JUDGE LANDIS QUILTS THE BENCH

OVERRULE MOTION TO QUASH INDICTMENTS

RECENT GRAND JURY LEGAL ONE IS THE DECISION OF JUDGE

NO ORDER WAS ENTERED BUT JUDGE NAPIER ANNOUNCES RULING.

MOTION IS FILED IN HUNTER RUSSELL CASE

Numerous Decisions Are Cited By Attorneys Interested In The Case.

Although no order was entered on the bench of the district court Saturday morning, Judge Napier, sitting on the bench of the district court Saturday morning, expressed himself that the motion to quash the indictment in the Hunter Russell case was void and annulled all of the 25 indictments returned by the last grand jury, should be overruled.

Attorney C. C. McDonald of the law firm of Weldon, McDonald and Taylor, who is representing the defense, said that the motion to quash the indictment should be granted. He said that the indictment was void because it was returned by a grand jury that was not properly constituted.

Attorney Mathis contended that the proper procedure in a case where a conviction has been obtained by a grand jury is to file a motion for a new trial, rather than a motion to quash the indictment.

The state's argument was that the defendant had slept on his rights and that the proper time to raise the issue at bar was before the grand jury was sworn in and impaneled.

Attorney Mathis contended that the state's argument was without merit and that the defendant had not slept on his rights. He said that the defendant had been denied a fair trial.

PRESIDENT ASKS ADVICE OF SENATE ON PATENTS TREATY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The senate foreign relations committee had before it today a message from President Harding asking the senate's advice on the question of receiving the patents treaty with Germany which automatically expired in 1917.

Although the president has formal request to revive by mere executive order the treaty which lapsed with the war, it would be desirable to have it renewed within six months of the ratification of the peace treaties, it was explained at the White House when the message was received.

Revival of the lapsed treaty would automatically restore the provision for reciprocity in the matter of protection of patents between the two countries. Officials generally held the view that it would have no immediate effect on German patents now held by this country, it being understood that the alien proper custodian intends to retain these until congress passed legislation covering them.

TO DROP CASE OF EMBEZZLEMENT IF SANDS SURRENDERS

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 18.—Investigators of the murder of William Desmond Taylor, film director, were waiting today to see if anything would be done to drop the case of Lee Woolwine, district attorney, charge preferred by his former employer, if Sands could prove himself innocent of the slaying.

Woolwine's announcement followed receipt of a letter supporting it to have been written by Sands. The writer stated he was in Los Angeles, was not guilty of the murder, and was willing to surrender if Sands could prove himself innocent of the slaying.

He asked the district attorney to publish his reply in any of the newspapers. Sands, through the public press, said he had no means of knowing whether the letter was genuine or not, but he would investigate the matter.

Woolwine said he had no means of knowing whether the letter was genuine or not, but he would investigate the matter. He said that he would not accept any bribe to drop the case.

U.S. TRADE BALANCE IS FOUR TIMES GREATER THAN PRE-WAR YEARS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—A world trade balance in 1921 favorable to the United States four times greater than the last pre-war year, notwithstanding a decline of 45 per cent in exports and 52 per cent in imports for 1921 over 1920, was announced yesterday by the department of commerce in a review of trade conditions.

The total export trade, the review said, fell from $5,228,000,000 in 1920 to $4,452,000,000 in 1921, while imports fell from $3,278,000,000 to $2,598,000,000 during the same period. This decline, it was explained, however, was more apparent than real, even when compared with the unprecedented trade of 1920, as values of exports and imports were inflated in 1920 and 1921 was a year of rapidly declining prices.

DISORDER BREAKS OUT IN CONVENTION OF MINE WORKERS

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 18.—Disorders broke out in the convention of the United Mine Workers of America today soon after the roll call of absentee votes in the Kansas case was begun, disclosing that the credentials committee had increased the eligible voting list by adding new names as delegates.

The disorder was at its height, Mother Jones, 42-year-old organizer of the union, made her way through the delegates to the stage and pleaded with them for order. The call of the absentees in the last nine districts, increased the attendance of the convention to 100, the total vote amounting to 100,000. It was announced that the official completion of the vote would not be completed before tonight but President Lewis stated that the report of the wage scale committee would be taken up in the afternoon session.

There are not enough hours in the day for all of my activities, said the judge. "Therefore, I have forwarded my resignation as federal judge to Washington, effective March 1." Then the judge called the first case on his docket and refused to discuss the matter until court recess.

The court adjourned the judge added but little to his one-sentence statement regarding his resignation. "There is all there is to it," said the judge. "There isn't time enough to do everything. I've worked hard. I've been getting up at 5 o'clock in the morning and going to work without lunch for two weeks."

Then too, a fellow is in a bad way when he wants to stay in bed in the day time," added the judge. He declared that was the way he felt now and he realized that some remedy must be found. He declined to answer a question as to whether adverse criticism of his holding the position of judge and also that of baseball commissioner caused his resignation.

