Dear Friends:

The House has just adjourned (June 7th) without a final vote on the Enlisted men's Terminal leave Bill which has been discussed all afternoon. The final vote will be held next Tuesday at which time the measure will undoubtedly pass. It is going to cost a tremendous sum of money to pay this terminal leave and it is going to be in addition to the mustering out pay that Congress provided some time ago. Had the army not made similar payments to officers, I would doubt the justice of the bill. The fact is, however, that acting under a law of 1874, the Army has during this war made terminal leave payments to officers and has not made similar payments to enlisted men. I think that under the circumstances we must if we are to treat all alike, give the men the same payments. It is a tremendous price to pay, but I would rather pay it than to place the stamp of approval on any system that widens the breach between officers and enlisted men.

Under the rules of the House it is in order on each Wednesday to consider bills direct from the regular committees without any action on the part of the rules committee. Normally, it is the practice to waive the "call of the calendar," but for the past couple of months all of the radicals who want to bring up the C. I. O. sponsored F. E. P. C. bill have been trying to get the labor committee called with the intention that this committee would call up that bill. Most of the Republicans are voting with Congressman Vito Marcantonio who is leading the fight for

MARSHALL ISLANDS BECOME VAST MILITARY LABORATORY

By CLARKE BEACH

Ap Newsfeatures
STORIES of the big wind that will hit Bikini Atoll in July have without doubt spread through all the villages of the Marshall Islands and the simple, wide-eyed natives are probably jabbering day and night about atom bombs, the newest invention of the terrible and wonderful white warriors.

Unless they have changed a lot since I lived among them last year, they probably are not too alarmed about the approaching cataclysm on Bikini. The military government men have taken good care of them since United States forces first invaded the Marshalls, on January 31, 1944, and they seem to regard Americans with confidence and affection.

Can Understand Explosion

When told of the terrible destruction that the atomic explosion will wreak, they will be better able to comprehend than most persons. They remember Kwajalein, Roi-Namur, Eniwetok, and Engebi—their atolls which were verdant, palm fringed shores until the great battles in the early months of 1944, when bombs, fire and naval guns in a few days blasted away every living thing, until the islands were desert wastes, containing hardly a tree or shrub.

Once before, on Jaluit Atol in late 1944, there was a historic experiment by U. S. Naval forces to test the effectiveness of a new weapon. Marine Corps aviators struck Jabortown on Jaluit, the Jap's administrative headquarters for the Marshalls, with napalm in the heaviest attack employing the new incendiary bomb which had been conducted anywhere up to that time. The clouds of fire that enveloped the little island burned everything to a crisp.

The military observers watched attentively, and the report of results assisted our aviators all over the world in their first napalm bombings. The Marshall Islands have become a sort of intensive military laboratory.

The natives have seen something of all the blood-curdling events. Some of them were on all the atolls that have been battlefields of this war, including those four by-passed bases of the Japs—Wotje, Mille, Maloelap and Jaluit—where Marine and Navy flyers rained bombs almost daily for more than a year. The navy evacuated as many as possible and gave them safe refuge, but thousands of Marshallese today have harrowing stories to tell their children of life in a modern battle zone.

If the people of Bikini ever return to their little atoll they probably will have a story to tell which top all the others.

Period of Short Evolution

The atom bomb and all the other wonders of western civilization have come to Bikini in a startling short period. The records reveal little contact with the Western world until 1908, when the Boston Mission Society established a "preaching station" on Bikini and built a church. The Marshallese were easily converted, and today most of them are honest well-mannered, God-fearing Christians.

Yet they were no angels in their savage days. The nineteenth century whalers, who centered their activities in the Marshalls, cheated, debauched and outraged them to such an extent that it became suicidal for white men to land on their shores.

Foreigners from many lands have ruled them: Spaniards, who discovered the Marshalls in 1529; Germans, who took over from the Spaniards in 1885; Japanese, who were given a mandate over the islands after World War I; and finally the Americans.

the F. E. P. C. Very few of them believe in the F. E. P. C., but they want to embarrass the Democrats. Those of us from the South who know that this F. E. P. C. is only intended to promote the political fortunes of its sponsors and who also know that it can accomplish nothing except to promote racial bitterness where we need cooperation are determined to protect our country against such a cruel farce. We have for a number of weeks been able to either adjourn on Wednesday or to devote our time to other matters. It is impossible to conduct a filibuster in the House as is done in the Senate because each peaker is limited to 5 minutes, but we are going to use every legitimate means to prevent the passage of the F. E. P. C. Our efforts are made most difficult because many of the party leaders are trying to please the extreme elements in New York, Los Angeles, and other great cities, who are urging the passage of this legislation.

