Where's All The Paper Going? Here's Answer

In general, the answer is this: for every 5 billion dollars spent for Lend-Lease and War Program needs, a million tons of pulp and paper are required. Here are some of the paper needs a considerable proportion of which must be supplied by papers in the Gilbert manufacturing class:

- 1,725,000 tons of cotton-fibre content Writing Paper.
- 3,300,000 tons of grades of other cotton-fibre-content paper including blue print and drawing papers, chart papers, and other special papers.
- 8,600,000 tons of Paper Board.
- 4,600,000 tons of News Print.
- 3,500,000 tons of Wrapping.
- 2,825,000 tons of Book Paper.

Paper used for actual War needs includes:

- One-fourth million tons of paper for shell casings.
- 8,000 tons of Kraft paper for Army laundries
- 50,000 tons of paper for Steel Strip mills.
- 11,000 tons of Target Paper

In 1940, 14,500,000 tons of paper rolled off the paper machines of the country. In 1941, 16,000,000 tons of paper will have been made. As close as the experts can estimate, War, Military and Civilian requirements are not at the rate of 24,500,000 tons per year, which is 6,000,000 tons over any previous record of production.

Paper mills, and your paper merchants, are doing every thing possible to help you secure your paper requirements under present production handicaps.

Think we got a lot of this back every day in "releases" from the government, but it's all second-hand, and we can't use most of it, much less, sell it. We are saving the junk.—Courtesy The Gilcraft, published by The Gilbert Paper Co.

Telegrams Relative To "Camp" Clear-Up Nothing: Still A?

The following telegram has been received both at Gatesville, by officials, and also at Killeen.

"HAVE WORKED ALL DAY TO SECURE INFORMATION YOU DESIRE AND CAN ONLY SAY DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE ADVISES CONDEMNATION SUITS WILL BE FILED FEDERAL COURTS UNDER STATE LAWS AND FARMERS WILL BE PAID FOR EVERYTHING TAKEN. HOWEVER, AS I SEE IT, FARMERS WITHIN LIMITS OF THE CAMP SHOULD ABANDON ALL FARMING AND MAKE ARRANGEMENTS TO MOVE. THOSE OUTSIDE SHOULD GO AHEAD WITH REGULAR WORK. HAVE NOT BEEN ABLE TO GET YOU THE EXACT BOUNDRIES OF THE CAMP, AM ADVISED THEY WILL HAVE TO COME FROM SAN ANTONIO AND WILL BE FORWARD TO YOU IF ABLE TO SECURE.

W. R. POAGE, Congressman, 11th District Please READ the above telegram CAREFULLY.

It was all Congressman Poage was able to get, and it doesn't outline the camp site, or the maneuver area, so far, no one knows what to do.

County Judge Floyd Zeigler said yesterday he "hoped" to be able to get something definite which could be announced in the News Friday, but so far, this telegram received, doesn't do much, or mean anything, except that all effort is being expanded to get something concrete that farmers and ranchers who will be effected can depend on.

It is almost certain, that outside of the actual camp area, most folks can go ahead with "business as usual" and will probably have time to at least harvest small grain crops. However, this (itself is) problematical. May be, we'd just better wait until Friday, but it is getting AWFULLY late.

From Sunday's Temple Daily Telegram, "Col A. D. Bruce, commander of the proposed camp is in Temple," and, quoting further, "to carry on additional reconnaissance work in connection with plans for the headquarters removal and "to contact civilian groups on problems incident to the camp's establishment."

(American), 8 trio fat hens (other heavies) 9, 5 fryers 2 1/2 to 3 1/2; 9, 5 fryers of same pens, we suppose), 10, 5 broilers 1 1/2 to 2 1/2, and another lot of 10 of the same.

Coryell County has always made a good showing at the stock pens, both Ft. Worth, Houston and Dallas, and even more so, since County Agent Guy Powell has worked so diligently with the boys in FFA and 4-H work.

"Triple Cross" In District Court: Read This Below

There's a "cross-fire" in District Court, or, was yesterday. Judge R. B. Cross is the Judge! Paul Cross is the Jurymen! Isaac Cross is the Defendant!

