

THREATEN MEXIA WITH A MORE PRONOUNCED MARTIAL LAW STRIKE OF 500,000 COAL MINERS ON APRIL FIRST IS FORECAST LITTLE PROSPECTS FOR A SOLDIER BONUS AT AN EARLY DATE

GOVERNOR INSISTS ON ASSURANCES OF LAW ENFORCEMENT

GIVES MEXIA CITIZENS COMMITTEE UNTIL NEXT FRIDAY NIGHT. MAKES IT PLAIN THAT HE MEANS BUSINESS

Total of 828 Arrests Have Been Made During Martial Law. MEXIA, TEXAS, Feb. 18.—Martial law will be extended in Limestone county to give the military full authority, a provost marshal to replace the sheriff and other military authorities to replace other civil authorities, unless citizens committees are able to carry out the drastic suggestions made by Governor Neff here today, it was announced.

The citizens committees must "positively convince" the governor that the laws can and will be enforced here by next Friday night, according to the governor's proposition. The governor made it plain that he desires "to keep with in the law in enforcing the law" and that he expects the people to work out their own salvation as far as possible. However, he declared, he was prepared to see that all laws are enforced by strict martial law if necessary.

"You have only quitted at martial law of counties with which it will be if the people are not able to establish and maintain law here," the governor said. "I regret the first speaker expressed regret that he had not received fullest co-operation from certain county officials, although he complimented co-operation from the city authorities.

Military judges advocate. Major Mendenhall, presented results of investigations, describing open lawlessness that existed here with heavily armed outposts at leading dispensaries. He said, was backed by sworn statements with the exception of a statement from a former hotel manager, charged with operating a gambling house and saloon, who alleged he paid $250 a day for permission to operate. This statement, Major Mendenhall said, was in writing by Sunday.

Governor Neff, following charges of a general strike, Major Mendenhall, deplored conditions and declared that "when officers sense to serve the people they must not be deterred by the law. It is either to enforce the law it is either because he lacks the ability or doesn't want to make good. Crims, he said, are not to be deterred by the law. He said, for the people and their officers to take a strong stand for law enforcement.

Governor Neff explained steps leading to martial law, the work that has been done and declared that he would not be deterred by locally-constituted officers until he has been assured that conditions will not revert back to what they were.

MINERS FORMULATE WAGE DEMANDS AND CLOSE CONVENTION

PROVIDES FOR SIX-HOUR DAY AND A FIVE-DAY WEEK. PLAN ABOLITION OF AUTOMATIC PENALTY

By FRID G. JOHNSON United Press Staff Correspondent. INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Feb. 18.—A strike of 400,000 American coal miners in the nation was ordered by the United Mine Workers convention here late today, subject to a referendum providing mine owners refuse to continue existing wage scales after that date.

Other demands formulated by the convention which the operators must meet to avert a strike vote call for: A six hour day and five day week. Time and half pay for overtime work with double time for Sunday and legal holiday work. Weekly pay for miners. Abolition of the automatic penalty clause from wage agreements with the operators.

Demand of anthracite miners for a 20 per cent wage increase and other policies outlined in the Shampokin, Pa., meeting were approved. The convention adjourned amid a general ovation and the operators' demands and left the impending wage fight in the hands of President John L. Lewis and other international officers.

Possibilities of an interstate wage conference with mine operators were admittedly assessed by the nature of the policies adopted. The convention, however, instructed international officers to extend another invitation to the operators to refuse as they have in the past, the strike vote will be taken before the end of the convention, which expires at midnight, March 21.

"If such a vote becomes actually necessary it will favor a suspension of the convention," it is understood the six hour day, five day week demand will support the anthracite policy for an eight hour day and five day week and hard coal miners in virtually the same position as the bituminous men except as to wage matter.

Union delegates at the 1,200 delegates that the future of the union would be in jeopardy if recommendations of the scale committee were adopted and the ground were not upheld. The miners' scale committee which entered negotiations with operators following the 1918 convention in Cleveland, lost a bitter fight for a six hour day and five day week.

WEATHER FORECAST FOR COMING WEEK

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Weather predictions for the week ending Friday, Feb. 24, are: West Gulf states: Considerable cloudiness; temperature above normal; local rains at evening of the week and again about Thursday.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Supply of hydro-electric power for municipal and industrial purposes throughout the region within transmission distance of Muscle Shoals, Ala., estimated by engineer experts at 403 miles, was promised tonight by Thomas V. Martin, president of the Alabama Power company, in the event congress accepts the offer of that company for purchase and lease of the shoals project.

Mr. Martin issued a formal statement in which he pointed out that the offer to operate at Muscle Shoals under a federal government power act obligated the company to function as a public utility "bound to serve everyone without discrimination, either in rates or in service."

The statement further said that a wide demand existed in the south for increased power facilities and that the company was prepared to make the offer. Mr. Martin said assurances had been received from a number of important industrial enterprises that if the power from this development becomes available to the public, important industries will be established near plants and factories.

In that connection, he said, "we have carefully considered the large gathering for a public meeting to be held here in the city of New Orleans, Louisiana, New Orleans and Mobile as well as the economic advantages of supplying power to the important industrial purposes in the states of Georgia and North and South Carolina."

The only article he took with him was his .32 caliber revolver, the same style of weapon as that which fired the bullet that killed Taylor, but his room were found three cartridges exactly like the one that was fired into Taylor's body. They are of a kind manufactured 15 years ago.

The tax driver answered the description of the man Mrs. Douglas Maclean saw leaving the Taylor home. In searching the missing man's room, police detectives found a cap like that of the man Mrs. Maclean saw. The tax driver, who had been habitually wore a muffer, an article that Mrs. Maclean noticed on the neck of the man seen by her.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., Feb. 18.—Information that Esteban Cantu, former governor-dictator of Lower California, and reputed to be the head of the Oroquieta faction, had arrived in Los Angeles tonight drew consternation into the ranks of the local Obregon supporters.

Gen. Macias, commander of the northern district of Lower California, revoked leaves of absence given of officers and soldiers of Lower California towns.

At the same time, the United States department of justice, immigration and customs and border forces, numbering about 300, were told to be on the look out for the probable presence of amulets and ammunition, or agitators across the border.

Late today a hasty "council of war" was held by Governor Lugo, General Macias and Rodriguez and Colonel Armenta.

Precautionary measures were discussed to check any revolutionary movement, either against Lower California alone, or simultaneously all along the border.

MAY PROVIDE FOR A FEDERAL BUILDING FOR WICHITA FALLS

He pointed out that no such measure had passed congress since 1913 and that work on all public buildings has practically ceased, all appropriations being exhausted.

He said that if such a bill is reported, doubtless would contain authorization for the new federal building at Wichita Falls.

TELLS HOW RURAL DELIVERY PATRONS CAN HELP SERVICE

By direction of the post office department, postmasters throughout the country have recently made an inspection of the rural routes from their offices. The purpose was that they might ascertain by personal observation and make report whether the roads used were in good condition for travel, the routes well arranged, boxes properly erected, so as to be easily reached by the carriers without difficulty and without obstructing travel, the carriers serving their routes as efficiently prescribed, the schedule observed, and whether the families served were satisfied with the service rendered, or there were improvements which could be suggested in the interest of the patrons or the department. Concerning the communication, a statement says:

"It became necessary, in connection with the inspections, to request many patrons to take action to the end that their boxes might conform with the regulations as to kind, condition, location, or height, and in having the name of the owner plainly printed on them. Also, to bring to the attention of road overseers or other responsible persons the need for improvement in roads or repairs or construction of culverts or bridges.

"It is the desire of the department, and its purpose, to provide adequate and convenient service, so far as may be possible, to all persons residing in rural communities, but this end can not be attained without the full cooperation of the patrons in the efforts of postmasters and carriers to serve them promptly, regularly and satisfactorily.

"Whatever facilities the work of the carrier is of direct benefit to the patrons, for the greater the ease and speed with which a carrier may cover his route the earlier and better the service afforded.

"Patrons of rural delivery can greatly help themselves by keeping their carrier, seeing to it that roads are kept in good condition and promptly opened after storms, by keeping the approaches to their boxes clear, and by promptly and willingly correcting any irregularities affecting their boxes when asked to do so.

"Another great assistance that patrons can render carriers is by keeping themselves supplied with and using stamps instead of placing un-stamped mail, with money for the purchase of the required postage, in the boxes. This delays the carrier and sometimes imposes a great hardship on him, especially in cold or stormy weather. If preferred, stamped envelopes, either printed or plain, may be obtained from the carrier, are of good quality, and cost but little more than the value of the stamps upon them, and are redeemable at the value of the stamps if damaged, but returned in a practically whole condition. If necessary to place money in a box, it should be put in a coin-holding receptacle or the money wrapped so as to be easily picked up by the carrier.

"Money for the purchase of money orders should not be left in the boxes, but should be handed to the carrier and a receipt obtained."

Burl Bryant, county superintendent of schools, returned to his office Saturday after several days' absence.

"There Room for Improvement in Our Present Educational System?" will be Dr. Goldberg's subject. He has devoted considerable study to educational questions, and articles from his pen on this subject have appeared in some of the leading magazines.

An entertaining musical program, arranged by F. F. Leow, is also announced for Tuesday's luncheon.

WARNS AGAINST TAMPERING WITH FIRE ALARM BOXES

A twenty-five dollar fine and 90 days in jail is the prospect facing a few adventurous youngsters if they are caught tampering with fire alarm boxes scattered throughout the city, according to Fire Chief J. L. McClure, who reported Saturday that several instances had been found lately where boys had opened alarm boxes just "to see what was inside."

The juvenile inspectors do not go through the formality of turning in an alarm, the chief stated, but they do cause considerable trouble by opening the door and throwing the delicate mechanism out of line.

The penalty provided above is the maximum provided by law.

FORD RUNS 57 MILES ON GALLON OF GASOLINE

A new automatic Vaporizer and Decarbonizer, which in actual test has increased the power and mileage of Ford's from 25 to 50 per cent, and at the same time saves the every particle of carbon from the cylinder is the proud achievement of John A. Stransky, 219 South Main Street, Parkview, South Dakota. A remarkable feature of this simple and inexpensive device is that its action is governed entirely by the motor. It is slipped between the carburetor and intake manifold and can be installed by anyone in five minutes without prearing or tapping. With it attached, Ford cars have made from 40 to 57 miles on one gallon of gasoline. Mr. Stransky wants to place a few of these devices on cars in this territory and has a very liberal offer to make to anyone who is able to handle the business which is sure to be created wherever this marvelous little device is demonstrated. If you want to try one, entirely at our risk, send him your name and address today.—adv.

