Echoes From Local Pulpits

SUNDAY MORNING AT FIRST METHODIST CHURCH

At the Sunday morning service at the First Methodist church, Mr. Bingham spoke from the text: "I Will Lift Up My Eyes Unto the Hills." Psalm 121:1. He said in part:

"It is generally held by those who are competent to judge, that this psalm was written by one who was far away from Palestine; a prisoner in distant Babylon. If that be so, it gives a new significance to the words which are our text this morning. For Babylon was a level country, a land of vast and monotonous expanse, and it was out of the dreariness of such a land that the psalmist sent his thought like a swift bird, to the hills which he had loved to look on once, and which were dyed with the memories of home."

"When I was attending Yale, a good many years ago, one of the tutors lay dying of cancerous disease. It was an inner of perfect warmth and beauty, and every meadow was a haunt of dreams. But the dying man was a native of Iceland, and amid all the glory of those days, the cry on his lips was to get back to Iceland, just that he might see the snow again. That same feeling breathes in our verse this morning: 'To the hills will I lift up mine eyes.' The writer was an exile, far from home; he was in a land where everything was strange, and what did it matter to him though Babylon was fairer than the country of his birth? The hills of his homeland was calling him."

"The mountains have always had a message and a call. Mr. Ruskin, in his modern painters, has called attention to a suggestive fact, in that the greatest painters of the Holy Family have always a hint of the mountains in the distance. They suggest to us the thought of the heights, the upward leading, the call that comes from on high. It is to man as a being with a soul, with a cry in his heart for things that are above him. That is why Zeiss in the old pagan days came down to speak to men upon Mount Ida. That is why genius painted Jesus Christ throws in its faint suggestion of the peaks."

PEACE IS SUBJECT OF SERMON BY REV. TITTEL

Morning and evening services were well attended at the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday and nine new members received during the morning hour of worship. Rev. J. P. Tittel, pastor, preached the sermon.

He spoke in a somewhat patriotic vein, using peace as his central thought. He cited the periods of peace that have followed those of war as being the kinds of peace that man has evolved, and sought to impress on his hearers the fact that a peace prompted by love and based on the principles of Christ was the only peace that could endure.

PRESENT POLITICAL SITUATION.

Texas democrats ought to be interested in these outstanding facts about Governor Cox's acceptance of the democratic nomination and should apply them, as loyal democrats, to the present political situation in Texas.
 Cox makes the League of Nations the paramount issue of the campaign. "The question is," he said, "whether we shall or shall not join in this practical and humane movement."
 As the democratic candidate, I favor going in.
 Cox favors equal suffrage. He declared that women "are entitled to the privilege of voting as a matter of right and because they will be helpful in maintaining wholesome and patriotic policy."
 Cox is a progressive democrat. "We want a change," he said, "from the old world of yesterday."
 We want a change from the old industrial world where the man who toiled was assured of a "full dinner pail" as his only lot and portion. We stand at the forks of the road. One leads to higher citizenship, a freer expression of the individual and a fuller life for all. The other leads to reaction, the rule of the few over the many, and the restriction of the average man's chances to grow upward.
 Cox paid a graceful and gracious tribute to President Wilson.
 Cox tracks the San Francisco platform on the labor question. He approves of "collective bargaining," and believes that "we should not by law abridge a man's right either to labor or quit his employment." In disputes between labor and capital the government should occupy an impartial position—so that it may be in position to give justice without prejudgment in favor of either labor or capital.
 Cox would reduce tenantry among farmers, help increase production, promote co-operative selling and purchasing, establish municipal markets and regulate the cold storage companies.
 Cox commends the Federal Reserve Act as the greatest factor in America's war efforts next to the personal sacrifices of the people. He takes pride in this "democratic achievement," which was enacted "against the protests of the bitter republican standpatners," and against the protests of democratic standpatners, too.
 Cox has the greatest faith in America's war efforts next to the personal sacrifices of the people. He takes pride in this "democratic achievement," which was enacted "against the protests of the bitter republican standpatners," and against the protests of democratic standpatners, too.

Cox urges even further laws for the conservation of children by "the prevention of child labor," and for other laws for the protection of humanity from corporate and commercial greed.
 We believe Texas democrats are in line with the San Francisco platform and with the position thereon of the democratic nominees. Further specifications are unnecessary.

Anti-suffragists declare there isn't a chance for ratification in North Carolina, a special session of whose legislature is to convene this month, and probably they are correct, although there is a powerful sentiment in the Tar-Heel state for suffrage with a majority of the congressmen, the governor and at least one of the senators openly urging ratification of the Anthony amendment. If North Carolina falls, there is still Tennessee to fall back on for a democratic state to get the credit for being the thirty-sixth to ratify, and Governor Roberts, renominated in the recent primary on his espousal of the ratification cause, promptly called the special session Saturday to meet the following Monday (August 9) to consider ratification. Suffragists and anti's have put forth every effort possible in Tennessee to secure or to prevent ratification, respectively, just as they did in Louisiana, Alabama, Virginia, Maryland, Georgia, Connecticut, Vermont, Delaware and the other states. In some of which one side won and in others of which the other. Anti-suffragists do not question the inevitability of universal suffrage; they all concede that. But for some reason or other they have figuratively moved heaven and earth to prevent completion of ratification in time to enfranchise all the women this year and if their predictions are good in North Carolina, Tennessee will be the last chance for ratification this year, before November. Vermont, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Florida are the four states whose legislatures will not meet until next year and whose Governors for one reason or another—in Florida he cannot—have refused to call special sessions to consider ratification of the Nineteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution.

