MISS GENE STINNETT RECEIVES HONOR AT LEAGUE MEETING

Miss Gene Stinnett was elected vice-president of the Young People's League of Central Texas Presbytery at the annual Spring League Meeting in Marlin last Friday and Saturday.
The Presbytery League is made up of churches in the bounds of Central Texas Presbytery, being an organization of the young people of more than forty churches.
The office of vice-president of the League is a responsible position and one of great honor, involving close supervision of the seven committees, known in Presbytery terminology as "Kingdom Highways," thru which the Youth program is conducted.
Gene, a Junior in high school, is active in the young people's work of her local church, serving now her second term as president of the Youth Department of the First Presbyterian Church. During the past year she served most acceptably as one of the three district chairmen in the Presbytery.
Elected to the office of vice-president for a two-year term, Gene will be installed along with the other officers during the Synod-Wide Young People's Conference at Kerrville early in June.

Dave Culberson Jr. left Wednesday for Hemet, California, where he will be stationed in the U. S. Air Corps.

C. OF C. PRIZES ALONG WITH LOCAL MEN AND FIRMS MAKE CALF SHOW SUCCESS

The livestock committee of the Gatesville Chamber of Commerce set up in their program, cash prizes to be offered boys feeding calves in a commercial project. Supplementing these funds on the day of the show, the following prizes were given by local men and firms.
A. B. Allen gave to the boys whose calves placed 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th. In addition, E. G. Beerwinkle gave cash prizes to the boys whose calves placed from 9th to 13th. M. S. Brooks gave prizes to calves placing 2nd and 3rd, and G. P. Schaub gave cash prizes to the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners.
Along with these prizes the National Bank gave medals for showmanship, which encouraged the boys to put forth further effort to displaying their animals.
To encourage the boys in this event, the Fort Worth Stock Yards

Company agreed to furnish a bed to a party of not more than forty people for each carload of cattle, hogs, or sheep. An agreement was further worked out whereby the packing houses buying the stock, would serve lunch to the group.
The Stock Yards Company and packing company worked together and furnished educational opportunities for the group while at the Fort Worth market.
Due to weather conditions, the educational tour could not be conducted. The boys did not get to appear at the radio broadcast because of the necessity of weighing the calves at the time of the broadcast.
The cattle were sold to Armour and Company with the top group of calves bringing 10.35 per hundred. The 32 calves brought $2397.46 after commission and yardage was deducted.

FLORIDA BOUND

AND BACK

Well, this is written from the sand dunes of Florida just past Fort Walton, on the Gulf-East coast of Florida. Since we wrote you, we got out of Louisiana and in a land of good coffee. That French Drip we got would knock your eye teeth out.

To continue with the story, we'd better stop where the rice milling part of the country ended, and where we ended "at our last writing". If you've got a road map handy, we've followed U.S. 90 most of the way from Houston, and just since we got to Pensacola, we switched off on U.S. 98 which follows the coast, somewhat more than the 90 does, which runs inland to Tallahassee, the capitol.

Well, going back, we passed thru Lafayette, the home of Southwestern Louisiana Institute. You'll remember some of the boys from this college came to Coryell county not long ago to look over livestock, or something. We are still dans la France de las Etats Unit—aw, well, in English, the "France of the United States," and of course, had to pass thru "Broussard". You may or may not know, three-fourths of the Louisiana French, more or less, carry that name. Then, New Iberia, and the further we went, the more French it got.

We missed the evangeline Oak about 8 miles, but saw some even bigger, and they're all draped with that Gulf Coast Moss, which really enhances their beauty. Maybe that's their whiskers, since many many of them surely must have seen La Salle, and maybe some of his bad men were hung on these very same branches.

The other one fourth are named Thibodeaux, and of course, we went thru there. This was down in the swamps, muskrat territory, and then N'Yawlins. There's a story about that. When you're there and have plenty of money, it's Noo (short o's) Erlens, and when you're there and broke, it's just plain N'Yawlins.

