MILITARY MISSION REPORTS A GENERAL ADVANCE OF
RED FORCES

REDS NEGOTIATING WITH GERMAN DELEGATION

General Romer, Polish Commander
Has Been Relieved of Command
By General Heller

By Associated Press
PARIS, July 31.—Bolshevik cavalry forces have advanced to the east Prussian frontier, according to a report from the French military mission in Warsaw to the French foreign office. The Bolshevik line extends from Suwalki, 50 miles northwest of Grodno, more than 60 miles to a point almost directly north of Warsaw. The Bolsheviks have not actually crossed the borders of Allenstein and Marienwerder, but are fraternizing with the Germans.

The mission says it understands the Germans and Bolsheviks are negotiating at Suwalki, the northern wing of the Bolshevik army is now menacing Warsaw directly from the north as well as from the east. The Bolsheviks now are 25 miles southwest of Bialystok.

The allied troops in Allenstein and Marienwerder, who are mostly French, are still with them until their actions clear, although their preliminary tasks will have been completed.

General Romer, commander of the first Polish army which suffered most severely in the vital region northeast of Warsaw, has been relieved and General Joseph Haller has been given command of the northern group of armies.

The advancement of General Haller, who commanded the Polish divisions in France and is French-trained, is the first step in the reorganization of the Polish army which was begun by the Anglo-French mission yesterday. All the important names of French officers being placed over the French officers and advisers and large authority has been placed with all the staffs.

On the Galician front a Polish counter-offensive is being organized. Three Polish armistice delegates left Warsaw yesterday. They are General Romer, Colonel Boleslaw, who negotiated the armistice with the Bolsheviks at Mszana, and M. Wroblewski, vice minister of the council of Finland and the Russian Soviet government.

Democrats in Washington Feel His Election Would Cause State Set-Back

Special to The Times
WASHINGTON, July 31.—Texans in Washington are much surprised and also chagrined in the gubernatorial primaries. They do not understand why Bailey should be in the lead with so many good Texans in the race.

If Bailey wins in the first race in the run-off, the consensus of opinion of most of the Texans here is that the state will receive a set-back, for while it may long be a matter of record that Bailey's victory will be a repudiation of the Wilson administration in Texas, which has always stood staunchly by Mr. Wilson, and all his policies, the Texans here declare,

Mr. Bailey has been one of the most active, if not the most, of Mr. Wilson among all the democrats, not only in Congress but in the state legislature, and other senators who have been practically read out of their party.

Representing all that seems opposed to progress and good government, Bailey's election undoubtedly would cause little comment among all the democrats in the country. Mr. Bailey is the most persistent advocate in Texas of the saloon and with the saloon has always been arrayed all the forces of disorder and lawlessness. With the saloon put out of business, Bailey now leaves the saloon and poker, gambling and horse-racing are the Hite brothers of the liquor traffic and Bailey has long been a fancier in fine horses.

There is no more persistent foe of woman suffrage in the United States than the former senator. He has the way he has been allowed to retain the same political privileges that he himself enjoys—a position contrary to all the dictates of fair play, and political justice.

In short, say the Texans here who will greatly regret Bailey's election as governor of Texas, he is a man who is a bore to the electorate. If he is chosen governor, will have cause to regret it later. The fact is only one or two Texans here, out of hundreds, can be found who hope that Bailey will succeed in capturing the governorship. Some of them regard such a candidacy as a calamity for the good old Long Star State.

Co-operation of Farmers and Business Men in Four Cities of County Urged In Restoring Agriculture

Twenty men, representing the interests of Wichita Falls, Burk Burnett, Iowa Park and Electra have taken upon their shoulders the burden of restoring agriculture to its proper place as the king industry of Wichita county.

Action toward this end was taken by the members of the chamber of commerce Friday night, when five delegates from this city were named to co-operate with five men each from Iowa Park, Electra and Burk Burnett in campaign to give moral and financial support to the county's farmers. The action followed the organization of the business council which toured the county Friday day, and found interest in agricultural pursuits falling like the mercury in the thermometer on a winter's day.

