taken the direction of the affair out of his hands and were easily shunting him off to some side while they deliberated. He hadn't meant that there should be anything left for them to deliberate upon. And the moment he was out of their mental presence, he reacted to the rebuff by flaming up defiantly. He resolved that he would give them just one hour and then bring them to book; just one hour! He drew out his watch and marked the time, throwing scornfully. Just one hour! So he roared, he made his way to the sideboard in the dining room.

Meanwhile, as soon as the door closed on Hilton, Judge Crane took up the affair with his son, asking:

"How did you come to know about this, Dan—the burial up there at Stony Cove and so on?"

It was naturally a rather embarrassing question. "As I told you, father," he replied, "I acted for Peggy. She'd heard something about the disappearance of this maid, Katy, someone a relative of the furnace man named Sam Thayer peered in and saw her lying in the laundry. He thought she'd been drinking or had been drugged. Peggy came to me with her trouble. My idea was that Ted had taken the girl somehow. Peggy proposed to find out what had become of her. She came to me—asked me to help her. I told her she'd best let it alone, but as she insisted, I telephoned to Cordwainer."

"Cordwainer" the judge repeated, with surprise. "Not this same woman—what's her name?"

"No," Danforth replied. "Cordwainer sent me a man on whom he said I could depend." He smiled a little, grimly, adding, "Seems Hilton must have come to Cordwainer and Cordwainer sent him a woman—all fish for Cordwainer's net."

"I see," the judge commented. "Well, I have considerable faith in Cordwainer. He can't afford to blackmail. . . . This man of yours—he is he around here now?"

"Yes," Danforth replied.

The judge pondered it, rubbing his chin, and observed, "It's a situation where we've got to trust somebody and I suppose we may as well take a chance on Cordwainer's man as on anybody else. You see, I wasn't as smart as I thought I was, Dan. You know and Hilton knows and these two Cordwainer people know and Lord knows how many besides. It's getting out. It's getting out. . . ."

He pondered a moment more, and went on in a somewhat lower key, looking over at his son:

"It won't do, Dan. We're getting in too deep water. You see, as Hilton said, the whole thing hinges on that body up at Stony Cove. If anybody gets that, we're busted. I'm going to have that body removed. I want it done tonight. They can tow it out to sea and sink it."

That suggestion struck Danforth disagreeably; but he made no comment.

"The body's got to be put out of the way," Judge Crane repeated. "It's too dangerous now. I've found out that when danger stares you in the face the best tactics is to hit it on the nose. There's no trusting that fool Hilton. He's drunk now and he's apt to be drunk again tomorrow. Even if he meant to keep his mouth shut there's no telling when he might blab. I've got to protect my wife. I've got to protect Bradford McKoon. I've got to protect myself, too." With a faint grin he added, "I'm pretty good at that."

He frowned over it a moment and went on with some exasperation. "You see, I found myself in a devil of a hole all of a sudden—with the body of a girl dumped on my hands. As I told you before, the first thing I thought of was my wife. I was going to save her from it or know why. When I thought it over, getting her buried in that way seemed pretty simple and it seemed that that ought to end it. Of course, I was sorry for the girl, but she was dead anyhow. It seemed pretty simple. If I had known what was going to happen, I'd have taken other steps. But I didn't know. I got into it and I got McKoon into it, and now that this other business has come up I'm going on through with it. The only way I see now is to get the body out of sight—sink it at sea, I should say. It can be managed."

Danforth completely understood his father's justification, and sympathized with it. Having gotten into it, he himself would go on through without quailing.

"We've got to trust somebody," the judge continued, thinking it over and meaning that he and Danforth could hardly manage it themselves. "We may as well take a chance on your Cordwainer man. Can you get hold of him now? I'd want to do it tonight. He struck you as a man to be trusted, did he?"

"Yes—fairly," Danforth replied. "I'd as leave take a chance on him as on anybody else. We can pay him so well that he can afford to forget it."

"Well, let's get hold of him and see what he has to say," said the judge.

But the Cordwainer man had already suggested to Danforth that the body might be removed and he had vetoed that suggestion for a cogent reason. He still had the same reason for opposing it.

"You'd be protecting somebody else, too," father," he suggested. "I mean Ted Pennell. He has no right to protection."

"Well, no—so far as he alone is concerned," the judge assented.