Just let my statement stand," he said. "Seventeen Years as Judge." Judge Landis will have virtually completed 17 years as judge for the northern district of Illinois when his resignation becomes effective. Rumors of the resignation have been current for months and intimate friends have known for some time that the resignation was imminent. It has been generally understood that Judge Landis would have resigned some time ago but for the fact that he had been appointed to the post of chief justice of the state of Illinois.

On the verge of resigning when these things came up, the judge charged his plans, informing friends that he "could never resign under fire." Senator Dial had attacked the judge because of the latter's statement that bank officials sometimes committed the crime of robbing by boys because they did not pay adequate salaries. Senator Dial and Representative Welly of Ohio, later committed the crime of robbing by boys because they did not pay adequate salaries. Senator Dial and Representative Welly of Ohio, later committed the crime of robbing by boys because they did not pay adequate salaries.

Shortly before Dial robbed a local bank, Judge Landis had made his remark about salaries of bank clerks in the case of a young O'Leary, Ill. bank employee. Various newspapers quoted Dial as saying that he had committed the robbery because he felt, through Judge Landis' remarks, that nothing would be done to him. Dial never said this and it was a misquoting of his statement that he had never before heard of Judge Landis' remarks. The story had spread, however, and the judge was severely condemned as having made statements which were declared to have influenced Dial.

The judge became head of organized baseball shortly after the grand jury investigating into the 1919 world's series scandal. He was offered $50,000 a year to take the position and after several refusals, finally agreed under condition that he remain on the bench, too. He insisted that his salary be only $42,500, explaining that his judicial income would bring the total to $85,000.

Although 54 years old, Judge Landis has always been and is a boy at heart and a lover of all forms of sport. The baseball magnates urged him to resign, basing their plea on the fact that he was finally won over by the judge. The resignation from the federal bench takes from the federal bench one of the most respected judges in the country. His unique conduct in court, where he frequently took the case out of the lawyer's hands and took over the examination of witnesses himself, caused him to be feared by all law breakers. At the same time his reputation of administering justice, regardless of the technicalities of the law, brought him universal respect.

The old chief's eyes shifted uneasily.

"Why did you leave us?"
"To see my people and because of Crooked Lightning and his brother."

"Only the brother, and I killed him."
The dauntless man of the boy pleased the old man.

"I told you I would come when the leaves fall and I am here. Why is Crooked Lightning here? Why is the new prophet? Who is the woman? What has she done that she must die? What is the peace talk you wish me to carry?"

"The story of the prophet and Crooked Lightning is too long," he said wearily.

"I have spoken," said the old man. "I have spoken," said the boy.

"When you tried to stab me do you remember what I said? Erskine nodded contemptuously.

"Well, I repeat it. I'll fight you anywhere and in any way you please."

"Why not now?"
"This is not the time for private quarrels and you know it."

"I can wait—and I shall not forget. The day will come."

The old chief touched Erskine's shoulder as the angry youth rode away.

"I cannot make it out," he said. "He claims to represent an English for company. His talk is British but he told me when he was drunk that he could have a commission in the American army."

The council-fire was built. Three British agents sat on blankets and around them the chiefs were roused.

The burden of his talk varied very little.

"The American palefaces had driven the Indian over the great wall. They were killing his deer, his buffalo, and robbing him of his land and pushing him ever backward. They were many as they were become more."

and the prophet had already made use of the boy's threat to Kahtoo in the Shawnee town.

The old chief looked grave when the lad told the story of the council.

"The people are angry. They say you are a traitor and a spy. They say you must die. And I cannot help you. I am too old and the prophet is too strong."

"And the white woman?"
"She will burn."

"The white traders have been here. The white chief McGee sent me a wampum belt and I promised that she should live. But I cannot help you."

Erskine thought quickly. He laid his rifle down, stepped slowly outside and stretched his arms with a yawn.

Then still leisurely he moved toward his horse as though to take care of it. But the braves were too keen and watchful and they were not fooled by the fact that he had left his rifle behind.

FARM BLOC MAY DECIDE ON CLAPPER FOR NEW LEADER

KANSAS SENATOR REGARDED AS BEST QUALIFIED FOR THE TASK.

WILL SUCCEED KENYON WHO RECENTLY RESIGNED

Iowa Leader Quit Because He Was Worried of Opposing Colleagues.

By MARK SULLIVAN, National Political Correspondent of the New York Evening Post and Wichita Daily Times. (Copyright, 1922, by New York Evening Post.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 18.—The departure of Senator Kenyon somewhat leaves the farm bloc worse off for leadership. It is true Senator Kenyon was not a leader in the usual sense.

He turned over so that he could look through the tent flaps. Two bucks were driving a stake in the center of the space around which the lodges were ringed.

