MARTIAL LAW HAS BEEN DECLARED IN MINGO MINE ZONE

COURT ASKS FOR TESTIMONY AFTER ARGUE DEMURRER

CITY ELECTION CONTEST CASE GOES TO TRIAL LATE FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

COURT MAKES NO RULING ON GENERAL DEMURRER

CHARLESTON, W. VA., May 20.—Governor Morgan today issued a proclamation declaring martial law in Mingo county.

Failure of presiding judges at the election to sign the ballots in an irregularity of sufficient seriousness in the opinion of Judge Martin and Napier, it will result in the ordering of a new election.

Admission of testimony in regard to the city hall case, testified that N. O. Monroe, presiding judge, signed but few of the ballots, that they were his name on the ballots in the election.

Upon the conclusion Friday afternoon of the arguments on the general demurrer, the defense attorneys in the city election contest case of George Hodgins vs. G. W. Bralley, the court asked for the plaintiffs to produce their witnesses and submit testimony.

The plaintiffs' counsel, Attorney B. D. Sartin, in replying to Judge Montgomery's opening remarks in defense of the demurrer filed, cited two specific cases from the court of civil appeals in which the appellate courts maintained that the personal signature of the election judge on each and every ballot was mandatory and constitutional.

PRESIDENT GROWING IMPATIENT BECAUSE PRICES REMAIN HIGH

WILL DISCUSS ECONOMIC SITUATION NEXT MONDAY NIGHT.

TOO MANY PROBLEMS ARE BROUGHT TO WHITE HOUSE

Will Make Another Plea For Co-Operation Between Employers And Employees.

By RAYMOND CLAPPER, United Press Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—President Harding prepared some outspoken advice to the business world today which will be delivered in a speech at New York Monday.

The rough draft of this address which the president is understood to be working on today indicates that he is growing somewhat impatient with the failure of retail prices to go down toward a pre-war level.

President Harding's speech, to be delivered at a dinner attended by New York's leading publishers and business men, will deal with business men and labor problems chiefly.

He will take this occasion, it is said, to discuss the problems which have been placed on his desk by the business and labor worlds alike, and it is likely that he will give notice on both that they must cease to look to the federal government for a panacea.

President Harding is trying to stop the habit of bringing all labor disputes and economic troubles to the White House and in his speech he will make another plea for cooperation between employers and employees.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Lucindy Ellen Stratton Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Stratton, deceased, and wife of C. T. Taylor, died in Wichita Falls, Texas, May 6, 1921. Mrs. Taylor was born in Simpson county, Ky., October 2, 1842, moved to Dallas county with her parents at the age of four, married to C. T. Taylor December 3, 1869, and to that union there were ten children born, three of whom died in infancy, and one, Charles Albert, died in early manhood. She is survived by her husband, C. T. Taylor, and six children, namely: J. J. Taylor and L. B. Taylor of Clarendon, Texas, and H. H. and Tommie Taylor of Wichita Falls, Texas, and Mrs. Fannie Holloway and Mrs. Addie Murrell of Wichita Falls, Texas. She is also survived by three sisters, namely: Mrs. R. H. Joyce of Wichita Falls, Texas, Mrs. T. A. Matlock of Petrolia, Texas, and Mrs. C. W. Gracy of Dallas, Texas. There were eight grandchildren. Mrs. Taylor was buried at Petrolia, Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor moved from Liebich, Dallas county to Clay county, Texas, in the year 1892, where they lived until the summer of 1919, when they moved to Clarendon, Texas. Later they had moved to Wichita Falls, Texas. Mrs. Taylor had kept all of her children around her until she moved from Clarendon. Her two oldest sons remained there as they had considerable interest there and could not leave just now. She was a devoted Christian and mother. Was converted at about the age of twenty and joined the Cumberland Presbyterian church and lived a consecrated Christian up to her death. She asked that Dr. Baker of Bowie, Texas, preach her funeral from the 11th chapter of Revelations, which he did at the Presbyterian church at Petrolia, Texas. A host of friends filled the house to overflowing and the grave was completely covered with flowers, for she made friends wherever she lived. She did not have an enemy. She loved and served God.

When we no more thy voice shall hear, No more thy face shall see, Thy memory will be sacred still; Thy works shall follow thee.

—A Friend and Brother.

Note.—Press reports at the time of Mrs. Taylor's death said that Mrs. Taylor had an active part in the organization.

ITALIAN LADS TRAVEL AS BAGGAGE

Shipping immigrant children to the United States by express is a novelty in immigration tricks. Little Venanzio Favre, nine, and his brother, Albo, eight, arrived at Ellis Island, New York, from Italy (tagged by the American Express company through to Carbondale, Colo., half-way around the world as baggage), the youngsters created a sensation at Ellis Island, where surprises are rare. Everything had been arranged in advance for the admission of the boys, by their father, Venanzio Favre, a well-to-do real estate agent and landowner in Colorado. The boys, with their pockets stuffed with $10 in crisp new American bills, railroad tickets, and properly tagged so that they can't be "missed," are speeding across the country en route to Carbondale. They will be cared for along the route by express company agents during the four day trip. The photograph shows the Favre youngsters and a reproduction of their shipping tag.

tion of the Godley Oil Co. This was erroneous. It was Mr. Taylor and not Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Taylor was a woman who left business matters to her husband. Mrs. Taylor was a sincere Christian and her work outside her home was for the church and charity.

TO RESURVEY BOUNDARY OF WISCONSIN-ILLINOIS

MADISON, Wis., May 20.—People living along the Wisconsin-Illinois boundary line may find themselves moved into another state.

A survey of the boundary is to be made by the United States land office with the idea of correcting inaccuracies now existing in the boundary. The survey will attempt to re-locate the old line and correct it. According to records here near Beloit, Illinois, has encroached nearly a mile into what is legitimate Wisconsin territory. In other parts of the line, Wisconsin is suspected with having gone over into Illinois.

Hold Women Not Entitled to Voice in Church Affairs

By CARL V. LITTLE, United Press Staff Correspondent.

WINONA LAKE, IND., May 20.—Women must keep their seats in the "amen corners" and remain without a voice in church government.

The hand that rocks the cradle may rule the temporal world, but the authority in the spiritual world must remain with the men.

Agitation for women's rights, which has placed them in the legislative halls and allowed them to don the black robes of the judiciary, has failed thus far to make an impression in the domain of ecclesiastical affairs.

Returns from the plebiscite taken among the million and a half members of the Presbyterian church, and reported to the general assembly here today, showed that the movement to allow women to sit as commissioners in the assembly was beaten decisively. Dr. R. Hall Young, revered Presbyterian minister of New York, has given a lifetime in battling for the right of women to sit in church councils, but his campaign has been a failure.

Many scriptural passages are quoted by those who look upon the leadership of women with disfavor. This one, cited by Dr. Young, is from the words of Timothy, was cited whenever the question was discussed here today:

"Let the women learn in silence with all subjection, but I suffer not a woman to teach nor to usurp authority over men, but be in silence."

Another passage from the fourteenth chapter of Corinthians is— "Let your women keep silence in the churches, for it is not permitted unto them to speak, but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law."

Proponents of women's active participation in church affairs answer that these arguments are antiquated, that they do not apply to the women of today. Dr. Henry C. Swearingen of St. Paul took the chair as moderator today at the opening of the second session of the assembly. A keen race developed between Dr. Hugh B. McCauley of Patterson, N. J., and Dr. Benjamin Gemmill of Philadelphia for the post of state clerk, the highest executive office in the Presbyterian church.

The executive commissioners favor putting the election off until next year, but friends of the two contenders are trying to stampede their candidate through. Attempts will be made to make the position for five years instead of life.

TARIFF AND TAXATION UNABLE TO COMMAND FIRST PAGE POSITION

EUROPEAN AFFAIRS CONTINUE TO HOLD THE SPOTLIGHT AT WASHINGTON.

FARM PROBLEM BEING PUSHED TO FOREFRONT

Contented Foreign Trade Must be Developed as a Remedy For Economic ills.

