NO PORK BARREL FOR DR. BROOKS, HE TELLS VOTERS

FORMER PRESIDENT OF BAYLOR UNIVERSITY DELIVERS ADDRESS AT WICHITA THEATER TUESDAY NIGHT.

REFERS TO OTHERS

Pays His Respects to Opponents, But Devotes Most of Time to National Issues. D. E. Garrett of Houston Also Speaks Here.

Dr. Samuel P. Brooks, candidate for the United States Senate, presented his claims to Wichita voters at the Wichita Theatre Tuesday night. There was a large crowd present, and the address was received with interest and enthusiasm. It dealt with state and national issues, referring in a measure to the other candidates and discussing the speaker's personal history. For the most part, however, it had to do with present day issues and conditions. A noteworthy feature of Dr. Brooks' address was his declaration that he does not want his share of "pork" to be the criterion of his service to the State; he said that he would not favor big expenditures for useless waterways or expensive post-offices.

Dr. Brooks is a tyro in politics, having been a college president for most of his life when he entered the race. He has learned lots of things he didn't know before, he said, discussing his campaign shortly after his arrival here last night. "It's a new experience for me," he said, "I've found out lots of things that I didn't know as president of Baylor. But I like it. It's brought me in touch with real men more than ever before." Dr. Brooks is bearing up well in spite of the strain. He delivered three addresses Tuesday and rarely speaks less than twice daily.

He was introduced last night by Judge John C. Kay. After the Brooks address, Judge Daniel E. Garrett of Houston, candidate for Congress at large, addressed the audience briefly. Dr. Brooks was exceedingly sparing in references to his opponents, making only one or two direct references to them, saying that he didn't expect the people to vote for him because of the demerits of his opponents, but on his own merits. However, he remarked that if what his opponents said about each other were true, they must be a pretty hard lot, and if that were the condition of the nation be true, it must be in a pretty hard way. If any were inclined to turn from the distinguished senator who had taken the place they had not better turn to him, a new man without entangling alliances rather than the "distinguished" representative who is seeking promotion, or the two "distinguished" ex-governors trying to stage political comebacks.

He referred indirectly to the Colquitt candidacy in remarking that he was seeking the support of people who said their own country was better than any other. He said he could never be found in the Oriental hotel in consultation with Mr. Busch of St. Louis, nor writing letters to New York. He quoted one of the candidates (Henry) as saying that he was trying to ride prohibition as a hobby horse, and retorted that his land had no wheat field homes at four per cent. Dr. Brooks referred to this candidate as one who had made a fortune out of banks who lent money at the usual rate.

He spoke confidently of his own prospects of success, giving many instances of strength in the populous centers of Northern and Western Texas where he stated that he expected to carry all the prohibition strongholds, and while he did not claim that he would carry these counties, he did say that he would receive the militant vote. He said that he expected to be in the runoff primary with the speaker. If any were not supporting him because they did not believe he could win, he said that they should take steps to have him locked up for running.

A reference to the recent growth of Wichita Falls recalled to the speaker's mind a visit to this place thirty six years ago. After their crops were laid by the speaker said, he was permitted by his father to go with some other farmers on a hunting trip into what was then an evil time. They were then back they passed near this place, and he was sent to what was then Wichita Falls to get some supplies. The site of this city was then occupied by a dugout, dimensions 18x14, which served for a general store, and the store-keeper's home. The land about here was then being begged for fifty cents an acre. He said that he didn't buy because he didn't have the fifty cents and he didn't want the land. "So is a man's hindsight much better than his foresight."

Judge John C. Kay in introducing the speaker mentioned that it was not often that he gave political advice, and when he did he wanted it to soak in. He said that his low estimation of politics in general of the present day was well known here, and that he was happy to see that people whose best and brightest men are candidates for office, he said. It seems that in Texas we have fallen on an evil time when the bright lights of public life are now with us no more, and the discussion of public questions has fallen from the high plane of yesterday. Calcutt, Campbell, and Ferguson are now doing the most patriotic thing I ever knew them to be engaged in, they are trying to show the people which of them gave the people the highest motives. He called attention to the fact that Texas needs a senator at Washington who would reflect credit both on himself and his constituency, but that time was past for awarding to accept. The speaker declared that the depression in many lines of business was caused by the lack of merchant ships, and favored the policy of the administration toward the end of giving us a merchant marine worthy of the name. He said that he believed in backing up that merchant marine with a sufficient degree of preparedness to enforce respect.