GOVERNOR NEFF HAS ISSUED A HEALTH WEEK PROCLAMATION

By the governor of the state of Texas:

Whereas, smallpox is raging to the north of us, and is being transmitted promiscuously over the state, and

Whereas, our sister republic to the south is reporting yellow fever, typhus and bubonic plague, and

Whereas, plague infected rats are being trapped in Texas, and

Whereas, typhoid fever continues to take its toll in unusual numbers, and

Whereas, diphtheria, pneumonia and influenza are on the increase in this state, and

Whereas, malaria infected over two hundred thousand Texans last year, impairing their productiveness and causing an economic loss of millions, and

Whereas, the death rate of infants exceeds the normal ratio, and

Whereas, contaminated foods and drinks are being dispensed in many places in this state, and

Whereas, the capacity of state institutions for the blind, feeble minded and insane are being over-taxed, and

Whereas, tuberculosis still continues to lead the list of causes for death, and

Whereas, the sanitary conditions of some of our communities have become almost intolerable, and

Whereas, quarantine laws are being violated, and

Whereas, an indifference is being shown in the enforcement of health and sanitary laws, and

Whereas, heroic measures are necessary to stop this preventable human loss of 14,000 per annum, and

Whereas, the welfare and happiness of our Texas citizenship is largely dependent upon health,

Now, therefore, I, Pat M. Neff, governor of Texas, at the request of the state health officer, do hereby proclaim the week beginning Sunday, March 5th, 1922, as

Health week, designating:

Sunday, March 5th, Health and Welfare day.

Saturday, March 11th, Education and Child Welfare day.

To be observed by every individual, schools, churches, clubs, organizations, and officials of municipalities.

In testimony whereof, I hereunto sign my name and have caused the seal of the state to be affixed at the city of Austin, this 15th day of February, A. D. 1922.

Pat M. Neff, governor of Texas.
By the governor (Signed) E. L. Staples, secretary of state.

NO FURTHER LIGHT RECEIVED HERE ON MISSISSIPPI CASE

A continued investigation by the police Saturday failed to develop further information of importance bearing on the reported murder and cremation in Hialehurst, Miss., of Mrs. Thomas P. Converse, believed to have formerly been Miss Ada Drury of this city. The aid of local officials has been enlisted by Hialehurst police in an effort, thus far futile, to unravel the mystery presented by the finding of the partially burned body.

In a telegram received by City Detective Jack Miller Saturday afternoon a complete description of both Converse and his wife was requested by the Mississippi authorities. Miller wired back what information he was able to glean from a questioning of former acquaintances of the two, but stated Saturday night that this was rather incomplete.

According to Texas state highway records, the license plate on an automobile in which the dead woman is said to have worked in Hialehurst was issued several years ago to a George Hunter of Dallas. This and the fact that Converse is known to have worked in a Virginia textile mill last September are

Don't Want Girls To Divert Minds Of Men Employees

DAYTON, OHIO, Feb. 18.—Girls employed by the National Cash Register company are not going to divert the minds of male employees from their work. They have been asked by the company to forego bobbed hair, short skirts and—it is whispered—silk hose and peck-a-boo waists.

Not that efficiency has not prevailed at the plant and the N. C. R. girls are not the best in the country, but—"we had to call a halt—didn't want to make the plant a peck-a-boo parlor," said one high official.

There were no casualties. Aside from these disturbances the day passed quietly.

RECEIVES A TELEGRAM OF ENCOURAGEMENT

DUBLIN, Feb. 18.—Arthur Griffith today received a telegram of encouragement from the provisional government from Martin H. Glynn, former governor of the state of New York.

Mr. Griffith, who is in the city on a mission, was informed of the telegram by Mr. Hearne, of Westfield, Mass., treasurer of the Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic.

There was no movement of troops from Dublin today, but it is believed the evacuation will be resumed next week.

TRAFFIC COP HANDS BOB WAUGH GOOD LACING

SHREVEPORT, La., Feb. 18.—Bobby Waugh, Fort Worth boxer, and traffic policeman and William West, this afternoon were charged with disorderly conduct which followed a fist fight which resulted in medical attention being given.

The encounter, it was said, was the result of a recent contact between Waugh and Young Wallace, in which West, who was refereeing, gave the latter the decision.

PLAN TO SELL FLEET ON ADVANCING MARKET

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—By offering its entire fleet for sale at this time the shipping board expects in the event of passage of the ship subsidy plans to be submitted to congress to sell the vessels on a rising market.

It is said today by shipping board officials in connection with the announcement that bids would be received until March 14.

TWO MEN ARE DETAINED PENDING INVESTIGATION

MEMPHIS, TENN., Feb. 18.—Two men, both said to be residents of this city, were being detained by the police today pending the completion of an alleged attempt to forge a will purported to have been signed by "Mary Ann Easton," disposing of an estate in Brooklyn valued at half a million dollars.

The men were taken into custody while in conference with a Memphis attorney who had been called by police inspectors to attend the meeting.

A woman also was a party to the gathering in the lawyer's office, according to the police, as an "old friend" of the woman whose estate was at issue.

INVITATION MEANS SOVIET RECOGNITION

Opinion is Held by Karl Radek in Discussing Genoa Conference

By Associated Press. BERLIN, Feb. 18.—The invitation to Soviet Russia to send representatives to the Genoa conference is equivalent to recognition of Russia and an indication that the entente will refrain from intervening in bolshevik internal affairs.

In the opinion of Karl Radek, soviet representative in Berlin, as expressed in an article published by the Rote Fahne (Red Flag) today, Mr. Radek says the entente no longer speaks of stipulations hitherto proposed and he interprets this as proving that the entente powers are willing to recognize that 150,000,000 Russians "are not Congos or unproductive reserves" to their treasury.

He also argues that the question of recognition of the old Russian imperial debts is more legal than material, since Russia, like the other war-worn powers, will have no resources for some years to come. The question is what credits the powers are ready to grant to Russia to assist in reconstruction, he says.

AWAIT EXPLANATIONS OF THE NEGOTIATIONS

First Test of Strength Will Come During the Present Week's Consideration.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Despite the pressure of both republicans and democrats for prompt action, congress is developing within the foreign relations committee which may lead to a long committee dispatch of the arms conference treaties before any of them are brought to the senate floor for ratification.

Some members of the committee predicted today that the effort to obtain a detailed expenditure of the conference agreements, the four-power pacific treaty would in itself become an element of considerable delay. Afterward at least four proposed reservations to the treaty, which is first on the list, seem likely to come before the committee before any of the arms conference agreements are brought to the senate floor for ratification.

The party leaders on both sides of the chamber are satisfied that the negotiations will be conducted in no way endangering ratification of any of the treaties, but they are watching with manifold interest the progress of the negotiations.

Thus far there is no evidence that any closely knit anti-treaty bloc has been organized. The first test of strength in the committee may come during the coming week over a proposal to further pursue the negotiation of the four-power treaty negotiations.

President Harding is expected to initiate negotiations with the response to its resolution of inquiry, that no minutes of the negotiations were kept, but it is indicated tonight that the minutes will not be acceptable to some committee members and that an effort might be made to summon Secretary Hughes to the senate.

Both Senators Lodge and Underwood, who are members of the delegation, have told their colleagues that virtually all the four-power negotiations were carried on in the normal meetings of the "big four" delegation heads and those who want information argue that the minutes should be made public.

THE EXACT PURPOSES OF THE DEMOCRATIC PLAN IS MATTER OF CONJECTURE.

Senator Underwood, as democratic leader, is confident that some democratic votes will be recorded against the normal meetings of the "big four" delegation heads and those who want information argue that the minutes should be made public.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1922
THE SHIP SUBSIDY NEXT.

The announcement has been made that the administration will propose a ship subsidy and that the republican majority in congress will support it.
It is estimated that the subsidy will cost the government between $30,000,000 and $35,000,000 annually which will come from individuals and corporations already heavily taxed.

The creation and operation of the merchant marine was a costly experiment. It was a war measure and did greatly help to win the war. But as much as the public is dissatisfied with the manner in which the merchant marine has been handled it is extremely doubtful whether they will approve a government subsidy to the ship owners.

The Houston Post in discussing the proposal says:
"Considered from the standpoint of political morality or economic expediency, the proposed soldiers' bonus is a measure of unadulterated patriotism and shining virtue compared with this mercenary plan to flitch from the oppressed taxpayers of the nation the millions that will make up this subsidy.

"The beneficiaries of the subsidy will be men and corporations of wealth. The payers of the money will be the hardworking men and women of the nation, struggling now as seldom before to meet the heavy exactions of the government and at the same time live.

"The proposal would be the last word in robbery
if but $30 were the sum sought instead of millions.
But the $35,000,000 is merely the entering wedge, for the men who have been seeking the subsidy for forty years have been prudent enough not to make the initial touch too large. If the republicans are fortunate enough to remain in power, there will be other allotments that will swell the cost.

"The subsidy's companion piece of legislation, the protective tariff, will be enacted before long, and with both functioning the nation is due to be shown how ill-adapted to present conditions are policies of his character.

"We try to build a merchant marine by making the cost of operation heavier. We endeavor to build up a foreign trade by increasing the cost of production.

"In the meantime, the producers and workers at home will be ascertaining that these policies will not rehabilitate the world markets they sorely need for the products of the United States.

"Every measure that the republican majority has devised to aid the producers of the nation has helped only the privileged few, simply because privilege, which seems to be the administration's sole stock in trade, is inherently inimical to the welfare of the toiler.

"Privilege is the advantage of wealth and power;
it is the curse of people whose salvation depends upon economical government, low taxes, and equal and exact justice to all.

"The present situation, which finds the republican party at its old tricks of farming out the taxing power for the benefit of those who finance its political campaigns, shows that the economic upset caused by the world war has not been accurately sensed by the protectionists and privilege grabbers. They seem to think that all they need is special privilege to restore their normal profits. What an awakening they are destined to have!

"They think they can take over at nominal costs the old tubs constructed during the war, and with government subsidies added, take charge of the carrying trade of the world. They will be disillusioned.
Their forced one-way export tonnage may promise well on paper, but how much import tonnage will they get? How will the subsidy-borne tonnage, composed of goods produced at protection costs, fare in the free markets of the world where they meet the cheaply produced goods borne by cheaply built ships from Europe or Japan?"

