A short time ago I read an article by the noted columnist or editorial writer, Wright A. Patterson, in which he mentioned the many changes in conditions that are being brought on the people of the United States by war regulations.

Many of these have to do with the foods we will have to eat, and the manner in which they will be prepared in order to bring them to us, many of which are meats, fruits and vegetables. Much of this food we are now receiving in tin cans or glass containers, and the tin cans are to be taken from us in order that the tin and iron used in their manufacture can be used in making war materials. As to those foods that are contained in glass containers, I do not know why we should not continue to receive them, as I have never heard of any rationing of glass; but it may be that the factories which have been making them are being turned to the manufacture of defense articles; or it may be that the war activities have caused a shortage of man power needed in their production.

At any rate, as I understand the matter, most of these foods will soon be coming to us in some other form, the most popular and economical of which will be dried; we will therefore need to content ourselves largely with dried fruits, and possibly dried vegetables, and dried or cured meats and fish.

Our merchants will therefore soon be filling their shelves and show windows with dried apples, dried peaches and dried apricots, pears, cherries and berries and many other varieties of fruits. And, while much of our more popular meats are now and have for many years been coming to us in the form of cured hams and bacon, we are also likely to see in the store refrigerators such food as dried beef and mutton, formerly known as "jerked" beef, mutton or venison, and there will likely be many brands of these dried or jerked meats, and the merchant who is first to have them on display and tell his customers about them will be likely to lead his competitors in the sales.

But I can see no real reason for any doleful foreboding on account of this unexpected change in the form in which our foods are brought to us, for there are many of us who can remember the days when canned foods could not be purchased from the shelves of the food stores, and many of the dried foods when properly prepared for the table were just as delicious and inviting to the appetite as their later rivals, the canned foods. We can also remember when the nice juicy apples, peaches, pears and other fruits were divested of their peelings and cores and cut into halves and placed on a broad, clean scaffold or table out in the bright, hot sunshine and dried; and when thoroughly dried were packed in bags or boxes and stored away for use during the months when the fresh fruits were not available.

These dried fruits, when prepared in as many different ways perhaps as the fresh fruits are, formed just as appetizing delicacies as we have now and have been accustomed to for the past few decades. So let us not be feeling too blue about the matter when contemplating these necessary changes. Then, another encouraging thought is that the present form of drying these fruits, known as evaporating, leaves them with much more of the natural taste and flavor than they possess while fresh or canned.

Many of us can also remember the large hunks of dried or "jerked" beef that used to lie in small screened cases on the grocer's counters and they were considered even at that time as a delicacy. Then many farmers when they butchered beef would take at least one of the hind quarters and hang near or not too far from the kitchen stove or the old fireplace, where it would season and dry until it would keep for many weeks and supply savory meat for the family table. And no tin cans or glass vessels were needed for its preservation.

So, as I see it, there is little if any need for any doleful lamentations because of these changes in our mode of living, so that we make the winning of this nasty war more of a certainty than it might otherwise be. And even as to the sugar rationing, it is not so bad as we are inclined to think it is. There are many things that can be used as a substitute. In localities where honey bees can be kept profitably, almost any family, especially in the country districts, can easily produce enough honey to meet all the needs for sweetening that the family will require, and usually some to spare for the family that is not so fortunately situated. And in the localities where the sugar maple flourishes, hundreds of pounds of the most delicately flavored sugar can easily be produced from the maple sap during the early spring or late winter. And there are other means that may easily be devised for securing this necessary sweetness.

But you are perhaps saying: yes, that all sounds very well for the localities where honey and maple may be produced, but neither of them apply to the Panhandle-Plains country, so these suggestions are of little use to the readers of the Star. Quite right you are, as to their production here, but show me the up-to-date grocery store that does not always keep an ample supply on hand for the use of its customers; and thus far the price has not been prohibitive. And the price-fixing ceiling should prevent any prohibitive price being placed thereon. If it does not, then what is the price-fixing act for?

So just read the ads in your local newspapers, and watch the show windows when in town for the merchants who do not advertise, and you will probably be rewarded by finding just those things or articles of food that you will need for supplying your family table and we are not going to starve on account of food reservations or rationings for the "duration".