Erskine thought quickly. He laid his rifle down, stepped slowly outside and stretched his arms with a yawn.

Then still leisurely he moved toward his horse as though to take care of it. But the braves were too keen and watchful and they were not fooled by the fact that he had left his rifle behind.

yon, but not many others who command as much confidence as Kenyon did. There are several members of it more radical than Kenyon but none who inspire so much confidence on his judgment.

Leadership is largely an accident of personality. McNary of Oregon is fully as able as Kenyon, but McNary has not the same ability to qualify as an unusual senator, but he has not the steadily burning ambition that leads McNary to the top.

McNary is a senator of long experience but the rather extreme form of his radicalism would cause some members of the farm bloc to hesitate about accepting him as leader.

Probably the man who will come closest to stepping into Kenyon's shoes is the regular republican organization.

To be the leader of an insurgent movement against a regular organization takes unusual qualities. It is a disagreeable task in a double sense, and to carry it through involves willingness both to be disagreeable yourself and to endure disagreeableness from others.

It is commonly believed that one of the reasons for Senator Kenyon's willingness to quit lay in the fact that he was tired of being disagreeable.

Kenyon is a friendly and fairly gregarious person, and the long strain of standing out against the regular party leaders got on his nerves.

The leader of an insurgent movement is made aware every minute of every day in a thousand subtle ways that he has outlived himself and that he is not a part of his party's future.

He is outside the lodge, so to speak, and he is made to feel so constantly. That is the reason it happens occasionally that a man who merely starts out by leading a temporary rebellion ends by becoming a solitary and embittered man.

There is, at least, one example of this in the senate now. It was for this fate that Kenyon did not have the stomach.

His speech against Newberry, which was one of the latest and most conspicuous of his acts of insurgency, carried much evidence of how unpleasant to himself Kenyon felt his surgery to be.

When the case came up Kenyon said it would be much more agreeable to vote to secede Newberry, and that, if it was a matter of Newberry's fate alone, he would probably vote for him, but that it was a matter of principle and precedent.

His Position Grew Irksome.

There are men who enjoy this kind of rebellion and conspicuous standing out from the crowd, but Kenyon had moods when he didn't like it and it was in these moods that he longed for the peace and security of a federal judgeship.

Moreover, Senator Kenyon was friendly with his colleagues, the senior senator from Iowa, Cummins, and to Kenyon it was unpleasant to be continually voting on the other side from Cummins. By implication Kenyon was constantly saying in effect that Cummins was wrong. Cummins and Kenyon could not both be right.

To what extent President Harding and the regular republican organization hoped to profit or may profit by Kenyon's retirement remains to be seen. Probably not much. If there was any expectation that by depriving the farm bloc of its leadership it would be possible to destroy or greatly weaken the bloc, that expectation will probably be defeated.

The public interest in Kenyon's retirement, which has made it a national issue, has robbed the act of most of its possible benefit to the regular republican organization.

Just how much this motive may have figured with President Harding no one can tell. It is hard to be believed that Harding made Kenyon's federal judgeship out of love and affection solely. Harding does not have love and affection for men who fight his party organization as Kenyon does.

Harding seems to be a man who feels personally hurt by lack of party loyalty. He had that point of view long before he was president, back in the days of the progressive party. On the other hand, it is certain that Harding and the other party leaders did not invent the idea of offering a federal judgeship to Kenyon in order to get him out of the senate. Kenyon has longed for a federal judgeship for years.

It is not enough to accuse in the breasts of the general public pity for these unfortunate children. These conditions will never be righted to any considerable extent until an appeal is successfully made to an enlightened self-interest, until the American voter in mass is made to realize that the beet sugar industry is doing considerably more than its proportionate bit to thrust upon the country a new crop of misfit citizens physically malformed, neurotically abnormal, mentally dwarfed and unfit to play their part in ruling the future destinies of a democratic country.

ALL THE NEWS OF ALL THE SPORTS ALL THE TIME

UNIVERSITY CLUB AT LAST KNOCKED UNDER BY GAINES; LEGION BEATS METHODISTS

For the first time since the opening of the city league basketball season the fans apparently felt the ball thoroughly satisfied last night. Of course, all were not overjoyed, but those who were not were so far in the minority that they don't count. The reason for all this unbounded joy was a 17 to 15 victory by the Gaines Motor quintet over the hitherto undefeated University club. The crowd before no means one of the largest of the season, but its enthusiasm knew no bounds and when the final whistle blew, spontaneous applause and cheering stood up on their chairs, tossed hats into the air and yelled until it seemed as if the roof would cave in. The Gaines team was no more expected to play and fans alike that they could hardly realize it until the contest had been over several minutes.

