strenghten. Let us, therefore, recognize that if we ourselves are to be spared active participation in this war we must put the weapons in the hands of other free people with which they can strike a death blow not merely a superficial wound to tyrany. Let it never be charged that the United States has been interested in giving only enough aid to keep the contestants fighting without any prospects of victory as it sometimes seems that Soviet Russia is trying to do. We do not want people to destroy themselves. We want peace-peace not at the price of destruction of the liberties of others, but peace based on the removal of every threat to American security-a complete victory for the forces of freedom. We must have this kind of peace, and it is to that end that I join with the Administration in seeking the passage of this bill.

Washington, D. C. BRITAIN WANTED U. S: TO GET EIRE TO GIVE UP BASES

Confidential conversations have been taking place between the British and the state department for some time aimed at getting Irish naval bases for the British.

In these conversations the British have wanted to place the United States in the unique role of either persuading or bulldozing Eire into handing over the bases. Just how the United States handled it, the British didn't much care.

But in talking to the state department, the British pointed out that if they took Irish bases by force, there would be a burst of anti-British feeling from Irish all over the United States, particularly New England.

This, the British felt, would be extremely bad just at a time when Britain particularly needs American

The British also pointed out to the state department that they were placed in the unfortunate position of having to bring food to Ireland at the risk of having the ships sunk, and with no protective co-operation from the Irish whatsoever.

Therefore, the British foreign office urged the state department to use its immediate and vigorous good offices with the Irish government.

The state department, however, has been eying the situation with no great enthusiasm. Informal soundings revealed that the Irish minister in Washington, Robert Brennan, is vigorously opposed to British naval bases, and so is the Irish government-at least until the recent bombing of Eire by German planes.

This has changed Irish public opinion considerably, and it is now possible that U.S. persuasion might get somewhere.

Dr. Bart Morgan, brilliant young surgeon addicted to tiquor, becomes a "gangland doctor" when he fails to make good in legal practice Bank bandits headed by Eddie Krator, Public Enemy No. 1, are his best customers. "I'll be right there," Bart agreed. Fifteen minutes later Bart rang the bell of the Ace Inn. The door was opened by Mack Belton, operator of the tavern. "Oh, hello, Doc," he said as he swung the door wide.

"Krator phoned," Bart explained. "They just left. They got jittery and beat it," Belton said. "But Monk Jackson's inside. He got in a jam with a G-man."

"I'll have a look at him," Bart volunteered.

"You needn't. He's dead. Tough break, huh? Gettin' out this mornin' months now Bart had been paying on a habeas corpus. Tell Uncle Elcourt to Cynthia. They had not yet mer he owes me a century for get-

The late afternoon papers had | carried the story of the spectacular arrest of the murderer, Frank Oliver, in Bart's office.

"How did it feel, Bart, being face to face with a murderer?" Courtney Weld asked.

"Well, I don't know," Bart answered slowly. "It's rather difficult to describe."

"It must have been terrible, my dear," Cynthia said.

"That was a nice gesture-turning the reward over to the police pension fund," Courtney Weld continued.

his office nurse told him. "He wouldn't give his name but he said it was important. He wants you to call View 7-8-9-3."

Bart thanked her and called the number. Eddie Krator's voice answered. "Hello. Oh, hello, Doc. This Morgan. "He's Bob Anders, special

He had travelled less than a mile when he was waved to a stop by the attendant of an all-night gasoline station. "There's a man inside badly hurt," the attendant almost shouted as Bart brought his car to a stop. "I phoned but I can't get an ambulance out here for an hour." "I'm a doctor. I'll see what I can do for him."

Stretched out on a bench in the filling station Dr. Morgan found Bob Anders. He was unconscious. Blood dripped from one shoulder.

"This man's been shot. What happened?" Bart demanded.

"He bought some gas and while I was inside making change, all of sudden I heard a lot of shooting," the attendant explained. "I ran out, just as another car pulled away. Here was this fellow stretched on the ground like he was dead."

"Help me get him into my car," Bart ordered. "I'll take him to the hospital."

For the next hour Bart worked with swift, sure fingers. As he emerged from the operating room, the superintendent of the hospital met him.

"We've identified your patient, Dr.

agent of the Federal Bureau of investigation.

Bart barely concealed a start of surprise. "A G-man, eh?" he managed at last. "Well, that's my good deed for the day."

As the two doctors walked down the hospital corridor, Margaret Hopkins, in nurse's uniform, approached them. The superintendent halted her. "Your case, Miss Hopkins," he said, handing her Bob Anders' chart. Mr. Robert Anders in 307."

Bart turned as he heard Margaret's name.

