CHAMP CLARK DIES AT 2:10 THIS AFTERNOON

GREAT MISSOURIAN SUCCEUMS AFTER AN ATTACK OF PLEURISY

DEATH COMES AT CLOSE OF 26 YEARS OF DISTINGUISHED SERVICE IN CONGRESS

LIVED AGAIN LEGISLATIVE BATTLES IN DELIRIUM

Speaker of House During Glorious Period and Almost Nominated for Presidency.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Champ Clark died here today at 2:10 p. m. in his seventy-first year and within two days of his retirement from the house of representatives after a service of twenty-six years. Death was due to an attack of pleurisy and a complication of diseases incident to his advanced age. Up to ten days ago, however, when he developed a severe cold, Mr. Clark had shared actively in proceedings of the house as democratic leader.

Attendants said that before the former speaker fell into a coma his mind was wandering in his delirium among memories of his long service in the house and of legislative battles of the past. They had made out, they said, the words "The question is on agreeing to the conference report" with which the speaker brings to its final conclusion in the house the fight on any bill.

Immediately after the death of Mr. Clark was announced, the house ceased for thirty minutes. Representative Rucker, democrat, Missouri, who made the announcement, said it was Mr. Clark's wish to be buried in his home town, that there be no interruption of congress in its closing days.

At Mr. Clark's bedside when the end came were Mr. Clark, their son, Bennett Clark, and their daughter, Mrs. James M. Thomson of New Orleans. Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed, but the body probably will be sent to the old home in Bowling Green, Mo.

Immediately on reconvening after the 30 minute recess, the house adopted a resolution providing for the payment to Mrs. Clark of a year's salary, totalling about $2,000.

CAREER ENDS JUST TWO DAYS BEFORE TIME FOR POLITICAL RETIREMENT

Farmer-boy, school-teacher, youthful college president, attorney, prospector, legislator, congressman and party speaker and almost a president—these designations summarize the career of Champ Clark, who, almost on the very eve of his retirement from the political duties, was on Wednesday called by death.

One of the first marked evidences of the fine decision and vigor of Hon. James Beauchamp (Champ) Clark's character occurred when he was but a youth. With the remark that one's name is his personal property, and he has as much right to change it as he has to have his hair cut—Clark sliced off the first part of what he considered too burdensome and superfluous, leaving it plain "Champ" and he went through life as Champ.

That this design was an unconscious act of foresightness from a publicity standpoint was often referred to by the Missouriian in the remark that while many big men of the country were simply blown down as "J. B. and-so" the reporters were always sure to get his full first name in print because of its brevity and rather uncommon familiarity.

FRENCH PAPERS TERM GERMANY'S OFFER INSULT

PARIS, March 2.—Newspapers of this city are united in declaring that Germany's proposals, submitted to the supreme allied council in London yesterday, were unacceptable.

France hitherto has shown the utmost patience and if Germany compels her to do so, she will use her strength vigorously in full agreement with the allies.

The Petit Parisien, which has the widest circulation of any Paris newspaper, said:

"Faced with the German proposals, which insult the misery of the populations of our devastated regions and which mock the allies, we are not a single one of our young soldiers who, if the nation should require it, will not readily go and mount guard in the Ruhr basin."

NEGRO HIGHWAYMEN ROB MAN, BEAT HIM TO UNCONSCIOUSNESS

HOWARD RICH ATTACKS HOLD-UP
MEN AFTER BEING FORCED TO GIVE VALUABLES.

LOSES WATCH AND $115;
OFFICERS SEEK ASSAILANTS

Is Left Unconscious After Fight and Robbers Make Getaway—Holdup
Takes Place on Brook.

Police were searching Wednesday for two negro highwaymen who held up and robbed Howard Rich, a local barber, of a large sum of money Tuesday night and later beat him into unconsciousness. The robbers are said to have obtained $115 in cash and a watch.

Mr. Rich, who rooms at 1107 Eleventh street, had left his home shortly after 9 o'clock Tuesday night and started for a negro street in the Brook street to get some clothing which had been left to be laundered. At the Brook street alley near Collins avenue he was stopped by two negroes and ordered to hand over his valuables.

After being robbed, Rich is reported to have attacked the two and in the fight which followed he obtained his purse, which had been emptied of its contents. He was beaten into unconsciousness and left on the ground by the assailants, who had disappeared by the time their victim had recovered.

Mr. Rich has been employed at the Jackson and Burgan barber shop, 721 Indiana street, for the past two years. His condition Wednesday morning was said to be serious.

ALLEGED TO HAVE GIVEN SHORT WEIGHT INVOLVING MILLIONS

CHICAGO, March 2.—The unanimous vote of the Chicago board of trade for expulsion of Thomas W. Keelin, head of the firm of Hay and grain dealers bearing his name, was announced today after his trial on charges of short weighing on feed sales involving an amount said to total $1,000,000 in the last twenty years.

Indictments also have been returned on the same charges. Keelin did not appear before the board at the hearing yesterday to answer the charges. Officials of the board of trade said weighers and teamsters had been bribed to pass underweight loads and two sets of tickets were carried by the drivers, the one showing the true weight being handed the purchaser if he had the feed weighed again.

Keelin had been a member of the board since 1907. It is said he started in the coal and feed business more than twenty years ago, at first delivering coal himself in baskets in a push cart.

J. W. Badenoch and Albert J. Kemper, officials of the Hay, Grain and Feed Dealers' association, were appointed special prosecutors to investigate the case for the board of trade. It is said his expulsion is the first one which an unanimous vote has been cast.

Mrs. F. T. Adams, Austin street, Wichita, Falls, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of kidney trouble three years ago, and I am glad to say I haven't had to use them since. At that time I suffered with my back and kidney day and night. I was so bad off I couldn't do my housework and my back ached terribly. I was finally in bed for about three weeks and every move I made, I thought my back would break. I was also annoyed by the irregular action of my kidneys. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills and on taking this advice, I was cured after using a few boxes."

NAVAL BILL AGAIN BEFORE SENATE AT SESSION WEDNESDAY

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The naval appropriation bill, the subject of a two-hour executive session in the afternoon and a much longer debate on the open floor last night, still had the right of way in the senate today with the possibility of its passage this session believed improved by an amendment designed to bring about a conference of the United States, Great Britain and Japan to consider naval disarmament.

The secret session was held at the request of Senator Lodge of Mass., chairman of the foreign relations committee, who declared there were some angles of the bill which should not be discussed in public. Relations between the United States and Japan were said to have been the chief subject, although the nation's foreign relations generally were discussed.

Despite the long row over the naval measure, the senate last night found time to adopt the conference report on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill. That bill now goes to the president minus the provision for a $240 bonus for navy yard and navy arsenal employees.

The house last night likewise cleared up one piece of legislation when it voted to accept senate amendments to the resolution repealing virtually all wartime laws and that measure now goes to the president.

DEFENDANT IN "RITUAL MURDER" HERE TO MAKE HOME

Mendel Bellis, hero of the Kieff ritual murder case, which attracted world-wide attention in 1911, has arrived in New York from Europe to make his home. Bellis was acquitted in the famous murder trial, but feeling against him ran so high in Kieff that he left Russia immediately after gaining his freedom. The charge grew out of the murder, on March 11, 1911, of Andrew Yustichinsky, an eight-year-old Christian boy, in a Kieff suburb. Anger against the Jews had been increasing in Kieff because of the agitation of the "Black Hundred" and the authorities promptly seized an opportunity to foster the sentiment by bringing a ritual murder charge against the Jewish community. He was arrested, charged with the crime, and the trial, which lasted thirty-four days, attracted newspaper correspondence from all parts of the world.

GIRLS, HERE'S A HINT FROM ONE WHO KNOWS

LOS ANGELES, March 2.—Youths in their twenties make poor husbands, says J. F. Townsend, deputy sheriff, to whose attention come all domestic mix-ups which reach Los Angeles courts.

"After a few months of marital life, young men usually succumb to the lure of questionable pool halls and dance halls," Townsend asserted. "They find their salaries will not provide pleasure for two and they drift away from home and eventually fall prey to the failure-to-provide court and wind up in the divorce court.

"And, to make the analysis worse as far as the Caucasian race goes, it appears that Americans, in proportion to the population, are leading Mexicans and negroes in the number of arrests for wife and child abandonment."

ORDER STAYS SERVING WRIT OF EXECUTION

Counsel Holds That Judgment of $150,000 Was Not a Decree But Only an Opinion of Court.

A writ of injunction was granted Wednesday by Judge Weidon of the 20th district court in favor of P. P. Langford, J. I. Staley and I. Staley, restraining W. E. Grant and Sheriff Fred Smith from serving a writ of execution on a judgment of $150,000.

Counsel for the petitioners for an injunction claimed that the judgment was not a decree of the court, but merely an opinion and therefore the judgment is faulty.

W. E. Grant originally brought suit against the petitioners asking for a judgment of $150,000. It is stated that the defendants in the original suit were cited to appear in court for trial, but that no appearance was made and judgment was rendered by default.

The execution writ was in the hands of the sheriff Wednesday morning and preparations were being made to serve it. Before plans were executed, the restraining order came through.

RUMOR OF ANOTHER PRICE DROP DENIED; LINES SEEKING CRUDE

Persistent rumors of another cut in crude oil prices have not only met with equally persistent denials in local pipe line offices, but they have encountered some rather confident predictions of a better price.

"I believe the next change in crude prices will be upward and not downward," said a representative of one of the big companies Wednesday.

The reports of another drop are thought to be due to the fact that, since the last reduction in the mid-continent field, there have been three additional cuts in Pennsylvania that have not been followed locally.

Further evidence of steadiness in oil prices is given by an announcement that some of the companies, notably the Gulf and the Sinclair Crude, are now actively soliciting oil, following the recent decision of some companies, including the Gulf and Magnolia, to pay for all takings instead of putting 50 per cent in storage.

One company has already secured 600 barrels daily by active solicitation, and this drive for production is expected to have some effect upon the companies that have been paying for only half of the runs.

POLICE IN VIENNA ARE MAKING MANY RAIDS VIENNA.—(By mail.)—The wild speculation in foreign moneys here has caused renewed activity on the part of the police in raiding "exchange coffee houses" and private banks. They have secured many millions of crowns, but made the biggest haul when they tapped the wall of a lavatory in one bank and found a concealed door to a safe in which were 25,000,000 crowns in American, English and other foreign values.

HOUSEKEEPERS PLAN TO ATTEND COOKING SCHOOL NEXT WEEK

Telephone inquiries began to come in Wednesday morning from Wichita Falls housekeepers concerning the next week in the basement of the First Baptist church under the direction of Mrs. Florence Austin Childs. Indications are that the attendance will be representative of the women citizenship of the city, and that seating space in the auditorium won't go begging. No reservations are being made, and there is no other formal arrangements, for attendance at the whole week's course. Several inquirers wished to make sure that they could get the benefit of the whole five days of lectures and demonstration. This can be accomplished simply by being on hand one day. The school lasts from 1 to 3 p. m. each day, and those who find it necessary to leave before the period is up will be permitted to do so. One housekeeper who attended the course very much to attend the whole course, but that she could not come until 2 o'clock any day. While it is of course desirable that all who possibly can be on hand at 2 o'clock, in order to get the benefit of the preliminary remarks, those who find it impossible to do so will be welcome when they call. Mrs. Childs' course of instruction is said to be the most popular and practical offered by any home economics expert in the city. Her methods adopt the present radical department from the tedious old-fashioned cooking methods with a success in accomplishing what is instantly appealing to the modern housewife. She teaches, in short, practical sessions, the shortest cuts to good cookery in every department, and the three-minute preparation of oil dressing to the simplest and least laborious cooking of roast meats. Lectures and technical instruction precede the daily demonstrations. In general, however, many of the demonstrations are given in practical connection with the instruction.

