HORRIBLE NEW POISON NOW BEING USED BY GERMANS

ITS EFFECT NOT IMMEDIATELY FELT BUT LATER IT CAUSES BLINDNESS.

USED AT ARMENTIERES

First Affects Bronchial Tubes, Then Eyes Swell and Death Often Ensues.

By Associated Press. Hazebrouck, France, Aug. 9.—British medical officers are trying to determine the nature of a new poison used by the Germans on the French frontier...

A large number of persons taken from Armentieres are in a grave condition. Many have died in hospitals at Hazebrouck, Alron-on-the-Ternoise...

As the liquid evaporates it produces a heavy gas which penetrates from room to room. It is of a tenacious character and seems to make more victims of women than men...

The victims were affected in the bronchial tubes, then their eyes swelled and became violently inflamed. Eventually they lost their sight. The skin turned an unearthly color and in several cases death followed rapidly.

BILLION BUSHEL WHEAT CROP IN 1918 IS THE MARK FOR AMERICAN FARMERS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8.—The production of over one billion bushels of wheat and over eight-three million bushels of rye, through the planting of 47,337,000 acres to winter wheat and of 5,131,000 acres to spring wheat, is the immediate war agricultural program for the Nation announced today by David F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture.

This vastly increased production of wheat needed in any case, will be absolutely essential to prevent a serious shortage of breadstuffs next summer should the growing conditions behind the season, be much damaged by early frosts.

The program approved by the Secretary of Agriculture represents the best thought of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and of State agricultural officials and state councils of defense.

The study of this question has involved many factors, and the specialists have been aware from the first that the demands for wheat may exceed the supply next year.

The estimates, the Department states, are made with the knowledge that there is some shortage of the fertilizer supply but with the understanding that there will be no general shortage of the supply of seed or of farm machinery which is necessary in the production of the wheat crop.

The planting and cultivation of these increased acres of fall-sown grains calls for unusual effort on the part of the farmers. Plans to place at the disposal of farmers all assistance available, are being perfected by the United States Department of Agriculture, the State colleges of agriculture, and other State and local agencies which cooperate in the work.

Table with columns: STATE, Acreage suggested for fall 1917, Acreage to be sown in fall 1918, Increase over 1917, Per cent increase, Max. acreage in any year.

comparatively small in each of these cases. Wisconsin, another state in which the present wheat acreage is small, is asked to increase the sowings 29 per cent, as wheat is well adapted to newly-opened northern land and as present prices make it a profitable crop in the state.

5,131,000 acres of rye, which, on the basis of ten year averages, will yield 83,535,000 bushels. This is an increase of 917,000 acres, or 22 per cent over that sown last year, when the largest acreage in the history of the country was put in. It is an increase of 48 per cent over the 1915 acreage and of 57 per cent over the five-year (1912-1916) average sown acreage.

Specialists of the Department of Agriculture and the State Agricultural Colleges hope that by better methods the average yield per acre will be at least maintained whatever there is a fertilizer shortage and will be increased in other sections. Much educational work will be done to make this desire an actuality, and in this campaign the most successful growers will have a prominent part.

These principles may be summed up as follows: (1) Plow early. Give the plowed land two months to settle before sowing where possible.

The accomplishment of this great increase of wheat and rye without disturbing correct farming practices will call for tremendous effort on the part of the farmer.

AIR "FREE LANCES" PLAY IMPORTANT PART Initiative and Daring Counts in The British Flying Corps

London.—In no branch of the British Army does personal initiative count more than in the Flying Corps. In no branch of the service has it been more encouraged.

One of these roving airmen was over the battle line early one morning with no other purpose than that of sending to destruction any hostile plane which he might chance to meet.

Then the German gunners concentrated their attention on him. Clouds of anti-aircraft shrapnel festooned his course, and "flaming onions"—inflammable shells designed to set fire to an aeroplane—groined up from below and burst in groups.

