LEADS AIR ATTACK ON

ITALY—Maj. Gen. James H.

("Jimmy") Doolittle, pioneer in the development of aeronautics, hero of the bombing of Tokio in April, 1942, and wearer of the Congressional Medal of Honor and all other official decorations for gallantry and distinguished service, climaxed his dramatic military career thus far by directing the war from the skies in the capture of Southern Italy. Gen. Doolittle, aged 46, is Commanding General, North African Strategic Air Force. An intrepid soldier, he has also qualified as a wartime champion of industry. Before taking up active combat duty in the present hostilities he rendered important service in superintending the conversion of automobile factories into plants for the manufacture of airplane parts.

MRS. LYDIA PUCKET

Mr. Lydia Pucket (nee Brazzil) departed this life at her home in Flat, Texas Sept. 22, 1943, at the age of 59 years.

Her death is a great loss to the community and church.

She was converted in early childhood and united with the Methodist church and lived a devoted christian life to the end.

It was the writer's privilege to serve as sister Pucket's pastor for several years and during our visits into her home, found her to be a faithful and loyal wife, a loving mother, a kind and sympathetic neighbor and a devout christian, always interested in the progress of God's work.

Funeral services were held Sept. 23rd, at 3 p. m. in the Methodist church at Flat. Services were conducted by her former pastor, Rev. George Siler, assisted by Rev. Ollie Williams.

Burial was in Flint Creek cemetery.

Deceased is survived by her husband, J. T. Pucket; three children, Mrs. Lela Mae Manning, Gatesville; Mrs. Edna O'Neal, of Oakland, Calif., and Gene Pucket, Glen Rose, Texas. Three brothers, J. E. Brazzil, Flat; C. W. Brazzil and O. L. Brazzil, Gatesville. One sister, Mrs. H. M. Hamilton. Ten grandchildren and many friends.

—Rev. George Siler.

U.S.O. Activities

Members of the Camp Hood Area Council of USO workers attended a monthly meeting in Gatesville Wednesday of this week. Representatives of the USO clubs from Copperas Cove, Killeen, Belton, Temple and Waco were here to attend the meeting in which they discuss problems and plans of their work.

Plans have been made for a barbecue and business meeting to be held the first of December by members of the USO Councils in the Camp Hood Area. These Councils are made up of local citizens who act in an advisory and supervisory capacity to the staff members of the USO.

The USO will organize an orchestra under the direction of E. W. Tampke to serve when needed in our program. Mr. Tampke has for a number of years been an instructor and director of bands in various schools.

Tuesday afternoon the bus boys employed at the USO met and organized a club for the purpose of social and educational values. Five boys were in attendance at the original meeting and decided on the name of the "Imps" for the club. Officers as follows were elected: immie Kemp, president; Billy Chamlee, vice-president; Carl McClendon, sec.-treas.; and Ayres Anderson, overseer. Each week the members will meet to talk about their jobs and work at the USO and arrange for socials. A class in archery will fill the last half of the club meeting of next week. They will wear buttons indicating their membership and other boys will be invited in to the meetings from time to time.

Yes, they're changing your oil to lighter oil, so the old bus'll run better these coming cold days.

Now, that old "motor" under your belt needs some revamping, too.

You can't feed it that "fluffy" cooling stuff you've been pourin' in it, you've got to make it "heat-producin'".

You change or "Winterize" as some of 'em say, your car. And, you struggle thru the winter. That old body of yours, a lot 'o times, just goes on the same "fuel". Now, we're here to do something about that, you bein' willing.

Come in, and let us help you design better meals so you'll be properly "winterized", too.

WITH THE COLORS

Mr. and Mrs. Clay Jones of Gatesville received these letters from their son, Doyle Jones who is in foreign service.

"Dear Mom: Here I am again with a short letter. How are you and all the rest. Guess you have been wondering why I haven't been writing. I have been in combat and came out very lucky.

Have been dodging bombs the last few months. Those Japs don't care where they plant them.

