"FUSTEST WITH

THE MOSTEST"

little 'g' gatesville, Texas

Advice is always free, and not wanted. Maybe we are not capable of giving it (we don't think we are), and, we don't think anyone else is - that is, GOOD Advice.

We're talking about advice to the thousands and thousands of graduates of 1960. We have a boy among them. We don't know what to tell him, but, like your's he wouldn't listen, anyway, and it may be just as well.

When you and I were coming up, they told us: "Hitch Your Wagon to a Star," "Not Failure, but Low Aim is Crime." That was good in 1919. And, we did both, and look at us today! However, we like it, and can now see mistakes we have made, but, like the Presbyterians (?) we just sorta believe: "What will be, will be."

As for the '60ans. Most of them are already figuring on re-what we hear about is, some of tiring, and all that old security stuff. That, in 1960 seems to be the most important aim of graduates. Get a high paying, short-hour job, do as little as possible to get by, let theirs, and get the man providing the job for as many "extras" as possible, like retirement, insurance, plenty of holidays off, extra time for work over a certain amount of hours, expenses for moving from one location to the other, and the like. You run into a new one every day.

Disappointedly it seems there's no idea of doing a job for EXCELLENT, not only for their own personal benefit (conscious, that is) and for "the boss". The viewpoint has changed awfully (?) since we were a pup. Now, it seems it's "payday, coffee break, and quitting time."

Seems like this has been sold, fostered, perpetrated and handed down from "above," to be frankly flat, Wash. D. C., In many cases, they've made the rules, and our youngsters are only following their leadership (?) if any.

As we say, we're not qualified to give "advice" and we don't think it would do any good in a climate like this. We just hope they're a danged lot smarter than we were at their age.

Too, the problems confronting the '60ans are far more complicated, difficult, explosive and ulcermaking than any we experienced. They MUST have plenty of "win, win, and vitality" to tarry on the mess we have made, and the Lord help them, if they haven't gotten enough in their schools to do this little thing. Sometimes, we wonder.

Pessimistically, it looks like a hard row, but we suppose our betters thought the same of us in 1919, so we wish 'em well, and are practically certain they'll 'muddle thru' just like we have since 1919.

made. All of these show up as losses of the C. C. C. Congress has to appropriate money to replenish the C. C. C. funds each year under present programs. The passage of this bill emphasizes the stupendous the present low support.

Prior to 1953 our program was to support agricultural commodities as high as practicable and up until Mr. Benson became Secretary of Agriculture we had not lost a dime of C. C. C. money in the support of all basic crops. The present Administration immediately began to lower supports—farm prices went down but without any relief to the taxpayers. Actually, during the first seven years of this Administration the Department of Agriculture has spent more money ($37,017,500,000) than had been spent by all previous Secretaries of Agriculture combined. (The expenditures from 1862 to 1953 were only $35,843,085,296.00).

To obtain executives, companies are paying salaries ranging 5 per cent to 7 per cent above those paid a year ago.

BOB POAGE

May 13, 1960

Dear Friends:

Although work progressed rather rapidly on both the Floor of the House and in the Committee this past week, everyone's major interest was fixed on the spy problem and the varied explanations offered our government. Very few question the necessity of these flights, but most everyone here wonders why we should say anything at all, and especially why the President should publicly state we are going to continue these activities. It looks to me we have talked too much.

The Agriculture Committee continued to work on the details of a general farm bill, but on my motion laid it aside long enough to consider and report a continuation on the Mexican Labor Bill. I sponsored the original Bracero Bill and I feel that experience shows clearly that it has gone a long way toward eliminating the evils of the old "wet back" system and at the same time has provided a needed supply of farm labor without in any way hurting American workers. We will, however, probably have difficulty passing the bill through the House as many people completely misunderstand the measure and think of it as a bill to authorize "wet backs."

The House passed the Agricultural Appropriation Bill containing an appropriation of $1,325,000,000 for making good the losses of the Commodity Credit Corporation. Here, too, there is much misunderstanding. It is often stated that if we had direct compensatory payments for cotton that it would put the farmers "at the mercy of Congress" — meaning that Congress might at any time fail to appropriate the needed money. That is, of course, true, but it is also true of the present program. Direct payments for wool are made out of C. C. C. funds just as direct payments for cotton would be made, and just as the present subsidy on cotton exports is

Two From Gatesville Get BA Degrees At University OF Texas June 4

June 4 from the U. of T College of Arts and Science, 665 graduates will receive baccalaureate degrees, according to Dean John Alton Burdine.

Two from Gatesville receiving these honors are David Andrew Kendrick and Mrs. Kathryn Lewis Waugh Meharg.

Gordon Maltzberger, who had a 20-13 career record in the American League, is the farm system pitching instructor for the Milwaukee Braves.

TEXAS LAND VALUES — UP, UP, UP

The decade of the 1950's saw a boom in Texas farm land prices which prompted frequent and true predictions from many an old-timer that a bust could not be far behind.

There was nothing approaching a bust, of course, even in the drought-ridden middle '50's. And as the new decade of the 1960's gets under way there are no real signs to indicate that the boom actually has even reached its peak.

Farmers may and probably will continue to complain of lower farm prices and increasing costs — which is well justified by current facts and figures. Some farm families probably will continue to forsake the land and its discouragements, although the number driven away from the farms to the cities is not nearly as high as during the drought years.

But the value of the land itself appears to be holding a remarkable steady upward trend, and this is observed in nearly all areas of Texas. Prevailing prices of farm and ranch land generally is higher than can actually be justified by its value for crop or livestock production.