"He's put himself out of the game," Danforth went on. "I have a right to see that he keeps out."

"Maybe you have, son," said the judge; "but he's all tied up with these other people. I don't know how I can protect them without protecting him, too." A somewhat harsher energy showed in his voice and for a moment he avoided looking at his son—feeling that a contest was rising between them.

Danforth also for the moment avoided looking at his father, but he said, conclusively, "He's got to keep out of it. The body's my hold on him. I don't want it moved tonight."

So the issue was joined between them.

"But maybe he's got Peggy already, Dan," the judge reminded him. "I'm afraid it's too late already."

Danforth drew a thick hand over his forehead and replied, more slowly than usual:

"Well, if it's too late, it's too late. If she's married him, that settles it. I'll stand by her the best I know how and be her friend, as I've been her friend all my life." In saying it his voice trailed down to a lower key. "If I've got to swallow that medicine, I'll swallow it and make no faces in public." A little sigh escaped him, for Peggy's image was in his mind.

"But it may not be too late. They may not be married. If they're not, I don't propose that they shall be. He has no right to her. . . . She was in love with him. I suppose he thinks he's in love with her. He has youth in his favor, father. He has selfishness in his favor, too. If he comes back here now and there's no evidence against him and he tells her a good lie and looks weebony and whistles the tune, she may go to him. Peggy's only a girl yet. That's not going to happen. I can have her now; I feel sure of it. It's only by one chance in a hundred—and his idiocy—that I could have had her. The one chance has come to me. It shan't get out of my hands. I'll fight like all hell for it. I think I have a right to father."

REINFORCEMENTS TO AID OF GOVERNMENT FORCES IN IRELAND

CORK, Feb. 24.—Heavy reinforcement and auxiliaries were being rushed into the hill country near MacRoom today where Sinn feiners defeated government forces yesterday in a bloody battle.

The Cork barracks were practically depleted of soldiers who scattered over that entire section of county Cork in an effort to hunt down the Irish republicans.

The casualty list continued to grow today as the dead and wounded were moved from the Cork hospitals. At least six of the crown forces were killed, including Major Seaforth Grant, commanding. There were about 20 wounded, nine of whom may die. The Irish casualties were estimated to include at least 20 wounded. Four Sinn feiners were captured.

Inhabitants of the Limerick region fearing reprisals, sought refuge but were stopped and ordered indoors. All railway service in County Cork was suspended.

CHAPLAIN OF FAMOUS IRISH OVERSEAS REGIMENT QUELLS A DISTURBANCE

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—The Rev. Francis F. Duffy, chaplain of the famous Irish overseas regiment, the "Fighting 69th," last night quelled a disturbance started by Irish sympathizers in Carnegie Hall during a lecture by Sir Philip Gibbs, English war correspondent. Sir Philip had chosen for his subject "The Situation in Ireland: Past, Present and Future."

The disturbance, which was the third of its kind in the past two weeks, occurred while the speaker was comparing the fighting conditions in Ireland in 1915 to conditions thirty years ago. A woman in top gallery screamed something about "black and tan" and the noise became general.

Father Duffy rose from his seat in the audience and took the stage after the hooting and catcalling had been going on for about five minutes. In the meantime, Sir Philip stood calmly waiting for quiet. The army chaplain described himself as a "confessed Sinn feiner" but said that he wanted to stimulate British propaganda he would hire one to break up his meetings. Those affecting Irish accent in the galleries, he said, must be British propagandists. He asked that he be allowed to hear the completion of the address.

Order was restored within ten minutes and Sir Philip resumed his lecture.

STRIKE OF RAIL WORKERS CALLED ON MISSOURI ROAD

JOPLIN, MO., Feb. 24.—A strike order, which the union officials would tie up the Missouri and North Arkansas railroad, operating between Joplin and Helena, Ark., was effective this morning. The strikers, trainmen, telegraphers and station agents are affected by the call which union leaders said was issued because of wage reductions of 25 per cent ordered February 1. Shopmen of the railroad walked out at Harrison, Ark., when the reduction was made.

There was no information early today as to how generally the strike order was being obeyed. About 450 would be affected by the order, union officials said.