The President has not yet acted on the Case Bill. Unless the threatened Maritime Strike become acute, I fear that he will veto it. If he does, we will be right back where we started. We have not put employee and employer on the same basis before the law. We must do so before we can have industrial peace. We prohibit commercial combinations in restraint of trade. We must apply the same rules to labor combinations that interfere with trade. This week the Supreme Court went out of its way to say that even though Congress had made the rule to the contrary that a Virginia Statute requiring segregation of races on interstate buses was a burden on interstate commerce. If there is any justification whatsoever for this decision, how can it be said that the agreements of the various unions to stop all the railroads, all the coal mines or all the ocean going ships in the United States is not in restraint of trade? The law should apply impartially to all alike. Labor organizations should be willing to accept responsibilities as well as to demand privileges.

I wish very much that I could be at home and attend the picnics this summer. I want to visit with the friends who have been so kind to me, but I feel that I can't leave Washington while our work here continues so heavy. As soon as the program here allows, I expect to come home. In the meantime, please sign your letters and please put your address on the letter. (The envelope is often lost as soon as the letter is opened.)

With best wishes, I am

Yours sincerely,

"W. R. POAGE"

Congressman, 11th Texas Dist.

Texans In Washington

By L. T. (TEX) EASLEY
AP Special Washington Service

WASHINGTON, May — (AP) —Almost daily Texans, individually or in groups, come to Washington on official business.

Varied are the missions, both as public officials and as private citizens. By professions, lawyers naturally are more numerous.

Some strike out at once for the Capitol. Others spend days here and never get "on the hill".

If you accompanied any one group you would have a peen into only a small portion of the colossus that is our federal government. But if you went with all these visitors for a month or more you would get a first-hand look into the legislative, judicial and executive branches, seeing the little wheels turn as well as the big wheels.

Where is all this business transacted?

First we might note the physical layout of all the government buildings. Although Pennsylvania Avenue stretches 10 miles across the District of Columbia, its a mile and a quarter distance between the capitol and the white house is the nerve center of the government. Here is the "Federal Triangle", bounded on the sides by Pennsylvania and Constitution Avenues, and 15th street at the base. The Commerce Department building, two long city blocks in length, is at the base. The "Apex Building" built to house the federal trade commission, fills the point where the avenues converge.

Here in this triangle also are the justice, labor and postoffice departments, the Bureau of Internal Revenue and other agencies, such as the Interstate Commerce Commission. Originally planned to house the bulk of the governmental units, the buildings in the triangle now are supplemented by scores of other buildings throughout downtown Washington and even out into nearby Virginia and Maryland. The Agriculture Department occupies a gigantic "Horizontal skyscraper" across the Washington Monument grounds from the Commerce and labor departments. Up near the Capitol are massive buildings erected just before the war, housing the Office of Price Administration, the Civilian Production and War Assets Administrations. There the War Production Board formerly held forth.

Now for a cross section view of the governmental machine in operation: Take, for instance, the recent trip here of Texans concerned with application of the Reynosa Pipe Line Company of Corpus Christi to export Texas Natural Gas to Mexico. Attorneys, Geologists, engineers and financiers assembled in the low-ceiling conference room on the top floor of the 12 story FPC headquarters building. They spent days testifying before FPC commissioners on the engineering data, amount of gas reserves and the estimated cost of the proposed pipe line. Part of the hearing was held in a 9 story converted residential apartment building taken over recently by the FPC, three blocks away from its headquarters.

Applications for radio station construction and operation permits are considered by the Federal Communications Commission at its offices scattered throughout the Postoffice Department building. Here engineers and attorneys wrangle over the merits and demerits of a proposed radio installation. With both the FPC and FCC, and with many other governmental agencies, official reporters are hired to keep a transcript of testimony.

Across the street is the U. S. Tax Court, where Rep. Luther A. Johnson of Corsicana soon will sit along side of former Texas Congressman Eugene Black and other Tax Court Judges. The Civil Aeronautics Board, where Tom Wrenn of Sherman serves as an examiner is the scene of much "official business" bringing Texans to Washington. Two miles away, on Connecticut Avenue, is the headquarters of the United States-Mexican Claims Commission where Edgar Witt, formerly of Waco and one-time Lieutenant Governor of Texas, presides as chairman.

Supreme Court cases occasionally draw private lawyers and members of the Texas attorney General's staff to the beautiful, dazzling white marble edifice across the lawn from the capitol. In downtown Washington are several lesser courts, including the United States Court of Claims, located in an old red stone and brick building near the state department and White House. One of the members of the claims court is Judge Marvin Jones, former Amarillo Congressman.

Texas hold influential posts in virtually all of these government agencies over the city, and whenever Texans come to Washington on business, they some how usually manage to get together. While their business may not take them to Capitol Hill, with its contin-ous series of committee investigations, many of them do find time during their visit here to pay a brief call on their congressman and senators.

