Bush picks Gen. Hayden for CIA chief

By TERENCE HUNT

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON

President Bush on Monday chose Air Force Gen. Michael Hayden to lead the embattled CIA, re-igniting a debate over the domestic surveillance program that the onetime head of the National Security Agency once

Republican Democratic critics also questioned the wisdom of putting a military officer in charge of the civilian agency. "Mike Hayden supremely qualified for this position," Bush said in the Oval Office, with Hayden at his side. Without mentioning Hayden's critics or their objections, the president said: "He knows the intelligence community from the ground up.'

If confirmed, Hayden would replace Porter Goss, who resigned under pressure Friday.

He said that Hayden "has been a provider and consumer of intelligence."

To balance the CIA between military and civilian leadership, the White House plans to move aside the agency's No. 2 official, Vice Admiral Albert Calland III, who took over as deputy director less than a year ago, two senior administration officials said. Other personnel changes also are likely, the officials said, speaking on condition of anonymity because the changes are not ready to announce used to oversee as the former head of the National Security Agency.

"There's probably no post more important in preserving our security and our values as people than the CIA," Hayden said.

Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Chairwoman Susan Collins, R-Maine, said she has found Hayden to be "straightforward willing to share his candid professional judgments — even when they differed" from those of Defense Secretary Donald H.,Rumsfeld.

"Nevertheless, to send a signal of independence from the Pentagon, General Hayden may want to consider retiring from the Air Force," she said. "That would put to rest questions about whether an active duty military officer should lead the CIA at this time."

Senate Judiciary Chairman Arlen Specter, R-Pa., had said in advance of the announcement that he would use a Hayden nomination to raise questions about the legality of the domestic surveillance program and did not rule out holding it up until he gets answers. "I'm not going to draw any lines in the sand until I see how the facts evolve," Specter said on Fox.

Rep. Peter Hoekstra, R-Mich., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee, said he was concerned that Hayden's nomination would detract from the real issue of intelligence reform.

"The debate in the Senate may end up being

Attorneys on both sides told U.S. District Judge Sim Lake outside the about the terrorist surveillance program and not about the future of the CIA or the intelligence community, which is exactly where the debate needs to be," Hoekstra said on CBS' "The Early Show.'

"This is about whether we still have alignment and agreement between the executive branch and Congress as to where intelligence reform needs to go," he said.

Hoekstra's sentiment was echoed by Republican Sen. Saxby Chambliss of Georgia, who said that Hayden's military background would be a "major problem," and several Democrats who made the rounds of the Sunday television talk shows. Sen. Bush noted that Hayden unanimously approved by the Senate for his current job — the nation's No. 2 intelligence • the job and the president official.

Director John Negroponte, who oversees the CIA and 15 other intelligence agencies, dismissed concerns about having an active military officer take over the civilian spy agency.

"Mike has both the breadth and depth of qualifications that are required for the position," Negroponte said. He called Hayden "a very, very independent-minded person, blunt spoken, who I don't think will have any difficulty whatsoever staking out positions that are independent and responsive to the needs of our civilian

OUR VIEWS

Be sure to put Relay for Life in your plans

he place to be in Big Spring this weekend will be Blankenship Field on the Big Spring High School campus — the site for the annual Relay for Life event staged by the Howard-Glasscock chapter of the American Cancer Society.

The stadium's football field will transformed into a huge, colorful campground as runners and walkers take to the track as the overnight fund-raiser marks its 10th anniversary with the largest number of teams ever to participate.

As always, dozens of teams are expected to take part in the event, which means there will literally be hundreds of participants involved in the community-wide campout.

The relay's website shows 31 local teams and a total of 781 individuals have so far registered to take part in the fund-raiser,

Organizers will open the event at 4 p.m. with registration for survivors. Then, following a brief ceremony set for 6:30 p.m. the walking begins at 7 p.m. "Survivor's Lap," in which anyone who has ever been diagnosed with cancer can participate. Cancer survivors, from young children to senior citizens, are scheduled to participate in the special

The Relay for Life then gets under way with a walker or runner from each team beginning to circle the track. Look, too, for a group of rockers. They won't have guitars and microphones though; they'll keep rocking chairs going — an alternative method for those participants who find it difficult or impossible to maneuver the track.