More than ten miles away were the British lines. One German attempted to intercept him. He boldly volplaned down, the German machine gun began to stutter, then the German pilot banked and dived. He was afraid to fight alone.

Again the "Archie" clusters blurred the sky, but the range was too great for them to be dangerous.

FRIGHTFULNESS IN RETREAT

"Frightfulness in Retreat," another war pamphlet published by Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, tells of the acts of wanton destruction committed by the German army in their "strategic" retreat.

The book draws a sharp line of distinction between destruction for a military purpose, and those acts of pillage and abuse which serve no military purpose, which represents merely spite, which are part of the program of "hate," and which remind us yet once more that this is not a gentleman's war.

There is a wealth of detail, and the statements are authentic. Part of the book is taken up with a report of the meeting of the French Senate, wherein the purely legal side of the matter is discussed. There are one or two photographs of captured German documents explaining how the destruction is to be carried out; where explosives are to be placed; how the wells are to be poisoned; what cottages are to be fired; what factories are to be blown up, and so on. There are accounts of the smashing of furniture in the houses, mirrors, glass, crockery, ornaments of every kind. Some of the reports deal with the carrying off of the inhabitants, and in some cases their murder.

The effects of this terrible work is well expressed by the military correspondent of the German "Lokalanzeiger" on March 18, 1917. This gentleman, with evident satisfaction, writes: "Great stretches of French country have been turned by us into a dead country. It varies in width from 10 to 12 or 15 kilometres (6.1 to 7.2 or 8 miles) and extends along the whole of our new position, representing a terrible barrier to any enemy hardy enough to advance against our new lines. No village or farm was left standing on this glacial, no road was left passable, no railroad track or embankment was left in being. Where once were woods, there are now rows of stumps; the wells have been blown up, wires, cables and pipes lines destroyed. In front of our new position runs, like a gigantic ribbon, an empire of death.

"To the men Behind the Armes," an address by Emile Sammaerts, at a meeting of the "Fight-for-the-Right Movement," is now obtainable in booklet form, published by T. Fisher (London). This address opens with a description of a cartoon by the great Foran, which shows two French "poules," covered with mud, and exposed to an infernal shell fire. "Let's hope," says one, "that they'll hold

INTER-PARLIAMENTARY UNION FEELS WAR EFFECT

Associated Press Mail Correspondence. The Interparliamentary Union is making no attempt during the war to bring together the different belligerent groups associated with that union, but is encouraging each of them to undertake parallel action in their respective countries in favor of the international aims so often set forth by President Wilson, declared Doctor Christian Lange, General Secretary of the Union in an interview with the correspondent of the Associated Press.

Dr. Lange, who is Norwegian and has his headquarters at Christiania, has just made the third round of the different European groups (and he has undertaken since the beginning of war and, after conferences at Petrograd, Berlin, Vienna and Bern, has conferred with the Netherlands group of the Interparliamentary Union at the Hague.

"You may imagine the difficulties connected with the maintenance of the Union and its work in the times," he remarked, "when I mention that the executive committee is composed of an Englishman, a Belgian, a Dutchman, an Austrian and a German. The cooperation of parliamentarians of various groups in the political life of their respective countries puts an attempt at any biennial gatherings or direct operation out of the question, albeit the three Scandinavian groups continue to meet periodically.

"Our main concern for the present is the maintenance of the Union intact, so that when peace comes we may be ready to at once re-establish contact and cooperate in the reconstruction of international and the development of international organizations.

"Our American group is strong and energetic, and is carrying on good work under the leadership of James C. Lathrop, a member of Congress from Texas.

"I am afraid we are at least in for another winter campaign," said Dr. Lange, in response to a question regarding his view of the outlook and the impressions obtained from his conferences in the various belligerent countries. "Each of the belligerent groups thinks greater advantages may be obtained by continued military action than by the immediate conclusion of peace. It is a curious fact that in the respect the position has been exactly reversed. In the beginning of the German based all her hopes on a decision on land, while Britain looked to the sea for a decisive power. Now it is Britain and the Allies who rely on their land forces, while people in the Central States firmly believe that they can force a decision at sea by means of the U-boat.