I do not wish to be considered as smart or dictatorial or in any way too free with giving advice, but it occurs to me from what I hear on the streets and read in the papers that these conditions are close upon us, and the sugar rationing is already here; and Mr. Merchant, if you are apt concerning your business mat-

Supplements War Rations

To supplement war rations in England, this young boy fishes in the River Severn for eelers, small eels which come up the river in shoals in spring. The home-made net scoop has been used since the days of the Romans. Eelers are regarded as a great delicacy, and a good fisherman can collect 100 pounds a night.

my queer notion comes in. It has always occurred to me that this was the sort of a tower that those ancient people in the land of Shinar had builded, rather than a material tower; for it occurred to me that men with enough intelligence to build such a material tower would surely have had sense enough to know that they could not build any tower that would reach the sky. And they were building it to try to outwit the laws of nature or God, and they got a tumble for their intrepidity in trying to interfere with such laws.

And that, I believe, is what my friend referred to when he said we, as a people, are building such a tower, and that we are due for a topple just as those ancient workers did and that we are due for the same kind of a fall in our efforts to make Nature's laws succumb to those of our own making. Maybe I'm just queer.

Many herbs are well adapted to Texas conditions and a few might be grown commercially. Texas, the specialist says, calling attention to a recent report prepared by S. H. Yarnell, chief of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station's division of horticulture. Among the herbs and spices which might be grown with garden care in the state are basil, dill, mint, sage, parsley, anise, bergamot, catnip, chives, dittany, fennel, hyssop, marjoram, mustard, rosemary, savory, tarragon, and lemon verbena.

Using herbs in cooking is an art, Miss Camp says—an art which is practiced too little. They give stimulating flavors to drinks and distinctive flavors to warmed-over dishes "and in many other ways can aid the homemaker in making cooking an adventure rather than a daily chore."

Here are some rules for cooking with herbs: Use them sparingly. Blend them judiciously. Don't use herbs in every dish.

Parsley and fennel are good with poultry, veal, venison and fish. Thyme, marjoram, and savory also combine well with these meats, while lamb or mutton may have mint sauce or mint jelly. A dish of mint or tarragon will make fruit salads more delightful. Chives, mint, parsley, pepper grass, watercress, and sorrel will give other salads new and unknown tangs, the specialist says. Poppy and caraway seeds add interest to breads, rolls and pickles. Woodruff, mint, lemon verbena, balm, rose geranium, and anise are good in beverages.

Let's Cook Something

Honey has always been valued as a most delectable table sweet. Its chief nutritional value is due to the amount of sugar it contains but it also contains a small amount of protein and of minerals in contrast to cane sugar in which both are lacking.

Miss Pearl McDonald, nutrition expert of the Delaware Extension Service, says the advice of King Solomon is as good today as it was three thousand years ago: "My son, eat thou honey because it is good, and the honey comb which is sweet to thy taste" and recommends the following recipe for Honey Cake.

HONEY CUP CAKES

- 1-9 cup each of shortening, honey and sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1-2 cup sweet milk
- 2 cups flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1-4 teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons cream

Cream shortening, honey and sugar, add well beaten eggs and beat thoroughly. Add milk and sifted dry ingredients alternately. Blend well and add the 2 teaspoons of cream and stir again. Pour in greased muffin tins and bake in moderate oven until light brown.

BEVERAGES

Using your own personal taste as a guide for the amount to be used, try sweetening iced drinks for hot summer days with honey. Just mix the honey with a little warm water, add to the fruit drink and then ice.

France, once a great world power, was brought to her knees with lightning quickness by a Nazi war machine that was years in the making. France's lack of preparedness as well as Germany's readiness caused her downfall.

France, re-assured by what she thought was a bulwark of defense . . . (the Maginot Line) . . . was lulled into complacency, thinking that It Cannot Happen here.

France, once proud, today is humbled. Her people are suffering untold misery because she was whipped by a ruthless dictator. The people of France were asleep! They did not do their part to preserve their nation!

France's sad plight should awaken every American to the dangers that now threaten our nation. No one believes that the Axis powers can whip us . . . that IT CAN HAPPEN HERE, and rightly so, if we all do our part.

You have a clear-cut duty as an American citizen. Uncle Sam needs everything to amass huge stocks of supplies of every kind for use in the fight against those whose aim is to destroy our nation and to enslave us.

How can you help? The answer to that is clear-cut! . . . by working harder at your job, whatever it is, to produce more to increase the collective total of national production. It is also your duty to buy Defense Bonds and Stamps, all that you can as soon as you can.

Remember that it is patriotic to carry on as normally as possible, considering that we are at war. Remember that those who serve you—your retail merchants, your service institutions and your professional men—are doing all that they can to accommodate you the best that they can. If, in some instances, they are unable to help you with the same completeness and thoroughness as before the war, bear with them with cheerful understanding knowing that they are doing their level best. Keep in mind that It Can't Happen Here if we all do our part.