The plight of several South Texas counties of not having the funds for meeting the expenses of a second primary brings up a question that some legislature must solve if it is to continue the second primary system. The assessment against candidates for state and district offices is limited to a dollar, but the "polling" the limit for county and precinct candidates, and although most of the counties do not use the second primary for county and precinct run-offs, the plurality rule serving, it is upon these candidates that the burden of paying for the run-off primary falls, and the assessments are getting very burdensome, especially in the larger counties where there are many election boxes and a heavy vote. There is no good reason why the local candidates should be called on to meet this expense. But the county committees, up against a situation they must meet, use the only means at hand for raising election expense money and dump it off on the local candidates, who are "good fellows" usually and accustomed to being imposed on in such ways and who, therefore, do not complain out loud. The second primary, we think, is good in both principle and practice. It prevents coherent minorities controlling majorities, and it makes officials represent a majority of the voters of the party. But if the second primary is to be continued, some fair way of meeting its cost should be evolved so it does not fall upon candidates who in a majority of the counties are not directly concerned at all in the run-off result, their contests having been settled in the first.

We don't know how and we imagine Texas candidates would like information in detail on that point. But they do it differently in Oklahoma. Senator Gore's campaign expenditures in his recent losing fight totaled $1,370 and his opponent, Scott Ferris, spent $558. Candidates for governor in Texas spend from $8,000 downward to a minimum of $5,000 and there are county and district candidates by the hundreds in a majority of the counties, are not directly concerned at all in the run-off result, their contests having been settled in the first.

When Bailey committees are willing to pay their money for display advertising space to disseminate a circular against Bailey, it ought to convince most folks of the real purpose behind those "red" circulars, which allegedly are put out in behalf of Neff, who has denounced the circulars, their authors and distributors.
 Final figures put Bailey's lead over Neff at 1,852. It is something, but for a man who has been an occupant of the highest honor within the gift of the people of Texas and who has been a notable figure nationally, it isn't much running against a man whose only elective position he ever held was county attorney.

WILLIAMS DEFENDS CREDIT LIMITATION.
 (Fort Worth Record.)

Asserting that while the application by the federal reserve bank of brakes on credit had had a jarring effect on some nervous systems, John Skilton Williams, controller of the currency, said today that the business conditions throughout the country afforded abundant reasons for "confidence and encouragement in the future."
 Mr. Williams said that the reserve banks in largely depriving non-essential and luxuries from the use of credit was said by Mr. Williams to have had a very beneficial effect. Reports showed the bank adding he believed the credit restrictions were responsible for such declines in prices as have come.
 Mr. Williams said there was a prevalent pessimism which was unwarranted in that the banks were in a "particularly well-fortified position."
 He cited figures in reports on the last national bank call, June 26, to show that there were increases in loans by banks in only two sections, the eastern and western districts. The currency controller attacked New York banks for exacting an interest charge ranging as high as 15 per cent. He said the only ones in the country charging such interest rates, which he believed to be burdensome on business as well as without jurisdiction for their excessiveness. These banks, Mr. Williams said, have been obtaining credit from the federal reserve banks at less than 6 per cent.
 "Those inclined to pessimistic views as to the financial situation," Mr. Williams continued, "probably do not know or do not appreciate the, immensely significant fact that our federal reserve banks have an unimpaired lending power of $250,000,000 at this time. If the occasion required the board could, by waiving reserve requirements, double and notes only 10 per cent increase the unused lending power to $250,000,000, which is 25 times as much as all of the national banks ever borrow at one time on the call of the federal reserve banks prior to 1913. In the face of such figures and facts as these, the fear expressed in some sections that there may not be money enough available to meet the crops seem manifestly absurd."

 Puds Simkins was setting on his front steps eating a apple with me and Sid Hunt and Leroy Shooter watching him, and we all asked him for the core and Puds said, "How am I going to give one core to 3 fellows?"
 "There's 3 bites in a core if you leave enough," said Leroy Shooter.
 "I can't give a fellow a hole core I don't want to give him any. I'm no title wad, and Puds, I'll tell you what I do, I'll give it to the one asks me the price."
 "Which we started to do, Sid Hunt saying, "Hay, Puds, you're a good fellow, will you mind please saving me the core?"
 "You're the generous fello around here, Puds, would you mind please saving me the core, if you don't mind," said Leroy Shooter.
 "There's nothing mean about you, Puds, and I always get it, too, how do you about please leaving me the core, Puds, if you don't get any objections and it's all the same to you?" I said.
 "The, said Puds, and he quick at the core himself, Sid Hunt saying, "Hay, you big guy, how am I going to get you dery soked, that was a heck of a trick and you're just the one would do it, too, said Leroy Shooter."
 "I always get it, you was the meanest fello around here and now I know it, I said.
 "Aw, wat do I care. I didn't believe you'd get it, and you was the one, which maybe he didn't."