"The American home market alone can not longer uphold in prosperity the vast output of the American farms and factories. The cost of production must come down if overseas trades is to be built up in competition with other industrial nations, and we can not overcome the disadvantages of our expensively produced goods by granting subsidies and protection in other forms.

"The administration and the country will soon have an opportunity to see very clearly that we cannot hope to compete with impoverished nations by practices whose inexorable consequences must be the further impoverishment of our own people."

ON COMMUNICATIONS TO THE EDITOR.

The Times wants to be as open as it can to the views of its readers and likes to publish communications from them even in criticism of the paper.
But some communications that are received cannot be published. Communications advocating violence cannot be published, even when the editor himself is the object of the violence advocated. Communications containing epithets cannot be published nor our communications which do not bear the name of the writer or whose name is not furnished the editor.
We believe these things are well understood by most persons who address the editor for publication, but that the understanding is not universal is indicated by the fact that one mail brought two communications to The Times office which failed to conform to these rules.

A DISTINGUISHED AND MERITED HONOR.

It will be a distinguished and merited honor that will be bestowed upon J. A. Kemp next Saturday when he will lift the first shovel of dirt to be moved on the great reservoir dam for the Big Wichita irrigation project. This will be an epochal event for Wichita Falls and for the Big Wichita valley and for all of Northwest Texas. Only through Mr.
Kemp's great vision, untiring efforts and whole-hearted devotion has this project been attained. It is interesting to note that the great dam, one of the largest in the world is to be built at a point selected up Mr. Kemp more than twenty-five years ago.

WATCHFUL WAITING.

Dispatches from El Paso telling that U. S. troops had been ordered out in anticipation of an attack by an insurgent force upon Juarez, across the Rio Grande from El Paso, will recall to the American public that the policy of the American government toward Mexico is still one of watchful waiting, and the further fact that the danger of an attack upon an important border town indicates order is not yet maintained in Mexico as firmly as could be wished.
An effort was made some months ago to negotiate a treaty with Mexico in which the latter country would bind itself to certain specific things and as a reward for signing such a treaty the Oregon government was promised recognition and support from the United States. The Oregon government would not agree to the stipulations proposed and the American government would not recede from its position. A deadlock was reached in the negotiations where the situation now apparently rests.
Probably the American government is right in its position. As citizens we have confidence in our national leaders.

But the Mexican government needs the recognition and support of the United States. It must have these before there can be the rehabilitation in Mexico and the full restoration of order that is necessary for the prosperity and peace of its citizens which in turn are necessary before there can be a full restoration of trade between Mexico and the United States.
Mexico ought to be one of the best customers for American goods. It doubtless would be if the United States would support its government.
Whichever is to blame a condition exists between the two countries which ought not long to continue.
Both countries appear to be watchfully waiting. That policy may have been fully justified ten years ago, but isn't it about time now to be getting something done? Can't diplomacy find the way?

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

PASS ON!
When you have done the best that you can and know—pass on.

Life must be viewed as something ahead. To be satisfied, and then to stand still, means failure.
Those who stay with a sinking ship must go down with it—losing their chance for being rescued by neglecting to grasp their first opportunity to leave.

No matter how big a mistake you have made—
pass on.
Acknowledge your errors, if necessary, but don't carry them with you as a part of your equipment.

The traveler is to be happily envied because he never stays long enough in one place to grow weary or tired of his surroundings. And he may carry on with him all the beauties and fascinations of each place.

Every minute life is passing on. We must be urgent in the things we do, so as to get as many done as possible.

But pass on without regrets!
And try to leave things behind that will continue to add cheer and gladness long after you have passed.
Aim to live a permanent life. For eternity is made up of the best and happiest which the Here and Now creates, through you and through me.

Let the crowd wrangle if it will—but you pass on.
Gather the essentials as you go, and build big.
Cleanse your heart of every imagined wrong—and pass on!

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

BILL'S COMING BACK.
"I'll pay you tomorrow. Be here about ten.
I'll have the money to give to you then.
I cannot pay now for sufficient I lack,
But I'll have it tomorrow, for Bill's coming back."

"Whose Bill?" I inquired. "And what is he to me?"
And this was his answer: "It's this way, you see.
I'd have the money to pay you, but still—
He needed a life, so I loaned it to Bill."

"He'll pay it tomorrow. He said that he would;
He gave me his word, and his promise is good.
There are many whose methods are careless and slack,
But you can depend on it, Bill will be back."

I smiled as I heard him and, shaking my head,
"I've had many a promise just like that," I said,
"And the risk you have taken is shaky, I fear."
But he answered: "He promised, and Bill will be here."

I called the next day and I said with a grin:
"Well, tell me the truth, did your old friend come in?"
He did, he replied, "and it never occurred
To me that he wouldn't, for I had his word."

It may be that many are richer than Bill,
And many perhaps are much cleverer, still;
I fancy that hundreds whose wallets are fat
Would give all they had to be trusted like that!

EAT "BALLAST" FOODS TO AID YOUR LARGE INTESTINE

By DR. R. H. BISHOP
In the large intestine is the final chance for any portions of food not yet digested to be sorted out from the waste.

There are no digestive secretions for this process. No vigorous mixing of food and digestive juices occurs in the small intestine, though a slow backward movement in the part adjacent to the wall intestine forces the material in this part back and forth to insure absorption of all that is useful. At intervals a vigorous downward push forces the waste onward.

That these movements of large and small intestine be normal is of utmost importance. If too rapid, digestion is incomplete and the body loses valuable fuel, as in diarrhoea.
If too slow, waste accumulates, mechanically irritating to the intestinal walls; bacteria prey upon the retained material and ample chance for the absorption of any poisons which they may produce is afforded.

This is laid the foundation for bad complexions, headaches, sensations of fatigue, irritation of the appendix,
and other unpleasant conditions.
Habits of civilized life tend to hinder normal movement of the large intestine. In the first place the abdominal muscles are likely to have less exercise and hence to be less vigorous.

In the second place food is likely to be too highly refined. Some bulk is necessary for intestinal muscles to exercise against and this is obtainable only by eating some indigestible foods as part of the daily diet.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY.
Say not thou, I will hide myself from the Lord; shall any remember me from above? I shall not be remembered among so many people;
for what is my soul among such an infinite number of creatures.—Ecclesiastes 10:17.

Among so many can he care?
Can special love be everywhere?
A myriad homes, a myriad ways,
And God's eye over every place.

I asked; my soul bathed out of this;
In just that very place of his;
Where He hath put and keepeth you,
God hath no other thing to do!

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

AN OPEN LETTER TO DR. H. D. KNICKERBOCKER

The Times has received a copy of the following open letter addressed to Dr. H. D. Knickerbocker by William Baldrige:

I note that you extend an invitation to those who "may have nerve enough to write you and express freely their opinion as to tar and feathers being justifiable punishment (administered by a mob) for crime." (A mob here means a body of men inflicting punishment without authority of law.)

My only purpose in penning this is to call attention to a fundamental principle in our form of government, that means more to Americans than all else, and that is government by constituted authority.
This principle is fundamental and it must not be lost sight of or overridden in our zeal for other things.

The criminal is with us and has been through the ages. I would meto to his full measure of punishment for all offenses against society, moral or otherwise. But it must be done by the authority of the law as it is written.

I maintain that a criminal can be restrained of his liberty for a brief period of ten minutes without process of law, that by the same force his liberty can be taken for all time. What is there in the mob's code to restrict the time?

Whenever a body of men, though zealous in their motives and moral cause, does anything to weaken the respect, lower the dignity and lessen the majesty of the written law, it has failed to do good.

I would hardly think that administrators of law should be so easily restrained of their liberty for a brief period of ten minutes without process of law, that by the same force his liberty can be taken for
all time. What is there in the mob's

SHALLOW POOL IN SOUTH ELECTRA IS SCENE OF ACTIVITY

MANY LOCATIONS RESULT OF LOCAL MEN'S SENSATIONAL WELL.

TESTS NEAR FOWLKES GETTING NEAR DEPTH

Little of Interesting Nature Comes From Other Parts of North Central District.

Wichita county continued to furnish most of the interesting news in oil circles last week, with the Petroleum Producers' sensational shallow well in South Electra as the feature.

This well is making around 100 barrels from a 400-foot sand and there has been active trading in leases in the vicinity, with numerous locations for new tests.

The lack of water is preventing a vigorous campaign in this and Archer counties, and a rain heavy enough to fill up the tanks would be followed by decisive activity.

The Fowlkes district is getting under the stage when additional tests start defining the limits of the sand, with the O'Neill well a mile to the northward, scheduled to start first.

Aside from a westward extension of the Stephens county pool across the line into Shackelford county, there was little of interest from other parts of the district.

Busy in South Electra. Over 40 tests are drilling in the South Electra section of the county, and as many more are shut down until the rain comes in sufficient quantities to relieve the water situation.

In the territory around the Magnolia well in the Fowlkes district many new wells are shut down for the reason that it is expected by the last of this week the water line being laid from the Dale land south to this pool will relieve the shortage somewhat.

The Wagoner land is to get a thorough testing out especially on the sections in the eastern part. Many locations were made during the week in the neighborhood of the new Petroleum Producers well.

The Cliné Oil company of Wichita Falls secured 80 acres and will put down several tests and the Bass-Dillard company is expected to drill a test on their recently purchased property.

The Texas company has also started drilling on No. 213 Wagoner and has reached 85 feet; the same company is rigging up on No. 214 Wagoner, both being shut down to the Bridwell-Heidrick wells.

C. F. Spencer and associates are getting their 12-inch casing in their No. 2 on the Wagoner land.

In the Gibson survey about a mile south Joe Howell is drilling around 400 feet in No. 3 Wagoner, and the Gulf Production company No. 1 on the Powell tract is drilling at 850 feet, and No. 2 Roberts is around 450 feet. The test of J. O. Neill is drilling at 1,350 feet on the Roberts land.

The Waggoner land is to get a thorough testing out especially on the sections in the eastern part. Many locations were made during the week in the neighborhood of the new Petroleum Producers well.

drilling ten feet further shows all indications for good production; shortage of water has forced the majority of tests to shut down. Burk Burnett and the townsite districts showed nothing but the usual field work; several tests are drilling but as yet have not reached interesting stages. Friddy and associates have set the 48 on the sand at 1,603 to 1,648 for their No. 6 Rodford lease and will complete this week. Nearly every company in the field has been shut out in an effort to keep up the production, which according to this week's report will be over 2,500 barrels in the daily run.