Use Honey In Daily Meals

Honey combines well with other foods and it is just about as sweet as sugar. And too, lots of it is produced in Texas. Hazel Phipps, specialist in food preparation for the A. and M. College Extension Service, recommends that homemakers use honey more extensively in every-day meals. Beverages, puddings, cakes, and pies have a pleasant, more distinctive flavor when sweetened with honey. Honey burns very easily. Cook foods sweetened with honey at a slightly lower temperature than when using sugar. Here are some recipes Miss Phipps recommends:

Honey Drizzle
Heat honey over warm water for 10 minutes. Use for sweetening cereal or any fruit. Excellent for sweetening grapefruit.

Honey Milk
Add 1 T honey for each cup of milk. Add a few grains of salt and a dash of nutmeg. Mix thoroughly. Serve over cereal or iced as a beverage.

Bread Pudding (Honey)
2 c bread crumbs
3 c hot milk
3 T melted butter
2 beaten eggs
2-3 c honey
1-4 t salt
1 t. lemon extract
Mix bread and milk. Let stand 10 minutes, add remaining ingredients. Pour into buttered baking dish. Set in pan of hot water. Bake in slow oven (325-350 degrees) 45 minutes or until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean. Serve warm or chilled with cream. Yield: 8 to 10 servings.

Honey Apple Sauce Cake
1-3 c shortening
2 c flour
1-2 t nutmeg
1 c raisins (seeded)
3-4 c honey
1 t. soda
1-2 t cinnamon
1-4 c walnuts
1 c apple sauce
1-4 t cloves
1-4 t salt
Cream shortening and honey well, add apple sauce, then flour, spices, salt and soda sifted together. Raisins can be added now before flour is mixed in, thereby flouring them. Add walnuts. Beat well and bake about one hour in moderately hot oven. This cake can be made several days previous to the time of use as the flavor improves with age.

Boiled Honey Frosting
1-2 c honey
1-8 t salt
1 egg white
1-2 t vanilla
Cook honey and salt to 238 degrees F or until it will spin a thread or make a soft ball when dropped into cold water. Beat egg white, pour the syrup in a thin stream over the beaten egg white continuing to beat until all the syrup is added and frosting will stand in peaks. Add vanilla and spread on cake.

E. Roberson and besides Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Story, she has another sister, Mrs. John Hicks, living here.

Several from here attended the funeral services Sunday afternoon in Hereford for Mrs. Ed Curtisinger. Rev. Lowell Ponder conducted the services as Rev. Barnes of Hereford was ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Nance and family of Plainview visited his sister, Mrs. J. A. Noland, Mr. Noland, and family, Sunday.

Miss Georgia Lucille Nance remained here for a longer visit.

They were here to see Louie Huckert, Jr., who is home on furlough from Salt Lake City.

Rosene Lance and Joan Walser are staying in Hereford with their grandmothers, Mrs. C. H. Carl, and Mrs. R. A. Fullwood, and attending the vacation Bible School at the First Baptist Church.

Rev. M. D. Rexrode, who is assisting in the woodwork department of the school, takes some six or eight other boys and girls from this community each day.

Mrs. Guy Walser, who had the misfortune to fall down the steps of her back porch Monday Morning, had to have three stitches made in a gash just below the knee cap. She will have to stay in bed several days.

Wayne and Bobby Walser are staying with their grandmother, Mrs. C. R. Walser.

Everett Story, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Story, of this community, was to have taken his army entrance examination last week. He has been in Defense Work near Temple. His family had not heard from him at the time of this writing, whether he has passed or not.

TEXAS OUT-O'-DOORS

The 800 some odd species and sub-species of birds in Texas—more kinds of birds than any other State or region possesses—are busy nest building or raising young these days, and so the bird's worst predator, worse even than the hunter, is having a field day.

The predator referred to is the ordinary house cat.

The tame little pussy cat slumbering on the doorstep in the sun looks innocent enough. But let a cardinal, a wren, a cedar waxwing, a beautiful redwing blackbird, a mourning dove, quail or any other bird get within reach of its scratchy paws—and there's one less bird "deep in the heart of Texas."

Tame cats are bad enough. When they stray from home and become wild creatures, they live almost exclusively on birds.

All persons interested in the rich birdlife heritage of Texas should kill all stray housecats, the game department advises.

Tame cats desired in the home should be kept there and fed regularly, so they will not prey on birdlife in spare moments.

No less than 50 wild housecats were observed recently by a field biologist of the game department on a trip from Austin to Mineral Wells. And all along the highway mourning doves were so thick the biologist had to drive well under the standard 40 miles per hour to avoid