In conclusion he voiced his belief in the great American spirit which had welded people from every land into one great national body. He said he thought the same of a man, be he native or a citizen of only thirty minutes standing, but he has no tolerance for a person with a divided allegiance, or who kowtows to a king or potentate in some foreign land. Some excerpts from Dr. Brooks' address follows: "I make my appeal to no single class. I approach all men alike, not the rich or poor against the other, not the employer or employee against the other, not the consumer or producer against the other. I come to the farmer with whose labor I am familiar through years of actual experience. I know his love of home and family and country. I come to the day laborer by whose side I have toiled in the ditches and on the railroad track. I know his habits of life and his longing for the comforts of a home. I come to the train or engine man who must be much away from home amid the constant dangers from which he never recoils. I know his heart yearnings are that wife and children may have those comforts in-

He called attention to the fact that he was backed by no machine, saying that he would not have the backing of one if he could get it. He regretted that he did not have the money for the legitimate advertising that he would like to do, and spoke in grateful appreciation of the support received gratuitously in the columns of many of the papers of the state. He spoke of the trials and hardships of his early life when he was a poor boy on the farm, and later as a laborer for the railroads, which brought him to the North and the people, which he was proud to be numbered. Later in conducting the affairs of his school, the daily association of 1500 boys, and the association with men of affairs had rounded out his experience with all kinds of people, and given him unending satisfaction in his own time. All classes stood on exactly the same plane with him, he declared.

He spoke of his personal friendship with Judge Kay, and his support in behalf through the north before his nomination at Baltimore. He spoke of himself as a Democrat who fought men and measures before the primary, and then voted the ticket straight. The speaker prefaced the discussion of the measures advocated by him as his platform by saying that Congress could not legislate prosperity that a man could raise himself by his own bootstraps. However, he said, Congress could do much to ameliorate adverse conditions. Among the measures for economy and retrenchment supported by him were opposition to the pension, salaried, and the cabinet for health and education. He said that he was not opposed to any patriotic soldier who did service to his country in need being helped by the government in his own time of need, but he was opposed to the army of tax-eaters who draw Federal pensions without having served their country, or being injured in its service.

The pork barrel system was characterized as the "I'll tickle you if you'll tickle me" system, or "you help me buy a swamp lot for a postoffice, and I will help you irrigate a dry creek for a naval station." In discussing domestic affairs he came out strong for constitutional nationwide prohibition. He would not support statutory nation wide prohibition, rural credits and a budget system, banks. He also spoke in favor of government manufacture of war materials, more stringent child labor laws, a place in the cabinet for health and educational officers, and a Federal warehouse law. He promised if elected to oppose rivers and harbors, and all other legislation whose only motive was local pride, and he favored the extension of the parcels post to include all classes of express business.

He mentioned that not much political thinking is done nowadays, nor is it often that men vote from the highest motives. He called attention to the fact that Texas needs a senator at Washington who would reflect credit both on himself and his constituency, but that time was past for awarding Jake Wolters has announced that he will support R. L. Henry for the senatorial nomination. A good many anti prohibitionists take their cue from Jake and his announcement is expected to be a big boost for the Waco man.

President Wilson could do nothing more fitting than to offer the vacancy in the supreme court to former President Taft. Mr. Taft is a republican but he is a big man in every sense of the word. He has raised his voice not once, but many times, in support of President Wilson's foreign policy. A good many of us feel that it's just too bad that Taft's not a democrat. But no democrat is going to object if the president appoints him to the supreme bench. Taft owes it to his country to accept. If President Wilson offers him the appointment.

