

FURTHER RIOTING IN IRELAND

NATION-WIDE PROBE OF "KUKLUX KLAN" BY FEDERAL AUTHORITIES

THOUSAND AGENTS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY ARE ACTIVE

ARE CO-OPERATING WITH OFFICERS OF THE STATES

Two Classifications of Data Are Being Collected for the Department of Justice

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 24.—E. Y. Clark tonight announced his resignation as an imperial Klansman of the Ku Klux Klan and stated that his connection with the Klan of Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler, his assistant, both had been the subject of a newspaper article and Mr. Clark declared he did not wish to subject her longer to criticism. He added that without financial aid he would be unable to carry on his work of promoting the Klan affairs.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Affairs of the Ku Klux Klan are being probed by thousands of federal agents and local police in an effort to determine whether the government shall stamp out the organization, Attorney General Daugherty declared tonight. Practically every branch of the organization is under surveillance, Mr. Daugherty said, and every move of its members is under investigation.

Agents of the department of justice are sifting a mass of data relating to the activities of the Klan. Two classifications of this data are being made for information of the attorney general. The first, and that of greatest interest to federal authorities, relates to possible violation of the federal conspiracy statutes and the laws still in effect, covering activities calculated to overthrow by force or violence the government of the United States and the operation of its laws.

The second is largely a matter for local state officials. It covers the obtaining of money by fraud or under false pretenses.

State and municipal authorities will be asked for aid and co-operation in this direction, and they will in turn have the assistance of federal district attorneys and agents of the bureau. A third phase of the inquiry relates to the possible use of the mails for illegal purposes. Postmaster General Hays has ordered a thorough investigation of this by postoffice inspectors. Though Attorney General Daugherty still has under consideration the advisability of authorizing Washington Imperial Wizard Simmons and other officials of the Klan to give such information as they are willing to impart, the present investigation is proceeding in rapid and orderly fashion.

SHRINKAGE OF MORE THAN ONE BILLION IN INCOME TAX TOTALS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—A shrinkage of more than $1,000,000,000 in income and excess profits taxes this fiscal year was reckoned upon by the senate finance committee in revising the house tax bill with a view to raising $2,324,000,000 in internal revenue in the 12 months ending June 30 next.

That was disclosed by the majority report approved today by committee Republicans. The estimated total of revenue under the bill is $128,000,000 less than treasury experts have figured for this fiscal year under the present law, but is $4,900,000 more than the revised total under the house bill. Estimated returns this fiscal year from income and profits taxes are $1,850,000,000, according to the report, as against approximately $1,900,000,000 of actual collections in the fiscal year ending June 30. Only about $50,000,000 of this difference of $1,120,000,000 is accounted for by changes proposed in the present law.

Treasury officers and committee members explained that the remainder is charged to shrinkage on account of business depression, diversion of funds to tax exempt securities and other causes. Declaring that the $2,324,000,000 total proposed under the revised bill was only $22,000,000 more than the treasury had estimated would have to be raised through internal taxes, the report said that this was "a margin of safety none too large for the fiscal year 1922 in view of the existing business depression and the uncertainty attaching to the yield on the income and profit taxes."

MEMBERSHIP ON THE REPARATIONS BOARD PLAN OF PRESIDENT

EXPECTED TO ASK CONGRESS TO APPROVE AMERICAN PARTICIPATION

NEW FIGHT ON TREATY LOOMS AS A RESULT

Will Bring Up Issue of Possible Entanglement in European Affairs

By L. C. MARTIN.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—President Harding will ask congress to approve American participation in the reparations commission today in the opening debate on Harding's treaty with Germany. It will bring to the fore the historic issue of whether America is to participate in the "entangled" some express it—in European affairs.

Senator Borah, getting under way his opposition to ratifying the present treaty, declared in a speech to senators that the only thing the treaty accomplished is to give the United States the right to sit on the reparations commission and charged despite contrary statement of Senator Lodge that this is a step toward getting into the league of nations.

"Whoever seeks to avoid the league of nations by joining the reparations commission is due for a sad awakening," said Borah.

Senator Lodge, in placing the treaty before the senate, said it left this government free to do as it pleased about everything involving American rights. Lodge clearly indicated, however, that the administration believed that in order to safeguard American rights, this government must become a member of the reparations commission.

WEALTHY INDIAN-NEGRO FAILS TO SECURE RELEASE

AVIATOR EMERSON KILLED IN ACCIDENT

Falls To Earth Before Grandstand At Oklahoma City Packed With 5,000 Spectators

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 24.—Lieutenant Arthur Emerson, about 30 years old, of Johnston, Pa., a former army balloon instructor, was killed at the state fair grounds here today when he fell from an airplane at an altitude of 200 feet while attempting to change from one plane to another by the use of a rope ladder.

He leaves a widow and a sister, also living in Johnston.

The accident occurred in full view of several times to get in the right position, the two planes approached the crowd at an altitude of about 200 feet. The air seemed rough and it appeared that the pilot of both machines encountered difficulty in steadying their planes for the feat.

The wind was strong and blew the ladder about, making it difficult for Emerson to get in a good position. A gust of wind caught the rope and blew toward him and it appeared that he made a grab for it and seemed that he had one hand on it when he was seen to grab with the other hand, but lost his hold and fell.

A witness who was standing a few feet from where he fell said that before Emerson hit the ground, he seemed to double up into a knot and added that his body was thrown several feet into the air by the impact. Death was instantaneous.

We also appreciated your folks coming over. You don't have to ask Seymour people to come to Wichita Falls, but this will make them come more often."

Fragments of Clothing Worn by Victim of Arbuckle Party are Exhibited at Hearing Saturday

DISTRICT ATTORNEY

By M. D. TRACY
United Press Staff Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 24.—Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle, world famous comedian, sat disconsolate in his cell at the city prison tonight after his hardest day in court since he was arrested two weeks ago today—charged with the murder of beautiful Virginia Rappe, "the best dressed girl in the movies."

His time in court today was but 30 minutes, but he heard Al Sannacher, his friend and Miss Rappe's former manager, charge that when Virginia was lying prostrate on one of Arbuckle's twin beds, the big, baby-faced comedian had tortured her indescribably.

He had seen Miss Rappe's clothing, shing big ripe feet, fat hands, were alleged to have made him dizzy before the eyes of a court room full of women for Semmacher's identification, and before the eyes of Minta Durfee, his faithful little wife. Roscoe and Minta, sitting cuddled together at the bar of justice, watched the unfolding scene with the first reel in the tragedy of the comedian's life.

The major phase of Semmacher's testimony dealt with the conference here Arbuckle, Fred Fishbeck and Lowell Sherman held in the office of Sid Grauman, theater owner of Los Angeles, two weeks ago.

But that lacked the tragedy—and also the morbidity of the other two phases of Semmacher's testimony.

Tells of Conversation. Semmacher was cautiously led by the prosecuting attorney through a story how he came to the following Arbuckle's Labor Day party, which had its climax in the death of Virginia Rappe, he with a party of friends had been at the party at the St. Francis hotel here.

The conversation had turned to the party of the day before.

"He did," was the answer.

"He told us that he had placed a piece of ice on Miss Rappe," replied Semmacher.

"What did he say?"

"The answer was unprintable. But it did not satisfy the man who represented the people of the state of California."

"Exactly what did Arbuckle say?" demanded the prosecutor.

"I don't want to say his words," said Semmacher.

"I'm sure they are important," shot back the prosecutor.

Semmacher hesitated.

"I suggest that in the court reporter," suggested the questioner; Semmacher did. They were written on a bit of paper and passed around the council table.

Arbuckle was looking straight downward. She played with a long string of solid amber beads which she was wearing. They must have been solid amber, or else her nervous hands would have worn them out, so contentedly they toy with them. Her eyes dimmed beneath long black lashes. Her cheeks were red and swollen. It seemed she was going to burst into tears—that she wanted to cry out her father's name.

Turns His Head Away. His face was flushed and jerking. He spoke during the scene back to the nearby chairs with one hand, clutched nervously the brass rail which separated the defendant's chair from those of free men.

Mrs. Arbuckle's mother, grey, but still alert, smiled wanly toward Minta. Her daughter was suffering. She would comfort her. But it plainly was without effect.

Finally the sordid subject was changed, but only for an instant, just long enough to turn the scene back to the late afternoon of Labor Day.

Semmacher told again that he had picked up and carried away Virginia Rappe's torn clothing from Roscoe Arbuckle's room.

A detective handed the prosecutor a bundle of white and green. Unfolding it was opened, Semmacher held up the last of the clothing worn by "the best dressed girl in Hollywood."

"Have you seen these before?" asked the prosecutor. Semmacher held up a pair of gold cuff links engraved with the initials "V. R."

"Yes," was the answer.

"They were Virginia Rappe's cuff links." The cuff links were duly marked as exhibit eight.

TROOPS SWEEP STREETS OF BELFAST WITH RIFLE AND MACHINE GUN FIRE

By M. D. TRACY
United Press Staff Correspondent.

BELFAST, Sept. 24.—Pleasant rioting between Sinn Feiners and Unionists broke out in Belfast tonight. This was the second consecutive night of street fighting in this city.

Troops swept the streets with rifle and machine gun fire. There was no estimate of casualties. The streets, swept with bullets, were virtually deserted and most of the shooting by the military was designed to keep people indoors.

The battle of machine guns and rifles was continuous for hours.

Crown forces gained control of the situation shortly after midnight, after severe fighting between Catholic and Protestant forces had continued throughout the day.

Machine gun poured down the streets in the battle area, sent both factions scurrying for cover immediately after the fighting, although here and there a sniper continued to fire occasionally after midnight. Early today everything was quiet.

The death roll in Saturday's fighting was two killed, four wounded.

AGED COUPLE MARRIES AT CONFEDERATE HOME

AUSTIN, Sept. 24.—Wyatt A. Taylor, 77 years old, and Mrs. S. A. Moore, 71 years old, were married at the Confederate home recently. The groom is an inmate of the home and his bride was formerly an inmate of the Confederate women's home here. After the marriage the couple went to live at the Confederate men's home, where provision was made by recent legislative action for such marriages.

This is the third marriage between inmates of the two homes since the action of the legislature allowed them to live together at the Confederate home. Another is to take place within the next few days, according to reports from the home.

The legislative action followed discovery that two men were living at the Confederate home while their wives were living at the women's home.

MAJORITY CHICAGO POLICE INVOLVED IN THE SALE OF BOOZE

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—Fifty per cent of Chicago's policemen are involved in illegal transportation and sale of liquor, Chicago Police Chief Charles Fitzmorris declared tonight.

A thorough cleanup of the department, with a view of ferreting out the guilty parties, was ordered by the chief. Immediate removal of officers found engaged in illicit booze traffic was promised.

The chief's assertion came with the announcement of the dispatch of letters to United States Attorney Cline and John H. Alcock, first deputy superintendent of police.

In communication to the district attorney, Fitzmorris gathered requested $1,000 to turn over to him evidence of federal agents gathered in dry law violations in which policemen were implicated.

Armed with the chief says he will go before the city civil service commission and demand the discharge of policemen named.

Considerable evidence of this character was collected recently by prohibition enforcement officers working under the direction of John Kjetland, in charge of the central division, and by special agents operating under A. J. Bernhardt, intelligence officer for the internal revenue bureau.

SEVERAL WEEKS DELAY FOR THE ANTI-BEER BILL FORECAST IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Several weeks' delay in consideration of the anti-beer bill were forecast in the senate, after conferees between leaders of the two houses met tonight. Senator Sterling, republican, South Dakota, in charge of the bill, was reached to give the legislation right of way after disposal of peace treaties and the tax revision bill.

The anti-beer measure was shunted aside today in favor of the German treaty, but agreement for its consideration was given by Senator Sterling.

"Sentiment of the senate," he said, "is overwhelmingly in favor of it," but as everybody knows, a final vote has been prevented by the tactics of not exceeding a half dozen senators."

PLAN A REVIVAL OF THE UNITED STATES EMPLOYMENT PLAN

ACTION IMPERATIVE DECLARES SECRETARY OF LABOR DAVIS

Will Ask Congress to Make Appropriation

Proposal Will Be Submitted To Conference To Convene At Washington Monday

By HERBERT W. WALKER
United Press Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Revival of the United States employment service to aid in finding work for the millions of men now jobless is imperative, Secretary of Labor Davis has decided.

An emergency appropriation to reestablish the service probably will be asked of congress soon, it was learned at the labor department tonight.

An initial sum of $250,000 will be asked under present plans.

The proposal also will be submitted to President Harding's unemployment conference which will open its sessions here Monday with 21 distinguished officials, capitalists, labor leaders and public spirited citizens present.

Should it receive the approval of the conference, which seemed certain, officials are confident congress would promptly allow the appropriations.

This proposition has been discussed at cabinet meetings, and is said to have received general approval. The revised federal service will act as a central clearing house for a national voluntary employment service which the administration hopes will result from this conference.

When the federal service comes to life, its purpose will be extremely opportune from that which it was originally established, former President Wilson recommended for a service so that sufficient men might be found for war work. Its future obligation will be to find work for the millions of unemployed men.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover and other administration leaders believe the present critical unemployment situation can be relieved by the establishment of voluntary organizations throughout the country which work under the direction of the revived federal service.

Skroh's body was found lying through the back. Next he killed Perry Hagley, a laborer employed by Skroh. Bailey then walked a mile and a half to the farm of El Heilman and killed the latter as he stood on his front porch.

PRODUCING OIL FOR 32 CENTS A BARREL IN RECEIVERSHIP AREA, CLAIMED TO SET ECONOMY MARK

mark for economical operation in the north Texas field. The figure of 32 cents per barrel includes the field overhead, the maintenance expense of the officers on Red river, it does not include the overhead of the Wichita Falls office, and of course there is not the lease expense that all other oil operators have. But even with these allowances, there is little doubt that it is a mark to shoot at. Particularly in this time when it is remembered that the drilling has been done in the lowland that is sometimes overflowed, on a sandy beach that makes it necessary to construct wooden bridges to every well.

Girl Believes That Youth Sought Death In College Struggle

EVANSTON, ILL., Sept. 24.—Silence of Leighton Mount, freshman at Northwestern university, who disappeared in the freshman-sophomore class rush Wednesday night, has led a young woman friend of his, Miss Doris Fox, to declare she believes he is dead; that he sought death and chose the college struggle either as a welcome means or as a cloak to hide his self-destruction. Miss Fox is 24 years old, several years older than the boy. She said he loved her and also that he had threatened suicide. A note he had written her just before he was last seen said: "This is just before the scrap. I am going into it with my roommate. You made me love you. Then I loved you on my own account."

DISAPPEARANCE MAY BE THE RESULT OF "FRANK"

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—Leighton Mount, missing student of Northwestern university, may be sequestered in an apartment here, according to information reaching searchers today. His disappearance, it was said, was the result of a "prank."

Venomous Snake Of Peculiar Shape A Town Curiosity

JOLIET, ILL., Sept. 24.—Wilmington, a small town near here, is organizing today to find the mate of a supposedly venomous snake discovered by Mrs. Henry Brodie when she attempted to sweep it off the sidewalk as a piece of rubbish. Mrs. Brodie protected herself from the writhing reptile with an umbrella. As the snake coiled itself for attack, Mrs. Brodie called Mrs. James Shine, a neighbor, to her aid and the pair, with sticks and shovels fought off the reptile before it was able to strike with its spiked tail, the wound of which is said here to be fatal.

The supposedly poisonous relative of the deadly asp now is languishing in a quart of moonshine whiskey which was produced for the purpose from a secret source outside the city. The bottle was put on exhibition in the town hall.

Measuring 18 inches in length, the snake is of varying shades of brown, with white hair line stripes running lengthwise. The upper jaw is in the form of a beak similar to that of a fowl and the tail ends in a spike one and a half inches long. This spike supposedly contains the deadly virus used in attack and also fits into the mouth so that the snake can roll like a hoop.

Hoop snakes were familiar sights along the shores of the Kankakee river 40 years ago, according to old residents, many of the snakes measuring three feet in length. Because they travel in pairs a search is being conducted for the mate.

Shaeffer said the engagement had meantime been broken because his fiancée went to dances without him.

This New Oakland Six Sport Model $1265 F.o.b Pontiac

HERE is a real Sport Car—with true Sport Car quality, beauty, power, speed and roominess—at the new low price of $1265.

Here, too, is a genuine all-purpose car in answer to the long-standing need for an automobile that will serve equally well during business hours and after the day's work is over.

Almost as light as a roadster, this new Sport Model has abundant seat room for four passengers, or the needed extra space for luggage or for carrying business equipment.

The Oakland Six Sport Model combines striking beauty of design, finish and fittings with the endurance and performance that have won the unqualified approval of the thousands of owners of other models of Today's Oakland Six, and with operating economy that sets a new standard for cars of its type.

This car will consistently deliver from 18 to 25 miles per gallon of gasoline, and from 12,000 to 16,000 miles or even more on its original cord tires.

It is indeed unusual to find a car the appearance of which is a genuine business asset—a car of which you can feel honestly proud in any company and under all circumstances—which at the same time requires so little for operating expenses and is priced so low.

The Sport Model is powered with the famous Oakland Six-Cylinder Overhead Valve Engine, built in the Oakland plant; the engine with special light-weight pistons that quicken acceleration and add to power, and with "honed" cylinders of the most perfect finish known to the automobile world.

Just a few of the outstanding features of this great Sport Car value:

- Light maroon finish with black fenders. Wire wheels. 32x4-inch cord tires. Genuine Brown Spanish leather upholstery throughout. Special top with plate glass rear window. Slanting, weatherproof windshield. 17-inch corrugated, laminated steering wheel. Genuine walnut instrument board. 44 H. P. six-cylinder overhead valve engine. 115-inch wheelbase; 6 1/2-inch frame. Alemite Lubrication System.

We will be glad to arrange a demonstration of this new Sport Model to suit your convenience. Don't fail to see this car at the first opportunity.

Other Models of Today's Oakland Six: Five Passenger Open Car $1145; Three Passenger Roadster $1095; Four Passenger Coupe $1625 with cord tires; Five Passenger Sedan $1725 with cord tires. All prices f. o. b. Pontiac

RADICAL'S PLANS ARE OPPOSED BY LEWIS IN MINERS' CONVENTION

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 24.—After President John L. Lewis had ruled out a proposal that the convention of the United Mine Workers of America adjourn and "go home and prepare our fighting lines," the delegates voted unanimously to instruct the international officers to use every lawful means to resist the issuance of an injunction against the union, sought in a suit filed in the federal court here yesterday.

Another proposal that the miners go on strike and remain idle until the suit was withdrawn from the court was also ruled out of order by President Lewis before the vote was taken to instruct the union officials to resist the injunction by every lawful means.

The Boardman Coal corporation, which brought the suit in behalf of more than eighty other operators, served notice today that it would make application on October 13 for a preliminary restraining order against the union, and business before the biennial convention of the miners was set aside while William Green, international secretary-treasurer, told the delegates that "the very heart and soul" of the union is at stake in the suit.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, who also addressed the convention, said the injunction, if granted, would enjoin all activities of the miners' union, and turning to President Lewis, he added: "John, in defense of that principle, I would like to visit you in jail." The delegates shouted their approval.

Mr. Lewis arose, declaring: "I have every expectation that Mr. Gompers will be accorded that privilege."

Mr. Gompers also attacked the Kansas industrial court law as imposing "involuntary servitude" on workers and predicted that it would soon "be wiped off the statute books."

JAPAN WILL CONSULT WITH OTHER NATIONS
RELATIVE TO THE U. S.

TOKIO, Sept. 24.—Japan will consult with other members of the league of nations relative to the desire of the United States to receive equal treatment in mandate islands of the Pacific as a feature of the settlement of the Yap question, it is said by newspapers here. Japan will also study the American claim to land ownership in Yap, as foreigners do not have the right to land ownership in Japanese territory.

It is estimated that this country's expenses at the Washington conference on limitation of armaments and far eastern questions will be about $2,000,000.

Another meeting of Japanese field marshals and the supreme councilors has been held and the Lomi-Uri Shimamura declares the principle of the limitation of armaments is as follows: "Japan will maintain for already settled principle of national defense, and no change or alteration will be made until the time arrives when international disputes and trouble can be settled without relying upon, or resorting to, armed force. This is because of a great and equal national status and the situation which exists in surrounding states."