"The position of his own country, Norway, Dr. Lange described as extremely difficult. "Norway is a non-combatant position," he said, "and has risen 65 per cent in price, which exactly corresponds with the increase in the cost of living in Germany. The reason for this is that we are so largely dependent on foreign supplies; a third of Norway's food has to be imported. Our losses have been exceedingly heavy and her fleet shows a great shrinkage as compared with its dimensions at the outbreak of war. Shipowners' losses are made good financially, but for the country and its economic life are concerned, the money cannot make up for the sunk ships and the lost trade which they represent.

"Whereas before the war wealth was pretty evenly distributed there, the war has created a new moneyed class, but over against this comparatively small group of rich people there is the great mass of the nation weighed down by the burdens the war has imposed. Norway has come off better than most; it has not suffered European neutrals in the matter of mobilization expenses, for her geographical position secures to her much greater safety. Nevertheless, those expenses are exceedingly heavy.

"The chances of Norway getting into complications with either of the belligerent sides at present appear very slight," added Dr. Lange. "The clouds of last year's acute crisis have passed over."

VALOROUS DEEDS OF AUSTRALIAN AIR MAN

Associated Press Mail Correspondence. Sydney, Australia, August 4.—One of the most striking war incidents involving Australians is the deed by which Lieutenant F. H. McNamara of the Australian Flying Corps, in the Victoria Cross in Egypt a few months ago, McNamara is 23 years old and a son of the head of the Victorian (wart) Wheat Commission. Before the war he was a public school teacher in Victoria. His home is in Caulfield, an army surgeon named MacDonald wrote in a recent graphic letter to his father regarding McNamara's exploit and its aftermath.

"On Monday last Lieutenant McNamara of the Australian Flying Corps flew out from the aerodrome and later on passed beyond Horschlag, where he came upon the Turkish cavalry. They immediately opened fire. His wings were several times perforated by bullets but he just flew around and dropped his bombs. They were made to explode. Usually bombs are carried and they explode only on contact. McNamara dropped four and released a fifth from his bomb chest. It exploded prematurely under the aeroplane. A piece of shrapnel tore its way through his ear and penetrated the body of the machine. It ended by entering his thigh making a huge ugly wound.

"He immediately dropped two smoke bombs as a signal of distress. But at that moment he saw another airplane drop two smoke bombs and hover down through engine trouble.

"As McNamara said to me, 'I could not let the poor devil stay down there and not try to rescue him.' Well, he descended but as his aeroplane was built for only one other man had to climb into the space between the planes. All this time the Turks were busy shooting at them. With his extra passenger McNamara tried to ascend. But the leg was terribly painful with the result that the machine swerved over as it was moving along the ground preliminary to rising. They were prisoners for a certainty unless they managed to make the other machine go.

"They ran over the other machine and tested the engine. Wonderful to relate it went. So in they climbed and soared into the air pursued by shrapnel from the Turks. On the way back McNamara nearly fainted several times through loss of blood and pain but by putting his head outside into the rushing air he recovered. It would have been smash and death for both if he had fainted. They arrived back safely. That night McNamara was cheered to the echo. His deed is known all over this part of Egypt. It will be the V. C. or if not the V. C. then something pretty good."

KINGDON GOULD WANTS TO SERVE IN THE NEW ARMY

New York, Aug. 8.—Kingdon Gould, eldest son of George J. Gould and presumably heir to a large share of the Gould millions, explained recently to a reporter his side of the furor raised on account of his refusal to waive exemption rights under the draft because of his marriage. He said he was not wealthy—poorer than anybody has any idea—and that this had led him Monday to "indicate the purpose of exemption." But Mr. Gould said that he probably would not claim exemption. He said he was anxious to serve in the national army and that his wife a bride of July was willing for him to go. He had merely indicated his purpose of claiming exemption, he explained, because of the suddenness of his physical examination, which he passed, and of the necessity of his declaring any exemption claims at once. He had no chance to consult his wife, he said.

