"FUSTEST WITH

THE MOSTEST"

little 'g' gatesville, Texas

May be sappy or yappy! But one of our kids this week is having 'to learn' Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, 268 words of the very finest reading these eyes have ever looked upon, or ever will.

Many of us with BAs, MAs, Ph. Ds, and all the rest of the alphabets will never approach anything like this, all this current talk about 'higher education', higher school costs, progressive education, and a lot of other hash will never produce anything like this ignorant (?) woodcutter put out in about 15 minutes or less at Gettysburg.

We think the whole thing is tied up in wanting to know, wanting to learn, and unguided thinking on his part.

If in all the words we've written in more than 25 years of writing for and of a newspaper, we could just write ONE WORD that would last as long as Lincoln's moon, and, unfortunately, and coln's 268, we'd think we hung unlike Lincoln, would be hard to get along with.

We don't think at the time he wrote, or spoke these words, that he thought he'd done anything so magnificent. We think the seriousness of the occasion, and the torn, battered condition of the country was bearing more heavily on his mind than anything. Altho he actually represented something foreign to the South we think in his big heart, he was much more of the Old South than he was of Damnyankeemism. His sympathies, it seems to us, were more with the South than with the North.

It's a good thing that Lincoln came along when he did, and but for Booth's bullet, you know and we know that the entire country could, and would have recovered more quickly than it did when other forces took over in the government, and the Reconstruction Days followed.

If you haven't recently read—and we mean read, Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, we urge you to read it, carefully and thoughtfully. It's simply great.

"It is therefore fitting and proper" that we, in our small way, commemorate the memory of this great man by celebrating his birthday, this, the 12th of February, 1960.

"The USE of money is all the difference there is in having

LBJ "NOT SEEKING THE NOMINATION" LISTS PROJECTS IMPERATIVE

At a press conference in Indianapolis, the 7th, Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas talked about his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination, only 24 hours after announcing he was not a candidate. He was quoted in Albuquerque, N. M., Friday night as saying he would not "seek the nomination."

Johnson said he expects to be chairman if the Texas delegation "and I hope it will be committed to the support of my candidacy."

Johnson listed these other projects he said the government must undertake:

1. Passage of legislation "that will make it possible for us to be second to no other power in the space age."
2. "Make sense" out of foreign aid and trade program by devising means by which "other nations may share in the development of the newly independent underdeveloped countries," with each nation contributing according to its resources.

Englands Puritan Parliament abolished Christmas celebration and

VIEWS and NEWS

from our Congressman BOB POAGE

February 5, 1960

Dear Friends:

First, let me thank everyone for giving me a chance to keep working for our District without the problems of a campaign. I hope that my service may justify your consideration.

Our Committee has been expecting to discuss the farm problem with Secretary Benson for more than a month. The President's "State of the Union" message made only passing reference to Agriculture. The very afternoon that message was delivered (Jan. 8) Chairman Cooley asked Mr. Benson to come up and give us the Administration's views. He promised to come shortly. Before the end of the month the Administration evidently decided to send an Agricultural Message. The Secretary asked that his appearance be postponed until yesterday, Feb. 4. The Committee agreed. It was then reported that the President and his advisers were having trouble agreeing on their agricultural policy. The Secretary asked to put off his appearance another day and then asked that he be excused indefinitely—until the President could decide what he wanted to say. Of course, we agreed.

We had hoped to have any suggestions the President wanted to make early in the session that we might consider them along with our own ideas, but since there has been so much delay a number of the Democratic members have gone to work trying to draft a farm bill which will stop the continued accumulation of surpluses and at the same time assure farmers of a reasonable income. We know that we must make a change. Under the present Secretary the Department of Agriculture has spent more than 32 billion dollars—more money than was spent in all the previous history of the Department back to its founding—and the income of farmers has gone down steadily. Whatever the merits claimed for Mr. Benson's low support program, it simply has not reduced either costs or surpluses. Both have gone up.