Dear Judy,

ARE you planning to leg make-up this summer or are you going to tan your legs in the sunlight? Some of the kids have been using sunlamps on rainy days to help deepen the little tan they've managed to get started.

Have you seen those zany short cotton beach coats with matching sandals? They really are sumpin' solid. But they can't wear 'em on picnics and that's what most of us have been doing lately for amusement. The best idea for a picnic in the woods is overalls, because how those ants, flies and mosquitos can bite is nobody's business!

Bye the bye, did you get in on the teentimers Design and Name It Contest? If not you can still get entry blanks at some of the department stores. All you've got to do is sketch a dress design and give it an original name. Maybe you can win a bond.

The bobby-sox brigade with their groans, giggles and sighs have almost managed to drive the adults away from moving pictures. One theater at Maplewood, N. J. took pity on its long suffering older set and set aside a special section for 'em on Friday nights.

Eddie aMher of Indianapolis wants to know what the girls think about Congress stopping the teen-age draft. Says he thinks most teen-agers would be glad to go into the service. What does your crowd think about it?

In case you think the kids haven't got ideas about important questions like that you should have been at the Teen Hi Club rally the other morning. The Club is a year old and is run by a New York department store. It now has 4,000 members from 13 to 17 years old. It costs nothing to join and the kids are taught dancing, singing, art, fashion modeling and other crafts during after-school hours.

Congressman W. R. Poage of this district announced Wednesday afternoon (June 12) that an allocation of $5,200,000 had been made by REA Administrator Claude R. Wickard to the Brazos River Transmission Electric Cooperative line for development of more effective and economical generation and transmission facilities in the rural areas of Central and North Texas. This allocation, the largest ever made in Texas, represents the culmination of many years of work.

The Brazos River Transmission Electric Cooperative, Inc., which now generates power at the Morris Shepherd Dam, is composed of 18 local REA Cooperatives. The REA has heretofore lent more than $11,000,000.00 to these distributive cooperatives which are scattered all the way from Milam and Williamson Counties to the Red River. At the moment the Brazos Transmission Cooperative operates 228 miles of high power transmission line. This loan will enable the cooperative to complete and enlarge the system which was begun before the war but on which work was suspended in 1941. The present program includes the construction of 687 miles of transmission line, two, 10,000 K-W generating plants and the necessary switching and substitutions.

Congressman Poage disclosed that one of the first expenditures to be made under the new allotment will be for the erection of a new 10,000 K-W generating plant in Bell County on the Leon River just below the new Miller Springs Dam. This will enable the Transmission cooperative to direct current in both directions over a large portion of the system and will also serve to provide a higher margin of depreciation. Poage said that the existing transmission facilities privately owned and North Texas inadequate to the rural areas. "The backbone system is the 1 from Dallas and to Waco and with a line of Waco to Taylor erected more ago at a time rendered absolute vice—not even lines. margin of dependability than can be secured from either steam or water power alone. In addition to improving the service, this generating plant will make it possible for the system of use a substantial larger portion of the power now generated by the Morris Shepherd Dam as well as of power that may become available through the erection of other Dams at a later date.

Congressman Poage pointed out that the existing generating and transmission facilities of the privately owned utilities in Central and North Texas were completely inadequate to meet the needs of the rural areas.

"The backbone of the private system is the line of steel towers from Dallas and Fort Worth south to Waco and north to Dennison with a line of wooden poles from Waco to Taylor. These lines were erected more than thirty years ago at a time when the utilities rendered absolutely no rural service—not even directly under the lines. They were designed to serve only the larger cities," Poage said.

He continued, "Under these circumstances it is easy to understand that we must provide new facilities if we are going to serve the rural areas, and I am not going to rest until every rural home in the 11th Congressional District and eventually every home in Texas, has cheap electricity available, and speaking of electricity, the Brazos River Transmission Cooperative has already saved millions to Texas farmers by bringing down rural rates. Within six months from the date of the first organization meeting of this Cooperative wholesale power rates were cut to all North and Central Texas Cooperatives by more than 60 percent. To maintain these rates as well as to secure future reductions, we must enable the Brazos Cooperative to provide effective competition. This allocation provides for that. It should result in both better and cheaper service for thousands of our rural people."

Congressman Poage further pointed out that this was not a gift of government money but that all funds advanced by the REA must be repaid to the government with interest. He emphasized the fact that during the 10 years of its existence the REA had collected approximately 100 million dollars of around 500 million dollars loaned and that no losses to date were less than 1/2 percent of 1 percent. Poage said, "I know of very few business undertakings which can point to a record of equal collections, and I resent the continual suggestions that the United States is paying for the farmers' electric service. Actually the farmer pays the Government a higher rate of interest than the Government pays. What REA has proven is that if the Government will but make credit available to farmers that they can produce and distribute electricity at low rates to rural areas where the private power companies formerly said it was uneconomical to serve."