Senator Bailey is reported to have threatened to reveal some chapters of Tom Love's life back in Missouri forty years ago that look dark to Love's enemies. If Love asked that an honest count of the votes in the San Antonio convention be made. That there didn't work and now Governor Ferguson is threatening the Love supporters on the delegation to the St. Louis convention that if Love pushes his contest Love's supporters will get no recognition in the committee selections. Dirty, con- going as far as anything else above are going as far as anything else to convince fair minded Texans that Love's enemies are afraid to permit his claims to be submitted.

The nomination of Justice Hughes was a high tribute paid by the republicans to President Wilson. For when they picked Hughes they chose the man in the republican party most like Wilson. The two men are alike in character and temperament; both are conservative and deliberate. Like Wilson, Hughes is a man who thinks before he speaks, then speaks calmly but with conviction. Neither is swayed by hasty impulse or passion. The republicans did not dare nominate a candidate whose character would be in contrast with that of the president and that is one of the reasons why Roosevelt never had a chance of being chosen. The republican platform was purposely made indefinite and general so that Judge Hughes might give it his own construction. This was another tribute to the Wilson type, a type in which the republican platform makers had more confidence than they did in themselves. Justice Hughes' mouth has been closed by his position on the supreme bench. He opened it for the first time Saturday in accepting the republican nomination with a criticism of President Wilson. He particularly criticized the Mexican policy of the administration. He (Wilson) sought to dictate, he says, where we were not concerned. Our policy has been lamentably wrong, he asserts. The people will want a bill of particulars. They will want to know whether Hughes would have recognized Huerta, the traitor, and many believe, an assassin; they will want to know whether Hughes would intervene in Mexico or leave the Mexicans altogether alone. Judge Hughes criticized the foreign policy of the administration. If Justice Hughes does not approve Wilson's negotiations with Germany, would he have protested and declared war when Germany invaded Belgium? Would he have urged war when the Lusitania was sunk or, would he have secured American rights by negotiations as Wilson has done? Would he go to war with the allies over the seizure of mail and the so-called blockade or would he attempt to secure the recognition of American rights by negotiation, as Wilson is doing? Would he accept England's interference with our mail or with our trade without protest? Does he favor a tariff commission, or would he return the country to a high protective tariff? Will he accept the trade commission? Will he accept the new currency law? Does he favor preparedness? Would he go further in preparedness than Wilson or would he not do as much? Does he favor volunteer or compulsory service? Judge Hughes began his campaign with a strong criticism of the administration. The people will ask Judge Hughes what he would have done differently. Democrats are standing on the record of the administration. They are well fortified and welcome the assaults of the opposition even under an able leadership as Judge Hughes.

PRESIDENT WILSON SPEAKS ON MILITARISM.

One reason for President Wilson's popularity is his ability to voice the thought and aspirations of the nation. President Wilson is a great master of the language and it is fortunate for the American people that their leader is thus gifted. President Wilson addressed the graduates at the West Point military academy Tuesday. His address dealt with timely matters. He spoke, among other things, of preparedness and militarism. In part he said:

"You know that the chief thing that is holding many people back from enthusiasm for that which is called preparedness is the fear of militarism. I want to say a word to you, young gentlemen, about militarism. Militarism is a spirit. It is a point of view. It is a system. It is a purpose. The purpose of militarism is to use armies for aggression. The spirit of militarism is the opposite of the civilian spirit—the citizen spirit."

"In a country where militarism prevails, the military man looks down upon the civilian, regards him as inferior, thinks of him as intended for his military man's support and use; and just so long as America is American in spirit and point of view it is impossible with us. There is as yet in this country so far as I can discover, no taint of the spirit of militarism."

"You young gentlemen are picked out from the citizens of the United States to be that part of the force of the United States which makes its policy manifest against interference. The idea I want to leave with you boys today is this:

"No matter what comes, always remember that first of all you are citizens of the United States; before you are officers, and that you are officers because you represent in your profession what the citizenship of the United States stands for. There is no danger of militarism if you are genuine Americans. I am instructed by the constitution to use you for constitutional and patriotic purposes. And that is the only use you care to be put to."