 Lines for an American.
 I hold to this: My country needs the very finest of my deeds, On me forever she depends To be the staunchest of her friends; If I desert, then to her name I bring a torch of needless shame.
 She trusts me where'er I be, And by that trusts has set me free; I speak her thoughts, for in her school I learned to know her code of rules, And what in me is good or ill Strangers translate into her will.
 I face the wide world as a man Stamped with the brand, American; My country shall have judgment, too; Therefore, straightforward I must be, That she may meet no shame through me.

THE ILLITERACY DIGEST.

By C. F. C.
 Off the Fence at Last.
 We met two men upon the street; Their conversation we repeat:
 The first man said: "Take it from me, My little ball's going to drop." For Bailey and the open shop, No matter if Joe's record's bad, I'm voting for that Bailey lad; Ability don't count, you see.
 "This just a case of Open Shop, Joe Bailey's not a warrior bold, And during war times he was cold To patriotic pleas as such." In fact, Joe got in rather Dutch, But little things like that are tissue. "Compared to our Great Local Issue."
 The second man said, sadly, "Stop! Misguided friend, you're full of hop!"
 How Many Do You Know?
 The United States department of Justice, after a campaign lasting over a year, has convicted 150 persons of profiteering out of 1,854 arrested and 1,499 indicted by a grand jury. Why, gosh all hemlocks! We could go out this instant and in half an hour point out 150 profiteers among our acquaintances!

How do Neff and Bailey stand on educational matters, anyway? Or don't they? Which?
 Hey, Boss! Didn't Mean It!
 "That this is true, just bet a dime It is as true as fate; The boss is always down on time The day that you are late."
 —Luke McLuke.
 That verse above just tickles me; Each day I'm fit as I can be, I don't apologize at all, But hang my hat upon the wall And chew upon this morning manna— The Boss is home in Indiana!
 They Didn't Know the Irish.
 "The house of commons, by an overwhelming majority, passed the Irish coereign bill, designed to restore order in Ireland," says a late cable dispatch. Restored order in Ireland! Ho, ho, ho! How England will have its job!

Joe Is Too Well Known.
 Joe Bailey's followers have adopted the slogan: "We know where Bailey stands." This same knowledge constitutes the Neff objections to Bailey.
 A Divined Notification.
 "Cox is notified of his nomination,"—headlines in Buffalo Bill could have had better time than that with his pony express.
 The Doggone Coward!
 We have lost our faith in mankind. Who would have thought that fighting fool, Pancho Villa, would quit!

Johnson, at Least, Got His!
 And the Mexican government gives the hands a state and a personal guard of fifty men for the rest of his lifetime. This is not the same treatment another outlaw, Jack Johnson, received when he decided to surrender to his government.

WHY?

Is the Thistle the Emblem of Scotland?
 (Copyright, 1920, by Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)
 One of the military rules of the early Danes was that it was cowardly to attack an enemy during the night and, because of this, the Scotch did not consider it necessary to keep a watch during their encounters with the invading army from Denmark. Sunset was supposed to mark the close of all hostilities for the day, in spite of the fact that the Danes and the Scotch were unknown in those days.
 On one occasion, however, the Danes defeated the Scotch and determined to launch an onslaught against one of the Scotch strongholds. They crept, barefooted, noiseless, unobserved—until one of them set his foot upon a thistle and cried out with pain. The alarm was given, the Scotch fell upon the invaders and defeated them with terrific slaughter, shortly afterward adopting the thistle as their emblem and adding the motto, "No one wounds me with impunity."
 The date of the "thistle battle" is not precisely known, but it far antedates the founding of the Order of the Thistle, also known as the Order of St. Andrew and the national emblem of Scotland in the inventory of the effects of James III of Scotland appears upon the coins of James IV, V and VI.
 The Scotch are diamonds sold by the "carat!"