If that isn't a "triple-cross" we wouldn't know what to call it. Cross, colored ex-state boy is being tried on a burglary charge.

Jurymen selected were: M. A. Webb, W. M. McCurry, Bruno Urbantke, D. F. Graves, W. R. Faust, W. C. Huggins, Fred Rodway, John Mayberry, Paul Cross, W. M. Carroll, J. W. Weaver, and J. T. Davidson.

The State of Texas vs. Alvin Earl Scott, another ex-state boy on a burglary charge, got this jury: V. L. Arnett, Milton Graham, H. L. Long, Ed Beck, Robert Jayroe, O. K. Brown, C. B. Whitten, O. D. Coward, W. L. McElvaney, C. L. Huff, S. Jayroe, and Tom Fowler.

That's all the court news—nothing else was completed.

"STILLMAN'S" NEW NAME OF "PAINTER'S": OPENS TODAY

Opening today, or, re-opening, we might say, is Stillman's, Gatesville's newest business.

Dave Stillman of St. Louis, who, thru his agents had purchased the popular store known as Painter's arrived late last week, and has been busy since that time preparing his opening.

The sale conducted by Painter's has so depleted stocks, that Mr. Stillman was back in Dallas in the market, replenishing his stock. He also has representatives in St. Louis and New York City, who will keep him posted as to new items and good buys in merchandise.

Aside to the ladies! Mr. Stillman is "on his own", meaning, he's eligible, and very much so.

Mr. Painter, formerly owner of the store, said yesterday his plans for the future had not been completed, but that he would continue to make Gatesville and Coryell county his home. Mr. Painter has built up a remarkable trade during his, nearly 10 years in business here, and both he and Mr. Stillman assured us every effort would be extended to merit the popularity this store has attained.

YOUR AND MY INCOME TAX

Many farmers will be liable for filing income tax returns and payment of tax for the first time this year. The term "farmers" includes livestock raisers, fruit and truck growers, and operators of plantations and ranches.

Farmers may maintain their records and file their returns of on either the cash receipts and disbursements basis or on the accrual basis of accounting. A consistent method, however, must be employed. If a cash basis is used, Form 1040F, "Schedule of Farm Income and Expenses," is required to be filled out and filed in conjunction with Form 1040.

Deductions from gross income may be made by farmers as necessary expenses, all amounts expended (other than those constituting capital expenditures) in carrying on the business of farming. Deductions for expenses include such items as cost of feeding and raising livestock (except the value of farm produce grown upon the farm and the labor of the taxpayer); cost of seed, minor repairs to farm buildings (other than the dwelling of the farmer); small tools used up in the course of a year or two; fuel and oil used for farm work; repairs and maintenance of farm machinery; hired laborers and hired machines, and and cost of commercial fertilizers the benefit of which is of short duration.

The cost of farm machinery, equipment and farm buildings; amounts expended in the restoration of soil fertility preparatory to actual production of crops and the cost of limiting soil to increase productiveness over a period of years, are capital expenditures.

Losses incurred in the operation of farms as business enterprises are deductible from gross income. If livestock has been purchased for any purpose, and afterwards dies from disease, exposure or injury, or is killed by order of the authorities of a State or the United States, the actual purchase price of such livestock, less and depreciation allowable as a deduction in respect of such livestock may be deducted as a loss if the loss is not compensated for by insurance or otherwise.

If gross income is ascertained by the use of inventories, no deduction can be taken separately for livestock or products lost during the year.

BIG-FOOT WALLACE ON EXHIBITION

Yankees and Easterners have heard such exaggerations about Texas in the past century that nowadays a traveling Texan can hardly get them to believe the truth about it, and anybody who has had such difficulty can blame it in part on Big-Foot Wallace.

Old Big-Foot was a Ranger, Indian hunter, rancher, and all-around plainsman in Central Texas during and after the Revolution of 1836 and is one of the state's great legendary characters primarily because John C. Duval wrote a largely fictitious "autobiography" of him which is one of the classics in the Texas Collection of the University of Texas Library. It is "The Adventures of Big-Foot Wallace."