Don't worry about me I have my hammock between two coconut trees. It's right on the beach. I have been swimming all evening. I hope one of these coconuts don't fall off and clack me on the head. Well I had rather dodge them than those Jap bullets and bombs. Nothing to worry about here there aren't any Japs on this Island.

Mom I want you to send me a pair of nice tan gloves. Guess you got the letter I wrote you about the slippers. I wanted you to send me.

Well Mom will close, hope I can see you all again some day. So bye to all and good luck to all. Write when you can.

Your son, Doyle Jones. Dear Mom, Received your letter today you mailed the 8th of Sept. Sure was glad to hear from you. How are all of you, I am doing just fine.

You have heard about the New Georgia Islands over the radio. Well I have been there. That was where the battle was. You also have heard of Munda and Braksia Harbor. I have been there too. Those places are in the New Georgia Island group. Will try and send you something for Christmas. We can send perfume and that is all. Don't think you would like that at all. So will just send you money.

So long to all. Doyle Jones.

WHAT WAS THE SECRET OF MANDERLEY

SELZNICK INTERNATIONAL presents

Rebecca

starring

LAURENCE OLIVIER- JOAN FONTAINE

Directed by ALFRED HITCHCOCK

Produced by DAVID O. SELZNICK

who made "GONE WITH THE WIND"

RELEASED THRU UNITED ARTISTS

SYNOPSIS: I was in France, as a traveling companion, when I met Max de Winter. His fierce brooding over the accidental death of his beautiful wife, Rebecca was in contrast to my youthful shyness. We spent many hours together, and I fell in love with him. When my employer decided to leave, he suddenly asked me to marry him; I did, happily, and we went to his famous estate, Manderley. Everything about the place, and particularly the cold resentment of Mrs. Danvers, the housekeeper, brought Rebecca to mind—and emphasized my own shortcomings as mistress of Manderley. Rebecca's cousin, Jack Favell, visited Mrs. Danvers when Max was away. She was furious when I discovered them, and in Rebecca's unused room spoke openly, in sinister tones, of the dead returning.

and her eyes widened. "It's — it's the picture — the one in the gallery." I managed to say. "What is it? What have I done?"

Maxim took a step forward. "Go and take it off!" he thundered. "It doesn't matter what else you put on... anything will do!"

I stood rooted, unable to understand.

His voice was harsher now, and louder. "What are you standing there for — didn't you hear what I said?"

Then I ran, ran blindly and sobbing up the stairs, and down the hall. At the door to the West wing stood Mrs. Danvers, with a smile of supreme triumph on her face. She turned, towards Rebecca's room, and I followed. My head pounded.

She was standing in the center of the darkened room as I entered. "I watched you go down — just as I watched her a year ago," she was saying. "Even in the same dress you couldn't compare."

"You knew that?" I moaned. "You knew that she wore it and yet you deliberately suggested that I wear it?" She said nothing, and I went on, overflowing with the misery of it all. "Why do you hate me? What have I ever done to you that you should hate me so?"

"You let him marry you. You tried to take her place. He could never be happy with you."

"It's not true — it's not true — tell you he was happy, when we were alone together — before she came back here."

"That was the honeymoon. It's a man, the same as others, isn't he?" She laughed contemptuously. "But when he came back here to this house, he had to face the truth! He's lived in hell since she died!"

"I don't want to hear any more..."

"You thought you could be Mrs. de Winter — live in her house —

Chapter Four

The Manderley Masquerade Ball had been famous over the entire County, and in London as well, as one of the greater social events of the season. Beatrice had spoken of it to Maxim, I knew, urging him to hold it once again; he said nothing to me of it. It was as though Rebecca alone could play the hostess of Manderley... Now I resolved to take my place at Manderley. Rebecca could no longer play the role; she was not even alive. It was incredible that she should remain so strong, even in death. I decided to fight back, and spoke to Maxim when he returned from London. He seemed not too eager, but finally agreed.

