Think What
LABOR DAY
 Means to America!

It's more than a chance to enjoy a week end outing. It's a lot more than the end of summer. It's a tribute to the man who carries his lunch to work, to the man who sweats over a pick all day, to the man who fixes the pipes in your kitchen sink. It's an affirmation that America is a real democracy, without class distinction. Our hats are off to Labor!

Sidewalk Superintendents' Club At 'Big Hole' For Dallas Bank

Dallas' Mercantile National Bank is erecting a 30-story bank and office building at Main, Commerce and Ervay Streets here, and the whole town is talking and watching.

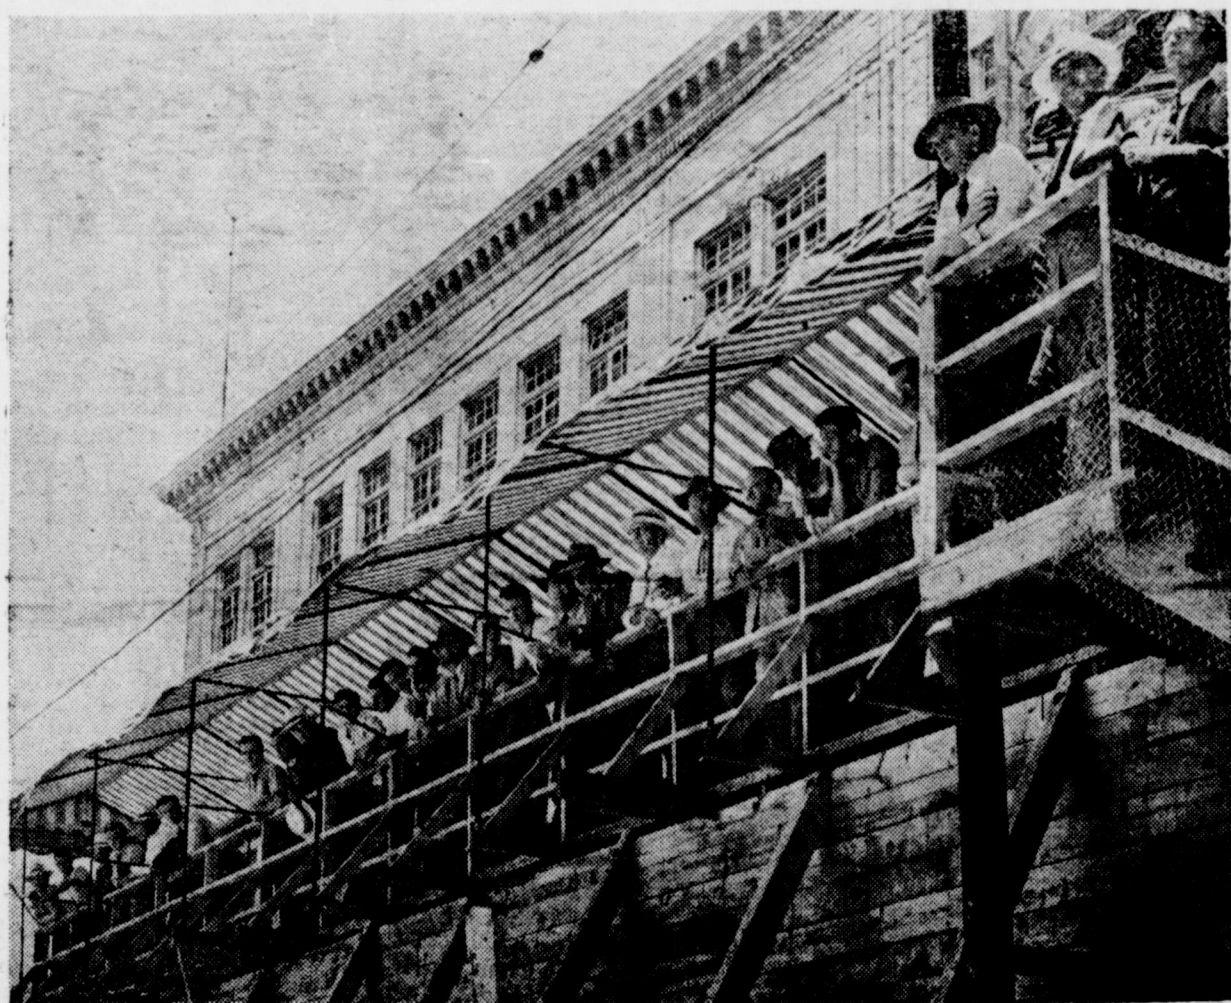

The Sidewalk Superintendent's Club membership is growing daily. More than 17,000 persons have watched the excavating from the gaily colored stand, in its first three weeks of operation. A uniformed attendant presides over the guest register, passes out membership cards and answers questions about the skyscraper. There are seats and a telephone for the convenience of the observers. In the language of the street, members might be called kibitzers—but not by President R. L. Thornton of the bank.