Some years after the Mexican War, according to the story as given by Duval, Big-Foot was asked to return to his family home in Virginia to be present at the division of the family estate. He decided to go mainly because he hadn't been out of Texas in years and thought it might be an adventure. And he had fun.

BIG-FOOT: GENTLEMAN

First of all he decked himself out in "store clothes" and announced that he was going to be a gentleman. "Just as soon as I can learn to play to play poker and cut-throat too, swear like a trooper, and can run off with some other man's wife, I have some hopes that the fraternity will admit me as a member," he told his friends. And he laughed heartily, "at the expense of two buttons and a rent in my pants."

To the folks back East he soon became known as the "Wild Texan." They found it hard to believe, for instance, that he had ever seen a drove of thirty or forty mustangs on the prairies or that "there is a sort of spider in Texas as big as a peck measure, the bite of which can only be cured by music."

Then, too, there was his story about the "varmint" in Texas, called the 'Sante Fe' that was still worse than the tarantula, for the best brass band in the country couldn't cure their sting; that the creature had a hundred legs and a sting on every one of them, besides two large stings in its forked tail, and fangs as big as rattlesnakes'. When they sting with their legs alone, you might possibly live an hour; when with all their stings, perhaps fifteen or twenty minutes; but when they sting and bite you at the same time, you first turn blue, then yellow, and then a beautiful bottle-green, when your hair all fell out and your finger nails dropped off, and you were as dead as a door-nail in five minutes, in spite of all the doctors in America."

THE USUAL RETORT

Even that was all right; but the last atraw was when a young lady asked if he had ever seen a mirage out on the plains. He didn't know what a mirage was but supposed it was something like a drove of horses or buffalo and replied that he had seen thousands. "The last one I saw," he added, "was just back of Santa Fe, and it stampeded when we got in about a quarter of a mile of it; and such a dust as was kicked up you never saw, for there hadn't been a drop of rain there in six months."

The young lady was rather taken aback at that. "I always heard that the mirage would disappear as you approached it, but I never heard of one kicking up dust before," she said. But Big-Foot wouldn't be denied. "They don't in other countries, where the ground is kept wet by constant rain," he explained; "but in Texas it is different."

ANNUAL FLOWER SHOW TO BEGIN MARCH 1, HOUSTON

A display of more than 15,000 cut flower blooms, sponsored by florists, will be one of the major attractions in the Annual Flower Show, which opens March 1 for an eight day run in Sam Houston coliseum in Houston, Texas.

An executive of the Flower Show said that nearly $3,000 in cut flowers will be shown; however, it was pointed out that even though the cut flower display will be a main feature, many thousands of other plants and flowers will be used in the gardens which are now being planned by nurserymen and landscape architects in that area.

The replica of the world famous Taj Mahal of Agra in India, the monument which was built centuries ago by an Indian emperor in memory of his favorite wife, promises to be a great inspirational sight. The Taj Mahal, which is described as "a sigh of love in marble", will be surrounded by exotic gardens which, in the opinion of the show officials, will surpass those of any flower show ever staged in the Southwest.

SIDE GLANCES ON TEXAS HISTORY

By Charles O. Hucker
University of Texas Library

THE DISPOSITION OF SANTA ANNA

When the Battle of San Jacinto was done and the Texas government had the Mexican President Santa Anna a captive in its hands, it might be thought that its worries were over at last. But, as a matter of fact, its worries were only begun; and its most embarrassing problem was what to do with Santa Anna.

On May 14th, 1836, the Mexican President and David G. Burnet, President of the provisional government of Texas, signed a secret agreement. According to the text of it printed in the Rev. H. S. Thrall's "Pictorial History of Texas," one of the standard histories in the Texas Collection of the University of Texas Library, the fifth article of the agreement read as follows:

"The present return of General Santa Anna to Vera Cruz being indispensable for the purpose of effecting his solemn engagements, the Government of Texas will provide for his immediate embarkation for said port."