BUSINESS GIRLS CLUB GIVES BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR FEBRUARY MEMBERS

The Business Women's club of the Y. W. C. A. entertained with a special birthday party for the members whose birth anniversaries come in February, Tuesday evening. The table appointments for supper included a big and prettily laid birthday cake, appetizers, salads, with candies, and the dozen or more members of the February group were honor guests at the birthday table. Supper was served at 7:30, the menu comprising buttered ribs, baked sweet potato, veal croquette, apricot quail, cake and coffee. The birthday guests ate the cake, which was later passed to the other members. After supper the February group, with Mrs. Mason chairman, were in charge of the birthday social, and an attractive program was given. Mr. E. C. Huckabee sang two songs, "Because of You" and a sailor's melody, which were received with much applause. Miss Kalkreuth, whose readings are always very much enjoyed by the club members, gave two selections, an imitation of a three-minute potato, veal croquette, apricot quail, cake and coffee. The birthday guests ate the cake, which was later passed to the other members. During the evening Mrs. C. J. Coyne, new director of the Y. W. C. A. cafeteria, was invited in and greeted with enthusiastic applause.

RECORD ATTENDANCE AT CHICAGO ART SCHOOL

CHICAGO, March 1.—Art is keeping right up behind the band these days. Attendance at the art school of the Chicago Art Institute, the largest art school in the world, set new records last year. Controller C. A. Hough announced. Pupils at the school from January 1, 1920, to January 1, 1921, numbered 4,267, he reports. Public attendance at the institute continued to climb in 1920, reaching 1,124,174 persons. This was nearly 150,000 more than the previous year. Visitors on a recent Sunday totaled 15,000. Membership in the institute is first in the country. Mr. Hough reports. It has touched 12,000. The museum's income, he said, is between a quarter and a half million dollars, its endowment amounting to about $2,500,000. The Bryson Library of the institute devoted entirely to art, has acquired a total of 14,000 volumes, while the Bryson Library devoted to architecture has 2700. Attendance figures for each last year reached 34,000.

HOUSEKEEPERS PLAN TO ATTEND COOKING SCHOOL NEXT WEEK

The Civic league voted Tuesday afternoon to sponsor an entertainment at Kemp hotel this month which the social committee plans to be one of the biggest, most attractive and most thoroughly enjoyable events of the spring season. The affair is to serve the triple purpose of a get-together social for the membership of the league, a happy entertainment for the young people and a fund-raiser for the organization. Details of the celebration were left to the entertainment committee, of which Mrs. J. W. Stone is chairman, but it was voted to make the affair informal and to extend an invitation to the league members and their friends. During the afternoon the league went on record against suggestive or offensive dancing, and after a report from the public affairs committee, recommended that the Kemp hotel be used for the matter of such dancing at Kemp hall. The league voted to assist Mr. Forrester in any way possible to maintain a standard of desirable and attractive dancing. The league voted to take part in the big auto parade during the White Way celebration, and a committee composed of Mesdames Larkum, Feden, Irigoin and Monroe was appointed to attend to the details of the league's participation. The members also voted to accept the invitation to assist the men's committee from the chamber of commerce in the dance at Kemp hotel on the evening of the celebration. Extension Work Feature. The report of the extension committee was a feature of the meeting, as was that of the city beautification committee, of which Mrs. W. S. Curlee is chairman. The extension committee had as guests several members from the North Side Civic league, an organization auxiliary to the league, which has recently begun extensive civic and social work in the North Side. Mrs. Monroe made a report of the organization of athletic and social associations last week among the young people in that part of the city. Mrs. Stone also made a report on the work of the dance at Kemp hotel, which she said was a success. Mrs. Curlee reported that with an expenditure of something over $1,300, the beautification committee had come into the clear with $77.50 on the recent sale of the 700 trees planted in Wichita Falls and the surrounding communities and towns. Mrs. Curlee's report was received with applause and hearty commendation. Immediately following, that the league present the Boy Scouts with seventy-five small trees which the committee did not accept for sale, for their new park, was unanimously approved. Part of the net proceeds of the tree sale will be used to purchase the trees for the beautification committee. The resignation of Mrs. J. W. Stone as entertainment chairman, not to take effect immediately, was tendered and accepted. Mrs. Stone's resignation was accepted as a reason for not continuing as chairman of the committee. The president stated that an appointment of a successor could be announced at an early date. Adjournment was taken at 8 o'clock, after a two-hour session.

A strikingly beautiful example of the Diplopie review in the great coat created by Joseph. The coat is bound with green crepe and trimmed with silver braid and white fringe. Skirt is of navy serge striped with green and black. In this number the dainty Diplopie has a new look, and is made of navy straw trimmed with cords of navy, red and silver ribbon.

JUBILEE'S PARTNER. Illustrations by Judd Mortimer and Louis Edmister.

I could not sleep very good last night, and Jubilee did not sleep very good either because he don't sleep when I don't. I kept my eyes shut but he would not let me. He was like a ghost around in the air over my head. I do not know if legs have ghosts like whole people, but I expect they do. I went to a picture show once where a man was shot by another man and his ghost was in the picture and we could see the furniture and everything right through it, and it had the same clothes and shoes and necktie on that it had on when it was shot, so that proves that clothes has ghost in it. My ears look like they had been skinned. My cat snuffed at the table this morning and said I look disgusting. My mother had not been speaking to her on account of her fur, but when my ant said that my mother kept eating her breakfast without looking at my ant and said that she believed in ghosts, I was still running trains back to where my ant come from, but my ant did not get mad and leave the table. She only does that when she is about done eating. I wonder if a man that sells clothes dies and gets to be a ghost he sells ghost clothes to other ghosts. I bet open and locked at it. His ears look like they had been skinned. My cat snuffed at the table this morning and said I look disgusting. My mother had not been speaking to her on account of her fur, but when my ant said that my mother kept eating her breakfast without looking at my ant and said that she believed in ghosts, I was still running trains back to where my ant come from, but my ant did not get mad and leave the table. CHILDREN NEED NOURISHING SCHOOL LUNCHES AT MID-DAY. The fact that a boy from fourteen to sixteen needs as much, and often more food than a grown man, and that the requirement of the growing girl is about the same, is a fact always recognized by the mothers of school boys and girls. The problem of the school lunch is a real one. Where there are children, the "scraps" from supper seldom remain in existence until morning, and breakfast is a hurried meal for which the mother's time and energy makes only the absolutely necessary preparation of food. In this respect, the allowance for food and preparation of the school lunch—there are free bulletins issued by the Home Economics extension department of the University of Texas, and by the Department of Agriculture of the United States government which are helpful in an astonishing degree. The bulletins make suggestions which seem amazingly simple. But which do not always occur to the busy mother with one to half a dozen mid-day lunches to prepare from left-overs. In communities where the schools do not serve hot lunches during the noon hour, which most of them do not in Wichita Falls, mothers may find unexpected assistance in the bulletins. They may be secured by addressing the Department of Agriculture and the Home Economics department, University of Texas, requesting material on the "school lunch" and related subjects.

PROF. KRUMPEL TO GIVE CONCERT THURSDAY EVENING. Prof. Krumpel, former resident of Wichita Falls and one of the most popular and gifted musicians of the city, will give a concert Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the First Methodist church on Seventh and Lamar. Prof. Krumpel's performances have been attracting much attention in Dallas and vicinity. Dallas newspapers recently containing very complimentary mention of his concert there in the First Presbyterian church, when an audience of three thousand heard him. Mr. Krumpel will give organ and piano numbers, and several bagpipe selections, especially in honor of his younger friends of Wichita Falls. The piano numbers will include Bachman's solo selections and several of the artist's own compositions, and the organ program will include Auber's Overture to the Crown Diamonds, and the bagpipe selections will be popular numbers.

DIAMOND DYE IT LIKE NEW AGAIN. Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Truly! Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

SECOND DAY OF MISSION CONFERENCE FINDS A BIG DELEGATION IN THE CITY

The second day of the Women's Home Mission conference being held at the First Methodist church found a big delegation of north Texas mission workers present at the two local Southern Methodist churches. The programs Tuesday were being characterized by an earnestness and spirit of accomplishment which bids fair to carry out the prediction that the local conference will outrival any previously held in north Texas. Tuesday was given over for the most part to preliminary business and the reception of guests, and the get-together tea Tuesday afternoon. This feature itself was a notable success, guests attending from all of the local mission societies by special invitation. Circle Three of the First church was hostess at the tea. The president's address featured Wednesday morning's meeting, and Mrs. Turner was received with an ovation which was a recognition of her splendid record for the past year. Her lines of citizenship for many years past. She spoke of the progress in mission study work the past year, the big field for women workers and the necessity for mission education in the home. Her remarks were received with frequent applause. Conference reports were given during the morning, and at noon Circle One of the First church served luncheon in the basement dining room to the visiting delegates. The afternoon's session was planned to feature children's work in the conference, and several notable workers in that department were scheduled for talks and reports. Mrs. Henry Dorsey and Miss Althea Jones of Houston were among the special workers reported during the morning. Wednesday evening is to be given over to social service talks and reports, and an informal program.

MRS. C. J. COYNE IS NAMED DIRECTOR Y. W. CAFETERIA

Mrs. C. J. Coyne assumed her duties Tuesday morning as director of the Young Women's Christian Association cafeteria, named recently to take the place of Mrs. W. H. Worthington, resigned. Mrs. Coyne's friends are very much interested in her appointment, as she has been connected with the association as secretary, in charge of Charlotte Kemp Hall, since the organization was started in Wichita Falls. She has directed Charlotte Kemp Hall with marked financial and social success, and the board feels that it has been very fortunate to secure her services. The young women of the Business Club of the association received her with marked enthusiasm and applause Tuesday night when she was presented to that organization as director of the cafeteria, which they patronize largely. Mrs. Coyne will remain at the head of Charlotte Kemp hall, but the active direction of the hall will be assumed by her sister, Miss Mamie Stoecker, who is expected in from Seattle, Washington, the last of the week. Miss Stoecker has visited in Wichita Falls before and has many friends and acquaintances here who will be glad to know she is coming. Straight Silhouette Continues in Favor For Feminine Togs

The local displays of feminine ready-to-wear bear out the statement in the March Good Housekeeping that the straight silhouette will continue in favor for the spring of 1921. Spring coat suits feature the straight lines and are conspicuously well tailored. The blouse coat effects with and without waists preserve the straight, slender line, and the street suits are fashioned in harmony almost without exception. Some of the "simplest" of the new one-piece dresses for afternoon and informal wear "get by" with slightly spread tunics, and the narrow lower skirt, while many that are especially pretty, come out with a frank flare at the bottom. The trend, however, is the straight line. The flare dresses are usually those with long waists, whose popularity is as yet untried for spring or summer wear. While the normal waistline is noticeable in most of the new dresses, the tendency seems against a marked line, such as is necessary with the blouse. The long waists with narrow belt marking of ribbons of self material, with length occasionally narrow, achieved by means of a scant ruffe, seems most popular. The tendency away from a too-defined waist division at the waist, making a marked cutoff in the costume and figure, is in line with the long-established art principle to with blouse waists, no foundation in the waist or figure painter's art for a distinguishable line separating the waist and head from the rest of the body. The fact that the style-makers are beginning, even at this late date, to recognize the principle is encouraging.

MRS. C. J. COYNE IS NAMED DIRECTOR Y. W. CAFETERIA

Mrs. C. J. Coyne assumed her duties Tuesday morning as director of the Young Women's Christian Association cafeteria, named recently to take the place of Mrs. W. H. Worthington, resigned. Mrs. Coyne's friends are very much interested in her appointment, as she has been connected with the association as secretary, in charge of Charlotte Kemp Hall, since the organization was started in Wichita Falls. She has directed Charlotte Kemp Hall with marked financial and social success, and the board feels that it has been very fortunate to secure her services. The young women of the Business Club of the association received her with marked enthusiasm and applause Tuesday night when she was presented to that organization as director of the cafeteria, which they patronize largely. Mrs. Coyne will remain at the head of Charlotte Kemp hall, but the active direction of the hall will be assumed by her sister, Miss Mamie Stoecker, who is expected in from Seattle, Washington, the last of the week. Miss Stoecker has visited in Wichita Falls before and has many friends and acquaintances here who will be glad to know she is coming. Windshields put in, reasonable price, at Decorators Co., 715 Ninth street. 212-1416. Clam chowder at the Bon Ton Grocery building, upstairs. 291-847-cery. 290-210.