The winners earned their victory and as Hill Viner said to the fans after the game, "The University club has only one ally. It was beaten fairly because it was overplayed from every angle and in every department. The Gaines team was a motor boys fought like maniacs and became so riled up at times that personal fouls were called on them. impartiality. Despite the roughness of the battle, personal venom among the opposing players was conspicuous by its absence. Good fellowship prevailed throughout the game as was evidenced by the cheer given the winners by the University club after the game—the first that has been given this season.

Ferguson Leads Legion

The fast floor work of "Smiler" Ferguson, and his accurate long shooting was responsible for the 50 to 21 victory chalked up by the legion over the Methodists. Time and again the legion flash raced up the floor dribbling through the entire Methodist team and passed to either Bremer or Rogers for easy baskets. Ferguson was in a position to shoot, "Smiler" usually took one himself and made it good. Bremer and Rogers also caught some fancy ones.

The first half ended with the legion leading by seven points. The Methodists were in the lead after the opening of the second period by quickly knotting the count, but their gameness availed them nothing as the legion forwards by the methodists were too loose and tossed in counters right and left. Captain Neal and Leo Baldwin excelled for the legion.

Abe Bremer had no opportunity to show his skill as a free shooter as the Methodists committed a personal or technical foul.

RADIO AND THE FUTURE FAN

The world do move. And the sport fan is usually leading the parade. The Chicago police are using the radio now to detect home breakers and unfriendly outsiders. The sport fan has been a couple of jumps ahead of the cops along the line. A lot of amateur radio-fans held conventions during the world series and spread the news by wireless to the waiting throngs. If this progress becomes a regular thing, the fan of the future will be the fan of the ball park. A wide path and the magazine will be omitted.

MARKETS

COTTON MARKET.

New York Cotton.—New York Cotton. Feb. 18.—Reflecting rather active support of March contracts 11 to 13 points net higher. Sentiment was bullish affected by the sale of 140,000 bales at the River and by rumors that progress toward an early settlement of the New England case was being made. The principal early sellers were Wall Street commission houses who were unloading March and May at the higher levels and there was a fair selling of some of the local traders under which prices eased off a few points from opening levels.

Near the close heavy speculative and trade buying developed advanced prices to new high levels for the movement with final prices 25 to 40 points net higher.

ACTING SECRETARY OF RUSSIAN RELIEF REPLIES TO HOOVER

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—Public men who stoop to play politics over the dead bodies and frozen forms of little children are no more to be respected than those international bankers who hold the bonds of the now destroyed and defunct czar's government, says a letter sent out today to members of the American committee for Russian famine relief. Walter T. Ligger, acting secretary of the committee, attributed the letter to Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce.

Billy Evans says

It wouldn't be at all surprising if 1922 produced some new pugilistic champions.

Rocky Kansas in his recent bout with Benny Leonard failed to wrest the championship, but he proved beyond a doubt that Leonard is not invincible.

It was the general impression among the fans that Leonard would win in a romp. Such was not the case. The Buffalo boy forced Leonard to show his best wares, to win.

Leonard is a pretty big lightweight. He is a little taller than the weight shows him up a bit. There are many who believe that Leonard would show to better advantage fighting a taller, heavier man than himself. It is understood he is to take another whirl at Jack Britton.

Johnny Kilbane is still the featherweight champion. He has held the title almost 19 years. That is itself very remarkable. Tex Rickard is now trying to have Kilbane risk his title in a bout at Madison Square with Charley Beecher.

A great many critics believe that the first good man Kilbane needs will be able to wrest the title from the champion. Many believe Dan Frush would do the trick, but there were so many unpleasant incidents connected with his career that it reflects no credit on the champion.

Dave Shadle, the welterweight of the three "Fighting Shades," is to get his chance at Jack Britton's crown tonight. Shadle will have a big following in the bout. There is a man who believes the coast boy is just the type of fighter to beat Britton.

The middleweight title of course is in doubt. For my part Bryan Downey is the champion. It is the fact that Johnny Wilson is generally recognized as the titleholder. If ever a fighter was knocked out, Wilson was that individual in his bout with Downey at Cleveland. He took the count not once, but three times.

Wilson isn't taking any chances meeting anybody. As a matter of fact, his boxing for him to appear in most of the states that permit boxing.

Johnny Buff is the bantam champion. However, if he ever meets Pal more to a decision, there is a chance for a change in the title. Moore was the unanimous choice of all the critics in the Milwaukee bout between those two fighters.

With several champions hanging on to the ropes, it wouldn't be at all surprising if several titleholders dropped their crown in 1922. Jack Dempsey and Benny Leonard seem to have the best hold on their crowns.

NATIONAL PASTIME HAS SLOWED UP SINCE THE WAR

Johnson Offers Observations as to Standard of Play Since He Entered A. L.

By WALTER JOHNSON.

Do you think the game has improved since the war? The American league in 1907?