"Their interest is more than appreciated," he said, almost as soon as the first dig into the hard blue limestone underlying the building site was made by a titanic steam shovel. "If they want to watch, they'll watch in comfort", was his conclusion.

Result was a 50-foot "upper deck" provided with seats and a canopy against Texas' summer sun. The deck is very much like that atop a Gulf Coast fishing boat, and it is sheltering hundreds of people every day.

It was soon found that the 50-foot covering wasn't sufficient, so 26 feet more were added and the Sidewalk Superintendent's Club continues to grow.

Membership cards have been issued to more visiting foremen than you'd imagine, and by now they're being exhibited in many points throughout the United States and some foreign countries.

Mercantile Bank officials do not claim originality in the Sidewalk Superintendent's Club—but it does seem that the quarters of the Dallas Chapter are the most spacious that have been provided heretofore and a number of new features have been added.

Des Moines, Iowa had the first one, at the site of the Bankers

Life Building. New York's Rockefeller Center had a spectators' stand. So did Boston, with the famed Milk Street financial district the gathering place, when the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company erected its new building.

The lot fronts 200 feet on Ervay Street, by 120 each on Main and Commerce—24,000 square feet in all. Height of the completed building is to be 431 feet from ground level to top cornice. It will have 30 floors and two basements. It is scheduled for completion by December, 1942.

At the present time, the Sidewalk Superintendents are engrossed in watching blasting activities, and operation of the drag-line, or steam shovel. It is difficult to determine which is the more fascinating.

The modern use of dynamite in blasting can hardly be compared with former methods. The steam shovel, weighing a mere 90,000 pounds, goes into action and with a yawning bite scoops up one-and-one-quarter cubic yards of blasted rock, turns nimbly and accurately deposits its load into a waiting truck. This performance is repeated 60 times an hour.

The average depth of excavation is to be 35 feet which will require the removal of 33,000 cubic yards of rock. Thus, it requires no figuring to determine that the members of the Sidewalk Superintendents' Club have many hours of constructive watching in store for them.

Site of the new bank structure is an historic one from the local standpoint. Upon it, for 50 years, the Dallas Post Office stood. With completion of the New Federal building and removal of the Post Office thereto, the old structure stood for some time, pending sale of the lot by the Government.

Several bids were submitted, but that of the Mercantile National—$607,000 according to the deed—was finally accepted. W. Bruce Luna, Postmaster up to 1938, recalls that the Government paid $11,000 for the lot back in the '80's.

And so there's prospect that the Dallas Sidewalk Superintendents' Club, an outstanding example of Southern hospitality, will be in session for some time yet to come—until, perhaps it may be necessary to provide members with telescopes with which to pick out top-most details of "A City in the Sky"—431 feet above the street level.

LABOR DAY

Before you leave for the Labor Day week end, stop for a minute and think what Labor Day is for. It's a pretty important thing. It means that America—2,973,776 square miles of it—has set aside a day to honor the working man, the man we know as the "common laborer." It means that Americans—131,659,275 of them—are taking time out to pay their respects to plumbers and ditchdiggers.

So it means that the brotherhood of all our people is reaffirmed, and that arm in arm, Labor and Capital and Management go ahead together, making America a stronger, a cleaner, a better place in which to live. Labor Day is a declaration of democracy.

problem to hundreds of individuals who suffer intensely from its effects each summer. Because there are so many ways to overcome the heat it is no longer necessary for home owners to sit by and do nothing about it.

The first thing that comes to mind is, of course, air-conditioning. Air-conditioning has grown up. It is no longer the temperamental, expensive play thing of the well-to-do, subject to constant mechanical difficulties and unsatisfactory service.