A WELL-KNOWN WOMAN

San Antonio, Texas.—"In my early married life I became very ill with feminine trouble and no doctoring or medicines gave me any relief. Finally I started to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I was down in bed, unable to do my own housework. It was only a short time before I was feeling stronger and all my pains left me. I took about six bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and can say positively that it relieved me of all feminine troubles for I have been in perfect health ever since. I take pleasure in recommending Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to other women."—MRS. ANNIE B. EDDY, 124 Rogers St. All druggists. Liquid or tablets.

ST. LOUIS MAN'S APPLICATION IS GRANTED WEDNESDAY, WITH MEMBERS AGREEING.

H. O. CRAVENS NOW IN CHARGE OF LIQUIDATION

Issues Notice That All Policies Are Cancelled at Noon—Will Wind Up Affairs.

Announcement was made at noon Wednesday that the Wichita Great Western Underwriters had been placed in the hands of Frank Kell as receiver, and that H. O. Cravens of the insurance firm of Cravens & Company, had been selected by Mr. Kell to act for him in liquidating the affairs of the company.

Mr. Cravens at once issued a letter to all policy holders notifying them of the receiver and also notifying them that their policies are automatically cancelled from noon of Wednesday. Mr. Cravens will immediately proceed to liquidate the affairs of the company as promptly as possible.

That the receivership is a friendly one is indicated by the following announcement: "Recently the advisory board of the Wichita Great Western Underwriters became dissatisfied with the management of the affairs of the company by the active managing attorney, and due to the fact that the other managing attorney and none of the advisory board were familiar with the insurance business, it was deemed best in order to preserve the assets and wind up the affairs of the company that the same be placed in the hands of a receiver, which was accordingly done, with Mr. Frank Kell of Wichita Falls named as receiver."

The plaintiff asks for a judgment for his alleged debt and interest and that a receiver be appointed at once by the judge of the 58th district court, where the petition has been filed for record.

The defendant in its answer denies all the allegations in the plaintiff's petition with the exception of the appointment of a receiver, which it believes will be to the advantage and interest of the association.

Lewis E. Haslam, also of St. Louis, filed a petition of intervention in connection with the plaintiff's suit and claims that the defendant is indebted to him in the sum of $2,500 and adopts the allegations of the plaintiff.

VAUDEVILLE BILL IS FULL OF VARIETY AT PALACE THIS WEEK

With the eight Victor artists out of the way the Palace theatre became host for the week's vaudeville bill Wednesday afternoon. Advance reports on the seven acts indicate that all the attractions are above the average and that combined they will give one of the best all around bills ever entertained at the Palace.

Jack Patton and Loretta Marks in their abbreviated combination of Broadway hits are billed as headliners. In this act Patton and Marks, both of whom are familiar figures on the circuit of the east, have evolved song and dance travesties on six of Broadway's best known theatrical productions. "Breakfast in Bed," "East is West," "My Lady Friends," "The Greenwich Village Poilieu," "Scandal" and "Tea for Three" have been boiled down to their salient points by the two stars and are presented with the aid of a quartette of capable young ladies.

In "Now What" Wilford Clarke and Grace Menken have an irresistible comedy skit that has been taking splendidly in other parts of the country. Clarke is a direct descendant of Edwin Booth, America's greatest tragedian, but he does not depend on the ancestral royalty for his success, for both he and his partner are artists to the highest degree.

The comedy singers and dancers appearing on the vaudeville stages of the country are legion, but there are very few who have the type of act presented by Sexton and Farrell in "Lights." These two stars are shining luminaries in their profession and have made an enviable reputation in the vaudeville world.

Susan Tompkins, formerly violin soloist of John Phillip Sousa's band, is to appear in a combination concert of classical and popular airs which are reputed to be among the finest ever presented on a vaudeville stage.

In order to catch and hold the public eye things must be done differently, and that is what the McBeans do in their comedy juggling novelty act. Some astonishing feats, warranted to please, are listed in this pair's catalogue.

York's educated canine pupils in "Dog-Gone Funny Antics" is one of the funniest ever seen, as the main performers are six little dogs whose efforts to learn are ripe with ludicrous antics. York, as a clown, does funny acrobatic stunts and then his pupils try to copy him. The result is a lot of fun and laughter.

Only Bankers Seem To Realize This Is Texas' Anniversary

These bankers lead a tough life, they do. Wednesday they were enjoying their third holiday in about three weeks, having observed successively the birthday of Abraham Lincoln, the natal day of G. Washington, and the anniversary of Texas' deft to Santa Anna.

Holiday hours were observed at the postoffice but not at the schools, and business houses generally were open as usual.

Today is the eighty-fifth anniversary of Texas' independence from the republic of Mexico, which document was signed on the banks of the Brazos on March 2, 1836. The Texas established a provisional government at that time, and a few weeks later, on April 21 (the banks will have another holiday then) the Texas army under command of General Sam Houston, mopped up with Santa Anna's forces at San Jacinto, and made their little republic a reality. The Mexicans always claimed it wasn't a fair fight because they only outnumbered the Texans about three to one, and besides, Houston didn't give 'em any warning that he was going to start something.

Among formal observances of the anniversary locally is the annual reception and banquet of ex-students of the State University.

FORT WORTH LAWYERS TAKE UP RAY'S CASE; WILL BE HERE FRIDAY

An effort has been launched by Phillip O. Loop of Fort Worth to save the neck of Floyd Ray, the negro who is condemned to be hanged in the county jail here on March 13. This is the first faint gleam of hope that has entered the case since Judge Weidon of the 58th district court overruled the motion for new trial which was filed the day after the negro was found guilty of rape.

The Fort Worth lawyer has ordered a transcript of testimony and sent word Wednesday morning that he would be in the city Friday morning to appear before the court. Just what action he is to take is problematical but it is believed that an appeal will be taken.

The fight for the negro's life was instituted by the mother of the man. She visited her son here last week and then sent a pathetic appeal to the sheriff and judge asking that her boy's life be spared.

Sheriff Fred Smith Wednesday morning purchased the rope with which the negro is to be hanged. The official hanging knot was tied and Thursday the rope will be tarred in compliance with the law.

The Five Orange Pips

By A. CONAN DOYLE
Copyright, 1921, by Harper & Bros. Published by special arrangement with The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The story so far:
One rainy night while Watson and Sherlock Holmes were sitting before the fire, a pale, thin man with heavy eyes and an anxious manner, came to see them. He told the following story: He lived at Horsham. His name was John Openshaw. His father had a small farm in America and became a planter in Florida. In the Civil war he fought with the south and rose to be a colonel. After it was over he returned to his plantation, where he remained for a few years, and then went home to England, where he took a small estate at Horsham. He was a very good man, mostly in his garden and fields. He drank heavily and had no friends except his loving nephews, who lived with him. About four years before the story opens he died, and the estate was divided into five shares. One of the latter dropped five orange pips. He retired to his room with a brass-bound box from the attic, the contents of which he burned, and he made a will leaving everything to his brother. Later one evening he was sitting in the garden, face down in a little pool of water.

If I remember right, I sent the pips to A. B. and C.—that is, sent the society's warning to them. Then there are successive entries that A and B cleared, or left the country, and finally that C was visited, with, I fear, a sinister result for C. Well, I think, Doctor, that we may let some light into this dark place, and I believe that the only chance young Openshaw has in the meantime is to do what I have told him. There is nothing more to be said or to be done tonight, so hand me over my violin, and let us try to forget for half an hour the miserable weather and the still more miserable ways of our fellowmen.

"You will excuse me for not waiting for you," said he; "I have, I foresee, a very busy day before me in looking into this case of young Openshaw's."
"What steps will you take?" I asked.
"It will very much depend upon the results of my first inquiries. I may have to bring up some other matter."
"You will not go there first?"
"No, I shall commence with the city. Just ring the bell, and the maid will bring up some coffee."
As I waited, I lifted the unopened newspaper from the table and glanced my eye over it. It rested upon a head line which sent a chill to my heart.
"Holmes," I cried, "you are too late."
"Ah!" said he, laying down his cup. "I feared as much. How was it done?"
He spoke calmly, but I could see that he was deeply moved.
"My eye caught the name of Openshaw, and the heading, 'Tragedy near Waterloo Bridge.' Here is the account: 'Between nine and ten last night Pelicconable Cook, of the H division, on duty near Waterloo Bridge, heard a cry for help and a splash in the water. The man, however, was extremely dark and stormy, so that, in spite of the help of several passers-by, it was quite impossible to effect a rescue. The alarm, however, was given, and, by the aid of the water police, the body was eventually recovered. It proved to be that of a young gentleman whose name, as it appears from an envelope which was found on the body, was John Openshaw, and whose residence is near Horsham. It is conjectured that he may have been hurrying down to catch the last train from Waterloo station, and that in his haste and the extreme darkness he missed his path and walked over the edge of one of the small landing places for river steamboats. The body exhibited no traces of violence, and there can be no doubt that the deceased had been the victim of an unfortunate accident, which should have the effect of calling the attention of the authorities to the condition of the riverside landing stages."
We sat in silence for some minutes. Holmes more depressed and shaken than I had ever seen him.

"That hurts my pride, Watson," he said, at last. "It is a petty feeling, no doubt, but it hurts my pride. It becomes a personal matter with me now, and, if God sends me health, I shall set my hand upon this gang. That he should come to me for help, and that I should send him away to his death—"
"He sprang from his chair and paced about the room in uncontrollable agitation, with a flush upon his sallow cheeks, and a nervous clapping and unclapping of his long, thin hands."
"They must be cunning devils," he said, at last. "How could they have deceived him down there? The embankment is not on the direct line to the station. The bridge, no doubt, was too crowded, even on such a night, for their purpose. Well, Watson, we shall see who will win in the long run. I am going out now."
"To the police?"
"No, I shall be my own police. When I have spun the web they may take the flies, but not before."
All day I was engaged in my professional work, and it was late in the evening before I returned to Baker street. Sherlock Holmes had not come back yet. It was nearly ten o'clock before he entered, looking pale and worn. He walked up to the sideboard, and, tearing a piece from the loaf, he devoured it voraciously, washing it down with a long draught of water.
"You are hungry," I remarked.
"Starving. It had escaped by memory. I have had nothing since breakfast."

"Nothing?"
"Not a bite. I had no time to think of it."
"And how have you succeeded?"
"Well."
"You have a clue?"
"I have them in the hollow of my hand. Young Openshaw shall not long remain unavenged. Why, Watson, let us put their own devilish trade-mark upon them. It is well thought of."
"What do you mean?"
"He took an orange from the cupboard, and tearing it to pieces, he squeezed out the pips upon the table. Of these he took five, and thrust them into an envelope. On the inside of the flap he wrote 'S. H. for J. O.' Then he sealed it and addressed it to Captain James Calhoun, Bark Lane Star, Savannah, Georgia."
"That will await him when he enters port," said he, chuckling. "It may give him a sleepless night. He will find it as sure a persecutor of his fate as Openshaw did before him."
"And who is this Captain Calhoun?"
"The leader of the gang, I shall have the others put him first."
"How did you trace it, then?"
"He took a large sheet of paper from his pocket, all covered with dates and names."
"I have spent the whole day," said he, "over Lloyd's registers and the files of old papers, following the future career of every vessel which touched at Funcherry in January and February in '22. There were thirty-six ships of fair tonnage which were reported there during those months. Of these, one, the Lone Star, instantly attracted my attention, since, although it was reported as having cleared from London, the name is that which is given to one of the states of the union."
"Texas, I think."
"I was not and am not sure which, but I knew that the ship must have an American origin."
"What then?"
"I searched the Dundee records, and when I found that the bark Lone Star was there in January, '22, my suspicion became a certainty. I then inquired as to the vessels which lay at present in the port of London."
"Yes?"
"The Lone Star had arrived here last week. I went down to the Albert Dock and found that she had been taken down the river by the early tide this morning, homeward bound to Savannah. I wired to Gravesend, and learned that she had passed some time ago, and as the wind blew easterly, I have no doubt that she is now past the Goodwins, and not very far from the Isle of Wight."
"What will you do, then?"
"Oh, I have my hand upon him. He and the two mates, as I learn, the only native-born Americans in the ship. The others are Finns and Germans. I know, also, that they were all three away from the ship last night. I had it from the stevedore who has been loading their cargo. By the time that their sailing-ship reaches Savannah the mail-boat will have informed the police of Savannah that these three gentlemen are badly wanted here upon a charge of murder."