Side Talks

By RUTH CAMERON
 The Things That Tire Us.
 A neighbor of mine was criticizing one of the members of the Ladies' Aid to the Red Cross. She would be on a committee to help with the Church supper and wash the dishes.
 "I guess she could if she wanted to all right," said said, "she says she's ever able to do anything for the rest of that allright trip to her daughter's every once in a while—I guess she isn't so delicate as she thinks."
 Now, of course, this criticism may have been just the woman may have merely fancied that she wasn't able to do something she didn't enjoy doing. Most of us deceive ourselves that way now and then.
 Different People, Different Strengths.
 But on the other hand, the criticisms may have been entirely unjust. The woman may have been able to do the one thing and not the other. Different people have different kinds of strength and weakness.
 For instance, I know a woman who has been a semi-invalid for years. She lives within a few miles of a large and beautiful city, but she has not been into that city in 12 years. A good deal of the time this woman has a maid to help her with the housework, but she is able to do the rest of it. She finds herself on her own resources and in these periods she is able to do the work for a family of five. Now, one would think that doing all the work of a family of five would be more tiring than going to town or to church or to the theatre or to buy a gown. But isn't it to this woman doing the housework for a week alluring than the trip to town, there can be no question of self-streets there.
 Could Wash But Not Stand There.
 Again I know two sisters, one of whom does the housework for her family while the other works in a shop. The one who does the housework was asked to help out in the shop during the Christmas rush and tried to, but she got so tired she had to give it up. "How they stand up all day without being ready to drop, I can't see," she said.
 In another occasion, the other sister tried to do the housework for a week and almost died over the family washing. "I felt as if I wanted to go to bed for a week after I got that done," she said. "How Emily stands longer that old tub and rinking out those clothes! The shop's a rest after that, I'll say."

It was just a question in that case of the kind of strength each had developed.
 Confusion Tries This Woman.
 The dearest old lady I know can walk a mile as surely as a young one, but she cannot stand going out to evening gathering because the talking confuses her so.
 Perhaps that was the trouble with the woman my neighbor criticized.
 It is very hard to tell about such things, but one can remember how tired one sometimes gets oneself over things one's neighbor takes easily—and give one's neighbor the benefit of the doubt as to whether she is troubled the same way.
 It was just a question in that case of the kind of strength each had developed.

RIPPLING RHYMES

By WALT MASON
 My Ticket.
 I'll vote for Cox and Harding when comes election day, and thus avoid regarding the good times on the way; they stand, in seemly manner for our old spangled banner, from Portland to Savannah, let's sound our loud hooray. I'll vote for Hox and Carding for presidential jobs; I want to see them guarding our sacred thingumbobs; when these two are elected our rights will be respected, our wrongs will be corrected, and we'll cut out the sobs. The ticket's surely regal, the smoothest thing in view; well may our famous eagle rear up and scream a few; they're men of reputation, who've won our admiration, and they will sweep the nation from Waco to Wahoo. I cheer for Card and Hoxing through-out the busy day, when I am busy boxing my odes to ship away; and in my sleep I'm dreaming of faces proudly beaming and eagles bravely screaming upon election day. When they're declared the winners the rich will go to jail, the poor will have their dinners and every kind of kale; if coal we'll have our bin full; we'll all be glad and grateful, the pitfalls of the sinful will never more avail. So rise up, men and brothers, rise up, of one accord; Rise, sisters, aunts and mothers, and vote in every ward. Let's gain the full fruition of every high ambition and lay the opposition, all stricken—on the ward!

THE SECRET OF HER CHARM LIES IN GIVING

ELSIE FERGUSON

It is not often that an interviewer is given an opportunity to view a celebrated star from every angle. It happened once, however, during the time of the great blizzard which visited New York and environs during the early Spring. On the Atlantic City board walk two theaters announced her name, and though the storm threatened to commit greater damage than it had already wrought, persons from the neighboring hotels ventured out in the afternoon to see her latest photoplay, "His House in Order." The little theater was chilly and damp and during the hours in the music, which, by the way was no more than a piano played by a young woman, one could hear the waves beat and crash with the astounding force against the pier.

Secret of a Charm.

The secret of Miss Ferguson's charm lies in giving. By this I mean that whatever she chooses to do in the pictures as well as on the dramatic stage, there is always an underlying theme of spirituality which carries one's imagination out of the sordidness of things. Her's is a gift to inspire and lift others to higher planes. The spirit of sacrifice which has always permeated her character portrayals is one of the strongest and most appealing qualities of her artistic achievement. By no means is this rare quality of uplift forced upon one in a preachy sense. Her photoplays do carry morals, but not the kind that obviously set out to teach a lesson to the audience. Her subtle and individual style of acting dominates all situations and while one does not realize that one is being uplifted, by a helpful inspired story, the heroic purpose of her art is unconsciously absorbed. In all Miss Ferguson's photoplay dramas, threads of love and sacrifice are woven into the fabric of the story. Sometimes it is the love for a parent which caused her to sacrifice the man she wishes to marry, again it is the love for a child which brings out the beautiful mother instinct and in others it is the love for a man which causes her to sacrifice herself. But sacrifice for others is the motive of the themes which she best portrays, and because she actually lives in the characters, she creates the result is appealing and sincere.

Appeared on Stage.

That evening which was the opening night in Atlantic City for Miss Ferguson's personal appearance on the dramatic stage, after an absence of three years, was one long to be remembered. How the great audience which packed the theater managed to arrive there through the storm will always remain a mystery, but not a seat was vacant and many stood in the back. Miss Ferguson's appearance on the stage was met with enthusiastic applause and those who had never seen her except on the screen marveled at her beauty, which is naturally lost to a considerable degree by the camera and the colorless black and white of the films. The deep well modulated tones in her voice lent added attraction to the already captivated screen admirers.

