RURAL REPAIRS AND IMPROVEMENTS

AP Newsfeatures
WASH NGTON — Improvements and repair work in the nation's rural communities and farm areas offer the possibility of millions of jobs.

Federal farm officials estimate urgent rural development needs public and private, at about 30 billion dollars. They describe urgent needs as those which should be met as soon as labor and materials are available and which may not be postponed without adverse effects.

Reserve Needs

They estimate that there are in addition, "reserve" needs totaling nearly 50 billion dollars and "marginal" needs of possibly 25 billion dollars.

By reserve needs, they mean those which may be postponed without seriously impairing rural resources and facilities.

Marginal needs are those which remain after reasonably adequate standards are achieved.

Urgent improvements include roads, schools, sanitation facilities, recreational facilities, development of depleted forest lands, development and conservation of range lands vital to the production of meat and wool, conservation of fish and wildlife, farm conservation, irrigation, drainage, electrification, and farm sanitation.

It is estimated that more than seven billion dollars in road construction, replacement and maintenance is needed to bring the rural highway system up to where it would have been had the war not interfered. In addition, 21 billion dollars will be needed to build an adequate rural roads system, and an average of 2,350 million dollars a year for maintenance.

Schools Needed

It is estimated that about one billion dollars in rural school construction is needed immediately, and an additional 2,400 million dollars to bring all rural schools up to present urban standards.

The inadequacy of hospital and health facilities constitutes one of the gravest needs of rural America, officials say. They estimate that essential post-war rural health facilities would cost nearly 900 million dollars.

Closely connected with these is the need for sewage disposal and water supply facilities. Officials say that at least 650 million dollars should be spent for such facilities as soon as possible.

A billion dollars could be spent officials state, on recreational facilities and about 400 million dollars to restore vegetable cover and make other improvements on 360 million acres of public owned range land.

Forestry Problem

Restoring forestry resources will cost more than 7 billion dollars, they estimate, and 375 million dollars could be spent in developing game refuges and in replenishing stream with fish.

In addition there is need, farm officials say, for expenditure of large sums for improvements of privately owned lands.

The soil-conservation Service, in a nation-wide survey, estimates these major measures necessary to maintain and improve the nation's soils at safe levels of productivity.

Shifting of 40 million acres from cultivation to grazing and woodlands; terracing 100 million acres to prevent erosion and retard water run-off; contour cultivating of 165 million acres; field and gully planting of 11 million acres; strip-cropping 90 million acres; improving 120 million acres of farm woodland; planting of 7 million acres in permanent vegetation; seeding and reseedling of 107 million acres of pasture and range land; construction or development of 1,200,000 ponds, springs and other water outlets; improved management of 400 million acres of grazing land; repair or improvement of irrigation systems affecting 10 million acres, and improving drainage of 40 million acres of good farm land.

Officials estimate it would cost 15 billion dollars to carry out an essential soil conservation and developing program. Of this, 8,250 million dollars was said to be urgent.

Estimating there are more than 5 million rural homes without electrical power, officials say it would cost about 1,800 million dollars to construct lines to reach these potential customers.

The rural electrification administration estimates that about 3,650,000 of these homes can be reached within five years after construction materials become available. REA has outlined a post-war, five-year program to be undertaken by private utilities, cooperatives and public agencies which would involve a total ex-

Q. My husband is going to be discharged from the army next month and he wants to go to college under the G. I. Bill of Rights. Some say he will receive $75 a month for living expenses and some say $90 a month. Who is right?

A. The subsistence allowance for married veterans at college under the G. I. Bill of Rights has been increased from $75 to $90 per month.

Q. I am a reserve officer who went on inactive status two months ago. How do I go about applying for a commission in the Regular Army under the law just passed?

Q. I understand that the smaller War Plants Corporation is being dissolved. How do veterans go about purchasing surplus Government property now.

A. The Smaller War Plants Corporation will continue to process applications to buy surplus Government property under veteran's preference until January 28. After that date, the War Assets Corporation will take over and applications should be presented there.

MONEY NIGHTMARES PLAGUE HUNGARIANS

AP News features BUDAPEST—Hungary today is broke and getting broker every minute in a mad dream world of printing press banknotes.

It is a nation with 1,000 years of independence housing and feeding an occupation army variously estimated at from 750,000 to 1,000,000—no official figure is available.

Reparations Headache... It knows that it must pay in six years $300 million in reparations to Russia, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia, and try meantime to bolster an internal economy, restore factories, build up agricultural production, prove that it can be a democracy, settle minority problems, and try to live at peace with neighbors who fought on the right side of the United Nations ledger.