Many manufacturers now have on the market inexpensive air-conditioning units that the average home owner can easily afford. These range in size from a very small one room conditioner to a large unit for the entire house. They are quiet and smooth running and give 24 hour a day service with a minimum of trouble.

The advantages are manifold. Air is kept at a constant temperature which can be regulated to suit the individual's desire. Proper moisture content is insured and air, which is kept in constant circulation, is continuously being washed and purified. Thus a high degree of comfort is maintained at all times.

Another way of keeping the home cool is the use of electric fans. Fans do not actually cool the air, that is they do not lower the temperature of it. Their purpose is to circulate the air by keeping it in constant motion. The bigger the surface of the fan's blades, the greater the volume of air displaced as they revolve. Oscillating fans which cover a wide angle of motion are very helpful in making a room more comfortable. Fans should be kept properly oiled and cleaned to insure trouble free performance.

Insulation is another way of making a home more comfortable during the summer. This has the added advantage of making a house warmer in winter, thereby reducing fuel costs, and of keeping outside noises from filtering in. There are many types of insulation on the market, most of them inexpensive and easy to install. Many home owners do their own insulating without the help of skilled workmen.

LOCAL FIRMS ADVISE BUILDING HOMES NOW

In times of unrest and trouble many people become interested as to the future and wonder what they can do to assure themselves a degree of security. The answer is land, a home—shelter you can always call your own.

Real estate men and builders always point out two facts—you will always need shelter for the family, and land does not vanish. One prominent local business man said "There's one thing certain about owning your own home—you will be providing one of the basic needs of existence that nobody can take away from you."

In emphasizing the desirability of building now, another dealer pointed out the fact that in a time of rising prosperity, real estate and homes were good investments. He went on to say that now was virtually an ideal time because prices are rising both in land and materials, and the ones who build at today's prices will have an investment that will be worth more a year or two from now.

More and more families are finding it possible to build now due to eased financing requirements such as the fifteen, twenty and twenty-five year mortgages currently being insured by the F. H. A. This mortgage system makes it possible for the average employed person to own his home—paying each month a lump sum that includes a payment on the principal of the loan, payment of interest, payment of insurance and payment of taxes. It's a system of great convenience, and each payment is a definite step towards full ownership in contrast to the old type of mortgage under which interest payments were made, and the principal amount seldom touched.

Local building dealers, real estate agents, banks and financing agencies are well qualified to offer advice to local families wishing information on home building and remodeling. Every phase of building and financing is understood by these local firms and each is ready to answer questions and offer help. You'll find many of them advertising each week in the News—look for their ads and note the offers they make.

I WANT A DIVORCE

Based on a story by

ADELA ROGERS ST. JOHNS

Serialized from the Paramount Picture

DICK POWELL and JOAN BLONDELL

CHAPTER FIVE SYNOPSIS
Allan MacNally, young attorney, marries Jerry Brokaw. Everything is fine until Allan becomes dissatisfied with his position in a reputable law firm. Erskine Brandon, flashy divorce lawyer, offers him a job as his assistant. Jerry, still hurt by her sister Wanda's senseless divorce handled by Brandon, warns him not to accept.

CHAPTER VI

WANDA had come to stay with them for a couple of days. She had just returned from New York, and was getting her apartment ready. Little David was coming back to her and, seemingly, she could think of nothing else. Jerry and Allan were delighted to have her, even though it did inconvenience them, and Allan had acquired a chronic stiff neck, from sleeping on the living room couch. Jerry was fixing his breakfast, and Allan could tell the way she went about it that she had something more than eggs and coffee on her mind. As she sat down opposite him, she smiled broadly and held out both her hands clenched tightly.

"Guess which and it's yours," she told him, indicating her fists.

"I'll take the right," Allan said unenthusiastically.

"You win," she said, tossing a thick wad of bills beside his plate. "Money," Allan shouted. "Somebody die?" he asked.

"Wanda gave it to me. Two hundred dollars, isn't that marvelous?" Jerry said ecstatically. "She thought it would help out."

"I guess she took one look around and figured I wasn't supporting you in the luxury to which you'd been accustomed," he exploded. "Well, you can give it back to her, see! And you can tell her when I want charity I'll go on Relief."

"Wanda didn't mean it that way at all," Jerry explained, hurt. "I guess she imagined..."

"I don't care what she imagined," he interrupted. "That's part of Wanda's alimony. Maybe you can reconcile yourself to living off David Holland but I—"

Allan stopped dead as Wanda walked into the room.