The factors combining to produce this situation also have developed another over-all condition which is often observed and pointed out in many sections of Texas. The condition is this: More and more land over the State is becoming tightly held and to all practical purposes taken off the market altogether, automatically cutting down the quantity of bid-able land available to influence any market fluctuation.

The top strengthening factor in price determination of farm and ranch land, not only in Texas but in most other agricultural populio to be considered against the fixed amount of land available. In Texas, this more or less simple situation of supply and demand is intensified because of the more than normal growth in population.

During the past two decades, the trend of farm folk flocking to the middlesized and big cities in Texas also has had a reverse reaction — a notable rise in weekend farming and ranching. Money from Texas industry and commerce in the cities has found its way back to the land in an ever-increasing volume — no accurate measurement has yet been taken of just how large the volume might be, but the effect on farm land values is bound to have been considerable.

The boom-and-bust predictions of the old-timers are not likely to get more verification in the 1960's than in the 1950's.

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (FHTNC) — Marine Pfc. D. Claxton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene D. Claxton of 2606 Jackson Dr., Gatesville, serving with the First Marine Division, took part in an amphibious exercise on the beaches at Camp Pendleton, Calif., May 4-13.

The exercise, nicknamed "Operation Big Top", involved over 15,000 Marine and Navy personnel, and was designed to test new equipment and tactics, as well as to train personnel in many facets of amphibious warfare.

Highlight of the operation was a night amphibious assault by the 20 Navy ships and 60 Marine helicopters of "Big Top's" task force.

Member of the armed forces who die at sea are honored on Memorial Day at some U. S. ports, where tiny ships filled with flowers are set afloat, according to World Book Encyclopedia.

AMERICAN SHIPS AMERICA'S LIFELINE

Again this year, the nation's high school artists have competed to honor National Maritime Day, observed by Presidential Proclamation on May 23. The winning poster (above) in the Maritime Industry's 1960 Poster Contest is the work of Lynwood Adams of Hutchinson Central Technical High School, Buffalo, New York. Displayed each May on all Post Office trucks throughout the country, the Maritime Day poster is a reminder to Americans of their need for a strong merchant marine for commerce and defense.

Brotherly Love

*"Let brotherly love continue. Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."
 Hebrews 13: 1, 2*

This is one of the most lively quotations from the Bible. It stimulates the imagination. One can picture the story of ragged children who turn out to be princes and princesses; the tale of good fairies; the humble story of the birth of Christ.

Admittedly, as a practical modernist, this is the romantic attitude the thinking of a sentimentalist.

Yes, who is the first to say that deep down within him he has not at some time or other felt that perhaps there is an awesome truth to the words: "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: For thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

Aside from this type of thinking there is another thought in these words. They explain the fundamental elements of brotherly love.

Weed beds and rock piles are some very likely places you'll catch those lunkers but many a time you'll have trouble with weeds and snags if you're not using a weedless rig.

It sometimes happens that your favorite deep-running lure doesn't come equipped with a weedless rig. If this is the case take your eyes away from the television set for a minute and do a bit of rigging yourself.

Actually, there isn't much to do to make a weedless lure from your favorite artificial bait. Just connect a rubber band to the eye of the hook and slip the other end over the barb. If you have a double hook just slip the rubber band through the eye and slip the ends of the rubber band to the barb of their respective hooks. It won't keep the fish from being hooked because when they strike the rubber band slips from the barb.

One thing you have to remember about hooks, says the Evinrude Boating Foundation. There is no single hook that suits all situations. Hooks come in different sizes and shapes. Hooks with long shanks are usually used for tying streamers and other artificial bait or for live bait when fishing walleye or northern. Short-shanked hooks are used for panfish and certain short-bodied flies.

What type of hook a fisherman uses is a matter of preference. Some anglers feel that an offset hook—one with the point bent out of a flat plane, hooks fish best. Others contend that the flat bend—one with the whole hook in one plane, is the best.

The shape of the hook, the size of the wire, and the type of barb to use is a matter for debate among all fishermen. Whatever hook you prefer be sure that it will hold up under the stress and strain of the fish for which it is intended and that it is secured to your line properly.

By RUDY EVINS

During the reign of Davy Crockett, camping was left to the Indian and the weather-beaten bushwhacker Luffalo hunter. Now, with the advent of new, modern equipment, camping has become a family affair... especially in the eyes of the weekend boater.

I know many runabout and small cruiser skippers who look gleefully to the weekends for a cruise-camping trip with the family. At least twice a month they pack their gear and head for America's waterways and camp for the night under the meteoric wonders of God's creations.

Cruise-camping has become very popular because of the modernization of camping equipment. A two-burner camp stove, a few sleeping bags, air mattresses, plastic bag refrigerators, plastic sheeting and a small lightweight tent can be pecked easily in any size outdoors.

The Evinrude Boating Foundation has received word that camping, now very inexpensive, is becoming even less costly with the production of new materials. Heading this list of materials is paper... the same stuff this article is written on. The quality of the paper is a little different because of the stress, strain and weather conditions it must encounter. Just think, now you can read yourself to sleep with a novel imprinted on the sides of your tent or on the foot of your sleeping bag!

The paper-made tents, sleeping bags, etc., are naturals for the cruise-camper and fisherman. The new paper gear is so durable that it can be taken home after a weekend trip and stored until next year if need be. Fold it like a piece of paper and it can be transported with little or no trouble.

Paper-made products will more than likely be a boon to the camping outdoors. Who knows—maybe someday, somebody will think of a way to make boats out of paper!

Happy boating... and fishing, too. Rudy