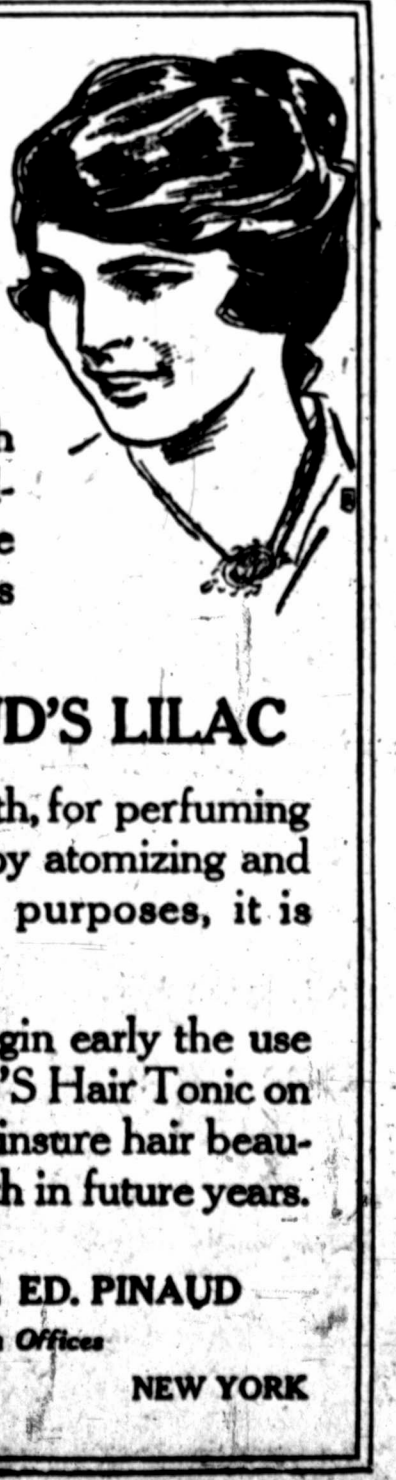

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT.
"Did you remark the postmarks of those letters?" queried Sherlock Holmes.
"The first was from Pondicherry, the second from Dundee, and the third from London."
"From East London. What do you deduce from that?"
"They are all seaports. That the writer was on board of a ship."
"Excellent. We have already a clue. There can be no doubt that the probability—the strong probability—is that the writer was on board of a ship. And now let us consider another point. In the case of Pondicherry, seven weeks elapsed between the time when the deed followed the sign when it came from Dundee. If they had come from Pondicherry in a steamer they would have arrived almost as quickly as a letter. But as a matter of fact seven weeks elapsed, I think that those seven weeks represented the difference between the date when the letter was brought to London, and the sailing-vessel which brought the writer."
"It is possible."
"More than that. It is probable. And now you see the deadly urgency of this new case, and why I urged young Openshaw to caution. The blow has always fallen at the end of the time which I would take the senders to travel the distance. But this one comes from London, and therefore we cannot count upon delay."
"Good God!" I cried; "what can it mean, this relentless persecution?"
"The papers which Openshaw carried are obviously of vital importance to the person or persons in the sailing-ship. I think that it is quite clear that there must be more than one of them. A single man could not have carried out two deaths in such a way as to deceive a coroner's jury. There must have been several in it, and they must have been men of resource and determination."
"Their papers they mean to have, be the holder of them who it may. In the way you see K. K. K. ceases to be the initials of an individual, and becomes the badge of a society."
"But of what society?"
"Have you never—" said Sherlock Holmes, bending forward and sinking his voice—"have you never heard of the Ku Klux Klan?"
"I never have."
Holmes turned over the leaves of the book upon his knee. "Here it is," said he presently. "The Ku Klux Klan, a name derived from the Greek resemblance of the sound produced by cooking a rifle. This terrible secret society was formed by some ex-Confederate soldiers in the Southern States after the civil war, and it rapidly formed local branches, notably in Tennessee, Louisiana, the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida. Its power was used for political purposes, principally for the terrorizing of the negro voters, and the murdering and driving from the country of those who were opposed to its views. Its outrages were usually preceded by a warning sent to the marked man in some fantastic but generally recognized shape—a sprig of oak leaves in some parts, melon seeds or orange pips in others. On receiving this, the victim might either openly abjure his former ways, or might fly from the country. If he braved the matter out, death would unfailingly come upon him, and usually in some strange and unprofessional manner. So perfect was the organization of the society, and so systematic its methods, that there is hardly a case upon record where any man succeeded in braving it with impunity, or in which any of its outrages were traced home to the perpetrators. For some years the organization flourished, and the efforts of the United States government and of the better classes of the community in the south, eventually, in the year 1865, the movement rather suddenly collapsed, although there have been sporadic outbreaks of the same sort since that date."
"You will observe," said Holmes, laying down the volume, "that the sudden breaking up of the society was coincident with the disappearance of Openshaw from America with their papers. It may well have been cause and effect. It is no wonder that he and his family have some of the more implacable spirits upon their track. You can understand that this register of dates may implicate some of the first men in the south, and that there may be many who will not sleep easy at night until it is recovered."
"Then the page we have seen—"

"I searched the Dundee records, and when I found that the bark Lone Star was there in January, '22, my suspicion became a certainty. I then inquired as to the vessels which lay at present in the port of London."
"Yes?"
"The Lone Star had arrived here last week. I went down to the Albert Dock and found that she had been taken down the river by the early tide this morning, homeward bound to Savannah. I wired to Gravesend, and learned that she had passed some time ago, and as the wind blew easterly, I have no doubt that she is now past the Goodwins, and not very far from the Isle of Wight."
"What will you do, then?"
"Oh, I have my hand upon him. He and the two mates, as I learn, the only native-born Americans in the ship. The others are Finns and Germans. I know, also, that they were all three away from the ship last night. I had it from the stevedore who has been loading their cargo. By the time that their sailing-ship reaches Savannah the mail-boat will have informed the police of Savannah that these three gentlemen are badly wanted here upon a charge of murder."

Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. 20-2

"The papers which Openshaw carried are obviously of vital importance to the person or persons in the sailing-ship. I think that it is quite clear that there must be more than one of them. A single man could not have carried out two deaths in such a way as to deceive a coroner's jury. There must have been several in it, and they must have been men of resource and determination."
"Their papers they mean to have, be the holder of them who it may. In the way you see K. K. K. ceases to be the initials of an individual, and becomes the badge of a society."
"But of what society?"
"Have you never—" said Sherlock Holmes, bending forward and sinking his voice—"have you never heard of the Ku Klux Klan?"
"I never have."
Holmes turned over the leaves of the book upon his knee. "Here it is," said he presently. "The Ku Klux Klan, a name derived from the Greek resemblance of the sound produced by cooking a rifle. This terrible secret society was formed by some ex-Confederate soldiers in the Southern States after the civil war, and it rapidly formed local branches, notably in Tennessee, Louisiana, the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida. "OPEN ROAD" POLICY IS ANNOUNCED BY ARKANSAS RAILROAD

HELENA, ARK., March 2.—Mrs. Harter, of the Harrison headquarters of the Missouri & North Arkansas railroad, filed up last Saturday morning by a strike of all employees engaged in the operation of trains, speaking for General Manager Phelan over the telephone this morning, said: "Seven hundred strikers have been brought to Harrison from Kansas City during the past three days. Nearly all the operatives and clerks have come back to work. Charles Patrick Phelan, general manager of the road, announced that no unions will be recognized hereafter and that the Missouri & North Arkansas railroad will be operated from now on as an 'open road.'"

TRUST COMPANY WILL HEAR DENNIS CLAIM TO $26,000 REWARD

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., March 2.—"By Cracky, I'll get that twenty-six thousand yet," said J. J. Dennis today, as he walked over the hot air balloon which he had just inflated. Dennis is seeking the reward of $26,000 for the capture of Willie Dalton and $72,000 in stolen bonds which Dennis' case was heard. Following the award of the money to Paul Draper, son of the constable who arrested Dalton at Heyworth, Dennis brought suit to stop payment of the reward check. Dennis rode into Heyworth with Dennis and Dennis "tipped off" the Heyworth authorities. Young Draper said he might give his former "buddy" a portion of the reward, perhaps $100.

The most disheartening feature of the award tangle is that the amateur sleuth who finally gets the $26,000 must return $1,250 to the government in income and surtaxes. "That tax sure is tough on us working men," mourned one of the claimants' friends today.

SIBERIAN REPUBLIC DEMANDS THAT JAPAN FIX EVACUATION DATE

PEKING, March 2.—Demands that Japan fix a definite date for the evacuation of Siberian territory have been sent to the Tokio foreign office by the minister of foreign affairs of the Far Eastern republic. It is said in a press dispatch received here. The note cited a long list of alleged injuries and impositions suffered by the people of Eastern Siberia at the hands of the Japanese military forces and closed with a demand that there be no Japanese interference in that region.

Allegation was made that the Japanese army was making 'tiffs unbearable for the people residing in territory where troops are located,' and that 'Russian cities and villages in the zone of integration are enveloped in a poisonous atmosphere of robbery, murder and unspeakable crimes.'

NEARLY AS MANY REPUBLICANS AS DEMOCRATS APPOINTED

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Since the president's order of March 21, 1913, applying the non-partisan civil service test to the selection of presidential postmasters, appointments to these offices have gone to the candidate first on the list of eligibles furnished by the civil service commission, and the post-office department has had no record indicating the political affiliations of the several successful candidates.

The assertion has frequently been made that this order has not been conscientiously administered. To show whether this charge is true and to ascertain just how the application of the civil service principle has operated in eliminating partisanship and establishing service as the standard of fitness for appointment, the following letter was on February 12, 1914, addressed to postmasters who have been appointed under this system:

"On March 21, 1913, the president issued an executive order whereby appointments to presidential postoffices were made as the result of an open competitive examination. The result thereof, being certified by the civil service commission to the postmaster general, who submitted to the president the name of the highest qualified eligible for appointment unless it was established that the character or residence of such applicant disqualified him for appointment.

"In accordance with this order, you are appointed postmaster, the appointment being based solely on merit, as shown by the result of the examination. It is now claimed by some that in making these appointments the department has shown discrimination for political reasons. The department is without knowledge of the political affiliations of those appointed under the executive order, as politics was not considered. It will be to the interest of the service to demonstrate that there has been an impartial administration of this order. As all appointments have been submitted to the secretary of the post-office department for approval, it can not affect the selection of anyone and in order to enable the department to answer this charge, which is unfounded, you will state in the space below your political affiliations.

"It is not desired to know how you voted in any particular election or whether you voted for any particular candidate, but the party with which you usually affiliate."

There have been three points of attack upon the postoffice department in an effort to discredit the sincerity of the president's order applying the civil service principle to the appointment of residential postmasters. This disposition of the past of these attacks.

The first allegation was that the eligible having the highest standing was set aside and some one of lower standing where party politics could be served by the attack. This charge was disposed of by citation of the record which showed that of 1,560 appointments then made, 1,414 had gone to persons whose names appeared first on the eligible list submitted by the civil service commission, and that where the first eligibles were not appointed it was because of their death, declination or some disability.

The next false accusation was that the postoffice department failed to recognize the preference given to executive men under the law. In response to a resolution of the senate on this subject the postmaster general submitted a list showing the names of applicants for these offices who passed successfully the examination held by the civil service commission. Applicants entitled to preference on account of military service, having been nominated to the senate for confirmation, the department appointed either first eligibles or gave preference over first eligibles to veterans according to the demands of the best interest of the service.

The postmaster general reply to this resolution gives a list of 213 nominations sent to the senate, but not confirmed, who were entitled to preference for military service, 99 of the names not being the highest eligibles. There is also given a list of 19 who for sufficient reasons were not given preference over the higher eligibles, some having declined or withdrawn their applications, some disqualified by age, some being cancelled by the civil service commission and some for some other disqualifying cause.

No Political Bias.

The records show statistically that there has been no political bias in making appointments under the president's order of March 21, 1913; that the first eligible has invariably been appointed unless disqualified, and that preference has been given to eligibles with military service, except where this could not be done without injury to the service.