We didn't do the town, but did drive down the, well, one of the widest streets in the world, Canal, and then thru the French Quarier, Burgandy, Chartres, Conti, Baronne Streets, all to your right as you go out Canal away from the river.

How could anyone every forget it. The french quartier, but what made me think, was the Huey P. Long Bridge. If the Kingfish did nothing else for Louisiana, he did build roads and bridges and schools.

They, I don't suppose will be paid for until the present generations are dead, but they've got them. Describing the H. P. Long bridge can only be done by photos or blue prints, and we haven't that. It's just about the longest bridge we've been over, including the Golden Gate Bridge at San Francisco, and we're not talking about the railroad bridge, either. It's about three times as long as the highway bridge, and, as for bridges, they seem to be just about the same in Louisiana, because when we left New Orleans for the east, we crossed over the causeway over Lake Pontchartrain and then to Bay St. Louis, where it was getting dark, and we passed over Bay St. Louis, just being able to tell it was a bridge, and that was about all. Next, was Pass Christian, the most beautiful part of our route, and then shortly Gulfport and Bloxi. We "tied up" at Gulfport for the night, and Gulfport from Bloxi is only 12 miles, and a "resort". It looks like one of those places where you'd just like to go and do nothing, or, maybe, anything. It's right on the gulf, and with only a boulevard between you and the deep blue sea, Galveston and Corpus Christi look like Podunkville, by the side of these places. There are fine hotels, tourist camps, and homes deluxe. Tourists as we were, we stopped at a tourist camp, the entire quint for $3.00, the night.

After these two towns, we headed in toward Mobile, Ala., and the ship building, etc., and Mobile is one of the really old Southern towns, with the big oaks, streets with the oaks throwing a complete shade all across the street. In fact, an "oak arbor" all across the street. This town too, as all the rest in this vicinity features the Azalia and Camillia Trail, and they grow wild, and then, there's the wild Wisteria, waterlilies, Irises, and just practically everything. It's really a "blooming" country. This don't mention the beautiful pines, and that brings to mind another subject. They manufacture "kraft" products in this section east of Mobile, and we don't mean cheese. This Kraft is the brown paper boxes, towells, sacks.

A second product, one that's not so easy to mention, is turpentine. They strip off the bark at the base of the pine trees, about 3 feet, and set a little tin pan at the base, and the sap from the 'wound' runs in the pan, and then is gathered. We didn't stop to get any "fresh from the tree samples".

