Two Local Boys Injured, NCH Soldier Killed

Billy Clay McClellan was cut and bruised and Harry Straw got a broken collar bone, and minor bruises in an accident just about the Coryell-McLennan county line Friday, and in the same accident, Cpl. Roy C. Morgan of North Camp Hood was instantly killed. A fourth person, Wiley Richards, 22, driver of the truck suffered chest and shoulder injuries.
The truck, according to Constable Billy Wheat of McGregor apparently got out of control, hit a soft highway shoulder and went into the ditch.
Cpl. Morgan, whose home is at Cottageville, West Virginia, and the two local boys had been picked up by Richards just out of Gatesville, and were riding in the rear of the truck. When the truck overturned, Corporal Morgan suffered a crushed skull and was instantly killed.
Richards was taken to a Waco hospital and Straw and McClellan were brought to Gatesville. The truck belonged to a Waco ice concern.
thru July 7.
Servicemen on leave or furlough of 3 days hereafter will be provided with a complete application form for obtaining rationed food before he leaves camp. He will give application to the person who provides his meals, who will submit it to the local board for food certificates within 15 days after the furlough ends.
From the Recruiting Services.
A call has been sent out by the U. S. Navy Construction Battalions—the Seabees—for cooks, stewards and bakers, it was announced by Lt. Com. L. H. Ridout, Jr., of Dallas. Not only cooks and bakers are needed, but all kinds of construction workers.

FSA Families.
FSA families in Coryell county are working to produce more food and are driving to cut waste of food, according to County Supervisor, Robt. B. Cunningham, who has some figures on food waste in the nation.
Thirty to 40 percent of the food produced in the U. S. goes to waste. Biggest waste is in bread, which is 15 percent of the total.

Mrs. A. J. Stearns and Miss Emily Betzinger of Scarsdale, N. York, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. K. O'Neal and Lt. A. P. Stearns of North Camp Hood.
Miss Edith Cole of Waco spent Sunday and Monday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Cole.
Sgt. and Mrs. Jimmy Bradley have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bradley. Bobby returned home with them to spend three weeks in Paris.

Lt. Gen. Lesley J. McNair Heads Ceremonies "Christening" North Camp Hood; Gatesville

Was it an "opening" or "christening"?
If it was an opening, it was really a wet one, and the water kind.
The program, however, was carried on without a hitch with more than 10,000 civilians, and some 15,000 troops, including a company of Women's Army Auxiliary Corps participating in the parade of the 600 flags.
Other speakers besides Lieut. Gen. McNair, included Major General Orlando Ward, Major Thomas J. Gammie, Area Engineer, who turned the completed camp over to Col. C. M. Thirkeld, post Command of "The Hoods."
The parade was brilliant, and in a press conference after the review, both Major Gen. Ward and Lieut. Gen. McNair complimented the troops highly, particularly, Gen. McNair, who said the men in passing the reviewing stand, had a look like they meant business, and what was more remarkable, was the fact that the average age of all those who paraded was 19.8. There were only a few over 38, and many of those marching, had been trained just over two weeks.
Men who had only been at North Camp Hood two weeks or less were not in the parade for the obvious reason that their training at that period was not sufficient for them to make a confidential showing. Lt. Gen. McNair, said with such pride, they were "just a grand bunch of men to work with."
In reviewing the war, he said, "We have plenty of troops and equipment and those troops are ready to go." "Shipping", he added, "has been the bottleneck, but the shipping situation is apparently improving and I hope it will continue and that shortly it will take a permanent 'set' in the right direction. When it does I think the war will take that same tempo."
"I think we're doing alright, don't you?" the general replied in answer to a question. "But if anybody expects the war to be over by Christmas, I think they may be disappointed."
General McNair said he'd seen a lot of camps, but, as head of the Army ground forces, was ashamed that he had not seen all, but that North Camp Hood, and "the Hoods" in general "is the most perfect training ground I know of, the best one I've ever seen."
Regarding activities of Tank

Destroyer Units in North Africa, Gen. McNair said they had made some mistakes, but the chief one was too much boldness, and rear-in' to go. He said, "I'd rather have an army too bold than too timid. As a result of war experience, we hope to profit by the lessons we learned in North Africa. Other branches of the army, too made mistakes in their first battle experience in North Africa, but we won't pay so heavily next time."
"We are trying to improve the mount for our guns, to make them lighter and faster. We have a gun coming out that will do the job better than any other."
A message was read at the opening of the ceremonies by Major General Orlando Ward, new commanding general, from Major General A. D. Bruce, who paid tribute to the "families who gave up their home in this area" and expressed his gratitude to them, and extended his greetings to the new commander, and all the troops and personnel, General Bruce, is now commanding general of the 77th Division.
In commenting on the camp in his dedicatory address, Gen. McNair said, "The camp is noteworthy even among the hundreds of similar ones built since we all went out to crush Germany and Japan. It was begun only after Pearl Harbor. Its particular activities were born of this war, born of our determination that German panzers were not going to defeat us as they defeated France and nearly defeated Russia.
"The construction job has been a miracle, thanks not alone to army engineers but also to the loyalty, devotion, and skill of Texas labor, whom I salute gratefully."
"I know of no war training agency which was conceived, planned, built, and put into full operation with greater speed, skill, and soundness than Camp Hood. And the genius behind it all, as you know, was General Bruce."
Col. Walter Dumas led the parade as it passed the reviewing stand, preceded by the RTC snappy band, the battalion flags were carried in a single massed formation and dipped in salute to the generals in the reviewing stand.
The weather which was wet all morning with a typical Texas drizzle, cleared just before time for the official program, and shortly afterward, was as wet as ever.