"Oh hello," he said sheepishly.

Allan tossed his napkin on the table, slid back his chair, kissed Jerry perfunctorily and strode out.

"It's no use," Jerry said hopelessly to her sister. "Thanks just the same."

"Don't be silly," Wanda advised. "Mac is acting like a child."

"No, I can't take it, Wanda," Jerry announced. "It would hurt his pride. If something doesn't happen soon, though, my pride is going for a tumble. I'm going to have to ease up on that promise I extracted, and let him go to work for Brandon, or it's over the hills to the poor house for us."

They were interrupted by the doorbell. Jerry went and with a yelp of delight found David Holland and young David. She called Wanda, and realizing that it was going to be a rather awkward situation for them, quickly went to the kitchen and straightened up the breakfast things.

Jerry heard the door slam and David's car drive away almost immediately after she left. Then she heard vaguely, as she went on with her work, Wanda and young Davey deep in conversation. Soon Wanda came into the bedroom, and as she packed up her things, Jerry noticed she was crying quietly.

"Are those tears of joy, madam?" she asked. "Or what goes on?"

"Oh Jerry, he's not mine any more," Wanda told her. "He's grown away from me and I don't know him."

"Why that's sheer nonsense, darling," Jerry told her. "Pull yourself together. You know how children are and how their interests switch. I'll bet that in a week he'll have practically forgotten his father—" but it won't mean that he doesn't love him."

"You're wrong, Jerry," Wanda repeated firmly. "This is different. David was always closer to him than I was, anyway. And now it's just as though I didn't exist. Besides, David has fallen in love again, and little David seems to be equally smitten," Wanda concluded in another burst of tears.

"It seems that little David almost drowned at the lake, and this girl—Aunt Helen, he calls her—saved his life," she continued. "Now Davey can talk of no one else, and big David feels the same way."

"You just forget it," Jerry insisted. "You're imagining a lot of things because you don't think your son was enthusiastic enough when he saw you."

As Jerry helped Wanda gather up her things, her mind was busy turning over the facts Wanda had set before her. So that was the way the land lay, she mused. More cally nothing to say and was far from his usual self.

"I talked to Mac this morning," he offered.

"Really, how did that happen?" Jerry wanted to know.

"I just felt like talking to him," Jeff answered. "I thought you two might like to go out for dinner as a change, and I asked him about it."

"What did he say," Jerry asked.

"He said to leave it up to you," Jeff answered. "So how about it?"

Jerry hesitated. She didn't want to hurt Jeff's feelings but she knew that she and Allan couldn't possibly afford dinner out. As though he had read her thoughts Jeff went on.

"I want to celebrate. I've made some extra money this week taking a party fishing off Catalina, and you two kids have always been so swell to me I feel like I want to give you a treat. Be a sport and say you'll go," he pleaded.

Jerry agreed and Jeff was delighted. They arranged to meet,

"What did he say?" Jerry asked.

certain than ever that Wanda had come to her senses and that the divorce had all been a mistake, Jerry determined to help Wanda face that fact, and do something about remedying it.

"Now don't worry," she scolded Wanda as she took them to the door. "This will all turn out right, I'm sure." And to Davey, "Take good care of your mother, and make her happy, or I'll be very disappointed."

Much as she loved Wanda, Jerry was glad to have the house to herself again. The quarters had been close and the going had been tough, particularly on Mac. So, though her budget looked bleaker than ever, Jerry determined to have a little celebration in honor of their return to normal living.

When Jeff Gilman arrived late in the afternoon, Jerry had just about completed her plans for the party dinner. She and Allan had seen a lot of the shrewdly wise man they had met on the wharf months back, who had told them in so many words that they were made for each other. They had returned to the spot several times on hot nights, and never failed to run into him. And he had been one of the first people they had told of their engagement. Jeff had followed their doings with interest, and after the wedding he had made a habit of dropping by every Friday with a catch of fish, and through their talks, he and Jerry had become fast friends.

But today Jerry found him rather down in the mouth. He had practiall three of them, at a small Hungarian restaurant where they had taken Jeff to tell him they were engaged. Jerry was the last to arrive, and when she spotted Allan, she saw him and Jeff bent over the table in earnest conversation. As she came to the table they stopped dead. She knew they were up to something, and determined to pry it out of them. After many false starts and attempts on their part to duck the issue, they finally agreed simultaneously.