Replies have been received from 2,192 postmasters to the letter above set forth, which of course removes beyond cavil the question of their party affiliation. These replies cover every state in the Union and show that, in including all sections, 1,112 appointees were democrats, 997 were republicans, 23 were independent, 19 were prohibitionists, 3 were socialists, 129 had no affiliation and 10 failed to state their affiliation.

Of the eleven southern states of Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia—overwhelmingly democratic in their population—the quotient stands 598 democrats, 546 republicans, 28 independent, 3 prohibitionists, 3 socialists, 35 without affiliation, 3 blank and 4 dead.

Even in the eleven almost solidly democratic states a considerable number of republicans received appointment as postmasters under the application of this civil service order. In Alabama 4 republicans were appointed postmasters, in Arkansas 6, in Florida 7, in Georgia 5, in Kentucky 5, in Louisiana 4, in Mississippi 1, in North Carolina 2, in South Carolina 2, in Texas 11, and in Virginia 5.

In states where the population is more evenly divided between the two great political parties, the appointment of republicans frequently predominated. In California, 23 republicans and 4 democrats were appointed. In Colorado 19 republicans and 18 democrats, in Connecticut 19 republicans and 4 democrats, in Delaware 1 republicans and 2 democrats, in Idaho 11 republicans and 5 democrats, in Illinois 63 republicans and 22 democrats, in Indiana 19 republicans and 28 democrats, in Iowa 43 republicans and 19 democrats, in Kansas 29 republicans and 29 democrats, in Maine 18 republicans and 19 democrats, in Maryland 4 republicans and 10 democrats, in Massachusetts 20 republicans and 6 democrats, in Michigan 44 republicans and 14 democrats, in Minnesota 53 republicans and 15 democrats, in Missouri 18 republicans and 54 democrats, in Montana 25 republicans and 10 democrats, in Nebraska 35 republicans and 21 democrats, in Nevada 2 republicans and 1 democrat, in New Hampshire 7 republicans and 4 democrats, in New Jersey 21 republicans and 11 democrats, in New Mexico 3 republicans and 7 democrats, in New York 49 democrats and 26 democrats, in North Dakota 24 republicans and 15 democrats, in Ohio 34 republicans and 29 democrats, in Oklahoma 26 republicans and 8 democrats, in Oregon 11 republicans and 3 democrats, in Pennsylvania 15 republicans and 37 democrats, in Rhode Island 1 democrat, in South Dakota 27 republicans and 15 democrats, in Tennessee 1 republicans and 24 democrats, in Utah 4 republicans and 4 democrats, in Vermont 3 republicans and 2 democrats, in Washington 23 republicans and 10 democrats, in West Virginia 10 republicans and 2 democrats, in Wisconsin 14 republicans and 7 democrats, and in Wyoming 19 republicans and 3 democrats.

One prohibitionist, one socialist and one having no affiliation were appointed from California. One prohibitionist and one of no affiliation were appointed from Idaho. In Illinois there was one independent, one prohibitionist and 7 of no affiliation. In Iowa there were 3 independent, 1 prohibitionist and 9 of no affiliation. In Kansas 1 prohibitionist and 1 of no affiliation. In Massachusetts 2 independent, 1 prohibitionist and 4 of no affiliation. In Minnesota 3 independent, 1 prohibitionist and 1 without affiliation. In Missouri 1 independent and 4 without affiliation. In Nebraska there were two independent, 1 prohibitionist and 13 without affiliation. In New York there were 1 independent, 1 socialist and 3 without affiliation. In Ohio 3 independent and 5 without affiliation. In Oklahoma there were 2 independent, 1 prohibitionist and 1 without affiliation. In Texas there were 2 independent and 8 without affiliation. In South Carolina 1 prohibitionist and 1 without affiliation. In Tennessee there were 2 independent and 4 without affiliation. In Vermont 1 independent and Virginia 2 without affiliation. In Washington 1 independent and 1 without affiliation. In Wisconsin 2 independent, 1 prohibitionist and 4 without affiliation.

The nonpartisan operation of the president's order applying civil service rules to these appointments is indicated by the correspondence conveying this information, as well as by the statistics assembled. One postmaster writes: "At time of my appointment I was republican county chairman," and another says, "Have been republican county chairman ten years." Another republican postmaster says: "The charges of political discrimination by your department is unfounded."

Another republican postmaster writes: "I was one of the six who took the examination for this position. I was the only one who was republican; the rest were democrats, two boasted of party influence. I simply took the exam. I had taught in grammar and high school; been superintendent of schools for 25 years and for two years had been treasurer and head bookkeeper for a corporation doing some thousands of dollars a week of business. I felt if I did not get the position there must be something wrong about 'civil service,' but I got it, although in the 'wrong' party. I never voted a democratic ticket in my life."

Another republican writes: "I am returning today answer to your inquiry as to my party affiliation. I do not think, however, that the mere statement that I am and always have been a republican, is sufficient answer in my case to the inquiry."

"For 40 years I have edited republican newspapers in —. More than 30 of these years I edited newspapers in this city. They were not merely republican in name. I was regarded as a radical, uncompromising, 'stand pat' republican. With that record, I entered the contest for the — postoffice, when it was announced that civil service rules would govern the appointment."

"When the civil service commission made its report, I was the highest on the list, and my name was certified to Postmaster General Burleson, who promptly recommended me for appointment, and President Wilson at once made the appointment as recommended. If there is any question or doubt as to the fairness or consistency of the administration in living up to its pledge in this line, my own case should be sufficient to prove the doubt groundless. I desire to give my testimony as to the absolute fairness of the department in making these appointments."

After stating his party affiliation one says: "I feel that I should further state that I have affiliated with the republican party for the past 20 years."

"So far as I have been able to ascertain the question of politics did not enter into either the examination or my subsequent appointment to this office."

One of those who disavowed any political affiliation said: "The commission certainly never showed political favoritism in my appointment. The other candidate was a democrat, while I lived with my father who is a life-long republican and has been the judge of every election in this place for 30 years."

Another letter from a republican shows that a very narrow margin of superiority in his rating was sufficient to secure his appointment.

"I wish to state that I was appointed because I made the highest grade in the competitive examination, beating the next highest by only 54-100 of a point."

"This appointment came promptly and without the use of any outside influence, and I consider that the department has lived up to the letter and meaning of President Wilson's wise order."

A republican writes: "I received the appointment but did not accept; but I always felt that the order was administered impartially."

Another republican says: "I believe it my duty to express my candid and sincere belief in the impartial administration of the executive order of March 21, 1913. Long before I received my appointment and up to the present time I have followed through the press the action of the department in making appointments and it is my frank belief that it has been impartial in every respect."

A postmaster who reports himself as being a democrat says: "William took the examination at the same time I did —. We were competitors for the office. He was an executive man, wounded in 'No Man's Land' and a republican. My standing was much higher than his in the examination, but he was appointed postmaster at his office. I was glad of it, would not have taken the examination had I known he was going to take it. He resigned and I was appointed in his stead."

A republican writes: "I was treated with absolute fairness in every step of procedure from the time of taking the examination until I received my appointment as postmaster. I shall be glad to render any further aid in this matter that you may see fit to ask. The merit system as established by executive order should be retained as a permanent thing or part in the postal service."

An independent writes: "The records of the department will show that my appointment was bitterly opposed by the pie eating democrats and endorsed by the leading business men regardless of political faith. On account of this opposition there was one or more investigations and your inspector called on every business house in the city to get a personal expression from them on my appointment.

"Have voted for the following men: Bryan, Wilson, Senator Capper for governor and senator. Governor Akins. This is why I was not considered a deserving democrat and the chairman of the democratic central committee did all in his power to prevent my appointment."

Another postmaster says: "I have always been a republican, first, last and all the time, and nothing was said in my application or any correspondence from the department relative to my policy, and if the matter was ever discussed at any time I had no knowledge of it and am sure that the department did not know my party affiliation at the time of my appointment."

One postmaster says that prior to his appointment he was reported in his community that appointments were being made without regard to the civil service order, and that he was urged to believe that he would stand no chance of appointment on account of not being a democrat. "I refused to believe such information," he says, "and I read the executive order very carefully. I reached only one conclusion, that merit alone would be the deciding factor. As for the matter of my party affiliation, for had it not been for the executive order under which I took my examination with an equal opportunity with all the other candidates, I would not be the postmaster at — today. For being a republican, I would have had no chance, if the matter was to be decided politically."

"I am frank to say that I fall to see where there are any facts to base this criticism upon. In fact if it was to be political and I am sure it favored, then why was the order issued?"

"In the judgment of the writer, while a republican, and should any changes be made, the postmaster stands in line for continuous service, yet I believe the order was one of the finest things issued from the executive office, for it removes all political squabbles for the postmasterships, and places them upon a competitive basis. The result will be, not as often would happen—incompetency—but highest efficiency. I sincerely hope that the new administration will go one step further and place the postmasters under the classified civil service. This will be a great step forward."

"I will further add that when I took my examination, I was warned in writing by the commission not to mention religion or politics anywhere."

"It would certainly be of interest and value, I think, if the result of your inquiry could be sent to all the postmasters."

Another republican whose appointment came as a surprise says:

"The enclosed communication does not call for more information than stated on the blank one but I think my case is just a little different than most appointments. I served four terms as postmaster in this office from 1888 to 1914. When the postmaster succeeded me resigned, I was requested by patrons of the office to take up the examination. I could not see any reason for appointing a republican to test the new rule of civil service I submitted my papers and was very much surprised when I received notice that I was at the head of the list and was appointed postmaster. There certainly was no political influence in my case. Had I known that the postoffice appointments were going back to political favoritism I never would have taken up a good position so good as this."

Another says: "I desire to advise that absolutely no political, religious or fraternal affiliations were mentioned in the appointment of the postmaster at —. I have been a life-long republican and received my appointment solely on merit after passing the highest grade in the civil service examination for the position."

One postmaster says: "I am in possession of three commissions signed by republican presidents for postmaster at another office of the third class, and at the examination held for postmaster at — the other applicant was a democrat and chairman of the precinct committee, so I can truthfully state that there was no discrimination shown in this case for political or other reasons. The Hon. Frank W. Mondell will verify that he has recommended me to the previous appointments as postmaster under a republican administration, and am satisfied that the ruling of March 31, 1917, was strictly adhered to in this case. Any further information will be cheerfully supplied."

One of the postmasters who is a democrat writes: "I am glad to state that in making my appointment the department adhered strictly to the presidential order of March 31, 1917. The department had no knowledge at that time of my party preference as I made no reference thereto on the papers I submitted with my application. As a matter of fact I had the combined opposition of both major parties in my own town, and the opposition of the congressman from my district. Had the appointment been made from a political standpoint I certainly would not have received it. My appointment was due to the fact that I received the highest grade in the competitive examination."

An independent says: "Have always been strictly an independent in politics, not affiliated with any political party but guided entirely by the issues and men presented in each campaign. Have twice voted for a republican president and three times for a democratic president. During the past 26 years with one or two exceptions I have supported the republican members of congress and generally speaking have supported the republican state ticket. At the time I was appointed postmaster here my appointment was strongly opposed by every democratic politician in the state."

In another instance of a democrat being appointed the postmaster writes: "When the civil service examination was held to fill the position as postmaster at this office four applicants contested; three democrats and one republican. The democrat who had the endorsement of the democratic organization and who had secured the appointment as postmaster at this office, stood third in the examination, and the republican stood fourth, and I stood first, and in compliance with the executive order, I was nominated for the position."

"The department did not know or ask what my political affiliation was. I am convinced I owe it to the public to state the appointment on a political basis."

A republican writes that he was rejected by the local board in August, 1917, (draft) because of bad eyes and that his attention was called to the president's executive order relative to the competitive appointment of postmasters and advised to take the examination. "Of the four applicants who took the examination," he says, "the other three were affiliated with the democratic party and two have been candidates for other offices; I am convinced that no political influence was used to secure their appointments and that though they were democrats their political affiliation was not known or inquired into. One democrat says: "In connection with the inclosure I might say that I filed my application for the local postoffice, passed the examination and was appointed and confirmed without at any time writing or asking anyone either in public or private life any assistance. My political affiliations have been known to anyone handling the matter unless such persons on his own initiative discovered what my politics were and if this was done I do not know anything about it."