This would indicate a change from the previously announced decision of Japan, which supported in principle the maintenance of twenty-one army divisions. It could seem she would be disposed to follow other nations' actual reductions. Leading newspapers declare that it is the intention of army and navy authorities to propose definitely the reduction of army and navy fortifications in the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines and Guah in exchange for the dismantling of Japanese fortifications on Formosa and the Pescadore Islands, and at Port Arthur and Bonin. Confirmation of this report, however, cannot be had.

CONTRACTORS LAY
OVER 4,000 FEET OF PAVING DURING WEEK

Potts & Prentice, road contractors, reported a week's run of over 4,000 feet on the Iowa Park-Electra highway. Both mixers were kept in operation throughout the week. There was a slight delay several mornings ago due to the inadequate water supply. Material is arriving in quantities large enough to insure the contractors that no delay will be occasioned from this source.

The Metropolitan Construction completed its first stretch of road Friday evening connecting with the pavement in the city of Electra. This company began work from the Wilbarger county line. The machinery was being moved Saturday and set up at a point 10,000 feet east of the Electra street paving. The contractors will begin Tuesday morning paving towards Electra.

The Zimmerman Construction company remained busy at work throughout the week and it is believed that they will have concluded their work in Iowa Park by the last of next week.

SOLDIER ACCIDENTALLY SHOT AT SAN ANTONIO; CONDITION IS SERIOUS

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 24.—Private Peter Chestnut, 22, company D 24th infantry, was shot through the abdomen today when the automatic pistol of Captain E. A. Kindervanter was accidentally discharged. Several other men in the company narrowly escaped injury.

Private Chestnut was reported in a serious condition at the Ft. Sam Houston station hospital tonight. An operation was found to be necessary. His home is in New York City.

the sleeves. The cuffs were gone—torn off by Virginia Rappe in her agony, witnesses said. It took its place among the exhibits.

White silk bloomers trimmed with a narrow band of green silk were next held up for all who cared to look and behold. They were torn and crumpled. They, too, had been Virginia Rappe's and became "Exhibit Nine."

A green sleeveless jacket, torn open from the left shoulder to the left arm pit came next.

Then a green jersey skirt—short and of stylish cut.

Next a white panama hat, crumpled but still gay with a bright green band, was exhibited.

It was Virginia Rappe's hat which Arbuckle was alleged to have had on "as a clownish prank" when he emerged from the room after his alleged assault upon Virginia.

Two black lace garters concluded the sordid display. On one three inches of black kink lace and a tiny pink and blue bow were intact. On the other the bow—if there had ever been one—was gone and the lace was torn to shreds.

The garters, bracelet and hat, Semmacher said, he had found on the floor of Arbuckle's room after Miss Rappe had been carried away.

The skirt and the jersey jacket, he said, were on chairs.

The bloomer, shirt waist, and cuffs links he had fished from the waste paper basket.

The court room was silent during the unfeeling display of the wardrobe of the girl now dead. Arbuckle's face was red and twitching. Miss Rappe's eyes were turned downward, dim and saddened, watching nervous fingers tie her beads into knots, and untie them again.

Semmacher told of the midnight meeting in the office of Sid Grauman, Los Angeles motion picture theatre owner, which Arbuckle and Lowell Sherman determined to come to San Francisco after hearing of the death of Virginia Rappe.

Semmacher denied he had gone to Grauman's theatre that night except by accident—his niece, Irma Morris, wanted to see Roscoe Arbuckle in a film being shown that evening and she wanted to see her friend, whose name was given as Mildred Harris, dancer.

It was not revealed whether this was the Mildred Harris who was once the wife of Charlie Chaplin.

Semmacher, Fred Fishbeck, Lowell Sherman and Arbuckle, with "two or three others," had talked for an hour in Grauman's office about the death of Miss Rappe.

"We all thought it was very unfortunate," Semmacher said, "and we could not understand." He could not recall any statements made by Arbuckle.

"Arbuckle phoned the chief of police in San Francisco and I heard him say he would come to San Francisco if the chief thought he better," Semmacher said.

The next morning at 2 o'clock, Arbuckle, Semmacher, Fishbeck, Sherman, Attorney Frank Dominguez and Lou Anger, Arbuckle's manager, rode out of Hollywood in Arbuckle's famous $25,000 automobile—to San Francisco, where a murder warrant was waiting.

Only once during the questioning of Semmacher was he called upon to tell details of the Labor Day party.

"Did you see Virginia Rappe standing in the door of Arbuckle's room with her hair down, shake her head and say, 'Roscoe, how do you like this?'" he was asked.

"No I did not" was the answer.

Attorney Dominguez, chief of Arbuckle's counsel, examined Semmacher chiefly as to instructions Dominguez had given to "tell the whole truth about this thing."

The court adjourned until Monday morning.

PEACE IS KEYNOTE OF ULTIMATUM OF POLAND

MOSCOW, Sept. 24.—The keynote of headlines in all Moscow newspapers today concerning Poland's ultimatum to Russia is "we want peace."

Karl Hadek and other prominent communists contribute articles in which both the proletariat and bourgeoisie in the European countries are called upon to check the Polish "war plans," which are alleged by the writers to be inspired by France. Stress is laid on the impossibility of Russia bending to the Polish ultimatum and Poland ceases its agitation against the Ukraine.

Plainclothesman Smart was given an interesting three minutes when three negroes got unruly near a dance hall in the negro section. POLICE DEPARTMENT
HAS A BUSY NIGHT

Several Arrests Made and Prisoners Stage Noisy Evening At City Hall

Business around the police station was decidedly brisk for a time Saturday night, drunk and fighting cases keeping the night force on the jump.

Two drunks arrested shortly before dark made life miserable for the police and firemen at the city hall with their incessant yelling. One of the men, confined in the main cell room at the top of the hall, dismantled an iron stove and used the pieces as ammunition in a vain attempt to batter down the door. Meanwhile the other one who had been locked up in a first floor cell had raised such a racket by rattling the cell doors and windows that it was necessary to handcuff him.

Both men wore themselves out by 9 o'clock and settled down to sleep off the effects of their liquid cheer.

A fight on Seventh street landed an old man in the lockup about 10 o'clock. He was reported to have started a fight with a companion in a cafe, but was soon silenced when a beer bottle was broken over his head. He sustained several cuts which healed profusely and after being given attention by the officers, was locked up. The other combatant broke and ran when

LOYD-GEORGE HAS PLAN FOR MEETING EARLY IN OCTOBER

ASSUMES DE VALERA HAS WITHDRAWN CLAIMS TO IRISH SOVEREIGNTY

WILL NOT CONSENT TO DISCUSS A SEPARATION

Prime Ministers Threaten To Precipitate a General Election if Plan Fails

By ED L. KEEN
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON, Sept. 24.—Premier Lloyd George has prepared a new note to President De Valera, proposing an Irish peace conference early in October, it was reported reliably tonight. The note is understood to recognize De Valera's virtual withdrawal of his claims to Irish sovereignty. This was the obstacle which caused the calling off of the conference previously proposed.

The note, it is understood, insists that Britain will not consent to discuss the separation of Ireland from the empire.

The October conference must be entered by the Irish delegates with this distinct proviso:

Lloyd George's note has been submitted to other members of the British cabinet. It is unlikely that they will cause a change in the wording of it.

Lloyd George now is threatening to precipitate a general election if the Irish negotiations fail, feeling confident the voters will support him and re-elect his ministry. He would blame the reactionaries for failure of the parley.

Winston Churchill, speaking to an audience in Dundee, Scotland, on Ireland, declared he saw no foundation for hope.

"The Irish position is still uncertain," he warned. "An Irish republic means inevitable civil war."

Churchill declared Ulster had ceased to be a stumbling block to the negotiations. Ulster has made great sacrifices, he said, and is willing to see peace in Ireland.

"I am profoundly disappointed at De Valera's rejection of home rule," he said. "A lasting peace in Ireland would be helpful, not only to the empire but to the entire world."

"Britain now is able to enforce the law in Erin, but we must clear the misunderstandings which have developed. Then if our terms are rejected we will have the support of the entire world."

"Our offer is generous and sincere. But we must insist on allegiance to the king, whether he be the king of Britain or Ireland."

The mystery of the situation tonight lay in the riots in Belfast. The reports indicated fierce fighting had been waged until early today.

A somber quiet hung over the streets of the East Side, where the troops mounted their machine guns and poured several volleys into the gunmen.

An interview with Arthur Griffiths, Sinn Fein minister, clearly outlined the Irish viewpoint on the conference problem. Griffiths declared that Ireland insists on its right to independence, but that it does desire that England recognize it as a republic before the peace parley.

PREDICT RUSH OF GERMANS SOON AS PEACE IS RATIFIED

NON-RETROACTIVITY OF ARTICLE 27 IS DEFINITELY FIXED

BOYS SMOTHER TO DEATH WHEN PLAY TUNNEL GAMES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Unless the German government discourages emigration a flood of Germans may follow the reestablishment of American consular offices in that country, in the opinion of officials of the department of labor.

While the percentage immigration law permits now more than 13,000 Germans to enter this country in one month, practically none have come in recent months, notwithstanding that the American commissioner at Berlin has the power to issue passports.

With the setting up of consular offices at the various ports, however, it will be much easier for visas to be obtained provided the German government is willing to issue passports.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 24.—The non-retroactivity of article 27 of the constitution is definitely established and the reasons for its non-retroactivity are specifically laid down in the supreme court's decision in the Texas company amparo case, the final text of which was approved today, according to Justice Benito Flores of the supreme court.

The decision applied specifically to the Texas oil case, the justice declared, but it establishes certain principles of law on which the non-retroactivity document was reached, which "beyond doubt will apply to all other similar amparo cases now pending."

Intermittent secret sessions have been held by the court since August 30 and the completed draft was approved at the final conference this noon.

It is understood that President Obregon has given his approval to the decision.

AMARILLO, Sept. 24.—Howell McClure, 14, of Little Lake, Texas, was smothered to death today when a sand bank in which he and another boy had dug a tunnel, caved in. The other boy crawled to safety.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, Sept. 24.—Word received here tonight says more than 200 men dressed in Ku Klux Klan regalia paraded in Ennis, Texas, tonight. Hooded figures carried banners bearing warnings to law violators and were led by a horseman bearing a flaming torch and American flag.

FIRE LOSS IN AUGUST TOTALLED $29,000,000

"The fact that in the month of August fire losses in the United States totaled $29,000,000 should be enough alone to warrant a fire prevention day," said Fire Chief J. L. McClure Saturday in announcing that country as a day for the preventing and suppressing of the red menace.

Chief McClure has just received reports on fire losses of the nation during the past year and these indicate that the United States has so far in 1921 lost about $200,000,000 through fire. With this in view, it is, he believes, certainly appropriate that fire prevention day be observed.

No deficit plans for observing the occasion have been worked out yet but it is probable that some sort of celebration will be held. The schools have taken note of the day during the past few years and they will no doubt hold fitting exercises. The possibility of a fire prevention parade was hinted at by the chief.

SAYS ARBUCKLE CASE HAVING MORAL LESSON SHOULD BE PUBLISHED

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 24.—Kansas City newspaper men were called upon in Judge R. S. Latham's court to give their opinion of what sort of news was fit to print, and what was not. The testimony was given in connection with the hearing of a motion to quash proceedings and return confiscated property of a Sunday publication here devoted largely to sensational items.

R. E. Stout, managing editor of the Kansas City Star, testified that he thought articles appearing in the publication were unfit to print.

Ralph Ellis, managing editor of the Kansas City Journal, agreed with this opinion.

The judge then asked him whether he considered detailed accounts of supposed happenings in the Arbuckle case were proper reading matter. Mr. Ellis said he believed they were. He said that a moral lesson was pointed out by the Arbuckle case, and that the motion picture industry was one which affected virtually every home.

he first started and the Yanks were connecting even though the drives were all easy chances. Starting with the fifth inning, the field was covered by the first young Indian hurler found his self and the Yanks were done, as they plainly showed.

Tris Speaker, the leader of the champion pack, pulled his knee out of the dugout and went back into the battle to rally his band.

He failed to get a hit and most of the Yanks while the field was covered by his two running mates. The Speaker spirit was very manifest, however, in the entire club.

Victory over the Yanks made the count one all in the series and brought the Indians back to within two points of the lead. The morale of the victory is much greater, as Harper was regarded as a sure winner by the New Yorkers, while Uhle was considered doubtful in any game.

The third of the series tomorrow is expected to draw forty thousand spectators. Ray Caldwell, former Yankee, is expected to serve his spital to the Yanks while Manager Huggins will probably send his underhand ace, Carl Mays, to the mound. The score:

WHAT WILL THE PINCH-HITTERS DO?

OLAF HENRIKSEN IN A PINCH FOR THE RED SOX GOT A TWO BASE HIT—TYING THE SCORE

10 WALKS HAVE BEEN ISSUED TO PINCH HITTERS IN '17 WORLD SERIES

The great Mathewson was in the box and the Giants were leading by one run when Boston came up in the seventh inning. There were two out and one on base. Bedient, Red Sox pitcher, was next up.

Substitutes played an important role in the second game of the 1916 Red Sox-Brooklyn series at Boston. Boston evened up Brooklyn's one run in the third inning and the game dragged on with neither team scoring until the 14th. Dick Holtzclott then drew a pass, and Lewis sacrificed.

Pinch hitters have been called upon 82 times in world series games dating back as far as 1892, the real beginning of the inter-league post-season clashes.

And only 12 times have the men thus jammed into the breach put over the old wallop in quest of which they were introduced into the lineup.

Will pinch hitters in the series now coming up be able to better this record? Abolition of freak pitching and introduction of a live ball, which turned baseball into a game of free and heavy hitting, ought to turn out in the 1921 world series a crop of pinch hitters that will shatter all precedent for ability to pull games out of the fire.

Pinch hitters once decided a world series. They were Engle and Olaf Henriksen, pinching for the Red Sox in 1912, in the last game of the series with the New York Giants. The teams had each won three games.

JESSE GUILFORD WINS NATIONAL GOLF TITLE

Boston Gaffer Defeats Bob Gardner 7 Up and 6 to Play in Match

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 24.—Jesse Guilford, Boston, won the National amateur golf championship by defeating Robert Gardner, Chicago, 7 and 6, in the 36-hole final at the St. Louis Country Club. Guilford, after obtaining a generous lead of six up in the morning round, by shooting a 73, while Gardner failed with his putter, was held even during the first five holes of the afternoon round, but by scoring a string of unbreakable birdies on the next four holes he became dormie 7 after halving the 25th.

Such an enormous gallery, estimated at upwards of 2,000 persons, followed the match this afternoon that the players and referees were all but trampled underfoot and the gallery swarmed on to the 29th green before Guilford could get a chance to hole his easy putt for an easy victory, 8 up and 6, and they halted it in four, making it 7 up and 6.

SPORTS SHOTS by Paul W. Barkin

Yes, he, the Chicks saw some spitting. Signor Tuero went to the well once too often. Skipper Ats tried a little crossing up when he sent "Lefty" Johns to the hill. The youngster was too wild to stick, however.

The Memphis rooters and backers crawled into their holes last night. We'll have to be crawling into ours pretty soon, too, if Tris Speaker has many more Ulies to spring on the boys. Those Tanks-see-still up there, however.

The city editor told us last night that he had just been talking to "nut" who was foolish enough to think that if both New York clubs got into the big series the Yankees would win. We told him that we agreed with the "nut" and he was knocked speechless.

The University club and All-Stars are carded to clash at Athletic park on the city title last week, but the ex-collegians state that there will be a different story this afternoon. Judging from the interest taken in last week's contest a regular Spudder crowd will be on hand today.

The high school authorities made a very wise move when they scheduled all their home games at Athletic park. Yesterday's contest drew the largest crowd that ever witnessed a football game in Wichita Falls. There were 127 paid admissions, and the gathering was not made up solely of high students either. The gridiron game should more than pay for itself here this year. The brand of pigskin charging displayed by the local youths is well worth watching.

The work of Referee Harry Viner at yesterday's game was big league stuff. He knows his book from A to Z and there were no unnecessary delays on the field. He made the men play according to the rules and any infraction proved costly to the offender.

They're still razzin' in this section of the country. George Stevens and Pet Brown are booked for tomorrow night in Graham. Bull Montana will be the third man on the mat.

If the Panthers decide to take on Amarillo after the Dixie championship, they will be in charge of Will Gray. Will has done all the negotiating with Hankin Johnson. There will be a nice piece of change in it for the Cats if they stick together long enough for the series.

"Dixie" Davis, the Brown hurler who broke into the headlines with a vengeance a few weeks ago after his remarkable hurling in a twin bill, tried the stunt again yesterday and almost got away with it. Only one run was made off him in the two performances. As usual, the further he went the more effective he became.

AMARILLO, Sept. 24.—Khiva Shrine Temple was constituted under charter here today by Imperial Potentate Ernest Cotta of Atlanta, Ga. Forty-seven novices were initiated. Hundreds of people saw the Shrine parade this morning.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, Sept. 24.—Governor Neff left today for El Paso to attend the annual meeting of the American Legion, department of Texas, which opens Monday. The governor will return to Austin the middle of next week.

J. J. Andrews, aged 60, died at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon in the Wichita General hospital after an illness of over a year. He had been confined to his bed with a cancer. Funeral arrangements will not be completed until the arrival of a daughter, Mrs. J. J. Ivey of Vernon. Other relatives include two daughters, Ethel and Mary Andrews, of 707 Burnett street.

NEGRO HAD AN IDEA BUT LETS ROBBERS MAKE ESCAPE

HOUSTON, TEXAS, Sept. 24.—Joe Robinson, negro chauffeur, was sleeping peacefully on his cot in the office of the Cannon Oil company here in the wee small hours of the morning.

Peculiar noises from another part of the room disturbed his nocturnal slumbers. He investigated, carefully. Two men were endeavoring to break into the office safe. They were deeply engrossed in their work. Robinson was as deeply engrossed with an idea. He made his way out of an open window and down the ladder the yeggs had thoughtfully left for him when they came in.

Later he called the police. The two men had left when they arrived. The safe had been opened, but $500 in currency in the locked cash drawer was untouched.

NEGRO KILLED WHEN FALLING TIMBER STRIKES HIS HEAD

A falling timber which struck the ground and then rebounded with terrific force brought quick death Saturday afternoon to Dallas Simmonds, a negro laborer working at the Sanders-Hald auto supply building, 909 Ninth street. Simmonds never knew what struck him, eyewitnesses of the accident declared.

The negro was employed by the Whitehill Construction company, which is raising the first-sweep interior of the Sanders-Hald plant. He was at work on the ground floor about 3 o'clock, clearing away debris when without warning a heavy log by four scantling fell away from a roof support. It struck the ground at Simmonds' side, one end rebounding and dealing him a blow on the side of the head.

He collapsed without a sound and was apparently dead when aid reached him. The body was placed in a Hines ambulance and hurried to the Wichita General hospital, but an examination there showed that death had taken place some minutes before. Simmonds was 49 years of age and had been living at 1200 Kemp boulevard. The body will be sent to Paden, Okla., Sunday for burial.

COTTON MARKET.

New York Cotton
NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Early declines were followed by rallies in the cotton market today on trade buying and covering for over the week-end. December contracts advanced from 19.55 to 20.00, closing at 19.75, with the general list closing firm at a net advance of 20 to 30 points. The market was unsettled at the start. The hedge selling which had been in progress at the close of the previous day was again in evidence and there was further softening liquidation which was probably prompted by disappointment over the light export movement of the past week and the gloomy views of a former government official who has recently returned from an effort to sell cotton on the continent. The market predicts that European spinners will not buy ahead until money conditions are stabilized. Active months sold about 12 to 20 points net lower right after the call, with October touching 19.00 and January 19.25. But hedge selling then tapered off while there was very little pressure from other sources and the market did better in later trading. For a time buying was held in check by expectations of increased pressure from the south which has been offering cotton here pretty freely just before the close for the past week or three days, but no such price developed this morning and there was a fine feeling about the market. It carried October up to 19.45 from the best. Reports from southwestern trade publications estimated that about 6,666,000 bales, with without any apparent effect on the day's market, as the figures were about the same as in previous years. Cable advices published today said the international spinners' federation reported a consumption of American cotton for the six months ending July 31 at 4,500,000 bales, compared with 4,340,000 for the previous half year and estimates spinners' stocks at 2,025,000 against 2,055,000 on Feb. 1.

showed independent strength and finished unchanged to a shade advance. The bulk of the wheat trade was of a local character with considerable week-end evening up, but the light outside trade prevented any great enthusiasm. Corn and oats were somewhat unsettled, but the undertone was easy. Provisions were lower.