"My wife wants to divorce me," Jeff said.

"But she also wants his bank account, his boat, and his bridge-work," Mac explained. "So Jeff has to fight her."

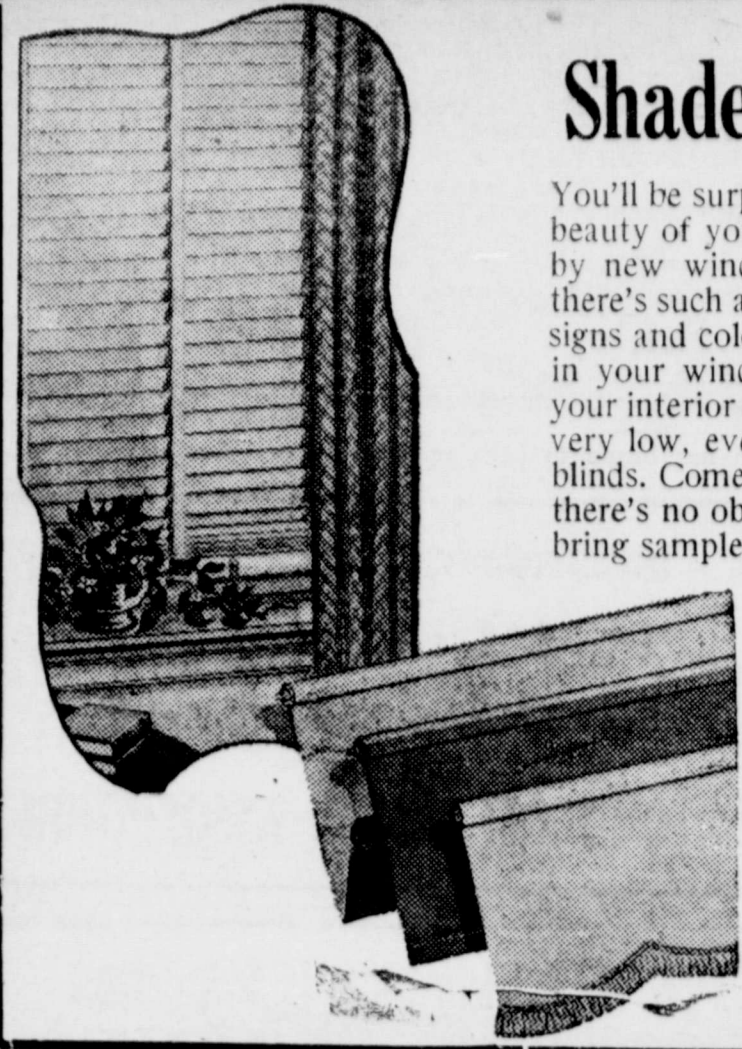

"And on account of me bein' in a tough spot and his nibs here bein' my best friend and a good lawyer, I want him to do the fightin'," Jeff said with a relieved sigh.

"I see," said Jerry as she pushed back her chair to leave. They grabbed her and sat her down. All through dinner, course after course, they argued. Mac and Jeff insisting that this was different, it was for a friend, and that Jeff's wife was just out to take him for all she could.

Finally, although she knew it was a mistake, Jerry weakened. She could listen to no more.

"All right," she said emphatically. "But, Allan MacNally, I want you to realize this is an exception. It's just this once, because Jeff is our friend."

ferent from one of fifty years ago—inside—that you don't have to look at the facades at all, to tell them apart.

Most people use the word "modern" to denote a novel exterior of one sort or another. Actually, exteriors have changed but little. But our American fondness for having houses with the familiar look of houses we grew up with has not stopped our progress in designing floor plans. You probably did not realize that having a terrace in back of your house instead of a porch in front, or having a combination dining and living room instead of two separate rooms, dated your house third decade of the twentieth century, but it does. Today's new houses, no matter what dress they wear architecturally, provide floor plans to suit present day modes of living.

FOUR STEPS IN BUILDING NEW HOMES

Essential steps in acquiring a new home may be generally divided into four subdivisions:

1. A 20 percent or larger equity in property or cash.
2. Complete and accurate plans and specifications of the proposed structure.
3. A steady monthly income four or five times greater than the monthly payments.
4. A contract with a bonafide legitimate contractor.