The teams will continue the relay until closing ceremonies at 8:30 a.m. Saturday.

Entertainment, food and games are planned throughout the event and many of the teams will be selling food as additional on-site fund-raisers.

Just after dark on Friday, another of the event's emotional moments will come when luminaria are lit circling the track. These are purchased in memory of loved ones.

We encourage each of our readers to become a part of this worthwhile effort which is now annually tops in the state and finishes among the top 10 in the nation for fund-raising among communities of similar size.

Let's continue that tradition.

A SMALL PRAYER

by K. Rae Anderson

With You, Lord, we can make our lives a creative project.

Time to extend Bush tax cuts

t's past time for President Bush to make a strong push to extend his income tax rate reductions before they expire in a few short years. The tax cuts have been instrumental in stimulating economic growth, and their extension is absolutely essential to meet the onerous challenges we'll be facing, including the ongoing war on terror and rising fuel prices.

The president's newly appointed chief of staff, Josh Bolten, appearing on "Fox News Sunday," made encouraging statements about the president's plan to reenergize his domestic agenda, including extending the tax

LIMBAUGH

But Democrats have a vested interest in blocking the extension and seeing to it that the confiscatory, government-empowering rates effacted in the Clinton years are restored. Democrats are using three principal — and familiar - arguments against extending the cuts, all of which are fallacious and deceptive. All are rooted in destructive class warfare.

First, they say that our deficits have skyrocketed under President Bush (which is true) because of his tax cuts (which is patently false). They say that this was entirely foreseeable because Reagan's tax cuts produced similar — though not as severe drains on the national treasury, which is also empirically false.

As Mark W. Smith points out in the newly released paperback version of his "Vast Right-Wing Conspiracy Handbook," "President Bush's tax cuts produced a 14.6 percent increase in federal revenues in 2005 over those in 2004." The Reagan tax cuts nearly doubled revenues in the Eighties, and even after accounting for inflation, produced major revenue increases. In both cases (Reagan and Bush), the strain on the national debt has resulted from excessive spending, (SET ITAL) not the tax cuts (END ITAL). But lies to the contrary never cease.

Second, Democrats say that the Reagan and Bush tax cuts aided the rich at the expense of the poor, which, in both cases, is outrageously and maliciously false. Refreshingly, Josh Bolten signaled an awareness of the Democrats' propaganda schemes when he made a point of contradicting their oft-repeated lie that Bush's tax cuts disproportionately benefit the wealthy.

Bolton plainly made a point I and many others have made for years: The Bush tax cuts made the tax code more progressive. The lower income groups received a greater percentage tax rate reduction than higher income groups.

According to Bolten, the top 10 percent of income earners would be paying about 64 percent of the federal revenues if the Bush tax cuts were not in place. But since they are, they are paying 66 percent of the revenues.

Democrats can play semantic games all they want by saying the rich get more actual dollars back with the tax cuts, but that's shamelessly misleading. In the first place, they don't get any money "back," because tax cuts just mean they pay a lower percentage of their earnings to the government. It is their money, and the amount they save on the "cuts" is money they will never pay in, not money they will actually get back.

Of course the amount of money the upper income groups are spared from paying in due to the cuts is much greater, in actual dollars, than the amount spared lower income groups because the higher income earners are paying so much more in actual (and percentage) dollars.

Only the fraudulent or willfully ignorant can claim the tax code or the Bush cuts disproportionately benefit the wealthy when the top 10 percent pay two-thirds of the revenues and the bottom half of earners pay very little at all. Indeed, how could lower income groups save much money from tax cuts when they pay so little in, if any, in the first place?

Third, Democrats say the economy has been sluggish under President Bush. This, also, is false. The best-kept secret of the current age is that the Bush economy is and has been very strong, with current growth rates of 4.8 percent — notwithstanding the enormous shocks on the economy the last five-and-half years, another point Bolton emphasized.

Democrats are famous for accusing President Bush of dividing, not uniting, the nation. But the truth is that the Democrats are the ones always pitting people against each other based on racial, gender and economic differences.