"At least 30 per cent of the land in Wichita county that was once farmed is now lying idle," reported James M. Cox, of the town of Electra. "In Burk Burnett, not a single farming implement is being handled for sale. There is so little interest in wheat-farming that the Wichita Mill and Elevator Co. will not open its Burk Burnett elevator this year. Out of about one town alone 16 carloads of melons used to be shipped daily during the melon season; now there isn't a carload."

The farmers are disheartened. Their fences have been torn down, and their lands cut up and injured by the ceaseless travel of oil trucks and teams.

Herbert Voelker, A. W. Burnsides, W. J. Daugherty and Hubert Harrison supported the statements of Willis.

"This is the biggest thing the business community can do for agriculture," said Willis. "The campaign will be a losing one unless we can get the farmer to stand by us."

Close advisers of the governor were emphasizing that the speech would be the nominee's own work, through the medium of the League of Nations and charged that "powerful international interests" were preparing to finance liberally the democratic campaign.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 31.—Governor James M. Cox, today expects to put finishing touches to his speech accepting the democratic nomination. He promised this morning that the writing would be done before the League of Nations' session begins.

The speech will be a long one.

SATURDAY, JULY 31, 1926.

The national campaign this year will be influenced largely if not decisively by what New York does. The republican campaign is largely predicated upon holding what they got there four years ago and the democrats are holding their horses for success on considering New York, Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin and New Jersey with the West and the South furnishing the remainder of the electoral vote needed. The democrats are going to get in New York this year a vote they have been without for a number of years—the upstate democratic vote which, disgusted with Tammany, has been voting independently. This vote will go with Franklin D. Roosevelt, whom it considers its leader, and it will return to the democratic fold this year because for one thing, Roosevelt is the vice-presidential nominee. If Tammany does its duty and what it says it is going to do, New York is reasonably safe as in the democratic column this year; and Tammany's unquestioned loyalty to Governor Smith, whom it desires above all things to re-elect, is guarantees of Tammany's sincerity, for it probably will need the up-state vote to elect Smith as well as to elect democratic electors. Roosevelt will add strength to the ticket in every Eastern state among the independents, not because he is an independent, for he has preserved his party loyalty faithfully; but because they know what he stands for and believe he stands for that which is right. Some political writers are drawing the parallel between the campaign of 1880 as showing striking similarity between the part played by Arthur and to be played this year by Roosevelt. Arthur's strength and personal popularity in New York elected the republican ticket by giving it New York's electoral vote. Roosevelt's strength and personal popularity is counted on to aid the strength and popularity of Governor Cox in bringing New York state back into the democratic fold, where it has played a decisive part in many of the elections in which the democrats have won.

Both Thomason and Looney are out in unequivocal statements supporting Neff in the run-off and, although that is as most of us expected, it has demonstrated again that Thomason and Looney are men of real caliber, who refuse to let a personal resentment obscure the bigger question involved in this run-off—which is the welfare of the state. Looney regards Bailey as "any other enemy who has tried to destroy the democratic party." Thomason announcing he will vote for Neff, places "the interest of the state and the success of the democratic party above everything else." There will be Thomason supporters and Looney supporters—a few of them at any rate—who will go back to Bailey, where they were before. But the rank and file of the Thomason and Looney support will get in behind Neff, with more or less avidity, simply because Bailey stands against the things for which Thomason and Looney and Neff all stand and for the things they oppose. Neff himself made it a bit hard for some of the Thomason backers to accept him graciously; but with Crane and Johnson and Campbell and dozens of the other Thomason leaders, even Thomason himself accepting him in good faith and pledging their support, there is no good reason why both Thomason and Looney supporters in overwhelming majority should not be found working for Neff in this run-off primary and against Bailey.