Coffee Market
NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—The better tone which has been inapparent in the market for coffee futures since it was reported that Brazil was buying Victoria coffees under the valorization plan, became more pronounced this morning, the opening was 7 to 9 points higher with active months later showing net advances of 3 to 13 points, and with December contracts selling at 7.85, or into new high grounds for the season. This made an advance of about 113 points from the low level of last August and apparently to attract some realizing, as the close was 3 or 4 points off from the best.

the further advance of rails being counterbalanced by heaviness of foreign oils. Gains of one to three points among transportation were led by Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis (the four) based largely on that road's annual statement. Selling of Royal Dutch, which suffered an extreme setback of five points affected Mexican petroleum and General Asphalt, those issues reflecting 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 points. Sales amounted to 235,000 shares. The bond market retained its recent active and strong trend, with further heavy dealings in liberty issues, mostly at advances.

STILL MORE WELLS BEING SHUT DOWN BY LACK OF WATER

SHORTAGE IS HAMPERING OPERATIONS IN NEARLY ALL PARTS OF DISTRICT

BUNGER SECTION IN YOUNG SEES MARKED ACTIVITY

Conditions There Comparable To Old Extension Days With Many Tests Going Down

Lack of water continued to hamper drilling in the Wichita Falls district last week, and several additional shut-downs were reported.

In the northwest extension drilling operations are at a standstill, although many companies are engaged in cleaning out wells in an effort to keep up production. The only completion for the week from this district was on the R. M. Waggoner land, where W. G. Sletley No. 2 was completed as a 40-barrel producer from the 1600-foot sand. In the townsite of Burk Burnett, W. M. Priddy completed his No. 2 Van Cleave and it is making around 20 barrels at 1500 feet.

The Magnolia Petroleum company has made a location for No. 17 on the Fowler lease and is building a derrick. The same company has also made a location on the Holtsen land and has material in the ground.

During the week in the old Texhoma field the Camp Oil and Gas company made the fourth location on the Dodson land. On the same tract the Wirt Franklin Oil company tested out a sand at 1010 feet that showed water and passed it up and is setting the eight-inch at 1220 feet on top of a gas sand.

On the Katy right of way the Wee-owna Oil company No. 11 is drilling at 1403 feet. The Burk-Tex company after testing out a sand at 1140 in No. 1 B. F. Nix that showed very little oil, drilled deeper to 1500 feet and is shut down for orders. On the Reaford field the Jones Light and Gas company is shut down at 1610 feet for water; Lanning-Moninger No. 2 Dodson is down 1100 feet. No. 2 Cropper of the same company is feeling along near the sand at 1320 feet. Magnolia Petroleum company No. 17 Embury is bailing out the hole around 1725 feet. The Stump Oil and Gas company tested out a sand encounter at 1407 to 1409 that showed traces of oil and gas, set the casing and drilled deeper and is down at 1720 feet in their No. 3 W. T. Cropper.

In Iowa Park field, South of Iowa Park in the shallow field Dr. Wallace in his No. 1 Logan tested a sand at 1440 that showed water, was started to pull the casing and will drill deeper. In his No. 2 on the Ferguson farm, after encountering the oil sand at 1448 feet, water broke in and he is now setting the six and five-eighths with a packer to try to shut it off. The Universal Oil company on the G. W. Lewis tract had the tubing parted in their No. 1 well. On the Logan tract the E. S. Nixon Oil company has completed No. 2 well and it is making 65 barrels from the 1400-foot sand. Two locations have been made in the K. A. field this week by the Gulf Production company on their Potter-Lewis lease for their No. 5 and No. 6. On the Parker farm the Goodale Oil company No. 1 Parker is on the sand at 2080 and is rigging up to start bailing.

Clay county is furnishing very little drilling at present on account of water shortage. The Junior Oil company is on a gas sand at 1100 feet in their No. 1 Glasgow. The Champion Oil company No. 1 Hatfield is drilling around 1700 feet. The Lone Star Gas company is on top of a gas sand at 1630 feet in their No. 15 Sibley.

At Electra. Drilling operations in the Electra field have been greatly hampered, as in the other pools, by the scarcity of water. Many tanks are dry and several of the larger reservoirs are rapidly diminishing, and this situation has half of the tests shut down. On the Wagoner ranch, Bridwell-Heidrick No. 5 has overcome their casing troubles and are drilling around 1500 feet. Churchill-Trust Co. No. 2 Burnett et al. is down around 1400, after testing out a sand that showed water. The Griswold Oil company No. 2 on the Burnett has pulled the casing and abandoned as dry at 1100 feet. Fisher and associates had a good sand at 1425 feet, set the casing, lost the seat and are now waiting to reseat. The Gladious Oil company has spudded in their No. 25 Burnett and is drilling at 400 feet. Nelson-Donoho No. 2 Waggoner has reseat their six and five-eighths on the sand at 1485 and cemented.

Kemp-Culbertson No. 1 Waggoner is testing out a sand encountered at 1475 to 1480 that showed oil and gas. The Planet Petroleum company No. 21 Burnett is drilling on top of the sand again. Dixon Oil company after having tests on the Collett tract the Gulf Production company has made a location for No. 6 test.

After passing up a sand that showed oil and gas around 3400 feet the Nebraska Oil company No. 1 Franke set casing and is drilling around 3415 feet. Around 1400 feet. Further south on the Burnett has pulled the casing and abandoned as dry at 1100 feet. Fisher and associates had a good sand at 1425 feet, set the casing, lost the seat and are now waiting to reseat. The Gladious Oil company has spudded in their No. 25 Burnett and is drilling at 400 feet. Nelson-Donoho No. 2 Waggoner has reseat their six and five-eighths on the sand at 1485 and cemented.

Lively In Young. In Young county, operations have picked up rapidly especially in the Bunker district. Where thirty days ago the field consisted of only seven tests today it presents a scene of activity only equaled by the new Mexia field and with the pipe-lines able to handle all the crude things look bright for an uninterrupted drilling campaign in this district. Over fifteen locations have been made and derricks are going up on all sides. In a race 200 feet since the Burk Burnett strike. On the Ross-Tyrrel No. 1, Ross is drilling around 800 feet. Ross-Tyrrel No. 1 Grimshaw, has built the derrick and is installing machinery. On the Askew tract, Ross-Tyrrel is drilling around 240 feet. Heyder and Spoons have made their No. 2 location and have a derrick up on the Driver farm. No. 3 Driver is a location with material on the ground for derrick.

North of the city of Graham on the Jeffreys farm, Mercier-Casey No. 1 had a good show around 2900 feet, but shut down with casing trouble. The Paragon Oil company No. 1 on the Vick farm, has had some water trouble and is trying to shut it off at a depth of 2100 feet. The Gulf Production company has material on their location for Grimshaw No. 1, and have started to erect a derrick. No. 1 Driver of the Sun company has lumber on the location. Applegate and associates have spudded in on their No. 1 Whittenburg, and are down 200 feet. On account of water shortage the test of the Barnes Production company has been forced to shut down at 2,000 feet. In the South Bend district on the Emma West farm, the Del-Tex Oil company is cleaning out after a shot in a sand at 2,544 that made several small flows and is shut down for orders. Half a mile northeast of the Del-Tex test the King-Oil company had a small showing of oil and gas at 1,840 feet.

Shoot Well Near Amarillo. It has been reported that considerable oil was bailed from the White-Parks test on the Masterson ranch north of Amarillo last week. The sand was encountered at 1,200 feet, and

Shoot Well Near Amarillo. It has been reported that considerable oil was bailed from the White-Parks test on the Masterson ranch north of Amarillo last week. The sand was encountered at 1,200 feet, and showed traces of oil and gas. They decided to shoot it with a charge of nitro-glycerine with the result shown above. The hole then began to cave and the company is now cleaning out preparing to give it a thorough testing out.

Stephens County. The Texas company last week had two completions in the Stephens county district. Early in the week the No. 25 well on the J. W. Miss May Martin Tells How Cuticura Healed Eczema. "Eczema broke out in pimples on my face, arms and neck. The pimples were so thick that I could not put the point of a pin down without touching them, and itched and burned so that I lost about three hours' sleep each night. "I tried different remedies which failed to cure it. I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they afforded relief in a few days. I purchased more, and after using Cuticura Soap and Ointment for about four weeks I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss May Martin, Williamsburg, West Virginia.

For your special type of skin— there is a special treatment

Skins differ widely—are you using the right treatment for your type of skin?

IF your skin is a constant problem to you—if you cannot keep it smooth and flawless—then you may be sure it is because you are not using the right treatment for your special type of skin. Skins differ widely—and each different type of skin needs a different kind of care. The girl whose complexion is of an oily type should use a special form of cleansing to counteract its tendency to become disagreeably shiny. The girl with a pale, sallow skin needs a treatment that will rouse and stimulate the delicate pores and blood vessels. No matter what your type of skin happens to be—you can overcome its defects! By the right treatment, followed persistently, you can give it the natural charm, the fresh loveliness and color that come from a healthy, well-cared-for condition of the skin itself.

For the girl with an oily skin. If you are continually embarrassed by that most common of troubles—an oily skin and shiny nose—begin tonight to use this simple treatment: First cleanse your face thoroughly by washing it in your usual way with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water. Wipe off the surplus moisture, but leave the skin slightly damp. Now with warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for a few minutes with a piece of ice. This treatment will help to make your skin clearer and fresher the first time you use it. Make it a nightly habit, and before long you will see a marked improvement—a promise that lovelier complexion which the steady use of Woodbury's brings.

Study the special needs of your skin—find out just what its weaknesses are, and begin, now, to use the treatment that will overcome them. Three of the famous Woodbury treatments for improving the skin are republished on this page. You will find additional treatments for each different type of skin in the booklet of treatments, "A Skin You Love to Touch," which is wrapped around every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap. Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter, and find in the booklet the treatment recommended for your skin. Begin using it tonight. A 25-cent cake will last for a month or six weeks of any treatment, and for general cleansing use for that time. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York and Perth, Ontario.

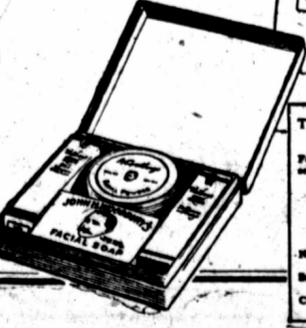

For the girl who is troubled with blackheads. APPLY hot cloths to the face until the skin is reddened. Now with a rough washcloth, work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with clear, hot water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice. Dry carefully. To remove blackheads already formed, substitute a fresh brush for the washcloth in the treatment above. Then protect the fingers with a handkerchief and press out the blackheads.

For the girl who is pale and sallow. If your skin is pale and colorless, use this new steam treatment for it: One night a week fill your bowl full of hot water—almost boiling hot. Bend over the top of the bowl and cover your head and the bowl with a heavy bath towel so that no steam can escape. Steam your face for thirty seconds. Now lay a hot cloth with Woodbury's Facial Soap. With this wash your face thoroughly, rubbing the lather well into your skin with an upward and outward motion. Rinse first with warm water, then with cold. Finish by rubbing it for thirty seconds with a piece of ice. Dry carefully. The very first time you use this Woodbury steam treatment, your skin will begin to show more color. The other six nights of the week, cleanse your skin thoroughly in the usual way with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water.

Use daily—to keep your skin in good condition. If used regularly, Woodbury's Facial Soap has a markedly beneficial effect on the skin as an organism. It stimulates the pores and blood vessels, and gives the skin tissues firmness and tone. The power of Woodbury's Facial Soap to benefit and improve the complexion is due to the fact that it is based on a special formula, the result of years of scientific study of the skin and its needs. Only the purest and finest ingredients enter into this formula. In consequence Woodbury's Facial Soap can be used with extremely sensitive and tender skins which often react unfavorably to other toilet soaps. Use Woodbury's daily in your toilet and see how instantly your skin will begin to respond to its tonic qualities. You will find Woodbury's one of the most economical soaps you have ever used. A 25-cent cake lasts for a month or six weeks—almost twice as long as an ordinary toilet soap of the same apparent size. THE ANDREW JERGENS CO. Spring Grove Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio. For the enclosed 25 cents please send me your miniature set of the Woodbury skin preparations containing: The treatment booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch." A trial size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap. A sample tube of the new Woodbury's Facial Cream. Samples of Woodbury's Cold Cream and Facial Powder. Name: Street: City: State:

SHOWING AT WICHITA FALLS' PLAY HOUSES THIS WEEK

EVEN IF WE CAN'T HAVE BIG TIME VAUDEVILLE WE CAN HAVE OTHER SHOWS. WICHITA WILL OPEN SOON

Since announcements were made several weeks ago that Wichita Falls would not be included on a vaudeville circuit this winter many theatrical fans have wondered what they were going to do for entertainment during the long evenings. True enough, the movies will be here, but silverbacked drama alone are not usually sufficient to satisfy a dyed-in-the-wool amusement bug.

But now, just as a lot of the neglected citizenry were beginning to tear their hair and bemoan a cruel fate, word comes out from Lyle Ford and Rodgers headquarters that maybe Wichita Falls wouldn't be left out in the cold after all. In fact, pretty positive proof has been given that there will be enough real entertainment to provide for the most rabid fan or fanette in the city.

The gist of the statements made by H. R. Ford, dean of the city's theatrical map, is that one of the four leading stock companies in America have been booked to appear at the Wichita theatre for a period of eight weeks.

Wichita Falls has had stock shows thrust upon it before, and almost invariably the operation has proved exceedingly painful. Unfortunately, the available companies were only the best simply because the larger amusement centers had secured all the real talent. Hence, we got what was left. But such is not the case now.

There are four stock organizations in America today which are listed as "Class A," the classification being made on the basis of past achievements, salary paid the performers, size of the company, general excellence of the stage productions, type of plays given and the length of runs in the home cities. These four are Alcazar players of San Francisco, the Moscow players of Los Angeles, the Castle Square troupe of Boston and the Gene Lewis-Olga Worth players of Dallas.

It is the latter company that will appear in Wichita Falls.

Included in their repertoire have all been crew and scenic artist are included in the personnel of the party while the plays included in their repertoire have all been taken from the latest New York stage hits. "Scandal," "Civilian Clothes," "Turn to the Right," "Polly With a Past," "The Mischief Lady" and "Voice in the Park" will all be presented here.

So with the Wichita open and with the Palace offering high class movie productions it seems that the Wichita Falls won't be such a desolate place after all.

"MAN-WOMAN-MARRIAGE" HAS FEATURE ROLE AT THE STRAND LAST HALF WEEK

Another picture for which is claimed the distinction of being one of the most massive productions ever released for the movie screen is to play the feature part at the Strand this week. Dorothy Phillips in the big Allan Holburn drama "Man, Woman, Marriage," the picture in question, and advance reports from eastern theatrical centers declare that it is entitled to first rank as a social exposé.

The film was originally 10,000 feet in length, but this has been combed and cut until the final product, nine reels, is less than 2 per cent of the total length. No expense was spared in securing scenery in keeping with the other high qualities of the story and the result has been a picture of remarkable beauty.

Dorothy Phillips is one of the few great emotional actresses remaining on the screen, and in the story of "Man, Woman, Marriage" she gives ample opportunity to display all her ability.

The story is another of the sex appealing type, which has resulted in some risqué scenes having been injected into the production, but on the whole the subject is treated in a careful and consistently moderate manner.

Monday and Tuesday bring a Sidney A. Franklin independent production, "Not Guilty," in which an all-star cast is featured. Sylvia Bremer, Richard Dix, Molly Haines and Fannie Hurst and Lloyd Whitlock are cast in the more important roles.

This production is released by Associated First National Pictures company.

ALICE LAKE AND FANNIE WARD STAR IN FILMS AT EMPRESS THIS WEEK

In "Over the Wire," a Metro feature which comes to the Empress the first two days of this week, Alice Lake scores another decided success on a role somewhat different from any she has yet attempted.

The petite star has heretofore steered clear of anything of the emotional drama, but in her forthcoming production she appears in a role that, while not entirely a society film, has some such elements present.

The picture is not at all displeasing, however, the story having an absorbing interest and the acting being very well done.

Wednesday and Thursday brings an old favorite who has not been seen on local screens for a long time, Fannie Hurst in "The Play and the Paid."

The picture is based on the French drama, "La Rafale," by Henri Bernstein, and is released by the Joan Film sales company.

Dustin Farnum in "The Primal Law," one of his best western ranch productions, ends the week on Friday and Saturday.

The City National Bank of Commerce is one of the largest banks in West Texas, but its greatest asset does not show in its published statement. That is the good will of its customers, built up through more than 36 years of satisfactory service to the community.

WALLY AND CLARA SHARE HONORS ON MOVIE BILL AT MAJESTIC THEATER

"The Hell Diggers" is the illuminating title bestowed on the latest Wallace Reid picture which is to be the feature attraction at the Olympic Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. The picture is a story of the California gold fields, of the men who dig for thousands and thousands of acres in search of the precious metal and of how one of these men, a big engineer, devised machines which salvage much of the land rendered useless by the mechanical monsters.

"The Hell Diggers" is the name given the gold seekers by the farmers of the California valleys.

Reid has the role of superintendent of a soulless corporation, which is waging a relentless fight against the farmers. As director of their operations he is forced to devastate vast reaches of fertile fields.

Finally he is prevailed upon by a girl to build a machine which will repair the damage, makes the main theme of the story.

Plenty of humor, several good two-act scenes and an absorbing romance are wound throughout the length of the film. Lois Wilson plays opposite the star, other members of the cast being Lucian Littlefield, Clarence Goldhart and Bud Post.

The first half of the week brings Clara Kimball Young in "Charge It," another of her more or less well known society dramas. The picture deals with the life of a wealthy society woman who eventually marries the struggling butcher's son and lives happily ever after. Some good acting, better direction and best scenery are the most notable features of an otherwise mediocre play.

CAREY HAS LAZY ROLL IN FIRST OF MANY GOOD GEM ATTRACTIONS THIS WEEK

"If Only Jim," the story of a lazy miner in a western camp and one of the best pictures which Harry Carey ever produced, starts the week's movie bill at the Gem theater.

The film shows the western star in a role far different from the usual rapid-fire acting of Carey pictures, and in the capacity of a modern Rip Van Winkle he is almost as pleasing as in the role of a fighting "bad man." His laziness was a by-word in the camp.

"That black spot out there in the distance," Carey said in reply to a stranger's question, "that's either a stump or Jim Golden (Carey). If it moves it's a stump, Jim's always still."

But at the last Carey moves, and moves with plenty of speed. When his possession of a rich mining claim is threatened and danger comes to a certain young lady he surprises even himself.

Tuesday brings the James Oliver Curwood story, "Nomads of the North," the Gem, and Wednesday finds William Russell in "The Rough Shod Fighters" as the feature attractions.

The lamp lighters, starring Eileen Percy, Jessie Barricade in "The Broken Gate," and a Willard Mack production, "The Valley of Doubt," Friday and Saturday.

WM. S. HART IN "THE WHISTLE" COMING BACK TO MAJESTIC THEATER

Bill Hart in "The Whistle" heads the Majestic theater's batting order this week, when it comes on Monday for a one-day stand. Eva Novak in "The Smart Set" follows on Tuesday and the next two days brings Buck Jones in "The Lone Star Ranger."

"The Whistle" has generally been conceded to be the best film production Hart has made in a long time, much of this favor being due to the fact that he appeared in a role somewhat different from that of a western cowboy. Industrial warfare instead of six shooter hostilities furnish the action for this picture, and the result is not at all displeasing.

The Novak film is a comparatively new release of which little is known. Buck Jones has always drawn well here and "The Lone Star Ranger" will probably prove no exception to this rule. A lot of rapid fire action is penned up in the reels and a well supported cast has been selected to support the star.

You Want to Know What Is to Play In Theatres This Winter! This Tells

By JAMES W. DEAN
NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—It looks like a hard winter for the chorus girl.

In the first place, there are fewer jobs for chorus girls. Secondly, they will wear less clothes—if that is possible.

"They wear less clothes because the fewer they wear, the less they'll cost," Morris Cost told me.