That is a question that always starts an argument. Talk with the players and you will find that they insist the game has gone back. Speak to the star of 20 years ago and he will offer the same opinion. The only improvement for the players, to always believe the period in which they happened to be a star was the time when baseball was at its peak.

I am going to be a bit different from the ordinary run of opinion. I am going to say that the game has gradually improved from the time I entered in 1907 until about 1913 or 1914.

Then for various reasons it seems to me that the game started to slow up. When the United States got into the world war, yes a year or two before that, the game suffered a severe slump.

All players who have been in the American league from 10 to 15 years will frankly admit that the game was lower for the last four or five years. It doesn't seem to me that the game has improved since the war. The game has been playing at a lower level than it did. Few players now take any chances on the bases. Most batters are thinking of the old base hit, rather than the little trick of the ordinary.

I feel that the lively ball has done much to slow up the game as far as playing any of the old tricks. The game has been played with the ball, and the deeds of Babe Ruth, have caused all the hitters to place the healthy swing before the inside stuff. In addition the stimulation of freak pitching has further added to the confidence of the batters.

From the way the attendance records have broken in the last two years, however, it seems the public likes the slambang style of play.

QUERRY TODAY

How many hits is it possible to make in an inning without a run being scored? I understand that it is possible to make six hits, without a run going over the plate. Please explain.

It is possible to make six hits in an inning without a run being scored. The first batter triples but is thrown out at the plate trying to stretch it into a home run. The second batter also triples and is thrown out at the plate. The next three batters single, filling the bases. The sixth batter hits a grounder between second and third and strikes the runner going to third. That automatically retires the runner and makes the third out. It also entitles the batsman to a base on a run, but no runs can score on such a play.

BRITTON IN DRAW WITH DAVE SHADE

Champion Has Edge On Opponent In Opinion of Fistic Writers.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Jack Britton at 26 still is the master boxer and by virtue of that fact today retains the world's welterweight boxing championship. Last night in Madison Square Garden Britton met young David Shade of San Francisco, a courageous, able lad, in a 15-round match. The judges decided the contest a draw and that enabled Britton to retain his title.

In the majority opinion of fistic writers, Britton, however, is still the champion. The judges decided the contest a draw and that enabled Britton to retain his title.

YOUR REGULATOR.

When you went to school, you learned that water always seeks its own level. That's why mother's copper wash boiler leaks through the hole in the bottom. The water starts its journey back to the sea, soon as it gets a chance.

Sun evaporates ocean water. Moisture drifts inland, condenses and falls as rain. You see this rain when you stand beside a river. It is flowing—back to the sea, seeking its own level.

There you have the universal principle that governs all men and all conditions created by their stupidity or intelligence.

The average farm-hand's pay has dropped to $43.32 a month without board and $30.14 a month with board.

Uncle Sam's department of agriculture announces this. It points out that farm wage rates during 1921 dropped an average of 37 per cent.

That decline just about matched the drop in wholesale prices of food.

Observe the universal law at work—wages and prices seeking a common level.

Herbert Hoover furnishes tables, showing prices out of line. Some prices are twice as high as in 1913. Others have deflated to the pre-war level or below.

Gradually you'll see all prices meet at a common level. No one knows what that level will be. Prices extremely low now may rise to strike a medium with prices now extremely high.

Then, when equilibrium or balance is established, a business boom will start.

Ability is among the things that seek their own level, for the law of compensation is a natural force, as inescapable as the law of gravity.

That's why "you can't keep a good man down." That's why the incompetent is shouldered aside by a better man.

We have to pay for something in this world. And, in the long run, we get no more out of life than we give.

NOTHING IS IMPOSSIBLE.

Could you keep a fire burning under water? It has just been done, 50 feet under the surface of New York harbor.

Near Staten Island, a 36-inch steel water pipe on the floor of the ocean was smashed by a dredge. It had to be cut away.

Divers came up out of the muddy depths and reported that the water immediately extinguished their steel-cutting acetylene torches.

But an "underwater fire chisel" has been developed by a company that salvages submarine wrecks. This chisel was brought into play. As it burns, it generates a gas which forces back the water on all sides, leaving an open or hollow space for the flame.

That is scientific magic.

If the inventor had lived 500 years ago, his exhibition would have made even kings kneel to him in superstitious terror.

Suppose you were in the hands of enemies, about to be shot, and they told you, "We'll spare your life if you can light a fire under water and keep it burning."

Your answer probably would be, "It can't be done"—even though your life depended on it.

Yet it can be done, as in the device used under water near Staten Island, an electric spark starting the flame.

Learn from this that nothing is impossible. Archimedes, who discovered the principle of the fulcrum, said he could move the earth if some one gave him a fulcrum, a long enough lever and something away from the earth to stand on.

Nothing was impossible, to Archimedes. Yet, if he'd been asked to weigh the earth, he probably would have said it couldn't be done unless he had a big enough pair of scales and a star to rest them on.