BY MARK SULLIVAN,
National Political Correspondent of the New York Evening Post and the Wichita Daily Times.

(Copyright 1921 Wichita Daily Times)
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 20.—Tariff and taxation continue to fail to get the center of stage away from European affairs. Newspaper writers reflect the psychology of newspapers, observing that reparations of the supreme council or any other phase of European affairs is always good for a bigger headline than any new development in the tariff bill or the tax schedule.

It is for the same reason that progress in tariff making and tax making is far from the program laid down by the leaders who congress meet and that tariff speeches do not attract as much interest in congress as they used to in former tariff making sessions. The reason for it all is the growing consciousness that the paralysis of foreign trade is our primary difficulty and that that must be before tariff and taxes can be of any help. The recognition of this fact starting with official Washington, has spread through congress and recently has begun to spread from congress back through the country. A common sentiment was expressed by a western farmer who was asked the other day why he is in Washington when he ought, presumably, to be at home planting corn. He replied that he had discussed the matter with his neighbors, and they had agreed that the best use of his time would be to come to Washington and see what he could do towards getting the 1922 crop marketed rather than stay at home and plant the 1921 crop.

Have Been Marking Time.
The larger part of the government has realized steadily that nothing effective could be done until the amount of the reparations is fixed. For this reason most of the great departments which might ordinarily facilitate export trade have been marking time. The largest definite help in actually getting goods shipped abroad and sold there has come from the war finance corporation and its managing director Eugene Meyer Jr. This organization has done all that energy could do under trying circumstances.

Most of their effort so far has been concerned with cotton and the corporation has advanced several million dollars to southern banks to finance the export of cotton to England, France, Italy, Portugal, Japan and Germany. Not only has the corporation made advances to American banks and exporters for the shipment of cotton abroad on definite contracts, in addition, the war finance corporation has taken another step which is small in proportion but is a sign both of the extreme need of the case and of the willingness of the corporation to take minute pains.

They have helped American banks to send cotton abroad not on contract, but merely to be held in foreign warehouses for such marketing as can be done in small lots. The idea is to maintain adequate stocks of American cotton in warehouses in Liverpool, Havre, Trieste, Genoa, Venice and Bremen for sale to such consumers as may want to buy it "over the counter" so to speak even in such small lots as fifty bales. The aggregate of such efforts is necessarily not great, but it reflects the sort of the thing to which America's export trade is being reduced. In the field of business and economics, in all its ramifications, straight back to the farm, the first need is to restore life to a paralyzed international trade. So far as American business is concerned, this is the first task for imagination and action.

After the rodeo is over Archer City baseball nine will cross bats with the Megargel nine and Doctor Gustin, who is manager for the Archer City team, says that Megargel had better bring its best. ### DOKEY CEREMONIAL IS TO BE STAGED AT FREDERICK

FREDERICK, OKLA., May 20.—Frederick lodge, Knights of Pythias, has voted to hold here a ceremonial season of the Dramatic Order Knights of Khorasaan in the early part of June, the exact date to be determined later, according to the convenience of Sir Wah Temple of Oklahoma City, which will have charge of the ceremonial. Local Pythians expect to have some 50 to 75 candidates to take the degree work on that occasion, and indubitably this will be one of the biggest fraternal order events ever seen in Frederick, perhaps the largest the Knights of Pythias have ever staged in the southwest.

Aside from teaching some of the most valuable lessons one may learn in life, the order being evolved from the mysticism of the orient, there are features that would almost adumbrate the falling of the stars or the fracture of the magnetic poles, the bringing in of baby's first tooth or an unexpected visit from mother-in-law.

The conferring of degrees in this order is marked with superb stage settings and magnificent regalia, rivaling the regal splendor of the courts of the rajahs of Ind.

WRONG IMPRESSION OF THE FILIPINO HAS REACHED THE U. S.

DO NOT LIVE IN TREES AND DRESS AS PICTURED IN MOVIES.

GENERALLY WELL-DRESSED AND WELL-BEHAVED

New Filipino Spirit and Old Filipino Aspiration Have Brought About Change.

By CHARLES EDWARD RUSSELL, Special Correspondent of the Wichita Daily Times.

MANILA, May 20.—I was piloting around the Manila carnival show an American freshly come to these far fields. We looked at the great crowd of well-dressed, well-behaved people, evidently self-respecting, evidently intelligent, generally well-shaped heads, dignified bearing, and all that, and were told that these represented not alone Manila but far away provinces, even pagan land and the Moro of the bolo, famous in romance and more in history.

"Good!" gasped my friend, "and I always thought these people lived in trees!" He was like thousands of the folks at home: like hundreds, even, who get so far as a first look at these green shores. At a hearing before a committee of congress a few months ago a member seriously inquired as to the present extent of head hunting in the Philippine Islands, and an eminent junketing party last year interviewed the captain of the ship they came on as to whether it were really safe to land in Manila unmolested. Even persons fleeing hither from the jungle of wildcat and blood-stained jungles of wildcat New York have been known to approach with trepidation one of the safest, most orderly and respectable large cities in the world, which I believe to be a fair description of Manila.

The widespread but largely undeserved reputation of the Igorrots as naked nomads and the film exhibitions of alleged Moro villages are chiefly responsible for the drama. True, there are still regions in the Philippine Islands where civilization hasn't gone much farther than cooking pot and a fish hook. About 25,000 of the aboriginal Negritos wear G-strings, run wild in the forest and are held to be incurable savages. If there is any such thing as so-called wild people still inhabit the mountain lands of Mindanao, some other islands and parts of Sulu. And that, ladies, which I believe is about all we have to offer you today in the line of savagery. The always advancing school house, the new Filipino spirit and the old Filipino aspiration have attended to the rest.

Next year the practical exit from these islands of the wild, untutored child of nature will be officially celebrated in a way the world might well take some notice of, since it not only marks the final triumph of civilization here but ought to put the french cleaner on our once favorite belief that the Philippines are fifty-seven kinds of unclothed cannibals only waiting for us to get out of the way to fly at one another's throats.

This was highly comfortable doctrine and a lovely excuse for some first class exploitation. How much there is in it of substance and verity you can judge from an account of what is now about to happen. When the Jones law of August 1916, sought to deliver into the hands of the Philippine the control of their own government, the provinces where the so-called wild people lived were in a way exempted from the broad democracy installed elsewhere. I mean that everywhere else the people chose their own senators and representatives in the Philippine legislature, their own provincial governors, their own majority of the provincial boards. In what is called the mountain province of Luzon, in Zamboanga, Davao, Nueva Viscaya and one or two others, the governor general appointed these officers. The plan since has been to extend the principle of democracy as rapidly as possible to what were once regarded as the wild territories. Zamboanga, Davao and Agusan began three years ago to vote for third member of the provincial board, the body corresponding to a state legislature in America.

TOOTS AND CASPER—And They Say Advice Is Cheap

Nueva Viscaya obtained this right more recently and the mountain provinces only a few months ago. By a proclamation issued in January, Zamboanga, Davao, Agusan and Nueva Viscaya obtained this right more recently and the mountain provinces only a few months ago. By a proclamation issued in January, Zamboanga, Davao, Agusan and Nueva Viscaya are hereafter to elect their own governors, thus giving them complete control of their own affairs. For the provincial boards are composed of three members, two being now elected and the other, the provincial treasurer, chosen in another way.

With this significant change, democracy and self-government may be regarded as having gone so far in the Philippines that the figure of Uncle Sam sitting upon the safety valve here becomes but beautiful mythology. Who are these people thus endowed in a lump with the blessings of the ballot box and bossing their own political business? Chiefly, what are known as the "non-Christian tribes."

Mohammedans, you think at once; those wild-eyed, bolo-bearing Horos; Mohammedans, and therefore, according to tradition, utterly incapable of any democratic practice, even the smallest. But that is the strange part of it. Only 354,694 in the whole Archipelago are Mohammedans and these Mohammedans seem to be quite capable of an average democracy and take to it like ducks to water.