JUBILEE'S PARTNER

My ears were puffed then ever this morning, but it was a little warmer when I let Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth. I do not see why a dog doesn't get his ears or his tail froze. My grandfather felt of his ears while we was eating, and he said it was too bad they were getting so soft and mushy, and my father asked him why and he said that if they had stayed stiff like when they were frozen I could still them to store keeper for sugar scoops when they fell off. He said when he was in the war a fellow in his company was going to get frost stiff, so they broke his ears off close to his head and used them for shovels to make a dug-out and they all got in it, and kept warm till the blizzard let up.

I was glad today was Saturday because everyone at school has seen shy ears and tomorrow I will go to Sunday School and everyone there will see them.

We all went down to the lake with our skates and we skated all the way to Rocky River along the crack in the ice. I would skate as fast as I could for a while and Jubilee would be right behind me and then I would turn all at once and Jubilee would try to stop by bracing his feet and setting down on the ice, but he would slide a long way before he would stop. I tried going fast and then setting on the ice and I slid quite a way, too, but I only done it once.

When we had skated back Hopper had went home, because he is a crisp can swim as good as anyone else, but he can't skate. He would have to be a crimp in skating time. We all went to his house and his mother let us in and made use some hot lemonade, and said she could not understand how I could not have any fun outdoors in such weather, and I said I guessed she had never been a boy, and she said if she had ever been she could not remember it.

She went to do some sewing and we

MARKETS

COTTON MARKET.

New York Cotton. NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—The cotton market showed renewed weakness this morning. First prices were 9 to 22 points higher on covering for over the week. Otherwise no demand was reported, however, while the advance at a net of 25 to 40 points. March sold off from 12.90 to 11.75 and May from 12.50 to 11.50. Active trading showed net losses of 15 to 24 points and making new low records for the season. Reports of the bill curtailment in Fall River would probably be increased next week were a factor on the decline but heavy losses considered the southern selling and the fear of spot liquidation the dominating influences.

The market showed continued weakness later in the morning, selling off to 11.60 for March and 11.50 for May. The closing prices were at just about the lowest, but final tones as steady at a net of 25 to 40 points.

New Orleans Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 25.—Week-end covering by shorts caused a rise of 7 to 14 points on the opening of the cotton market. In the session all the support offered and prices soon fell off on much the same character of the day. The market closed at the end of the first half hour of trading the active months were 10 to 14 points under the first price of yesterday with March down to 11.50 and July down to 12.25, all months making the low level for the season and May 12.50. Reports of serious rioting at Alexandria responsible for extreme weakness and late in the session the market reached 11.50 for March and 12.10 for July, new low levels for the season. Here the market showed losses up to 20 points. The ring was forced to take large offerings from traders on the long side who would not carry their own data after a heavy loss because of the fear of further unfavorable political news Monday.

Report of market closed barely steady 25 to 40 down.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—Wheat was active at the start today, the May delivery showing early strength, but prices reacted quickly because of a minimum export price being placed on Argentine wheat. After starting to lower to 10 higher, with March to $1.58 to $1.64 and May $1.71 to $1.77, a reaction set in and carried prices below yesterday's finish.

Reports of improvement in the export demand caused wheat to rally later but the market became unsteady and fluctuations were rapid in narrow range. The close was unsettled, with prices lower to 10 higher, including March at $1.58 to $1.64 and May $1.71 to $1.77.

Corn receipts were larger than expected. Initial quotations which were lower, with May 79 to 79c, were followed by moderate declines. The corn market continued its downward trend despite the strength in wheat and closed with prices 1 to 1c lower than the previous finish, with May 65 to 65c.

Higher prices for hogs gave strength to provisions.

Weekly Grain and Produce.

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—Exporters regarding the industrial outlook has done much this week to nullify efforts toward strengthening the wheat market. Compared with a weak ago, wheat prices this morning were unchanged to 1c higher, with May 65c sagged.

NEW YORK STOCKS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—The trend of prices in the early stages of today's stock market session was again downward, shippings and rails featuring their reactions. Atlantic Gulf duplicated yesterday's low price on a two-point decline. Reading lost 1/2 and Famous Players 1/4. Fractional declines were made by most of the steels, motors and oils, the latter responding to further cuts in price of raw and refined products. Work will be recovered two points from yesterday's acute depression and Utah Copper rose 1/4 in connection with reports of prospective heavy exports of the metal. Exchange on London held at yesterday's final quotations despite extensive imports of gold from that center.