Modern scientists, with a delicate mechanism which measures the attractive power of lead and other elements, have discovered that the earth is about six times as heavy as an equivalent bulk of water.

Thus the earth has been accurately weighed—found to tip the scales at 6000 billions of billions of tons.

Such staggering achievements should inspire all troubled and discouraged people. All problems can be solved. The solution is found by the one who never gives up the fight, who refuses to recognize the phantom, defeat.

LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE DISCUSSES THE "MOVIE" LIFE IN HOLLYWOOD

Louis Joseph Vance, famous novelist and playwright, has written especially for NEA Service, Times special expose life in Hollywood's motion picture colony. He tells why he believes the real life of movie folk is abnormal.

Many of Vance's stories have been put on the screen under his personal direction. During the past seven years he has spent much time in Hollywood, and at a time headed his own motion picture company.

Out of those greatest fame came with "The Brass Bowl," "Joan Thursday" and "The Lone Wolf"—has written his latest novel around life in Hollywood. It is "The Coast of Cockaigne," now running serially in McCall's magazine, and to be published shortly in book form under the title "Linda Lee, Inc."

This novel practically forecast many sensational aspects of moviedom as revealed in real life by the William Desmond Taylor tragedy.

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE Copyright, 1922, NEA Service, Inc. It was the author's first day in the troubled city didn't know how troubled—waters of motion picture making; and because he fondly believed "the author of his own life" ought to be of some use to the producer other than as a name to be shown on the main title, he consented to let the publisher, Mr. L. J. Williams, take him to Hollywood and make him helpful in the studio. He was very green.

The New York office of the producing company endorsed the suggestion with enthusiasm and handsomely offered to pay his transportation to "the coast." In those days producers, too, were green.

Since then both have learned that nobody is more welcome when he "lots" than an author, except a man with a virulent case of smallpox. The author and his wife arrived in Los Angeles on a blistering Sunday evening in August. Four nights on a train in such weather had left them gritty and sticky and hot. They were indulging fond anticipations of a hot bath and a cool bed each.

It was not to be. A representative of the studio manager met them at the station and informed them that the manager himself had graciously arranged a supper in honor of the author, that he might make the acquaintance of the company. There was no time for even a bath.

At the hour appointed the company put in appearance. The manager was a small, swart, frisky body with a pronounced beak and a phosphorescent smile. He loved everybody and everybody loved him. He wasn't pawing the women he was winding an arm round the waist of some one of the men.

He announced that, as a treat, he had arranged to have the author and his wife accompany him after supper to a neighboring church where the itinerant preacher would be addressing the congregation on the morals of the motion picture colony!

The company trailed along. Their entrance, in the middle of the service, created some sensation. It was not a fashionable congregation and the high-pitched, treasured folk have brought. This attitude of the outside Hollywood world, the colony of picture folk, is not to be taken as a sign of small traders and middle-class Americans, such as made up the audience of their regular, but they have been tolerant less through ignorance than because they prize the property which the motion picture people have brought. be all that is asked of them is that they shall faithfully do their part toward providing the public with amusement.

Men and women the world over, being mortal flesh, are prone to misconduct. But people in private life live in deadly fear of public opinion, which requires but slight provocation to work their social and often their financial ruin.

It is only when sense of power derived from possession of great wealth or otherwise, makes them arrogant, that they assert their independence of public opinion by openly affronting it.

Public Opinion in Hollywood Motion picture in common with other professional people acquire some of this sense of power through the tendency of their popularity as entertainers; and in such communities as the Hollywood of the movies, public opinion is lenient.

MILLIONS MORE STARVING TO DEATH IN RUSSIA, SAYS NANSEN, THE EXPLORER

FRIDTJOF NANSEN

By DR. FRIDTJOF NANSEN, Arctic Explorer and Russian Relief Worker, Who Recently Returned From the famine-stricken Volga Region in England. (In an interview in London with Milton Eroner, Correspondent of NEA Service.)

LONDON, Feb. 17.—To come back to the lands of plenty after being in famine-stricken Russia is like waking from a terrible nightmare. The American people have been generous and prompt in aiding Russian famine sufferers, but they can't possibly visualize the extent of the calamity.

The lands along the great River Volga, where famine followed drought, have an area and population approximately equal to that of all France.

Of these people the great number of nineteen millions is directly menaced with death and millions—no matter what frontier exists—must now be doomed to die.

Every time the clock ticks dozens of wasted skeletons, that were once men and women and children, are found lying dead.

More Desolate Than the Arctic. I am telling you what I have seen. When you enter the lands of famine-stricken Russia, the very hills have a haunted look of hunger. It conveys a greater sense of desolation than the Arctic ice fields.

Many of the hamlets have lost two-thirds of their population. And those who survive—in some in fifth-starving, freezing, all hope gone, conserving as best they may the precious spark of life, can look forward only to one thing—the release that death brings.