In connection with this allocation, Administrator Wickard of the REA said, "With these funds the farm people of East Central Texas will be able to do two things both of which are absolutely essential to the further expansion of rural electrification in this area. First, these funds will make it possible to provide the additional generation and transmission facilities which are so urgently needed to overcome the power shortage which exists in this area. Second, these funds will make wholesale power available to meet the requirements of the REA distribution cooperatives at a substantial saving as compared with costs resulting from the rates now prevailing. Moreover, the cooperatives will be relieved of the restrictions in the dual rate type of wholesale contracts demanded by the private utilities. Freedom for REA cooperatives from these restrictive wholesale rate provisions is essential, if the cooperatives and the areas they serve are to attain the fullest development."

A-BOMB SITE READIED FOR WORK, PLAY

AP Newsfeatures BIKINI ATOL — A visitor to this Marshall island atoll would never think that the awesome atomic bomb soon will let go out in the lagoon and perhaps blow everything to kingdom come.

A thousand Seabees are swarming over the little coral island, transforming it into something it never was when Marshall islanders lived here for centuries — a modern playground.

Sports for Scientists They have put up softball diamonds and courts for horseshoe pitching, volleyball and commando and paddle teams. There is a beer garden and a swimming beach.

These elaborate preparations are for the relaxation of hundreds of Navy men and scientists amid final preparations for the atomic bomb explosion.

Up above the palms are rearing 75-foot steel towers which will be the eyes of the Navy when atomic bombardiers loose their missile on the fleet of test ships in the lagoon.

Atop these towers are being placed automatic cameras to record the explosion, while underwater $10,000 worth of submarine cameras, are being installed in pressure cases for operation by remote control. The lagoons clear waters are considered ideal.

Tests Visibility

Lt. Cmdr. J. P. Simpson, Lynchburg, Va., underwater photography expert, recently made a test dive to 100 feet below the surface and said "I could see easily the diving vessel at the surface."

The navy has also been out in the lagoon fishing — but not for fun. A crew has caught 10,000 pounds of tuna, skipjack, barracuda, sea bass and red snappers and put them on ice.

These fish will be compared with any survivors in the warm lagoon waters.

The supply navy is complete from power plants to postage stamps. There are even tankers with fresh water and supply ships capable of distilling 120,000 gallons daily from the sea, for Bikini has no fresh water supply.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Brown of Port Arthur are visiting friends and relatives.

Time Flies

Busy in the United States today are two ways of thinking—the high-brows call them "opposing concepts." Orators in both camps sound a lot alike until they get right down to brass tacks, completely away from abstract generalities. Both schools, if you listen with only half an ear to their vocal members, seem to favor advancement of the race and better living conditions.

Most of the people in America are not on either side; not yet. They haven't given the issues enough thought. That's the way with the American people, they keep out of all the arguments they can. They are busy with their own affairs and, if you interrupt them, you must state your business in a few words. Unfortunately it is not possible to state these two creeds briefly and clearly.

Serious Problem

It would not be necessary for a person of average ability to go to college and study a year in order to learn the difference. The problem is not that complicated. On the other hand, I can't cover the case in one newspaper column or in a letter of two or three pages. It's not that simple. Everybody owes it a little serious thought, however, before it is too late.

Nothing was ever more serious to the people of this continent, their children and their grandchildren, than this dispute between "Individualism" and "Collectivism." Those are the names that best describe them. The former may call themselves Democrats or Republicans or Conservatives. The latter may be Nazis, Communists, Fascist or Central Planners. Here, they are revolutionists.

Vital Decisions

Although I imagine somebody is going to call me an alarmist, I'm duty bound as a loyal citizen to say: The American people will know all about this sooner or later. If they give the matter some thought and act quickly, they still may take their choice. Otherwise they will get Collectivism like it came to the unhappy peoples of other lands who are now starving by the hundreds every day.

Here is a fair question: How can anybody identify destructive, alien, revolutionist movements at sight? They wear respectable names, shout for praiseworthy aims and have patriotic slogans. How can we pick them out? The best answer I have ever heard came from J. P. Seiberling in an address he delivered in Dallas, Texas, a few months ago. He says observe how they appeal to you!

Catering to What?

When a philosophy appeals to human weaknesses it is plainly earmarked as destructive. Central Planning, for example, charms nobody but people who believe in super-men and recognize themselves as weaklings. The offer of freedom from fear is a vulgar appeal to cowardice. Freedom from want (silly as it is) was never more than a bait to catch lazy people. Collectivism offers these, which mean mediocrity for everybody.

Individualism offers opportunity, a challenge; no soft stuff like security. Its rewards are for the energetic, not the lazy. Individualism offers personal liberty and individual freedom—freedom in expression, freedom in business and freedom in worship. These appeal to man's noble traits. Individualism offers these, with the highest standards of living for everybody the world has yet known.