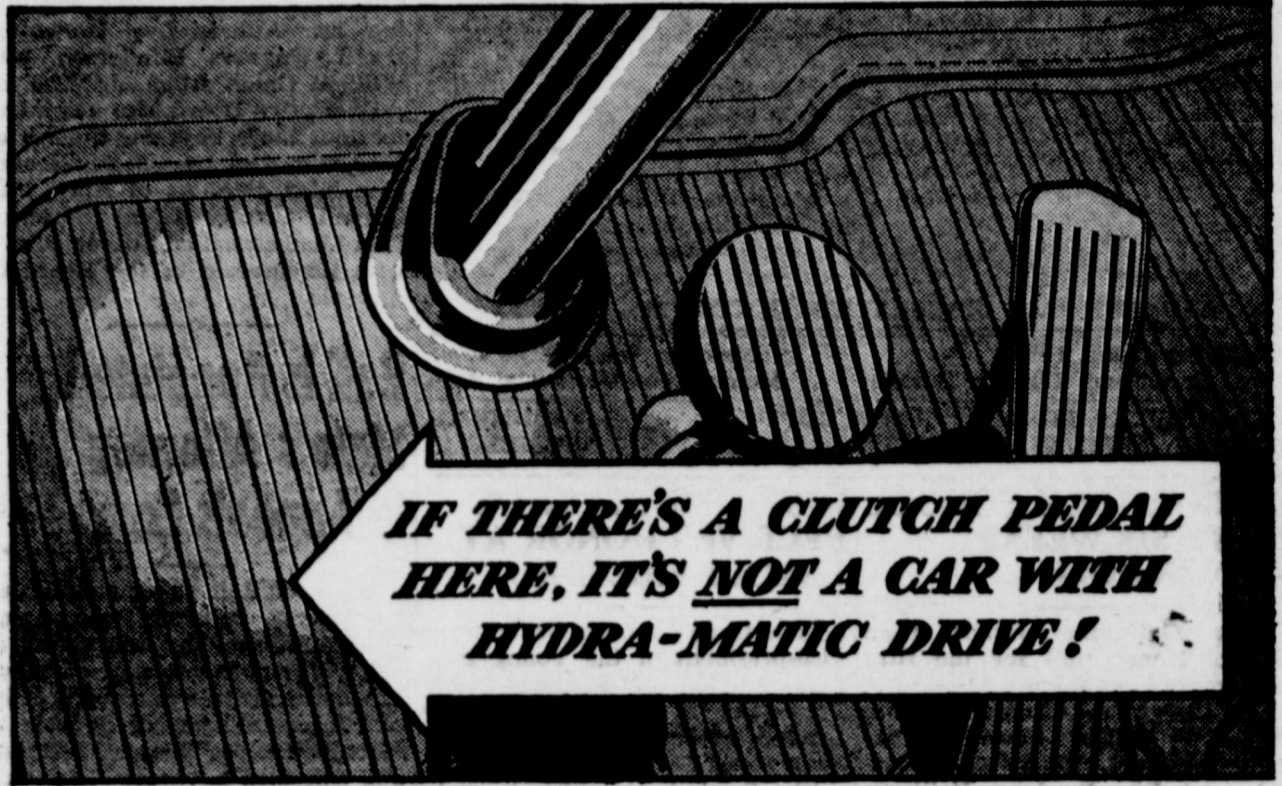

From Mobile, it is not too long to Florida, and the territory is interesting, and more like the Corpus Laredo highway, with scrub brush and swamp land next to the Gulf and the many bays, including Mobile bay. Here, we struck a 75c toll bridge, and 50 or so miles later stopped at a beach. Off came Mat Jr's shoes, and put Joe Kermit in the perfectly white sand, like which they use to make snow scenes in Hollywood maybe. After the sand ran between their toes,

ABOUT THIS MATTER OF

"Clutches"

LET'S GO TO THE MAT!

IF THERE'S A CLUTCH PEDAL HERE, IT'S NOT A CAR WITH HYDRA-MATIC DRIVE!

HYDRA-MATIC*

IS THE ONLY DRIVE IN THE WORLD THAT -

1. ELIMINATES CLUTCH PEDAL ENTIRELY!

2. GIVES FULLY AUTOMATIC SHIFTING!

*Optional at Extra Cost on all Models

LOOK at the floor mat before you buy any car with a new type of "drive." If you find a clutch pedal, it's a sure sign that a clutch pedal is needed—for part-time shifting of gears. In a Hydra-Matic Oldsmobile, of course, you'll find no clutch pedal at all. Gears shift automatically through all four forward speeds. You get full accelerating power without manual shifting.

And you get performance that puts you right out ahead!

Gatesville, Texas

and ours, we had the Gulf of Mexico christen "the big shot". This will be continued in the wild Atlantic.

One thing we want to mention, and incidently, we believe it would be worth advocating in Texas, since they're always hunting something for the boys in the "big house" in Texas to do. Even now, they're wanting them to print all the supplies for the state, and we're naturally against that. The thing we think would be good for Texas, is done in Florida and Alabama, not to mention a number of the eastern states, and that is, use these men for state highway maintenance work. There's certain to be a lot of state highway employees in Texas against this, too.