Mr. Gould did not explain why his financial affairs were at such low ebb or whether his marriage early in July with Annuziata Camilla Maria Lanzi, an Italian girl studying art here, had led to any curtailment of his income. But he did say with emphasis that his going into military service would make difficult the task of providing for his wife.

"The only doubt in my mind was whether my wife could stand through my absence," he explained. "That led me to declare my intention of claiming exemption. Just now it seems as if we could make it, and I certainly want to go and my wife still wants me to do all that the country desires of men of my age.

"Nobody has any idea of how my finances stand. I am not even wealthy. People, it seems, merely think that the name of Gould should mean that one has great wealth. I am situated now just as anybody in the middle class is situated. I have my wife to think of. It will be tough studding, but now we think we can skin through. I wouldn't leave her in want, and I understand that that's just what the government doesn't want—that men should leave their wives in any way dependent on the community.

Kingdon Gould and his younger brother, George J. Gould Jr., registered together in Lake Wood, Ocean county, N. J. Kingdon's serial number was the 194th capsule drawn in the draft lottery at Washington. George's number was not in the first quota called for the district. He, too, was married in July.

"I have not made up my mind about the matter," said George Gould when asked today whether he would claim exemption as his brother technically has done on account of having a wife to support. "The matter has not come up in my case and I have reached no decision."

Doubtless Messrs. Priest and Shell will have a sign reading, "Customers Please Leave Automobiles Outside," prepared for prominent display outside their barber shop as a result of an accident this morning. A motorist, headed in toward the curbing at the shop front, instead of stopping the machine, jauntly mounted the sidewalk and was stopped only partly by coming in contact with the highly ornamental barber pole, which was very successfully demolished.

The police court held quite a lengthy session this morning, there being eleven cases to be tried. Six drunks and four vagrants were fined $5 each and one bad "vag's" fine was assessed $15. One of the negro women who was fined for drunkenness was afterwards turned over to the county officials for having in her possession a pistol.

Mrs. M. N. Heath, G. R. Baker and Howard Keiser, of Vernon, were in the city today visiting the Red Cross Society. They stated that an auxiliary was organized at Vernon about two weeks ago, and that over 400 had joined. An effort is being made to get 500 members by the last of the week, so the auxiliary may be organized into a chapter. The nature of their visit to this city was to get ideas from the local chapter as to the best way to manage one.

John Graf, of Randlett, Oklahoma, was in the city today making an effort to join the army. He was rejected, however, on account of a minor physical defect. After failing in this examination he presented himself to the Red Cross society and expressed his willingness to do anything for them that they needed a man to do. Since there was nothing he could do to help them, he returned to his farm near Randlett, but he still says he is ready, willing and anxious to fight for "Old Glory" whenever they need him. The interesting part of this is that Graf is a native German, having come to this country when about four years old. Since coming to Oklahoma from New York several years ago he has been engaged in several kinds of hard work, and says he can do as much work as any ordinary man. He has no one dependent on him, and the look on his face after he was rejected expressed his keen disappointment.

Business has been "picking up" right along for the past month at the city hall, especially in the police court, as is shown by report made by Sergeant Chambers yesterday. The total of fines assessed during the month of July was $1291.75, an increase over the month of June of $433. $607.25 was the amount of fines levied on during July, while only $229 was collected in June, showing an increase in July of $378.25. Ninety six dollars worth of street work was done by prisoners during the month just passed.

Noble Gray, who owns the cigar and news stand in the lobby of the First National Bank building, lost something over $40 last night at the hands of a burglar. Mr. Gray stated that he usually carries his receipts home with him at night, but last night he just placed it in a little locker behind his counter, and when he came down this morning he found it had been stolen. He stated this afternoon that he had a good idea as to it was, and that he was going to see the party today and try to get the money back. Over $12 of the money stolen had been taken out on the sales of The Daily Times yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Curtis of Denton and Mrs. R. C. Hicks of Clarksville, passed through the city this afternoon, en route to points in Oklahoma to visit relatives.