The American dream and America's remarkable success have not been based on suspiciousness, envy and covetousness between groups, but the ideal that everyone should have an opportunity to succeed and that one's success does not mean another's failure.

. It appears President Bush will. persist in ignoring the class warriors and press forward with his plan to extend his tax cuts. If so, I trust, he'll be aided enormously by press secretary Tony Snow in making his case.

oving? Please accept my condolences. Few things are more difficult than finding a new home, packing up your belongings, transporting them to your new home, unpacking and putting everything where it belongs. It makes me tired just thinking about it.

While moving is hard, making sure your mail moves with you is simple, easy, and convenient when you use the Mover's Guide from the Postal Service.

The Mover's Guide is available from your letter carrier, here at our local Post Office or from the Postal Service web site at www.usps.com/moversguide, where you can even complete the necessary information

The guide contains: · PS Form 3575, Change of Address Order, to file your address change with the Postal Service.

- Additional forms to notify publications to which you subscribe. · Helpful moving tips.
- · Discounts for moving-related products and services.
- Answers to the most commonly asked questions about permanent and temporary forwarding of mail.

To ensure uninterrupted service, notify your Post Office of your change of address at least 30 days before you move. PS Form 3575 will ask for the effective date of the move, whether the move involves one or more individuals or the entire family and whether the move is temporary or permanent. Be sure to use your complete new address, including the correct street name, suffix and directional, apartment number, rural route number, or Post Office box number and ZIP Code. The Postal Service forwards your eexpress mail, priority mail, and first-class mail for one year at no extra charge. It also forwards magazines and newspapers for 60 days from the effective date of your change-of-address order at no charge. Normally your magazine will not need to be forwarded for longer than 60 days, because publishers get your new address from the Postal Service. However, it makes sense to notify the publications directly, using the extra forms in the Mover's Guide so you don't miss a single issue.

Forwarding of advertising mail varies greatly, depending on the level of service guaranteed by the sender. Contact us at the Post Office for more information about forwarding this category of mail.

If you plan to go away for fewer than 30 days, use our hold mail service. We here at the Post Office can provide additional information and guidance regarding temporary changes of address and holding mail.

The Postal Service will do everything possible to provide you with efficient, uninterrupted mail service when you move. Help us. Make sure you get your Mover's Guide and fill out the necessary forms at least 30 days in advance, so your mail moves with you to your new home.

A day after commiserating with a colleague about insomnia, he handed me a white envelope. Inside I found two small pills. "It's my wife's Ambien," he said. "Just in case."

I put the sleeping pills in my nightstand, reserving them for a desperate moment. Six months later, they're still there and not just because of reports that some Ambien users are operating heavy machinery — their cars while slumbering or unconsciously rummaging through the refrigerator and bingeing on raw

I just don't trust the pharmaceutical industry. year alone, Americans filled 43 million prescriptions for sleeping pills. Not coincidentally, advertising spending on prescription sleep aids has increased 600 percent since 2004.

But despite the manufactured demand for the meds, prescription drugs simply are not the final answer to a serious sleep disorder, at least according to the Prescription Access Litigation Project (PAL), a coalition of advocacy groups that slammed Ambien last month with a Bitter Pill Award.

Pills, The Bitter launched last year as a parody of the industry advertising awards, prescription "honor" drugs for overhyped and ill," according to the PAL. questionable marketing practices. The awards are Administration, which designed to highlight the key problems of direct-to- Asleep at the Wheel consumer (DTC) advertising, which is banned everywhere in the world except the United States and New Zealand.

Last year, several erectile-dysfunction drugs won for exploiting male fears of inadequacy. Painkillers Vioxx and Celebrex were named for concealing drug risks and exaggerating benefits in the name of profits.

This year, some of the nation's best-known drugs were cited for overzealous marketing, including sleeping medications Ambien, timerelease Ambien CR and Lunesta; statins known as Lipitor and Crestor; and the attention-deficit medication Strattera.

The manufacturers of Ambien and Lunesta earned the While You Were Sleeping award for "overmarketing insomnia medications to anyone who has ever had a bad night's sleep."

