CAPITAL COTTON RAISER, CON. POAGE

Picture courtesy, The Temple Daily Telegram and The Associated Press.

Congressman W. R. Poage, is shown above in his "cotton patch" behind his apartment in Washington, D. C. Congressman Poage ordered the cotton from Texas in May, but, due to delays did not receive the seed until June or later, and Washington weather right now, don't seem to be the "opening" kind of weather. Anyway, Washingtonians have a chance to see the bolls. The Congressman has been wearing cotton blossoms in the lapel of his coat to the House of Representatives and to his office.

Congressman Poage, a cotton grower himself, and a member of the House Agriculture Committee has always been deeply interested in all farm problems, problems which he himself understand, and does not have to "read about in books."

THE BLACK STONE HEART

By FRANK E. SIMMONS

Many years ago old Tampico, for favors shown, revealed an ancient working now known as the Pancake Mine to Ike Pancake. This was high up on Coryell Creek in Coryell County. There are numerous caves in the limestone hills that border the narrow valleys of Coryell Creek and Bertroung branch and in these caves and valleys several ancient burial grounds have been found.

Beginning in 1925 Ole Anders and a half Caddo Indian did a lot of treasure hunting and excavating in and around the Pancake Ranch. They had somehow gotten possession of what purported to be a Spanish or Mexican Chart, bearing certain markings that should be found on stones in various places in relation to the Pancake Mine.

There was also another object to be found, viz: a hard, black, glossy stone bearing a likeness to a human heart, and of about a pound weight. This Chart was written in the sign characters of the ancient Mexicans. The lines were traced, and all points called for were found, including the Black Stone Heart. The stone was broken and a part of it sent away for a chemical analysis. I do not know the analysis reading. Ike Pancake had gathered forty or fifty artifacts, arrow heads, flint knives, scraps of pottery, iron oxide, and this broken likeness of the human heart, which he gave to me.

For several years I kept the Black Stone Heart with my collection of Indian relics, not thinking it had any special significance. Now 1936 finds me with this curious stone and a very strange story connected with it.

For the past twenty five years I have hunted Indian relics, explored old camp sites, and prowled in caves in search of the cultural remains left by the antecedent races who occupied this land. I have written for local newspapers many folk tales, and treasure stories, and articles about Indian remains, so that now certain people regard me as a treasure hunter, and several men have sought my assistance to hunt buried treasure and lost mines. It was because of this reputation that the story of the Black Stone Heart came to me. After learning the story, I was glad for once, that I was known as a treasure hunter.

In 1935 a man, supposedly Mexican, but very distinctly Indian, came to me to inquire of my archeological finds on Coryell Creek. He had heard that I had the Black Stone Heart. When I placed it in his hand I noticed that a pallor came over his countenance. He seemed deeply moved and solemnly shook his head. After a long and careful examination of the stone, he drew from a leather brief case, a parchment, unfolded it and spread it on the ground. There was a drawing of the hills and streams adjacent to the Pancake Mine. The writings were in pictographs, undecipherable to me. He traced the lines of the strange picture writing to a cave in the head of a gulch that cuts into the south side of the hill in which the mine is located; "Here" he said "is where it was found" he was correct, for in this small cave the excavators removed the remains of fourteen human bodies, a large number of arrowheads, a few scraps of pottery and the Black Stone Heart I now have. Raising his eyes to mine he said solemnly "It is broken, it is broken", and was silent for several minutes. Rising he continued "It was a priceless treasure of my people, but it is now worthless and disaster will overtake any member of my people who may have it in their possession, for it is broken". I was all attention as he briefly unraveled the story of the sacred stone which he had traveled so far to retrieve.

"Long, long ago my people lived in the table lands of Mexico. They were cultured and had cities built of stone and orchards, and rich fields. They were prosperous and no member of the nation was in want. We had wise men, and poets, and were happy.

"The happiness of our people was doomed, for a fierce race of warriors came upon the table lands of Mexico. Our cities were captured, our fields laid waste, our people enslaved, and all but a remnant were driven out of the country. Our King with this remnant retreated over the mountains but were overtaken by the fierce enemy and killed together with most of his people.

"Our King was sacred and our wise men, and priests, removed his heart and presented it to the

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:
Under the guise of running the most exclusive dress shop in Stockholm, it seems that Madeleine Godard is operating as the most valuable agent of the German Secret Service. Her frequent style-buying trips to Paris enable her to bring back valuable information on French troop movements. Madeleine sells her information to Major Schaffer, head of German espionage in this neutral Swedish city. The tides of war bring a mysterious new character, Baron Karl von Marwitz, to Stockholm and to Madeleine's place. She finds him attractive, but Anatole, her porter and spy assistant, reports that Marwitz is an alleged traitor and deserter from the German Navy. Madeleine expresses doubt at his information.