"Americanism consists in utterly believing in the principles of America and putting them first. We ought to be it known that nobody who does not put American first can consort with us. But we ought to set them the example by thinking American thoughts and by entertaining American purposes and those thoughts and purposes will stand the test of example anywhere in the world for they are intended for the betterment of mankind."

"We are ready—nobody has authorized me to say this, but I am sure of it—we are ready to join with the other nations of the world in seeing that the kind of justice prevails anywhere that we believe in."

"I do not believe any of us loves a blustering nationality, a nationality with a chip on its shoulder; a nationality with its elbows out and its swagger on. We love that quiet, self-respecting, unconquerable spirit that does not strike until it is necessary to strike and then strikes to conquer. Never since I was a youngster have I been afraid of the noisy man. I have always been afraid of the still man. My conception of America is a conception of infinite dignity, along with quiet, unquestionable power. I ask you, young gentlemen, to join with me in that conception and let us all in our several spheres, be soldiers together to realize it."

"What a pity the old masters could not have shared in the great sums paid for their works. Maybe it's all for the best," replied Mr. Austin Bax. "If they had been commercial tempters they might have let their work out by contract and put in the time painting in their signatures to give it value."—Washington Star.

SAYS PARTY HAS LIVED UP TO PROMISE

"When Pierce was president the British minister in this country and three of his counsel violated our neutrality during the Crimean war. We gave these representatives of Great Britain their passports and sent them home. "But we didn't go to war. Pierce settled our troubles by negotiation just as the president of the United States is trying to do today. "When Van Buren was president a detachment of Canadian militia, during the internal troubles in Canada, boarded the U. S. ship Carolina in the American waters, killed an American member of the crew, fired the ship and sent her adrift over Niagara Falls. "But we didn't go to war. Van Buren settled our troubles by negotiation just as the president of the United States is trying to do today. "When Jefferson was president, England seized hundreds of our ships and Napoleon hundreds more. "When Adams was president, France preyed upon our commerce. She extended her seizure and confiscations to the very waters of the United States themselves until she had piled up in our ports a department charges of over 2,300 violations of neutrality's law. "But we didn't go to war. Adams settled our troubles by negotiation just as the president of the United States is trying to do today. "When Washington was president and 'neutrality' first, the war convulsed Europe our ships dared not to put out to sea, commerce was paralyzed and business depressed. American passengers—American crews were thrown into prison and deprived of legal rights. "But we didn't go to war. Washington settled our troubles by negotiation just as the president of the United States is trying to do today." In concluding this issue, Mr. Glyn says:

"Do the critics of the present administration believe that Lincoln should have risked national disaster by using the sword rather than the pen in pressing the Alabama claims? Are they willing to brand our side as coward because he kept us at peace with Spain?"

"In answer to those who say that President Wilson's policy does not satisfy anyone Mr. Glyn replies: "He means that it does not satisfy those who would map out a new and untried course for this nation to pursue, but they forget it does satisfy those who believe the United States should live up to the principles it has professed for a century and more. "Chief Justice White of the United States supreme court said that Lincoln has given America the greatest diplomatic victory of the past generation. Maximilian Harvier, German's noted editor, says that never has this republic violated its neutrality and Gilbert C. Chesterton, the famous English journalist, says it is the duty of the president to insist upon the protection of the interests of the people of the United States that he can't do his country's best unless he just to show the world he has a keen sense of being an individual saviour."

"Fighting for every degree of injury," he maintained, "is the policy of our opponents, deny it how they will. It would give us a war abroad each time the lightning strikes of European weather vane shifted with the breeze. It would make America the cockpit of the world's wars. It would be so busy settling other people's quarrels that we would have no time to attend to our own business."

"In his treatment of the question of preparedness Mr. Glyn asserts that the genius of this country is for peace. "We have built our greatness on the resources of nature and the peaceful toil of our people. The ring of the anvil, not the rage of the sword, the song of the reaper, not the shriek of the soldier, the clatter of the shuttle, not the crack of the rifle have won us the place we occupy in the councils of the world. "Like the old Mohawk chief who loved peace, we would like to throw the tomahawk of war to the sky that no man's hand could ever pull it down. But when some other tribe among the races of men sends us a bundle of arrows wrapped in the skin of a rattlesnake, we want, like old Governor Bradford of Massachusetts to be in a position to send that rattlesnake's skin back stuffed with powder and with ball."