About 437,000 of the new citizenship are known as pagans and supposed to have no religion. As a matter of fact, they have a religion of their own, plenty of it, not wholly bad at that, and they, too, know much more about democratic theory and practice than might be expected. Mohammedans and pagans have sat in the Philippine legislature and close observation of that interesting body showed that they were as active and efficient as any others.

One of the most brilliant and successful of the senators was Hadji Butin, a Mohammedan from Sulu. In some Mohammedans towards the president of the mayor, is elected and one of them at least has gone to the revolutionary and astonishing length of electing to that position a Mohammedan woman. I don't see how it would be possible to say more than that, away all the gold old theories! How about the harem and everything? How about the sequestration of women? You can explain it to suit yourself, she is the mayor or mayores of Buluan, her name is Mrs. Haguangan Inuk, she runs the town and I have a statement from her as to how she runs it.

And as to this idea of non-Christians and Christians flying at one another's throats and all that, as to the fifty-seven varieties of bolo-bearing cannibals, as to the 1,000,000 irreconcilable pagans and some other matters you had heard, meditate upon this statement made to me in writing by Rafael Bujayan, representative in the Philippine house from the pagan mountain province of Luzon and one that in any legislature in any land at any time would be recognized as of unusual character and attainments. He said: "You ask me, whether the inhabitants of my province desire Philippine independence. If you could deem me one of the representatives of that province, I will answer on behalf of my people most emphatically that they do. Not merely for sentimental motives but because we believe that whatever may be the fate of our country, we, the people of the Mountain province will always be a unit with the other parts of the Philippines. As a member of the legislature I have come into frequent contact with representatives from other non-Christian provinces and have formed the conviction of a great unity and strong conviction of a common ideal and a common destiny. Isolated, we can do little for the progress and advancement of the people. It is the united support and co-operation of all the other provinces that enables us to proceed. A small ship cannot withstand the tempest as a big ship can. Being one in race we desire to unite our fate with that of our brethren in the lowlands."

I think you do not hear the whish of the bolo in those thoughtful words. There is another misunderstanding as to the extent to which democracy has gone here and you will often be told that elections amount to little because few persons vote. The franchise is not unrestricted, that is true; women as yet do not vote at all, and men only if they can read and write, English, Spanish or a native language, or own real property to the amount of $250 or pay as much as $15 a year in taxes or were legal voters before August 25, 1916. Then I think it is the most significant fact of all that at the general election of 1919 (the last that has been held) 717,295 persons registered and 672,422 voted as against a total of 248,154 registered and 255,756 who voted in the election of 1915. The total population of the islands at the last census, 1916, was 10,356,730. It is impossible, therefore, to say that the voting is light.

To dissipate some other cherished fancies on this matter, I beg leave to note that of the total population, 8,463,731 were Christians and only 856,999 non-Christians, including Mohammedans, pagans and all. And finally being the last time I shall upset dear delus@n today, the percentage of illiteracy in this population was not 80, nor 75, nor 68, as you have been told, but 34, which is about the same percentage of illiteracy in the southern states of America.

BEGIN AN INVESTIGATION OF FIRE ON STEAMSHIP

NEW YORK, May 20.—Soon after fire on the United States shipping board liner Panhandle State was extinguished today, an official investigation was begun to determine the cause of the blaze.

The ship, a 10,500 ton passenger ship built last year and valued at $5,000,000, caught fire from a leaking oil fuel tank and was towed from her North River pier and beached off Ellis Island to prevent her total destruction. She continued to burn until early today.

The Panhandle State caught fire just after a strikebreaking crew of 300 had boarded her, following desertion of her regular complement to join the marines walkout.

NOT SO DISCOURAGING AS IT LOOKS SAYS PAPER MANCHESTER, ENG., May 20.—Commenting today on the speech of Ambassador Harvey at the Pilgrims dinner in London last night, the Guardian, a staunch supporter of the League of Nations, takes the view that

Colonel Harvey a characteristically vigorous repudiation of the league is not so discouraging as it looks. "We have heard that even President Harding favors an association of nations," continues the Guardian. "If we cannot gain the goal in one leap, we must proceed little by little."

Ambassador Harvey's appointment to sit with the supreme council, the paper says, is "an admission that the United States government cannot cut itself off from the great world problems and may perhaps in the long run carry the United States farther than President Harding at present contemplates."

SALE OF BOARDS OF TRADE MENACE TO AGRICULTURE

The resolution urged that the legislatures of the two states pass laws governing and controlling the boards of trade, similar to the Lantz bill passed in Illinois. The resolution was drawn by a committee of three headed by W. J. Bradford of Belton, Mo., foreman of the grand jury. A majority of the grand jury members are farmers. Copies of the resolution will be presented to Governor Hyde of Missouri and Governor Allen of Kansas.

LESS GOVERNMENT IN BUSINESS. More business in government and less government in business is one of the slogans of the Harding administration.

THE JACKABS AND THE LION.

Contrary, even to the hopes of those who have criticized him, Colonel George Harvey, who has just assumed his duties as ambassador to Great Britain, at the first opportunity has shown his unfriendliness for the position by delivering a sarcastic speech.

Editorial Echoes

Is Civilization Improving? We love to boast of our progress; we love to speak of the enlightenment of the present time and how we have advanced from a savage state to one of the highest refinement.

But in spite of all that has been done, the question is often asked: To what extent has civilization improved. Are individuals as a whole any better now than in other days when temptations of all kind surrounded them?

Our answer is that there is a noticeable improvement, yet we realize that it takes proof to make the doubting Thomas see the way. There are fewer gamblers now than in other days. There is less liquor drunk and consequently more men made happy and more children with opportunity in the world.

Another indictment against the present civilization is that it is being weakened by the breaking up of the large families of the old days. When father and mother and a string of boys and girls gathered around the hearthstone at night, the conversation was clean, the association pure and as a consequence their daughters were developed accordingly.

SILVER BLAZE

By A. DONAN Duffish

Copyright, 1921, by Harpet & Bros. Published by special arrangement with The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The story thus far: Silver Blaze, this great race horse of King's Pyland, Dartmoor, was first set for the Wessex cup, a race soon to be run. John Straker, his trainer, had three boys under him, one of whom stayed at night with the horse, the other two of whom slept in the barn. On the night in question the maid in Straker's house went with a dish of currant lamb from a supper for the boy's duty. She met a man asking him about the great horse. The boy refused to talk and ran after him with the dog.

Straker went to investigate. In the morning he was found dead in a hollow near by in the moor. The stable boy had been drugged with opium in his lamb. The horse was gone. The dead man's head was crushed by a cruel blow. In his hand was a small knife and the grave of the stranger, and about him were signs of a violent struggle. The stranger proved to be Fitzroy Simpson, staying in the neighborhood, who admitted questioning the boy, because he had money up on Silver Blaze. He admitted carrying a heavy club, but denied all knowledge of the murder. Holmes and Watson went to King's Pyland and were met by Colonel Ross, owner of the horse, and Inspector Gregory, in charge of the case.

Gregory reviewed the case and they all agreed Straker had himself opened the stable door, and the dog's knife. Nearby across the moors was the Mapleton stable, whose trainer, Silas Brown, was a friend of Straker's. In Straker's pocket was a dressmaker's bill made out to William Derbyshire for a top hat and a suit of clothes. When Mrs. Straker entered the room Holmes asked her if she had met her in a dark-colored silk dress at a party in Plymouth. She denied it.

Holmes investigated the place of the murder. Then, with Watson, he walked across the moor and followed horse tracks to the neighboring stables, where he saw the trainer, Silas Brown. After whispering to him Holmes saw him alone, and when he left had Brown promise to follow his instructions.

PART FIVE

"A more perfect compound of the bully, coward, and sneak than Master Silas Brown I have seldom met with," remarked Holmes as we trudged along together.

"He has the horse, then?"

"He tried to bluster out of it, but I described to him so exactly what his actions had been upon that morning that he is convinced I was watching him. Of course you observed the peculiarly square toes in the impressions, and that his own boots exactly correspond to them. Again, of course no subordinate would have dared to do such a thing. I described to him how, when according to his custom he was the first down, he perceived a strange horse wandering over the moor. How he went out to it, and his astonishment at recognizing from the white forehead which has given the favorite his name, that chance had put in his power the only horse which could beat the one upon which he had put his money. Then I described how his first impulse had been to lead him back to King's Pyland, and how the devil had shown him how he could hide the horse until the race was over, and how he had led it back and concealed it at Mapleton. When I told him every detail he gave it up and thought only of saving his own skin."