One republican postmaster closes his communication with the suggestion: "The republican party will do well to copy the democratic party in the matter of postoffice appointments. A lot of my friends thought there would be no use for me to take the examination for postmaster on account of being a republican but politics did not enter into the matter at all. The democratic party has been very fair so far as I am concerned and the republican party will make a mistake if the old political spoils system is employed in making postoffice appointments."

HEAVY CASUALTIES SUFFERED BY RATS WHEN DRIVE STARTS

EXTERMINATION CAMPAIGN BEGINS THROUGHOUT CITY WEDNESDAY.

EVERY INDICATION OF SATISFACTORY RESULTS

Entire Town Covered by Campaign Which is Planned Along Numerous Lines.

The following official communique was issued Wednesday afternoon from the headquarters of General J. C. Hunt, commanding the anti-rat forces: "Early this afternoon our troops attacked in force on all fronts simultaneously, and enormous casualties in the enemy ranks were soon apparent. We are pressing forward vigorously. The enemy is completely demoralized."

SOMETHING OF HISTORY AND HABITS OF RATS

If you can destroy just one rat couple Wednesday, in the extermination drive, you will have wiped out about 1,500 potential rats a year from now. Just how many rats there will be if you don't kill one papa and one mamma tomorrow, you can figure out for yourself, with the assistance of any well known arithmetic and adding machine, as follows:

One pair of rats will produce an average of seven litters a year, ten to the litter; that's 70 more rats to start with. Rats start breeding within 70 days after birth, which means that the ten in the first litter would have time to propagate 250 to 300 before the end of twelve months.

The next litter would bring about 100 additional rodents into the world, and these would start marrying and giving in marriage also within 70 days. Under such conditions as plentiful food and a warm climate, rats can sometimes produce ten or twelve litters a year; probably seven is a fair average.

Every rat you kill, therefore, is really a great big pile of potential rats, for rats appear to believe firmly in the command to replenish the earth. Rats are found in Wichita, Falls and Texas generally is a brown rat, known also as the Norwegian rat. He is a fast breeder, as the above figures indicate, and he will consume his own weight in food every little while. He is not a climber, like his relative the Egyptian or roof rat, sticking close to the ground, but he will climb on a human, accommodatingly leave around for him in houses or in fields.

CHAMP CLARK DIES 2:10 P.M. WEDNESDAY

...and molar, thus contributing to the neighborhood excitement and agony in a double-barreled way. Champ's mother died when he was but a small lad and while his father was on the road Champ and his sister were cared for by neighbors. In the winter he went to the old school. Ambition found young Clark eagerly. At the age of 15 he expressed a desire to walk from his Kentucky home to West Point, New York, to try the entrance examination to the United States Military Academy. At 18 he was "farmed out" to an elderly farmer, John Call. John had trouble with his eyes but upon the advent of Clark he agreed to subscribe for Prentice's Journal (later the Louisville Courier-Journal, edited for years by that sterling democrat, Henry Waterson) providing Champ would read the news to him.

the farm, knowing that Morgan had a fine eye for good saddlers. "Thankful acknowledgments," At a turn in the road Clark met Morgan's men. The alarm had reached the town however and before the raiders were able to take possession of the horses, the home guards charged upon them and for the time being they were routed. In the excitement Clark reached the woods and saved Call's horses from the raiders.

This incident fired the fighting blood in young Clark and he soon stowed away to join in the turmoil that we remember in those parts. He stood on his tiptoes and swelled his chest at the recruiting offices but he was too young and could not come up to the physical standards. Undismayed he made several attempts but in each case he was unsuccessful. Clark saw his father but seldom. However, one day when they were together the young man read Patrick Henry's speech to his father. One line seemed to strike the boy's fancy: "The race is not always to the swift, nor the battle to the strong."

The elder Clark said: "That is from the Bible; if you want to learn the use of terse English, why don't you get that book?" From that day young Clark buried his nose in the Bible and in later years he often remarked that the rhapsody beginning: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels and have not charity—I am as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal" was one of his greatest inspirations.

At 16 Clark started teaching school and at 17 he had a class of 40 pupils, most of whom were grown men who had served in the army and upon their return were anxious to master the mysteries of the three R's. He entered Kentucky university in the fall when he had reached the age of 17, teaching school, working as a hired man on a farm, clerk in a country store and parting his hair in the middle to attract trade, he managed to make books and tongue meet. After three years in the university and just prior to graduation he got into a college row. The president of the university was away at the time and the faculty took it upon themselves to suspend Clark. The president reviewed the case, reinstated Clark and sent for him to return. Clark refused.

Young College President. Attracted by Clark's work at Bethany, the faculty of Marshall college, the state normal school at Huntington, W. Va., called him to the presidency at the age of 23, and he enjoyed the distinction of being the youngest college president in the United States. Leaving Marshall college, Clark went to Cincinnati, where he matriculated in the Cincinnati law school, where he received his degree in law. Moving to Wichita, Kansas, he hung out his shingle and awaited the first client—a vain wait of eleven weeks.

He had to have money to get out of the state so he gave up the law and went into the field as a hired man, writing copy. From Kansas he migrated to Missouri, stopping at Louisiana and formed a law partnership with David A. Ball. Clark's first Sunday in Louisiana found him in the Campbell church, where he was immediately re-elected to full membership. A few days later a steamboat trip was arranged by the young men of the town. The old steamer War Eagle, towing the barge Mamie, brass band and everything steamed slowly up the broad river in the moonlight. Clark, the young churchman, imbued with the spirit of the occasion and the beautiful young women aboard, danced all the way up the river to the turning point and then danced all the way back again.

The following Sunday Clark attended services at the Campbell church unaware of a great storm which had been brewing since the night of the boat race. He was called before the bar of the church and promptly expelled from membership—dancing being forbidden in the ritual of the Campbellites. Clark left the church and soothed his feverish brow in the shade of the maples by the roadside. Finally he decided what he would do. He reentered the church and at the close of the service when the call is extended to all repentant sinners to take their places in the front pews, Clark walked straight to the repentant bench and sat down.

The pastor was nonplused and the presiding elder gasped. There was a hasty consultation between the church and the faculty took it upon themselves to suspend Clark. The president reviewed the case, reinstated Clark and sent for him to return. Clark refused. In the fall of the year Clark went to Bethany, W. Va., where he entered the school founded by Alexander Campbell, the founder of the church variously known as the Disciples, the Church of Christ and the Campbellites. Here he took the junior and senior courses in one year and "existed" on $100, all the money he had to carry on his studies for the entire school term. It is said that he began studying shortly after daylight and seldom finished before midnight. To save time he absented himself from chapel until ordered to attend. He then appeared with his head shaved and so distracted the service that he was excused from further attendance.

He was elected to congress from the ninth congressional district, which was the seat of the democratic party leader on the floor of the house of representatives. He was again chosen for this place in 1909. Then followed the long and bitter fight against Cannonism in the house in which Clark took a leading part. By the unanimous vote of his party he was chosen as speaker of the house in 1910.

The democratic presidential nomination campaign of 1912 came on while Clark was still speaker. His own state, Missouri, had in convention called for another purpose, passed a resolution endorsing the nomination of Governor Folk for the presidency. So long as that condition existed, Clark would not consent to enter the race for the presidency, yet the people of his state clamored for him. The matter finally came to a head when the state committee met and called a special state convention to settle the question. Clark carried 111 of the 114 votes in the state, securing nearly every one of the delegates to the state convention.

This took place in February, and the national convention was only four months away. It was a late start, funds for campaigning were very scarce, and Clark refused to leave his post of duty in Washington to tour the country in behalf of his candidacy. Clark entered the Baltimore convention far in the lead of any other candidate. It was evident early in the convention proceedings that on the first ballot Clark would have a clear majority of the votes.

The Fatal Two-Thirds Rule. In 1844 when Martin Van Buren was a candidate for the presidency, some of the party leaders put through a rule that required the candidate receive two-thirds of the votes of the convention instead of the former rule of a majority. The rule was put through to prevent the nomination of Van Buren was defeated. That rule has since been the rule of democratic conventions, but had remained a dead letter for 75 years until revived at Baltimore in 1912 to defeat Champ Clark. Clark maintained his majority on nine ballots and led the convention 29 ballots, but when William Jennings Bryan made his now-famous speech charging an alliance between the Clark candidacy and the "reactionaries," Clark's strength waned and Woodrow Wilson came to the front and was elected.

An O. HENRY Story

Sound and Fury

By O. HENRY.

PERSONS OF THE DRAMA
Mr. Penne . . . An Author
Miss Lore . . . An Amante

SCENE—Workroom of Mr. Penne's popular novel factory.

Mr. Penne—Good morning, Miss Lore. Glad to see you so prompt. We should finish that June installment for the Epoch today. Leverett is crowding me for it. Are you quite ready? We will resume where we left off yesterday. (Dictates.) "Kate, with a sigh, rose from his knees, and—"

Miss Lore—Excuse me; you mean "rose from her knees," instead of "his," don't you?

Mr. Penne—Er—no—"his," if you please. It is the love scene in the garden. (Dictates.) "Rose from his knees where, blushing with youth's bewitching coyness, she had rested for a moment after Cortland had declared his love. The hour was one of supreme and tender joy. When Kate—scene that Cortland never—"

Miss Lore—Excuse me; but wouldn't it be more grammatical to say "when Kate rose," instead of "seen?"

Mr. Penne—The context will explain. (Dictates.) "When Kate—scene that Cortland never forgot—"

Miss Lore—Oh!

Mr. Penne (dictates)—Chapter thirty-four. Heading—"What Kate Found in the Garden." "That fragrant summer morning brought gracious tasks to all. The bees were at the honeysuckle blossoms on the porch. Kate, singing a little song, was training the riotous branches of her favorite woodbine. The sun, himself, had risen."

Miss Lore—Shall I say "had risen?"

Mr. Penne (very slowly and with desperate deliberation)—The—sun—himself—had—rows—of—blushing—pinks—and—hollyhocks—and—hyacinths—waiting—that—he—might—dry—their—dew-drenched—cups.

Miss Lore—Oh!

Mr. Penne (dictates)—The earliest trolley, scattering the birds from its pathway like some marauding cat, brought Cortland over from Oldport. He had forgotten his fair—

Miss Lore—Him? Wonder how he got the conductor to—

Mr. Penne (very loudly)—"Forgotten his fair and roseate visions of the night in the practical light of the sober morn."

Miss Lore—Oh!

Mr. Penne (dictates)—"He greeted her with his usual smile and manner. "See the waves," he cried, pointing to the heaving waters of the sea, seaward and returning to the rockbound shore. "Ready to break," Kate said, with—"

Miss Lore—My! One evening he has his arm around her, and the next morning he's ready to break her heart to a man!

Mr. Penne (with suspicious solemnity)—There are times, Miss Lore, when a man becomes so far exasperated that even a woman— But suppose we finish the sentence. (Dictates.) "Ready to break," Kate said, with the thrilling look of a soul-awakened woman, "into foam and spray, destroying themselves upon the shore they love so well."

Miss Lore—Oh!

Mr. Penne (dictates)—"Cortland, in Kate's presence heard faintly the voice of caution. Thirty years had not cooled his ardor. It was in his power to bestow great gifts upon the girl, but he still retained the beliefs that he had at twenty." (To Miss Lore, covertly.) I think that will be enough for the present.

Miss Lore (coolly)—Well, if he had the twenty that he believed he had, it might buy her a rather nice one.

Mr. Penne (faintly)—The last sentence was my own. We will discontinue for the day, Miss Lore.

Miss Lore—Shall I come again tomorrow?

Mr. Penne (helpless under the spell)—If you will be so good. (Exit Miss Lore.)

Asbestos Curtain.

Mr. Penne (with extreme politeness)—Possibly you would gather my meaning more intelligently if you would wait for the conclusion of the sentence. (Dictates.) "Watched her rise as gracefully as a fawn as she mounted the eastern terrace."

Miss Lore—Oh!

Mr. Penne (dictates)—"And yet Cortland's position was so far above that of this rustic maiden that he dreaded to consider the social upheaval that would ensue should he marry her. In no uncertain tones the traditional voices of his caste and world cried out loudly to him to let her go. What should follow—"

Miss Lore (looking up with a start)—I'm sure I can't help Mr. Penne. Unless (with a pique) you would want to add "Gallegher."