Fifty million to 70 million Americans struggle with chronic sleep disorders each year. Although the drug ads imply that a restful sleep is just a pill away, only a fraction of those cases are best helped by medication. Most people can be treated by changing their behavior or diet or by incorporating relaxation techniques into their nightly routine.

"We're trying to solve a social problem with a prescription medication,' said Alex Sugerman-Brozan, director of the PAL, which works to make prescription drugs affordable to the masses. Sleep meds illustrate "how DTC advertising greatly expands a population that seeks to take a drug," he said.

Ambien also was cited because its "successor" version, Ambien CR, showed only a slight increase in sleep time compared with the original Ambien in clinical trials. But Ambien's patent is set to expire in 2007, and drugmaker Sanofi-Aventis "is trying to hold on to blockbuster profits in the face of imminent competition from generics," the PAL charged. Meanwhile, Lunesta is still running so-called reminder ads, those annoying commercials that contain the name of the drug but nothing else. This lets the company skip telling viewers about the drug's potential side effects. Ultimately, though, the real danger to consumers is that the drug ads overpromote newer drugs over lifestyle changes such as better diet and exercise. DTC advertising also overshadows cheaper generic drugs that frequently are just as effective as brand-name prescriptions, and it perpetuates the myth that "there's a pill for every

The Food and Drug last year earned the Bitter Pill for failure to police drug ads, is still woefully understaffed, still has no real enforcement power and still relies on funding from the industry it is supposed to regulate.

But perhaps we should lighten its workload. DTC advertising is not an inalienable industry right. Somehow, millions of consumers in Europe and the rest of the world manage to get their medications without a commercial assault.

I'd like nothing more than a consistent stretch ofgood sleep. (Suggestions welcome.) But the Ambien is going to a local drug recycling facility because sleeping pills never get at the root of the problem. They only mask symptoms and then create new ones.

Jenny Sayles is in charge of putting the Howard Glasscock Relay For Life on the Internet.

Relay goes online

By NANCY KOGER

Special to the Herald "There's a lot more to it than I ever knew: it's been a big learning experience for me," admits Jenny Sayles about her job as online chairperson for the Howard Glasscock 2006 Relay For Life.

Jenny and her husband, Shane, inherited their position from Shane's mother, Joanne Sayles, when she resigned to care for her parents.

Having been involved with registration for several years, Joanne and Reba Bristow had attended an online training session provided by the American Cancer Society in Austin a few years ago. The training convinced them that computer registration was the way to go. but they felt they needed some "hands-on" help to make it work.

When Jenny and Shane accepted the job, local event co-chairman Vicki Stewart arranged for a room with computers and trainers from the regional ACS offices to provide the needed training. Team captains were brought in to learn how to register members and set up team and individual member websites. The trainers showed that ACS had made changes, easing the online procedures, which encouraged everyone to use them.

"This year, for the first time, every single team is online, which required a lot of phone calls, encouragement, and questions; but it will be easier next year." "It eliminates so much paperwork, and it's really neat, too, because you can keep up with teams and individuals and their donations," Jenny said. Each team has its own Web page, as well as each team member. The Web pages can show the goal and what has been donated and can be personalized with photos and comments.

By looking at the Howard Glasscock Relay For Life 2006 on the Internet, anyone can see the running total of donations for Relay to date. Each of the current 31 local teams is listed, and the 781 participants are named under the team name. Maintaining the Web site on a daily basis is one of Jenny's major tasks. She finds it difficult to estimate the time spent, but thinks at least an hour a day and more

There was plenty going on during the anual Cinco de Mayo celebration held Friday and Saturday at Heart of the City Park in downtown Big Spring. East North Pass Pass Pass 6 NT Opening lead — ten of hearts.

One of the most remarkable deals this writer has ever been per-sonally involved in is this one from

trump, a contract that offered great promise, save for the fact that the opponents held two aces. West led a heart, taken by the ace, and declarer, without betraying the slightest concern, returned the jack of diamonds. West ducked the jack, and ducked again when declarer continued with the queen. West was, naturally, trying to prevent the establishment of dummy's diamonds, to which there were limited entries.