SUNSHINE
By RICHARD LLOYD JONES

LIGHT is the symbol of life. If, when the world is in shadow, man wishes to signal the existence of life he holds up a light.

The locomotive throws ahead of it a stream of light which heralds the coming of a great, throbbing thing.

Light is the most wonderful of all visible things because it makes all things visible.

Light is the great painter. Red, green, blue and yellow are one in darkness; they are different things in light. Light beautifies. "There is no object," says Emerson, "so foul that intense light will not make it beautiful."

As light is the symbol of life, so also is darkness the symbol of death. We choose the day through which to live; the night through which to sleep.

Fill your life with light; don't be a dead one. Tear away from your window the shutters of anger, hatred, envy, jealousy and fancied wrongs. Let in the sunshine. The world wastes little time upon the fellow who stands in the shadow of pessimism and gloom. Go into the sunshine business. Radiate happiness; it pays.

The face that is full of the sunshine spirit not only helps itself but helps all who encounter it.

Just as the flower of the field is brightened by the morning sun. Be like the sun. Spread your happiness everywhere; give it to everybody. It is the most helpful and wholesome of all contagions.

The sun is always at work. It moulds the flower into fruit. You cannot be filled with sunshine and be idle. The sunny spirit is always busy at some unselfish service. It goes through life building a chain, each link of which represents a day of helpful endeavor.

To make ourselves sunny we must make ourselves worthy. Our worth is measured not by ourselves but by others.

The sun would be of little use to this world were it shut up within curtains, its warmth and light kept to itself. So with you, you can do no good when you do only for yourself. He who thinks only of and works only for himself dies unloved. He has spread no sunshine about him. He has given no heart warmth to the world.

Real cheerfulness is not merely a matter of inheritance, it is more than a passive virtue. The most sunny are the most strenuous, they who do most, give most, help most.

Throw sunshine on all the paths you walk and cross in life. The world is always better for being bright and warm.

ALL THE NEWS OF ALL THE SPORTS ALL THE TIME

Minors Dissatisfied With New Baseball Legislation But Have Faith in Landis

SPORT SHOTS

Red Determined.
 "Red" Joeefson and "Buddy" Tanner, the two original spudder holdouts have been heard from, but have not signed yet. "Red" seems determined to get more money as he has written again refusing to sign until he gets the increase he is after. "Buddy" has written that he will be on hand in plenty of time, though he did not close the contract. He must be satisfied, however, that the differences will be patched up.

Montague Joins Holdouts.
 Today's mail brought another holdout letter from Montague, who was obtained from Galveston in the deal whereby Harvey Grab went to the Sanchara outfit, thinks he is worth more than he was offered. He has chances of getting more as very slim. The players evidently overlook the fact that there is such a thing as a salary limit in this league. Sam is well supplied with infielders. "Nuf sed."

Jack Johnson Questioned.
 The question of whether Jack Johnson should be allowed to re-enter the ring in the United States when his prison term is up is one that seems to be agitating the sport world just at present. We cannot see how the American sport-loving public will be willing to have this fugitive, this confessed fair fight himself upon them. He has already admitted in a sign confession that he faked the Willard fight, that he threw his world title for $10,000. And now he wants to humbug the people out of some more easy money. We wonder if the fans are gullible enough to swallow a match in which he is a principal.

Plenty of Other Batters.
 There are a number of abiding batters, of good standing to satisfy the appetite of the most ardent fan without going out to pluck forth a man guilty of violating the Mann act, from the country and forfeiting ball to avoid a prison term, and a fugitive from justice for several years who returned to face his sentence merely as a means toward enabling him to palm himself off on the American public to recoup his lost fortunes. The country does not want for batters. There is a man in which he is a principal.

Should Be Ruled Out Forever.
 Jack Johnson should be ruled out of the ring forever. The universal judgment of the baseball fans is that the White Sox stars under suspicion of accepting bribes for the Mann act in the World Series to Cincinnati should be prohibited from ever playing in organized ball again. And this is the unanimous opinion of the fans who are out to them. Why then should not Johnson be given the same dose? The former champion has confessed that he faked a world's championship match, to see which thousands of people paid fabulous prices and traveled many a mile.