South of town in the shallow pool the No. 2 test of Thomas Martin and associates on the W. T. Cropper lease has come on the sand at 1,243 to 1,248. On the Dodson tract Thomas Hunter is drilling around 1,150 feet in his No. 2 test. Staley et al. No. 6 Dodson is down around 900 feet.

One K. M. A. Completion. The K. M. A. furnished one small completion. The Nixon Oil company finished No. 3 Lewis from the sand at 1,483 to 1,487, making 30 barrels. On the Stephens land the Gulf Production No. 9 is drilling at 1,200 feet. The Munger Oil company is rigging up a rotary for No. 14 Munger for a deep test. On the Nance land the Ryan Petroleum company is fishing for casing at 1,177 feet.

Tests on the sand and on shallow completion constitute the report for the week from the Archer county pool. The Stephens No. 1 on the Andrews was finished in the sand at 934 to 939 as a 25 barrel producer. Riner-Clayton No. 4 has set casing on the sand around 1,400 feet. On the same tract the Texoma Refining company cemented on the sand at 1,400 feet. In early this week.

North of the Panther pool the Ava Development company resumed drilling and is after around 1,500 on the Henderson land. Ford and associates are drilling around 450 feet in their test on the Browning farm.

Good Eastland Well. Each week sees the Eastland county field bringing in new wells, especially in the district around Lake Eastland where a bountiful supply of water can be had for drilling purposes. In other parts of the county the water shortage has been a serious setback to drilling operations.

One of the best completions reported for the week was the Stone-McMurray No. 1 on the Eakin tract in the Pioneer field in the southwest part of the district. The well blew itself in late Wednesday night from the 2,450 foot level and is reported making 1,000 barrels of oil and 2,000,000 feet of gas.

Three miles west of Eastland on the Kennebrew land the deep test of the Gulf Production company is attracting a great deal of attention; it has reached the depth of 1,900 feet. If successful in bringing in a producer on this tract a number of wells producing from the shallow sands will be put down to the new stratum. Five miles west on the Cisco road the test of Woods and Courtwright are having some water trouble around 1,000 feet in their No. 1 Seaburn. On the Breiford tract near the lake the Middletown-Deane company is drilling two tests. No. 3 is down around 2,350 feet, and No. 4 has reached the depth of 1,250 feet. On this tract the No. 1 is still producing after three months around 200 barrels flowing natural.

Stephens Field Extended. Stephens county brought in one of the best completions for the week, being the No. 1 Katy-Bell, belonging to the Charles Roesser interests, located in the northern part of the county. The top of the lime was reached at 2,500 feet and the well is flowing natural at the rate of 2,000 barrels a day. Locations have been made on the tract by Roesser and company and rigs are being on two of them.

South of the well on the E. A. Landreth Petroleum company is drilling two wells, and both down around 1,700 feet. The Mid-Kansas company also made five locations, 9 and 10 on the G. W. Hill lease.

No. 9 and 10 on the J. W. Hill land, and it is reported will drill a new test on one of their leases. This week drilling was resumed on the Joy well of the National Investment company, and arrangements have been made to go to a depth of 2,500 feet. On the August Frank farm the Nebraska-Texas company has skidded their rig from the old location and will drill a deep test on the Myers land, 800 feet southwest from the old location. Shira-Stone of Mineral Wells has contracted with A. W. Raht to put down a 2,500 foot test on his ranch about 20 miles south of Henrietta.

Bunger Continues Busy. Young county for the first time in several months failed to show anything in the sensational line although over 50 wells are drilling, mostly in the Bunger and South Bend districts.

The greatest activity is still in the vicinity of the North American Scott well, where more than 15 tests are drilling. The Panhandle No. 1 Scott that came in for 2000 barrels from the 2500 foot level is still a consistent producer. On the J. J. Scott land the Hobbs-Maskell interests are down 2,500 feet and are installing a new boiler. Other tests include the Roxana-North American Garrett No. 2, which is testing the 2,200 foot sand and which will be drilled deeper. No. 2 is down to 1,500 feet.

On the Smith survey the North American No. 3 is making 400 barrels at 2,200 feet. West of the lake on the Martin farm the Panhandle company is drilling at 600 feet. The Texas Products No. 4 McCluskey on the sand at 1,900 feet and will drill in the next day or two. It is reported that the Seaboard Oil and Gas company has purchased the leases and production of the Young and syndicate and will soon begin drilling several tests.

In the Bunger district on the pickard land the Monroe Production company's No. 1 is drilling around 1,700 feet.

Arrangements are being made to start a new deep test in Hall county west of Indian creek. The Swanson-Bruner company have purchased the rig of the Estelline-Rod River company and will move it on the location.

The Mutual Oil company has completed a rig in the Cunningham survey and will be ready to drill in the next day or two.

Substantial Farm House EAR ROBY IS BURNED. ROBY, TEXAS, Feb. 18.—The farm house of Ernest Henry, one mile northeast of town, was burned Thursday about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. This was one of the most substantial farm houses in the county and was built only a few years ago. Mr. Henry lost practically everything in the house, his smoke house, garage and light plant. The loss was only partially covered by insurance.

NORTH SIDERS NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR RECENT MEETINGS

DECLARE LABOR AGITATION INSTIGATED BY PERSONS FROM SOUTH SIDE.

SAY MOST OF MEN IN THAT DISTRICT WORKING

Ask That Attitude of Their Part of Town Toward Movement Be Made Clear.

The mass meetings which have been held several times recently at a dance hall in North Wichita were not sponsored by the residents of that section assume no responsibility for what takes place at such meetings. The publication of this statement was requested Saturday by officers of the Civic League, who said that the men on the north side concurred in it. Most of the residents of North Wichita are employed, either in the Katy shops or in the refineries, it was stated, and the personnel of the mass meeting has come largely from the south side of the river. The Times was informed. The meetings were called by persons not residing on the north side, it was also stated. The Civic League also objected to the use of the term "north side mass meeting" which the newspapers have used, for the sake of brevity, in reporting the meetings. The only thing the north side has to do with the meetings, it was explained, is that a hall on that side of the river was chosen for a meeting place. The meetings in question are those at which the employment situation on the irrigation project was discussed, resulting in adoption of resolutions demanding that the irrigation directors resign, urging taxpayers not to pay the water tax and similar actions.

SUMMER HEAT MARK REACHED SATURDAY AFTERNOON IN CITY

A summer's sun Saturday afternoon sent the thermometer to the hall tree and the mercury in the bulb, locally to the 78 degree mark. Southwest winds continued throughout the day and late Saturday night there was no apparent change in sight. In the extreme northern part of the district covered by local railroad reports it was reported that there was a colder time in the wind but there was no big drop in temperatures. To the south and east practically the same weather conditions existed as in Wichita Falls and vicinity. It seemed probable that Sunday would be a clear, warm day.

MUSICAL CONCERT ON FEBRUARY 28 BY PROFESSOR LOEW

Announcement that a musical concert by Professor Frank Frederick Loew, well-known local pianist, was to be given in the Kemp hotel ball room February 28, was made Saturday by the University club, which is sponsoring the affair.

Several numbers by members of the Musicians club will also be given in connection with the concert. Further announcements will be made later regarding this feature. Since coming to Wichita Falls Professor Loew has been active in promoting an interest in music in this city and surrounding territory and he has accomplished a missionary work along musical lines in this territory. Tickets, priced at $1 each, will be on sale at the Ripley Piano store and at the door on the evening of the concert.

Another Batch of Homeless Canines Faces Firing Squad

It was a bad day Saturday for another quota of the city's homeless and friendless dogs, for 61 passed away violently at the dog pound Saturday afternoon when the "execution squad" of local police officers got into action. Yesterday's slaughter brought the total number of dogs killed during the past month up to approximately 150. The extermination campaign will still continue, Police Commissioner Fitts declared Saturday, until Wichita Falls is entirely rid of its undesirable element. The drive now being conducted, he says, is not only improving conditions generally by removing the vagabond canines but is also netting the treasury a respectable sum through the increase in purchase of license tags. A number of dogs impounded are claimed, but before freedom is obtained it is necessary for the pup's liberator to pay a pound fee, which helps still further.

GIRLS! LEMONS WHITEN ROUGH CHAPPED HANDS

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter-pint of harmless and delightful lemon-beach lotion to soften and whiten red, rough or chapped hands. This home-made lemon lotion is far superior to glycerin and rose water to smoothen the skin. Famous stage beauties use it to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion, because it doesn't irritate—adv.

CONSTRUCTION OF WAURIKA RAILROAD TO BEGIN SHORTLY

Actual construction work on the Byers-Waurika railroad will start soon, it was indicated Saturday by Frank Kell, in announcing progress on the preliminary formalities necessary to the project.

A conference with leading citizens of the Byers community will be held Monday in Mr. Kell's office, at which it is expected right of way matters will be closed up. Soundings and borings at the site of the Red river crossing are to be taken shortly, preliminary to drawing up specifications for the bridge to be erected. Less than half a dozen pieces of right of way remain to be secured, and the situation with regard to these is considered favorable.

DIANS PROTEST PALE FACE PLANS FOR THE FUNERAL

REQUIRES GUARD OF TWENTY TO PREVENT SEIZURE OF BODY.

53 YEAR OLD INDIAN DIES AT BEGGS, OKLA.

Relatives insisted that Absolute Indian Customs Be Followed.

By United Press.
BEGGS, OKLA., Feb. 18.—Into the peaceful precincts of the red man's "happy hunting grounds" stalked today the spirit of Richmond Bruner, 53-year-old Indian, while his kinsmen took belligerent issue with a paleface undertaker concerning the last rites over his earthly remains.

Twenty men, armed with heavy revolvers, guarded the little Presbyterian church while the pastor read the final oration, and ten Indian braves, survivors of the old warrior, stood restlessly about in the church yard.

The aged Indian, said to be worth almost half a million dollars, died yesterday following an extended illness, and the federal Indian agents ordered that the customs of the white man prevail at the burial.

Insisting that absolute Indian customs be followed the dead man's relatives, led by Pinkey Bruner, a nephew, threatened open revolt.

Warned that the white Indians had organized for the purpose of assisting the body and conducting their own funeral services, the undertaker recruited a white mob, armed them and stationed them in the church.

