MRS. ALICE TAYLOR OF AUSTIN SPOKE FOR RAINEY HERE MONDAY

Mrs. Alice Taylor, formerly with the State Democratic Headquarters, as Educational Director was the politico who spoke at 10 a. m. Monday morning on the courthouse lawn.

Mrs. Taylor, the wife of one of the professors at the University of Texas answered, with proof, both photostatically, and otherwise, various charges made against Dr. Homer P. Rainey, who is candidate for governor in the runoff primary, which will be Aug. 24.

Mrs. Taylor did not have a transcript or summary of her speech, and, not even a mat of her self. However, Mrs. Taylor knows her way around before an audience and is unusually keen in her political know how.

She answered the "negro lover" charges, that of "communism" & the other headlines charges made against Dr. Homer P. Rainey. The crowd was not too large, but it was 10 a. m. and they're never big that time of morning.

Other speaking dates for Mrs. Taylor were Evant, Lampasas, Hamilton, and possibly Copperas Cove. She then goes to Mullen, Comanche, Zephyr and Brownwood. She spoke Saturday night in Temple.

BRUCE JONES HAS THANKS FOR VOTERS IN TAX ASSESSOR RACE

To my many friends who saw fit to support me in the First Democratic Primary, I wish to express my sincere thanks and appreciation.

To those who favored my opponent, I hold no ill feeling.

Sincerely,

FLASH! 'NOTHER TOWN IN SAME SHAPE AS GATESVILLE

George Fritz of Copperas Cove and believe he's Mayor of the city and he's a good one, says Copperas Cove's city hall is up and coming.

Already, they've got the foundation laid, without a $1 of labor, and are not ready to put on the concrete yet, and use only paid labor on the "corners". The Cove Lions, are doing a lot of the work and Mayor Fritz spoke a good word for the citizens of Gatesville and the local Lions, which pleases us not too much, as a lot of folks have acted like they thought anything south of the Cowhouse was a "stepchild".

"Tain't o, but we've most certainly left that appearance in many of our acts.

The new building will be 30x23 Mr. Fritz says, with an office for city officials, bill collecting, etc. and there's to be a storeroom, and a place for the new fire equipment they're managing for.

Gatesville, broke as it is, could take some lessons from Copperas Cove. They used "home-talent" labor for the foundations, and are using that kind of labor for all the building, save the corners.

Two hous a night on a new school building for any of us wouldn't hurt anything.

The shooting was not over for the sailors on the right. But they never minded, thinking they will never live to see another one. And they fought on Okinawa, with the hope that more sons and daughters would never be born to

On Record

"Freedom is more honest than government and so much more productive." This proverb might be added appropriately and soon to the ever-growing lexicon of "immortal words." It came from the lips of Ralph W. Gwinn of Bronxville, N. Y., toward the end of a speech he made in Congress, last April 16. The address was a review of 40 centuries of price fixing by governments.

Down through the ages, Rep. Gwinn traced the dismal trail of political price pegging from King Hammurabi of Babylon, who died 2,242 years before Christ, to our own Chester Bowles. Each successive effort went to pot. The oldest pile of wreckage, marking a turn where some self-confident ruler locked his economic steering wheel, was in ancient Babylon.

And Many Others

Babylon was not the last nor the worst. Another notable catastrophe took place about 900 years later as a result of the wage and price freezing provisions of the Hittite Code. Popular pressure in Asia Minor influenced this case, but served to prove how even the ancient rulers ran afoul of sore resentment against their impractical tinkering with freedom of private enterprise.

France's egoistic Philip IV took prices in hand and created a painful scarcity of bread and clothing six centuries before Hitler. Three or more English kings took turns at issuing edicts against natural laws, no less silly than Canute's ordering the tides not to come in. Without fail, price control systems have finally created scarcity instead of improving production.

The Emperor's OPA

The congressman's most colorful example was Rome. About 300 years before the birth of Christ, Emperor Diocletian set up a sort of OPA for the whole Roman Empire. Propaganda went out first in an effort to sell the public on the idea that rulers were much smarter than mere people. After the edict, came a record-breaking swarm of ministers and magistrates to enforce prices.