"Sacred and Profane Love" is a study of heart emotions. It is a play which brings out all the finer shadings of love and sacrifice of self, which only a woman possessed of great intellect and great understanding could attempt. Its theme is that of an emotional young girl who is thrown in contact with a romantic figure from the great world, a famous pianist, who has enraptured her with his music, the embodiment of all her artistic ideals. In a moment of tremendous emotion she casts aside conventional standards and commits an indiscretion. Seven years elapse and in the meantime she has become a successful novelist. The celebrated artist of the pianoforte whom she has not seen since the eventful meeting in her girlhood has given himself up to the habit of drugs, and appears to be a hopeless fiend. When the girl, Carlotta, hears about his condition, she hastens to him at once. Their meeting is very distressing, and to most persons his condition would appear beyond help, but to Carlotta he was something to love and help and she set about doing it without preamble. After months of tireless persistence she finally succeeds in curing him, and his reawakened ambition sets him back again as the celebrated genius. She sacrificed her career and social standing in order to rescue him, but the joy she felt in his new success more than compensated for her loss. Of course, they marry—and live happily ever after. The delicacy Miss Ferguson displayed in playing this difficult role was akin to genius. Had it been handled with less skill, the play would have lost its entire motive. In the play, as well as in her picture productions, she gives the human quality to the character and the spectator forgets that he is watching an imaginative character, so realistic and convincing is her art.

Talent Born of Sorrow.

Later that evening I was privileged to visit Miss Ferguson in her hotel suite. She had already retired when I arrived, and she explained that she had had a long, tedious day traveling through the storm in a delinquent train. She sat propped up in bed among many pillows, and while the maid herself putting away gowns and hats, she instructed another maid to order a light supper. She was very gay while all this was going on, and it was difficult to believe that she was the creator of the two tragic characters I had seen that afternoon and evening. But after supper was eaten she became more thoughtful, and again she was the Elsie Ferguson we see from our orchestra seat, reaching out always to life and its profound mysteries. In speaking of the characters she has chosen to depict on the screen and stage, she said, "I have always believed that talent is born of sorrow. Mothers who have known sacrifice and sorrow give something to their children which culminates into talent. Through their suffering, the child inherits a thoughtful, artistic nature. It is even borne out in history that the mothers of great men and women had tragedies in their lives which seemed to have blossomed into talents in their offspring. Art cannot be born of a happy easy going, thoughtless life, art is tragic and its inspiration must spring from grief. The modern woman, though she is very capable and efficient is not quite as apt to endow her children with talent as the mothers of a generation ago, because the average modern woman does not suffer or sacrifice herself. When things go wrong she adjusts them very capably in her own way, and the sorrow which would have been borne in silence by the 'old-fashioned' wife or mother has no part in her scheme of things. I honestly believe that there will be less real talent spring from the independent type of womanhood as time and conditions progress. I do not believe in martyrdom, and I abhor the type who suffers and pities herself for doing so, but the woman who really loves another so much that it is a pleasure to stand by and help to restore that person to worthy life again, or even fails in her purpose, as many do, I admire above all types. Love will work miracles if it is constant and unselfish."

Likes Serious Plays.

"I like the part I am playing in this drama because Carlotta is such a fine, noble creature. She is honest in her emotions and indefatigable in her devotion. Of course, one can not prescribe her methods to all persons, but as a character she is most interesting." Speaking of the type of stories Miss Ferguson usually chooses for her screen portrayals, she continued, "I believe every one, especially now, likes to see a serious plot with a thoughtful motive back of it. We all have suffered during the war, in one way or another, and we all have problems, and I have no doubt but that many persons derive help and comfort as well as entertainment from motion pictures. The letters I receive from motion picture 'fans' often reveal little human touches which convince me that the average person seeks relief from the strain of a busy day in the motion picture theater, and there, if he or she

SOME SIDELIGHTS ON HUMOR

It is interesting to note how our ideas of humor vary from year to year and from generation to generation. Let us glance rather sketchily at some of the humor of the past. The ancient Greeks derived their ideas of comedy from ideas sung at village revels held in honor of Dionysus, it is said. This it has its beginnings in the classic period and it is asserted that some of the original comedy situations evolved in those times are still popular, though in changed dress. Of course, there is not a great deal of variety to plot, but endless complications of situation may develop from a given set of persons, in their relations to one another. As time went on we passed or rather, our forefathers did—through the different forms of comedy and that which was regarded as exclusively funny at one time, in the light of succeeding events become very sad indeed. A great deal of humor is topical, based on current happenings or conditions and questions of the day. Old Time Humor. Thus, our earlier dramatic writers when they turned to comedy reflected the happenings of their time. In the days of the Greeks, no doubt, the proper way of wearing a toga or the doings of the Olympian dieties afforded mediums for jest. In the later periods of history, when war had not yet changed his wrinkled front, comedy suffered considerably from inanition. When it came into favor again, the traveling tale-teller brought his stories to the caravanseries for the delectation (?) of the assembled herdsmen, soldiers, tavern-loiterers, and such passing gentry as elected to put up for a night. This custom obtained in the Orient and the Occident as well. Came the more civilized ages and, more war and comedy only showed its face when there was an interstice so to speak in the steel armor of the world. Then the period of foppery, of affectation, of court intrigue and miming manners—and jesters in cap and bells who spoke the truth in jest and drew laughs where others would have achieved the rack or the stake if they had dared say half as much. Which proves that the humorist generally has the best of it.