The little church was packed when the service got underway and had the first words of the pastor's were resounding through the room when the young Indians appeared.

From the church the body was transported 15 miles across country to a little Indian burial ground.

The armed guards, on horseback, rode closely grouped about the hearse and an automobile containing the undertaker and his assistants.

Burial services were concluded without further demonstration although the young Indians followed the procession to the cemetery, leading into the hills and timber where the coffin was placed at the grave.

The average last week was 231,425 barrels as compared with 219,459 barrels the week before.

The Mexico field continued to lead in production.

LADIES! SECRET TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

Bring back color, gloss and youthfulness with Grandma's recipe of Sage and Sulphur.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-made preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of fuss.

FORT WORTH CASE INVOLVES A FORMER CAPTAIN OF POLICE

FORT WORTH, Feb. 18.—Charges of robbery with firearms were filed against six persons here late today, in connection with the two hold-ups of stores in the residential section of the city last night, which preceded a battle between motorcycle officers, detectives and bandits, in which Arthur Bell, alleged highwayman, was killed; John Cornish Miller probably fatally wounded; and Motorcycle Officer A. J. Mitchell shot through the right hand.

Assistant District Attorney Tolbert filed 13 complaints, in two cases against John Cornish Miller, his son, Joe Leughy, former police captain of Fort Worth and hotel proprietor; "Dix" Seaholm, Francis Kennedy and Nellie Ogie.

Police said tonight they believe the six arrests and the killing of Bell has broken up a ring of "suburban stores" bandits, following a series of robberies during the last six months, which has been terrorizing storekeepers in the residential districts of the city.

BANKERS' FLYING SQUADRON

WACO, TEXAS, Feb. 18.—Bankers of central Texas counties, comprising the fourth district, met at Spring Lake country club here Saturday and were hosts to the flying squadron of Texas and eastern financial men.

TEXTILE WORKERS CHEER THE POLICE, FEATURES PARADE

By Associated Press.
PAWTUCKET, R. I., Feb. 18.—Hearily cheers for the police from the thousands of textile strikers and sympathizers who had tramped over the snowy streets gave a novel turn to the brief open air meeting that followed the so-called "silent parade" here today.

The parade if not precisely silent, was unusual. There were no bands, no uniforms, no decorations, no placards, although a few of the men wore yellow tags on which was scribbled, "Don't be yellow."

RANGES NEAR EL PASO
SUFFERING FOR RAIN

EL PASO, TEXAS, Feb. 18.—Ranges in this section, and also in other western and mid-western parts of the state are sadly in need of rain, according to word received by stockmen here.

Surface water in all parts of the country, in this vicinity, is drying up and cattle are losing weight, the reports assert.

Stiers are being sold at $2 and $4 to be sent to other ranges. Stock men in this section are sending cattle to Mexico, California and Arizona, ranges where grazing is reported in good condition.

ATTITUDE OF U. S. TOWARD MEXICO HAS NOT CHANGED

SITUATION IS DISCUSSED BY LEADING MEXICAN NEWS- PAPERS.

NUMBER OF MEXICANS HAVE VISITED WASHINGTON

Denied that Negotiations For Recognition Have Made Progress.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 18.—The statement was made at the white house in Washington yesterday that while the American government was desirous of a happy restoration of relationship with Mexico, there was no change in the situation prevailing for the past seven months.

The Excelsior and El Heraldo, on the other hand, treated the statement more conservatively, although all the Mexico City journals expressed curiosity concerning details of what they claimed the United States authorities four weeks ago to believe recognition of Mexico might be extended immediately.

George T. Summerlin, American charge d'affaires, today professed ignorance of any developments in recognition of negotiations which might cause belief that the United States was prepared to extend recognition. It is known, however, that several Mexicans within the past few months have gone to Washington and have allowed the impression to prevail that they spoke in President Obregon's name. It is believed, therefore, that when the state department ascertained the true status of these individuals, who may have promised more than the Mexican president previously stated it was possible to do, the negotiations were immediately broken off and the status of relations between the two countries reverted to that of a year ago.

It is not believed here that reported rebel activities during the past few days have had anything to do with the American government's decision to stand pat.

Reports today from widely scattered regions did not indicate that disturbed conditions had spread to any section beyond those previously reported.

The war office asserted that its several campaigns against small rebel bands were progressing satisfactorily.

CONGRATULATE THE WOMEN WHO OPPOSE SUFFRAGE PROGRAM

MONTREAL, QUEBEC, Feb. 18.—An Episcopal letter congratulating women of Quebec who are opposing the woman suffrage movement in this province was issued by Monsignor P. E. Roy, co-adjutor of Cardinal Beaudry, today.

Monsignor Roy declared woman suffrage was against the fundamental traditions and faith of the French Canadian race.

Women are allowed to vote in federal elections in Quebec, but not in provincial contests. Recently a delegation of women waited on Premier Taschereau at Quebec and asked for the provincial vote. The premier voiced opposition, but said the government was divided on the subject.

It had been hoped by the women behind the movement that a bill would be brought down giving them the provincial franchise at the present session of the legislature.

He will succeed Captain J. D. Fauntleroy of Fort Worth, who last week became state highway engineer. Loah will arrive here February 20.

ELECTROCUTE MAN FOR MURDER IN TENNESSEE

NASHVILLE, TENN., Feb. 18.—Asbury Fields, 47, convicted of the murder of J. R. Price, was electrocuted at the state prison early today. Fields was charged with turning Price into the woods, crushing his skull with a hammer and after robbing him of over $1500, leaving him to die. Fields denied guilt.

Has the Lipstick Come to Stay?

The Outstanding Painting of the Paris Salon Directs Attention Anew to the Growing Fad, but Science Tells Us Woman Has Practised the Art for Centuries.

YOU MUST USE A LIPSTICK," said Lady Kitty Champion-Cheney. "It's so good for the lips. Men like it, you know. I couldn't live without a lipstick."

The Lady Kitty in this case is the dowager-adventuress of Somerset Maugham's successful play, "The Circle." But discerning students of applied cosmetics say that Lady Kitty is generic woman and that the lipstick is perennial. It not only has its physical uses but its psychological value as well. Lady Kitty found it a never-failing prop to a tottering savoir-faire.

"Would you like my lipstick?" she asks in the midst of a tense scene in which a young married woman is trying to decide whether she will remain with her husband or elope with her lover. The young married woman declines. "Oh, but just try!" insists Lady Kitty. "It's such a comfort when you're in trouble!"

The painting which has attracted the greatest amount of attention in the Paris Salon this year illustrates how popular the lipstick is with women who would be chic. This painting, by Leo Fontan, is called "The Parisienne with Her Lipstick," and depicts a beauty in a blue gown absorbed before her mirror in the task of applying her lip rouge in a most deft manner.

The Much Discussed Painting in the Paris Salon, "The Parisienne and Her Lipstick," in Which the Painter, Leo Fontan, Depicts a French Devotee to This Vanity.

The beauty experts are naturally on the side of the lipstick. More recently a number of artists have admitted that the lipstick is decidedly to be commended, if used with taste and discretion. And now historic sanction is given this device by the Egyptian exhibit lately acquired by the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. Vanity boxes, cosmetic cases, perfume containers and many similar toilet articles uncovered in the excavations made by Flinders Petrie, the London

Egyptologist, show that the beauties of Circa, 4000 B. C., must have used artificial means for improving the appearance of their lips.

Pruett Carter, the celebrated illustrator whose pictures in the Cosmopolitan Magazine have been making him such a reputation, feels that a woman will always find justification for emphasizing the curves of her lips and heightening their color.

"I gather from women who are supposed to know that there's nothing hygienically harmful in a lipstick," said Mr. Carter. "In fact, as it is nothing more than cold cream colored red, it should be beneficial in the winter time. No—the Health Department has no reason for crusading against the lipstick, but the Society for Prevention of Vertigo might have a decided objection to some of the vermilion lips I have seen recently. In these cases I felt even myself growing a bit dizzy, for the lips that I saw had never before been seen on land or sea. The shape was unnatural—the color unearthly.

I should say, though, that a woman is entitled to reinforce the color of her lips and more sharply define their curves if she can do so without destroying the appearance of authenticity. Many of them, I am convinced, can do this. Long may they wave."

A sentimental reason that makes for the continued prevalence of the lipstick may be found in the fad, lately become popular, of sending kisses by mail or impressing them in a kiss album. Without a well-rouged pair of lips the "kiss collector" would find a rather lean harvest.

STATE AND FEDERAL ENGINEERS INSPECT BURKBURNETT ROAD

PURPOSE OF VISIT WAS MERELY AN INSPECTION OF THE PLANS.

3,000 FEET OF PAVING PLACED DURING WEEK

Question Arises as to What Will Be Done After First Seven Miles Are Paved.

Federal Engineer E. Henry and State Highway Engineer C. R. Hennig made an inspection of the proposed plans of the paving and the route of the Burk Burnett road from the city to the Red river bank Friday and Saturday. Although no information was given out it was stated that apparently the plans were approved.

The inspection was a preliminary one, such as is usually made on roads where state and federal aid has been promised. Mr. Henry left the city early Saturday morning. While Mr. Hennig spent the greater portion of the day.

Due to the cold weather on Monday and Wednesday, the two concrete mixers of Potts & Prentice, contractors were idle on those days but worked the remaining four. A total of 3,000 feet of concrete was placed bringing the total thus far to nearly two miles.

Although it has been practically decided that the Clay county road will be paved another question has arisen that will likely come before the county commissioners at the meeting Monday. The question is what will be paved next after the completion of the first seven miles of the Burk Burnett road.

It is contended by many who have followed with interest the road paving program of the county that the contract with Potts & Prentice calls for the paving of only that much of the road including the Clay county road.

Some have advocated that before any further work can be done that the Clay county road from the city toward Henrietta must be completed. According to the plans of the commissioners as discussed at the meeting last week, the Clay county road will be paved a short distance before the first seven miles of the Burk Burnett road is completed.

TESTIMONY TO BE TAKEN AT HEARING ON OIL VALUATION

Testimony will be heard by the commissioners court next Monday afternoon when the oil property valuations for tax assessments will come before the court for adjustment, which will follow a schedule of valuations for the approval of the court.

The committee which was appointed last Monday following the request on the part of many prominent oil men will make its report Monday and will follow a schedule of valuations for the approval of the court.

Some changes have been made and recommended by the committee over the list that was approved by the court several weeks ago.