"But his stables had been searched?"

"Oh, an old horse-fakir like him has many a dodge."

"But are you not afraid to leave the horse in his power now, since he has every interest in injuring it?"

"My dog followed, he will guard it as the apple of his eye. He knows that his only hope of mercy is to produce it safe."

"Colonel Ross did not impress me as a man who would be likely to show much mercy in any case."

"The matter does not rest with Colonel Ross. I follow my own methods, and tell as much or as little as I choose. That is the advantage of being unofficial. I don't know whether you observed it, Watson, but the Colonel's manner has been just a trifle cavalier to me. I am inclined now to have a little amusement at his expense. Say nothing to him about the horse."

"Certainly not without your permission."

"And of course this is all quite a minor point compared with the question of who killed John Straker. And you will devote yourself to that?"

"On the contrary we both go back to London by the night train."

I was thunderstruck by my friend's words. We had only been a few hours in Devonshire and that he should give up an investigation which he had begun so brilliantly was quite inconceivable to me. Not a word more could I draw from him until we were back at the trainer's house. The Colonel and the Inspector were awaiting us in the parlor.

"My friend and I return to town by the night express," said Holmes. "We have had a charming little breath of your beautiful Dartmoor air."

The Inspector opened his eyes, and the Colonel's lip curled in a sneer.

"So you despair of arresting the murderer of poor Straker?" said he.

Holmes shrugged his shoulders. "There are certainly grave difficulties in the way," said he. "I have every hope, however, that your horse will start upon Tuesday, and I beg that you will have your jockey in readiness. Might I ask for a photograph of Mr. John Straker?"

The Inspector took one from an envelope and handed it to him.

"My dear Gregory, you anticipate all my wants. I might ask you to wait here for an instant. I have a question which I should like to put to the maid."

"I must say that I am rather disappointed in our London consultant," said Colonel Ross, bluntly, as my friend left the room. "I do not see that we are any further than when he came."

"At least you have his assurance that your horse will run," said I.

"Yes, I have his assurance," said the Colonel, with a shrug of his shoulders. "I should prefer to have the horse."

I was about to make some reply in defense of my friend when he entered the room again.

"Now, gentlemen," said he, "I am quite ready for Tavistock."

And we stepped into the carriage one of the stable-lads held the door open for us. A sudden idea seemed to occur to Holmes, for he leaned forward and touched the lad upon the sleeve.

"You have a few sheep in the paddock," he said. "Who attends to them?"

"I do, sir."

"Have you noticed anything amiss with them of late?"

"Well, sir, not of much account but three of them have gone lame, sir."

I could see that Holmes was extremely pleased for he chuckled and rubbed his hands together.

"A long shot, Watson; a very long shot," said he, pinching my arm.

"Gregory, let me recommend to your attention this singular epidemic among the sheep. Drive on, coachman!"

Colonel Ross still wore an expression which showed the poor opinion which he had formed of my companion's ability, but I saw, by the Inspector's face that his attention had been keenly aroused.

"You consider that to be important?" he asked.

"Exceedingly so."

"Is there any point to which you would wish to draw my attention?"

"To the curious incident of the dog in the night-time."

"The dog did nothing in the night-time."

"That was the curious incident," remarked Sherlock Holmes.

Four days later Holmes and I were again in the train, bound for Winchester to see the race for the Wessex cup. Colonel Ross met us by appointment outside the station, and we drove in his drag to the course beyond the town. His face was grave, and his manner was cold in the extreme.

"I have seen nothing of my horse," said he.

"I suppose that you would know him when you saw him?" asked Holmes.

The Colonel was very angry. "I have been on the turf for twenty years, and never was asked such a question as that before," said he. "A child would know Silver Blaze, with his white forehead and his mottled off-foreleg."

"How is the betting?"

"Well, that is the curious part of it. You could have got fifteen to one yesterday, but the price has become shorter and shorter, until you can hardly get three to one now."

"Hum!" said Holmes. "Somebody knows something, that is clear."

As the drag drew up in the enclosure near the grand stand I glanced at the card to see the entries.

Wessex Plate (it ran) 50 sows each 1 ft with 1600 sows added for four and five year olds. Second, 300 pounds. Third, 200 pounds. New course (one mile and five furlongs).

1. Mr. Heath Newton's The Negro. Red cap. Cinnamon jacket.

2. Colonel Wardlaw's Pugilist. Pink cap. Blue and black jacket.

3. Lord Backyard's Desperado. Yellow cap and sleeves.

4. Colonel Ross's Silver Blaze. Black cap. Red jacket.

5. Duke of Balmoral's Iris. Yellow and black striped.

6. Lord Singleford's Rasper. Purple cap. Black sleeves.

"We scratched our other one, and put all hopes on your word," said the Colonel. "Why, what is that Silver Blaze favorite?"

"Five to four against Silver Blaze!" cried the ring. "Five to four against Desborough!" Five to four on the field!

"There are the numbers up," I cried. "They are all six there."

"All six there? Then my horse is running," cried the Colonel in great agitation. "But I don't see him. My colors have not passed."

"Only five have passed. This must be he."

As I spoke a powerful bay horse swept out from the weighting enclosure and cantered fast in hearing of its back the well-known black and red of the Colonel.

"That's not my horse," cried the owner. "It has not a white hair upon its body. What is this that you have done, Mr. Holmes?"

"Well, well, let us see how he gets on," said my friend, impatiently. For a few minutes he gazed through my field glass. "Capital! An excellent start!" he cried suddenly. "There they are, coming found the curve!"

From our drag we had a superb view as they came up the straight. The six horses were so close together that a carpet could have covered them, but half way up the yellow of the Mapleton stable showed up in the front. Before they reached us, however, Desborough's bolt was shot, and the Colonel's horse, coming away with a rush, passed the post a good six lengths before its rival, the Duke of Balmoral's Iris making a bad third.

Tomorrow—Silver Blaze, concluded.

FEDERATED FARM BUREAU HAS MEETING AT VERNON

VERNON, TEXAS, May 20.—More than 100 business men attended a special meeting yesterday afternoon held by the Federated Farm Bureau workers in the district court room. R. D. Jones, chief of the forces working in Wilbarger county, was the principal speaker of the occasion and stressed to his hearers the benefits that will accrue through the establishment of an efficient marketing system. He asserted at the beginning of his speech that it is proposed organizing the farmers on an efficient working basis as in American labor, and that so organized, it would be possible to decide the great conflicts between labor and capital through throwing the influence of the federation to one side or the other. Mr. Jones also explained the aims of the federation.

The speaker further asserted that the American farmer, or, more exactly, the southern farmer, has the opportunity of a lifetime to attract to the southland the banking interests of the nation. With cotton properly insured and in good warehouses, he said, there will be some of the finest collateral that is to be had.

JUST A WORD From the Printers

THERE ARE TWO SIDES TO EVERY QUESTION

The employing printers would have the public believe that the present controversy over the 44-hour week was a purely local matter, when as a fact it is the result of a national agreement made two years ago to become effective on May 1 this year WITH-OUT A REDUCTION IN WAGES.

At that time the International Joint Conference Council was organized with eight members, as follows: two from the United Typothetae of America, closed shop division, one from the Printers' League of America, one from the International Association of Employing Stereotypers and Electrotypers, these being organizations of employers, and one each from the International Typographical Union, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers Union and the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders.

The printing trades representatives requested that the 44-hour week be put into effect—April, 1919. The employers suggested a delay of five years. Agreed that two years would be a proper time in which to give opportunity to employers to so arrange their business to meet the new conditions. Unanimously the date was named as May 1, 1921. This action was later approved by a referendum of the organizations a party thereto.