"We have been trained too closely to the rocks of war during the past few years to believe that those rocks do not exist. And looking into the future we can perceive that if our sovereignty is not challenged, peace is not assailed it will only be because the world knows that we are strong enough to defend ourselves from every foe."

"For these reasons this administration has done more for our army and our navy than any administration in our history. "More than this it has mobilized the resources of the nation to meet the needs of war. It has placed the wealth of the country back of the strength of the country, the toiler back of the soldier and the sailor. "And you opponents of war, if you can't create an army, can't create a navy in the course of a day; to them we say, if our navy is not strong enough, our army not big enough the republican party is eighty per cent to blame for the republican party has been in control of this nation eighty per cent of the time during the past fifty years."

"The democratic party advocates and seeks preparedness, but it is preparedness for defense, not preparedness for aggression. "It is the preparedness which builds the nation's house upon a rock so it will not fall when the rains descend and the floods come and the winds blow. "A regard for national surety as well as a pride of personal honor will therefore bring the American people to the support of their president. Whether their blood is drawn from the banks of the Rhine, or where the River Shannon flows, whether they hail from Alpine valleys or the meadows of the Pyrenees, whether their descent be German or French, Irish or English, Austrian or Italian, Russian or Greek, the men who have sworn an oath of fealty to the ideals of America will be true. "They may love the hands of their fathers much, but they love the land of their children more. They may cherish the memory of the god from whence they sprang, but they stand ready to die for the soil that they have hallowed with their homes."

"In this review of the domestic policy the temporary chairman pointed out that the promise made by democracy four years ago had been faithfully kept. "Today the prosperity which the nation enjoys bears witness that democracy has kept the faith. Today the gates of opportunity are open there as much money in your vaults as today. The aggregate resources of our national banks are three hundred millions more than the aggregate resources of the Bank of England, the Bank of France, the Bank of Russia, the Reichbank of Germany, the Bank of the Netherlands, the Swiss National Bank and the Bank of Japan. We have four hundred and one million of money more than we had a year and a half ago and our gold supply exceeds by many hundred millions the gold supply of any other nation on earth. "This avalanche of money poured into our pockets by the rest of the world as a tribute to our national resources and our fidelity to peaceful industry is not the measure of our prosperity. It is only the symbol compared with our trade at home. This foreign trade is a mere pittance. Our domestic commerce today is larger than the foreign commerce of all the nations of the world combined. "Against this actual condition our opponents raise an argument of 'ifs'. They are groping in the dark to enter the realm of conjecture. They declare that if another candidate had been elected four years ago, the United States would not be where it is today. A ton of 'ifs' do not weigh as much as a single fact. Our opponents forget that if the flight of the seagulls were there—'ifs' cannot banish them—and Columbus found our land. "Chairman Glyn concluded with praise for President Wilson, who, he said, has measured up to the best traditions of a great office. "He has been wise with a wisdom that is steeped in the traditions of his country, with a wisdom that has been disciplined by training and broadened by instruction. "He has been patient with the nation's wrongs, he has been firm with the nation's right, with the firmness that is grounded in a duty well defined. "He has been patient with the nation's wrongs, he has been firm with the nation's right, with the firmness that is grounded in a duty well defined. "He has been patriotic with a patriotism that has never wavered, a patriotism that has as pure and strong as the faith that moved the fathers when they made our country free. "And when the history of these days comes to be written, let the children of tomorrow read their nation's story, when time shall have dispelled all misconception, and the years shall have rendered their impartial verdict one name will shine in golden splendor upon the page that is blackened with the tale of Europe's war, one name will represent the triumph of American principles over the hosts of darkness and of death. "That name will be the name of the great president who has made democracy proud that he is a democrat, and made Americans proud that he is an American. "It will be the name of the statesman who has kept his country true to its faith in a time that tried men's souls; the name of the student and the scholar who has championed the cause of American freedom wherever he found it oppressed; the name of the patriot who has implanted his country's flag on the highest peak to which humanity has yet aspired; the name that carried the torch of progress to victory once and will carry it to victory again, the name of Woodrow Wilson, president and president to be."