"Margaret!" "Bart!"

"How long have you been here?" Bart demanded.

"Just a few days."

You're going to work for me again," Bart said, "just as soon as you can get away from here."

Margaret laughed. "Oh, am 1?" Together they entered the room where Bob Anders lay.

Meanwhile at the Ace Inn, Krator and Johnny Franklin were discussing Bart Morgan. "Morgan's getting dangerous, operating on a G-man and saving his life," Franklin insisted.

"He didn't know he was a G-man." Krator pointed out.

"All right, suppose he didn't know. But he knows now," Johnny pointed out. "And, what's more important, the G-man knows him. Morgan's getting too big. Read the papers. He's going to marry one of the richest women in town."

"So what, Johnny? So what?"

"It won't work, that's all," Johnny insisted. "A man's got to be one of two things. He's got to be all racket or all straight. If he's half and hait, he's poison. That's Morgan, understand?"

The door opened and Mack Belton ushered in Bart Morgan. He had been summoned by Krator from the hospital. Krator greeted him genially. "Hello, Doc. We're having a little surprise party for you."

Johnny Franklin cut in sarcastically. "We're gathered here tonight to pay honor to a leading member of the medical profession who has just saved from death an officer of the Morgan halted him. "Let me thank you for this touching demonstration," he said with equal sarcasm. "Knowing you, my friends, has been an education. But now my education is complete. So this brings us, I am afraid, to a sad moment. This little party, in addition to paying tribute to me, becomes my farewell to you."

Krator and Franklin exchanged sullen glances. Bart went on. "Your fees for the last several months have been too small-and too few. Gentlemen, you're all washed up."

"What did I tell you, Eddie?" Johnny snapped. "Are you going to let him get away with it?"

'Am I?" Krator's voice was hard. You were right, Johnny. You always are. What would you do?"

"I'd take him out fishing on a lake," Johnny retorted and laughed mirthlessly.

For a moment Krator was silent. staring at Bart. Then he pulled his gun from its holster and levelled it at the doctor.

"It's too bad, Doc." His voice was cold, toneless. "I liked you a lot."

HAMPERS DEFENSE PROGRAM

The serious shortage in aluminum (a factor behind the lagging plane production) is not the only crucial raw material bottleneck now plaguing the defense program.

Another is the lack of sheet brass, out of which shell casing is made.

As in the case of aluminum, defense chiefs are shush-shushing the brass shortage. But it is so grave that experts admit privately that it may become necessary to curtail consumption for civilian purposes in order to meet the steadily soaring military demand. In fact, brass may be one of the first base metals to be put on the military priority

Cause of the shortage is twofold: 1. Lack of sufficient zinc smelting facilities. Zinc is an essential ore in brass, which in turn is essential in the manufacture of all ammunition casings, from bullets for small arms to giant shells for the heaviest cannon.

2. Shortage of brass manufacturing facilities.

The two are interrelated and there can be no improvement in one unless the other also is remedied. There is no dearth of zinc ore or scrap zinc, which are in plentiful supply. The bottleneck is in smelting and brass-making plants.

At present the United States has some 20-odd primary slab zinc smelters and five so-called secondary smelters, which use scrap zinc instead of ore. Their combined output is 450,000 tons-far short of the American and British defense re quirements already specified.

Meanwhile, our own shell needs and those of the British increase daily. To meet this, brass manufacturers are hurriedly expanding their rolling mill facilities and also adding machinery to turn out casings. But all this will be useless unless they can get more smelted zinc.

In a belated move to deal with this menacing situation, the Defense commission several weeks ago granted a "certificate of necessity" to a large zinc smelter at Amarillo. Texas, for an addition to its plant. That will help-when the plant is finished. But even then it will be far from enough.

Independent producers charge that the zinc delay is caused by the same factor which has held up aluminum. namely-monopoly.

They assert that the big operators don't want new competitors in the field and operate undercover to bar them, through strategically placed influences in the Defense commis-

B ACK in the dark ages, before electric cleaners were invented, people used to hang their rugs on a line and belabor them with instruments like this-imagine!

In those days, cleaning a rug was a morning's work for a reasonably husky man, but today the daintiest woman can clean a rug in 10 minutes without exertion at a cost of less than one cent.

And so it is with other household tasks that formerly took so much of a woman's time and strength. Today, they are done electrically in less time with less effort at a cost that is measured in pennies and fractions of pennies per day.

And as more and more electricity has been used in the home, the cost has come steadily downward. Today, the average customer of this company receives 53% more electricity for his money than in 1930.

Your electric switch is your "open sesame" to comfort, convenience and more leisure time. And electricity is so cheap you can afford to use it freely.