ture theater, and there, if he or she sees a picture which reflects a problem in life which is similar to his or her own life, that person goes away with a lighter heart and a keener judgment. If the picture has an inspiring quality or a spiritual touch it is bound to find sympathetic response in a few.

The Spirit of Giving.

Miss Ferguson smiled wistfully as she does so often in the pictures, when we said "good-night." After closing the door, I stood in the corridor and asked myself, "Which was the real Elsie Ferguson, the one on the screen? The one on the stage? The one I just left? No one will ever know. Her character portrayals are so humanly natural they may be the real Elsie Ferguson, and she is so candid and humanly natural she may be the real characters! But it is certain that the spirit of giving—to her audiences and in the roles she assumes—is hers.—Owen Sears.

EVANS AND JONES ARE FIGURED TO UPHOLD AMATEUR PRESTIGE

National Open Golf Tournament Draws Best Golfers in The Country.

TOLEDO, OHIO, Aug. 9.—Officials preparing for the national open golf tournament which starts over the Inverness course tomorrow are engaged today in reviewing the entries. The change in pairings was necessitated by about 40 belated entries, who were permitted to come in after the official time set had expired.

Experts here agree that the winner of the tournament will have to shoot 280 golf to take the title while some believe a score as low as 275 will be necessary. A number of par scores have been turned in during practice.

The experts are figuring on Chick Evans and Bobby Jones to uphold the prestige of amateur golf in an open championship. Both have come over the course and each has given a good account of himself.

The first flight will get away early Tuesday morning. The added starters will play their first 18 hole qualifying round Tuesday afternoon, starting after 4:00 o'clock.

Johnny Nes said Ed Ross in the Kansas City club is a coming here. Wish he had saved him until the Spudgers got one more crack at him. The boys liked his offerings while in Kansas.

One of the largest crowds of the season witnessed the defeat yesterday. A crowd of four thousand gathered in the price of admission.

Others broke into the stadium on several different occasions. He picked one off the grandstand who, though he did not get credit for it, he proceeded to argue with people, on his next two trips to the plate he caught Dore in the mass with a couple of foul tips, the first one putting the wire out of commission.

Johnny Evers' double played great ball around the bases. He resembles the fiery Trotter in many more than any other player we ever saw.

President Walter Morris announced yesterday, after the Babe Ruth bill, that Manager Hunter Hill Harry and Mike Haines and Montague would draw heavy fines for their tactics in ragging the ump, and delaying the game. What little money the Pirates do draw will be turned back into the league.

Local baseball enthusiasts who are going to operate scoreboards during the World Series are putting for the Yankees. They figure that "Babe" Ruth will draw almost as many fans as the actual series. At McCome who is handling the scoreboards, they say that Star Ball Player company has several callers at his headquarters in the St. James yesterday and doubts whether he will be able to furnish all the boards necessary.

Smith's double and Tobin's single in the ninth gave St. Louis the first game 3 to 2. St. Louis also took the second game, 11 to 4.

Whitely beat the Yankees to second base and Detroit took the last game of the series 1 to 0. Cobb's double and a wild pitch by Collins gave the Tigers their lone tally.

Falsh's homer clinched a pitchers' battle between Kerr and Penneck. The White Sox shut out Boston 2 to 0.

The Athletics were unable to solve Caldwell and Cleveland took the game 5 to 0.

The Pirates dropped to fourth place when Wheat scored on a wild pitch in the ninth and broke a 1-1 tie. He wasan Pittsburgh and Brooklyn.

Young contributed a single, double and homer in three trips to the plate. The Giants winning from the Cubs 7 to 1.

THREE MEN IN JAIL RESULT OF HOLD-UP

Fourth Man is in Hospital Recovering From a Gunshot Wound.

Two men, charged with holding up eight men in a house near Burk Burnett last Saturday night and another man held as a suspect, are lodged in the county jail and a fourth man is confined in the Wichita General hospital recuperating from a gunshot wound with a gash at his bedside.

The accidental discharge of a gun and a hesitancy in answering questions led to the arrest of the three men. The two in jail, known as Roy King and Roy Woods, and the man in the hospital, James S. Oldham, are reported to have been identified by five of the victims. Five hundred dollars, which the men had on them, was also identified.