NO PORK BARREL FOR DR. BROOKS

the people, of whom I am one, and from whom I have never been separated. I am an intense believer in a government of majorities. Majorities make mistakes, but majorities correct them.

"Governments of the people do not exist for themselves, nor do political parties. Governments and political parties exist for the people whom they serve. They were never intended to be the means of perpetuating evil but rather that which is good. More and more men are coming to see that the moral quality of the action by which results are attained.

"One man in every hundred persons in the United States draws a pension from the Federal government. About 500,000 now are on the pension rolls, of whom 376,782, having served only three months, who were never hurt, nor sick, have been given retiring allowances of from 13 to 30 dollars per month. About 1500,000 have gone to each of the Congressional districts of the states of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

"Pensions have been granted by special acts to men who now are politically influential but who were once deserters. Pensions have been granted for such ridiculous reasons as shown in the record: 'Shallow Skin,' 'Distended Stomach,' 'Thin flabby muscles,' and 'slight numbness in the right leg.'

"Such legislation is a shame and I can not but believe that if all faithful Southern Democrats would throw themselves across such fraud it would be stopped. I do not believe the pensions of deserving and faithful old soldiers. I do not want them ever to lose their crowns of reward, but I do not want the government to pay fake soldiers, nor yet young girl widows who, to get the pensions, have married old fellows tottering on the edge of the grave. It is a question worthy of consideration why a man in the army may get a pension and one in the railway mail service, or one grown old and helpless in some other civil service of the government, should have none.

"Under the law a member of either House of Congress draws twenty cents a mile each way from his home to Washington. This is pure grat. If a Congressman in Texas lives fifteen hundred miles from Washington, that distance at twenty cents per mile would bring him $300, or a round trip $600. You and I know that he can travel from his home to Washington and back, living like a prince en route at a cost of $125. Thus he has a clear gain of $475. In the face of this fact men who have run for office, shedding great tears of sorrow for the people who pay taxes, yet at every opportunity in Congress have voted against any reduction of this twenty-cent mileage.

"There are over 600,000 voters in Texas. It would cost me, a candidate, or any other citizen, above $12,000 to pay the postage for one letter to each of the voters, not to count the cost of paper, envelopes and clerical help in mailing them. A Congressman can run for the Senate, sending not one but as many letters as he wishes to all the voters of his state without a cent of cost to himself. He may send tons of stuff through the mails at the expense of the people. In my judgment, mailing trunks should be limited to legitimate correspondence and no letters should be franked by a member of either House, to any one outside of one's district or state, as the case may be, unless it is in answer to letters or appeals. Millions of dollars annually could be saved and thus start us on the road to penny postage, a positive gain to all the people.

"This is a term of reproach applied to the use of public funds for political purposes. It often shows itself where Congressmen squander the people's money for public building out of all proportion to wisdom used by local business men. It comes from Congressmen swapping votes to build up their local political fences, each helping the other at the coat of the people. It comes also in building unnecessary; naval and military stations at fabulous sums of money.

"The absurdity and the crime of this is not confined to the North or to the republicans. Examples of such robbery are shown where a fifty-thousand dollar public building was erected in Vernal, Utah, which has only 836 people in it. Another costing $107,000 was built in Jasper, Alabama, a town of 2,500 people. Another costing $38,000 was erected in Gadsden, Alabama, a town of 10,000 people. Scores of other examples could be given where the people's money has been spent to raise the price of real estate for speculators and to raise votes for politicians.

"On my honor I would try to stop it. The folly of the present method of Congressional distribution of seeds is apparent to all. At an average of ten cents per package for seeds to each of the Texas voters, not to consider the rest of the United States, it would cost above $50,000, not to speak of practically as much more for cost of carriage. In my judgment all seeds should be sent out by the secretary of agriculture upon application of the people under certain prescribed rules, or upon suggestion of the State of Federal Agricultural agent. This method would insure seeds going to the right parties to be properly planted, and properly reported upon thereafter. It would perhaps keep some college student from getting seeds as they now do, a joke on the Congressional custom.