The hearing has been set for 2:00 o'clock Monday afternoon and will undoubtedly be held in the court room of the county court at law. It is expected that practically all oil men with large holdings in the county will be present.

FAIR SITE SECURED; CALL MEETING TO FORM ORGANIZATION

Organization of the Texas-Oklahoma fair association is expected to be started at a meeting called for next Friday evening at 6:30 at the Wichita club, where the general fair committee of the chamber of commerce will convene.

The meeting was called by the chamber of commerce, following an announcement by the existing committee that the negotiations for Call Field had reached a stage where it was necessary to have a permanent organization formed to take the property over. The committee has been negotiating with owners of the property for several days.

A number of additional committeemen have been appointed and will be held to next Friday's meeting. This meeting, it is expected, will take the preliminary steps necessary to organizing and incorporating, so that further plans for the 1922 fair may go forward rapidly.

With the assurance that a suitable site for the fair can be obtained, those working for a permanent fair feel that a big forward step in the movement has been taken. With ample grounds and large buildings available in the former aviation camp, Wichita Falls will be able to hold her first fair without the necessity of doing much building.

It is planned, however, to have a part, at least, of the athletic stadium built in time for the 1922 fair in April, and this construction will no doubt begin at an early date.

NOTED MEMBER OF SALVATION ARMY TO HOLD SERVICES HERE

Patients have been received at the rate of one or two a day, and this will continue until capacity is reached. The plan of filling the institution gradually was adopted so that the staff of employees might be better organized.

Most of the patients so far received have been from Wichita and Tarrant counties.

A word about 7¢ and 10¢ Butter-Cream Bread and Certified Bread

Volume production makes low prices in bread the same as in automobiles, or articles sold in the 7¢ and 10¢ stores. You can give us the necessary volume.

Butter-Cream or Certified Bread is your best food. Eat more of it. Don't bother to bake; don't buy miscellaneous, unknown brands.

Our confidence in the housewives' appreciation of the superior quality of Butter-Cream and of Certified Bread prompted us to try out these new prices.

Let's keep the price of bread down—we need your support to do it.

English, Walter Knight, B. F. Owens, W. C. Tunnell, R. H. Langford, W. L. Cl. Ford and Miss Annie Harris as hostesses. Mrs. Bryant greeted the guests at the door and introduced them to Mrs. J. B. Smith, president of the auxiliary, and to Mrs. Hamblen, who makes the paragon an ideal home. When the house was crowded with guests a program was given by members of the Children's Missionary society under the direction of Mrs. Virgil Rowland as follows:

Planologue—Maye Belle Baird. Reading—Mary Louise Kinard. Reading—Beryl McCord. Violin solo—Lorine Lowry. Reading—Sarah Wheeler. Reading—Dorothy Ruth Culbreath.

The Junior choir sang before the readings, which were well received, as was the violin numbers. After the program, Mrs. Smith explained the mission of the free will offering accepted during the afternoon. It is to be a nucleus for the auxiliary's quota on the $5,000 to be given by the five conferences of Texas toward building a dormitory at Austin for girls attending State University to cost $100,000. The dormitory will be called Kirby Hall, in honor of Mrs. Helen Marr Kirby, who was dean of the women for 41 years and who has left the inheritance of her saintly life upon thousands of Texas girls.

The paragon was very attractive with its valentine decorations and flowers and was a delightful occasion socially. Tea and sandwiches were served at five o'clock with valentines as favors.

Senior Aid Society. The Senior Aid society of the Central Christian church met Monday afternoon with Mrs. Fitzpatrick and Mrs. T. C. Jones as joint hostesses. The devotional service, a part of the 25th chapter of Mathew and Rev. Morrison led in prayer. An interesting business session followed and each member related her experience in earning a dollar for the aid society. Rev. Morrison talked on the evangelistic campaign being started in every department of the church.

Refreshments of tea and sandwiches were served to Mesdames Broynning, Cooper, Curd, Montgomery, Lyons, Hellums, Grubbs, Dial, Leer, Wade, Fleming, Forrester, Hogan, Jones, Fitzpatrick, West and Ely, Morrison.

Y. P. S. C. E. Valentine Party. Young people of the Central Christian church were entertained by Rev. and Mrs. Geo. H. Morrison Tuesday evening with a valentine party. The pastorium was appropriately decorated for the occasion. Miss Nettie Grubbs received the guests as they arrived and Miss Jean Fleming and Waldo Montgomery conducted them in immediately to the art gallery, where their profiles were hastily sketched and displayed later in the evening.

Miss Beale Hellums presided at the register where ten young men and eleven young ladies placed their names. After a general handshaking each found a handful of hearti-fetti. Miss Evelyn Baker and Arleigh Lyon provided white arrows for the guests and they were instructed to pin these, after being blindfolded, to an immense sheet of the wall. This furnished much amusement.

The hostess then passed a basket of valentine hearts and each guest chose his color. They were then asked to pass under the arch doorway and read from the hearts of accompanying colors. Here each found his or her fate. Miss Jean Fleming and Bill Cook only failed in the recognition of two of the sketches mentioned above and were awarded pretty valentines.

Miss Baker gave a reading, "A Sing Song," which was highly enjoyed.

Cupid napkins were passed and refreshments consisting of pink and white neapolitan cream, cake, candy hearts and cupid were used for plate favors.

Junior Ladies Auxiliary. The Junior Ladies auxiliary of the Central Christian church met Monday afternoon with Mrs. J. E. Lee and Mrs. L. E. Millon at the home of the latter. A delightful afternoon was enjoyed and a salad course with hot chocolate and cake was served to Mesdames Pace, Johnson, Harlan, Curd, Taylor, Stephens, Morrison, Jones, Austin, Billingsly, Milford, Lee and Ross.

The next meeting of the auxiliary will be with Mrs. Curd and Mrs. W. M. Harlan at Mrs. Harlan's home on East Mohlar.

Kolonial Kary Klub. On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Claude Yates was hostess to the Kolonial Kary Klub and a number of guests with one of the most beautifully artistic parties the club has enjoyed.

The heart shaded candles at each table, the dainty little red ballet dances that marked the places for the playettes and the heart decorated score pads were all reminiscent of the gay old St. Valentine whose birthday was being celebrated.

Mrs. Nib Shaw was awarded the prize for high score, a large satin covered heart filled with candy.

Mrs. Vernon, Mrs. Hudson, Mrs. Shaw and Miss Donaldson cut high at the tables and received miniature candy filled hearts.

The beautiful refreshment plates passed at five o'clock carried to-matoe salad molded in heart shape on lettuce, chicken a la king on toast, wafers, colonial punch and baskets of red mint hearts.

Mrs. Yates' guests for this very beautiful party were Mesdames H. C. Carter, J. M. Carter, E. P. Bunkley, Arthur Vernon, W. B. Harrison, R. R. Robertson, Frank Morrow, J. R. Andrews, Louis Dial, Cordie Pennell, Rudolph Colbert, Walter Le Orr, Nib Shaw, Wm. P. McDonald, John Hudson, Misses Agnes Pender, Mary Pennington and Cecile Donaldson.

Miss Johnson Entertains. Among the prettiest of the Valentine parties was that on Tuesday evening when Miss Dawn Johnson was hostess to the Senior class of the Stamford high school of which she is a member. This gay affair was given at the attractive home of Mrs. T. A. Upshaw, aunt of Miss Johnson and the reception suite was beautifully decorated for the occasion in crimson hearts, cupid, and blooming pot plants. The game of "Hearts" was the chief diversion of the evening and contests were also enjoyed. The date of St. Valentine was also suggested in the attractive refreshment plate consisting of sandwiches, olives, hot tea, and fancy confections in heart cups. The guests enjoying Miss Johnson's delightful hospitality were: Mesdames Olive McDougle, Effie Pearl Turner, Sallie T. McCulloch, Gladys White, Hattie Gill, Ina

Lewis, Rosa Lee Lawson, Louise Mullins, Kathleen Mullins, Thelma Sanders, Georgia Donaldson, Evaline McCleod, Essie Lee, Gladys Greenwade, Pearl Hyde, Gladys Rose, Margaret Crockett, Lulu Buckey, Jewell McClellan, and Messrs. Bruce Fowler, Clifford Nichols, Allen Cox, Ben Charlie Chapman, Gordon Bennett, Calvin Cannon, Cliff Brewton, Bennie Burrow and Mrs. Coy Upshaw.

Forty-Two Club. A most pleasant meeting of the Forty-Two club was on Wednesday afternoon when Mrs. W. T. Andrews entertained at her beautiful colonial home on East Mohlar avenue. The rooms were quite attractive with lovely blooming plants and ferns. George Washington talley were used for the games of "42" and cherry pie with whipped cream, hot tea, crackers and roasted nuts lip dainty cups were served. The club members are Mesdames J. M. Carter, G. L. Inglish, A. E. Stewart, Bruce Stevenson, R. L. Haynie, F. E. Hudson, Joe Smith, Starkey Duncan, Wm. Britton, Walter L. Orr, R. E. McDonald, W. E. Swanson, Walter Keith, P. S. Hastings, John Hudson, H. H. Pennington, C. C. Day, W. M. Harlan, J. H. Rutherford, Martin, and W. T. Andrews.

McDonald, baritone; Mrs. Jack Booth, accompanist; Mrs. Reginald Baird, pianist; Little Miss Anya, F. L. Booth, reader. A beautiful program was given.

Resident Has Awful Experience

"I was twice confined in hospital in the last one nothing but gruel water was injected into me 4 times a day, as my stomach would not retain any food. I suffered terribly; was reduced to a skeleton. My folks saw an ad of Mays' Wonderful Remedy and it has surely saved my life. I weigh 150 lbs. now." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded.—adv.

STIRRING DRAMA OF THE SEA OFFERED AT THE OLYMPIC

The story told concerns a young lounge lizard, born and bred to luxury and idleness, who is shanghaied aboard a San Francisco schooner and carried away by a modern pirate.

Reduced to pilot, the story would be pretty much the same as the usual sea yarn. The young man is transformed from a ruffian by his experiences into a rough-and-ready two-fisted guy and is proud of his new status.

GLASS OF SALTS IF YOUR KIDNEYS HURT

But Less Meat if You Feel Weak, Achy or Have Bladder Trouble. Salt is Fine For Kidneys.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eating of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poisons, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The uric acid, cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night, neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's uric waste get about four ounces of salt from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Just Salt is inexpensive, harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then. This women take now and then. This softening serious kidney and bladder diseases.