Morris ought to know. His four spectacles, "Mecca," "Aphrodite," "Chu Chin Chow" and "Alma" give employment to several hundred chorus girls.

What Morris meant was that producers this season will economize to the last penny. The audience is the only thing that's looking up in the show business this year.

Practising Peasery.
In the last fortnight I have seen seven new Broadway shows. Six of them evinced penny on the part of the producer. In one there was no change of scenery. In another only one change, and the settings reeked of the warehouse.

These productions also evidenced a tendency to fill minor roles with low-waged, mediocre performers.

A canvass of producers indicates there will be fewer musical reviews, fewer spectacles and more plays with small casts this season. "This goes for road shows, too; they'll be forced to economize by high railroad rates and lowered admission prices.

The satirical element is predominant in the comedies. In previous seasons the satire has met with little success outside New York.

The public has tired of the play with rickety plot. A. H. Woods, who made the bedroom an intimate scandal to countless innocents, has only one bedroom farce this season. It is "Getting Gerie's Car," and is as coarse as its title suggests.

Wm. A. Brady was the first producer to sense the changed attitude of the public. He staged "The Tease." Critics acclaimed it a success. At the end of a week Brady withdrew it.

I asked Brady why he withdrew it. "Despite favorable reviews, I foresee that the public did not want that kind of a play," he answered.

Allice Brady, his daughter, tried out "Loving" at Atlantic City. In it she was a lost soul drifting about the Yellow Sea with another lost soul. It has been shelved and she will tour in "Forever."

Chief among the satires is "The Crooks."

After a sweet romance in which she made her greatest personal triumph. "The American comedy which contains no unclean line or suggestion is the type of play the American people want and want so strongly they will demand them," says John L. Golden.

Such plays have made Golden a rich man. Among them are "Lightnin'," "Turn to the Right," "Three Wise Fool" and "Dear Me."

Frank Bacon has gone to Chicago to present "Lightnin'," after setting a record of 121 performances of it on Broadway. He expects to spend the rest of his life playing that role in four cities.

New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston. Companies with other actors in the star role will tour other cities. Milton Nobles will play it in London.

Chief among the satires is "The Crooks."

ENFORCEMENT OF NEW TRAFFIC LAWS TO BE VERY RIGID

STARTS NEXT SATURDAY AND POLICE ARE TRYING TO GIVE AUTOISTS AMPLE NOTICE

ORDINANCE PROVIDES FINES FROM $10 UP TO $100

New Regulations Deal With Lights, Parking, Keeping To Right, and Other Points

- All automobiles must be provided with two front headlights and one red taillight, all of which shall be kept burning at night.
 - All automobiles shall be provided with dimmers for the headlights, these to be used while driving in the city at night.
 - All automobiles standing on public streets in the residential district of the city shall keep the dimmed headlights and the taillight burning after dark.
 - All automobiles shall be ranked, not parked, in the residential section. They shall also be ranked on Lamar street from Tenth to Seventeenth street and on Seventh, Eighth, Ninth and Tenth streets from the railroad tracks to Travis streets.
 - All automobiles must drive on the right hand side of the street, as near the curb as convenient. This applies to Ninth and such other streets as are laid out in boulevard style. Cars traveling west on Ninth shall not drive on the parking to the left of the car tracks. The reverse is true for cars running east. Auto owners living in the middle of a Ninth street block shall approach their homes on the right hand side of the street and, if need be, drive to the nearest street intersection and double back to reach their driveways.
 - No automobile shall turn around in the middle of a block but shall drive to the nearest intersection and turn there.
 - An automobile shall not attempt to pass a street car while the latter is loading or discharging passengers, nor shall an automobile attempt to pass another car in the intersection.
 - No private car shall be ranked within one block of a fire nor shall it be driven in such manner as to interfere in any way with the work of the fire department.
 - Cars may stand for ten minutes behind other cars properly ranked on Seventh, Eighth, Ninth and Tenth streets, while shopping or other business is being attended to, provided some one capable of driving the car is left in the machine. Double decking under other circumstances will not be permitted.
 - All automobiles on Eighth, Ninth and Tenth streets west of Lamar have the right of way over automobiles on cross streets.
 - All automobiles shall be provided with mufflers and at no time while driving in the city limits shall these be opened.
 - Fines of not less than $10 nor more than $100 shall be assessed for any violation of these rules.
- (Signed) J. B. Fitts, Police and Fire Commissioner.
- The table of "thou shalt nots" printed above was given out by Chief of Police R. W. Morgan Saturday morning with the request that it be prominently displayed at various times between now and the first of next month. The new laws, which were passed by the city council at a recent meeting, are to become effective October 1.
- "We are going to advertise the new rules thoroughly so that no automobile owner can plead ignorance of them. Then, after the first, it's going to go hard with any lawbreakers we get our hands on."
- Chief Morgan and Commissioner Fitts concurred in voicing the above statement.
- "We've got our bikes running like the Shasta limited and we haven't any friends in town," Motorcycle Officer Eyerley horned in.

"Guess maybe I'd better get a new blotter ready. Looks like we'd need it after the first," came from John Thomason, desk sergeant. And then the reporter and a speeder who had just paid a fine turned and fled.

The police authorities, though, are determined to break up the practice of many local motorists of making the public streets race tracks and exhibition grounds. The new laws were drawn up by Mr. Fitts and submitted to the city council for the express purpose of eliminating the admittedly bad conditions prevailing here. Instead of starting in at once to arrest offenders, and then having to look down when the defendants showed that no warnings had been given of the new provisions the police have waited, have advertised the new laws and are giving the public plenty of time to become familiar with how it shall disport itself on the streets.

"They won't have any recourse, excuses or alibis when we do come down on them," Chief Morgan declared, "and believe me, we're coming down hard."

Several of the orders listed have nominally been in effect before, but the police have frankly admitted that automobile traffic has not been watched as closely as it should have been. But whatever sins may have been charged to the department will be atoned for next Saturday.

KIWANIS WILL HOLD OPEN MEETING FOR ORATORS' BENEFIT

In response to a long felt demand for an open meeting at which members may deliver themselves of any arguments, useful or otherwise, this week's program of the Kiwanis club has been arranged to permit such a procedure. No special speaker has been provided but the meeting will be open to all those who wish to try out their oratorical powers.

Baldy Caldwell will serve as Lord High Everything and will run affairs to suit himself. The attendance prize comes from E. B. Greaver and Red Thomas will provide the silent boost. Entertainment of a "different sort" will be offered by C. H. Angle, an entertainer of wide experience. He will be accompanied by Miss Leona Lottmer.

Eyes Sore?

If your eyes or lids are sore; if they itch, burn or feel dry; if your vision is blurred, your eyesight dim; if you are obliged to wear glasses, go to your druggist and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Dissolve one in a fourth of a glass of water and bathe the eyes from two to four times a day. Sound, comfortable eyes and improved eyesight will make the world look brighter.

Notes: Doctors say Bon-Opto strengthens eyesight 20% in a week's time in many instances.

Never say "Aspirin" without saying "Bayer"

DUROC-JERSEY HOG RANCH NEAR SEYMOUR EXAMPLE OF THRIFT

Staff Special to The Times. SEYMOUR, TEX., Sept. 24.—Through the kindness of Roy Whiteside, one of the progressive coal and feed dealers of Seymour, The Times representative had the pleasure of visiting the A. Shumate Duroc-Jersey hog ranch near Leveview, about eight miles west of Seymour, Thursday afternoon. Mr. Shumate was away from home at the time, but his son carried us through the hog pastures and lots and showed us the Durocs, the kind that are entitled to wear blue ribbons and the kind that have won such in state-wide competition. Mr. Shumate had some splendid individuals from among these wonderful porkers on exhibition in the second annual Baylor county fair and won one first and two second prizes on the exhibit.

He has about 100 head of hogs on his ranch and is preparing to make a shipment of fat hogs to the Fort Worth market in the next few days. He has been in the hog business for five years and has made a success. He and R. O. Harvey of Wichita Falls are partners. Mr. Harvey owns the farm on which the ranch is operated and Mr. Shumate looks after the breeding and caring for the stock.

The feed consumed by the hogs is grown on the farm and only in a few instances have they had to purchase feed. During the extreme dry years of 1917-1918 they bought feed, but only enough to tide them over.

In going to and from the ranch, Mr. Whiteside drove by different routes through some of the best farm lands in west Texas. He also stated that this was the oldest settled farming section around Seymour. His father came to that section in 1890 and improved a farm, on which is growing excellent crops of maize and cotton.

THREE FEDERAL PRISONERS TRANSFERRED TO FORT WORTH

Three federal prisoners were transferred to Fort Worth Saturday afternoon by United States Deputy Marshal Jim Allen. The men who have been in the county jail here for several weeks and who were accompanied to Fort Worth were L. S. Roberts, charged with violation of the Mann act; Ralph Carter, charged with transporting a stolen car, and George Withers, charged with violation of the national prohibition act.

SEVERAL FUNDS ARE NEARLY EXHAUSTED

County Will Find Itself Broke in Several Departments Before More Comes In

Before the county treasury can be replenished with money derived from the payment of this year's taxes, several of the funds will be exhausted, was the statement made by County Treasurer Tom McHam, Saturday. In view of the financial situation throughout the country it is the general belief among the county officials that very little tax money will be received before January of next year. This condition will have its reaction on the various funds.

Beggars Learn to Pass This City By, Rule Is Enforced

Beggars and mendicants are slowly but surely learning that Wichita Falls is no place for them to hang out, according to Mrs. C. E. Ousley of the Welfare Council; not that "pickings" aren't better here than almost anywhere, but the welcome sign on the municipal doormat has been rubbed out.

The average person, full of compassion and sympathy for an unfortunate fellow-being, does not realize what a toll the mendicants lev. Recently a beggar stationed himself at a favorable point down town and operated there for about half a day before Mrs. Ousley required him to move on. He told her that during that morning he received about six dollars. Assuming that he would have done equally well during the afternoon, his income for the day would have been $12, and some people are struggling by on less than that amount per day.

Recently three blind musicians sought a permit. The spokesman, who could see a little, was told that his kind weren't wanted here. "All right," he replied petulantly, "if they don't want us, we just won't stay here, that's all."

He spoke as if Wichita Falls' ics would be far greater than his. During the "boom" this city was a veritable beggars' heaven. If figures were available on the total obtained by mendicants, many of whom were anything but deserving, it would reach an astonishing total.

BODIES OF SEYMOUR SOLDIERS TO ARRIVE ON SUNDAY MORNING

SEYMOUR, TEXAS, Sept. 24.—The bodies of Noel Graham and Reed Morris will arrive here Sunday morning from overseas. Funeral services will be conducted Tuesday afternoon by the American legion, interment in Seymour cemetery.

Noel Graham was the son of R. L. Graham of this city. He enlisted in the 144th Infantry of the 36th division, was trained at Camp Bowie and sailed to France. He was killed in action at the battle of Meuse Argonne and died on the field October 10, 1918.

Reed Morris was the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Morris of Seymour. He enlisted in the 141st Infantry of the 36th division and was also trained at Camp Bowie and sailed to France with the division. He was wounded October 9 on Meuse Argonne battlefield on the Champagne sector, from which he died later in a hospital.

A small but complete set of instruments, wires and switchboard, with a regular "hello" girl in charge, will be installed in the Empress lobby and the afflicted public may make complete inspection of the system.

The demonstration is being carried on in conjunction with the showing of Allice Lake picture "Over the Wire," which appears at the Empress Monday and Tuesday.

SUCCESS OF THE CHILDRESS FAIR GUARANTEES IMPROVED GROUNDS AND LARGER EXHIBIT NEXT YEAR

Staff Special to The Times.

CHILDRESS, TEXAS, Sept. 24.—Receipts from all sources this year at the Childress state fair were extremely gratifying and insured that next year the prizes in all departments can be made larger and also that the extension work planned for by the fair association can be started. In the program is included the erection of a larger grandstand and additions to all the exhibition buildings.

Saturday's crowd was the largest of the four days and the rodeo events were the most interesting. The carnival attractions opened early in the morning and continued until near the midnight hour.

Saturday afternoon a large number of the livestock on exhibition were moved away to Oklahoma City. Alexander, Michie and Jones sent 36 head, including 17 first prize winners, eight seconds and two thirds. Several of the other livestock exhibitors also sent some of their animals to the same point.

Results and Awards Friday.

The third event was a quarter mile race for a purse of $100. Jodie Clegg, ridden by Jockey Norton, barely missed out a victory over Lady, ridden by Allen. The two horses crossed the wire with the winner not more than six inches in the lead. Speckles, ridden by Boots, was a close third. Lady Bass also ran. They were at the post three minutes and got away to a good start.

Knockout Lewis of Wellington maintained his fearlessness of his name by knocking out Big Boy Bentley in the first round of a scheduled four round bout. The knockout came after one minute and 45 seconds with a hard punch to the body.

The Childress county saddle horse quarter mile dash was won by Smokey, ridden by D. Cockey in 26 seconds. Little Bear, ridden by Williams, was second and crossed the wire a half length behind Smokey.

Bob Lemons, Bailey Coker and New Lemons were the three contestants in the mile and a half relay race in which three mounts were used by each rider. The old mount had to be un saddled and unbridled and the new mount saddled and bridled at the conclusion of a half mile. The contest was won by the order above named. The winner's time was four minutes and 35 seconds.

Fred Alvord won the steer bull-dogging contest, throwing his steer in one minute and 32 seconds. Canada Jack, one of the other contestants, entered the affair with two broken ribs and a broken collar bone. He missed his steer on the first trial but on the second attempt he threw the animal in 14 seconds. He took the second trial with the understanding that regardless of the time that he made that he was to get second money. Checkers Barward landed safely on his steer by the animal threw him fully 20 feet. He was rushed to the hospital where it was found he was suffering with a badly strained ankle and a torn ligament.

Red Randolph of Amarillo, the clown for the occasion, then rode a steer backwards. He drew the biggest hand of the day.

In the 60 yard race and return, Tom Jeffries took first money coming the circuit in 12 seconds. The other entries were Hill Burrows, G. Eubanks and Texas Jack.

Henry Brady, D. Turner and S. Heiser finished in the order named in a Burlington and a half pony race. They won in a field of five entries. The time was 14 seconds.

The second race of the afternoon in which it was hard to tell except from the judge's stand who had won, was the four and a half furlong race in which Gus Enlow, ridden by Turner, led owned by A. D. Ballew, took first money by overtaking Ned, ridden by Norton and owned by L. H. Edwards on the home stretch, crossing the wire a half a nose to the good. Jodie, ridden by Allen, and owned by Hill Burrow was third.

Jack Casey and Earl Bailey, finished in the order named in a pony race of an eighth of a mile. The lead saw-sawed on the stretch. They were the only two entries.

In the steer roping contest in which the contestants were aided by a second roper was won by Lyde Savage in two seconds. Texas Jack was second in 40 seconds and the Rude in one minute and one second. The steer had to be roped and then heeled by the helper and then tied.

Childress county boys under 17 years of age afforded much pleasure to the crowd in riding bucking bronchos. The judges awarded first place to Neely Crawford and second to Ernest Bailey.

Slim Adams was first in the goat roping contest by doing the stunt in 21 seconds. Clarence Russell second in 23 seconds and O. B. Jackson third in 25 seconds.

Maude Tye, the only woman rider who entered any of the events, was unable to perform as she had no contestants. However she rode one of the wildest bronchos in the stables and the crowd donated $17.

The afternoon events closed with a match race between two race horse owners. A side bet of $50 prompted the race.

C. Mitchell and John Hancock were the judges in the race events, while George Wilkes, an old time member of the Diamond Fall outfit and Major Doane, a former member of Dan Waggoner's 3 D outfit, officiated in the rodeo events.

Louis G. Raney, superintendent of the agricultural department stated that the crops in Childress county this year would all be above the average. The cotton yield on the average he believed would be a third of a bale to the acre, while the wheat crop ranged from 10 to 25 bushels to the acre.

The feed crop for the year will be a bumper, he stated. He contended that the farmers of the county had all arrived at the decision of driving their crops to market rather than holding it.

The live stock raising business is on the boom in the county.

Louis G. Raney, breeder of registered Hereford cattle, residing near Kirkland in Childress county, took the grand champion Hereford cow prize home with them in 5 months old calf.

The animal was a perfect picture and besides winning the grand champion cow ribbon, took two first ribbons and a grand champion ribbon in the junior calf division.

The heifer is Belle Picture VI, sired by Perfect Picture by Beau Grover by Leau President. Carter and Eiter have a pure bred cattle farm consisting of 250 breed cows. They are about one of the many cattle breeders that Childress county boasts of and can well be boastful and proud of.

LOCAL VETERAN TO OPPOSE BONUS AT EL PASO CONVENTION

EX-COMMANDER HATCHITT OF PAT CARRIGAN POST PLANS VIGOROUS RESOLUTION

MOVEMENT IS EXPECTED TO PRECIPITATE FIGHT

Several Local Legionnaires At Attend State Meeting Opening At El Paso Tomorrow

An effort to break the American Legion away from the bonus idea, as its main end and aim, will be made at the state convention of the legion at El Paso this week by H. Hatchitt, former commander of Pat Carrigan post.

Mr. Hatchitt and J. G. L. Howard left Saturday afternoon to attend the convention; D. M. Perkins was planning to leave Sunday.

In line with ideas which he has often voiced at meetings of the local post, Mr. Hatchitt will offer an anti-bonus resolution which is expected to precipitate a vigorous contest in the convention. He contends that the legion's insistence on the bonus is militating against proper care and treatment for disabled ex-soldiers.

Mr. Hatchitt is prepared to carry the fight to the national convention of the legion at Kansas City this fall. His resolution follows:

"Whereas the continued agitation for a universal bonus to all ex-service men of the recent war without regard to merit or necessity is creating a widespread impression that the objects of the American Legion are more selfish than noble; and—

"Whereas the activity employed thus far in seeking gratuities for the able-bodied has diverted much attention from the needs of our sick and maimed and largely accounts for the neglect shown by the government;

"Therefore be it resolved, by the department of Texas in convention at El Paso this 27th day of September, 1921, as follows:

"1. The department of Texas does not regard the service to the country during the recent war by those in uniform as more patriotic or important than any other. We see no distinction between the private citizen who did his bit in a worthy manner and the soldier who came home unharmed in body and health. In our view the present demand on the government for a special bounty based alone on the fact of service in time of war, is unjustified and indefensible and contrary to all the best aims of the American Legion.

"2. We urge the immediate adoption of a policy by all ex-service men's organizations which sets the needs of our sick and maimed above all other projects, and which will discourage in the most positive way the impression that our real purpose is to promote the selfish interests of our class.

"Be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the American Legion weekly and to the Texas legionaire, for publication, and that the same be brought to the attention of our national convention at Kansas City.

Wooded With Gun At Brink of Grave Wants a Divorce

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—Asserting she was wooded with a gun at the brink of a freshly made grave in a cemetery, Silvia Christ, 16-year-old wife of Thomas Christ, has asked annulment of the marriage which took place last July. She went riding with Christ and he forced her into the cemetery where he said: "If you don't marry me, here is your grave."

They were married an hour later, she says.

In our gardens of sleep there remain many an unmarked grave. Now is the time to remember them. A. G. Deason, druggist, 404 Seventh street. Phone 2440, 124-710

LUNCH ROOMS AT 2 SCHOOLS FEED OVER 500 PUPILS DAILY, A REAL MEAL FOR 25 CENTS

A complete meal which includes meat of some kind, pastry, milk and a desert, all home cooked from the best of materials and all for the monstrous sum of 25 cents is the claim made by local public school authorities for their lunch rooms which have but recently been opened in the high school and Austin school buildings.

These lunch rooms form one of the most important of the various school departments, and certainly they are among the most popular. Operated on a basis which allows them to merely break even financially, they afford opportunity for over 500 of the city school pupils to obtain ample food at the noon hour and at a price which would just about suffice as a tip for the waiter at some downtown cafe.

Many of the patrons spend even less than a quarter for their lunches, according to officials of the lunch rooms, while others of course spend more. But the general average stays around the 25-cent mark and this amount has proven entirely sufficient to fill up a normal youngster.

The variety of dishes provided at the high school counter is large enough to care for all the various tastes to be found in the three hundred appetites appeased each day of the school week. Soup of all flavors and color, half a dozen different kinds of sandwiches, potato chips, hot vegetables, sweet milk, ice cream and home-made pie running all the way from apple to sweet potato are already on the regular bill of fare and it is planned now to add salads and perhaps other dishes in the near future.