The Hungarians argue that German pressure put them into the war where defeat found them and that German economic domination made their path a oneway, wrong way road.

There are many who fought them who agree, and the spectacle of Soviet Russia and the United States in a mild race to restore Hungary's diplomatic status, with the hope that industrial and economic revival might follow is one aspect of that attitude.

But the printing press banknotes make for wonderment.

In the days when the British pound sterling was worth $4.86, an American dollar bill bought about five Hungarian pengos.

Going Up

Shortly before the war the pengos was worth about 10 cents.

By mid-August Americans in Budapest on occupation missions, paid in American currency, were buying 1,200 to 1,500 pengos to the dollar. At October's beginning, the yield was 4,000 to 6,000.

By mid-October, a dollar bill one day bought 12,000, the next day 15,000, the third day 18,000. And the end is not in sight as the printing presses roll.

Plunder

Wars are wasteful and everybody knows it. An emotional plea for national defense is all it takes to raise money from patriotic people. Men and women will sacrifice, will give until it hurts when their sons are at war. A young man, far from home, living (?) under conditions new to him and unknown to his parents, is the unflinching combination to the family's treasure chest.

Whether parents be rich or poor, they will buy their son's passage home from a foreign war every day until he comes, so long as they can find the money, and nobody blames them. They will do it, even if they fear that the money they offer is imprudently spent, or that part of it is diverted into selfish channels. But hostilities have ceased now. Things are different.

Frugality Revives
People of the United States have begun watching where their tax money goes and wondering if it is being wisely spent. It is small wonder that Congress bristles at every suggestion to continue commodity price controls until the middle of 1946. Holding the price line costs something, and does not seem half as important to a war-weary people as it did before the last foreign beachhead was taken.

Evidences keep coming to light that taxpayers' money has been wasted by men in positions of trust. A recent public statement by Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia said more than 3 1/2 million civilians were on federal payrolls last November 1, compared with less than one million in August, 1939; or 917,760 when the shooting stopped at the end of World War I.

Needless Expense
There is an element in government today, seeking not merely to continue the life of the OPA but to expand its functions. Already our government's price-fixing "mechanics" have started making arbitrary adjustments in margins to be earned by wholesalers and distributing agencies, an activity not even thought about for the OPA at the time it was created.

It would be unfair to allege that this enormous bureau's entire war-time activity was useless. Price controls have done some good, as arbitrary shields against abnormal dangers. They have also done harm. A retail merchant, whom I have known since I was a boy, told me recently that he made more net gain selling under war-time price ceilings than he had made during his previous 25 years in business.

Controlling Prices
Questioned for more detail, my retailer friend acknowledged to me that price controls placed on him by government during the war were much more lenient than price controls placed on him by competitors all his business life. And I am sure it is no more true in his case than it would be with such institutions as Ford, Chrysler and General Motors. Competition is the correct brake on prices.

Regardless of what name it may wear: Price Control, Federal Aid to Education or Socialized Medicine, centralization of power is undemocratic. It is paying a power-hungry ruler for doing something that would happen naturally if he would only step aside. It is someone climbing to power by learning what people want and devising a way to keep them from getting it, while making them think he is trying to get it for them.

However the tournament is to run thru Friday and Saturday nights, and this may help some. Suitable trophies are to be awarded in both divisions, R. B. says.

PERMANENT BASIS FOR CAMP HOOD EXPECTED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP)—Establishment of Camp Hood at Temple, on a permanent basis is expected as soon as Congress enacts legislation definitely fixing the size of the peace time army.

While nothing official can be given yet, War Department executives have on several occasions

ASHBY'S STATION IS BURGLARIZED FOR $30: CAR STOLEN

The night of the snow, remember, Monday night of this week, Ashby's Service Station on West Main was entered by burglars and some $30 was taken from the cash register. Nothing else was missed, or reported. The same night, Harold Pennington's car was stolen from where it was parked on Andrews street.

And, the prize story of them all: A man, transporting a bull, highly pedigreed and registered, for another man stopped and got a cup of coffee, untied the bull so he could lay down. Got in the truck and drove to Waco before he found the bull was missing, and reported, they say, to the Sheriff's department here that the bull was stolen, missing, or something.

The owner from Winters, who was sending the bull via another man to Normangee phoned the Sheriff's office Thursday morning and said he'd be down. All that ain't no bull!