Chapter Two

When Madeleine visited Schaffer next, she met Muller, one of the most important men of the Berlin office, who had been sent to Stockholm to better coordinate the espionage service. He was a man of medium build, with an aquiline face that revealed a shrewd intelligence, a strong devotion to his purpose. Madeleine impressed him very much.

"That means you forbid me to come here!" he asked wistfully.

"Clever girl, with a most innocent face," he remarked to Schaffer after the first interview. "How long has she been with us?"

"Three years," Schaffer told him. "Have you checked her story?"

"Naturally. She comes from Maloya. Her father's property was destroyed to make fortifications on the Swiss frontier."

"A volunteer?"

"No, I was responsible," Schaffer responded with a slightly pompous note.

It did not take Baron Marwitz long to return — without Lupita. He seemed to think it necessary to apologize for her.

"If you could ever take pity on a lonely man and dine with me . . ."

Madeleine shook her head. "Sorry, I can't."

"You would be doing a great kindness to a man who lives in a desert," he continued.

"Packed with dazzling beauties?" Madeleine returned. The phone rang. It was Bob.

"Tonight. At seven-thirty. The Grand? All right," she spoke through the phone.

"No pity?" Marwitz whispered. She smiled and shook her head. At the other end of the line, Bob hung up his phone and turned to a man he addressed as Faber. "What do you think?" he said.

"She's from Maloya," Faber replied and related the story about her father's farm.

"She's a sweet thing," spoke Bob musingly. "I hate to suspect her, but she has got a lot of German friends."

"She's got a lot of French friends," Faber pointed out. Then, with a smile, "And one or two English . . ."

tactics. He now seemed engaged in a systematic campaign to buy out Madeleine's shop, piecemeal. Not a day passed in which the Baron failed to pay a visit to her shop to see her, under the pretense of buying one or more garments. They were sent straight to his residence and hung in his closet. Madeleine ignored what was happening for a time, then decided to speak to him.

"Karl," she remonstrated, "this nonsense must stop. Buying things you don't want, just for an excuse to come here. I won't sell you another rag."

"That means you forbid me to come here," he asked, suddenly wistful.

"Precisely."

He shrugged. "All right Madeleine, I lose."

Madeleine hesitated before she answered him. "No, Karl," she answered in a muted tone. "You win."

His surprise and delight were evident on his face. He came forward to take her hand. "Tonight?" he asked.

Madeleine smiled. "I have a feeling I shall regret this." She pulled her hand away from his. She was expected at the "Countess Lindstrom's" with information on the French counter-offensive, information for which the German service had waited a long time.

Schaffer greeted Madeleine with enthusiasm. Her information pointed to a probable date for the French offensive for the twentieth. The line of attack would be northwest of the Marne salient.

"Excellent, Madeleine, excellent," he crowed. "Headquarters has been waiting for this news, and we are the first to give it to them. Madeleine, I am proud of you."

Above her she could hear the clicking of the semaphore, winging, fateful words out to sea to be picked up and relayed to Berlin.

If the days that followed passed rapidly, happily, Madeleine had Baron Marwitz to thank. She found him a pleasant and witty companion, an ideal host. In fact, she was slowly succumbing to his charm.

This evening they were dining at an inn he had discovered, on a lamplit terrace that overlooked a canal. The twilight, the dinner, the music, the brandy she was sipping, all combined to make the most idyllic hour she had ever enjoyed. She forgot that somewhere in France contending men were engaged in the most terrible mass slaughter civilization had ever known.

"Are you still sorry," Karl asked, "that you came out with me that first evening?"

Madeleine nodded with a taunting smile.

"You've discovered all the secrets of my black soul," Karl continued. "Go on, tell me what a dreadful fellow I am."

"Well," Madeleine began, "It's easy to touch your pocket, but difficult to touch your heart. When you're kissing one woman you're thinking of the next. You've never been simple and sincere or loyal to any woman in your life . . ."

Under the stress of what she was saying Madeleine rose from the table and moved to the balcony.

SCOTT'S FUNERAL HOME

Black Stone Heart

sun, it became as hard as stone. This was taken as a good omen. It became a tradition of my people that as long as this heart of our king was kept unbroken our nation would be Divinely guided. Our people removed far to the northeast where they increased in numbers and built a city, and crowned the young prince as king.