At Pensacola, they have a large naval air base, and we could tell it, as the air was full of them, training planes, formation flying, and aerial target practice in and around the town. One ship would tow the targets and the other fired on them with machine guns.

We tied up for the night at Panama City, a very good sized town, and they've got a foul smelling kraft paper mill too. Their business, as well as most of this south country's business is mostly tourists. They say, this just about between seasons, as we'd hoped for, on account of finances. Here in northern Florida, there are two seasons, winter and summer, and they're the money crop seasons. We're just after winter, and just before summer, and we believe, we're lucky.

Before long, we'll be in the capitol, Tallahassee, and then will head east to Jacksonville, the convention center, and we hope now, the cooler east coast. We evidently came in the back-door of Florida, and we haven't seen an orange yet. That business, we think is south, just like ours doesn't start until we get past Edinburg, Texas. The climate, here, the coast country and heavier with water, is practically the same as in Gatesville, as far as heat is concerned.

Looks like now, we're going to have "boy trouble" as they're both sleepy, and if you've got any, you will appreciate what two can appreciate what happens when even one goes "haywire". It's sultry hot here, in the Midlands of Florida, and don't let them tell you the climate is just "grand" here always. They've got plenty of fine roads, tho, and that make us do away with troubles, a lot.

Well, tomorrow is another day, and we'll have more to say, such as it is, then.

GUEST OF B&PW CLUB

Walter R. Adams of Ireland, well known poet of Texas, was the guest artist at the dinner given by the Business and Professional Women's Club Tuesday evening. Beautiful bluebonnets centered the table in Peyton's private dining room, where the affair was held.

Arranging the program, Mrs. Mabel Gardner acted as toastmaster. After several songs had been sung by the entire group, Miss Sidney Gibson rendered a violin solo, accompanied by Miss Minnie Lou Witt at the piano.

Mr. Adams read several selections from his two publications, "Bachelor's Poppy" and "The Dead Lie Down". He also read selections from two other groups of his poems, one from his earlier writings and the other from his more recent works, which have not as yet been published.

This is being written as I return to Washington after nearly two weeks in Texas. We have greatly enjoyed the opportunity to visit our friends and loved ones. It has been fine to enjoy Texas. We have been at home longer than we had expected because of the continued recess of the House, which ends April 14th. Nevertheless, I find that, no matter how long I may be in Texas, I always have more unfinished business when I leave than when I arrive. I know that many of my friends have been unable to see me while I was home.

I have been unable to contact many of those with whom I wanted to visit. I have not been able to give everyone all the time I should have liked. I have been unable to get to a great many of the things I wanted to do. I hope that my friends will judge me generously. There just are not enough hours in the day to do all those things that one would like to do. I have had to tell hundreds of people to write me about matters which they wanted to present in person and naturally expected me to remember without, having to be reminded when I got back to Washington. Even though I might recall the matter each one mentioned it is almost impossible to keep the details of each problem in mind, and I know that no one would want me to get mixed up about the facts of their case. For this reason I find I must ask that you write, even though you may have seen me or may have seen my secretary, Mr. Sleeper.

While we enjoy coming home, it is not as so many people think, a vacation, in the sense that we have no work to do when we get home.

It is only a change of the kind of work. Even at home my phone rings at all hours of the day and night while I can not get anywhere by walking down the street because I am stopped so often that I just can't make any progress. In the meantime, our mail keeps coming, and even though I have no stenographer at home, the people who write expect a prompt answer, and the inquiries range all the way from requests for information about jobs in the Canal Zone to requests "for a list of all undiscovered inventions". I do not mean that we do not want to do these things for our friends whenever we can. I only mention it that you may understand the delays that may at sometimes experience, even though we do our best to keep up with all the matters that are submitted.

gard to any grievance, but no one has a right to slow up our aid to those who are dying for lack of it or to delay our own re-arming in these terrible times. I think the truly American labor leaders like William Green realize this, but most of the trouble is caused by un-naturalized agitators like Harry Bridges et al. America is facing the same horrible and powerful aggressor who has ravished almost all of Europe. Our situation is serious. We can not and will not tolerate any sabotage at home. We know now that France did not fall because of any break in the Maginot line, but because of weakness behind the line. We are not going to repeat the tragic history of France.