Last week I spoke at the American National Cattlemen's Convention. Apparently some of those who reported the speech misunderstood me. What I emphasized was, first, that Congress cannot repeal economic law and that we have never tried; that rather we have tried to balance supply and demand just as oil proration attempts to balance the supply of crude oil with demand. I then pointed out that we should try to increase consumption of meat but that even then we must seek less not more feed grain. Feed grain is always converted into meat and the price of cattle falls during periods of cheap feed. I don't want cheap cattle or cheap feed.

DOVER, DEL., STATE NEWS: "One of the greatest methods of obtaining information is by reading a good newspaper. And the place to learn how to do this is in school. So I read with much interest of the following experiment.. "After using newspapers for two years as a classroom textbook in contemporary living and as a supplement to books, junior high school teachers in Austin, Texas, find them invaluable in making subject matter more meaningful and in stimulating interest in reading."

WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS"
By C. WILSON HARDER

Probably no more flagrant example of the bureaucratic trend to use Madison Avenue agency to get headlines in the hopes of getting bigger Congressional appropriations exists than in the recent activity of the Federal Trade Commission.

With a "hey nonny nonny and a hoopla" FTC is making mighty headlines on the subject of radio disc jockeys getting what is called "payola" from record companies, yet brushes aside the fact that in state of Washington, dairy monopolists are waging a price war to drive out independent dairies.

Actually, whether or not disc jockeys on radio stations get paid to push certain records is of little importance. The custom started years ago when sheet music publishers extended favors to band leaders to push jazz tunes.

And as a matter of fact, who cares, or who can tell the differences between one "rock n' roll" tune and the next one.

But it is making headlines for FTC. But in the Spokane, Washington milk war, there are powerful, heavily financed interests involved in these predatory attacks on free enterprise, and it is possible that the FTC doesn't want to tangle with them. Besides FTC wouldn't make much in the way of national headlines preventing five local independent dairies in Spokane who between them only do 10% of the business from being ruined. But these independents are a force which prevents consumers being gouged by fixed high prices.

It is interesting to note that one of the biggest dairy combines West of the Mississippi is actively engaged in this war on the independents, offering milk to the big super markets at 61 cents per gallon, less a 5% rebate, which is below the cost of manufacturing.

The major operator among the predators has a long history of ruthless competition. As a California based concern, it has long taken advantage of price setting schedules existing in that state to buy out for exclusive distribution of their products entire grocery chains.

Obviously, profits from other states are going into the war chest but once independents are driven out, new high prices to consumers pay the war costs.

FTC has passed the buck by saying it is their understanding Justice Department contemplates looking into the matter. In the meantime, independent operators suffer.

But make no mistake about all this. While FTC blithely turns its back on the preservation of free enterprise in the market place, it is laboring hard and long to make sure there is no "cumshaw" connected with the raucous "rock n' roll" records that assail the public ears when radios are turned on. Who should care about the fate of independent dairies when FTC is busy milking an inconsequential baloney issue for all the headlines possible. This is even more absurd than the situation that would result if a police officer stopped his pursuit of a red-handed murderer to write out a tag for a car parked overtime.

Federal Contracts Upped In Texas

Texas firms had some 827 unclassified Federal government contracts valued at 230,423,433 during the year 1959.

That compares with 202,401,004 for Federal contracts in the state the year before, according to Regional Director William J. Rogers of the U. S. Department of Labor's Wage-Hour division in Dallas.

The largest single contract on the still incomplete list for the year just passed went to Chance Vought Aircraft, Inc. in Dallas, he said. It was a Navy contract for aircraft manufacturing and amounted to $20,666,366.

During the final quarter of 1959, business and industrial firms in Texas received 198 unclassified Federal contracts for supplies and equipment in amount of $36,678,360, he said. Late notices of such contracts awarded earlier in the past year and not previously reported amounted to an additional $1,706,789.