"The overpowering nation came again and drove us out of our homes. The Stone Heart was the treasure of our king. After many generations of wandering, during which time our kings jealously guarded this sacred treasure, we came to this land. It was a fertile land. Timber, clear streams, grass and wild life in abundance.

"Our wise men, and king, thought it well to build a city and temple here. Many thatch houses and fields of corn. Our king was happy. A stone temple, a sacred place to the sun, was erected on the brow of a hill facing the rising sun. After several kings and reigned happily, we were attacked by a fierce race coming out of the plains toward the great mountains. The war was terrible. Most of our people were killed and buried in the caves and fields. Many of our nobles were killed and buried in the caves our people had lived in. Again our king was killed, and with the sacred stone, and some of the great chiefs, was buried in this small cave. Our people had buried the stone of sacred guidance.

"Our enemies left; but our homes and our temple were laid waste. Decimated in numbers, and heartbroken our young king, with a remnant of survivors, made their way from nation to nation, toward the Rio Grande. On the long journey they were subject to many nations, so that it was many, many years before the great river was reached. During all of this time, our kings, and nobles, lived as common men, but always preserved the tradition of the Stone Heart. Finally a very small number found themselves in the heart of Mexico among strangers. It is from them that I come. A single, straggling, village among other people. I am the last of the kings. Tradition says that if we retrieve the Stone Heart we will become a great people. We have kept the record. I have seen the desolation. I have seen the floor of our temple. I have seen the caves where my ancestors are buried. I have sought the sacred stone for many years. Like my hopes, and my nation, it is broken; it is broken."

My royal visitor sat in silence for some time, then resumed talking "It is no use for whitemen, or Mexicans, to bring charts, and dig here for gold. That stone here was the sacred treasure, and it is broken. It is broken."

He left the stone with me and with many courtesies bade me farewell and departed. Before he bade me farewell I had asked him for the pictograph parchment. It too was sacred to him, so he kept it.

This is a strange story, but stranger still, Ike Pancake has found many of the strangely marked stones, the graves of the dead, the Black Stone Heart where it was supposed to be, the stone floor of the temple, and many of the glyphic marks that my visitor was looking for. The glyphic map meant nothing to me but my royal visitor could read it faster than you can read this paper.

The stone floor is on the brow of a hill facing the rising sun. When found only a small portion was exposed, the other part was covered with from one to two feet of rubble that had drifted down from above. When I saw the stone floor in 1933 only two of the stones had been lifted out of place. The stone flags were cut with square corners well fitted, and leveled.

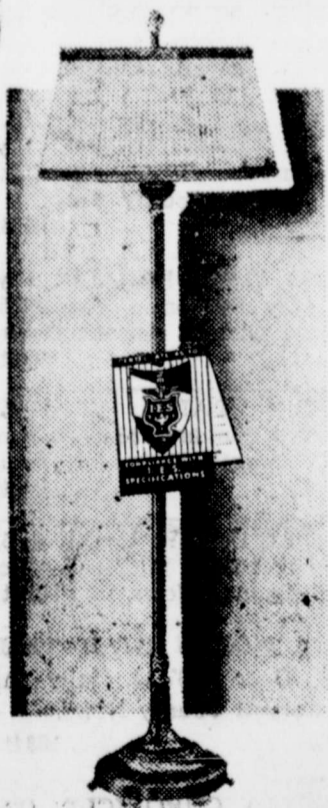

A petroglyph cut on a stone found in Bertrung Branch, was a good representation of the water courses in the immediate neighborhood. A duplicate was found graven on the wall of a bluff a mile distant.

Author's Note:—Since the above article was written the Black Stone Heart has disappeared from my collection of Indian relics. I had kept the larger specimens in a pile in the back yard, where it was viewed by several relic hunters to whom I related the strange story of the Black Stone Heart. The stone has disappeared from the collection. This is the same Black Stone Heart referred to in a former story of "The Pancake Mine" published in this newspaper.

Lovely roses decorated the home throughout. Mrs. Alfred Snyder presided at the bride's book, where each guest registered. Various games were played, after which the gifts were presented the honoree by the hostess in a rose-covered basket.

Refreshments were served with Mrs. Roy King presiding at the punch bowl.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hunter, Mrs. Claude Mauldin and daughter of Abilene were week end guests of Mrs. R. S. Farmer and Mrs. W. A. Graham.