In the minutes of a meeting held October 30, 1919, the following appears:

"Mr. Hatch (Employers' Group)—I am willing to make the motion that the Joint Conference Council recommends that the industry MAKE NO REDUCTION IN THE WAGE BECAUSE OF THE CHANGE OF HOURS from 48 per week to 44 per week.

"Seconded by Mr. Freel.

"Mr. Green (Employers' Group)—I suggest that you add the word 'weekly' wage. You leave it as wide open, if you don't put that in, as it was before.

"Mr. Hatch (Employers' Group)—I accept it. I see what you mean. You are straining a point, I think, but I accept it.

"Carried."

Again at a meeting held in December, 1920, the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, that this Joint Conference Council considers all members of its constituent bodies are morally bound to adopt and put into effect the 44-hour week on May 1, 1921."

These records speak for themselves. The International Typographical Union lived up to its part of the contract. The men continued to work 48 hours a week through a period of unprecedented prosperity for the employers, working under pressure at times in order to keep up with the rush of business with which the offices were favored, anticipating, of course, that the reduction in hours would come without a struggle, as had been promised, and without a reduction in wages, as was understood. The International Typographical Union maintained its reputation for keeping faith with its employers,—it only asks that the employers now show as good faith with their men.

The printing plants of Wichita Falls have passed through a period of unusual prosperity; the printers, in the face of living conditions that have existed and still exist in the city, have not received a wage sufficient to afford comfortable surroundings, much less lay away a small surplus for sickness or emergency. In the face of these conditions they cannot be expected to accept the reduction proposed by the employers.

It is not contended here that the local proprietors individually signed the 44-hour agreement, but we do contend and we believe the public will agree that we are bound by the agreement made two years ago, as are also the local employers, especially if they hold membership in the Typothetae or other organization a party to the agreement.

It is not necessary for us to argue house rent and other living conditions in Wichita Falls. These are well known to the public in the face of the history of the past two years. It is true there have been some reductions, but these are not sufficient to justify a wage reduction at this time.

We are in this fight to win because we believe that we are right. We ask the public to carefully consider the facts given above, confident that you will agree that we are justified in the stand we have taken.

WICHITA FALLS TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION
L. H. KREIGBAUM, President.
Note.—The question of local negotiations and proposed arbitration will be discussed in a later statement.

An O. HENRY Story

Lost on Dress Parade.

By O. HENRY.

MR. TOWERS CHANDLER was pressing his evening suit in his hall bedroom. One iron was heating on a small gas stove; the other was being pushed vigorously back and forth to make the desirable creases that would be essential on extending in straight lines from Mr. Chandler's patent leather shoes to the edge of his low-cut vest. So much of the hero's toilet may be entrusted to our confidence. Our next view of him will be as he descends the steps of his lodging-house immaculately and correctly clothed; calm, assured, handsome—in appearance the typical New York clubman setting out, slightly bored, to inaugurate the pleasures of the evening.

Chandler began to experience the real joy that his regular outing always brought to him. His companion, even in her cheap hat and dress, held herself with an air that added distinction to the natural beauty of her face and figure. And it is certain that she looked at Chandler with his animated but self-possessed manner and his kindling and frank blue eyes, with something not far from admiration in her own charming face.

Then it was that the Madonnas of Manhattan, the Frenzy of Fuss and Feathers, the Bacillus of Brag, the Provincial Plague of Pose seized upon Towers Chandler.

So he began to prate to Miss Marian of clubs, of fairs, of golf and riding and kennels and cottages and tours abroad, and threw out hints of a yacht lying at Larchmont. He could see that she was vastly impressed by this vague talk, so he endorsed his pose by random insinuations concerning great wealth, and mentioned familiarly a few names that are handled reverently by the proletariat. It was Chandler's short little day, and he was wringing from it the best that could be had, as he saw it.

The dinner was concluded, the waiter generously fed, and the two walked out to the corner where they had met. Miss Marian walked very well now; her limp was scarcely noticeable.

"Thank you for a nice time," she said, frankly. "I must run home now. I liked the dinner very much, Mr. Chandler."

He shook hands with her, smiling cordially, said something about a name of edge at his club. He watched her for a moment, walking rather rapidly eastward, and then he found a cab to drive him slowly homeward.

In his chilly bedroom Chandler laid away his evening clothes for a sixty-nine-day's rest. He went about it thoughtfully.

"That was a stunning girl," he said to himself. "She's all right, too. I'd be sworn, even if she does have to work. Perhaps if I'd told her the truth instead of all that razzle-dazzle she might—but, confound it! I had to play up to my clothes."

The girl, after leaving her entrance, sped swiftly cross-town until she arrived at a handsome and sedate mansion two squares to the east, facing out that avenue which is the highway of Mammon and the auxiliary gods. Here she entered hurriedly and ascended to a room where a handsome young lady in an elaborate house dress was looking anxiously out the window.

Chandler assisted her to her feet with instant and solicitous courtesy. The girl hobbled to the wall of the building, leaned against it, and thanked him demurely.

"I think my ankle is strained," she said, "as if twisted when I fell."

"If I can be of any further service," suggested the young man, "I will call a cab, or—"

"Thank you," said the girl, softly, but heartily. "I am sure you need was so awkward of me. And my shoe heels are horribly commonplace; I can't blame them at all."

Chandler looked at the girl and found her swiftly drawing his interest. She was pretty in a refined way, and her eyes were both merry and kind. She was inexpensively clothed in a plain black dress that suggested a sort of uniform such as shop girls wear. Her glossy dark brown hair showed its coils beneath a cheap hat of black straw which only ornamented a well-cut ribbon and bow. She could have posed as a model for the self-respecting working girl of the best type.

A sudden idea came into the head of the young architect. He would ask this girl to dine with him. With the element of his splendid but solitary petticoat feast had looked.

"I think," he said to her with frank gravity, "that your foot needs a longer rest than you suppose. Now, I am going to suggest a way in which you can give it that and at the same time do me a favor. I was on my way to dine all by myself when you came tumbling around the corner. You come with me and we'll have a cozy dinner and a pleasant talk together, and by that time your game ankle will carry you home very nicely. I am sure."

"But we don't know each other—it wouldn't be right, would it?" she said, doubtfully.

"There is nothing wrong about it," said the young man candidly. "I'll introduce myself—permit me—Mr. Towers Chandler. After our dinner, which I will try to make as pleasant as possible, I will bid you good-evening, or attend you safely to your door, whichever you prefer."

"My ankle does hurt yet," admitted the girl, attempting a limping step. "I think I will accept your invitation, Mr. Chandler. You may call me—Miss Marian."

"Come then, Miss Marian," said the young architect, gallily, but with perfect courtesy. "You will not have far to walk. There is a very respectable and good restaurant in the next block. You will have to lean on my arm—and walk slowly. It is lonely dining all by one's self. I'm just a little bit glad you slipped on the ice."

When the two were established at a well-appointed table, with a promising waiter hovering in attendance,

Lyrics of Life

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

HILLS AND DALES.

When the Spring's in the bud and when love's in the birth And when strong runs the blood in the heart of the earth, We will follow the rill, we will follow the trail, With a ho-up-the-hill and a merry-down-dale!

Then with your hand in mine, and with my hand in yours, Up the path of the pine, thru the meadow moors, We will walk where we will, and the world we will hail With a ho-up-the-hill and a merry-down-dale!

When the violet blows on the breast of the slope, When the lilies unclothe all the petals of hope, We will follow them still thru the velvet vale With a ho-up-the-hill and a merry-down-dale!

And when red sets the sun and when rises the moon, When the stars one-by-one light the candle of June, We will follow the trill of the far nightingale With a ho-up-the-hill and a merry-down-dale!

But if rain's in the west and a cloud's in the sky, Then the storm we will breast and the torrent defy, For, come good or come ill, we will challenge the gale With a ho-up-the-hill and a merry-down-dale!

THE HOUSEHOLD

Edited by ANNE RITTENHOUSE

SHOES FOR LITTLE FEET.