West succeeded in winning this battle, but lost the war. Having secured two diamond tricks, South turned his attention to the spade suit, leading the king. East won with the ace and could do no better than return a heart to declarer's king. South shrugged and cashed the Q-J of spades. When West's ten fell, declarer sheepishly claimed the rest of the tricks to make his slam. It is difficult to blame West for the outcome, since he had no way of knowing that his partner held the ace of spades. Indeed, even if West had taken the ace of diamonds, it is hardly likely that he would have returned a spade into the teeth of South's spade suit. And if he did not find the spade shift, declarer would have collected five diamonds, four clubs and three hearts to bring in the slam.

Even so, the fact remains that South bid and made six notrump missing two aces, a feat that left the defenders in a state of high agitation, and declarer in a state of embarrassed euphoria.

Sports Editor ALPINE — The Lady Steers' softball team ended their season much sooner than expected Saturday. And errors in the field were the main cause for the defeat.

Big Spring led 3-1 after four innings in Game 3 of the best-of-three series against El Paso Burges, but six errors in the fifth inning led to five Lady Mustang runs and a 6-3 season-ending loss.

"We had a good season and obviously didn't want to end it this way, but the girls didn't give up and showed a lot of heart." The Lady Steers played the game without leadoff hitter and starting second baseman Amber Sides. She would have been eligible to play in the regional quarterfinal had Big Spring defeated Burges.

Big Spring scored one

 Howard gets to title round after win over arch rival Midland

EL PASO — Howard College's softball team has had trouble hitting Odessa College's Kelly Ninemire all year long and things, unfortunately, did not change Saturday during the Region West championship game in El Paso.

The Lady Wranglers eliminated the Hawks from the tournament and ended their hopes of going to nationals with a 6-1 win.

until the seventh inning," said Howard head coach Kelly Raines. "A girl got on base and we just kind of got down. Kelly has had our number all season long and that's why she was the conference and regional MVP this year."

It was a 2-1 game heading into the seventh inning, but Odessa scored four runs in the final frame to take the victory. Howard committed two errors in the inning.

The Hawks' only run Kuramata scored the came in the third inning, team's only run and but Raines said the team could have had more runs if it wasn't for a good catch by the Odessa shortstop.

she dove for a line drive which we thought was going to be a base hit up the middle," said Raines. "We should have gotten more in the inning though."

Freshmen Alisha Rams, Honda Rodriguez and Kendra Corbin as well as sophomore Amanda Kuramata each had one hit in the game. Rodriguez' hit was an RBI.

The Hawks recorded two wins and one loss in the tournament before being eliminated by the Lady Wranglers.

Howard dropped a 2-1 game to Midland College to start the tourney Friday and then fought off elimination with a 6-1 win over Western Texas and then survived again Saturday with a 7-6 win in a rematch against Midland. Howard's wins eliminated both Western Coahoma started much faster in Game 2 of its best-of-three series with Kermit Saturday at the Freddie Ezell Softball Complex in Midland.

The Bulldogettes got another strong game at the plate from seniors Kali Roberts and Sarah Dunn and Dunn threw seven strong innings on the mound as Coahoma advanced to the regional quarterfinals after an 11-1 win in six innings.

"This is what we needed as far as a start," said Čoahoma head coach Robby Dickenson. jumped on them early and things worked out Bulldogettes stranded 10 runners on base and had two errors against Kermit, but four Coahoma hitters had at least two hits and the Lady Jackets committed seven errors in the field.

Coahoma was shut out in the first four innings in Friday's Game 1, but the Bulldogettes grabbed two runs in the first frame Saturday. Junior Ami Martinez and sophomore Janice Gonzales both reached on errors to start the inning and, with two outs, Dunn came through with a two-run single to put her team

SAN ANTONIO Avery Johnson should've known better than to underestimate Tim Duncan. Especially in the playoffs.

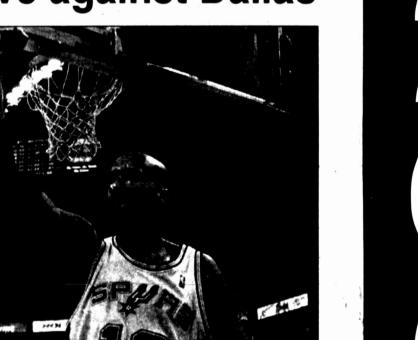

In the opener of a second-round series against the San Antonio Spurs on Sunday, Johnson took the calculated risk of letting his former teammate go against his centers with only limited help.