Texas Children Get Financial Aid from League

Removal of emphasis from monthly financial assistance with money aid where necessary to practical rehabilitation for parents of children receiving support under the state program of aid to dependent children would enable many of them to become self-sustaining citizens, the State Board of Welfare is advised in the first report on a two-year study requested of the Texas Research League by the Board and Commissioner of Public Welfare, John H. Winters.

The Research League report declares that the aid to dependent children program (ADC) has been the only available source of necessities of life for thousands of Texas families and that it should be continued. However, it is found that if it is to be fully effective in correcting deep-seated social problems that create cases of family dependency. The report reveals that policies shaped by statutes under which the Department of Public Welfare is required to operate the ADC program have caused it to fail generally in reaching and correcting factors that underlie immediate reason why families usually become ADC recipients. It is found that the failure to meet the social problems this welfare program should correct is not a reflection upon its administration by the Department of Public Welfare, but that the department actually is doing a creditable job within limitations of both number and quality of staff and outmoded laws.

Payments for aid to dependent children of Texas totaled $21 million in 1959, of which 80 per cent was from federal funds. ADC assistance was received by 80,000 children in 1958, an increase of 200 per cent over the 26,600 in 1942, when the program was started. The study discloses that only 25 per cent of the white and 20 per cent of the Negro families were self-sustaining prior to receiving ADC assistance and that welfare workers are seeing more and more second and third generation cases.

The Research League states that the overhauling of state statutes proposed in this report would place emphasis of the federally-sponsored ADC program on rehabilitation and enable the Department to help families overcome the causes of the dependency that consume increasing amounts of human resources and tax dollars.

TODAY'S 2-MINUTE MYSTERY

THE CASE OF
THE SCREAMING CAT

By Donald J. Sobol

TODAY'S 2-MINUTE MYSTERY
"One of your neighbors reported hearing a scream from this house about ten minutes ago," Inspector Winter said. "I'm sorry to intrude, but we happened to be driving nearby, and I thought I'd check on the report myself."

James McNalty stood scowling in the doorway — till he saw the inspector's badge. "There's some mistake," he protested. "B-but come in."
The inspector and Dr. Haledjian left the rain, which had been falling for three hours, and entered the bright and cheerful little house.
"I'll bet Mrs. Hatfield reported the scream," said McNalty. "She lives next door with her cats. I found a gray one camped at my door when I came home ten minutes ago."
"I was tired and wet and impatient," continued McNalty. "The cat didn't move, so I kicked it a yowl. A yowl, inspector. Not a scream."

"Is that your station wagon in the back?" inquired Haledjian.
"Yes. I've been away selling two weeks," said McNalty.
Haledjian peered through the under the station wagon. He moved beneath the car and then with a one hand along the dry gravel gently at the gray cat covering window at the station wagon a "Here, pussy," he murmured side.

WHAT AROUSED HALEDJIAN'S SUSPICION
Had McNalty really come home "ten minutes ago," the gravel under his car would have been wet. Instead it was dry, proving the car had been there before the rain started "three hours" before.
Haledjian believed McNalty had spied the cat under the car and used it as an alibi for the scream. lightning motion seized the cat. Carrying it back into the house, he asked McNalty, "Do you live here alone?"
"With my wife, Mae," was the nervous reply.
"For your sake, I hope she's well," said Haledjian. "If there was a scream, I don't think the cat made it!"

GOOD TELEPHONING

The City of Calgary, Alberta, Canada, has launched a project that all communities throughout Canada, has launched a project that all communities throughout Canada and the U. S. A. might well undertake. It has made the proper use and handling of the telephone a part of the curriculum for students in the primary grades of the schools.

The Calgary School Board has accepted a telephone kit made available by the Alberta Government Telephones for use of a projector and filmed movie which tells by animation the proper procedure for using a telephone. Also included in the instruction kit are two full sized phones and two directories.