Mr. Penne (coolly)—Pardon me. I was not seeking to impose upon you the task of a collaborator. Kindly consider the question a part of the text.

Miss Lore—Oh!

Mr. Penne (dictates)—"On one side was love and Kate; on the other side his heritage of social position and family pride. Would love win? Love, that the poets tell us will last forever! (Perceives that Miss Lore looks fatigued, and looks at his watch.) That's a good long stretch. Perhaps we'd better knock off a bit. (Miss Lore does not flinch.)"

Mr. Penne—I said, Miss Lore, we've been at it quite a long time—wouldn't you like to knock off for a while?

Miss Lore—Oh! Were you addressing me before? I put what you said down: I thought it belonged in the story. It seemed to fit in all right. Oh, no; I'm not tired.

Mr. Penne—Very well, then, we will continue. (Dictates.) "In spite of these qualms and doubts, Cortland was a happy man. That night at the club he silently toasted Kate's bright eyes in a bumper of the rarest vintage. Afterward he set out for a stroll with, as Kate on—"

Miss Lore—Excuse me, Mr. Penne, for venturing a suggestion; but don't you think you might state that in a less coarse manner?

Mr. Penne (astounded)—Wh-wh—I'm afraid I fail to understand you.

Miss Lore—His condition. Why not say he was "full" or "intoxicated"? It would sound much more elegant than the way you express it.

Mr. Penne (still darkly wondering)—Will you kindly point out to me where I have intimated that Cortland was "full," if you prefer that word?

Miss Lore (calmly consulting her stenographic notes)—It is right here, word for word. (Reads.) "Afterward he set out for a stroll with a—"

Mr. Penne (with peculiar emphasis)—Ah! And now will you kindly take down the expurgated phrase? (Dictates.) "Afterward he set out for a stroll with, as Kate on one occasion had facetiously told him, her spirit leaning upon his arm."

Miss Lore—Oh!

Mr. Penne (dictates)—Chapter thirty-four. Heading—"What Kate Found in the Garden." "That fragrant summer morning brought gracious tasks to all. The bees were at the honeysuckle blossoms on the porch. Kate, singing a little song, was training the riotous branches of her favorite woodbine. The sun, himself, had risen."

Miss Lore—Shall I say "had risen?"

Mr. Penne (very slowly and with desperate deliberation)—The—sun—himself—had—rows—of—blushing—pinks—and—hollyhocks—and—hyacinths—waiting—that—he—might—dry—their—dew-drenched—cups.

Miss Lore—Oh!

Mr. Penne (dictates)—The earliest trolley, scattering the birds from its pathway like some marauding cat, brought Cortland over from Oldport. He had forgotten his fair—

Miss Lore—Him? Wonder how he got the conductor to—

Mr. Penne (very loudly)—"Forgotten his fair and roseate visions of the night in the practical light of the sober morn."

Miss Lore—Oh!

Mr. Penne (dictates)—"He greeted her with his usual smile and manner. "See the waves," he cried, pointing to the heaving waters of the sea, seaward and returning to the rockbound shore. "Ready to break," Kate said, with—"

Miss Lore—My! One evening he has his arm around her, and the next morning he's ready to break her heart to a man!

Mr. Penne (with suspicious solemnity)—There are times, Miss Lore, when a man becomes so far exasperated that even a woman— But suppose we finish the sentence. (Dictates.) "Ready to break," Kate said, with the thrilling look of a soul-awakened woman, "into foam and spray, destroying themselves upon the shore they love so well."

Miss Lore—Oh!

Mr. Penne (dictates)—"Cortland, in Kate's presence heard faintly the voice of caution. Thirty years had not cooled his ardor. It was in his power to bestow great gifts upon the girl, but he still retained the beliefs that he had at twenty." (To Miss Lore, covertly.) I think that will be enough for the present.

Miss Lore (coolly)—Well, if he had the twenty that he believed he had, it might buy her a rather nice one.

Mr. Penne (faintly)—The last sentence was my own. We will discontinue for the day, Miss Lore.

Miss Lore—Shall I come again tomorrow?

Mr. Penne (helpless under the spell)—If you will be so good. (Exit Miss Lore.)

Asbestos Curtain.

Mr. Penne (with extreme politeness)—Possibly you would gather my meaning more intelligently if you would wait for the conclusion of the sentence. (Dictates.) "Watched her rise as gracefully as a fawn as she mounted the eastern terrace."

Miss Lore—Oh!

Mr. Penne (dictates)—"And yet Cortland's position was so far above that of this rustic maiden that he dreaded to consider the social upheaval that would ensue should he marry her. In no uncertain tones the traditional voices of his caste and world cried out loudly to him to let her go. What should follow—"

HOME-TOWN BIDS A GOD-SPEED TO PRESIDENT-ELECT

OLD DOC HARDING'S BOY AND WIFE ARE GIVEN FAREWELL BY PEOPLE OF MARION.

FRONT PORCH SCENE OF THOUSANDS OF HANDCLAPS

Mr. and Mrs. Harding Will Leave Marion for Capital Late Wednesday Evening.

By RAYMOND CLAPPER, United Press Staff Correspondent.

MARION, March 2.—The old front porch on Mount Vernon avenue heard a fervent "God bless you" today as the home folks of Marion came out to bid farewell to old Doc Harding's boy and his wife, who started at the bottom of the ladder and are now about to step up on the top rung.

The old cronies of Harding's younger days were there. There was Dick Crisinger and Jim Prendegast, the town's leading democrats, who burned up hundreds of gallons of gasoline, hauling weary front porch visitors around town last summer. They were there because they loved Warren G. Harding and Florence Kilgus.

Harding did little work today. His brain leaves for Washington early in the evening.

With the appointment of Senator A. B. Fall for interior, Andrew W. Mellon for treasurer and Will Hays for postmaster general officially announced, Harding's cabinet selections have all been confirmed except for labor, which he hopes to announce today.

General Wood has under advisement today the offer to become governor general of the Philippine islands. He expects to confer with Harding in Washington after inauguration and will make known his decision then.

In Chamounix, the French winter resort, where snow removal methods are not so effective and up-to-date as here, mothers have adopted the sled perambulator for use in conveying their offspring about with them. One advantage of the novel affair is that it can be taken with one on a skiing or ice-skating trip as well as for their expedition. Ladies, the sled perambulator.

LAST NIGHT'S DREAMS; WHAT THEY MEAN

EXILE.

TO dream that you are going into exile, say many of the mystic oracles, is a sign that you will be successful and happy. They regard it as one of the most favorable of dreams. But, they say, the dream that you are returning from exile is not so favorable; for it is a sign of sorrow coming to the dreamer. Others say that to dream of seeing an exile is a sign that you are in danger of losing money—as some put it that you will become straightened in circumstances and be obliged to put up with many privations for a time at least if you are not careful. Some think that it is fortunate to dream of being an exile but if you dream that you are an exile returning to your former country you must expect to have to put up with many vexations and petty annoyances. Many of the oracles think that the best dream of this nature is to dream that you are being sent into exile; for that is an augury that you will meet with great success in spite of the machinations of your enemies. A few of the oracles think that a dream of seeing or of being an exile also means that the dreamer is about to undertake a journey of considerable length which will turn out to his profit. Some say it portends a change of residence.

MRS. ORTHWEIN IN CELL CHARGED WITH MURDER LONGS FOR SIMPLE VIRTUES

By CARL VICTOR LITTLE

CHICAGO, March 2.—Mrs. Isabella Cora Orthwein sat in her cell today rusing the day she left her home town. She longed for the simple virtues.

Mrs. Orthwein was booked on the charge of murder. She shot and killed Herbert Zeigler, the only man she loved, in her luxurious apartment in the "Gold Coast" district after a wild night of revelry.

"Oh, if I could only blot out the last 12 years of my life and start anew," she sobbed.

"I was happy then, living in the humble little home of my parents in Columbus, Ohio, where I was born. If I had it to do over, I wouldn't trade that simple little home for the most wonderful golden palace in the world.

"In the days of my youth, I was happy and content. I knew nothing of gay apartment parties, convivial grill room celebrations, and the other things that go with the hectic night life. I had never tasted liquor then. I had never loved.

"If I had stayed back in Columbus, I would still be happy, I am sure. I probably would have married and had several children. I would have the respect of the community and be loved by my neighbors.

"Now I am charged with murder." Mrs. Orthwein said a foolish impulse to see a large city eventually led her to a cell.

She told of leaving Columbus for the first time when she was 16 years old. She went to Pittsburgh and met a ball player in a flirtation whom she married.

"It was while jumping from big city to big city that I acquired a taste for night life," she said. "I craved comforts and everything money could buy. How foolish I was."

She was divorced from the ball player and then married Ralph Orthwein, St. Louis, from whom she was divorced.

"He had a lot of money and an ambition to spend it all on liquor," she said.

"It was too late to go back to the simple life after that.

"I wandered from city to city seeking excitement. In New York I arranged a marriage for convenience.

"Then I thought fate had given me happiness—I met Herbert Zeigler, the only man I ever loved—in Chicago. I broke off the engagement with the New York man—never mind his name.

"But I loved him too well, so well that I killed him when he became abusive. Herb, the only man I ever loved, is dead by my own hands."

Los Angeles Making Great Preparations to Have 1924 Olympics Brought to Coast

By HENRY L. FARREL
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
NEW YORK, March 1.—"Bob" Weaver, president of the A. A. U., is going to Los Angeles in June to get the 1924 Olympic games for Los Angeles. He is going loaded with the most tempting bait that has ever been offered to foreign nations.

Los Angeles will bring the athletes of every foreign nation to the Pacific coast, take care of them while they are there and send them home—free of charge.

"I believe our location will be considered very favorably," Weaver said in a letter today.

Swan and Frange have written letters to the boss of amateur athletics, assuring him of their support when the vote comes at the international meeting in the city for the next summer.

Last summer in Antwerp, the English delegation also expressed their favor of holding the next games in America.

There seems little doubt that the foreign nations, with the opportunity of a fine trip with fare paid, "will consider the invitation favorably."

"We have every argument in our favor as far as climatic conditions are concerned," Weaver says. "With the new stadium we will build we will give one of the finest places in the world to conduct every branch of sports on the Olympic calendar."

While no definite plans were mentioned it is understood the Los Angeles committee plans to have a ship and collect the athletes of all the European nations bringing them to the coast and sending them home the same way.

This would make the next games the most representative and the best in history as the smaller nations have always had difficulty in getting the money necessary to send a representative team to the games.

Cards Lose Track Of New Twirler

ST. LOUIS, March 1.—Manager Rickey of the St. Louis Nationals is investigating the absence of pitcher Bill Pética, according to a dispatch from the Cardinals' training camp at Orange, Texas.

Pética, who was obtained from the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast league in exchange for four players, was recently reported to be in the city.

The Cardinals are hard at work preparing for their first game against the Philadelphia American League team Saturday.

Kenneth Williams, who was in the Browns' training camp in Bogalusa, La., yesterday, leaving St. Louis and pitcher Palmero the only absentees.

How Does This Suit?

It's a bit early for predictions as to batting orders and lineups, but you can't arrest a man for thinking, and in our opinion the following batting order would not be half bad: starting off the regulars, Joe Judge, Hank Tanner, Sam Miller, of Clark, M. M. McCall, Nelson, Kitchens, C. DeRough, P. Of course, we're taking a whole lot of chances, but we don't think we'll miss out very much on our guess. A whole lot can happen between now and April 15, but there won't be many radical changes in this order.

FRI ZEE FINDS GOING ROUGH IN BOSTON

Retirement of Red Sox Magnate Looked for Any Time Soon.

NEW YORK, March 2.—Harry Frazee, called "baseball's stormy petrel," may quit the game within a short time. An offer of $1,000,000 cash for the Red Sox players, franchise and real estate holdings, embracing Fenway park, was made to Frazee a short time ago. It came from a group of Boston sportsmen who are anxious to have the team owned locally.

Frazee is in disfavor in Boston. The fans have never forgiven him for the sale of Babe Ruth and other stars. Many have "boycotted" him. Frazee has antagonized newspaper men in the city and those who are not openly hostile are careful not to do anything that might help him.