Mr. Ward Burris,
Sports Editor, The Express,
San Antonio, Tex.
Dear Wardie:

I seen where Mr. Jim Gallagher, big shot of the Cubs, beat the Dodgers out of $14,500 in player deals. Now if Jim could find some club he could beat to get out of last place in the standings he'd feel better—or jest find some club he could beat.

I think the Government ought to adopt the baseball rule book on these guys that's always a strikin' in the war plants—three strikes and yere out—out of the plant and into the Army. Some of them guys don't know the difference yet between making bullets at 8 bucks a day, or stoppin' bullets at 50 a month. They is a difference.

The Cubs finally got Lou Novikoff, the Mad Russian, back on their team. I'm surprised they waited this long. From all that I've read in the papers about the Eastern front, a Mad Russian is a good guy to have on your side.

I seen where one of the Jap quarterbacks, Yamamoto, got thrown fer a loss while carryin' the ball in the South Pacific—that's what they said. I bet when the truth comes out he broke his neck a stumbling over the water bucket on the sidelines. I thot his name was Punktomato. I think he was.

Come out and see me on yere vacation Chum, and we'll bust a keg of nails or something.

I'll be a seein' you, Pal. Keep 'em firin'.

Yourn, LOONY LUCY.

May 21, 1943
 Dear Friends: No one should any longer cling to the hope that this nation can avoid even heavier tax burdens for years to come regardless of the outcome of the conference that is now in progress between the House and Senate in regard to forgiveness of 1942 taxes. This week the House passed a naval supply bill involving approximately thirty billion dollars — by far the greatest naval expenditure ever contemplated by any nation. This will be followed by an Army authorization bill of more than twice that size. In other words, this nation foresees the expenditure of one hundred billion dollars for direct war purposes his coming year. Obviously neither this nor any other nation can continue to make such staggering expenditures, but if our enemies are not able to make adequate provision to meet the force and equipment that we expect to be able to throw at them, they are bound to lose the war. I am, therefore, more hopeful of a rather rapid allied victory than are some people. The more force we can bring to bear the more quickly can we defeat the Axis and the more American lives will we save. To bring this tremendous force to bear quickly, we need every dollar of taxes due this government. I have, therefore, consistently opposed every effort to remit or forgive any federal taxes. The Senate has voted for a version of the Ruml Plan (Both Texas Senators voted against it), but the House has stood firmly against this remission of needed taxes (On the last vote only one Texas Congressman voted for remission).

 The most spectacular event of the week here in Washington was the speech of Prime Minister Churchill before a joint session of Congress. Mr. Churchill is a powerful speaker, and his message was full of promise to the Allies and of foreboding to the Axis. He definitely committed Great Britain to a finish fight with Japan regardless of how long it might take. He frankly admitted the mistakes of the past and stressed the vital necessity of harmony between the Allies. He called attention to the fact that for a whole year Great Britain fought alone. He did not say so, but he made his hearers realize that while he full well appreciates the part America is now playing, that it should also be remembered that had Britain not fought on by herself during the dark days of 1940-41, America would probably be fighting alone today. He received a tremendous ovation. Some of the newspapers have indicated that the Duke of Windsor and "Wally", who were present, received a similar ovation. It is true that the great crowd cheered the Duke and the Duchess lustily, but I do not think that their reception compared with that accorded Mr. Churchill. Later in the week it was my privilege to have dinner with Sir William Beveridge, the author of the famous Beveridge Plan of Social Security. He gave a most interesting discussion of his proposals which are very far-reaching but in some respects do not go nearly as far as some of our own Social Security provisions. Fundamentally, it seems to me that the Beveridge Plan is based on the sound principle that every person can and should contribute to his or her own security by making contributions to an insurance fund during the part of his life while he is earning an income and that the government can and should aid in providing this security by administering to the program and even contributing to the funds sufficient to provide a reasonable insurance. To a very large degree such a plan applied to every citizen—rich or poor, in the factory or on the farm—would over a period of a generation practically eliminate the necessity for an old age pension as it would enable everyone to make provision for his own old age as well as for any accidental loss of earning power. I am convinced that America will make great progress in this line after the war. I realize that our present Social Security System only reaches about one-half of our people. It must reach them all. Of course, we face a much more difficult problem than they do in a small, highly industrialized country like England, but we can and must solve the problem. I realize that the present old age pension program should never be accepted as anything more than a temporary expedient to be used until such time as a self-supporting Social Security Program has been in effect long enough to allow our people to provide for their own security. Even so, this Program has not been placed on anything like a satisfactory or adequate basis. I believe that had the war not come on when it did that we would have been well on the way to a more satisfactory system by this time. As it is, I recognize that we can expect little reform of this type until after the war is won. We should, however, like the British, be planning now that we may meet these great problems with the coming of peace.

Yours for Victory,
 W. R. Poage.