The moccasin type of shoe is gaining admirers among mothers of little children. Usually it is an expensive shoe, and this adds another point to its credit. It is needless of course, with a flexible but fairly thick sole. Sometimes the sole extends in a point up the back of the heel for perhaps the distance of a half inch. This makes it a desirable shoe for playtime, making it possible for the child who wears it to use the entire length of his heel in running, relieving any possible jar that comes when the shoe has stiff heels with a slight lift.

While there are canvas shoes with rubber soles that many mothers select for seashore wear some authorities prefer the pliable leather sole to that of rubber, because it is cooler and gives thicker protection to the soles than rubber.

For dress wear the one-strap slipper seems to be the usual choice. This type of slipper is attractive in white canvas or buckskin, but there is the disadvantage that it needs frequent cleaning. Black patent leather is an attractive substitute. However, if you object to patent leather as being warm you might select the one-strap slipper in brown kid. This is attractive in a slipper with a small steel buckle.

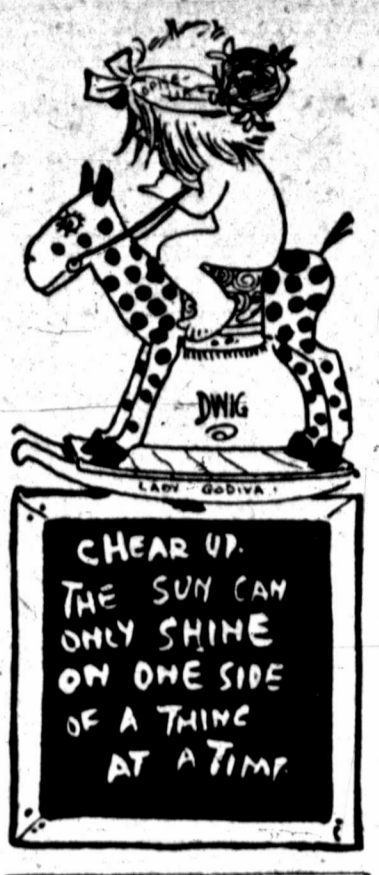

Mothers, many of them, used to avoid low shoes or slippers for young children, believing that they were not so conducive to strong ankles as were high shoes. This theory seems to be exploded now and so the choice of high shoes for summer may depend purely on personal preference.

There is some objection, however, on the part of child specialists against the use of lace shoes for young children. The cause of this is that parents and nurses often lace them too tight, constricting the muscles of the instep and ankle. Sometimes this is sufficient to cause discomfort that cannot be expressed by the child who has not learned to talk. If you do select lace shoes of any sort just bear this in mind—there is always greater danger from lacing them too tight than too loose.

LAST NIGHT'S DREAMS; WHAT THEY MEAN

DID YOU DREAM OF BEGGARS?

THESE is bliss in store for one who dreams of beggars, say the majority of the mystic interpreters. Some say that if you dream that you, yourself, are a beggar you will be fortunate in all speculations and in games of chance. The dream of beggars would appear to be regarded by most of the oracles as one of those which "go by contraries," for almost all of them consider that a dream of being a beggar is a sign of coming financial prosperity—some say great riches. There are mystics, however, who do not consider it as being so favorable an omen to dream of seeing a large number of beggars, as that means that, though you may acquire riches you will probably have a period of ill health. To dream of giving alms to a beggar is accounted a sign that you will soon be satisfied with your surroundings if you are not so already.

There are only a few of the oracles who look with disfavor upon a dream of beggars; these say that the dream is an omen of poor business, caused by poor management. If the dreamer changes his business methods he will prosper greatly, but not otherwise. There are some who think that one who dreams of a beggar asking alms is possessed of much benevolence and humanity himself; or that he will shortly receive benefits from some benevolent and generous person.

To-Day's Jewel Color Flower

JADE

JADE, much respected in China as a bringer of good luck, is today's talismanic jewel. To those who wear it, it brings health and riches, and also assures him of protection against contagious diseases. If one is to be benefited by the jade's powers, he must wear it in a talisman that touches the flesh.

The chrysoprase is today's natal stone, and the ancients attributed to it the power to protect its wearer from all forms of danger, and from violent death. Indeed, Voltaire declares that a thief sentenced to be executed would be saved on the gallows if in his mouth he held this gem.

Today's color sabbak, which, if worn by the young, is indicative of coquetry. The carnation is today's flower.

Something To Think About

Pass It Along

By F. A. WALKER.

HEARD a good story the other day. It was about a man who had been a beggar, and then he recited a clean, wholesome anecdote, which is supposed to have originated with the late Champ Clark.

He was passing along a little of the joy of life. He was distributing smiles.

There is a manufacturing establishment in New England, not a big enterprise. It is a sort of a family affair in which all the workmen and their wives and sweethearts have a more than wage-envelopes interest.

The principal reason is that the man who started it decided that he was going to pass along the joy of the success, if it was a success, and he has continued to do so from the day the little factory opened.

If a particularly big order comes in he writes a little bulletin about it and gives it to the superintendent, and at the bottom of the slip of paper are always the words "Pass It Along."

That means that everybody in the factory knows the good news almost as soon as the owner does.

And one year when the profits showed larger than usual he had the bookkeeper draw up a little statement of the year's surplus.

When it was in his hands he took his pen and dividing the total by

"What's In a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

FACTS About Your Name! Its History; Its Meaning; Whence It Was Derived; Its Significance; Your Lucky Day and Lucky Jewel.

CLARA.

CLARA, it may be readily surmised by any one familiar with Latin, is derived from the adjective meaning bright, clear, or famous. As a musical and ever-charming feminine name, it has kept its significance, though the steps of its history are many and devious.

The romances upon the name Clara as a mischievous name, and its origin spread in Europe. St. Clara is revered as the first Bishop of Nantes in Brittany in A. D. 380. Another Clara, a native of Rochester, was a hermit near Rouen who was murdered at the instigation of a wicked woman who had vainly paid her addresses to him. The name then changed to Clair, and combined with a "Saint," named two of the most noted families in the history of Great Britain, besides the various "de St. Clara's" of France. In Britain, it was speedily contracted to Sinclair, and subsequently as Clare, named the County of Clare in Ireland, a tract of land presented by Edward I as a wedding present to the son of the famous Red de Clare. In Britain, Spanish lore has it that the first Clara known to history was the daughter of Charlemagne, but the real origin seems to have been in Italy where the first Chiara, as the Italians call her, was a devoted disciple of St. Francis and under his direction, established an order of women following his rule and called "poor Clares" or sisters of St. Clara. The French call the name Claire. The Breton form is Skiesara, and Fines have contracted it to Lara. Clara and its derivatives has been a favorite with the poets whose verse to the lovely maids who have borne the name are almost too numerous to select. Tennyson has perhaps written the most charming lyric around the name; every one is familiar with his "Lady Clara."

If Clara would have the fullest benefits from the name she bears, she must wear her talismanic jewel, the carnation. This warm-colored stone supplies the contrast to the rather chill haughty beauty associated with the name. A carnation gives courage to its wearer and is especially to be desired by one who uses her voice as a singer or public speaker, as it insures strength of the vocal organs. Furthermore it protects its wearer from injury, though to dream of it signifies impending misfortune. Tuesday is Clara's lucky day and is her fortunate number.

THE YOUNG LADY ACROSS THE WAY

The young lady across the way was as attentive an informal affair one in a while but gave up partisanship entirely during Lent.

Two he drew a ring around the quietest and a line from the ring led to the words "Pass It Along," which meant that half of all the profits was divided among the workmen.

The game of "Pass It Along" is a great game. So many can play at it. It needn't take any money to start it and none to keep it going.

All it requires is a desire to make people happy and a determination to make the desire a working reality.

It is a strange thing that we seem more willing always to spread the unpleasant news than the pleasant. The rumor that Jack had lost his job gets twice as prompt circulation as the fact that Jill has received a promotion. I wonder why?

We can pass along so many helpful things. Encouragement. Enthusiasm. Appreciation. Sympathy. Everyone of them without a penny of cost, but so full of the profit of satisfaction, if we do it with a generous spirit.