J. A. KEMP TELLS ROTARIANS ABOUT AMENDMENT

SAYS ITS ADOPTION WILL MAKE THIS RICHEST AGRICULTURAL DISTRICT IN COUNTRY.

MAKE THIS A GREAT CITY

Rotary Clubs Over Entire State Will Be Asked to Actively Support the Amendment.

Every Rotary Club in the state will be asked to help put through the Constitutional amendment on the irrigation scheme, as a result of J. A. Kemp's speech before the club today. The president, Dr. Q. B. Lee, instructed the secretary to write to all the Texas Rotary Clubs to that effect, and the letters will be on their way tonight.

"If this irrigation scheme is put through," said said Mr. Kemp, introducing the subject, "it will make Wichita Falls one of the leading cities of the South. I do not say of Texas, but of the entire South."

Mr. Kemp said that the only danger of the amendment not being adopted was that people might be either misinformed or not informed at all about the matter. "This was the case," he said, "twenty years ago, and imagine the same conditions obtains today, to a large extent."

AMERICAN OFFICERS FOR AGGRESSIVE WARFARE

From the New York Evening Sun. Washington—If the Allied offensive along the Belgian sea coast succeeds, much of the credit will go to American military and naval strategists, according to Washington officials. The opinion also is expressed that the envelopment of the German right flank in that territory not only will leave the enemy without U-boat bases, but also will permit open fighting, as the character of the soil does not admit of heavy trench warfare.

To insure a successful drive in the Flanders sector, the American advisers insist that the naval forces must co-operate in the land operations. They point out that conditions at that portion of the line offer the best opportunity for turning the German flank and forcing Hindenburg to withdraw his troops into the interior front.

It is predicted that the resistance of Germany would rapidly weaken and that the Kaiser would sue for peace on the best terms that the Allies will give.

American naval officers familiar with the situation have not only indorsed the idea of the men, but the hot bloods among them have strongly urged that the British and American fliers undertake an overwhelming attack on the German positions along the Belgian Coast with a view to effecting the landing of a large expedi-

GERMANY DEMANDS GOLD FROM SWITZERLAND

Washington, Aug. 9.—Confirmation has reached the state department of the report that Germany has demanded a loan in gold from Switzerland in return for coal.

Switzerland is resisting the demand and if it is pressed she is in far better shape than Holland or the Scandinavian countries in meeting the military or economic aggression from Germany.

Under present conditions Switzerland is dependent upon Germany for her coal, but it is believed the allies may be able to meet her needs.

REAL TOGS IF YOU MUST BE A RECRUIT

"SHOULDER ARMS" Cotton gaberding rather than khaki builds this army outfit, complete even to the cartridge belt. The caducous on the front of the army hat tells us that this young lady belongs to the medical reserve corps.

Some seemed to have served both sides honestly and earned the approval of both, and some do not seem to have known which side they sympathized with.

A notable case is "Trak-horn"—real name Nikitta, nickname "Perky"—accused the suspicion of his Terrorist comrades was threatened with execution and to rehabilitate himself was obliged to kill the gendarme officer with whom he collaborated.

The murder of the Grand Secular in Moscow in February, 1905, was due to the same motive.

The organization of crime, with the aim of discrediting non-Terrorist political associations and frightening Nicholas into retreating, was on a grand scale.

For blood money of $150,000 a mechanic was hired by the department to hire at General Djukowski, governor of Moscow, but he was instructed to be sure to miss.

He executed his instructions precisely, but through carelessness killed a passerby.

Few Women Were Employed. In violation of the Nihilist novel traditions, very few women were employed as spies or informers.

Three spies named Fallisen betrayed scores of workers after receiving confessions from them by means of simulating love.