Physicians were called to the hospital by the two men to remove a bullet from the leg of Oldham. The man endeavored to evade answers to questions put to him by Sheriff McFall and Deputy Morris were called and a search revealed the money and two guns.

Held for investigation. The fourth man was arrested later. A big six-shooter was found on his person and he was also given a berth in the jail while an investigation is being made to ascertain whether he was the fourth man who staged the hold-up.

It is said that the eight men who were the victims were engaged in a "coolie" crap game when the four men rushed into the house and covered them with guns. It is alleged they took all the money as well as several watches and other articles.

After the victims had depleted the eight men of their money they stepped into a Ford machine, which belonged to the victim, and drove away. Another machine was standing near by but when the victims endeavored to chase them they found that the spark plug had been disconnected.

It is the assumption of officials that Oldham accidentally discharged his gun when he was slipping it into his pocket. The bullet struck a knife and particles of the blade also lodged in his leg.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 9.—If the Tennessee legislature, which meets in special session August 9, ratifies the national woman suffrage amendment, the women of the country, many of whom are still dependent on men for their support, will have a new ally in the political arena.

Another thing that has aroused the ire of the women is the fact that American soldiers returning from Europe lose their citizenship and their right to vote, although men who marry aliens are in no way affected.

The above mentioned are but a few instances of the hardships that women labor under without a national franchise. Since these evils primarily affect women, it is women that must correct them. They can only do this through political action.

WEST FRANKFORT RIOTS ARE REPORTED AT AN END. WEST FRANKFORT, ILL.—State troops continued to patrol the streets of West Frankfort today, although evidence of a continuation of the rioting which resulted in the death of one man and the injury of twenty last week was apparent.

More than twenty men are under arrest in connection with the rioting and it was announced by military authorities that the first contingent of state troops is expected to return to normal duty today. Thirty-five hundred striking miners have voted to return to work and the telephone strike, which has tied up the city for the past two months, was called off and the employees returned to work.

Every effort is being made to locate the person or persons responsible for the murder of Amel Calcester and Tony Homet, whose murder precipitated the riot of last week.

NEWS WRITER SAYS COX HAS BETTER THAN FIFTY-FIFTY CHANCE

Governor Cox of Ohio has better than a fifty-fifty chance to become the next president of the United States, in the opinion of Mark L. Goodwin, Washington correspondent of the Dallas News, who has been a visitor in Wichita Falls recently.

"The personality of the candidate is such as to make a strong appeal to the people at large," said Mr. Goodwin, "and his views on the five issues are meeting with favor among the conservative business men everywhere. His taxation plan, for a levy on gross sales, eliminating the numerous inequalities of the present system, I think will bring him support from many quarters where it was not expected. Much depends upon the state of Ohio, and if Cox can carry it, his general chances are better than an even break elsewhere."

Mr. Goodwin reported the Chicago and San Francisco conventions for the News and has been in close touch with the political situation. He has been a Washington correspondent for eight years, being formerly Oklahoma City staff correspondent for The News, in his earlier days he worked for a number of Texas papers.

While here Mr. Goodwin, in company with Reese S. Allen, his boyhood friend, visited the oil fields. He was especially interested in the oil fields of Texas. Mr. Goodwin was the guest of John Gould, local correspondent for The News, while here. He was Gould's first boss when he started his newspaper work at Austin 15 years ago.

MAN KILLED IN CHICAGO CABARET FIGHT LAST NIGHT

CHICAGO.—Charles Keating, 36, a salesman, was shot and killed in a west side cabaret early today. Four women who were with Keating, the proprietor, and a bartender who is alleged to have fired the shooting, were arrested. One of the women's 2-year-old daughter accompanied her mother to jail.

The party was said to have been making a round of cabarets in an automobile. At the cabaret owned by Arthur Dismore, Mrs. Sadie Burns is alleged to have left the bartender, Thomas Coleman, that Keating had stolen a $25 check from her. Coleman accused Keating of the theft, according to police, and a fight ensued. A revolver was seized from the cash drawer and fired.

In addition to Coleman, Dismore and Mrs. Burns, the police arrested Mrs. Mabel King, Miss Celia Thomas and Mrs. Clara Zenoski. Mrs. Burns' daughter, Eleanor, also was taken into custody.

Leggett is said to have told the police that he and Slavin intervened in a fight at the club between McCarroll and an unnamed actor. McCarroll said he was unable to account for Slavin's injuries.

McCarroll could not be located to give his version of the affair.

KING OF TRAMPS IS AWAY ON JOURNEY; ESTABLISHES RECORD

Wichita Falls is the headquarters for a professional baggage car stowaway and the crowned King of Tramps of his kind. He has gained such practice here and all along the railroads that the police nowhere are on the lookout for him. In other words he is a real for sure honest "bum."

He tells no one his business. Tells no one where he is about to travel. Never carries one cent of money and seldom is forced to hit the "back door." His friends are many but effort on their part to cure him of this "wanderlust" have been futile.