The parable of the two vectors has always seemed to me one of the most vivid of the illustrations by which Jesus taught his great truths. You will find the story in the latter part of the eighteenth chapter of St. Matthew.

DRESS

By ANNE RITTENHOUSE

The Oriental Influence Has Not Vanished From Evening Costume, as Quaker Head Wrappings and Brilliant Ornaments Surt Perth With the Spring.

It is difficult to get away from a period of fashion. The women are not so much to blame as the designers, if blame is to be placed anywhere.

Reformers and artists preach wildly against constant changes in women's clothes, but the reporter sometimes feels with a bit of sadness that the designers stay too long in the clutch of one suggestion. In the Middle Ages, fashions moved slowly and in the latter half of the Eighteenth Century clothes turned the world into a whirlwind. Again their violence died down, again it swept up when the young Twentieth Century rose from the cradle, but now it is in a period of quiescence.

The present Oriental influence has produced a somewhat effect upon the designers. They have eaten of the lotus. Ancient Egypt still broods over clothes. Persia still a large, restraining hand over evening apparel.

The Russian period in clothes produced inertia in designers also. Possibly there is an uncanny spirit that comes out of the clothes of these sleepy countries which spreads itself to the salons of those who create.

No one objects. Women do not mind what period lays its emphasis upon present clothes if apparel is comfortable, easy of access, and does not restrict the figure. If the chemise takes on the lightness of Egypt, or the fantastic adornment of Roumania, or the great sash of Persia, no woman cares. She gets what she wants in the comfort of the chemise frock and she is getting it this year as she has during the last six years.

There has been a large fortune expended on the attempt to impress the Second Empire skirt on the public. It is better known as the Spanish skirt, and despite the fact that some of the best designers are behind it and some of the cleverest women wear it, the style has not become popular because of the rivalry of the Oriental seduction.

This seduction is not alone expressed in the waistless contour of gowns, but in headdresses, earrings, brilliant hip and toe jewelry, and that falls from a hat or one side and reaches to the shoulder of the waist.

The sketch shows a headdress worn by a fashionable woman. It is of pale green chiffon embroidered in silver thread and studded with rhinestones.

DOROTHY DIX'S TALKS

By DOROTHY DIX THE WORLD'S MIGHTY PAID WOMAN WRITER

What Women Like.

A MAN wants to know what quality women admire most in men.

Strength.

Strength of mind. Strength of body. Strength of will.

There isn't a woman living who doesn't fall for the cave man stuff, and whose secret ideal isn't a husband who would beat her by his hair, get angry if he didn't love her so overwhelmingly.

If every woman could have her heart's desire, she would be wooed with a club by a determined gentleman who would drag her by the hair of her head to his bedroom, and stop her shrieks for the police with kisses.

That is why the bold lover always wins out, while the humble worshipper gets left. There is just something in the sight of a man pinching his feet that fills a woman with an irresistible desire to kick him.

Of course, now and then, the meek and lowly suitor, who begs a woman on bended knees to take him, instead of having the nerve to grab her, does get her, but it is only after she has despaired of the love pirate's coming along.

Practically any man can get any woman he wants if he has the strength to do it, and goes after her with a determination to make her love him whether she wants to or not.

If he has strength, he has the glamorous quality for her that overshadows all of the virtues and most of the social ten commandments. It is true that many women marry weaklings. Witness the number of misguided females who have married men to reform them and who remain faithful to poor, flabby creatures who haven't an ounce of force in them, physically or mentally.

This has made many men think that the way to appeal to a woman is to arouse her pity and throw themselves upon her charity. They tell a woman that she alone can save them; that they cannot stand alone and need her for a brace; that she must stand between them and temptation; and that they can never achieve anything in the world without her aid.

Little do these men know that the feeling that they arouse in a woman's breast is merely maternal love. It is not the love of a woman for her mate, but the love of a mother for a poor, weak, wobbly child that hangs on her skirts, and that she, she, has to hold by the hand to steady. It may be a very tender affection, very patient and compassionate, and long-suffering, but it has an element of contempt in it that would be stifled on a man's heart if he realized it.

Women admire strength in a man, and they admire it most when it is allied with tenderness. Then it is irresistible.

ALL THE NEWS OF ALL THE SPORTS ALL THE TIME

Clark's Triple in The Ninth Gives Spudders Fourth Straight Win

About a week ago Danny Clark dropped an easy toss to second base and lost a ball game. But Danny redeemed himself yesterday. With the able assistance of Tex McDonald in the final chapter of a conflict which abounded in all kinds of baseball—good and bad—Danny won the fourth successive game for the Spudders 7 to 6.

When we started this tale we mentioned the fact that the athletes displayed all kinds of baseball. We repeat it here with emphasis. More and more of the kind of baseball were never crowded into nine innings. There were skulls galore, not only on the part of the players themselves but on the part of the spectators.

Barrough started on the hill for the home boys and managed to stick until the ninth, but he was not for several hits and in the ninth he was hit and would have lasted that long. He was found for enough safeties to win several contests, but his opponent practically put him out after getting off by falling to keep their heads up. Abe Bowman was chucked into the fracas in the ninth after a hard single and a double from the tying runs. He was greeted with a single which made the score even up and another bit of dumb work on the paths prevented the tying runs from scoring. He finally got the side out, however, before any further damage was perpetrated.

Johnny Nee also used a couple of hurlers and while they were not hit as freely as the Spudders slabbers they were nicked when blows meant runs. Coehran went until one man had been retired in the ninth and then the veteran gave way in favor of Tiner. The latter didn't have much more than Gene, though he was more fortunate.

As far as the purely mechanical end of the game is concerned, it was a corker. Danny Gross played a whirlwind game between second and third and out of base hits he made certain safeties were knocked down by him with the ease and grace of an old timer and his fielding was easily one of the features of the game.

But it's a good thing there's no skull column in the box score as it would have been a record. Both sides had their offenses and they pulled some colossal ones. Miller and Works were the outstanding "killers" for the locals while Brock and Connolly were the dumbest of the invaders. Miller forgot that there was but one out in one instance and was easily doubled off second. Brock, who is the ball team's best catcher, threw the ball into the field three times when he could have thrown it and got a man on the cushions while his failure to touch the bag once again resulted in a tally. The umpire was particularly fair for the last mistake, but he'll get to that later.

The chief offenders for the visitors were Brock and Connolly. We take it for granted that both men have been on the bases before, but one would never know it judging from yesterday's performance.

Just to make the party complete the umpire had to kick in with their "boots." Irwin missed at least two that weren't even close and while we are inclined to blame him for this, it isn't his fault. Two of the plays were very similar, and strangely enough, they were both made by the same man. In the seventh chapter Tulio drove a line to the Tex McDonald. Now the question is—Did Ted trap the ball or did he not? The umpire said he did and it looked that way to the opinions of hundreds of others to the contrary. However, it must be admitted that the play was close. Tulio went to first at an easy clip and McDonald lobbed the ball over. Works took it for granted that McDonald had caught the ball fairly and failed to step on the bag, though he should have done so and made it safe. As a result Tulio was called safe.

Again in the ninth, Tulio lined to Gross, but this one wasn't even close. Danny hit over his head and caught the sphere at least a foot off the ground. But Irwin made the same ruling as in the other case.

Earlier in the game, Works interfered with Brock when the latter attempted to catch Miller stealing. Works deliberately placed himself in front of the visiting backstop and prevented him from making the throw and the Spudders reaped the best of that one. But the Spudders were hurt more than we are. Works' error crossed the plate, while Tulio's error crossed both times.

Well, we've just about used up our allotted space and will tell how the runs were scored briefly. The Spudders gave Coehran a warm reception in the first when they chased a quartet of counters over on a couple of passes, an infield hit by McDonald, a clean single by Miller and a timely two-ploy wallow by Works.

Two singles, a pass, and an infield out gave the Bears only in the second while two singles and a pass gave them another in the third. The Spudders scored again in the fourth on successive doubles by Darrough and Rothfuss and their marker in the sixth was made possible by singles by Clark, Miller and Works.