How to become A SKILLED DRIVER

WATCHING THE ROAD

Skilled drivers always keep looking ahead. They don't "rubber" because there is too much at stake. For example, if you are driving 40 miles an hour, your car is traveling 10 feet a second. Shift your eyes from the road for 59 feet—or one second—and anything can happen. Make it a practice never to look around at the "sights." Otherwise you will be inviting an accident. There is no argument on this point: YOU MUST keep your eyes and your mind watching AT ALL TIMES.

Democracy...in Conference

We like to think of ourselves as a progressive nation—and we are. We've led the parade for the whole world in invention and development—electric lights, telephones, automobiles, planes, streamlined trains.

But there's one thing we don't want streamlined for us. We don't want our opinions machine-made and handed out to us from the assembly line of any propaganda factory.

When it comes to what we think, we'd rather do the work ourselves than have it done for us. We have always preferred to have our opinions homemade—and we still do.

The dictators might call us a "cracker-barrel nation," because we get the facts out of newspapers and talk them over among ourselves and then make up our minds.

The dictators think it's better to do ALL the thinking for their people; they like to DICTATE what the people think and dictate what they buy, and then make them like it by threatening them with castor oil or concentration camps.

WE'LL NEVER SEE IT THEIR WAY. As long as we have newspapers to tell us what's going on in the government—as long as newspaper advertisers keep on competing for our business by showing us their values, we'll just go right on making up our own minds around the "cracker barrel," whether it's in a town meeting or a skyscraper office or a country store.

It's this determination to make up our minds that gives us the right to be a self-governing nation. It's this same determination that keeps our system of free enterprise going—gives us the right to buy what we like at the price we are willing to pay.

And it's the FACTS the newspapers give us—in their news columns and in their advertising columns—that are the foundation of BOTH these rights. Mighty important rights they are; too, particularly when you consider that your newspaper costs just a few cents a day.

HORNETS DROP SECOND CONFERENCE BATTLE TO CLIFTON 0-19: OUTCLASSED

When you bump into one too big for you, and take a lacing, you just can't be blamed for the lacing, and that's how the GHS Hornets fared Friday night in the Clifton conference scramble. The Hornets netted an even 0, while the Cliftonites got away with 19 of them. Which, without discounting at all, is still not all of the game.

Now, "business was a little better than usual" Friday night last, so we gets an erstwhile local executive-newspaper to "cover the game". We give him the scribble pad, the pencil and a pat on the back, and he's to give us the dope. He does. The pad came back blank, the pencil missing, and the "writer" heided himself to "Cowtown" Saturday morning early for his Alma Mater's battle with the Aggies, much to his sorrow, since the TCUans got shellaced 14-0. But that's another game.

Our dear friends, The Waco News-Tribune, out of courtesy to both their "feeders", Clifton and Gatesville donated exactly 2 inches of space, including the headline, big hearted like they are.

Here's what they said, except the first paragraph, with which we have done just as well or better, above.

"Nelson scored the first touchdown for the Cubs (Clifton) with a short line plunge.

"Hulem took a pass from Nelson to score the second and Nelson whipped an overhead heave to Ludwig for the third score."

Well, that tells the scoring, but don't say much about who they scored on—well, you know yourself, they wouldn't, especially, if it was for Gatesville. God bless 'em?

The rest of this story we got from the fans who, Team, are really a bunch of pretty nice fans. They had nothing bad to say about it. They said you boys were outclassed, which, I guess was about right, and that the Cubs could not have done much with you, if they had not Aircorped their way to . . .

Line play, defense, and everything was really bragged on by everyone we heard, and they said the line, in particular really played a bang-up game. Now we liked that very much.

They, too, didn't throw any rocks at the backfield, and, well, Team, it just sounded like these Gatesville fans were the kind that appreciates the playing, rather than the scoring. They, too, must have been the fans that didn't have anything up on the game. Them's the fans that you usually hear the squawk from. If they lose a thick malt or some other insignificant bet they want to fire the coach, throw out the school board and burn up the school. Principally, they want to manhandle the coach.

Now, team, if we'd seen this particular ball game, we couldn't have given as good a report as the fans we've heard around these parts when they were talking about the way you boys worked in that game. Just don't know how you can get around putting out for fans like than—they're real fans.

Coach Pruitt wants so much space for you boys, and this'll just about measure up to the usual length of a regular write-up, although it beats around the bush like a government handout, and says just as little.

Anyway, if you use a few, or, a lot, the whole thing sums up to the fact that the fans were pleased even though you brought nothing but the gooseegg back, and a reputation for a scrapping, fighting club. And, we don't know how you could want anything else. That's the stuff, boys.