I turned busily to the many preparations needed, and in particular to devising a costume for myself, which I thought I would sketch. It was to be a complete secret, and to Maxim, when I told him, he laughed gaily with me. I was sketching a medieval costume in my room one day, when Mrs. Danvers appeared with some sketches in her hand; she had found them in the nursery she said. Did I intend showing them away? I told her they were for.

"Would you consider it impertinent of me if I offered a suggestion?" she asked. I was surprised at her friendly tone, and replied that I would be only too glad to hear one. "I merely thought that you would find a costume among the family portraits that would suit you..." she said. We walked to the gallery, past the large paintings of Maxim's ancestors. She stopped before one, she said. "This one, for instance," she said. "I've heard Mr. de Winter say it's his favorite of all the paintings. It's Lady Caroline de Winter." I looked up to the tall figure, lovely in a billowy white gown and picture hat.

"It's a splendid idea, Mrs. Danvers," I said. "I'm very grateful to you."

The night of the Ball finally came, and I could hear the first gay sounds of the arriving guests as Clarice helped me with my costume. I knew I looked quite beautiful in it, and could not bear to wait until I should be able to go downstairs, and to Maxim. Beatrice knocked on my door, asking to brush her hair, eager to see what I looked like; but I laughingly refused to let her in. I could almost see her disappointed face, through the door!

At last, I was ready, and ran down the hall to the top of the grand staircase. As we had prearranged, I caught the eye of the orchestra leader, who signalled for a roll of the drums as I descended. I could hear Maxim's laughter above the rest. How pleased he would be with me! I came to the last step, and called to him: "How do you do, Mr. de Winter?"

He turned, his smile turning to one of anticipation. Then it ended, suddenly, inexplicably. He eyed me slowly, from top to toe, and his face took on a look of the deepest anger.

"What the devil do you think you're doing?" he said, fiercely. Frank and Giles stood staring. Beatrice's hand flew to her mouth.

"I don't want to hear any more..."

"You thought you could be Mrs. de Winter — live in her house — and take the things that were hers. But she's too strong for you. You can't fight her — you, a young, ignorant girl. No one ever got the better of her — never, never! She was beaten in the end. But it wasn't a man — or a woman. It was the sea!"

I broke into sobs, begging her to stop, but her voice went on, uncannily calm, deep within my whirling brain. "You're overwrought, Madam. I'll open a window for you." The room reeled. I choked for air. "It's no use, is it? You'll never take her place. She's still mistress here. She's the real Mrs. de Winter — not you." The window came closer, and the air, blowing the curtains. "Why don't you go! Why don't you leave Manderley!" I could see the fog, swirling, smelling of Manderley. "He doesn't love you — he wants to be alone again with her." I could not see the ground. "You've nothing to stay for. You've nothing to live for, really, have you? Look down there... It's easy, isn't it? Now, the shape of Manderley's house, the stones beneath, his angry voice. 'Why don't you? ... Why don't you? Go on... go on... Don't be afraid...' The ground swelled upwards.

An explosion shattered the whirling silence, and the mist. A siren suddenly wailed. I heard voices and running feet.

"Rockets! There they go!"

"It's from a bay! A ship must have gone aground in the fog!"

Then, Maxim's voice. "Come on, everybody — down to the bay — ship ashore!"

"Maxim! Maxim!" I cried. He hesitated for a moment, as though he had heard, and ran on.

I ran down to the shore, and found Frank. "I shouldn't hang about here if I were you — you'll get cold," he said. "Why don't you go back and wait for Maxim at the house?"

"Frank, what's the matter?" I asked. "Is anything wrong? You look terribly worried." I could see it in his face. "There is something wrong," I pursued.

"Well — when the diver went down to inspect the ship's bottom he found the hull of another boat — a little sailing boat..."

"Frank — was it..."

"Yes... it was Rebecca's."

Dear Friends:

Since reconvening, the Congress has been disappointingly slow to grapple with the problems that confront the Nation. The Senate is still considering the Wheeler Bill to prohibit the drafting of fathers with but little prospect of its passage. As I suggested last week, if the Senate wanted to take any real action in this regard, it seems that they would have considered the Kidlay Bill which the House passed long ago and which would require the drafting of all eligible single men before any fathers are taken. To my mind this is the sound policy.