"We are Texans loyal to the heart. We are Americans to the last drop of blood. However, in the light of rapid transit means of travel and communication under mountains and streams, over oceans and sky, we are knit together as brothers of all the world. We are no longer isolated. We must think world thoughts. As an individual man is neighbor to another across the street, so is America neighbor to every country of the world. Neither the man nor America can shake a neighbor's responsibility. The laws of social life of the one become the laws of international life for the other.

"This interrelated character of modern nations teaches that the progress of the world halts when any part of it goes to war. Progress follows peace. Without peace there can be no church, or school or crop or growth of art or other industries upon which the home depends.

"For many years from many platforms I have pleaded the gospel of peace among all nations as the product of wise treaties through diplomacy. I have urged the moral equivalents of war as seen in the manifold industries of men. I abhor militarism and its consequent undemocratic ideals, nor will I ever from these principles depart.

"My constant hope and belief are that war has reached its climax across the seas. However, that hope need not blind us to the fact that in pursuance of our neutral rights and approved well-known customs of international law, we have offended the Germans and her allies, the English and her allies, the Mexicans and the Columbians.

"This makes a condition and not a theory. I therefore, waive my primary judgment as to preparedness and go with President Wilson in an effort to maintain the peace of the world. In doing this I do not surrender my individuality by truckling to the president. I follow his leadership for two reasons: (1) An executive deals with foreign affairs which can not always be made public. Mr. Wilson pleaded for greater preparedness and urged that it be started at once; (2) one of the weaknesses of the democratic party is the lack of coherence of its members. Therefore, as a good democrat, loyal to the party and willing to follow its chosen leader, when no fundamental principle of conscience is involved, I do this knowing that there will be increased cost of maintenance, but the confidence that the burden will not be put in stamp taxes upon the poor, rather income taxes on the rich.

"Such preparedness will call for some increase of the army and navy by voluntary enlistment. I suggest that as young men do not usually enter the army and navy to make it a life work, there should be something taught them other than catching the step, climbing a mast or firing a gun. Let them learn some useful industry or mechanical art. It need not hurt their warlike efficiency but will equip them for self-support and social service when they return to civil life. They can learn the manufacture as well as the use of war goods. It would add to the probability of teaching to soldiers and sailors the moral equivalent of war.

"After Judge Brooks spoke, Judge A. H. Carrigan, who presided at the Brooks meeting, introduced Hon. Daniel E. Garrett of Houston, candidate for one of the places as congressman-at-large, saying that his democracy was unassailable, and that his record when a congressman for conscientious service could not be surpassed.

Mr. Garrett warned his hearers not to expect a speech from him, as he was only there through the courtesy of Dr. Brooks, and would limit his remarks to a very few minutes. He described himself as a thorough Woodrow Wilson man and supporter of the measures of his administration. He said that when he had been elected to congress in 1912 he had not promised to make a bright and shining light during his first term, but he had promised faithful service, and cited his record in answering roll calls during that term of congress as proof that he had fulfilled that promise. He answered ninety out of ninety-seven contested roll calls, he said, the best record of the house. In the campaign of 1914 he had stayed at the post of duty during the campaign despite an almost unquarable desire to return to Texas. He did not believe that the democracy of Texas meant for him to be defeated by the small margin he was beaten by in 1914. He recalled the fact that he had gotten a large vote in Wichita Falls and Wichita county in both campaigns, for which he thanked the people here, and promised if elected again that he would render the same conscientious service he did before.

The Reputation of the Maxwell

WHAT is the bore and stroke of your motor," was asked a Maxwell owner not long ago.

"I don't know," he replied simply, "I don't buy cars on figures any more. I buy them on what they've done."

For this man, and for many others like him, it was enough that during the thirteen strenuous years the Maxwell record for performance, reliability and economy had swept it to the front.

Figures—engine speed figures, horse-power figures, wheel-base figures—they meant nothing to him. The name "Maxwell" carried more weight than all the technical description that could be offered.