In Buzuluk I saw a pile of stiff frozen corpses lying in the cemetery awaiting burial. The weary imagined they could do as they pleased—and the public be damned.

Girls Crowd Studios Ready to Pay. Furthermore, such salaries were offered and paid for work that required no more of the "blatant" than ability to "scream" and "dramatic" gestures invented by the director, youth and beauty flocked like moths to the glare of the lights and, when it found money and in homes of waiting, to start with its bodies the price of a star.

During my brief career as a motion picture producer, in Los Angeles in 1915 I heard often and again girls whose dress and manner indicated that they had been brought up in homes of waiting, to start with its bodies the price of a star.

Is isn't in human nature to resist such temptations. Neither is it to be denied that the invitation to irregular moral relations in this last related instance didn't come from old women in the picture business, but from inexperienced beginners, many of them young women drawn from that very class which holds up its hands in holy horror of the goings-on of picture folk in Hollywood.

No Mental Recreation for Real-World People. Vainly and greedily are cardinal motifs of human psychology, and they know no law other than fear.

In Hollywood, there was, for long, nothing to fear.

There was and is, moreover, a danger and a fear. Picture people lead active lives, much of the time in the open, storing up energy that must find some outlet; especially in the dry and stimulating climate of southern California is this true. Few of them lead mental lives of any consequence, few are readers or students, such as his apologists claim Taylor to have been.

When their day's work is done they must find something in the way of recreation. And in Los Angeles there is little to do after nightfall but "go to the movies"—a pastime that falls even upon a movie actor unless he happens to be in the picture on exhibition.

Otherwise one may motor down to Venice or Santa Monica to one of the restaurants that cater to a dance-mad generation. If one does, one finds oneself in the same social atmosphere as at the studios.

For folks like me, monotony makes itself felt as a strange expedient, even to unholiness ones.

Alcohol and Drugs as "Cures" for Ennui. There is a great deal of mixed drinking done in private in Hollywood, and the consumption of large quantities of alcohol is not confined to the same social relations between man and woman.

And when alcohol loses its novelty, weaker souls turn to drugs in the quest for some new thing.

One of the best beloved of motion picture stars once told me in the presence of her husband, of a motor tour which she had taken with a party of picture people exclusively in two cars, a trip into Mexico lasting over a period of several days. She said that on the first night they spent away from

"A month ago I was in the famine-stricken Regions of the Volga. I saw there human suffering and death on a scale which it is impossible even to imagine unless you have seen it with your eyes. I saw, too, the magnificent work of the American Relief Administration. Some say the world may know the full total of what it owes to Mr. Hoover and his helpers. I appeal with all my heart to the great American people to support the great work of charity which they are doing." Fridtjof Nansen

World May Keep Disease at Bay. If the people of the world are cold and pallid to the sufferings of starving Russia this winter, they may face a terrible harvest of disease and death in their own homes next summer and fall.

Four months ago I begged the civilized nations of the world represented in the Assembly of the League of Nations to do something.

Millions have died because my appeal fell on deaf ears. The chance of helping the survivors have become less since then. The Volga and other river ways are now frozen. The Russian railways are now hopelessly paralyzed.

But I am sure of these handicaps we can do much if we do it promptly. We must send grain to keep the people alive and we must send seed, traction and tools so that the survivors may do their own work in the spring.

Spain Region Must Be Put on Feet. Unless we do this, the great granary of Russia will become a depository of death. Russia cannot export food, Russia cannot buy a market for the surplus goods, with the Volga region has once more become a granary.

It is, therefore, not only charity, but also a matter of self-protection against epidemics of disease.

Every kind of distrust of our work has been created by the spreading of shameful lies.

Lies were invented about my agreement with the soviet government, about the looting of relief trains, about how the soviet responded to our efforts.

I should like to meet the men responsible for these lies. I should like to take them to the Volga, to show them the death of children, the trembling mothers, the dead and the dying—worse than any battle field.

I think I would leave upon their souls a weight of guilt they would bear with them throughout their lives to their deathbeds—and beyond.

The above picture, taken in Russia, shows Dr. Nansen undertaking the arduous task of relief work. Below is a far-similar one of an appeal by Nansen to his own handwriting, for a more bold from America. (Copyright, 1922, NEA Service.)

"What Shall We Call Him?" Probably Eve Asked This Question First, and, Doubtless Adam Objected to Her Choice of Labels, But Eve Had Her Way As Do Mothers Today

Copyright, 1922, by Public Ledger Company

OF COURSE the recent arrival in the Endor household was very, very welcome; that much is certain. In fact, the energetic debate which was disrupting the wonted quiet of the home was with a view to the later well-being of the little citizen who stared vacantly at the ceiling and made faces. He had patiently waited about the premises for a month now, notwithstanding which he had not yet been dignified by a title. And that was what all the discussion was about.