Duncan, a three-time Finals MVP who teamed with Johnson for the Spurs' 1999 championship, made the strategy backfire by scoring 20 of his 31 points in the first half, giving his worn-out teammates the lift they needed to pull out an 87-85 victory Sunday.

"Timmy was awesome," teammate Tony Parker said. "When he plays like that, it makes it easy for Roberts with an RBI single and then scored on a wild pitch. Sophomore Christie Rich reached on a fielder's choice and scored the third run of the inning moments later.

Conley was three-forfour at the plate with two RBIs and a run scored.

"Liz is coming around for us after struggling a bit this year," said Dickenson. "She is starting to find her groove and it is coming at a good time."

Kermit got its only run in the top of the fourth inning. Dunn gave up a walk and one of her two hits in the game, but Coahoma still led 5-1 at that point.

Freshman Laci Sterling reached on an error and Rich reached on a fielder's choice after that. Senior Drew Wells then smashed an RBI single to center. Coahoma scored two more runs in the fifth. Gonzales led off with a single and then later scored on an RBI double by freshman Shelbi Paige. Dunn got another single and then her pinch runner — Megan Conley crossed homeplate after an RBI single by Liz Conley.

Paige got another RBI single in the sixth inning to end the game due to the 10-run mercy rule. She knocked in freshman Teryn Bibb, who was pinch running for Martinez after Martinez reached on an error.

Dunn and Liz Conley had three hits at the plate. while Roberts and Paige each had two hits. Martinez walked twice and reached on two errors and Gonzales singled and reached on three errors.

"That shows how strong we are because it is not just one person getting all the hits for this team," Dickenson. "Everyone has come through for us at some point this year."

Dickenson limited Roberts' action in the game so the all-stater could rest a shoulder injury. She batted three times in the game, but was taken out after Coahoma grabbed an 8-1 lead. "There's no sense in playing her if we don't need her because she needs to rest the shoulder as much as possible," said Dickenson. "We'll need her full-time the rest of the way now."

Dunn was strong on the mound and got the win after allowing just one run on two hits. She struck out three and walked two.

"Sarah had good control and pitched well for us," said Dickenson. "She hit her spots and when Kermit did put something in play the fielder's did a good job of getting the out."

The best-of-three series against Sonora begins Friday in San Angelo. The first two games of the series will be played Friday at 5 p.m. and 30 minutes after Game 1 at Angelo State University. If a third game is needed, it will be played Saturday at 1 p.m.

Dickenson said the Lady Broncos are led by a good pitcher.

"She is the heart and soul of their team," he added. "They can hit it pretty good too so the series should be a good challenge for us."

everybody." The Spurs were playing just 36 hours after closing out their first-round series in Sacramento, while the Mavs had been off since Monday.

But at game's end, when the difference should've benefited Dallas the most, it was San Antonio that persevered — thanks mostly to Bruce Bowen.

Bowen hit a go-ahead 3pointer with 2:15 left that ended up being the winner. His biggest contribution, though, was pestering Dirk Nowitzki into a forgettable game with what Johnson called "bear-hug defense."

Nowitzki was 8-of-20 for 20 points after averaging 31.3 in the first round. It was a bit of redemption for Bowen after not living up to his first-team All-Defense reputation against Sacramento's Bonzi Wells in the first round.

Duncan made 12 of 24 shots, grabbed rebounds and tied Parker for the team's assist lead with four. Parker scored 19 and Ginobili added 15.

Texas and Midland from the tournament. The Hawks got just one hit against Midland's Elizabeth Oberst in the 2-1 loss. They scored the run in the second inning as freshman Rodriguez Jessica Garcia scored on a sacrifly by Corbin. Sophomore Paige Ruiz got the team's only hit.

Oberst struck out nine in seven innings.

"She's good and we struggled to get a hit off her," said Raines. "We just didn't hit very well."