The House has acted on the Fulbright Resolution which simply declared "That the Congress hereby expresses itself as favoring the creation of appropriate international machinery with power adequate to establish and to maintain a just and lasting peace among the nations of the world, and as favoring participation by the United States therein through its constitutional processes." The resolution was passed by a vote of 360 to 29. I voted for it as did every Member of the Texas Delegation. I think that the resolution is important in that it shows a willingness on the part of one House of Congress to support an international cooperative effort to maintain peace. It seems clear to me that we cannot expect to withdraw ourselves from all association with the other nations of the world and expect any more enduring peace to follow this war than followed the last war. On the other hand, there are millions of Americans who want us to ignore everything that goes on in other parts of the world and hold our hands until war breaks out in Europe or Asia. As I see it, we better recognize that modern transportation and communications have made the world so small that we are sure to become involved in any general war that breaks out. Why should we not interest ourselves in preventing the outbreak of war between foreign nations while it can still be prevented without too great loss rather than to wait until we are involved in a great all-out war such as now confronts us. This does not mean a blank check to the President. The constitutional processes of our government require that any agreement involving our foreign relations be ratified either by a two-thirds vote of the Senate as a treaty or by a majority vote of both Houses as a joint resolution. Neither does this mean a super government. On the other hand, it means that the United States expects to have a hand in the control of the events that can lead us into war. We should be willing to join the fire department in the hope that we would thereby be able to prevent any conflagration from reaching our own house even though we feel sure that the blaze will break out in another house. In short, I want to see us "win the peace as well as the war".

Apparently one of the most troublesome problems in Texas at the moment is the inability of our dairymen to get sufficient protein feed (cottonseed meal). From the wires we have been getting it seems clear that very few farmers are willing to sell cottonseed without getting meal in return. I don't think we can blame the cotton producers who naturally want to protect themselves. At the same time this results in a very limited supply of cottonseed meal becoming available to dairymen and others who need it. I have been in almost constant conference about this matter most of this week, and while I recognize that no one here in Washington can increase the amount of cottonseed I have been assured by the Department of Agriculture that within about a month there'll be enough soy beans moving to southern mills to relieve the situation. In this connection, they promise that they will leave at least half of the soy bean meal in the South. This should help materially with the acute dairy feed situation, but I realize that this is but one of the farmer's problems. The fundamental one is that of securing a price for his products that will cover all his costs of production including farm labor and leave a reasonable profit. I believe and I think most farmers will agree that farm laborers should be treated fairly and paid a living wage, but I also know that no farmer can pay wages that are higher than the prices he gets for his farm products. Until the Administration recognizes this, we simply cannot expect to get the production we need.

Yours for Victory,
W. R. Poage.

Wartime Lighting Suggestions

HOW TO GET MORE LIGHT FROM YOUR PRESENT EQUIPMENT

Use One Large Bulb Instead of Several Smaller Ones

Offhand it would seem that four 25-watt bulbs would produce the same amount of light as one 100-watt bulb. But such is not the case. A 100-watt bulb produces as much light as SIX 25-watt bulbs, yet uses one-third less current. Therefore, when practical, always use one large bulb instead of several smaller ones of same total wattage and you'll get more light for your money.

OTHER WAYS TO CONSERVE LIGHT

1. Remove and clean lamp bulbs and lamp bowls regularly. Dry thoroughly before using again.
2. Keep shade linings light. Clean or brush regularly. Repaint or reline dark-colored paper or parchment shades.
3. Sit close enough to the lamp to get all the help it can give your eyes.
4. Avoid direct glare from lamp bulbs by using shades deep enough and wide enough.
5. Arrange furniture so one lamp can serve two people. But be sure lamp is not too far away from either person.
6. Turn off lamps not in use. Lamp bulbs use critical materials... Make them last longer.

Electricity is vital to war production. Use all you need but don't waste it just because it's cheap and isn't rationed.