A double by Bowen followed by singles by Brock and Fuller netted one more for the visitors in the sixth and their fourth was scored in the seventh when Works failed to touch the bag on Tulio's hit by Henry and Bowen followed with singles.

BABE ADAMS IS STILL WINNING BALL GAMES

Celebrates Thirty-Ninth Birthday By Knocking Brooklyn Dodgers Under.

By HENRY L. FARRELL. United Press Staff Correspondent. NEW YORK, May 20.—Babe Adams went out yesterday and won a ball game from Brooklyn.

Babe has been winning games for many, many years—and that's the story.

The veteran of the Pittsburgh hurling staff had just celebrated his 39th birthday when he was called on to work.

"The old arm is still good. He showed as much stuff as he ever had," George Gibson, his team mate of 1909, and now his manager, said today.

Babe is an example for those who hope to be fit at 40. He came up to the big time in 1905 and became a hero de luxe in the 1909 world series. He kept going until 1917 when he was voted "through," after eight hard years of campaigning and was sent to the minors.

Two years on small time were enough for Babe and he came up to the Pirates in 1919. He is still there and he hasn't thought of quitting.

He is the only active player left of the 1905 championship team.

"I feel just as good as I ever did," Babe said here today, and he looks not a day over 30.

WILL NAME WINNER OF CARPENTIER-DEMPSEY BOUT IF IT GOES THE LIMIT

Because of the possibility of the Carpentier-Dempsey championship battle going the limit of twelve rounds Tex Rickard has decided on a plan to officially name the winner of the bout in spite of the New Jersey law prohibiting a referee's decision. Rickard will ask Jim Jeffries, Lord Louisa and Jim Corbett to act as judges in case of necessity. It is probable that the principals in the great bout will agree to abide by the decision of the judges should there fall to be a knock-out. The judges' decision will also serve to decide the thousands of wagers on the battle.

The Sportlight by Grandland Rice

Liverpool, England, May 19. When you step upon the Hoylake course, the home of the Royal Liverpool Golf Club, you step into golf history thick enough to be cut with a dull knife.

Even St. Andrews, Scotland, where the game was nursed on a bottle and was later cradled and taught to walk, is only about 100 years old on this well-sunkered background, where Great Britain's defensive division is awaiting the American attack.

Hoylake not only helped to start the golf boom for England back in 1876, but also held the first unofficial amateur championship and the first amateur international match between England and Scotland.

There is nothing flashy about the approach to Hoylake, nor yet its surroundings. A drab, leaden sky along between dual houses until suddenly you are upon the rim of a flat looking treeless battlefield that for beauty doesn't even touch the apple blossom bordered course of North Hempstead, L. I., nor yet the dogwood bordered course of Westchester, N. Y.

But the test of championship golf is there—make no giddy mistake about that. Old-fashioned cross bunkers guarding the greens—seven out of bounds possibilities or probabilities—and always a frisky young golfer romping merrily back and forth.

Those seven out of bounds holes—the first, third, sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth—plus a rollicking out of bounds wind are the factors which produce the main charm for the British and American contestants now replacing divots for the big test which begins next week.

It was bad enough under the old rules. But under the new regulations, where an out of bounds hole is a costly penalty—there is a distinct tendency at times to coddle aim as far as possible from the penalty zone.

FAVORS EVANS. This combination of out of bounds holes and cross-bunkered greens favors "Chick" Evans above any other player here.

For Evans has greater control over his tee shots than any one in the field, and certainly no one plays an approach with any greater skill.

Jones and Guimet, long hitters and wonderful iron players, are not quite up to Evans when it comes to placing a tee shot far down the fairway. Not quite over a long stretch. And both realize that in a short 18th-hole duel one can't afford to flop many shots off the course for that two-stroke penalty.

Chick's with the fairly low, well placed shot, won't be affected so much by the brisk winds that seem to be having a tournament of their own from day to day. He has a wonderful chance to become the next amateur champion of great Britain and America doesn't slip a cog. Right now the two hardest opponents he looks to have in his onward march are Guimet and Jones, who are going well enough to swap strokes with any living player, and not to mention any who might be extinct.

Tolley, the British champion, capable of fine golf, isn't nearly as straight as Evans on the average. This may not mean as much as any one match with Tolley and Guimet, both terrific hitters, would stand out as one of the features of the tournament. Tolley and Jones are members of the siege gun club who are hitting the ball a mile.

MAJOR LEAGUE BITS

Yesterday's hero: Ty Cobb. The manager of the Tigers busted out a home run in the fifth inning, beating the Red Sox 5 to 2.

Jim York, who was tossing hand grenades some time back with the Third Division, threw a lot of bombs among the Giants, the Cubs winning 4 to 2.

Marquard was easy for the Braves and the Reds lost 5 to 1.

Gardner's single in the eleventh inning drove in the run that gave the Athletics a 4 to 2 victory over the Yankees.

Chicago, May 20.—Another of the recruit pitchers secured by Manager Gleason of the White Sox passed his most severe test yesterday with flying colors. After two other recruits had been driven from the mound by the New York American slugger, Joubert Lum Davenport of Tucson, Ariz., went in in the fifth inning and struck out Babe Ruth, the second man up.

HOTLAKE, ENG. May 20.—American and British golf teams will meet here tomorrow for a match preliminary to the British amateur championship tournament which will begin on Monday.

PITTSBURGH, Pa. May 20.—Joe Choynski, former heavyweight: "It's a toss up. I can see no advantage for either man. Both Dempsey and Carpentier are punchers. The Frenchman is faster and will swing twice to the champion's once. Either man carries the power to stop the bout with a single blow. Carpentier has an excellent chance."

SPORTS SHOTS by Paul W. Barkin

The fans sure have enjoyed their money's worth the last few days. Here's what Tex McDonald said about his stab at third over which the row was raised: "I caught that ball about three inches above the ground. The force of the compact knocked my glove into the dirt and that was what kicked up the dust. However, Irwin did not make any decision so I threw to first to make doubly sure. If you don't believe me, ask Ewell Gross. He was coaching at this." We didn't see Ewell, but Tex ought to know, although it looked very much to us as if the ball was trapped. It was an easy one to miss.

Tex got the ball over to Works in plenty of time to make the out, but "Caddy" stepped off the bag before he caught the ball and was consequently charged with an error. Tullos didn't have the ball beaten so it was impossible to give him a hit. In the other case, however (when he hit Gross), he beat Danny's peg and had to be given credit for a hit, though it was evident to all that Danny had made the putout.

But, why crab? We got our fourth in a row. Brock cost the Bears a run in the sixth when he foolishly tried to score on Fuller's scratch hit. Connolly also cost them a run when he was too ambitious and tried to make third on Jake Miller's overthrow at the plate in the ninth.

the utility infielder. "Lefty" Johns has been turning back his opponents with monotonous regularity and there was no need of Appleton hanging around.

Johnny Nee bunched himself before the game started, but had to go to when Hooce strained himself running. Johnny thought the team's luck would change if he sat on the bench. Maybe he's right.

He's the second playing manager to bench himself. Pat Newnam started the season at first base, but pulled himself out when he failed to keep pace with the rest of the squad.

AGAIN POSTPONE TRIAL OF STILLMAN DIVORCE CASE

NEW YORK, May 20.—"The secret" hearings in the Stillman divorce proceedings were again postponed today from May 23 to June 1 and 2 by mutual consent of the attorneys.

Today's action resulted in renewed reports that James A. Stillman, former president of the National City bank, was determined to arrange a settlement outside of court, if possible, and that the hearings would be postponed from time to time to enable these negotiations to be carried on.

It was confidently asserted today by those in close touch with both principals that there is every likelihood of a settlement. The question of alimony, $7,500 a month, has already been agreed upon and nothing stands in the way of a complete agreement except the question of the legitimacy of 2-year-old Guy Stillman of whom Stillman alleges Fred Beauvais, French-Canadian guide, is the father. The alimony figure would be a continuation of the temporary amount recently fixed by Justice Morschauer.

Mrs. Stillman has repeatedly maintained that she would consider no settlement which did not clearly establish Guy's legitimacy. To this she was supported by John E. Mack, acting guardian for the boy.