Has Broken Faith Too Often.
 Whether his confession be true or issued merely in a last attempt to secure a match to replace his lost fortunes, the punishment should be the same. If he really threw the match he has hoodwinked the public from the end of the world to the other end of the world. He was indicted just about a year ago this time, but the trial has been postponed until now. It's going to be an interesting case as the detector who picked Benny up were indicted recently for accepting unlawful fees.

Giants Miss Kauff.
 When the Giants arrive in San Antonio for their lumbering up exercises they will be without the services of at least one man—Benny Kauff. Although Benny hasn't signed yet, that isn't the reason. He has got to stand trial in New York within the next couple of weeks on a charge of accepting an automobile for the indicted just about a year ago this time, but the trial has been postponed until now. It's going to be an interesting case as the detector who picked Benny up were indicted recently for accepting unlawful fees.

INDIANS SATISFIED WITH CLUBS USED LAST SEASON

CLEVELAND, Feb. 26.—Members of the Cleveland Indians apparently are satisfied to go through the 1921 season with the bats with which they won the American league and world championship last year. Unlike in previous seasons, E. S. Barnard, business manager of the club, has received few requests for new bats.

Ormsby, formerly pitched for St. Paul, was wounded at Chateau Thierry while fighting with the marines. President Teaney is giving his application consideration. Ormsby is a Chicagoan.

ROTAN WORKS WAY TO HOUSTON FINALS BY PLAYING SUPERB GOLF

Because of Rotan's feat of playing the course in 70 Friday morning and following it up with an afternoon 48 there is no doubt as to what he may be able to accomplish today.

BOXING MOGULS OFF NEGRO HEAVYWEIGHT

Jack Johnson Will Have a Hard Job Appearing in American Squared Circle.

By HENRY L. FARRELL, United Press Staff Correspondent.
 NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—From his cell in Leavenworth prison, Jack Johnson is planning a return to the ring. It was for this renewal of his old means of livelihood that Johnson gave up his only foreign country and returned to serve his prison sentence that caused him to become an exile.

Tom O'Rourke says that his big boy, Fred Fulton, has been matched to fight Johnson in Havana this summer. There is little doubt that the National Boxing association, the guiding body of the sport in 37 states, will close the doors to Johnson. "The matter of Johnson's return to the ring has not been submitted to the association," he said. "The subject matter thought as Johnson will not be released for some time." W. H. Laginger, president of the association, told the Times in Havana this morning. "New York and Massachusetts do not belong to the association."

The story so far: The author of an obscure nervous lesion, put the following case before the Supreme Court of the State of California in medical school and wished to establish himself as a specialist in nervous diseases. The money was enough to do so. One morning a total stranger, a Mr. Blessington, came to him, and offered to set him up in practice as an investment. Mr. Blessington was to take a house, pay the maid to give Blessington a third of the doctor's money. Mr. Blessington went to give Blessington a third of the doctor's money. At half-past seven next morning, in the first dim glimpse of daylight, I found him standing by my bedside in his dressing-gown. "There's a brougham waiting for us, Watson," said he. "I have just been called to the Brook street business."

"Tragic, but ambiguous," said he, pulling the blind down to his eyes. "I have just been called to the Brook street business." "Tragic, but ambiguous," said he, pulling the blind down to his eyes. SEND FOR GEROSOL SAMPLE

Send me in stamps or coin for a generous sample of Gerosol, a new and interesting hair dressing.

Girls! Do not be content with dull, brittle, lusterless hair, when at a very small cost you can have a mass of glittering, soft luxuriant tresses. A true test of the efficiency and unusual merit of

Newbro's Herpicide

WASHINGTON, AND THE OX-CART AND STAGE COACH DAYS

Our forefathers used the Ox-cart and rode in the Stage Coach and selected their glasses themselves. They had any.

They did it because there was no other way and yet, there are some persons who hold that because some of their ancestors did not use glasses, that such things are unnecessary, and yet some of these same people use automobiles and electric lights, and some of their have lightning rods.

Today the Ox-Cart and Stage Coach are curiosities, and the Science of Fitting Glasses has more than kept pace with modern advancement.

Persons who are best informed today have their eyes examined at least once a year, if not for the benefit of whatever change may have taken place in the eye, they have the benefit of whatever advancement may have taken place in the Science of Fitting Glasses.

Our Optical Parlor has the most modern Scientific equipment and skill, and is for your eye protection.