The commission's list show that the department was a hard taskmaster. In addition to paying its spies badly, it spied on them.

Every security department record contains a note of the spy's history. Some are described as "moderately good," others as "inferior," others as having "betrayed many revolutionaries," others as "energetic but unreliable," and others as "doubtful, should be watched."

Had Records Were Burned. The first act of the triumphant revolutionaries was to seize the security department's secret papers.

Many of these were burned in bonfires outside the building. The more precious documents, especially those relating to the state organization of crime, had been kept in safes and escaped destruction.

From these, backed by confessions of imprisoned spies, are being compiled the lists. The list will be followed by a five volume official "History of Espionage Under Nicholas II."

As revealed by these inquiries, autocracy's spies and informers were much less picturesque and romantic than they appeared in the typical "Nihilist novel." Most belonged to the lower intelligent working class or to the minor bourgeoisie.

They were badly paid, the average wage for organizing political crime or betraying accomplices being $20 a month.

Joined the Revolutionists. The spies were usually instructed to become members of secret revolutionary or terrorist organizations.

Among these being the Social Democratic party, the Social Revolutionaries, and their "fighting committee," the Populist Socialists and the Maximalists.

On nearly every newspaper was at least one spy. The spies took part in committee meetings, incited a breach of the political recession acts or to actual crime and kept the security department well informed.

Every spy had a "Klitchka," or nickname by which he was known to the police. The department's records bristle with such nicknames as "Patty," "Longnose," "Sunday" boy, "Elephant," and "Arsenic." The spy had also two or three faked surnames, and he often changed his town and name when he fell under the revolutionary's suspicion.

Like the famous Father Gaudy, who was treacherous on Bloody Sunday, 1915, led by his being hanged by a revolutionist engineer, he was at one time genuine.

ATTORNEY GENERAL HOLDS BOARD MEMBERSHIP OFFICE

Austin, Texas, Aug. 9.—Attorney General Looney adheres to a former opinion that membership on a local or district military exemption board is an office, consequently sheriffs, county judges or county clerks cannot serve on such boards. In a lengthy opinion General Looney gives his reasons.

The attorney general holds that it is a legal question to be determined and that his action is not the result of any lack of patriotism.

WAR HAS BROUGHT NEW BRANCHES IN BRITISH ARMY

Associated Press Mail Correspondence. London.—The British army has undergone changes of a far-reaching character since the outbreak of war in 1914, and it now possesses many branches unheard of in pre-war days. Every resource afforded by the manifold capacity of this great industrial community has been harnessed to the war chariot, says a British statement from official sources. There are certain respects in which the problem by which the British army is faced is unique; and one of the most striking of these is that it must be capable of campaigning in any part of the world and in any climate. In the case of armies like that of Germany, on the other hand, the problem of preparation for war is relatively simple. The ground on which the army was destined to fight was known; it was an army destined to do battle in a particular theatre—Europe. In consequence everything could be, and was, planned along certain well-defined lines. In the present war the importance of field works was apparent at a very early stage, partly owing to modern artillery and partly to the confirmed entrenching habit of the Germans. One of the cardinal instructions given by the German commanders to their troops on first invading France and Belgium was—"make trenches everywhere." In fact all the Continental powers had in addition to their corps of engineers, very large numbers of trained pioneers, organized in battalions, and suitable for use either as fighting troops or in the construction and maintenance of field works and communications. The absolute importance of the last named can perhaps only be realized by one who has seen the roads during an advance. But, while the Continent was to this extent prepared for trench warfare, as was natural in the circumstances, it was otherwise with Great Britain. In the British Service only the Indian army possessed pioneer regiments, these troops being always necessary in conducting campaigns in the hill country. When the need for this class of troops became evident steps were taken to form pioneer battalions for the expeditionary force. From the first they proved their value. Pioneers are prepared to fight or work as may be required. They perform such services as the construction and repair of communication trenches, fire-trenches and dug-outs, the digging of trenches and wiring. Their duties are manifold, and there is no form of usefulness at the front which the pioneer does not at one time or another find himself called upon to undertake. His activities range from carrying up ammunition to retrieving the wounded or holding a fiercely disputed trench or sap. In the great advances on the Somme and in Artois the pioneers performed work of the greatest importance. The duty of consolidating the captured ground and connecting it up with the old front line of the attackers, largely fell to them. In many places they took part in the advance as infantry, in others they kept the advancing lines supplied with ammunition and water, and beat off counter-attacks. Their losses have been heavy, but they have accomplished their tasks in the face of every obstacle. As a rule, the pioneers remain in the vicinity of the trenches all the time their division is in the line, and do not go back for rest, except at long intervals. The pioneer is as yet a new type in the British army, but he has long since passed the trial stage, and has proved his worth and steadfastness. His metal has been tried in the crucible of war and very thoroughly it has stood the test.