With such an array as this, served out with no fancy drills, but in liberal portions calculated to give even a football husky no room for complaint, the school pupils are well cared for at the noon hour. Many students bring lunches from home and supplement these at the lunch room with a dish of hot soup, some ice cream or some other confection, and in this case a nickel or dime is enough to provide a good square meal. Plenty of ice water can be had for the asking.

Those in charge of the lunch rooms have stressed cleanliness above all else and it would be hard to find a cleaner or more hygienic kitchen than the ones provided at the schools. The fry tribe is treated with scant courtesy, these unwelcome visitors having had their way barred to the inner precincts of the room by a battery of screen doors and windows. All food is handled with the greatest of care and is closely inspected before being prepared for the use of the students.

Mrs. C. A. Andree, head cook and superintendent, and Mrs. B. Griffin have charge of operations at the high school building.

The lunch rooms are designed and conducted merely for the benefit of the students and teachers of the school.

Paying for the Home "Up to two years ago my money all went to doctors and medicine for my stomach trouble. I was constantly filled with gas and no medicine helped me permanently until I tried a bottle of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy at that time with excellent results. Now I am using my money in paying for a home."

It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Mack Taylor and druggists everywhere. (Adv.)

NEWS FROM ELECTRA

By H. A. STROUD, Special Correspondent. Phone 142.

FOOTBALL TEAM RAPIDLY ROUNDING INTO CONDITION

ELECTRA, TEXAS, Sept. 25.—The football squad is rapidly rounding into form after two weeks' diligent preparatory work and last week witnessed the lining up of the scrubs against the regulars in realistic games. Coach Edens is giving the boys the kind of work that they may expect in actual games and has gone himself with the scrubs against the regulars and demonstrated how it is done for the benefit of the lineemen.

It is an interesting game to watch the scrubs go after the regulars. With Edens in the line scrub backs are able to make substantial gains through the lines and the regulars find themselves up against the real thing. Coach Denmore has been on the job this week, assisting Edens in the preparatory work and both coaches seem to be pleased with the showing that the squad is making.

The first game of the season is next Saturday with Henrietta as opposition. A number of the boys went over to Wichita Falls Saturday to see the Wichita Falls squad in action against Vernon. The locals will go to Wichita Falls the 8th of October for their second game.

LADIES OF ALTAR SOCIETY GIVE A BENEFIT PARTY

The ladies of the Altar society wish to thank all of those who helped to make the benefit party, given at the home of Mrs. J. H. Marriott Tuesday afternoon a great success.

The afternoon was spent in playing games, after which Miss Genevieve Gallagher and Mrs. Sam Dotson rendered several vocal selections, accompanied by Miss Anna Gallagher at the piano. Delicious refreshments consisting of punch and angel food cake were served the following:

EXODUS O OIL MEN TO THE NEW MEXIA FIELDS

ELECTRA, TEXAS, Sept. 24.—The past week has witnessed an exodus of oil men from this city to the Mexia fields, and much interest has been manifested in the central Texas strike. Drilling contractors, who have been idle here since the shut down in the industry, have left for the new field in hopes of securing contracts and starting up their rigs again. Several Electra men already have contracts and are moving their rigs.

E. N. Wilson, who has been head of the production department of the Magnolia Petroleum company here for the last three years, has been transferred to Mexia to handle the production of the company there. Before leaving employees of the company and the citizens of the town purchased a handsome gold watch which they gave him as a reminder of his associations here.

Among others who have visited the Mexia field this week are: G. F. Leavelle, manufacturer of the Burek wrench; R. P. Prince of Prince & Prince, drilling contractors; R. G. Davidson and W. P. Lincoln, of the Lincoln Tank Works; Fred Spurlock, attorney; Hal Hughes of Hughes & Buchanan, drilling contractors; S. B. Marchant, merchant; W. J. Sheldon, head of the Monte Drilling Company; V. Beddo, teaming contractor; V. B. Moore, driller; J. P. Davis, oil oil contractor, and many others.

R. G. Davidson stated that at noon time he counted 22 Electra people in one cafe. Many have returned after looking over the field, but all agree that Mexia is destined to become one of the greatest oil fields in the United States.

MORE THAN 1400 ATTEND THE SCHOOLS AT ELECTRA

ELECTRA, TEXAS, Sept. 24.—The enrollment in Electra public schools is now in excess of 1400 and with the opening of the new kindergarten department next week, it is believed that the enrollment will reach 1500 for the term. A comparison with Burkburnett shows that the local school and the connection of the strip will be made next week, it is understood.

The company is rushing the grading work to the east and have everything in readiness for the completion of that end in record time. The opening of the road to the west will give Electra an opportunity to see actual results from the paved roads and the citizens are eager to get their autos on the new stretch.

REBEKAH DEGREE TEAM VISITS THE VERNON LODGE

ELECTRA, TEXAS, Sept. 24.—The Electra Rebekah degree team went to Vernon Wednesday night in response to an invitation from the members of the lodge in that city and initiated a class of candidates. A most enjoyable time was reported and refreshments were served. Over thirty-five members of the local lodge were in attendance.

ELECTRA SHRINE CLUB HAS REGULAR MONTHLY DANCE

ELECTRA, TEXAS, Sept. 24.—The Electra Shrine club gave their regular monthly dance this week, with over fifty Nobles and their families in attendance. An orchestra from Wichita Falls furnished the music, and the dance was reported to have been the most enjoyable given by the Shriners during the year. Refreshments of sandwiches and punch were served.

FIRE AT ELECTRA THEATER DOES BUT LITTLE DAMAGE

ELECTRA, TEXAS, Sept. 24.—Very little damage was done Tuesday night in the fire at the Crown theater. The blaze was started, it is believed, when some film in the operating room caught fire. The flames were confined to the small operating room and efficient work of the volunteer fire department prevented its spread to other buildings.

ROAD TO BE CONNECTED WITH PAVING NEXT WEEK

ELECTRA, TEXAS, Sept. 24.—The McCulloch Construction company lacks only one block completing the paving west of this city to the county line. The highway proper has already been finished but the road has not been connected to the city paving. Final Burkburnett schools are running neck in neck for attendance, 1921 having been enrolled in that city last week. Vernon has fallen behind both Electra and Burkburnett with an attendance report of less than 1,200 students.

HARROLD PUBLIC SCHOOLS HAVE A LARGE ATTENDANCE

ELECTRA, TEXAS, Sept. 24.—The public schools at Harrold, seven miles west of Electra, opened last week with an attendance of 160 students in the school. This little city is a great believer in education. Last summer bonds were voted for another building, but on account of the bond market could not be sold. The trustees have built a temporary structure to take care of the overflow from the main building and are handling the school satisfactorily. Recently, a two-story building, which is a two-story building, electrically lighted, was put in operation to furnish living quarters for the teachers in the school. The Harrold school is a high school of the first class and probably has the best affiliations of any small school in the country.

CRIPPLED CHILDREN RELIEF MEASURE BY SHRINE PROGRESSING

Plans for the chain of hospitals for the treatment of crippled children are moving forward rapidly, through the agency of the Shriners, according to E. A. Cutts, imperial potentate of that order, who was here last week. The movement has reached the building stage, and work will start shortly on the first of the hospitals, in St. Louis.

Every member of the Shrine is assessed $2 annually for the hospital fund, and this amount, nominal individually but aggregating over a million dollars a year, is being used for construction and maintenance of the hospitals.

There are 400,000 crippled children in the United States, Mr. Cutts said, and while by no means all of them can be cured, a great many can be with proper hospitalization and treatment. It is the purpose of the Shrine to provide treatment for all of these, regardless, of course, of religion or race. The hospital at St. Louis is the first. Others will be established in other parts of the country as funds permit.

With the rapid growth of Masonry and the Shrine, it is estimated that the time is not far distant when from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 annually will be available for this wonderful work. It is probable that one of the hospitals to be built later will be at some Texas point, Mr. Cutts said.

FIRST BAPTIST PRIMARY KIDNERS ENJOY PICNIC

Mrs. L. W. Allen and Mrs. E. U. Morgan of the primary department of the First Baptist church entertained their classes with a picnic party at Bellevue Park Saturday noon, climaxing a contest between the graduating classes of this department. Mrs. W. H. Davis, superintendent, was their guest. After games and the pleasures the park affords, lunch was spread, consisting of sandwiches, fruit, ice cream and cake.

Those enjoying the treat were: Mrs. W. H. Davis, Ruth Morgan, Marelene Perry and high as guests; Mrs. L. W. HUDSON CAR WINNER OF PIKE'S PEAK CLIMB

Nearly 7,000 people saw King Ribley in a Hudson car win the Penrose trophy and a $500 cash prize last week in 19:16.2 in the main event of the Pike's Peak annual hill climb on a twelve and two-fifths mile course of the $250,000 Pike's Peak automobile highway.

The second fastest time was 19:47.8 by Otto Loesch in a Lexington, trophy winner of last year and last week had first place in event number two for 184 to 200 cubic inches piston displacement. Second place in event number two was won by J. C. Williamson in an Allen in 22:18.4. The third best was 19:51.2 by Ralph Mulford's Paige, winning second place in the trophy event.

A new Oakland six four-passenger sport model to sell at $1,265 has been announced by the Oakland Motor Car company. D. H. Rubsam, manager of the Marshall Huff Motor company, Oakland distributors for north Texas, with headquarters at Wichita Falls, has received one shipment of the new models and expects two car loads additional the first of the week. Mr. Rubsam points out the fact that here is a car which meets the long standing demand for a genuine all-around car, a car which can be used for business purposes, yet also possesses true beauty, speed and power. Heretofore cars of the sport type have been available only at high prices which prohibited their use by the average owner. The body color of the new sport model is light maroon with fenders

KNOWLEDGE FOR CAR OWNERS

Interesting and important facts that every motorist should know.

Gasoline or any other oily fluid tends to rot the rubber which is commonly used in top fabrics.

When one cell is dry it will probably cause an open circuit, which in turn will ruin the whole battery.

Sand working in between the brake band and drum will cause a scraping sound in a rear wheel.

To gain maximum power from each explosion with minimum fuel, advance the spark as the speed of the engine is increased.

It is advisable to keep the steering gear and brakes in proper order and they should be examined regularly to insure safety in driving.

The two main causes of uneven wear of rear tires are improper and uneven adjustments of brakes and rear wheels not in alignment.

When the tire goes down from a puncture, or especially through a slow leak, be sure to carefully examine the inside of the casing before inserting the repaired tube. It is quite probable that you will find a bit of glass, a small nail, or some other destructive force that has thrust its way through the tread or sidewall, and should be taken out. Also examine all the cuts in the casing, on the outside, pull out all nails, tacks or glass, and fill the cuts with tire putty. A few minutes time taken in doing this may save considerable trouble on the road.

Retarded spark at high engine speeds causes carbon deposit in the cylinders, consumption of more fuel and in some cases overheating.

In case a rivet in the frame or other location is found broken, a very acceptable repair may be made by running a bolt through the rivet hole and clinching it with a nut on the other end.

Any looseness in the main bearings is a serious matter which, as a rule tends to grow worse and soon causes a serious knock which will eventually show a serious break. This should be remedied immediately by having new bushings which should be scraped to a perfect fit. This involves the use of Prussian blue and a scraper and should be done by a skilled workman.

If the brakes refuse to hold when stopping a car, switch off the ignition, engage lower gears and engage the clutch, using the engine as a brake.

Automobile owners who are having trouble getting expected mileage of their gasoline consumption, may find that by having their carburetors adjusted carefully increases in the fuel economy may be obtained.

The use of benzol in combination with alcohol in manufacturing cheap automobile fuels is becoming more extensive in foreign countries, and with the unlimited spirits available, great progress has been made.

While the usual mediums for preventing rusting of the rings are shellac and graphite, it is possible to use beeswax in this connection with very satisfactory results. The rings should be heated slightly with a blow torch and the beeswax should be rubbed on while they are still warm.

A small four-cylinder engine is more apt to labor and knock on heavy pulls, such as hill climbing, than the large engine of six, eight or more cylinders, because in the four-cylinder engine each piston does not travel the full length of a stroke under power—a distance of about 45 degrees in revolution being covered under momentum of the fly wheel.

THE DOLLAR VALUE OF LONG CAR MILEAGE SHOW BY WORK OF HUDSON CAR

The value of long car mileage can be measured in dollars even when the car owner does not come any where near using it up," says Lloyd Weaver, local Hudson dealer.

"That is so because the years and miles still left in a car absolutely govern its resale price. It is the determining factor in reaching the allowance on a trade in exchange.

"Hudsons maintain a consistently high resale value, simply because it is so well known that the purchaser of a used Hudson gets longer and more dependable mileage. Many Super-Sixes have long passed their one hundred thousandth mile. Many others are in their sixth year of service, but there is no hint of their age in the character of the service they are rendering today and the permanency of Hudson style means that these old cars are still essentially modern in appearance.

"Hudson's recent price reductions bring out even stronger its advantage of low cost among fine quality cars. At its new price of $1895, f. o. b. Detroit it represents incomparably the greatest value in the fine car market."

A senate bill is pending applying a $500 fine and five years in jail for theft of an automobile transported from state to state.

Tested Eighteen Months to Prove Perfection

TWO years ago a puncture-proof cord tire was unheard of. Many experts believed the final development in pneumatic tire-making had been reached with the production of a fabric puncture-proof—the only one, the LEE.

Motorists naturally looked to LEE for a puncture-proof cord.

LEE has succeeded in building such a tire. It has all the economy and resiliency of the best cord tires. It practically eliminates blowouts, tread separation, broken sidewalls and other common tire troubles. And it is positively puncture-proof!

For 18 months this tire was cruelly tested before being offered to the public. It rode as lightly and as smoothly as a cord without the puncture-proof feature. It was as economical on fuel and oil. It was easier on tubes. And—it outlasted cord tires that were not puncture-proof!

Let us demonstrate the economy of the new LEE CORD PUNCTURE-PROOF.

"Smile at Miles"

The Pike's Peak hill-climb contests were divided into three separate events, according to the piston displacement of the entries. Hudson was entered in only one. But its time of 19 min. 16.2 sec. was faster than any other car ever made the course, regardless of class or price, except another Super-Six special, which set the unequalled record of 18 min. 24 sec.

Again Hudson Wins at Pike's Peak

Breaks All Time Records Except Its Own

A Hudson Super-Six special, entered and driven by the Hudson dealer of Oshkosh, Neb., again won the Pike's Peak hill-climb classic up the highest road in the world defeating teams of much costlier cars, driven by such noted professionals as Ralph Mulford and others.

Hudson won the Penrose cup for the fastest time of any car in the three events. Hudson's time was 19 min. 16.2 seconds. This time has never been equalled except by another Hudson Super-Six special, which in 1916 set the record for the course of 18 min. 24 seconds.

That record still stands despite the fact that time after time the costliest special cars have struggled to match it.

Isn't it convincing evidence of Hudson's superiority, that a car entered and driven by a dealer, so decisively defeated the specially built, professionally driven teams that the makers of costlier cars sent out to win?

THE MOTORISTS' PROBLEMS'

By WILLIAM H. STEWART, JR.

Motor Department: In a recent issue you stated that compressed kerosene should be opened so as to look at the flame. When I open mine there is a rush of gas from each one but I can see no flame. Does this show that the engine is not developing full power? Would adjusting the carburetor for a better mixture help matters to any extent?

H. G.
Unless the flame is shaded or seen at night it is not always visible. Sometimes opening throttle and speeding up engine will bring out the flame more strongly. Do not condemn the carburetor adjustment on the evidence of the flame alone. Try out engine by speeding up car rapidly on a level road to see if it picks up speed quickly and evenly without missing.

Motor Department: I put on a Stromberg carburetor and find my car runs fine, but if I speed up and then close the throttle lever as to coast or stop, I find the carburetor spits back and pops. If I do not entirely close throttle lever this does not take place. Is this a sign my mixture is too weak or is the throttle valve intended to be set so as to remain a little when the lever is up or closed? I am trying to run on as weak a mixture as possible.

H. G.
Either your mixture is a trifle too weak on low speed or the idling adjustment screw is not set exactly. Screw it up against the stop until half a turn to see if trouble is removed. If not, replace it as before and screw up on low speed adjustment.

Motor Department: My car is equipped with a vacuum feed by tank under the hood, on the right side from which the gas falls by gravity to the carburetor. I notice I have to pump the motor runs faster when the left side of the car is depressed, and slows up when the right side is depressed. I cannot understand this, as at all times the carburetor is lower than the vacuum feed tank. Can you suggest an adjustment which would overcome this?

H. G.
Depressing the car on one side or the other in some way changes the adjustment of the rod that opens the throttle. Look at the connections from the hand throttle lever to the throttle and see if they are free or if the throttle itself is loose. The vacuum feed has no control over the engine speed.

Motor Department: Would a light car like the roadster type be made safer and less liable to overturn in turning corners if weights were placed on it on each side of the body of the car, say, of 50 or 100 pounds each? Do the so-called shock-absorbers really take up enough shock on Ford roadsters to warrant installing them? A. K.

If the weights were suspended low enough, for instance, from the centers of the axles, they would add stability, but if carried on floor-boards they would help to overturn the car. A good shock-absorber will add much to the easy-riding qualities of your car. If in doubt try different ones, having them installed on approval.

Motor Department: Is it necessary to know all about the parts of an engine in order to get a chauffeur's license. I am a good driver, very careful, and never have had any accidents. Am sure I can do the road test, but I know nothing about the inside of an automobile. Do you think I would stand any possible chance of getting a license? Are there many chauffeurs' licenses issued to women? D. M.

The automobile law requires that questions be answered correctly concerning the engine and parts of the car. This information can be obtained from an instruction book, supplemented by work on the car. This you should have very little trouble obtaining. The number of licensed women chauffeurs is increasing yearly.

Motor Department: Why does an auto have the front wheels pivoted the way they are instead of both turning the way they do on a buggy? L. O.

The front axle is so heavy that it would be difficult to swing it readily. The car goes so fast that if one wheel struck an obstruction the whole axle would be torn loose. When turning a corner the outside wheel would move in toward the center of gravity, giving greater danger of overturning. There are other reasons, but these are sufficient.

Motor Department: Will you kindly inform me whether rollers are beneficial in new tires in regard to punctures, blowouts and wearing ability? OWEN.

Rollers will not prevent blowouts or punctures in a new tire. Where there is much speed work rollers will augment overheating of the tire and also reduce its resiliency. Worn or stone-bruised cases, however, may be benefited by the use of rollers and the service of the tire prolonged.

Motor Department: I have a Ford and find the rear axle to have considerable play when jacked up. When the wheel is off I can move the protruding part of the axle up or down or sideways about an eighth of an inch. Should not the axle fit snug in the roller bearing at this point? Does it indicate that the roller bearings are worn and need replacement? The roller bearings rotate considerably when taken out and shaken. W. B.

It is evident that the roller bearings are badly worn and need replacing. They should be snug fit around the axle. Since you have already taken them out for inspection you will need no instructions for substituting new ones.

Motor Department: Please tell me why my battery heats up and the electrolyte runs so low. I had no such trouble last season. The binding posts of the battery are quite hot and I sometimes have to add water twice a week.

L. K.
If your ammeter registers more than the usual charging rate the generator or voltage regulator will have to be adjusted. But it is probably due to your not using the lights as much as formerly owing to the change in time. If battery terminals heat up during daytime, turn on the lights to consume the extra current.

Motor Department: I have been reading with a great deal of interest in your paper articles regarding automobiles. I am taking the liberty of asking you if you could inform me of the cause of the squeaking noise which I notice in the rear when operating the car. It seems that when the wheels reach a certain position the noise is noticed. Any assistance you can give me in locating this trouble will be very much appreciated. A. N.

A noise such as you suggest usually arises from the demountable rim and the lugs securing it to the wheel. These should be screwed up tight. You may find it necessary to install some new lugs in order to properly wedge the rim.

Helpful Hints
Moving the tires forward as they wear is one of the best ways to prolong their life. If you start with all new tires, run them for about half their guaranteed mileage, and then exchange front and rear. The greatest strain and wear comes on the rear tires, and so these should always be the strongest and newest.

As for the right and left sides, the right wears first, because the road is rougher, the weight of the car is thrown that way by the crown of the road. So move your tires forward as they wear out in the following sequence: The new tire should be placed on the right rear, then moved to the left rear, then to the right front, then to the left front.