VESTIBULE, BAY WINDOW LITTLE TRICKS TO MAKE A SMALL HOME MORE COZY

There are several little tricks that can be used in making a small home the snug little place it ought to be. Among them is the use of a tiny vestibule inside the front entrance, or a window bay to make the little kitchen a brighter, sunnier place.

These and such seemingly insignificant details as the little port hole in the guest closet really make a large contribution to the appearance and general liveability of this particular home. The hearth in the living room is another example of what details can do to improve these factors.

You will note that the living room is the dominant feature of the home, occupying as it does, almost half of the building's overall length. With the extra space provided by the vestibule at one end it assumes the proportions of a really large room.

PROTECTION FROM TERMITES

Although there are more than 50 types of termites in the United States, home owners are concerned chiefly with the three types that attack wood, dry-wood and subterranean termites.

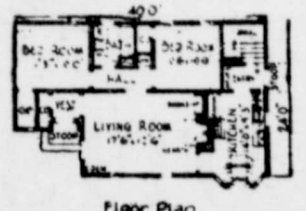

Damp-wood termites are usually found west of the Rocky Mountains and they colonize in wood under unusually damp or moist conditions. They are seldom a factor in causing much material damage to houses. Damage done by dry-wood termites is all slight, it being subterranean termites which depend on wood cellulose to live, that cause the damage.

Proper construction of homes, using good wood and masonry and concrete will help to prevent termite ravages. A mechanical barrier to prevent their passage from soil to wood is also helpful. One further method of termite control is the treatment of wood with some preservative.

HOME'S PERIOD LABELED BY INSIDE RATHER THAN EXTERIOR

The modernity of your home may be judged by its floor plans. No matter what style house you are building if the arrangements of its rooms is dictated by the needs of modern times the house will betray its age by the way the inside is planned.

You do not have to go outside to inspect the face a house presents to the world in order to guess how old it is. Rather, you count the years the way a horse dealer counts teeth when he looks inside a horse's mouth. For a house of the present day is so dif-

The space provided by the bay window in the kitchen may conceivably be used as a breakfast nook and the living room used for dining when more room is necessary.

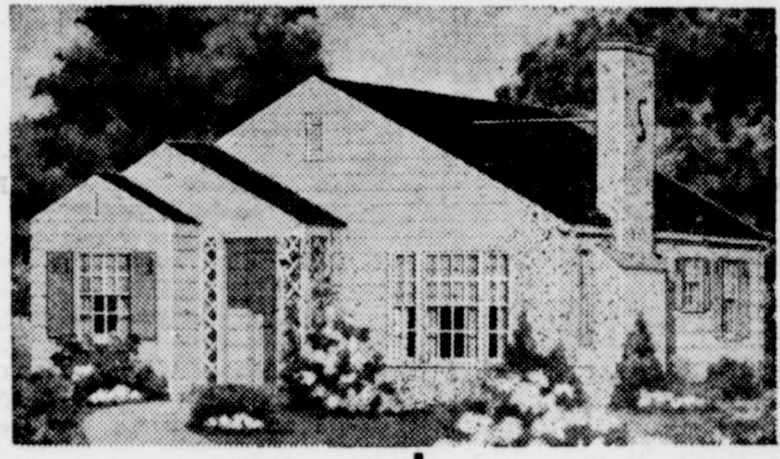

The service entrance opens on the kitchen and basement steps.

INEXPENSIVE WAYS TO INCREASE VALUE OF PROPERTY DISCUSSED

Most home-owners are interested in improving their property and increasing its value. If this can be done at a minimum of expense, they are still more inclined to make the necessary changes. Because there are so many things that are inexpensive and that still make the home a better one, we are listing a few of them here.

For instance, look at the things that can be done to an average basement. It can be made into a recreation room. Wallboard for the walls and ceiling are a big help. Partitions for the laundry and storage rooms can easily and economically be erected. The home owner can lay a wood floor over the cement and cover it with linoleum. Built in tables for the laundry, a work-bench or tool cabinet are helpful. Care should be given to see that the basement is amply and correctly lighted and ventilated.

Closets are important in a home, attention should be paid to electric lights in the closet, as this is one thing that many home owners are inclined to forget.

Electric outlets throughout the house add greatly to the comfort and convenience of the entire family. A buzzer system from room to room might also prove helpful especially in a larger home. Chimes for front and back doors, and even for the telephone, are charming.