O. F. MARCHMAN RETURNS FROM 5000 MILE AUTO TRIP

O. F. Marchman is just back from a five thousand mile auto trip, which took him through Utah, Montana, Wyoming, Idaho, Colorado and Texas. He has seen the mountains and the Yellowstone Park. Mr. Marchman says that he saw twenty and thirty feet of snow; the spring in the north being very late this year. In the majority of the cities, so Mr. Marchman says business is good, but with the exception of the irrigated districts around Utah, the land is very unproductive. Mr. Marchman, indeed, went so far as to say that he would prefer one acre of Texas land to the whole state of Wyoming. There were no Wyoming people present at the time. At Denver and Colorado Springs Mr. Marchman fell in with a number of Wichita Falls people, and attended a Wichita picnic. Mr. Marchman was in Colorado five or six days. On account of the hard winter and late spring, Mr. Marchman says that the elk and bear in the National Park are in very poor condition. This does not prevent the latter, however, from putting on a most interesting scrap every night in the refuse pit where the campers are directed to throw the refuse and garbage from the camps. The peace of mind caused by these nocturnal discussions is not in any way augmented by the fact that all guns and firearms are sealed upon entering the park. The only thing to do, Mr. Marchman says, is to lie still and listen—having first taken the precaution to hang up all food out of reach of explorers. At Cheyenne, Mr. Marchman attended the yearly roundup, which he says was well worth seeing. There were, he says, from seventy-five to a hundred thousand visitors a Cheyenne for the roundup. The trip was made in a Dodge, and Mr. Marchman says that he did not spend a cent on the car itself during the entire trip, in spite of the fact that a good deal of the journey was over mountains and across deserts. Mr. Marchman was about two months on the road.

Tokio, August 6.—Contracts have been placed with the Osaka Iron Works, a newly formed company, and other shipbuilding yards in Japan by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha for ten steamers, aggregating 85,500 tons. They are approximately valued at $21,000,000 and are to be all finished by 1918.

THE GEM.

"Three Women of France" is the featured picture at the Gem today. How one man became one first consideration in the lives of a man, and a little grissette of Paris, and how his own frivolous butterfly wife was brought to the chances of war to devote herself to him at last, is wonderfully told in this story. "Three Women of France," written by Jules Verne and produced by Ruth Ann Baldwin. Three different types of women are concerned with one man, and it is the little grissette who makes the supreme sacrifice in the end, which gives him his chance after he is grievously wounded.

The war has turned a splendid chateau into a hospital. It was guarded by a number of gendarmes, and inside were many wounded soldiers. Sister Genevieve, a woman who knew the sorrow of suffering, but not the sorrow of sin, and who therefore could not be wholly tolerant, helped to care for these men. Filled, on the contrary, had known sin in all its ugliness, but like many another of the half-world, had given everything to the great war, even herself. She cheered the sick, sang to them and brought fresh beautiful flowers to them. All looked for her and anticipated her coming in the village near the chateau, even the old people and the children loved her. Sister Genevieve's sacrifice of her light-heartedness, came early after she had sung a frivolous song at the request of a dying soldier, but his answer was that she could see no real difference between a prayer and a song.