"What, my dear?" protested the professor, "think of the depressing commonplaceness of William! The whole world is overrun with Williams, from the Conqueror down to our honored—"

"What are you doing, dear?" "Burning an error at the stake," the professor responded

He had reached the same place in his lecture, when he stopped suddenly with an amazed and troubled expression, made an altogether unsatisfactory attempt to take up again the thread of his discourse, and announced curtly, "The class is dismissed."

He had reached the same place in his lecture, when he stopped suddenly with an amazed and troubled expression, made an altogether unsatisfactory attempt to take up again the thread of his discourse, and announced curtly, "The class is dismissed."

"Clearly it is unthinkable," resumed the professor finally. "That our boy should grow up with such a name—not to mention the evil but too often potent effect of incident suggestion—well, not—my dear, under the stress of circumstances permit me to stink to the undignified level of argot—not on your life!"

IT HAS always been a mystery to the professor that, notwithstanding his established theories and fairly well established practice with regard to concentration, certain times there be when vagrant thoughts intrude without any apparent or discoverable reason. He has numerous cuff-cards bearing data in relation to these phenomena. Cuff-cards, it may be stated for the convenience of lexicographers, are memorandum-bearing cuffs cut to the proper fitting size; a simple expedient whereby the labor of transcription to library cards is obviated, albeit they come higher by the hundred. One of these deliriums upon the waves of thought got across the professor's bows that morning. He stopped at the very crisis of his lecture, with a pained and surprised expression; tried to proceed, became aware that he was presenting the subject in a way which would read strangely in his pupil's notes, and summarily dismissed the class, fifteen minutes ahead of time. He caught the next car for his home.

FROM the West to the sea, following the running races, had come Shenagolden, sometimes of Kilmallock, on a pilgrimage of hate, and, as the miles grew less between him and Rodney Hughes, he felt physical satisfaction in letting his rage uncurbed in his heart. For many years, for many reasons, his anger had burned low, perfect, lest he himself be consumed. Out of work and discredited, because of the lie that had nearly broken his heart, he was kept from being a murderer only because his enemy had gone where he had no money to pursue. When the water no longer separated him from Hughes, it was months before he located his old employer, the trail leading to the Golden Gate, back to Memphis, down to New Orleans, up to the Chicago Derby, and now, bound Eastward, beckoned by the name he had printed in a Turf Journal, his revenge seemed in sight.

Shenagolden's Magic—By Florence Seyler Thompson

SHENAGOLDEN turned away, furies raging in his heart. Thwarted again, when every nerve tingled with the longing to kill!

SUDDENLY Jim Lind, catching his gaze, sprang from the knot of perspiring men about the frantic brute, clutched Shenagolden by the arm, and panting and breathless, exclaimed to the lady:

THE fact that Shenagolden's pilgrimage of hate came to such a peculiar and perhaps accounted for by the other fact that Terence had one eye that was blue, though the other was brown.

Metropolis, Illinois.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it is all I claim to be and has benefited me wonderfully. I had been sick for eight months with a terrible which confined me to my bed and was only able to be up part of the time, when I was advised by a friend, Mrs. Smith, to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills. I was so much benefited by the use of these medicines that I was able to be up and about in two weeks. I was at the Change of Life when I began taking the medicines and I passed over that time without any trouble. Now I am hale and hearty, do all my housework, washing, ironing, scrubbing, and cooking, all there is to do about a house, and can walk two or three miles without getting too tired. Powers will have for his evening subject, at 7:30, "A Call for a Woman." Rev. Powers says: "This will be mothers and daughters night at our church, and my sermon will be directed to them. However, nothing will be said that should not be heard by every mother and daughter, regardless of age. In the morning I will pass cards to each and every girl in the junior and intermediate departments of the Sunday school, having them answer two questions: 'What do you like most about your mother?' and 'What do you like most about your father?' Answers to these questions will be read at the evening service. Men are cordially invited to be present. The First Baptist church has a chorus choir numbering 40 voices and is regarded by visitors from other parts of the state as the best talent of Wichita Falls. Under the direction of Mr. Vaughn Ray, excellent musical programs are rendered at each service. Sunday morning, the soloist will be Miss Elizabeth Hamilton, who will sing "How Long Will Thou Forget Me." The choir will sing as the special anthem, "The Lord is Exalted." For the evening, Mrs. Louella Thompson, soloist at the Southern Baptist cathedral, Dallas, Texas, will render the principal solo. The choir will sing "Jerusalem" by Parker. In addition, a new male quartet will make their first appearance at Wichita Falls. The quartet is composed of R. Vaughn Ray, first tenor; Ivan Murchison, second tenor; Charles H. Angles, baritone; and William E. Young, bass. This quartet is a permanent organization, and will sing regularly at the First Baptist church.