As a result, Frazee would probably welcome a chance to get out of baseball, especially in view of the fact that the Red Sox season is rejected, and doesn't look as if it would be more than a second division outfit. Last year, while the other seven American league clubs were drawing at all, and there is no prospect of a change in 1921.

Frazee declared at the time that he purchased the team that the "whole outfit," which included real estate, cost him a little more than $1,000,000. Since assuming ownership Frazee has realized perhaps $250,000 through the sale of players.

The Red Sox owner and Ben Johnson have been at loggerheads ever since Frazee became a magnate. Johnson is said to have opposed Frazee's entry in the American league. But Frazee, by paying a record price for the Red Sox, got in anyway. Frazee sold Carl Mays to the Yankees while Mays was on Johnson's list and therefore, under baseball rules, ineligible for sale or trade.

Later on, also, Frazee lined up with the New York owners in a vain effort to keep Johnson from American league leadership.

Giant Rookies Will Have Three Great Batting Teachers

NEW YORK, March 2.—Giant rookies who will be tutored by three great masters in the art of swinging the ball at San Antonio this spring.

Joe McGraw, veteran manager, and his able lieutenant, Hugh Jennings and Joe Burckett, make up a trio that is rich in batting lore and experience.

McGraw, who has won 149 games and combined represent twenty-seven years of hitting over the 300 mark in the big show. What a record! Burckett, who has won 129 games and has a batting average was .296 in 1919, the year Ed Delahanty set the pace by hitting .300 for 20 years and more. What a stretch for the youngsters!

But batting is not the only department of the pastime in which McGraw and Jennings are steeped in knowledge. McGraw in the old old days was an infielder, playing most of the time at third base. Jennings was backstop and second baseman. And the switch from the pitching mound to the outfield was the best thing that could have happened to him. Figuring that both McGraw and Jennings are graduates of the old Ned Hanlon school, it can be said that if the Giants get out and win the pennant this year their victory will be a triumph of the good old system that won pennants for Baltimore years ago, even though these are not "fighting days" in baseball.

ARTIST TELLS OF HIS STRUGGLE FOR HEALTH

Nashville Man Says Both Himself and Wife Put Tanlac to the Test and Both Were Restored.

"Both my wife and myself have put Tanlac to the test and both were restored to health," said J. T. Montamat, 1123 Third Avenue, North Nashville, Tenn., artist and painter for the U.S. company. Mr. Montamat has lived in Nashville for nearly 30 years and is highly respected by all who know him.

"Before my wife took Tanlac she suffered so badly from gas on her stomach and heartburn that she often said she felt like she was smothering, to death. She actually had to sit up in bed to get her breath.

"Well, in a short time after she began taking Tanlac her trouble disappeared and she was like a different person. Seeing the good result in her case, I began taking the medicine myself and it soon had me feeling like a brand new man.

"Up in that time I had been troubled with indigestion. I had no appetite and the little I did eat seemed to do me about as much harm as good. I felt tired and languid. I had to move around and was getting in such a run-down condition that I worried me.

"Tanlac acted up with me just like it did with my wife, and although it was three years ago when I was employed the best of health all along. However, I keep a bottle of Tanlac in the house all the time, and when I feel myself getting run down the medicine soon has me feeling all right again. I am convinced that Tanlac is without an equal.

"Our friends at Nashville are all well and I don't hesitate to tell anyone about it."

Tanlac is sold in Wichita Falls by Miller Drug company, in Electra by Tarleton drug store and by all leading druggists. (adv.)

The SPORTLIGHT By Grantland Rice

OFFICIAL VS. THE POPULACE.

It is a trifle difficult to say just what the favorite sport of this country is. We may be in error, but offhand we should suggest that it is handling the raspberry to officials in sport who may be displaying their judgments between two of our best known oceans.

Royed any argument this is one tough commonwealth upon officials, whether they are baseball umpires, football judges or fight referees. The ninth wonder of the world is that we can get and keep as many fair and decent judges at work along the sporting road. For the hand of the populace is against them and the spirit of the mob is never silent.

A REASON OR TWO.

Part of it is due to ignorance. A crowd surrounds a ball field. The crowd is pulling lustily for the home team. It sees the visiting base runner slide into second with the catcher's throw on hand three feet in advance of the runner as the infielder tags him.

The umpire says "safe" because he saw the second baseman miss the runner. After the crowd hoot and shout down the offending basemen? Why be ridiculous? It promptly arose upon its hind legs and panned the hide off the man who was running his job with cool decision and courage.

WHAT ARE RULES?

Something like a fortnight ago we saw "Kid" Norfolk and "Pinky" Lewis, two satig hixyweights, meet at Madison Square Garden.

In the matter of wrestling, pushing and clinching they both violated most of the rules of their trade, with Lewis the leading offender. It was merely a matter of degrees. Lewis was supposed to have given out an inferior view where I hadn't opened my mouth. There wasn't a soul in the stands willing to wait for the facts or to get my side of it. A crowd will turn a trick like that you bet. The life out of some ballplayer for making a slight mistake.

RECALLING A QUERY?

Which recalls a query Ty Cobb put to us recently. "I have come into New York for fourteen years, I know how to play. Yet on my last trip there 26,000 stood up and hooted me because I was supposed to have given out an inferior view where I hadn't opened my mouth. There wasn't a soul in the stands willing to wait for the facts or to get my side of it. A crowd will turn a trick like that you bet. The life out of some ballplayer for making a slight mistake.

Why is it?"

The answer is that while there is rarely any touch of cowardice on the part of the individual, the spirit of the mob is nearly always the spirit of cowardice plus poor judgment.

And in this respect one part of the country is very much like any other part. So much so that we are having on one side the jeering of the officials by the crowd and on the other the officials' contempt for the crowd.

It is about time that a few of our masked camp followers were taking a tumble to themselves.

THE CROWD ANGLE.

Jack Curley had the headlock barred. Why? Not because it was more punishing than the teeloch or the scissors. Not because it was any less fair. It merely happened to look rougher to the jeering crowd as put on by a wrestler of "Strangler" Lewis's mighty bulk and grim resolve.

Curley argued that he wanted to please his customers. Which is merely another way of saying that wrestling is an amusement and not a sport. Accepted as a sport, Lewis is entitled to use his headlock in defense of his championship, as Fletcher is entitled to use his scissors or Caddock to get the teeloch.

The crowd will award the honor to a pitcher walking "Babe" Ruth. Yet under the rules that is exactly what a smart pitcher should do with runners on second or third where first base is unoccupied. The pitcher isn't supposed to be out there to check up on the crowd. It is supposed to be giving the best he has to win a ball game for his club. It might be proper enough to change the rule and give a hard hitter his chance, but with the rule as it is the crowd is merely hooding an athlete who is doing his duty to the game as a competitive sport. And if baseball is not a competitive sport it would not be an amusement.

How about a poor official, you may ask? Should he be allowed to get away with it? No. But has the average crowd shown any generosity as the final judge? And is it going to improve the officials' work to have the crowd on top of his neck?

SALTS IS FINE FOR KIDNEYS, QUIT MEAT

Flush the Kidneys of Oxyd When Back Hurts or Bladder Swells—Heat Forms Uric Acid.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headache, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush the kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat-eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications. (adv.)

FLOYD RAY WANTS TO HIRE SUBSTITUTE ON THE SCAFFOLD

Floyd Ray Makes Offer to Any Other Negro and Asks It to Be Published.

Floyd Ray, the negro who is condemned to be hanged on March 11, has a proposal to make to any other negro in the country. He called the Times representative to his cell and asked that his proposition be given due publicity.

In all sincerity and apparently of the belief that he might secure response to his offer, he said "I will give any other negro in this whole country $50 if they will take my place."

When questioned as to where he would get the money he said he felt sure that his mother would be very willing to put up the money and knew that she would be able to get it somewhere.

RIGGS FINDS MUCH BETTER TONE IN BUSINESS ON RECENT TRIP TO EAST

That there is a much better tone to business over the entire country is the declaration of J. F. Riggs, local clothing merchant who has just returned to Wichita Falls after an extended buying trip to the eastern markets. Mr. Riggs met hundreds of merchants from every section of the country and from evidence gathered by him there is a general feeling everywhere that the recent depression reached its peak several weeks ago and that, so far as the buying and selling of merchandise is concerned, the approaching spring season will be practically if not wholly normal.

EIGHT VICTOR ARTISTS SPLENDIDLY ENTERTAIN BIG CROWD AT PALACE THEATER

Eight artists who, in the form of rubber discs, have long been regular visitors at the homes of many music-loving Wichitans, were seen and heard in the flesh Tuesday night at the Palace theatre by a crowd that was limited only by the seating capacity of the new play house.

Not that seeing them was any special treat. It wasn't; there were eight about as homely gentlemen as you ever gazed upon, and their dress suits hung upon their frames in a way that would have caused the head designer for Hart, Schaffner & Marx to weep bitter, scalding tears. But hearing them! Folks, that was worth going miles for.

Every instant of every number was plumb full of enjoyment, and the crowd showed sincere appreciation. The artists were as generous as could be with their encores, responding time and again until the weariness of applauding arms gave a chance to announce the next number.

Monroe Silver's inimitable and clever comedy; Billy Murray's rapid-fire array of songs and his happy introductions; Frank Banta's piano-tinkling; Croxton's wonderful tuneful crooning; Van Eps' artistic, if unlucky, banjo playing; Campbell's canary-like tenor; and John Meyer's melodious baritone; all these the crowd loved and enjoyed immensely. But it was to Henry Burr, the big, ungainly, untidy singer that first honors to the evening undoubtedly went. When the trio "Little Shack in Avoca" gave Burr an opportunity for some wonderfully sweet singing, the crowd thought it heard his best; but it was not until, as an encore, he gave "Let the Rest of the World Go By" that his place in the hearts of all present was absolutely clinched.

While he sang, the house paid him a tribute not accorded many artists, that of absolute silence, as the strains of the song poured out in real, double-distilled sweetness, the crowd was so still that you could plainly hear a shoe drummer eating soup in the cafe next door. But there was a mighty outburst of appreciation when the song ended. They may never use Burr on the members of his own race, but that was his privilege, of course. Silver made the mistake of yielding to requests for "Cohen on the Telephone" but even that didn't very much mar the cleverness of his act. Billy Murray, both by his extremely snappy introductions of the rest of the crew and his own numbers on the program, contributed liberally to the comedy end of the entertainment. Billy, probably the veteran of the Victor performers, sang, talked and cut up generally, with a wonderfully varied line of clever, wholesome stuff.

Most of us would have liked to hear Campbell as a soloist, but that was not accorded, perhaps because of some throat trouble he was said to be suffering from, but he was heard sufficiently to let everyone know at least something of the music-making properties he possesses.

All in all, what the sort of entertainment that Wichita Falls folks can use a lot more of—even at three smackers a seat.

CITY'S NEW INCINERATOR WILL BE LARGE ENOUGH FOR NEEDS OF MANY YEARS

Completion of the new 40-ton capacity garbage incinerator, purchase of which was authorized by the city council Monday evening, will be made within six weeks' time, according to officials of the health department. When in active operation the incinerator will consume all garbage, trash and rubbish collected on the city streets.

According to Dr. A. H. Douglas, city health officer, who is familiar with work of the incinerator, the new machine will easily care for all the needs of the city for some time to come and it will efficiently and economically dispose of all the city's garbage and trash.

A site for its erection was purchased by the council some time ago at the foot of Oak street, quite close to the river on the northeast edge of the city. It will cost, when completed, $20,250.

WASHINGTON, AND THE OX-CART AND STAGE COACH DAYS

Our forefathers used the Ox-cart and rode in the Stage Coach and selected their glasses themselves, if they had any. They did it because there was no other way and yet, there are some persons who hold that, because some of their ancestors did not use glasses, that such things are unnecessary. And yet some of these same people use automobiles and electric lights, and some of them have lightning rods. Today the Ox-Cart and Stage Coach are curiosities, and the Science of Fitting Glasses has more than kept pace with modern advancement. Persons who are best informed today have their eyes examined at least once a year, if not for the benefit of whatever change may have taken place in the eye, they have the benefit of whatever advancement may have taken place in the Science of Fitting Glasses.