Sir Thomas Lipton is a good sport.
This was Sir Thomas' fourth unsuccessful effort to lift the America's yacht cup, and when the Resolute had flashed across the line and had won the fifth and deciding race, the gallant Irishman said out loud, "I am very sorry, but the best boat won." He had spent millions in the sportsmanlike effort to take back the cup; when he failed, as he had failed thrice before, he had no excuse to offer, no "alibi" to give—he had merely to say that the best boat won. Americans can take off their caps to Sir Thomas.

REGARDING RATE REGULA- TION AND OTHER MATTERS

Editor, The Times:

I have read with a great deal of interest your editorial in Monday's Times regarding the wide difference in prices in different localities and the efforts being made to hinder and delay production of the more important commodities. This is too important a question politically and otherwise to be passed over.

In my opinion, after a number of years experience with practically every phase of transportation, I am glad to say and believe future developments will plainly show that the real cause of the price differences in the settled channels of trade movement are compared with that which obtained a generation ago, was the law against railroad rebates.

Before the passage of laws which prevented the payment of railroad rebates, which in the case of the grain market is that a country station would load a car with 40,000 pounds of grain and unload to the first rebate elevator, which was leased to the wholesaler by the railroad company, to be unloaded, released properly graded for sale, the cars properly repaired to avoid damage and the grain car loaded to full capacity, in the case of a 40,000 car meant 40,000 pounds. For this service the man who got the rebate received about three cents per bushel, much less than the country elevator man, who had less expense.

By reason of the fact that the railroads leased the terminal elevators, the roads retained control of the policy of the operators of these elevators. I have seen grain shipped from Missouri river points to New Orleans and sold for six cents less than the published tariff rates plus Missouri river prices. This was due to the general competition in transportation at that time and was due to the general freight agent who failed to keep his company in the running. It is true that, the railroads made every effort to see that each line got an even share of the freight traffic existing, and would do so, but selling at 14 cents in Greeley, Colo., and 25 to 33 cents in Wichita Falls; eggs would not be selling at 28 cents retail at Wichita Falls, and 45 to 60 cents at Wichita Falls, Texas; bacon would not be selling at 28 cents retail choice cuts with hog prices 18 cents.

The railroad companies would set up refrigeration services put on between points where there was a big price difference and I personally observe the details of the departments of railroads which handled such traffic. In all business men who could thereby send commodities of the section outside by the railroad company.

And bear in mind that the railway companies paid rebates because it saved them money to do so. They had lower claims for shortage by reason of grain left in the car, which was one-half freight at full rated capacity instead of half in some cases; they were able to keep fully advised as to communicated movement of grain by knowing how much their terminal elevator had bought for ten days or twenty days shipment and were in this way enabled to avoid congestion, their competitor's hold on service. They could handle much more traffic with fewer cars, certain terminal elevators generally sold a certain quantity, and any place on the system a car was spotted was easy to designate its destination and thus eliminated the confusion and disorganization which now prevails in the railroads.

In other cases I have seen a section of country twenty to thirty miles wide have a drought. Instead of sacrificing their live stock, the general freight agent would make a special tariff to the drought stricken point and save the section from disaster. Now that the grain moves to the terminal and from there to a port nearly double the freight, and the live stock man goes bankrupt.

Remove all legal restrictions of every kind and you will naturally have true competition which is as much of a detriment to us as is too much legal restriction. But there is a reasonable suspicion, but not point, that conditions balance like a pair of scales.

Public regulation is generally a detriment and merely increases many times the price of a commodity which is intended to be regulated, or increases the price charged for a service by a trade or occupation.

Let the free railroads for public vehicles run with a toll charge with hard surface roads between tracks for automobiles, or allow the railroads to pay rebates so they can develop real competition in transportation.

Why should we pay a perpetual transportation tax to New York when the railroads are paying a toll which should allow me to take my 30-ton truck fitted with flange wheels and by using trailers haul 30 tons of wheat to Galveston for a slight toll and a very small gasoline cost for power. Go further and utilize your