The phones are used in conjunction with an illustrated pamphlet. The teacher with this equipment and literature is able to instruct the pupils in the correct methods for dialling and answering the phone. Good manners are stressed. Thus a pattern is established for the pupils for their use during adulthood.

The Alberta Government Telephone already has received requests for these kits from numerous other communities throughout the province.

Valentine Cookies For A Sentimental Surprise

"Be My Valentine" is sweetly stated with this pretty hearts-and-flowers arrangement of crisp, golden Valentine cookies, colorfully decorated with icing or cinnamon candies. Made with flavorful 40% Bran Flakes, the cookie dough is easy to prepare but requires chilling before it's rolled and cut into heart shapes. After baking, decorate them to your heart's content, and see what a sentimental surprise they make for the family and for guests.

ORANGE FANCIES (VALENTINE COOKIES)

2 cups sifted flour	¾ cup soft butter or margarine
3 teaspoons baking powder	1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt	1½ tablespoons grated orange rind
3 cups Kellogg's 40% Bran Flakes	½ cup milk

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Crush Bran Flakes into fine crumbs; mix with sifted dry ingredients. Blend butter, sugar and orange rind. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with milk, mixing after each addition. Chill. Roll chilled dough out very thin on lightly floured board; cut with floured cookie cutters. INSURANCE

Hundreds of years ago, insurance was often a one-man business: One man would insure a ship cargo, say, and in doing so he might lose his fortune.

But in 1825 the British House of Commons looked into England's insurance business, and said this: When there's a risk, the best way to guard against it is to join with others; so that each man might lose a little, but no man can lose a lot. Spread the risk.

As a result, insurance today is a big business. We have millions of policies worth billions of dollars in force.

An insurance policy is a contract. The company promises to pay you a certain sum for loss or damage of the thing you insure—your life, your home, your health and the like. And you promise to pay a premium for this protection. Your policy sets out what you have both agreed to. Most of the rules of the law of contracts apply to insurance policies.

There are many types of policies. And individual policies may vary. Check each clause carefully. Then have the insurance man explain it. Be sure all details of the agreement are written into the policy. You and the company are, in general, bound by the written word.

As a home owner, you have many risks, like fire, against which you can insure yourself. Other insurable risks are theft, windstorm, hail, glass breakage, cloudbursts, explosion, and the like.

Other household hazards also cause damage. But people don't expect them and may not insure against them. For example, a tree may fall on your house; or near some crossroad, a car may crash into your home.

Sometimes you can make the person who caused the damage pay. But if he has no money, and neither of you has insurance, you often must pay yourself.

College of medicine, began his practice in 1901 and brought him to Houston in 1907.

You could be liable. You can insure yourself against many of call insurance policies.

WATCH YOUR KITES, BOYS! STAY AWAY FROM LIGHT WIRES

"Kite flying is lots of fun but it can be dangerous of the rules of safety are not followed, especially around electric wires." This reminder comes from H. A. Biffle, District Manager for Community Public Service, in an appeal or caution directed to children and parents alike.

"The windy season brings kite-flying time and this traditional sport is lots of fun for children if it is done safely," Mr. Biffle pointed out. "Many youngsters don't realize the dangers in this innocent pastime if certain safety rules are not observed. The most important thing is never to fly kites where there is a possibility of the-ir getting tangled in electric power lines."

Other dangerous practices in connection with kite flying include using metallic cord or wire for the kite string, making the kite frame of metal, flying kites in the rain when even a cotton string can become a dangerous conductor of electricity, and trying to retrieve a kite if it becomes entangled in electric wires.

"Locally we've had no mishaps in several years, but each year over the nation, there are many cases of injury to kite-flyers," Mr. Biffle said. "If kites are made right and flown carefully, kite-flying is an enjoyable and wholesome sport."

To help impress children further that safety is all-important in kite-flying, Community Public Service is providing posters for school bulletin boards.