A very handy tool is a portable vulcanizer. With it the tube may be patched and expense and time may be saved. It may also be used to close small cuts in the tread of the outer casing, thus prolonging its life. The method of using it may be mastered after a few attempts. Use an old tube to practice on.

If you use an enamel cover for your tires be sure you put it on right side up. Sometimes we find one put on upside down, which will cause it to hold the rain instead of shedding it.

It is not enough to carry an extra spare or two, pumped up, and an extra tube or so under the rear seat. Carry a complete patching outfit and a blow-out patch and tire sleeve. They take very little room and may save a lot of time when on a long trip, as there is no telling how many blowouts you may have on any one trip.

AUTO NOTES.

- Don't stop suddenly.

Always keep spark advanced just before the point where it produces a knock. The world's rubber consumption this year is expected to be about 250,000 tons. Many cars are hard to ride because lubrication of the springs is neglected. To every 116 farms of more than 100 acres in New Mexico, there is one motor truck.

A slipping clutch is a constant waste of power and fuel, and a strain on the engine.

The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce is conducting safety first campaigns in the schools of the country. Insurance authorities say only between one-fourth and one-third of the automobiles in the country are protected.

More than 100 motor cars, valued at $2,500,000, were stolen in Manhattan and the Bronx, New York, in the last six months.

Chicago police charge 80 per cent of the automobiles stolen in that city are taken with the knowledge and consent of the owners.

A federal bill is planned by which theft of an automobile would be punishable by a $5000 fine and imprisonment for five years.

That screeching noise when the car is stopped is very likely due to dirt between the brake drums and the bands.

Change Oil To Insure Service

Regular attention to the oil in your car's crank case will insure good service so far as the engine is concerned. A new car, or one recently overhauled, should get a new change of oil after its first 400 miles. Thereafter the oil may be renewed at every 1000-mile mark.

If there is sediment in the crank case the case should be flushed with kerosene. After draining the kerosene, put in a pint of cylinder oil to clean out all kerosene thoroughly. The oil screen should be taken out and cleaned of all foreign matter. This is best done by shaking it in a pail of gasoline.

The crank case may also be cleaned inside and out at this time. Kerosene applied with a stiff bristle brush is the best cleaner.

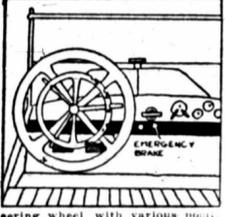

In replacing the oil pan be sure that the gasket is not broken. A new one ought to be put in for safety, especially on one side and applying graphite and oil to the other.

Tighten the nuts of the crank case evenly so as not to leave any air space. All joints to oil piping should also be air tight, to prevent oil leakage.

Before starting the engine, it will be necessary to prime the oil pump. Remove the small plug and pour in about a pint of oil.

Auto Without Levers.

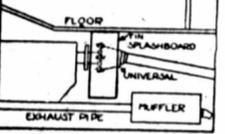

One of the latest model automobiles has no brake or control lever. Instead the gear shifting is done from the steering wheel, with various positions for the various speeds, and the emergency brake is a pull-out lever on the dash.

Stops Grease Splash.

Owners of a popular car have found an obnoxious smell of burning grease to be due to the splashing of grease from the front universal upon the exhaust pipe when the car is going fast. A tin plate, held over the universal by a stout wire from the floor board would catch the grease that is thrown out.

To Tighten Terminal.

Loose battery terminals may be reinforced and tightened by wrapping a strip of tin foil around the point that is inserted in the post. That will take up the extra play and insure good contact.

New Rim Wrench.
Less strength is needed to tighten nuts with this new kind of rim wrench. The long leverage permits the use of less initial effort to loosen nuts.

Way to Test Plugs.

A good way of locating a missing spark plug is to open the relief cocks, one at a time. The cylinder without flame, out of which issues a hiss, but no sharp report, is the one at fault.

NEW MODEL CADILLAC ATTRACTING ATTENTION AT MUNGER SALES ROOM

The following excerpts from the official bulletin of the Cadillac company, apropos of the new type 61 car, will prove interesting. Says the bulletin: "The new Cadillac, known as type 61, sustains and strengthens the Cadillac position of unquestioned leadership. It will be recognized at once as a logical development of the principles which have made Cadillac standard of the world. The many notable improvements embodied in type 61 are an outgrowth of essential facts which have governed Cadillac progress for 18 years. The motive force of this progress is an unchanging purpose to produce the finest motor cars that can be built."

The changes in the new Cadillac, as compared with the preceding models, may be divided into classifications relating to appearance, performance, riding qualities, appointments and mechanical refinements. The mechanical superiority which always distinguished the Cadillac is clothed with its rightful heritage of a beautiful exterior. In type 61, more than ever before the lines of the Cadillac are a true index of its intrinsic worth.

The following new features are emphasized: New shape of radiator, larger size of hood, new lines of beauty, car closer to ground, two new body styles, increased engine efficiency, deluxe steering wheel, new spark and throttle levers, new design of instrument board, aluminum pedal pads, new ventilator-control, improved windshield, trunk rack for sedan and phaeton, new design of carburetor, oil duct in camshaft, improved chain adjustment, new drain device, aluminum hood, smaller rear axle housing, new type grease cups. Its 31st cord-tires are standard equipment.

Hupmobile

There are four real questions when you buy a car—What will it cost to run? Will repairs be heavy? How long will it last? What will it bring when sold? If you get the same answers as the man who buys the Hupmobile, you can be sure you have not paid too much.

Hupmobile running economy is known to be truly exceptional.

Owners will tell you their repair bills are unusually light.

It is a fact that many Hupmobiles serve three or four long-time owners before they wear out.

Used car dealers all know the car commands a price above the average.

These things are true of the Hupmobile because it is built to last and to keep going on the minimum of outlay; and because they are true, the car is worth what it costs.

MALE BAPTISTS TO CELEBRATE FRIDAY AT TURKEY BANQUET

The men of the First Baptist church will celebrate the fourth anniversary of Rev. O. L. Powers' pastorate of that church with a big turkey banquet on Friday night. The ladies of the church will serve the banquet which will be given in the church basement.

The speakers for the evening will include Hon. Lucian W. Parrish, President J. D. Sandifer of Simmons college at Abilene, Hon. C. M. Caldwell of Breckenridge, Dr. L. Scarborough of Fort Worth. Governor Neff has also been invited to attend and to speak and the committee is hopeful that he can accept.

The banquet not only marks the fourth anniversary of the present pastor with the church but also the beginning of a new year's work for the members of the church.

There are nearly 600 men members of this church and in addition all the men whose wives are members of the church have been invited to attend.

Rev. Mr. Powers announces that the coming week will be visitation week for the church, and everyone who attends Sunday school Sunday will be tagged and also given two extra tags to be placed on two other friends who will promise to meet them at the Sunday school on October 2. This is to be "home coming" day for the Sunday school and church. They are both expected to reach the high water mark in numbers on that day. It is also hoped that many of the Baptists living in the city who have not affiliated with the church will become members on that occasion. The pastor calls on every man in the church to co-operate with him to make the banquet a success.

The First Baptist church has doubled its membership in the past four years and now has a membership of nearly 1300 members, and has raised during that time about three-quarters of a million dollars for all purposes. The banquet and the "home coming" day are planned as occasions of rejoicing and good fellowship among the membership of the church.

TAX COLLECTIONS TO BEGIN SATURDAY

Rolls Are Not Completed But Tax Collector Tittle Will Receive Money

Collection of state, county, school and irrigation taxes as well as poll taxes will begin next Saturday in the county tax collector's office at the court house. M. L. Tittle, the collector, stated that he would be ready to receive all money although the annual rolls have not been completed.

Mr. Deaton, the tax assessor, was unable to begin the huge task of making the rolls until 10 days ago as the state rate had not been received by that time. Matters, however, are in shape that the collector can readily secure the information as to the amount of taxes due.

Poll taxes can now be paid by either the husband or the wife without the presence of the other.

The first day of paying taxes usually finds a large number of voters on hand ready to pay the poll tax or receive an exemption receipt.

The force in the county tax collector's office has been busily engaged during the past 10 days writing tax receipts.

WILBARGER COUNTY GINS TURN OUT 5644 BALES

VERNON, TEXAS, Sept. 24.—Five thousand six hundred forty-four bales of cotton have been ginned in Wilbarger county thus far, and it is estimated pretty generally that from 40 to 50 per cent of the crop is in. Seven gins are in operation over the county, and most of these are doing capacity business. Vernon gins alone have handled 3,342 bales up to noon Friday. The average daily output from local gins is from 40 to 45 bales.

In the cotton yard at noon Friday there were 3,563 bales and receipts of late have averaged in the neighborhood of 100 bales a day. The warehouses here contain between 700 and 800 bales. Cotton is moving fairly fast in most parts of the county. In some sections, however, the crop is late, and the outputs of gins in those vicinities comparatively small.

NEW 1922 ESSEX CARS ARE NOW ON DISPLAY AT LLOYD WEAVER SALES ROOM

The new 1922 models of Essex cars are on display at the salesroom of the Lloyd Weaver Auto company. The same four body types are continued—touring car, roadster, sedan and cabriolet—but several new features have been added which enhance the attractiveness, durability and performance of this popular and fast selling automobile.

The 1922 Essex is dark blue with black hood and fenders making an ideal color combination, both from the angle of practicability and beauty. The wheelbase has been increased, making it now 109 1/2 inches. A heavier spring equipment has been added with the springs more bowed, making the new Essex as comfortable a car as can be found anywhere. Cord tires are now standard equipment all around.

The only change made in the Essex motor is the moving of the spark plugs from the left hand side to the right hand side and placing them at an angle of 45 degrees instead of straight up. This feature minimizes fouling of the plugs.

The enclosed models are also finished in dark blue with black hood and fenders and are trimmed in cream.

The interior is finished in gray upholstery.

Many other minor improvements and refinements have been added and all in all the new Essex is a car of distinction and beauty and should prove to be more than popular with motorists everywhere.

The Story of YOUR ICE

"Pennies Equal Dollars" When Buying Ice

It is just as natural for a person to "kick" on the price of a necessity as it is to "suspect" anyone's motives in giving away anything. Ice is no exception to the rule, which only proves the infallibility of the rule. Anyone that thinks ice at 1/2 cent per pound is exorbitant, has evidently failed to consider the costs involved.

In spite of the high-priced, delicately tuned machinery, skilled labor, costly supplies and repairs, and difficult deliveries, ICE IS THE CHEAPEST PRODUCT PER POUND MANUFACTURED.

Supply and Demand no Effect on Price

Contrary to all economics, that supply and demand regulates price, ice is not affected in any way. The supply is generally very limited when the demand is greatest and needed most—yet the price does not change.

Your ice-man is not only helping keep down the price of a necessity to you, but is also a benefactor to your entire community.

Twenty-five cents worth of ice, in most instances, will keep the average home refrigerator in the proper condition many hours.

DEMOCRATS PLAN TO AROUSE INTEREST AT MEETING IN OCTOBER

WILL PULL THINGS TOGETHER AND GET READY FOR ELECTION NEXT YEAR

LANDSLIDE NOT EXPECTED BUT HOPE TO MAKE GAIN

Realize That Congress is Not Popular and Will Take Advantage of Situation

By MARK SULLIVAN.
National Political Correspondent of the New York Evening Post and the Wichita Daily Times.
Copyright, 1921, by the New York Evening Post.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 24.—The Democrats are cheering up. They are going to hold a meeting of the national committee in October to elect a new chairman and otherwise pull things together and get ready for the election next year. The elections will name a third of the senate, thirty-two in number, and a whole lower house. To the politicians these elections don't seem so far away as they may seem to the voters. The primaries which will name the party candidates begin in less than six months, and in nearly all of the thirty-two states where there are senatorial elections it is already possible to tell pretty accurately who the nominees will be.

In these elections next year the democrats will make some gains. The only question is how much. Such a landslide as the republicans had in 1920 never comes twice in succession. While the democrats are bound to make some gains, and while it is within the possibilities for the n. to achieve a majority in the senate, on the whole the more optimistic among them really hope to go that far. Nevertheless, things are shaping up in a manner to encourage the democrats. If next year were a presidential year, and if the republicans would do the things which they themselves have done, but to what President Harding and his cabinet have done. The primaries will do the work which the republicans have done, but to what President Harding and his cabinet have done. The primaries will do the work which the republicans have done, but to what President Harding and his cabinet have done.

When the elections arrive next year it will be found that the republican senatorial and presidential candidates for re-election will do the things which they themselves have done, but to what President Harding and his cabinet have done. The primaries will do the work which the republicans have done, but to what President Harding and his cabinet have done. The primaries will do the work which the republicans have done, but to what President Harding and his cabinet have done.

Harding Popular, Congress Not. What is happening throughout the country, according to the universal testimony of politicians of both parties, is that President Harding, who won't run for re-election next year, is increasingly popular, while the republican majority in senate and house, which must run next year, is increasingly lacking in public approval. It would be a true expression of the characteristic point of view of the average voter to give silent approval to the republican president, but rebuke the republican representatives and senators at the polls.

So far as republican senators and representatives are concerned, as distinct from the republican president and his cabinet, things really are going pretty badly. The public approves of the republican president and his cabinet, it does not approve of the republican senate and house. And there is no reason to anticipate that this view of the republican senate and house will change. It is more likely to grow more so. There is no reason to suppose that the republican majority in the senate and house will make any better impression in the coming six months than they have made in the past. There is no denying or concealing the fact that the republican leadership in both senate and house is in bad shape. The republicans have big ma-jeories in both houses, but they have not the genius of leadership to organize their big majorities and inspire them and discipline them. The republicans know all this and in confidence discuss it. The situation is made more difficult and the possibility for remedy is made more remote by the fact that it is not anybody's fault particularly. All who are close to the situation know what the trouble is, and it is the sort of trouble which, in human feeling, no one wants to complain about. It isn't the fault of individuals, it is a combination of unusual personal equations. Some men who are officially in positions of leadership don't happen to have the temperament and personality that leadership calls for. They are in all other respects able, high minded and experienced. But they just don't happen to fill the bill for leadership. In the cases of some individuals it is age; in the cases of others, illness; in the cases of still others it is personal things with which everybody is too sympathetic to be willing to do anything about it except struggle along and do the best possible under circumstances.

There is a good deal of talk about making changes in the leadership, but such talk is half hearted. The probability is something along that line will be done. But those who have opportunity to know what is likely to do don't believe it will work a revolution. Politics, in the personal sense, being what it is, and generous human nature being what it is, nothing very revolutionary is likely to happen.

"Farmers' Bloc" Really Leading. Meantime, such real leadership as is being supplied to congress lies more in the "farmers' bloc" than anywhere else. The strong appeal for votes in the middle west and far west are being done by this group. And for what this group has already done, or may yet accomplish, the republican party is not going to get the credit. It is true that it is republican, Senator Kenyon of Iowa, who, in a loose way, is the head of the "farmers' bloc." But the "bloc" as a whole is bi-partisan and non-partisan. It may not contain as many democrats as republicans, but it contains enough to make it impossible for the republicans, as such, to get any credit for what it does. It is merely because it happens to control the house and the senate. The truth is, the republican leaders don't like the "farmers' bloc." They would destroy it if they could.

Most of the indictment against the house and senate lies in the atmosphere they have created of dilatoriness and indecision—the atmosphere of not knowing their own minds, which is about as fatal to public confidence as anything can be. The principal specific indictment is their failure to coordinate with President Harding in pushing through a taxation bill and a tariff bill. Those two measures constitute the legislative program that the president asked for congress. They are the most important things he asked. He pointedly refrained from asking anything else. The manner in which congress has acted towards these two proposals—the repeated changes of mind as to which should be put first, the doing one thing and then doing another, have created a public impression such as that when the measures are finally passed the public isn't likely to have much confidence in them. The public is likely to think of them as rather feeble compromises, the uncalculated product of many points of view. All this is realized by many republican leaders. They say something must be done about congress. About the only specific thing they recommend is that Mr. Harding, in his role of titular head of the republican party, should supply to congress the leadership it has failed to develop within itself. Whether this will happen is something that remains to be seen. Meantime, the democrats see their opportunity with relation to next year's elections, and are getting ready to go after it vigorously.

There is a section of democratic party opinion which favors doing nothing next year. Those who hold this view say it is better to lie low and let the elections next year go by default. The idea is to let the republicans have the complete kind of control and responsibility until the presidential election of 1924. The theory is that the coming three years are likely to be so unsatisfactory to the public that complete republican responsibility for them would be a democratic asset in 1924. But this view is not likely to prevail with the democratic leadership as a whole. The greater probability is that the democrats will go into the congressional and senatorial elections next year with great vigor.

WHAT TO EAT TO PUT IRON IN YOUR BLOOD AND MAKE YOU STRONG

PHYSICIAN TELLS HOW IRON-CONTAINING VEGETABLES SUCH AS LENTILS, SPINACH, APPLES, ETC. WHEN REGULARLY TAKEN WITH ORGANIC IRON BUILD GREAT STRENGTH AND ENDURANCE

At their own doors—in the very gardens of those who are weak, nervous and ailing all the while is one of the most valuable tonics and strength-builders known to medical science, and Dr. James Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.) and the Westchester County Hospital, New York, when consulted recently. Dr. Sullivan further said: "If your daily diet contains an abundant amount of iron you are giving your body the red blood food it craves. But if your blood lacks iron and is thin, pale and watery you cannot expect to be strong and well. On the contrary, your nerves become weak and you become irritable, fussy and easily upset. In such cases, what you need is iron—organic iron. It is often wonderful how quickly your multitude of symptoms will disappear and how strong and vigorous you will become." But be careful to distinguish between ordinary metallic iron which people usually take

STUDY YOUR JOB AND YOU'LL SURELY GET THE RAISES

Congressman Madden, Who Began as a Quarry Boy and Mastered Every Step to the Chairmanship of the Budget Committee, Says it is Easier to Meet a Task Than Let it Conquer You

Copyright, 1921, by Public Ledger Company

By William Atherton Du Puy

was the draftsman for the quarry. Continuing my study for another two years I was a very thorough master of this business of getting building rock out of these hillsides. So when I was eighteen years old my employer found that the election of a new superintendent of work was necessary and that of all the thousand men in the quarry

Appreciating the fact that my success had been due to the study I had given my work in each of its successive phases, I looked about as superintendent for the problem which I would next have to face in advancing in this organization. Here my job was to produce stone, but for the next higher post which could come to me, I realized for me my board, buy my own clothes and pay my own tuition at school. I found that I could do all this on $25 a month and have $25 to put away. Later when I earned $75 a month, I spent $50 and put away $25; when I earned $100 a month, I spent $40 and put away $60; and when I earned $150 a month, I spent $50 and put away $100. The part of this money which I did not spend for education purposes I invested in Cook County municipal bonds. Thus it was not long until I became a youngster with considerable resources.

"At the age of twenty-seven I was vice president of the quarrying company, drawing $3000 a year. At this time we secured a contract to build the Chicago terminals on the Northern Pacific Railway and in the course of performing this work I came to know Henry Villard, president of that railroad, quite well. He saw much of my work and liked it and in the end offered to make me one of the vice presidents of his railroad at $10,000 a year. This offer I declined because I hoped soon to become a partner in this quarrying business and because I felt that the seventeen years that I had devoted to studying quarrying would be largely wasted if I left that line of work and took to railroad.

"I still believe that my judgment was good, for it was not long after this that I was given a partnership, was allowed to reorganize and expand the company and develop it into a very productive property which soon made me independent.

"How did you get into politics?" I wanted to know.

"I was one of the early settlers out in that part of Chicago known as the South Branch and Thirty-first street," he explained. "which later became one of the best residential sections of the city. As the city grew different improvement districts were organized and I became interested in developing the district in which I lived. Being an engineer, I naturally became active in this development. I followed my old theory of studying the problems of the task and mastering them. We developed our community into the star district of the Chicago suburbs and this fact called attention to it. When this part of the town became entitled to a member in the City Council I found that my principles of the mastery of a job had made me the logical candidate for that post, and, while I could ill spare the time from my business, I was virtually forced into taking this office.