Did the emperor make his prices hold? He did not! He fixed a death penalty on people who bought or sold above the ceiling but Diocletian had his little undercover problems like all the others who went in for governmental price manipulation. Not many "offenders" were executed. Magistrates took bribes, prices rose anyhow and overflowed into black-markets without number.

Taxes Climbed Higher

An interesting sidelight on the Roman affair was that all kinds of building stopped, arts and sciences fell into decay to such an extent that people almost forgot about excellence. They fashioned and used makeshifts exclusively. Good craftsmen went jobless, big business men fled into exile and small business men went bankrupt and hungry. And Rome fell.

But before the final collapse, before the tramp of armed aliens is heard in the streets, rulers, who have ruined the wealth of their country and the prosperity of their subjects, run out of money themselves. A hungry and angry people chased Diocletian out of Rome but his evil work was done. Taxes were devastating until Rome was a ruin. History has not one price-fixing plan fit to copy, here or anywhere.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE: Anita Peabody, after flogging colorless but faithful Don Barnes for Tony Halstead, a society magician, tours the world as part of his act. She plans for a quieter life, and is buying a house in Connecticut, when Tony performs a new stunt—a parachute jump while handcuffed—and makes the stunt the basis of a new world tour. When Anita tells him of her plans, he laughs them off, and she leaves him.

Tony's agent in New York was one Mr. Morrissey, who happened to be the kind of a gentleman who always knew what was going on. Two of his hired detectives—waiting on Anita's cruise ship—watching her, and a man named Barnes. They couldn't tell what she was thinking, either because they didn't bother to look or because they had flat feet, but they did find out that she married the man named Barnes, and duly reported the fact.

For the benefit of Lola DeVere, and incidentally for his own, Morrissey held a conference. Lola had once been Tony's assistant, and had retained both her shapely beauty and her memories. Morrissey had a proposition. Lola and Tony would team up again, as soon as Tony learned of Anita's marriage; then they would play the famous Orphans' Benefit, sponsored by old man Bingham, the millionaire. Tony was through now, but as soon as he went on stage again, he would be hooked. "I know those hams," Morrissey said. "That applause—it's like dope."

Tony, beside himself, dropped everything and took Benton to the farmhouse in Connecticut, to Anita's dream house. It was winter now, and the place was bare. Tony huddled on a cot before the fireplace; Benton worried about food. He came in with a nearly empty can of beans and patted Herman, the intelligent rabbit, who was on the hearth.

"Sir, I don't want you to think I'm complaining, but we're down

Chapter Three

Anita prepared for Reno, prepared to run away from a man who was coming over on a boat, afraid to see him... "Afraid of what?" Gloria demanded.

"That I'll fall into his arms like a weak-kneed galoot—and goodbye forever! No, sir! I'm closing the gate!"

Gloria knew, and so did Anita know. And Don Barnes was still waiting. Don Barnes, still over-whoesome, still unbrilliant, still with the deep, calf-like love in his eyes. They went to church together, along with Aunt Abby and Gloria, to hear the Bishop. His sermon held a message for Anita. In his bluff, honest way, he spoke of the outrage of divorce; for others, he protested interference in the lives of two other people...

Tony lived with Benton in the Connecticut farmhouse.

With Aunt Abby, Anita left for Reno.

With Benton, Tony arrived in New York. And the first thing he did was seek out Bishop Peabody. He found the Bishop in a sweat-garment, refereeing a boxing match between two choir boys, in the church gymnasium. Tony came over to him.

"I was given to understand that I might find Bishop Peabody here."

"That's quite right. I'm not 'behering' at the moment."

"I see. Where's my wife?"

"You're... you're Arturo... known also the 'The Great', aren't you? Well, my boy, I can't tell you where she is."

"Look here, sir! If you don't let me see her—you're going to ruin the rest of her life!" He gulped, as the Bishop laughed. "The rest of mine, too—which, of course, isn't trouble you."

The Bishop was kindly, but firm. He refused to tell Tony of Anita's whereabouts. Tony was between tears and defiance when he left, and the Bishop watched him go...

Nothing could persuade Tony to leave New York; he stayed, for word from her, and performed at the local picture houses. Then, one night, the Bishop was at the stage door. Tony stopped. "Sad."

"You have news for me?"

"Yes—she's divorced you."