Although two members of his cabinet were opposed to this plan, President Burnet was determined to keep his agreement and on the first of June put Santa Anna and his captive followers aboard the schooner Invincible to be taken to Vera Cruz, together with two Texas ministers who were to negotiate a peace treaty.

The news of this action, however, was received very unfavorably by the people of the town, who thought it unwise to release their most valuable hostage. They held a public meeting and demanded that he be brought back ashore and kept. Next day a company of volunteers from New Orleans arrived and threatened hostilities if the Invincible were allowed to sail. In their turn, every member of the cabinet threatened to resign at this, but Burnet finally yielded. Santa Anna was brought back to await the first session of Congress.

Meantime the news had spread to the army. Highly indignant, a number of officers signed a letter to the President announcing that if Santa Anna were released "the army of citizen soldiers will again assume the privilege of putting down the enemies of Texas." Then they passed a resolution ordering Burnet's arrest, according to Thrall.

THE SHOWDOWN

This was early in July, and immediately an officer was dispatched to "arrest the person of David G. Burnet; take into your possession the books, papers and records of the Secretaries of State, of War, and of the Treasury, and them safely keep, and report forthwith."

Word of this mission, which was intended to be a great secret, somehow leaked out. Burnet was thus put on his guard; and the citizens of the surrounding country felt a quick change of sentiment and crowded into Velasco to defend the civil government. Thrall notes even that word was got to the approaching officer that "Judge Lynch was preparing to sit on his case." At any rate, he lost and hastily returned to his camp.

No further action on the matter was taken, even during the meeting of Congress. So General Houston, newly-installed President of the Republic, took matters into his own hands at the end of the session and on December 22, 1836, released Santa Anna. In the company of two officers he rode to the Mississippi River, proceeding from there to Washington, D.

C., whence he sailed at last for Mexico.

LEAIRD'S DEPT. STORE

BYRON LEAIRD, Prop.

The question of price control is again in the spotlight, and probably some kind of law will have been passed by the time this reaches you. The Senate has finally passed the price control bill (it was passed by the House last November). However, the two houses are still far apart and the matter is being considered by a conference committee.

The Washington newspapers and the Washington radio commentators have been very bitter and unfair in their criticism of the amendments that the Senate placed in the bill for the protection of our farmers. It has been contended that the Senate bill would allow farm prices to go up another ten percent although there is no assurance anywhere in any of these bills that farm prices will advance at all. These Washington commentators then all united to make the astounding statement that the Senate amendments would cause a 25 percent rise in the cost of living. To my mind this is ridiculous, but I fear that they have been able to get the President to believe them. The Pres. don't have time to study the problem himself and must take the word of his advisors. It is unfortunate that he has so many advisors who know nothing about the problems of agriculture, and who care less.

For instance, last night our Southern Policy Group had Mr. Leon Henderson to speak to us. He gave us the distinct impression of utter disregard for the problems of the farmer. He doubtless sincerely believes that the farmers are getting all they should for their crops. He called attention to the fact that farm products had gone up considerably in the last two years. Of course, they have, but when they started going up, farm prices were so low that they are not yet in line with other prices. The price of wheat is not yet as high as it was in 1937, and cotton is only a little more than one-third of what it was in 1919, yet I have "Labor's Monthly Survey" for January, 1942, published by the American Federation of Labor, which states on page 4, "Wages today average 77c per hour in American factories, the highest level ever reached."

This price fixing bill does not include any authority to fix wages yet it is more important to wage earners than to any other class to prevent inflation. Industrial workers are insisting that the income of the farmer be reduced in order that the wage earner can buy more with his wages, but at the same time, they refuse to make any sacrifices whatever themselves to prevent this inflation. I full well realize that uncontrolled inflation is bad for everyone. I think everyone should be willing to sacrifice something to protect the entire population from the danger of inflation. The farmer will willingly accept a limit on his prices—no one should profit from war—but I feel that the industrial workers should be willing to make similar sacrifices. As it is, industrial workers whose present pay is far greater than the income of our farmers, are refusing to accept any limit on their pay, yet the spokesman of these same industrial workers are charging our farmers with gross unselfishness when the farmers ask that no price be fixed on farm products at a level of less than about 21c for cotton and about $1.40 for wheat. I think this attitude is very unfair. Our farmers should be given prices in keeping with industrial wages. In other words, they should have a parity income before any limits are imposed.