Dickson started and took the loss for Howard. She threw four innings and gave up two runs on six hits. Ruiz pitched the final two innings and allowed one hit while striking out four.

Ruiz got the win on the mound against Western Texas in the team's first elimination game despite surrendering seven walks. She did strike out seven and allowed just two hits as well.

Ruiz and Garcia had back-to-back solo home runs in the fifth inning to lead Howard at the plate. Rams went two-for-three with one run, while Rodriguez doubled twice.

Howard improved to 7-0 against Western Texas this season after the win. "We hadn't lost to them all year and we sure didn't want to do it here as we were fighting to stay in the tournament," said Raines.

The second win in the tournament was against 18-6. rival Midland. And it was another close game.

Nelson started the game and took the loss. Oberst came on in relief but was not involved in the decision.

The Hawks finish their season at 40-14, but Raines sees positives heading into next year.

"I think the year went well," she said. "If you told me in the fall that we would go 40-14 I would have been happy. We have a lot of freshman coming back and we can use this experience for next year."

Annie's Mailbox •

Dear Annie: I am a widow with four children. My late husband took his life a little over two years ago. I tried to stop him, but unfortunately, there was nothing I could do. That was not his first suicide attempt.

The problem now is that his family treats me and our children horribly. They keep saying that I killed their son and didn't do enough to prevent him from taking his life, even though they are aware of his previous attempts. Worse, they say these cruel things in front of my children.

I realize my in-laws are grieving and looking for someone to blame. Believe me, I blamed myself for a long time. But I do not feel their present attitude is good for the children. I have told my in-laws that if they want to see their grandchildren, they need to put their feelings aside and act civilly. It hasn't happened yet.

I hope you can shed some light on this situation. — Trying To Function in Tennessee

Dear Tennessee: Your in-laws are blaming you not only because it makes their son's death more manageable, but because they do not want to blame themselves for whatever part they may have played, real or imagined. Your children should not be hearing their grandparents say hateful things about their mother. That will not help anyone heal. It will only create more wounds. Your in-laws are in desperate need of grief counseling and/or survivor support groups. You can find help for them, and for yourself, through Survivors of Suicide (survivorsofsuicide.com) or the American Association of Suicidology (suicidolo-gy.org) at 5221 Wisconsin Ave., NW, Washington, D.C. 20015.

Dear Annie: I have been dating a 30-year-old man for about 10 months. Let's call him "Oedipus." Oedipus couldn't be nicer, more attentive or solicitous of my family and friends. He has a great job, a lovely apartment, and he is debt-free. He loves my dog and seems to love me.

So what's the problem? He calls his mother "Mommy," and it sets my hackles up every time I hear it. It's "Mommy" this and "Mommy" that, and it drives me nuts. I've never known any males past the age of 12 who called for their "mommy." I also have noticed the raised eyebrows from his co-workers when he talks to "Mommy" on the phone. I have NOT talked to him about it because I don't want to make him selfconscious, but I'm starting to think I should.

All my girlfriends say "get over it" or "kick him to the curb." I don't want to walk away without at least trying to let him know that this habit is having an untoward effect on him, professionally and otherwise. Please make some helpful suggestions. - Girlfriend of "Mommy's" Son in the DICATE, INC.

Midwest

Dear Girlfriend: This is a long-ingrained habit, and the reason it irks you is because it sounds as if he is overly attached to his mother. Is he? If so, that's your real problem. If not, simply tell him with a smile that he sounds just like a 6-yearold when he says "Mommy," and you're surprised he hasn't outgrown it yet. He will need to be a little self-conscious in order to stop. And if he refuses to stop, you have to decide if this small thing bothers you enough to break up.

Dear Annie: May I clarify a point in your response to "Indiana," whose doctor said she didn't need breast or pelvic exams? You said to see a gerontologist.

A doctor who specializes in the care of older patients is a geriatrician. A gerontologist is a specialist in aging, usually with an advanced degree in the study of aging and all aspects of it. This is a common misunderstanding of the two titles. You could help to clear it up. Thank you. — Carolyn Gerontologist, Kopp, Ventura, Calif.

Dear Carolyn Kopp: Happy to be educated on the subject. Many thanks for cleaning up after us.