"As a new man in the city government, I was made chairman of the Committee on Wharves and Public Grounds, which committee I found to be virtually defunct, but which I soon revived to such an extent that ever since it has been one of the important committees of the city government of Chicago. I had applied to it the old idea of intensive study. The next year I became chairman of the Finance Committee, which made it necessary for me to dig deep into municipal affairs and there I served for seven years. The period of my service on the Chicago City Council was from 1880 to 1887, which was a period of great development in Chicago, the period during which it added to the thirty-seven square miles of the city limits 100 square miles of suburbs, built its water system without the issue of bonds, paid off $20,000,000 of its indebtedness. When I left the post of chairman of the Finance Committee there was but one unpaid debt against the city and that was a $1500 bond held by some one whom I could not find. It had been a splendid eight years of opportunity for service and an eight years which had given me a very unusual experience in applying my theory of study to problems of public welfare.

"I went back to my business, devoted eight years to it, built it up, prospered. The city of Chicago had always credited me with to become a candidate for the United States Congress, was elected to that Congress in 1905, and have been successfully re-elected ever since.

"ONE of my greatest pleasures during the early years of my service in Congress hinged about the Panama Canal. All my professional life had had to do with a business which had features not at all unlike that of digging this great canal. As a quarry engineer I knew much of the problems that confronted Colonel Goethals when he began work on the great Culbreth Cut.

"I was on the Appropriations Committee at this time and was with the members of that committee upon the occasion of their first visit to the Canal Zone. President Roosevelt had previously appointed a commission of international engineers to examine into the project and to make recommendations as to what type of canal should be built at Panama. That commission had reported, recommending the sea level type. When the members of the Appropriations Committee went over the ground at Panama I became very much impressed with the idea that a sea level canal at the Isthmus was virtually impossible. With the other members of the committee I studied very closely and critically this sea level project and in the end reached the conclusion that the lock type of canal was very much more practicable and was the type that it was advisable that we should build. This committee of Congress in its report recommended this type, thus fixing in the face of the commission of international engineers, supposedly much wiser on the subject matter than was this committee. As the situation has since developed, however, I think there is little question that the committee was right and the engineers were wrong.

"Through all the years that the Panama Canal was being dug, I made very frequent trips to the Zone, became very intimately associated with Colonel Goethals, talked with him time and again about the various problems that came up during the development of the work, and take much satisfaction in the fact that numbers of my recommendations were accepted by the canal builders and resulted in increased expedition and economy."

"Is it not true," I asked, "that this job of chairman of the Budget Committee is largely an engineering job?"

"That is perfectly true," said Mr. Madden. "Operating the United States Government is like carrying on any other huge enterprise. The very heart of that enterprise is in its financing. The Budget Committee determines what projects of the Government are entitled to appropriations, the size of those appropriations and the purposes for which they shall be spent. Any project may be killed at any time by refusal to appropriate for it and any project may be decreased in size or allowed to grow by the mere process of appropriation.

"The budget officer of the Government, who is now General Dawson, is, of course, but a clearance agency between the executive end of the Government and the legislative end. All requests for funds of all agencies of the Government must be made to this budget officer, who examines them, makes his recommendations to the President, who sends them to Congress. They come to the Committee on Appropriations. That committee has grown until it now has thirty-five members, among them many of the ablest members of the Congress.

"The committee is in no way obligated to accept the recommendations of the budget officer. His work on every item in the budget is of great value and his recommendations are given careful consideration. The committee, however, is in no way bound to follow these recommendations and its right to go beyond them and make independent investigations of its own is in no way vitiated. This it constantly does and will continue to do. If the investigations sustain the budget officer its confidence in him, his work and his judgment, will constantly increase. If the action of this Appropriations Committee is constantly at variance with the recommendations of the budget officer the indication will be that he is not making good in the eyes of Congress."

"WHENEVER there was a promotion to be given out," said Martin Barnaby Madden. "I got it. That was not because I was any smarter than other boys nor because I had any better start, but because I was the lad with the information.

"I believe that the plan which I followed from the very beginning is the surest of all ways to success. I studied the job I was on, read books that told about that particular thing, went to night school and took the courses that showed me how to master the thing at which I was working.

"Any youngster can do the same. If he is sweeping out a shoe store, he can learn in books or in schools how to keep stock properly on the shelves. If he is washing automobiles in a garage, the door of the great industry is open to him if he begins to study machines. If he is hoeing cotton, he can master the scientific principles back of cultivation and become a better man at it than the fellow who merely hoes cotton.

"Wherever he is working he has but to study the thing he is doing and his employer will find out that he knows more about it than his fellows and the opportunities for advancement will be offered him. There will be a few other boys doing the same thing that he will have little competition."

The speaker has recently come to one of those four or five top jobs in the administration of the affairs of the greatest nation in the world. Martin Barnaby Madden was recently chosen chairman of the Appropriations Committee of the House of Representatives, otherwise known as the Budget Committee, that committee which under the new scheme of things must originate all the legislation which sets aside money for running this Government, whether it be $2800 for a canal down in Siam or $300,000,000 for this year's maintenance of a peace-time army.

And when Congress chose this ex-chairman of its Budget Committee it forgot all about that matter of precedence which so often figures in committee appointments. It needed a man who knew the job, so it picked Madden, hurdled him over the heads of other men in line who had not subscribed in early boyhood to the theory of studying the job and who were, therefore, not so ready for promotion.

"My mother and father were both born in England, though my father's people were of a quite pure Irish strain. Despite poverty they managed to get to America and planted themselves with their family of eight children at the town of Lamont in the rock region of the Des Plaines Valley, just outside of Chicago. This was more than fifty years ago, and Chicago was a sprawling-out struggling town and the Illinois and Michigan Canal, which can down through Lamont, was one of its principal arteries of transportation. Chicago was just beginning to fast its growing pains and this rocky valley through which the canal ran furnished its best and most available supply of building material. So it was that quarries began to develop and prosper in this region.

"I WAS but ten years old when I went over to a quarry near our house and got a job carrying a tin bucket of crystal water from a nearby spring from one gang of workmen to another. I got fifty cents a day for this work, which money I carried home on Saturday night and turned into the family hoard.

"The first practical thing in behalf of my employer that I ever attempted was in regard to this same job of water-carrying. I showed them how a pipe could be run from the spring to the quarry, thus doing away with the necessity of hiring boys to carry the buckets back and forth all that distance. My suggestion was followed and thus a saving was made. A little later on I called the attention of the boss to the fact that whenever the men finished a day's work they left their tools uncleaned for and exposed to the weather and danger of loss. These tools represented a considerable investment and the efficiency of the work depended very much upon their being kept in good condition. I showed how they could be gathered up and properly cared for. My first promotion came at the end of a year at the quarry, when I was given the job of tending the tools, and my wages were raised to $1 a day.

"Encouraged by this success, I began to look for new fields in connection. Here were these great bodies of stone to be taken out of the hillsides and to be cut up into proper shapes and sizes for use in construction. While tending tools I had seen the foreman and the superintendent figuring on the methods of cutting out this rock and the amount of salable material into which the proper could be divided. These were mathematical problems and I wanted to understand how they could be solved out. So I began to study mathematics, particularly as applied to cutting stone out of a hillside. I took my course at night school and my mother, who was a well-educated woman, helped me at home. There was never a night during my early term that I did not work over my mathematics until 10 o'clock. Before long I was helping the foreman figure out his problems.

"In addition to the mathematics of quarrying, there was another problem, that of drafting. It was necessary to work out on paper the problems of cutting stone from the mountains, which task required mechanical drawing as well as mathematics. Realizing this, I added to my study of figures a course in mechanical drawing and soon became quite efficient in the practical problems of the quarry.

"I was fourteen years old when I heard the men in authority at the quarry discussing a building which they intended erecting to house certain new machinery that was to be installed. They had decided to call in an architect to design this building, which was more complicated than an ordinary structure because it had to take care of the strain which was incident to the operation of heavy machinery. I spoke up, however, and told the boss that it was unnecessary to hire an architect—that I would draw the plans for his building. This I did and the structure was afterward put up according to my plans and was in every way satisfactory. Thus it came about that at the time I was fourteen years old I was drawing $50 a month, which in those days was very good pay indeed, and was coming to know a good deal about the business of quarrying. By this time I was sixteen I

I was the individual who knew the job better than anybody else. So I became superintendent, the boss of a thousand men, drawing $100 a month at the age of eighteen, a position to which I had climbed step by step because of the fact that I had studied each job I was on."

"THAT white-haired statesman gloved as he talked of the accomplishments of his youth. It was evidently much satisfaction to sketch through those days when he had played a man's game in a productive, workaday world. He was a good picture of the man who had put accomplishment back of him—a big, bony-faced man, grizzled and hard and healthy. His hair was snow-white, his face ruddy, his eyes blue. There was obviously more of the Irish father than the English mother in him. He had the quality of the G. O. P., the love of talk, of a good story. The sixty-five years of his active life had been good to him and he is today a man with the possibility of many active years ahead of him. And they say around Congress that he can remain the head of his great committee as long as he wishes to be there.

"Remember this quarry," he said, "was easy for me because I knew the job so well,

Martin Barnaby Madden applies the same principles to the determination of governmental budgets that he used in the quarry business—mastering the work in hand in minutest detail and being ready for the next job when it comes along

I would have to know, not only how to produce the stone, but how to market it. I, therefore, began to go to a business college at night and study accounting, sales, contracts, all the business elements that constituted the quarry from the standpoint of its general management. So I was ready for the bigger job when it opened up.

"Throughout all this progress from post to post, I had held in another plan that I had worked out early in my youth and which contemplated putting away certain proportions of the money which I had earned. When I came to make $50 a month, I said to my mother that I would now pay

SAMSON

Like His Great Namesake the Hero of This Story Was Distinguished by His Abnormal Muscular Strength, and When His Enemies Pressed Too Close He Exerted His Power

By E. Charles Vivian

Copyright, 1921, by E. Charles Vivian

HE WAS not sixteen when his father, Joshua Angur, died and left to him the governance of Ramlett's farm—his mother had died in his infancy—and so for a time he was left in the gray old house alone. Up in Orest village they said that Samson would not stand it; he would sell out the stock on the farm and leave the place, for from his early boyhood he had been one to listen to travelers' tales—soldiers returning on furlough to Orest had no better listeners for their stories than Samson Angur—until Joshua, his father, died, and he lived alone at Ramlett's.

Those who reckoned on his leaving Ramlett's reckoned without the pull of heredity; Ramlett's had been formed by an Angur from the beginning of memory in Orest; there was a tradition that Simon de Montfort, before the fatal fall of Evesham, had stopped for refreshment at Ramlett's, though the story of how an Angur gave him good food and ale took no count of the fact that Orest was far to the south of his journeying to Evesham. But heredity told on Samson to the extent of holding him to Ramlett's in utter loneliness for two years, and then he took unto himself a wife.

You must know that Ramlett's farm stood away out from Orest village, up an open country where the trees seemed merely to accentuate the barrens of the landscape, and they said in Orest that the woman who married Samson must have pluck to stand the isolation of Ramlett's. This they said among themselves, not in Samson's hearing, for he was an ill man to count on. Bill Wherry found. For one winter afternoon Samson was down at the Anchor in Orest—this was a couple of months after his marriage, and Bill, whose jokes were always faint, ventured a query:

"How's Dallah fair?" up at Ramlett's, Samson?"

Samson gazed at him till the full meaning of that query had penetrated to his slow-moving brain; then he took Bill by the shoulder and from the throat, marched him out from the Anchor, and with one great heave deposited him in the horse-pond on the far side of the road—and the splash of Bill's fell wetted the Anchor doorstep. It was the first example Samson had given Orest of his strength to his fortune, but for a long time it was his best effort, and Orest told of how Bill had gone hurtling into the pond like a log of firewood.

"There was never such muscle known in Orest since," they would say, in telling of the feat.

Meanwhile, Samson worked as his father had worked before him—as many ancestors had worked—to write a living and a little more out of Ramlett's, until the young squire, lately come to his own, gambled away his patrimony—in one night, they said—up in London. Then Ramlett's, with the rest of the estate came under the hammer, and Samson Angur went to Deadham, the lawyer at Bedford, to borrow such money as would with his savings complete the purchase of Ramlett's. So many generations had his ancestors farmed the place that he could think of no other home, and he had looked for an heir to come in the space of not many months from the time of the sale. And since Deadham lent him four-fifths of the purchase price of Ramlett's, Samson held to the place which the rock was in his blood.

BY THE time the title deeds of Ramlett's were safely stored in Lawyer Deadham's safe, a girl child had been born to Samson, and in the hearing of that child his wife died. They said up in Orest that the night of the child's birth and his wife's death put ten years on Samson, and Lawyer Deadham came over from Bedford to hear what Samson would do. It was mid-spring, and Samson took Deadham out over the fields of Ramlett's to show him the crops, and let him see that Ramlett's could be in no better hands.

"You like," said Deadham, passing by the gate of a field in which the young wheat sprang healthily, "I'll take over the place altogether—how you out fairly."

Samson looked at his wheat and shook his head.

"That's natural," he said slowly, "that the place should ever be the same to me again. She—she—well, I loved her, an' Ramlett's is left desolate, as Scripture says. But there's a many Angurs up in the churchyard for her to rest beside, an' they all lived an' died at Ramlett's. Here I brought her, an' here I'll remember her till her baby grows to be a comfort to me, perhaps."

Now Lawyer Deadham was a big, stout man with a round and peevy face, and with little deep-set eyes that showed the man hard and keen, as his kind should be. Yet at the simple pathos of Samson's words, his eyes softened, and he paused before he answered.

"As you will—as you will. You'll need a nurse for the little one."

"Old Betty's tender," said Samson, "an' she fears to do well 'er. She'll need to offer nurse."

"As you will," said Lawyer Deadham again.

Samson took him back to the farm house, and there, while the tiny girl baby slept in the big bedroom overhead, down in the low-celled parlor Samson got out a cake that had not been eaten on the day of the funeral, and a bottle of gooseberry wine that had had time to mellow. Lawyer Deadham, sipping the wine appreciatively, gazed at the ceiling.

"You'd do well to have the house overhauled," Angur, he said. "These plaster and timber places was keeping perfectly water-tight."

"Ramlett's is sound," Samson answered curtly. "The lawyer's interest in the state of the house seemed to him a trifle slow."

"I look at that beam—up there where

Two days brought Lawyer Deadham's word to Samson. "Richard has spoken to me about your daughter," he wrote, "and I have forbidden all intercourse."

It joins the wall," Deadham persisted. "Surely it wants seeing to?"

Samson looked up at the end of the great beam which crossed the ceiling from over the fireplace to beside the door. The end farthest from the fireplace seemed as if it might hang loosely in the mortise of its supporting beam, but Samson, reaching up, laid hands on it and proved it tight in its socket.

"So it's always looked," he said, "from the time when I was a little chap. But you see it don't shake."

"Not a mere grip like that, perhaps," said Lawyer Deadham, "but one man's strength is hardly enough proof."

Samson came over to where Deadham sat in the room's one armchair. "Sit still, sir," he said. Then he reached out both arms, grasping both arms of the chair, and at arm's length lifted the chair with Deadham in it, and held him in air.

"A mere grip like that ought to be enough," he said, still holding up chair and Lawyer Deadham.

"For heaven's sake, put me down, man," Deadham begged.

SAMSON, smiling, lowered him gently to the floor again, and with the handkerchief that Deadham took out to wipe his lips he mopped his forehead as well.

"The grip of a giant," he said shakily, "and you mean Samson."

"Well," said Lawyer Deadham, rising to go, "it's enough test for me, now I know what your grip is like—but I trust you to keep the house sound and water-tight while the mortgage gives me an interest in Ramlett's. So long as that is done, and my interest paid, I'm content with the investment—you need not fear that I shall sell in the mortgage."

"Ere," said Samson, regarding him steadily, "I'd not have come to you for the money."

"Them that's understood," Deadham said, and with a handshaking went.

THIRTEEN days Samson farmed Ramlett's, and at times paid off a bit of the mortgage, for ever as Lily, his girl-child, grew, he desired more and more to make the place wholly his own, that she might have a heritage. The girls of Orest smiled for him, telling themselves that surely such a man must marry again, but Samson showed no sign of responding to their wishes. He had given himself and his heart to one woman, and for him that was the end of romance. There remained Lily, and Ramlett's to win for Lily in the day when she should come to womanhood. Beyond that day Samson did not think.

There came a day when Lily, then ten years old, went down with scarlet fever, and Samson drove over to Bedford for Dr. Ackermann. The doctor was just going out to another case, but Samson lifted him bodily into his own trap, instrument case and all.

"You'll see nobody till you've seen my Lily," he said.

Ackermann looked at him and judged it wisest to accede. "Then for heaven's sake let me go to the surgery and sit out for a fever case," he answered testily. "This lot's no use unless you want the child carried up."

Having fitted out for a fever case the doctor climbed back into the trap and Samson took the course that turned him into Bedford main street on one wheel. He drove like a fury down the street, and out in open country sicked the horse with the whip while Ackermann gripped the side of the trap.

"What's the use of getting there dead?" Ackermann asked. "Drive reasonably, man—I'm scared of this."

Samson gave the horse one more flick with the whip for answer, and it was the one knock—the nearest bolt. They had a time that led to Orest from Bedford, and for half that distance Samson tried to get back control of his horse. Then the off rein broke, and he dropped the other on the floor of the trap.

"Hold tight, doctor," he said.

He stood up, and with a sickly forward leap, landed on the horse's back. One shaft snapped as he gripped the horse's flank, but of that he took no heed; leaning forward, he grasped the broken rein and then picked up the near rein. By the time they came to the turn he had the horse under control sufficiently to make the right angle without difficulty, and he rode the lathering horse in this fashion up to the door of Ramlett's.

"By the time you've seen to her, doctor," he said, "I'll have my other trap ready to drive you back."

But Ackermann shook his head. "Not again," he answered, "I'd sooner drive with the devil."

Samson laughed. "Look to my Lily," he bade, "and I'll get a man to drive you home."

On this day they fell at Orest how Samson Angur stopped the runaway horse, and just as they tell how he dug Bill Wherry in the horse-pond, and these are but two of the many tales of his great strength and iron temper.

Ramlett's bare and desolate in winter, was good to look on in the spring. Along the ditch banks grew primrose and violets, and a little later in the season cowslips starred the meadows where Samson's cows grazed and his lambs played round their mother ewes. In the Easter and Whitsun holidays Lily Angur roamed the meadows, found the hicks' nests, saw the flowering of the cherry and alow, and the budding of the wild rose, and Samson's gaze followed her, often in a way that told how he resented that school should take her from him. Yet her mother had been well taught, and Samson knew that had the mother lived, she would have desired that Lily, too, should know all the Bedford school could teach her. Yet Samson was very glad when, a month or more after her seventeenth birthday, Lily came home from school for good.

Englishman, whom nature had gifted with an extremely large nose, joined the other travelers. He nested himself opposite the parson, who sat on the bench and at once professed his sympathy. When the Englishman declined it, the astonished host said:

"Ye digan, what?"

"No," answered the Englishman.

"Man," said the host, "it's a calamity, for ye hat wonderful accommodation for."

THE PARSON'S VIEW

"PARSON," said a member of the congregation of a colored church, "I have always stood up for you on all occasions. Why, only de other day I says to a friend 'I didn't believe ye ever told a lie in yo' life 'bout any one.'"

THE PARSON SMILED broadly. "Thank ye," he said, "but mysef, I wouldn't go far an' dat—ye see, I had preached a good many funeral sermons in mah time."

ACCOMMODATION

"I WAS a passenger on a train out of Edinburgh," says an American, "and became much interested in an Englishman and a Scot I saw come in."

"The Scot was in his Highland garb and the fact that he took snuff freely from a large box first attracted my attention. He offered it to others to help themselves and generally made himself very friendly. The

He wondered, then, how he should fill his life and make her content at Ramlett's. For himself, it was enough to see the wheat turning yellow and smell the mown hay in his meadows—to know that Ramlett's was farmed as it ought to be; but for her—there was need of some young life about the place, he felt.

"You'll be lonely, Lily, times," he told her, the evening after her return from Bedford school.

But she laughed. "There's Ethel Thurston, and the other girls at Orest, and there's always you."

Samson smiled his appreciation of this last. "I've wanted you here w' me, Lily, but—there's little to pleasure you at Ramlett's."

Lily came over and sat on the arm of his chair—the chair that he had lifted when Lawyer Deadham sat in it long ago.