SIMPLICITY IS KEYNOTE OF ALL LATE AUTO WORK

New Developments Tend to Simplify Modern Motor Construction.

Endurance, freedom from repairs, simplicity, that is what the motorist wants, and that is what the motor manufacturer promises him as an automobile development proceeds.

Signs of this development appear in almost every new model presented this year. There are the individual steps instead of the running board, more and easier control from the dash, rear signal lights, fuel economizers and many other changes which make for ease and comfort in riding.

Development work during the coming decade, says Colonel J. G. Vincent, Packard engineer, "will be confined largely to a simplification and standardization of construction with a view to securing greater endurance and freedom from repairs and adjustments."

Most attention is being paid to the motor, for the simplification of its parts and economy of operation. Scarcely of fuel in the future may send every present-day engine to the scrap heap as a more suitable type.

But until then, engineers are seeking to bring motor and fuel costs down as low as possible. "Eventually," says Colonel Vincent, "the demand for greater fuel economy may develop, as it has in England and continental countries, cars of less weight and horsepower."

"Already there is a movement in this direction, but until our public highways are materially improved I do not believe it will be a dominant factor."

Changes in the body design will depend on the public, is Colonel Vincent's opinion. There will be no unwarranted departures from present lines.

Unless there springs up some pronounced public preference for some new motor car quality," he adds, "the manufacturer's efforts during the next decade will be invested in refining and perfecting the already existing design."

Always be sure that your red light in the rear of the car is working properly.

Power loss can be traced to clogged cylinders and worn out piston equipment.

To prevent corrosion on the battery terminals it is a good plan to coat them with vasoline.

When repainting dust from the motor, a painter's brush that is thick and soft is much better to use than waste.

Rattling of doors on a car can be prevented by padding out the hinges or catches with thin rubber sheeting.

When adjusting the brakes, jack up the rear wheel and have the hand-brake set just tight enough so that one of the wheels can be turned with the hand.

Grease, oil or acid that has gotten on the tires should be removed at once by using a cloth moistened with gasoline.

The hardest strain is put upon tires when driving on the street, railway tracks and should be avoided at all times. When the car is run in the tracks its weight is borne not by the tires but the side wall at the point where the tire comes in contact with the edge of the rail. As a result the tire is bridged, the fabric, ply separate and the tread is loosened.

The intense mechanical strain undergone by the rear axle calls for the most scrupulous watching to keep it in condition. This is the center of intense mechanical activity, carrying all the pushes and pulls and jolts of the whole car. It is essential that every car owner should guard against any rear axle trouble and upon the slightest indication of trouble an expert should be consulted.

THE MOTORISTS' PROBLEMS

By WILLIAM M. STEWART, JR.

Motor Department: I have a Franklin which caught fire, in the crank case all probably from being overheated. When noticed the cylinder and front end was red hot and the fire was put out. The car will still run, but with a knock and jerk. Would you suggest that a new engine be installed or can these heated parts be made to give satisfactory service? I don't want to do it, but I want to know that my engine is in good shape and so on in this part of the country up to the neck of the neck.

Probably the heat has damaged one or more of the bearings causing the knock, etc. From what you have stated it hardly seems possible that the whole engine should be discarded and a new one installed. Would suggest that you employ a good mechanic to look it over thoroughly. Fundamentally your engine is no different and there is no reason why an experienced automobile mechanic can not make this needed repairs.

Motor Department: I hear a lot of praise and big talk about the motor with the overhead valve and this makes me prick up my ears. I have one myself standing idle. What do you think of it? Is it better than others? The new Maxwell puts great stress on this, J. H.

The location of the valves does not make a better motor than another. You will find either type valve used on many high grade cars. The design of the engine, quality of materials and workmanship are important factors which determine the efficiency.

Motor Department: Will you please answer the following questions in your column? I have a Ford car in which I put some light grease in the rear end as you recommended, a year ago last fall. When the spring came on there was no way that I knew of to drain the grease out of the rear end.

When the grease had been in the work weather it oozed out over the emergency box and tires. Is there any way of draining this grease out after it has been put in? Will you please explain how we can put the graphite on the springs of a Ford equipped with shock absorbers? It seems to me that the grease in these shock absorbers, every time the springs are to be greased, when having new pistons fitted is it better to have the shock ground or bored, to be sure of the best job? What are the symptoms of a bent crank shaft?—K. B.

You will find a grease plug in the differential housing. If you wish to remove the light grease, you can do so by using a suction grease gun. You can purchase a special spring tool which will enable you to separate the leaves enough to lubricate. Ask your supply dealer. A better job is obtained when the cylinders are greased with grease and rings fitted. At the same time have the crank shaft trued up. A bent crank shaft will cause pounding and vibration. An amount of trouble may result if this condition is allowed to continue.

Motor Department: I have a 1920 Crow Eklart and a short time ago had it overhauled. New rings, valves ground, new oil, also new distributor, and on being assembled had a misfire in it. On level ground it misfires badly, but on a hill hits just fine. Has a scratch carburetor on it. Is there any adjustment for use? Thanking you in advance for any information, I am—K. E.

When an engine performs well on a hill, it is safe to assume that the trouble is due to minor defects, such as water in the carburetor, etc.

Motor Department: A solution to the following questions would be greatly appreciated: (1) What does a bill grind or hum take place as if the rear end of the front? How could this be remedied? Would the torque rod have anything to do with it? (2) Had the clutch completely disassembled, and the parts put together. When car goes along about 20 to 25 miles an hour an awful rattle comes from the plates of the clutch. Would this indicate the plates were loose, and, how could this be remedied? Thanking you in advance, L. E.

The differential may need grease or the bevel pinion may be loose, requiring it to be removed and securely fastened. The torque rod would not affect this. The plates of the clutch would not be loose or out of adjustment.

"D. O." Means Four Years' Intensive Training

LETTERS attached to a person's name, signifying certain degrees, are a fraud unless the person has earned them and unless they stand for special and specific training.

A professional man is one who professes knowledge and knowledge worthy of a profession can not be gained in a brief period. No man can become a "D. O." (Doctor of Osteopathy) until by virtue of extended and standard study he becomes a true professional.

No school of healing or medicine is more exacting in its curriculum or trains its students longer than Osteopathic colleges—for a system based on the manifold truths of Anatomy and Physiology must be thorough.

Qualified men and women who are considering the study of Osteopathy should obtain information from one of the following recognized institutions:

American School of Osteopathy Kirksville, Mo.
Founded in 1892

Chicago College of Osteopathy
Chicago, Ill.
Founded in 1906

Philadelphia College of Osteopathy
Philadelphia, Pa.
Founded in 1899

Kansas City College of Osteopathy and Surgery
Kansas City, Mo.
Founded in 1911

Des Moines Still College of Osteopathy
Des Moines, Iowa
Founded in 1898

College of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons
Los Angeles, Cal.
Founded in 1907

Massachusetts College of Osteopathy
Boston, Mass.
Founded in 1897

All of these schools conform to the same rigid entrance and graduation requirements. The young man or woman who enters an Osteopathic College studies long and hard, but graduates trained to creditably live up to letters standing for a Doctorship well earned.

Osteopathy is the science of healing by adjustment of the body, more specifically of the spinal column. The Osteopathic Physician is trained through four separate school years of nine months each, in all branches necessary for correct diagnosis and processes fundamental to healing. State laws universally recognize Osteopathy as a thoroughly responsible and capable system of healing.

the car would not drive at the speed mentioned, it is probably a loosening or wear at the shifting yoke, which is a matter for the repair man.

Motor Department: I have a Buick car run about 6,500 miles. It does not fire regularly. It runs on three cylinders, but no spark on the other. One cylinder will miss once or twice, then it may fire all right for a while, and another one miss. I have cleaned my plugs, ground the valves and removed the carbon. Have tried adjusting carburetor, but to no avail. Also drained carburetor to remove water. If you can help me with this I will sincerely thank you for any information given.—R. E.

The trouble would seem to be in the ignition system. Clean inter-cylinder points and clean out any dirt in distributor. If gapped at all, use gasoline and cloth. On the other hand, if the distributor is among the possibilities, run motor and see if a good spark occurs at each plug.

Motor Department: I have a Westinghouse generator to generate current for starting and lights. I have had trouble recently with the brushes getting so hot that the solder on the spring connected with the brushes has melted. What is my remedy? Is it converted up wrong? Also on starting my car there is a click on the drive shaft or rear wheels. I shall be pleased for your advice on the matter.—Ender.

Your brushes do not fit the commutator properly and will have to be refitted by a skilled workman. This may be due to a dirty commutator which causes the brushes to spark. If the wire from the brush to the cap has broken it must be replaced, as that alone would make the spring heat. Click in rear axle is probably caused by lost axle shaft in hub. The shaft should fit tight in hub.

Motor Department: I have a high tension magneto on my car, and it is very hard to crank. The magneto is supposed to start any motor on one-quarter turn, but it will not do. Can you suggest something that will overcome the trouble? Can it be converted up with batteries to crank on? If so, how and what kind of a coil would you advise to connect it with? Thanking you in advance for any information you may be able to give me, I am, E. E.

When starting on the magneto it is advisable to advance the spark. This will facilitate starting. You might also arrange an attachment on the carburetor which will afford a rich mixture and facilitate starting. Write me regarding instructions as to the changes you contemplate. In writing give full particulars regarding the type of magneto you are using.

Helpful Hints.
Kerosene should be used in drilling, reaming or turning malleable iron or aluminum. On the other hand turpentine should be used instead of the oil for drilling hard steel, as it will enable rapid drilling of the metal.
If the screws that hold the small brass brackets to the vibrator box become worn so that they do not hold, do not use longer screws. Longer screws may injure the windings of the coil and spoil the vibrator. Better put a metal band clear around the box and attach to dash with small bolts.
When it is desired to overcome the noise of a set of badly worn gears it must be understood that the replacement of one of the gears will not do the trick. Only by replacing both members can it be hoped to quiet the noise.
A book that has a tendency to rattle with the vibration of the motor may be silenced by drilling a series of holes in the hand of metal which the hood rests and spreading a strip of leather through the holes. In this way the hood rests on leather instead of metal, so that it cannot make a noise.
State license fees for motor trucks average $55.

JORDAN RESUMES FULL PRODUCTION

Evidence of a quickening demand for motor cars is furnished by the Jordan Motor Car company in a report on sales results of the Chicago show.