One of the most interesting developments of the week has been in connection with guayule rubber. It is now generally agreed that we face a real and unavoidable shortage of rubber that may last several years. Even if we are successful in recapturing the Malay Peninsula and opening the sea lanes to the Far East, a large part of the rubber trees will be destroyed. It is thought that we can produce synthetic rubber to care for about half our normal requirements. The cost of synthetic rubber will probably be about eight or ten times as much as East India rubber, and while it is superior for certain purposes, it needs to have a very substantial amount of natural rubber blended with it. The only natural rubber that has been grown in the United States on a commercial scale is the guayule shrub. It grows wild in the Big Bend country and in Mexico. It has been successfully cultivated in California. For a number of years we have actually used a substantial amount of guayule rubber. We are told that it can be produced at a profit and sold for about half what synthetic rubber will cost. Legislation is pending, and I believe will be passed next week, providing for the government to take over the 23,000 pounds of seed (all there is) and to plant them in various parts of the Southwest. I do not see that this offers much opportunity for a new crop in Central Texas as the shrub is subject to cotton root-rot, but there are doubtless large areas in Texas where it will grow successfully. I feel that we should give it a thorough trial.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE: Moved by the plea of Barbara Halford, Ann Williams, secretary to Mr. Skeates, London dramatic critic, alters the review in which Miss Halford's husband, Edmund Davey, had been assailed for his bad performance of Othello. Because of this, Ann Williams loses her job. Inspired by the favorable review which Ann had written, Davey performs magnificently. Ann goes to see Othello and becomes infatuated with the actor.

Chapter Four

Mr. Skeates was in a sentimental mood. Only a great love, he reasoned, could have persuaded his loyal secretary to betray him. And Mr. Skeates, for all his forbidding exterior, had known love.

He set out in search of Ann. From Tommy Stapleton he had learned that she was in the habit of spending her evenings at the Alhambra Theatre where Edmund Davey was playing Othello, and her minute and then with sudden decision, dashed after him. As she opened the door there stood Ann. Barbara caught her by the hand and led her into the suite.

"Miss Williams, you must forgive me. But wait here. I'll be back soon, very soon. Something frightfully important..."

And before Ann could realize what had happened, Barbara, too had gone, and she was left alone. She moved about the room disconsolately. But soon her eyes lighted upon a pipe on the mantel piece — Edmund's pipe. She looked around cautiously. There was no one to see her. Lovingly she took up the pipe and kissed the place where his lips had touched. A voice behind her called out:

"Good afternoon!"

Ann wheeled around in horror, still holding the pipe. It was Davey.

"Alone?" he asked gravely.

"Where's Barbara?"

"She said she'd be back soon," Ann said, falteringly "She dashed out, said it was something important."

Davey nodded, and said with bitter calm. "Looking for me. She's always spying on me. I am ac-afternoons at the Royal Academy of Art where hung a huge portrait of the new famous actor.

It was at the Royal Academy that he found her gazing forlorn at the portrait.

"My dear," he said gently, "I am bound to admit that Edmund Davey is a great actor. The old critic was wrong and the young heart was right."

Ann protested in vain that when she had changed the review she had not even known Davey.

But Mr. Skeates was not to be diverted from his romantic theme.

"You loved him unconsciously at the time. Every woman unconsciously loves every man on earth. Even though she may not know him. Consequently when she meets him, this love functions automatically."

The result of the interview was that Ann obtained from Mr. Skeates some good advice and her job back again. His advice was that she was never to see Davey again.

"You must put the whole affair out of your mind, my dear girl. The fellow's married."

And this advice Ann honestly intended to follow. But her resolution broke down completely when unexpectedly there arrived at her house a telegram from Barbara Halford, again inviting her to call.