His vision has been impaired by the loss of one eye but no one knows the probable sad story that led up to and caused the loss. In fact it is highly probable that no one will ever learn where and when this occurred. He is extremely conservative in giving any information, but his long list of friends among railroad men and express messengers stands as conclusive evidence of his wonderful ability to make friends and maintain their friendship.

From whence he came no one knows, but railroad employees who have been in the service some three or four years believe they recognize in Shep, a dog that they saw several years ago "tagging" his way from town to town in freight cars.

Method Too Slow. Either this method of transporting himself was too slow or perhaps too dirty, but nevertheless Shep took to being a stowaway in baggage cars. When the train pulled into a certain town, the express messenger would be startled to see a big shepherd dog come from behind a stack of express and hurriedly make his exit from the car and go scampering down the street.

A year or so ago Shep made his initial appearance in Wichita Falls and since that time this has been his headquarters. Several of the express messengers befriended him by inviting him to partake of some scrap meat and poor bones. This satisfied Shep at that time but the day has arrived when now he is tendered choicer meats and leaner bones, and frequently through a benefactor he acquires a bottle of milk.

Shep has also graduated from the stowaway class now. Today when the "wanderlust" seizes him he wanders over to the tracks and awaits his opportunity to get into a baggage car. When the truck is partially emptied he jumps on and from there into the car where he finds a corner, where he will not be interfering with the work of the messenger, and when the train starts on its journey he finds a place where he can observe the country landscapes and enjoy the refreshing breeze, and endeavor to keep the messenger company on his trip.

It appears that Shep outlines his itinerary before his trip starts. For when he arrives at his chosen place nothing can keep him from going any farther. The messenger says him may appear around a corner and in a few days the dog is again seen around the express office at the union station.

The dog has been known to make trips to Fort Worth, Dallas, Amarillo, Canyon City and intervening points. Shep also makes frequent journeys to Ardmore, making connections at Gainesville.

One railroad man also states positively that Shep was seen by him in Denver, Colo.

His ancestry, his purposes in making jaunts and all other things pertaining to his habits are a mystery to all, but nevertheless he has a host of friends who have all crowned him King of Tramps.

He tells no one his business. Tells no one where he is about to travel. Never carries one cent of money and seldom is forced to hit the "back door." His friends are many but effort on their part to cure him of this "wanderlust" have been futile.

His vialion has been impaired by the loss on one eye. But no one knows the probable and story that led up to and caused the loss. In fact it is highly probable that no one will ever learn where and when this occurred. He is extremely conservative in giving any information, but his long list of friends among railroad men and express messengers stands as conclusive evidence of his wonderful ability to make friends and maintain their friendship.

Goes to Ardmore.

A representative of this publication prayed an interview Saturday morning but he could not be found. In fact it was learned while he was being paged around the Union station, that "Shep," the one-eyed shepherd dog, was on his way to Ardmore, Okla.

Shep has had a wonderful career and without a doubt has a life history that would rival that of the celebrated dog "Wolf" who brought his master honor, pride, glory and renown. But Shep has no master in particular. He is his own master.

The shaggy haired canine is not of the tramp dog type in regards to the cleanliness of his person for it is very seldom that he is seen in these parts dirty.

From whence he came no one knows, but railroad employes who have been in the service some three or four years believe they recognize in Shep, a dog that they saw several years ago "beating" his way from town to town in freight cars.

Method Too Slow.

Either the method of transporting himself was too slow or perhaps too dirty, but nevertheless Shep took to being a stowaway in baggage cars. When the train pulled into a certain town, the express messenger would be startled to see a big shepherd dog come from behind a stack of express and hurriedly make his exit from the car and go scampering down the street.

A year or so ago Shep made his initial appearance in Wichita Falls and since that time this has been his headquarters. Several of the express messengers befriended him by inviting him to partake of some scrap meat and poor bones. This satisfied Shep at that time but the day has arrived when now he is tendered choice meats and leaner bones, and frequently, through a benefactor he acquires a bottle of milk.

Shep has also graduated from the stowaway class now. Today when the "wanderlust" seizes him he wanders over to the tracks and awaits his opportunity to get into a baggage car. When the truck is partially emptied he jumps on and from there into the car where he finds a corner, where he will not be interfering with the work of the messenger, and when the train starts on its journey he finds a place where he can observe the country landscapes and enjoy the refreshing breeze, and endeavor to keep the messenger company on his trip.

Outlines Itinerary.

It appears that Shep outlines his itinerary before his trip starts. For, when he arrives at his chosen place nothing can keep him from going any farther. The messenger sees him disappear around a corner and in a few days the dog is again seen around the express office at the union station.

The dog has been known to make trips to Fort Worth, Dallas, Amarillo, Canyon City and intervening points. Shep also makes frequent journeys to Ardmore, making connections at Glinesville.

one railroad man also states positively that Shep was seen by him in Denver, Colo.

His ancestry, his purposes in making jaunts and all other things pertaining to his habit are a mystery to all, but nevertheless he has a host of friends who have all crowned him King of Tramps.