The work of Congress has increased so greatly during the last six or eight years that many of the older members have literally worked themselves to death. This was the case with that great Texan—the Dean of Congress—Senator Morris Sheppard. Senator Sheppard had served in Congress longer than any other man, and I believe he has worked harder. Certainly no man in Congress was so effective in contacting the various departments of government as Senator Sheppard. He was kind and helpful. He was a real patriot who never spared himself in his efforts to serve his State and his Nation. While not as old as some members, he was getting up in years and he simply worked himself to death. His place can not be filled for a long time to come.

As I return to Washington I do so with a terrible feeling of responsibility. The situation in Europe is, of course, desperate. Brave and freedom-loving people have been ruthlessly crushed. Open cities have been bombed and burned. The efficiency of Nazi equipment and discipline has again been evidenced. Again it has been made plain that no matter how brave a people may be they must have supplies and modern equipment if they are to defend their freedom. This equipment can come only from the United States. We have promised to supply it, but it is evident that our production is being unreasonably delayed by strike that are coming to look too much like deliberate efforts to aid the Axis. These strikes must stop. Labor has a right to a hearing in re-

It cannot survive upon the blood and sweat and tears of The Other Fellow . . . Unless management and labor are each ready to yield a point, Democracy will be forced to yield the field.

By June, one and a half million Americans will have left their homes and jobs for the Army and Navy . . . These boys are an example of sacrifice to both labor and capital . . . The time has come for all of us to think of public duty—instead of private right . . . Every strike in the nation could be settled at once if the executive in the front office (who gets $21 a day) and the man in the overalls (who gets $42 a week) would remember this: That the American soldier (who gets $21 a month) is ready to die for them both!

New Machines Speed Up Hudson Warplane Production

This miraculously versatile machine is used in the Aircraft Division of the Hudson Motor Car Company for continuous metal shaping and contour sawing and filing of templates or patterns for aircraft production. The machine even has a self-contained welding mechanism for rejoining the variable speed circular saw after the saw has been separated for inside contour cutting. A belt file can be quickly installed for finishing operations. Close precision limits are obtained by lighted magnifying glass which is part of the unit. EARL HUDDLESTON GIVES VIEWS ON LEGISLATION

I am sure all of you know that one of the most important questions before the Legislature this session is that of Social Security.

I mean by this, that the Legislature is obligated to pay the teachers, the needy blind, and the aged people of our State, because the people of Texas voted a Constitutional Amendment to this effect.

I have taken the position from the very beginning that the legislature should meet this issue and provide funds to pay the same. I stated when I made my campaign, that I would be for any reasonable plan which would accomplish this purpose.

Governor O'Daniel, submitted a bill which would make a special appropriation of 26 million dollars to pay Social Security. I was one of the first signers of this bill and have done everything I could to secure the passage of the same, because I sincerely believe that this is the only way the question can be settled. However, up to date, the legislature has not seen fit to do so. However, the House did pass an Omnibus Tax Bill, and the same has been reported out of the Senate Committee, which I understand would appropriate about 7 million dollars for Social Security, which I think is inadequate. I supported this bill because if we can't get just what we want down here, we will have to take what we can get. I still favor making the 26 million dollar special appropriation. And of course, we would have to have revenue to raise the same, which I am in favor of raising.

Other legislation which I am vitally interested in, is that which would aid Agriculture. I have supported several measures which I believe will be a benefit to the farming class of people. I helped to secure passage in the House, a constitutional amendment which if adopted by the people would give citizens a right to purchase farms on a long-time plan, which I think is one of our greatest needs in Texas today. The Senate has not acted on this measure, but I have been informed by some of the leaders that they will pass this out. Of course, I am in favor and am supporting legislation in behalf of the schools, and in fact all of our worthy State Institutions. I am strongly in favor of doing everything possible for the laboring class of people, and have also, supported legislation in line with our National Defense Program.