Lieutenant Debois, of the guard, knew he was a handsome fellow. He was at the time in love with Almee Kenfret, a pretty woman and a weak one, whose husband was in the trenches. She returned his admiration and made arrangements to go to Paris with him during his furlough. Fill overheard their talk. The enemy began a sharp attack on Wednesday, and on Thursday the stream of wounded poured into the hospitals. Among them was Roubert Kenfret, whom the war had broken like a thing of clay. When Sister Genevieve saw him she vividly recalled the day when he and she were sweethearts; they had quarreled and he had never returned. After three years with no word from him, she had become a nun. Then begins a struggle between "three women of France" and the conclusion is masterful, dramatic and convincing.

THE EMPRESS.

A new geometric figure must be employed in describing the plot of the William Fox picture in which Valeska Suratt is now appearing at the Empress in "The Siren." The story of four persons in the central thread of the story makes this a quadrangle plot, instead of a triangle. First and foremost, there is Cherry Millard (Miss Suratt), whose name before had been Vivian Courtney. Then there is the Stranger (Curtis Benton), who had been jilted through Vivian's machinations, but had escaped. Next comes Burt Hall (Robert Clugston), whose father, a lawyer, is executor of the estate of Derrick McClade. McClade (Clifford Bruce), is the fourth figure. Burt falls under the influence of Cherry, and squanders all the money he has. Derrick is deceived into giving the pair a present of $10,000, for he takes Cherry to be Rose Langdon, daughter of a friend of his father's. When Cherry determines to marry Derrick, to get control of all his money, she meets opposition from Burt Hall and the Stranger. The latter has once more been deceived by Cherry, and he kills her. Meanwhile, Derrick has met and fallen in love with the real Rose Langdon (Isabel Rea).

MOLLIE KING AT THE MAJESTIC SATURDAY

"The On the Square Girl" is to show at the Majestic Saturday. A certain class of society in every big city is called "society," and this picture has to do with that highly interesting class. Everything from the cocktails to the immorality disguised under a thin covering of free thinking is introduced, and everything is done in the lavish style, without which the picture would fall in realism. In this particular there is a man dissatisfied and his sporting with a girl on the outer edge and the tragedy of the girl's life form the substance of "The On the Square Girl." The entertaining power possessed by the feature is unusual. To begin with the essential requisite, action, has never been slighted for an instant throughout the five reels. Again the life depicted in the film is at once interesting, and it must be confessed entertainingly checking. The moral comedy portion of the action is most well photographed and with back effects is good and above all there is really taken care of by Ernest Lawford, the expert cost and the director. To consider, of the first, Mollie King is the star and never before has she appeared to such good advantage, but support embraces the most perfect collection of girls ever seen in a single five reel feature and many of them know a good lot about acting. Guida Borgare did the scenario and George Fitzmaurice directed, which statement needs little elaboration, known New York house.

NATIONAL GUARD RESERVES ORDERED TO REPORT FOR DUTY The National Guard Reserves have been ordered to report for duty, and the regular army recruiting officers have received instructions to notify all guardsmen not now on active duty to that effect. The following letter was received today at the army recruiting station: "The Department Commander, acting for Secretary of War, directs you to inform all enlisted men of the National Guard Reserve of your State that they are drafted into the Federal service on August 5, by proclamation of the President, dated July 3, 1917. Direct them to report to the organization from which they were furloughed for assignment and duty. They should be instructed to report on August 5 or as soon thereafter as practicable, to the nearest Army Post or recruiting station for transportation and subsistence to their station. The U. S. Property and Disbursing Officer should furnish transportation in cases where foregoing is not applicable." The recruiting officers state that it is important that it be understood that the above letter refers only to National Guardsmen not now in camp, but on furlough. Columbus P. McDonald, Innes M. McCrary and James W. Cummins were accepted this morning by the army, and were sent to Dallas.