"Never fear, daddy," she said. "There's my music, and the girls at Orest, and always my daddy, and—Dick Herson said he'd like to bring his friends over sometime, if you'd let him—"

Sitting on the arm of the chair, she kept her face out of sight of Samson's eyes, but she felt him stiffen a little at this last name.

"Herson," he said, "an' how'd you meet Herson, Lily?"

"It was one breaking-up concert, dad," she answered. "He came with his sister—the one that's going to marry Lord Altham, they say."

"And"—Samson turned to gaze at her—"and what do you think a lord's brother-in-law would be doin' at Ramlett's?"

"He said he'd like to come," Lily persisted, "and bring his friends."

"Lawyer Deadham'll have a word to put in, I reckon," Samson mused. "Dick Herson's his ward, so was Dick's sister, an' Dick'll come to most of Deadham's property when Deadham dies, they say. He'll not favor Dick's comin' to Ramlett's if I know him."

"Well, I shall not be dull, daddy, whether he comes or no. You'll be here, I know."

She stroked Samson's curled and graying hair as she said it, and almost Samson was content. She was little more than a child, he knew, and Dick Herson had flattered her, perhaps—perhaps he would forget to come to Ramlett's.

So he passed it off, and the summer went by. At the coming of winter he bought Lily a new piano, and some of her old schoolmates would come up from Orest—Dr. Ackermann's daughter and Ethel Thurston and others—but the spring brought Dick Herson, who laid a book on the table in the low-celled parlor.

"A day late, Miss Angur," he said. "I'd have got here yesterday if I could—"

Samson took up the book and looked at the fly-leaf. "With all your wishes, from Dick," said Dick's handwriting. Having seen this, Samson put down the book.

"Like Lawyer Deadham, you've a good memory, Master Herson," he said.

Dick laughed, but he was looking at Lily, and Samson, following his gaze, saw how she stood silent and a little flushed, and smiling. Tall and slim, with little tendrils of silky hair curling about her temples, she smiled at Dick, who knew that for him there was no picture on earth to compare with this.

AND Samson, seeing how it was with these two, feared, but said nothing regarding his fear. Fate must drive them where it would, he knew, and Dick, seven years Lily's senior, was his own master. If Lily wanted Dick she must have him, thought Samson—already he saw that Dick wanted her. Farming teaches a man to accept what life sends, without question.

So he let them go out to the meadows, questioning nothing, but seeing in them fit mates for each other—up to the summer evening when they came to him where he sat in the low-celled parlor, and then he knew before Dick spoke.

"It's not easy to say," Dick told him, "but—Miss Angur—Lily—she's—I'm able to take care of her—"

"She's worth, lad," Samson told him, "but remember she's all the world I've got left. And get Lawyer Deadham's word on it before I give mine—they say your future in his will, an' he's got Ramlett's gripped as well. You're got to be practical, sometimes."

Little as Dick's mood fitted with this cold wisdom, he saw the necessity for it. "I'll tell him—ask him," he promised, "but—"

"I know," Samson breathed. "Young love's a wonderful thing, an' every pair of lovers think theirs the most wonderful that ever was."

"We don't think—we know," Dick asserted.

"So," said Samson, "but when you've got Lawyer Deadham's word, be good to her."

He watched them go out to the gate, saw how they lingered there—at the last he saw how Lily laid her head down in the hollow of Dick's shoulder and looked up at his face, and at that Samson ceased watching. A little later she came to him in the parlor.

"Dad," she asked, coming close to him. "do you think—"

"I think Dick's a fine, straight boy," Samson told her, "an' as near worth having my Lily as any I know. But there's Lawyer Deadham."

"Hush, daddy!" And she nestled close to him, a little afraid.

Two days brought Lawyer Deadham's word to Samson. "Richard has spoken to me about your daughter," he wrote, "and I have forbidden all intercourse. Had I known of this I should have stopped it before. It must be obvious to you that Lord Altham's brother-in-law can have nothing in common with your daughter, and I forbid him, absolutely, to see her or hold any communication with her. I have other views for him. I trust you will see the wisdom of this and instruct Miss Angur accordingly."

Deadham had forbidden Dick to see her. But she knew—Dick had written to tell her that Deadham gave him a week in which to renounce all thought of her.

"If you like," his letter ended, "I can get a license that will permit of our being married at the end of the week. In any case I shall be over to see you tomorrow, and then you can tell me, dearest—"

The end of the letter did not concern practical things.

Mid-afternoon brought Dick Herson, for whom Lily waited down by the gateway of Ramlett's. All that he would have told her was forgotten—at sight of her there was nothing to say, only to take her close to him and hold her, silent as was he, careless of any who might see them. A roaring autumn wind that made the timbers of Ramlett's creak blew tendrils of Lily's hair against Dick's face.

"Always, best-beloved," he whispered to her. "Herson's only that in tell you."

"I need no more," she whispered back.

They went, world-forgetting, away up into the meadows beyond the house, and Samson, busy in the farmyard, saw them go. Within the hour old Betty—very old, now—hobbled out to him to tell him that Lawyer Deadham was waiting in the best parlor.

SAMSON went in. Lawyer Deadham sat in the armchair and gazed at the center beam, which showed loose in its mortise on the far side of the room. He nodded, but did not rise, as Samson entered.

"About your daughter, Angur," he said, harshly.

Samson lowered over him, unanswering, and Deadham remembered how he had swung in space in this very chair, in Samson's grip.

"This folly of Herson's has got to stop," he said again.

"Got to stop," Samson echoed.

"Well!" Deadham asked.

Samson, looking, saw the bulky form in the armchair, the puff face and beard, little eyes. "Can you stop it?" he asked in turn.

"I can do something," Deadham answered. "I've already told Herson that if he persists beyond the end of this week I alter my will—not a penny more or later. And I can do more than that—if you don't do your part with your daughter I foreclose on Ramlett's."

"Beyond the end of this week," Samson remarked, thoughtfully.

"That is my limit," said Deadham.

"You take no count of how they love each other," Samson asked. He was curiously quiet and restrained; in thought he saw, not the bulky form of Lawyer Deadham, but Lily, all his world, with Dick's arm encircling her waist away in the meadows.

"Love!" Deadham echoed, scornfully. "Fancy! I've got you gripped, Angur, and give you to the week's end to stop their fooling. The word is with the girl—if she sticks Herson, packing them'll be no more of this. That, or I smash Dick and you, too."

"Are you mad or nah?" Samson asked.

"A mere business man—I can't afford this, with Lord Altham married to Herson's sister. I don't care (appense about your love) or anything of the sort, and—"

"He leaned forward as he sat and shook a finger at Samson—"I've got you gripped, Angur."

"Maybe," Samson answered, "but I'm thinking of my girl—my Lily that's had all I could give her since she was a helpless little babe; I'm thinking of how you want me to break her heart—she's cared, for nobody but Dick Herson since she came back from school, an' I reckon they've got of being to each other—'tis a big love, this o' theirs, as I've seen, big as mine for her, an' bigger than mine for Ramlett's."

"Be warned, Angur," Deadham said. "You're talking mere sentimentality, but I mean it when I say I'll smash Dick's prospects and take Ramlett's away from you if you don't heed."

Samson stared at the bulky figure before him. "Takes Ramlett's—away from me?" he echoed. "Ramlett's—from me?"

Deadham laughed. "Now you're beginning to understand," he said. "Either you make the girl stop it—these things are always in the girl's hands—or else I foreclose on Ramlett's, and turn you out."

"That"—Samson cleared his throat and spoke with difficulty—"that's final!"

"My last word—fixed as law," said Deadham.

Samson looked at him for a minute, and then his gaze wandered about the parlor. On the mantel was a portrait of Lily—in her eyes smiled at him, and again in thought he saw her by the gate, her head resting in the hollow of Dick's shoulder. On the far wall was her mother's portrait—in this room his father and grandfather had sat with their wives and children. "An' Deadham would turn him out!"

"Fixed as law," he murmured. "Fixed as Angur to Ramlett's."

"My final word—for you to obey," said Deadham.

IN A gust of fierce rage Samson remembered his namesake, and sight of the beam above him gave him consciousness of a way out. Facing toward Deadham he raised both hands above his head and grasped the great center beam that crossed the ceiling of the room.

"Your last word, Deadham," he said, and laughed.

Deadham stood frozen in sudden terror, and Samson leaved upward on the beam, putting forth all his vast strength—heaved upward until there came a creaking sound, swang the beam aside from its socket, and let go his hold with another laugh. There answered him a splintering that promptly became a crash which drowned Deadham's last heartless cry, and then a choking dust of plaster and rotting wood filled the wrecked room—dust that had settled to a gray film which rose again when men came to lift the fallen beam away from the bolton of Deadham and Samson Angur.

There were cowslips in the meadows of Ramlett's farm when Lily Herson came down the pathway from Orest Church, leaning on her bridegroom's arm.

SCOTTISH NOBLEWOMAN DISCARDS SOCIETY FOR BUSINESS

Lady Marjorie Dalrymple, of Haughty and Ancient Family, Gives Up Luxuries of Drawing Room and Brilliant Court Life for the Marts of Trade in America

Copyright, 1921, by Public Ledger Company

By A. A. Preciado

LADY MARJORIE DALRYMPLE, member of that haughty and exceedingly conservative ancient Scottish house of Dalrymple, has tasted of the wine of life.

She wanted to live, she says. The war has been a revelation to her, as it has been to so many of her own people and fellow men and women in England. The war has taught her that social life, with its brilliant seasons and court gayeties in which only men and women of high position and wealth can share, is an empty one. Therefore, to the surprise of her family, her social set and others of the social regime in England, she has put away her silk gowns and jewels and dancing slippers and gone into business.

Lady Marjorie Dalrymple, descended from the noble Earls of Stair, is no longer a butterfly whose object in life is to wear her clothes well, to be pampered by men and to learn the art of gay repartee.

"I am now an ordinary tradeslady," she says. The titled folks of England were shocked. It could not possibly be true that a feminine member of the proud house of Dalrymple should step down from her exalted state and engage in vulgar business! But it was true.

The King and Queen applauded. In these days of economic necessity, or perhaps in these days of a desire for something worth while to do to fill the vacuum created when the nations laid down their arms, it is quite the thing for the ruling house to extend moral support to those loyal subjects of high position who prefer mundane business to the luxuries of gilded palaces and drawing rooms.

For centuries the sons of Dalrymple have never besmudged their good name by going into trade, but the world has changed, and Lady Marjorie is susceptible to changes. She has become a director of a company that specializes in the sale of suede clothes for women. Accompanied by Miss R. L. D. Broughton, a director of the company, she has come to America to establish agencies and to "make her fortune."

"DON'T want any one to think that I am just playing with business," she says. "I am very serious. Although this is my first business venture, I am really quite experienced. I got my training in the war. I was with my mother, Lady Marjorie, and Miss Broughton in the south of France during the conflict. My mother had several depots there for hospital dressings. After the war I established a station in London to supply temporary fiber legs for soldiers. So you see this is not my first beginning."

"I like to travel and to be doing something that interests me. I really was not made just to sit around through life. After what I saw of the war I cannot reconcile myself to a life of bridge or serving tea or fulfilling social obligations. My family finally realized I would be happier doing this rather unusual thing."

Lady Marjorie supplied more than 5000 leg legs, largely of her own design, to wounded soldiers during the war.

"It was while my sister and I were working with the adjustable leg legs that the idea of suede appealed to me as being singularly adaptable for so many more articles than it has ever been used for. Miss Broughton also was an admirer of suede.

Together we designed some gauntlet gloves, shooting coats and hats. I have put my faith in suede from my experience in putting soft leather tops on the temporary leg legs which I supplied to the soldier patients."

Lady Marjorie scoffs at her title. "You Americans make so much fuss over titles," she says. "I am surprised that in an enlightened democracy such as you have here, where there is no social caste, there should be so much interest and curiosity about titles. In England we think nothing of them."

"And why shouldn't a person with a title do the same thing that any one else does?" she quickly responded when asked whether her title would embarrass her in her business dealings with people of her own social stratum in England.

"Why shouldn't I become interested in the company of which I am only a part? Women have fine business heads in certain lines, and why shouldn't they use them? Let my friends come to me to buy if they will; I shall promise them good merchandise and reasonable prices. My family is interested in my venture, and so am I. Very much so."

AND there you have the explanation of Lady Marjorie Dalrymple, O. B. E., sister of the Earl of Stair, of Stranraer, Scotland, with residence in Galleyway and Edinburgh, for her business career.

The annals of the house of Dalrymple have furnished the theme for many romances, it is said. A chronicler of the family history says:

"The Hon. Janet Dalrymple was the heroine of Sir Walter Scott's novel, 'The Bride of Lammermoor,' and, according to Sir Robert Dalrymple-Elphinstone's letter, printed in the Edinburgh Evening Post, dated September 21, 1829 (apropos of the then recent publication of the novel in question), she had become a ravine woman, in which condition she continued until her death less than a month afterward. The bridegroom eventually recovered, but absolutely refused to give an explanation of the tragedy and was killed by a fall from his horse within the precincts of the Royal Palace of Holyrood, at Edinburgh, a few years later. According to some of the stories current at the time, Dunbar was stabbed by his bride, while, according to others—and it is noteworthy that Sir Robert Dalrymple-Elphinstone, a great-grandfather of the Duke brancher of the house of Dalrymple, meant nothing to her at the present moment.

"I am engaged in business," she warns. And to prove it she went to work at her little portable typewriter on her desk in the New York hotel, where the firm is temporarily located.

"Typewriting has come over to us," she said.

Lady Marjorie is unusually tall and well knit of frame. Her hair is light brown, and her eyes, which have a kindly, friendly light in them, are deep blue. She wears as a business attire a pink and white striped voile gown, with a white ruff about the neck and a small black straw hat. Her shoes are of black suede, with low heels. She has banished high heels. Her only ornament is a ring set with pearls and coral that matches the color of her eyes.

Lady Marjorie smiled as she seated herself by an open window of her hotel and looked out over the roofs of New York City. When she smiled the sun came in to understand why doctors and patients alike in the Dalrymple, not as the 'Bride of Lammermoor,' but as the 'Bride of Baldoon.'"

"Sir Robert Dalrymple-Elphinstone declares in his letter that the result of the marriage was nearly, if not exactly, as related by Sir Walter Scott in his novel. On the wedding night a frightful turmoil and screams were heard to proceed from the bridal chamber, and when the door was forced open the bridegroom was found on the floor, withering in his blood, stabbed in a dozen different places, while the bride had become a ravine woman, in which condition she continued until her death less than a month afterward. The bridegroom eventually recovered, but absolutely refused to give an explanation of the tragedy and was killed by a fall from his horse within the precincts of the Royal Palace of Holyrood, at Edinburgh, a few years later. According to some of the stories current at the time, Dunbar was stabbed by his bride, while, according to others—and it is noteworthy that Sir Robert Dalrymple-Elphinstone, a great-grandfather of the Duke of Baldoon, in favor of this opinion in his letter—the injuries were inflicted by Lord Rutherford, who, with the connivance of some servant, had managed to secret himself in the bridal chamber, and who had buried himself upon Dunbar as soon as the latter entered the room. Certain it is that Lord Rutherford disappeared from Scotland immediately afterward, and was understood to have taken refuge in the Russian army and to have been killed while fighting under the Muscovite flag."

LADY MARJORIE is the only unmarried sister of the present and twelfth Earl of Stair. She was decorated by King George in 1920 with the Cross of Officer of the Order of the British Empire for her work in the war hospitals. But her medals and titles, not to mention the romances and tragedies connected with the various English hospitals hastened to endorse the leg leg.

"Title or no title," she said, "I find more pleasure in business than in afternoon teas and receptions. My advice to any woman of rank, or to any woman who considers herself above the common clay, and yet desires to find some real interest in life, is to go into business if she feels that the pleasures of society have lost their charm."

She Lips in Numbers at Six

By William O. Trapp

SIX-YEAR-OLD Katherine Weinberg is a perfectly normal child, unspoiled, joyous and carefree, with a strong liking for jollypoos and ice-cream cones, but since last March Katherine, who was a pupil in the first grade of the Colfax School, a public school on Bloomingwood boulevard, Pittsburgh, has composed fifty poems. Poetry is her natural means of expression and almost everything she says seems like a quotation from a nature poet.

The child's gift has attracted considerable attention from Pittsburgh educators and their research has shown only one similar case in American pedagogy. That was Hilma Conkili, daughter of a Smith College professor, who began composing verse at the same age as Katherine. To add to the interest of Katherine's case, there is nothing in her own history or that of her parents to give a clue as to how the gift came or how it developed.

Outwardly the child differed not a whit from the fifty others her teacher put down in her rollbook except that Katherine was, and is, a greater child than the average. The classroom work for the first month developed nothing startling.

ONE day the teacher called for "stories." There was the usual hushful silence. Finally one youngster stuck up her hand and imparted the information that "Katherine knows a lot of stories." The teacher smiled encouragingly toward Katherine. Would Katherine oblige? The child called back, and walking to the front of the room, took her place in front of the blackboard. In a clear voice she told her little story:

"The sky is high, and we are low,
But God watches over us so."
The words were pronounced slowly with a distinct accent to emphasize the meter.

countryside. In those rambles Mrs. Weinberg had told the child something of the mystery and wonders of nature, all in simple language and certainly not in the language the child had employed in her classroom "stories" that day or as she told them in the weeks that followed.

Proud as the parents were of the child's newly discovered ability they were nevertheless worried. A poet in the family is often a dangerous thing, although not nearly so dangerous when the child is a girl instead of a boy, they thought. Mrs. Weinberg exacted a promise that Katherine must not be told of her venture; that under no circumstances should she be permitted to recite before strangers. That was done and by June 29 the teacher had a respectable body of verse accumulated.

At the time of the student assembly the collection included twenty-six poems, from two to twelve lines. A few of them rhyme and most of them are rhythmical when the child recites them.

The third poem she composed was as follows:

"Down, down, down,
Where do you get that sparkling little hue?
I see it on the grass blades, on the lilacs and on the roses too,
And when evening comes,
The sun sets, too."

Others composed from time to time follow:

"The beautiful green grass
With the green gown on,
I see the trace with their pretty green gown on,
The sun was shining bright that day,
And all the children were happy and gay."

"The green grass is growing and everything is green,
The blue sky is so blue,

and to the night, a silver moon lays on the edge of the world,
And the stars are sparkling in the blue sky,
up so high."

"We were swinging so high,
We touched the rim of the sky,
Where the angels and fairies go calling by."

The stars are just lit,
The moon up in the blue sky is hanging down like a lantern
up so high,
While the lantern is hanging up so high,
The stars sparkle,
The trees are sound asleep,
It is one, two from I see,
Kissing each other good-night,
I hear not a sound,
I just hear the wind blowing,
The leaves are falling down turning red,
I see there are no more flowers,
They have all snuggled their little heads in the ground
For their nice long winter sleep."

When I stroke my mother's cheek so softly,
She has a little warmer and says,
"Down, your stroke is like a rose petal
Which blooms in June,
And your hands smell just as sweet."

When the sun sets,
And night commences to lower,
The trees are their prayers,
And this is how they say it,
The leaves touch each other softly and gently,
And the soft and gentle warmth is their prayer,
And this is the way the grass blades say their prayer,
The winds blow, and their little hands touch each other.

And this is their soft and gentle prayer:
All things which God made
Is part of Nature.

I thought the earth was black,
But I found out it was brown,
I can't understand it, it looks to me that the earth is black,
I ask my mother every time,
Is the earth black, or is it dark brown?

People live for many years,
But not a hundred or a million years,
But people I know,
Wish they could live for a hundred or a million years.

THE foregoing verses are printed exactly as Katherine spoke them. They have not been revised or altered in any way, although the marks of punctuation, of course, were inserted by her teacher or her mother.

But the poems as they stand express the child's own language and imagery.

Lawrence McCann, a Pittsburgh poet, whose "Songs and Sonnets" a few years ago caused a stir among those critics who had previously been blind to anything spiritual coming out of the Western Pennsylvania metropolis, is most enthusiastic about the child's efforts.

"For one so young to grasp the universe and give expression to it in words of an imagination which defies analysis," Mr. McCann said, "it seems the things of the soul, the besting, almost intangible phases of nature, which give so much joy to the ordinary eye and which repose so shortly in the ordinary consciousness, remain to play with this child and speak the variable language until through the magic alchemy of her young fancy they get a local habitation and a name."