Water proof floors in the vestibule, hall, kitchen and pantry will help to eliminate many housecleaning difficulties. Materials to use are linoleum, rubber tile or asphalt. Wooden floors should be sanded, stained, varnished, sellacked and waxed regularly.

Garages need attention, too. Doors and hardware should be kept in good condition, and new automatic door-openers are not nearly so expensive as you might imagine. A tool and implement cabinet is handy in the garage, as well as heating, lighting and running water.

The outside appearance of your home is the only factor that is taken into consideration by passers-by. The exterior siding should be painted, cornice columns, windows and doors should be trimmed.

Brick, cement and stucco may be painted or whitewashed. Shingles should be stained.

During the hot summer months a shower will be used to good advantage. Shower stalls in the bathroom and downstairs will be used time and again. A good hot water heater and rust proof pipes are worth their weight in gold. Pipe lines to garage, lawn and garden are also helpful.

Your kitchen will be better with a breakfast nook, a built-in ironing board, more storage space, pantry shelves, a good refrigerator and cooking range, a modern sink and drainboard.

CONTRACTOR — Carpentering and Cement Work

It Costs Less Than You Think!

There's no need for you to go on living in a dingy, outmoded, old-fashioned home. Because now, you can have that home completely remodeled and modernized, at a cost far less than what you might imagine. You'll like the comfort and conveniences a modern home can give you. You'll like its appearance, and you'll appreciate our fine workmanship and excellent materials.

GET the Home You've always Wanted!

PRACTIBILITY SHOULD BE FIRST IN ANY FLOOR PLAN SAY CONTRACTORS

"So many people are inclined to let their imaginations run riot with them when explaining their ideas about homes," say some of the country's leading architects, contractors and building counselors, "that they totally overlook the necessity for having adequate closet space, conveniently located bathrooms and other of the more practical features of home building."

Convenience and practicability were the prime factors in the floor plan of the home shown here. A modest, four-room, one-story building that can be erected at moderate cost, it is so arranged that each room is conveniently located.

Note how the bathroom is sandwiched in between the two bedrooms; thus it is easily accessible to both. In addition to a closet in each of the bedrooms, there are two closets and a linen cabinet in the hall. The dining alcove opens directly onto the kitchen and is a part of the living room itself.

It is important to remember that a home is more than a showplace—it must be lived in, and in order to do that comfortably it must be sensibly planned.

This is a sensibly arranged building

Floor, Plan

REMODELING OF HOME IS SATISFACTORY SUBSTITUTE FOR NEW HOME

It's smart to live in a better home, even if it's not a new one. There are so many things that can be done on the inside of the home you now live in that it is not necessary to long vainly for the advantages of a new home.

Changing the floor plan to suit the needs of your family is one of the first, and most important steps you can take. Perhaps you need more closet space, or an extra lavatory on the first floor. With the cooperation of a local architect and reputable supply dealers you can accomplish these things at surprisingly low cost.

Many other things can be done to make your home a better home. Modern up to date plumbing fixtures do much to add to the comfort and convenience of your home. An efficient hot water heater is something every home should have and every family wants and needs.

Wallpaper is an item to which you should give considerable attention. Beautiful colors and patterns will help to dress up each room, and many wallpapers are very durable and washable. Local merchants have wide selections of wallpapers.

Screens for your doors and windows are also necessities during the Spring and Summer months. Adequate roofing, too, is essential.

HOT WATER HEATERS NO LONGER LUXURY

For some reason or another hot water heaters have been regarded by many people as an expensive luxury, one which they could do just as well without. Until these people have enjoyed the benefits of running hot water it is difficult for them to conceive of its many advantages.

Practical experience has shown us that there is no substitute for hot water for bathing, washing, shaving, laundry or dishwashing. Cold water, no matter how plentiful simply can not do the job.

Many physicians recommend a warm or a hot bath for fatigue. How pleasant it is then merely to turn on a faucet and fill the tub with rushing, hot water, rather than having to go to the trouble of heating water on a stove and then pouring it into the tub.

Then, too, a warm or a hot shower is not only refreshing it is extremely healthful and beneficial. Of course it is practical only when there is a never ending supply of hot water to come coursing down from over head.

For shaving, there is, of course, no substitute for hot water. It is nearly impossible to get later of the desired consistency without plenty of hot water. And the satisfying, clean sensation one feels after shaving can be a result only of hot water.