I feel that I should give an account of what I am trying to do here, because after all, I am only a servant of the people in my district. I invite the cooperation and suggestions of every citizen in my district, and assure each one of you that I am striving to the best of my ability to help you here in the Legislature. I deeply appreciate the attitude of the people in my district, and it is a pleasure to render any service to any person in my district at anytime it is possible.

CHAPTER EIGHT SYNOPSIS

When General Ling disappears in Singapore with $300,000, Kim Ling, his beautiful daughter, and her lover, Captain Chang Tai, suspect a crafty Swastika, Gregory Prin, who has his headquarters deep in the jungle. Winning Prin's confidence, they succeed in finding her father and the money. Meanwhile, Ted Ballister, an American gangster, arrives on the scene and informs Prin of their real identities. As the International Police are on their way up the river to arrest Prin, the latter decides to stir the natives into revolt to stop them. He does and the natives prepare to raid Prin's headquarters. At the same time, the hard-hearted Prin kills a pet monkey belonging to Herbert, a cockney in his employ. The latter swears to get Prin for this.

CHAPTER IX

DEEP in the jungle, the native war drums beat and throbbed as the tribes prepared to make war on Prin and the handful of whites in the bungalow.

It was the steady throb of the drums that Herbert heard as he recovered consciousness where he had been felled by Prin's rifle butt. The Cockney raised his battered head and stared at the body of the dead monkey. "Little nipper," he whispered as tears welled up in his eyes, "I'll square it for you and if I don't those drums will."

Seated in the stern of a canoe with General Ling resting comfortably amidships, Chang Tai heard the drums, also, as he paddled slowly down the river. The native in the bow was listening intently. Suddenly he turned. "Tuan! Tuan!" he whispered excitedly. He pointed into the darkness. Following the direction of the native's arm, Chang saw a signal fire break into flame high up on a mountain side. In a moment another and then another flamed into view as the message was relayed from village to village.

"War! War!" the native shouted and started to slide over the side of the canoe into the river. Chang whipped out his revolver. "Keep paddling!" he ordered in the Malay dialect. Suddenly the native resumed his paddling.

The sound of the drums grew louder. They penetrated to the heavily shuttered living room of Prin's bungalow where Prin and Ballister faced Kim Ling.

The girl had been subjected to a terrific questioning and innumerable threats but she refused to divulge the hiding place of her father's money.

"Are you going to tell us or not?" Prin shouted. He was rapidly losing control of himself.

Kim shook her head negatively. Prin turned to Ballister.

"In my room, Ballister, there is a bull whip. Get it."

As Ballister started to obey, Professor Sen halted him. "Wait a minute, Ballister," he called. Ballister halted. "No bull whip! I've stood for some pretty rough things in my life but I've never seen a woman get a bull whip. You can do anything within certain limits to make her tell you where that money is and I'll mind my own business. But you can't whip her because I won't let you."

Prin sneered. "You were always funny, Professor."

"My but your mam would be proud of you if she were here," Ballister grinned at Sen.

The rifle in Sen's hand spat. With a groan, Ballister seized his forearm.

"Let's leave personalities out of this," Professor Sen said calmly.

Prin examined Ballister's injury.

"It's only a flesh wound. Stop squealing," he told Ballister as the latter wrapped a handkerchief about the wound.

"If those savages don't get you, I will," Ballister grated at Sen.

"That's a date," the Professor agreed smilingly.

A loud thump on the veranda turned the attention of all them in that direction.

"See what it is!" Prin commanded. Ballister, Prin and Herbert covered the door with their rifles. Professor Sen stepped forward and cautiously opened the door. Impaled upon spears which had been thrust into the porch floor were two grinning skulls! The group stared at them.