Bright sunshine flooded the suite at the Savoy occupied by Edmund Davey and his wife. The French doors were thrown wide open and on the terrace stood a table laid for three. Edmund Davey wearing his dressing gown, came out to the balcony where Barbara was putting the final touches to the table.

"Expecting anyone, Barbara?"

Barbara smiled and nodded. "Yes, the little girl on the newspaper. I have invited her to tea."

Without a word Edmund went back to the bed room and when he emerged he was completely dressed for the street.

"Where are you going?" Barbara asked.

"Out," he said shortly.

Barbara was dismayed. "Because of the little Williams girl? Does she get on your nerves?"

"No, Barbara," Edmund answered with irritation. "My nerves are as smooth as cream. I am going for a walk — because I am going for a walk." And he left.

omed to it from her." He smiled.

"You see in private life the things are reversed. Desdemona is the jealous one and Othello is the innocent. She always thinks I am with another woman."

Ann was distressed beyond measure. "Oh," she said feebly. "Then he'll be very glad when she comes back and sees that her jealousy was unfounded."

Edmund stared at Ann with a strange and new expression on his face.

"Unfounded? Not quite. I really am with another woman."

Ann still thought he was joking and smiled. "I know you are," she said innocently — "but it isn't that kind of a thing. I am not dangerous."

When Edmund spoke again his voice was firm, purposeful and not at all flirtatious.

"Yes, you are. You're very dangerous. It was on account of you that I went out just now. I knew you were coming, but I didn't want to meet you. But I had hardly reached the street when I felt myself drawn back by an unknown force."

And as Ann stood there speechless, unwilling to believe her ears, he began to speak violent, passionate words of love.

Ann protested earnestly. "Your wife loves you, I have seen the way she looks at you. It's like a mother with her child."

Edmund nodded. "Yes, like a mother. But a man sometimes needs a woman who loves him differently."

He stared at her fixedly. "As you love me — for instance!"

At this moment the door opened, and Barbara stood there, staring at both of them in astonishment. Ann ran towards her at once.

"I can't stay any longer," she exclaimed. I must get back to the office. Mr. Skeates is expecting me." And she fled.

Barbara shook her head. "I'm afraid she's hurt — because I kept her waiting. Please run after her and say something nice."

Edmund stood stock still for a moment. An odd smile played around his mouth. And then he said, with his wonted lassitude:

"With pleasure — if I can catch her."

OIL-OUT FOR DEFENSE IS INDUSTRY'S PART IN EMERGENCY

The Texas oil industry was mobilizing today for any wartime emergency.

A statewide organization to meet defense needs and effect co-ordination with civilian defense authorities was being set up under leadership of the Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association. Co-operating in it are oil operators and companies, field superintendents and farm bosses, and petroleum engineers and technical experts. The work is being done with the approval of civilian defense officials.

First oil area to be organized is the Texas Gulf Coast, with East Texas next and others to follow soon, George Sawtelle, association president, said. Local field committees in the producing areas will work closely with civilian defense authorities to co-ordinate oil industry defense measures with all other defense activities.

"The function of the Texas Mid-Continent in this program is to assist the operators in meeting the requirements of defense precautions," Mr. Sawtelle explained. "Through our Statewide organization and plan, we hope to take the work off the backs of the oil producers and effect co-ordinated action in all the fields of the State."

"Technical committees of the industry are developing the safest methods for effective black-outs, and studying ways to eliminate hazards and extra expense without interfering with production operations. The association will assemble this information from technical groups, oil operators and civilian defense authorities and keep the field committees advised."

The organization now being set up will extend from the operators down to the individual leases, to make complete and efficient working facilities available. The facilities in each area can be put into operation by the chairman of the field committees upon authorization by the proper defense authorities.

"The program has been planned to cause the least possible interruption of the necessary industry activity," Mr. Sawtelle said. "Unity of action is highly essential, and as far as our industry is concerned, can be accomplished only through this character of organized effort. We know that every operator will co-operate to the fullest in meet-