"Divorced me?" His voice died, then whispered. "Moms did that...?"

The Bishop's voice was kind. "I'm sorry," he said.

"Where is she?"

to—let's see—seven—ten beans. And after beans—what?"

"I don't know. I suppose I should insist on your leaving."

"Thank you, sir—but you're almost bound to return to your senses, sir.—You see... the trouble with 'eating your heart out', sir—is that you're still hungry."

"Ah—an epigram!"

"And when the woman's stopped thinking of you—"

Tony broke in, almost shouting. "She'll never give a tinker's damn for anybody but me—that's one thing I know!"

He mused, and was interrupted by a knock on the door. It was Morrissey, with Lola—and food. Wildly, Tony and Benton dove into the basket, full of turkey and champagne. As soon as he could, Morrissey told Tony of the benefit for the next night. Then Tony, protesting, heard Morrissey say:

"Tony—there's tough news."

"Tough news?"

"If I could get you back into harness without spilling it—I would."

"Let's have it!" Tony yelled. "Anita married a man named Barnes—this afternoon."

Tony's shoulders dropped. His face turned white. Then he turned, suddenly to Morrissey.

"Look, see what you can get for this house—for everything here! She wasn't even square enough to tell me there was someone else! Well, I've done enough thinking about her!"

"That's the old spirit, Tony!"

"I'll play that benefit! Yes, and I'll go out on the road! I'll show her! I'll be the biggest—"

Then, spent with his outburst, Tony wilted, and looked at them helplessly. "Look, get out—do you mind? I've got to be alone!" He closed the door after them, and turned his face to the wall. His voice was agonized. "Oh, Moms...!"

GREAT SCOTT

Opponents of the University of Arkansas may feel like exclaiming something like "Gerat Scott!" when they get a taste of the Razorback's new star halfback, Clyde Scott, who joined the Porker fold after resigning from the U. S. Naval Academy, where he made a great grid record. The Smackover, Ark., kid averaged 5.7 per carry with the middies last year. (AP Photo)

ALLEN SHIVERS HAS STATEMENT ON PROPOSED TAXES

"I want the people of Texas to know there are certain types of taxes to which I am opposed, both personally and as shown by my record of 12 years in the senate," Allen Shivers, who led his runoff opponent in the lieutenant governor's race by approximately 100,000 votes in the first primary said here this week.

"I oppose a general sales tax and always have, because I feel that it would place undue burdens on the people. I oppose a late income tax, because that field is pre-empted by the Federal government."

"If any additional taxes do become necessary, and I don't think they will in the near future, the burden should be spread on as broad a tax paying base as is possible," he continued.

"I have always considered myself a conservative, both in expenditures and in taxation, and on many occasions have opposed appropriations of the taxpayers money because I thought the expenditure was unwise and unnecessary. I have also opposed many tax bills because I thought they were levied on the wrong principle or that they were unnecessary."

"I have had to work hard all my life and that is probably the reason that I am conservative about the expenditure of tax money. I feel the same way about expending my own funds."

ALLEN SHIVERS IS PEOPLE'S FAVORITE

Senator Allen Shivers, in thanking the voters of Texas for the heavy lead they gave him in the July primary to make him the favorite candidate for lieutenant governor, also warned citizens that attempts will be made by scheming minority pressure groups to defeat him in the Aug. 24 runoff.

The Jefferson County legislator lawyer and farmer, pointed with pride to the overwhelming support which he received in his present home county and in the county where he was reared to manhood. Shivers, a World War II combat war veteran (the only veteran in this race), polled approximately 75 per cent of the votes in Jefferson County, his present home, and was a 25 to 1 favorite over his runoff opponent in Tyler County, where he spent his youth. Senator Shivers led his runoff opponent by approximately 100,000 votes in Texas.

"I am deeply grateful for the confidence the people of Texas have shown in me and the progressive program for Texas which I advocate," Shivers said "I shall strive even harder to work for the welfare of Texas."

"Because I represent the masses of the people, there will be those in the runoff campaign who will conspire to defeat me," Shivers predicted. "I will not be swayed by these radical minority groups—the C.I.O. noisemakers in particular. My opponent is welcome to the support which they are giving him. I will continue to fight for the right and welfare and progress of our people who make up the backbone of Texas."