Sen closed the door. "Well Prin," the Professor said calmly, "there's

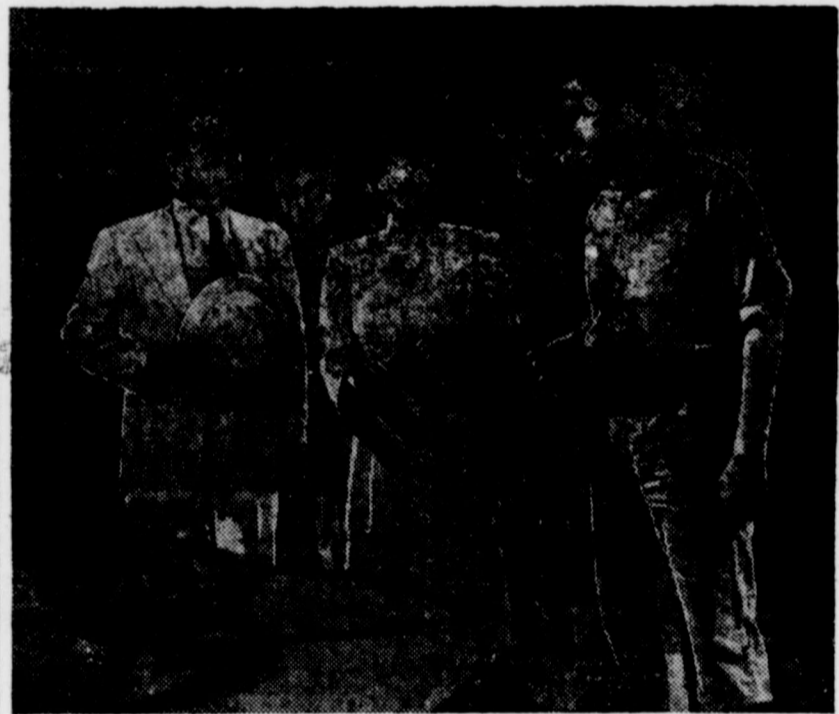

"I didn't know about those guns," Sen said to her. "They give us better than an even chance."

"I understand," Kim said as she entered her room and closed the door.

There was a loud banging at the outer door. Again the men covered it with their rifles as Professor Sen cautiously opened it. Chang Tai strode into the room.

"Ah! Secret Service Operator Number 999," Prin's voice was sarcastic. "Or have I the wrong number? You might at least have changed your name so I would never have found out who you really were."

"It wasn't necessary, Prin," Chang answered. "I left instructions for the International Police to start up the your declaration of war. For each tooth in those skulls you have a minute before they attack." He was silent for a moment. "If they happen to be the skulls of old men you haven't much time left."

Sweat stood out on Prin's brow. He tugged at the neckband of his shirt which had suddenly become too tight. Ballister watched him in disgust. "Come on, Prin," he said. "Unless the girl tells us where the money is hidden, let's turn her loose in the jungle."

"Would that be agreeable to our great humanitarian?" Prin said sneeringly to Professor Sen. Sen and Kim Ling exchanged glances. "It would be fast," Sen snapped his fingers. "Just like that. She'd be better off than we, when they do get here."

"Thank you," Prin said unctuously. He turned to Kim. "It's up to you to decide. And do not be misled by the Professor's observations, because we who remain here will be quite safe." Prin crossed to a big chest and opened it. "Look."

Ballister, Sen and Herbert crowded around the chest. It contained two machine guns and ample ammunition. "That's how Gregory Prin protects his little family," the half-caste boasted.

Ballister was impressed. "I think you've got something there, Prin." The others turned away but Herbert continued to stare at the guns.

"Well, Miss Ling, you see you have everything to lose by venturing forth into the jungle," Prin went on. "But I won't press you, my dear. Retire to your room and think it over."