N. JUNIOR HIGH, 13 GHS RESERVES 6, THURSDAY AT 4:15

Using a marked weight advantage to good effect, the hard-blocking North Junior Eagles of Waco checked in with a 13-6 victory over the Gatesville Juniors Thursday.

For Waco, Art Carlyle tossed a pass to Raywood Johnson for 25 yards and a touch for N. Junior in the 2nd. Carlyle dived over center for the extra. Again in the third, Carlyle passed, this time to John DeWitt, to put the ball on the Hornet 3. Carlyle failed to make the conversion.

For Gatesville, Weaver scored in the 3rd, but the extra was not added, and the Scrubs nearly put one over in the 4th.

Pruitt, White and Post were officials.

STATE JUVENILES DROP ONE TO WORKIN' BOYS CLUB, WACO 19-12

Musta been a good game, that of Coach White's State Juvenile Training School Boys and the boys of the Waco Working Boys Club, Thursday afternoon, because the count indicates a scoring game, ending Waco 19, State 12.

Worley, Jones and Arnold worked the game as officials.

GHS JUNIORS TAKE CLOSE CONTEST FROM HAMILTON JRS. 12-6

What a "flyweight" is to boxing, "Junior Highs" are to football, and for fast, hard, up-to-the-minute playing, you'll be doing yourself a favor if you see these juniors work. The first time we could get to it was Friday night, and were well paid. Coach Clinton White started a full team of Juniors and then substituted a few reserves just to make it a little more interesting, which really was not needed.

The game see-sawed, with Hamilton scoring first, and then, that Johnny, little Johnny Wood got on his bicycle or something, and loped from his own 25 to the Hamilton 20. After a couple of plays, Johnny finished this one out, and the game was tied, as they failed to convert.

Defense of Boynton, Gartman, and Henderson was outstanding but you can't pick stars in a Junior game. Gartman however, on one fierce attack, made a Hamiltonian fumble and Lengefeldt was playing heads-up, and grabbed the sperioid. The bad part, just about this time, a period ended.

Perryman, caled "Codger" pulled about the same thing, jarring a Hamiltonian, but he went on and took the ball himself, and made the touchdown, winning the game. Johnny attempted to carry over, but somebody "held" an dthe penalty ruined the extra, but 6 points was enough, anyway.

Besides the starting lineup, Coach White used these players (if we got them all) Weaver, Edwards, Sexton, Boynton, Melton, Thomas, Williams, Thompson, Perryman and Cole.

The starters were: Center, Brazziel; Guards, Campbell and Hodges; Tackles, Parr and Spence; Ends, Sullivan and Bates, Painter, quarterback, Weaver, half back, Blankenship, half back, and Tatum blocking back. Worley, Arnold and Jones, officials.

LOMETA 18, AND OUR OGLESBY 0: ANOTHER BIG COUNT ASTRAY

Lometa took the big end of the score in another scheduled Six-Game this week, when Oglesby furnished the competition. The final whistle found it Lometa 18, Oglesby 0.

C. D. Boyer, Superintendent did not elucidate, and neither can we, except by the Bull Line, which is always in use, when there are no reports. Anyway, let's keep these big counts at home, and let's have the facts.

FLAT 36, IRELAND 6 IN THEIR SIX-GAME THIS WEEK AT FLAT

Flat High School looked like a top ranker in in their game this week with Ireland, coming out of the big end of the horn 36-6.

According to reports, offensive stars for Flat were Thomas, Powe, and Love, while on the defense Taylor at end stood out. Coach Mohrmann used a liberal sprinkling of reserves.

Reports from the other side of the fence are lacking, but the Cardinals evidently had something of both offense and defense, as indicated by their count of 6, and again, that they held Flat to this reasonable 36. Let's have a report, Ireland.

PEARL DROPS GAME TO COVE FRIDAY 6-44: TOO MUCH

Friday afternoon at 2:30, Pearl dropped a six-man game to Copperas Cove by the top heavy count of 6-44, and from the brief account we have, the Cove powerhouse is still running without a cog missing.

Stars for Pearl were Leo Fetner, E. J. Smith, and James Higgins. Fetner made the touch in the 3rd quarter for the Dragons.

POTTSVILLE 27, AND TURNERSVILLE 0, IN A PAST WEEK'S GAME

That, ladies and gentlemen, was all we got on that particular Six-Game, Turnersville 0, Pottsville 27.

And, we haven't anything against Pottsville, but, we'd rather keep the long end of these scores in Coryell county. Imagine the Clary boys were in to the finish for Turnersville, and we can't say who the Pottsville boys were. Sorry.