Maxwell cars have achieved this great good will and this priceless position with the public only by their unequalled record of things done. What is said of an automobile in its specifications is one matter. What the car actually does in the hands of owners, year after year, is another matter.

The Maxwell car has won its position through sheer merit. It has set record after record in competition with cars of all prices and classes.

Everything considered, the Maxwell is the safe investment. It is a known, tried and proved product. It will serve you as it is serving and has served countless others.

Let us arrange for a demonstration today. You will be under no obligation. We want to give you a chance to convince yourself.

Market Report

Chicago Grain. Chicago, June 14.—Wheatness developed in the wheat market today owing to the fact that Liverpool quotations were unresponsive to yesterday's advance. The opening which was 3/8 to 1/2 lower to a shade advance with July at 1.04 to 1.04 and September at 1.05 1/2 to 1.05 1/2, was followed by slight net gains. There was a general advance after opening 3/8 to 1/2 to 5/8 higher corn prices receded from yesterday's gain. Wheat closed unsettled to 1 1/2 to 1 5/8 with July at 1.02 5/8 and September at 1.04 5/8.
New York Cotton. New York, June 14.—The cotton market only partly responded to weakness in Liverpool today and after opening steady at a decline of 1/8 to 5/8 points ruled within a point of two of the opening figures during the early trading and then slightly advanced to 12 1/2 to 13 points net high of shortly after midday with October advancing to 12 1/2 and December to 13.02.
Cotton closed steady. July 12 1/2; October 12 1/2; December 13.03; January 13.09; March 13.25.
Fort Worth Livestock. Fort Worth, Tex., June 14.—Cattle receipts 4,500, active and steady. Beaves $6.50 and $8.75. Hog receipts 2,500, active and steady. Sheep receipts 1,900, active and steady; lambs $9 to $9.75.
FINED $200 FOR VAGRANCY SENTENCE IS SUSPENDED. A two hundred dollar fine for vagrancy was fastened on A. J. Patterson, alias Denver Slim by Judge Whitelaw this morning in the police court. Slim was picked up by the police on the streets a day or two ago. It was thought by the police that he might have charges graver than vag to face, but having no evidence against him the above fine was awarded him and suspended provided he leaves town on the recommencement of the term. City attorney R. Nutt gave the defendant a stiff lecture, warning him to leave town within sixty minutes and never come back or he would have to serve the fine out in jail. A brother of Slim was fined $50 for intoxication and $45 of it suspended on the condition that he leave town and stay away.

STORM CAUSES DAMAGE IN VICINITY OF OLNEY

Sunday evening at about 9:30 Olney and territory for several miles west was visited by one of the severest hail and rain storms of recent years. The present reports it appears that the Padgett and Elbert community got the brunt of it, although hail fell in Olney as large as golf balls. The hail was accompanied by heavy wind and rain. Several sheds were blown down and the roof of a large barn was blown off. Uncle Dad Arnett's wagon shed roof also passed him and was making for the cellar. Mr. J. T. Miller, of the Padgett community, reported the worst damage in a strip about half a mile wide by three miles long, just east of Olney. The storm was accompanied by heavy wind and rain. Several sheds were blown down and the roof of a large barn was blown off.

The preparation seems to be somewhat of a freak in its action, and those who are down and out, both men and women, would make no mistake in trying the Asa the Royal Drug Co. still selling two dollar bottles for one dollar. 27-7tp

OUR FIRST DUTY

You owe it to the citizenship and to your friends who love and trust you to assist us in making these sacred grounds the most beautiful place within our city limits. Mr. Bryan said he would not go on the floor with a proxy but might speak to the delegates if invited. Mr. Bryan, since his arrival here early yesterday has been busy receiving callers, his room at democratic headquarters being constantly thronged with visitors.

Overwork, strains, colds and other causes injure the kidneys and generally when their activity is lessened, the whole body suffers. Aches and pains and languor and urinary ills frequently come and there is an ever increasing tendency towards dropsy, gravel or fatal Bright's disease. When the kidneys fail there is no real help for the sufferer except kidney help.