For the house wife who does her own laundry, hot water is a real godsend. It gets stubborn dirt out of clothes and linens as cold water never could do. And for such household tasks as dishwashing, window washing, floors, woodwork and other jobs, the woman who can depend on an unfailing supply of hot water when she wants it is really in luck.

Contrary to common belief, hot water heaters are not necessarily expensive. Ask your local dealer.

LIBERTY NEWS

Mrs. Bessie Brown, Reporter
 It is rumored that Mr. and Mrs. Art Kissel and their adorable little sons, Harry, James and Wayne, will move from Liberty to Hamilton in the near future. It is lamentable that so splendid a family should leave us. Mrs. Kissel was the former Lula Register, who spent much of her popular girlhood in the home of her aunt and her grandmother, Mrs. C. E. Little and Mrs. G. D. Worrell. These good people have been friends and neighbors to us, our mothers and grandmothers for so many years that we are not willing to give Lula up; but as we lose Hamilton gains. Our school that has barely enough scholastic to maintain its two teachers, will suffer a severe loss with the removal of the Kissels. While we are prone to keep our little school at home, deep in our hearts we all know that it is unfair to our children, who could easily be transported to the splendid Gatesville school system. Let us hope for this change in the near future.

THE METHODIST

A. R. Corn, Pastor
There will be preaching services at Jonesboro August 31 and September 7. We desire a full attendance.

We have just closed our series of revival services, resulting in twenty-two conversions. There should have been many more converted, but we are thankful for those who were saved.

People have freedom of will; therefore many will not accept Christ and no one can influence them to do so. Jesus said, "Whosoever will may come unto me. But ye will not come unto me that ye might be saved."

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

"God and Labor" and "Unconscious Radiance" are the sermon topics at the First Presbyterian Church Sunday, morning and evening respectively. The pastor will preach on both occasions.

Morning worship begins at 11 o'clock. The scriptural background of the sermon at this hour is the story of the Work Project Administered in the Old Testament, recorded in the later chapters of Exodus, according to the pastor.

The hour of evening (vesper) worship is 5 o'clock.

Sunday School, with classes and departments for all ages, begins at 9:45. A class of young adults, taught by the pastor, meets in the church auditorium.

HARMON SERVICES

Worship is announced for the Harmon community Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Rev. Edward S. Bayless of Gatesville will preach. Announcement will be made at that time regarding future schedule of religious services in the community.

PREACHING SERVICES TO BE HELD AT HOME OF UNCLE JOHN BRASHEAR

There will be preaching services at the home of Uncle John Brashear, two houses west of cemetery in Gatesville, Sunday evening, August 31, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. Everybody is cordially invited to come.

BE CAREFUL LABOR DAY! MANY WILL NOT BE BACK

"Help Defense — Stop Accidents" is the rallying cry issued by the Texas Safety Association in its role as state coordinator in the nationwide campaign against accidents launched by President Roosevelt.

By proclamation the President called on every American citizen to devote maximum effort to a "concerted campaign against accidents which are wasting the manpower and resources so sorely needed for national defense."

The statewide campaign against accidents on the highways, on the farms, in industry, and at home will be waged by more than 30 organizations cooperating with the Texas Safety Association.

"The importance of helping defense by stopping accidents cannot be overemphasized," said George Clarke, managing director.

"For example, the traffic toll for the Labor Day week end holiday is expected to take the lives of 27 Texans, permanently disable 71 persons and injure some 900 others. The economic loss for the three day celebration will amount to more than one million dollars!"

"The prediction is based on the accident trend of this year and the accident rate for the same holiday period last year.

"Translated in terms of the defense program, four bombers could be built with the economic loss of the Labor Day holiday alone.

"'Help Defense — Stop Accidents!' is a patriotic appeal which every Texan should heed."

GATESVILLE WOMEN GRADUATE FROM T.S.C.W., DENTON

Denton, Texas—Three Gatesville women, Misses Nelle Goodall and Mildred Witcher, and Mrs. John O. Potts, were among the 171 students to receive degrees at the annual summer commencement exercises at Texas State College for Women Saturday morning at 9:00 o'clock.

Miss Goodall, who received both the Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science degrees, is the daughter of Mrs. Ethel Goodall. Her major field was home economics. Both Miss Witcher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Witcher, and Mrs. Potts took Bachelor of Science degrees in home economics.