Jordan sold 23 cars at retail during the week of the show, and at a dealers' convention uncancelable orders were taken for 1,743 cars for delivery in limited allotments over the next four months.

The Jordan factory went on a full capacity schedule Monday morning following the close of the show. Five companies showed substantial increases in the volume of business done during the fourth quarter of 1921 as against the third quarter. These included Pierce-Arrow, Cadillac, Maxwell, Chevrolet and Jordan.

Jordan showed an increase of 41 per cent in volume and 42 per cent in cars.

Use of red and green front lights on automobiles is forbidden in Buffalo, N. Y.

Any dirt or grit that has worked its way into the brake lining can be cleaned out by applying to the bands a small amount of resin and heater oil mixed into a plastic condition.
On many cars the windshield is held in place by steel arms which protrude through the cowl and are fastened on the upper side by a nut and lock nut. Sometimes these nuts work loose from the vibration with the result that the shield is allowed to move slightly and cause an annoying squeak.

See It—Try It—You'll Like It
This is the kind of closed car luxury, comfort and distinction you have wanted.

The price makes it easy to own. Just examine and ride in it. Then look at its price. That is enough to convince you.
But think also of what the name Essex means in reliability and performance. Its records star the history of motordom.
You will probably buy the Coach if you see it. You will find, in addition to good looks and comfort, that it has durability, real performance ability and economy that continues to save for you all the years you drive it.

Too Good to Trade
In two years my Essex has been driven more than 20,000 miles. I have refused good offers to trade it, because it is running so well, and seems perfectly good for another twenty or thirty thousand miles.

More Facts You Should Know!

1 For the calendar year, January 1, 1921, to January 1, 1922, Buick built and actually sold over 80,000 automobiles.

2 These sales for the calendar year 1921 exceeded by over 12,000 cars the sales of any automobile manufacturer having a six-cylinder automobile in its line.

3 These sales for this period likewise represent a volume of business greater by over $9,000,000 than the sales of any other automobile manufacturer excluding Ford.

4 These figures are taken from official reports and are absolutely reliable.

ROTARIANS WILL OBSERVE BIRTHDAY OF ORDER THURSDAY

15TH ANNIVERSARY OF ORGANIZATION WILL BE CELEBRATED HERE.

OVER 1100 CLUBS NOW, WITH 76,000 MEMBERS

All of Past Presidents Are to Participate in Local Program of Observance.

The 15th anniversary of the founding of the first Rotary club will be observed by local Rotarians next Thursday night with a program at the Kansas No noon luncheon will be held on Thursday.

From its first club of four members, organized by Paul P. Harris of Chicago in February, 1907, the Rotary idea has spread to a membership of 76,000 in over 1100 clubs scattered throughout the civilized world.

Outside of Russia, Germany and the Balkans, there is hardly a white man's country on the globe that is not represented in Rotary and new clubs are being formed almost daily.

A roll call of charter members and a talk by each of the past presidents will be among the features of the program next Thursday night, starting at 7:30 p. m. Judge P. A. Martin will be the principal speaker. Reminiscences of the local club, organized in 1915, will also be a feature of the meeting. Witnesses of members are expected to join in the festivities. The program follows:

Orchestra selection; song by the club, "The Eyes of Texas"; invocation, E. S. Goodner; roll call of charter members; vocal solo, John W. Bradley; reports by past presidents, George Keith, Tom B. Smock, Q. B. Lee, J. M. McFall, C. R. Hartsock, I. H. Roberts; song by club; vocal solo, Ivan Marchison; address, P. A. Martin.

STATE UNIVERSITY EX-STUDENTS PLAN ANNUAL REUNION

The largest attendance ever recorded at a similar gathering here is confidently expected by local "Texas Exes" on March 2, when the annual reunion of former students of the State University is held here.

In former years the national "exes" from neighboring communities will attend, and a number of visitors from Hurlbournett, Electra, Seymour, Graham, Henrietta, and other points are expected.

The principal speaker of this year's program will be Dr. H. Y. Benedict, one of the most honored of State University faculty members. Dr. Benedict is an after dinner speaker of exceptional ability and it is expected that every "ex" who can do so will be present to hear him. The program is not yet complete, but will include several other speakers. A banquet will follow the banquet, which will be held at the Wichita club.

In view of the fact that the lists of "exes" in the various sections are complete, it is requested that all former students consider themselves invited whether receiving mail notification or not. Announcement of the date and place of making reservations will be made shortly.

NEW K. OF P. LODGE ROOMS EQUIPPED AND OPENED, ENJOYED BY MEMBERS

The local lodge of the Knights of Pythias has recently equipped and fitted up elaborate club rooms at the corner of Ninth and Travis streets in quarters formerly occupied by the Artistic dancing academy.

At a cost of several thousand dollars, five pool tables, a billiard table, library table and club room equipment including domino tables, have been installed.

Opening of the club rooms is reported as having had the most stimulating effect on attendance at lodge meetings, now regularly attended by a considerable number. At the last meeting completion of installation of nine new members was effected, and a like number are awaiting initiation.

The club has a five-year lease on the building and is planning further improvements in way of reading and writing conveniences for the membership and recreational opportunities for visiting members in the city. The club rooms are under the management of a house committee consisting of T. Hodges, John P. Marrs and Ira D. Brown who are elected for the current year.

ARREST OF GAINESVILLE JUDGE DECLARED TO BE BIT OF POLITICAL TRICKERY

The Kiwanis club of Gainesville has declared its confidence in Judge C. R. Fearman, judge of the sixteenth district court, the district comprising Denton, Cook and Montague counties. A complaint had been filed with U. S. Commissioner Lantz at Wichita Falls charging Judge Fearman with violation of the federal prohibition law.

The following relative to the resolution of the Kiwanis club at Gainesville and other developments is taken from the Gainesville Register, which says:

The Kiwanis club, meeting in weekly session at noon today, passed resolutions that were unanimously endorsed, expressing the club's confidence in the political and individual integrity of District Judge Charles R. Fearman of Gainesville, who is now the target of what is believed to be one of the most unscrupulous political trickery schemes ever perpetrated in this section of the state. The club went on record as standing back of Judge Fearman with their moral support in his defense against the charges that have been filed against him.

This action of the Kiwanis club comes as an aftermath to Judge Fearman's arrest in Montague county last Saturday by a federal prohibition officer, who found in the judge's possession a bottle of wine that is said to have been given him by a lady at Bowie in connection with Mrs. Fearman. This wine is alleged to have been in Mr. Fearman's suit case for several days prior to his departure for Gainesville and the seal was unbroken when taken from him by the dry ferret.

According to an article in the Denton Record-Chronicle, which was written after a personal interview with Judge Fearman, he stated that the officer who arrested him and confiscated the wine from his automobile, informed the judge that if he was wanted the federal commissioner for this district would send him notice. Although his arrest occurred last Saturday, charges were not filed until today, according to Associated Press dispatches to the Register, and even then the district attorney at Wichita Falls has asked that the hearing be postponed until he can make a personal investigation of the affair.

From the most accurate information obtainable, the scheme is one to force Judge Fearman to relinquish his office, that his opponents may put in a man to their liking. Strike is said to have been occasioned in Montague county when Judge Fearman dismissed some cases in which he considered the evidence insufficient to result in convictions, therefore would have taken up the time of the court without accomplishing anything. One of the officials of Montague county, who was instrumental in bringing these cases before the court, is alleged to have become incensed at Judge Fearman's dismissal of the charges and it is openly asserted by those in Gainesville claiming knowledge of "inside dope" that the anger thus aroused was followed by information being forwarded to the federal prohibition agent, later resulting in Fearman's arrest.

P. V. Petty, the arresting officer, was in Gainesville this week, but the purpose of his visit cannot be learned, he having worked very quietly while here. Petty returned to Fort Worth yesterday, and is understood not to have been ordered to return here for further information regarding the habits of Judge Fearman.

Charles Fearman has lived in Cooke county all his life. He came to Gainesville from his father's farm some 29 years ago and during all that time has enjoyed the confidence and friendship of a great majority of the substantial citizens of the county, as testified by his election to the office of county attorney and then later to that of district judge. He is known as a total abstainer from intoxicants and no man has ever been heard to say that Fearman was under the influence of liquor. The further fact that the bottle of wine in his possession was not unopened, although he had had possession of it for several days, verifies the statement that he has no inclinations for strong drink. Those who declare that it is unlaful for a person to have intoxicants in their possession, defend Fearman for his breach of the statutes by asserting that under similar circumstances they would have accepted the gift of wine as did he, the intent of violating a law perhaps never presenting itself.

The substantial citizens of Gainesville have taken great interest in this case since the first reports were heard in a Fort Worth paper last Sunday, and after thorough investigations are convinced that political trickery is the cause of this unwarranted attack on his character. There seems small doubt but that Judge Fearman will find this community standing solidly behind him in his defense.

COMMISSIONERS TO ESTABLISH VOTING PLACES IN BOXES

Voting places in the new precinct boxes created by the court, will be selected at the regular session of the commissioners Monday morning. The court last August redistricted the city and county into new voting precincts.

Places where the elections will be held in the new boxes was not determined at that time and during the past week the county judge and county clerk have been selecting places to be recommended to the court.

It is the desire of the court to place the voting places in as near the center of each precinct as possible.

Commissioner J. P. Jackson will also announce his appointments of election judges at the meeting Monday.

THE INCOME TAX DODGER AND HIS MANY TRICKS

Elmer E. Dover, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Describes Some of the Multitude of Schemes Resorted to by the Artful Citizen in His Efforts to Cut Down His Return

By William Atherton Du Puy

Elmer E. Dover, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, the income-tax dodger.

"WHAT are the methods to which the income tax dodger resorts?" I asked Elmer Dover, the high priest of the annual riddle.

Mr. Dover is the top official in the Government who presides over that multitude of brows which are to be corrugated through the coming month because of the exasperating details of filling in and leaving blank the proper places in income tax sheets, seventy-one tons of which must be crunched up, sworn to and sent to the collectors. He is Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of internal revenue and other incidental bureaus of the department over which Andrew W. Mellon, of Pittsburgh, presides.

In this position he is the individual responsible for the detection of a stupendous amount of crime that is just now in the act of being committed. Every individual who makes a return that is false perpetrates a crime against a written law of the Federal Government, and if caught will be sent to jail. Every individual who visits a notary and swears that this false return is true commits the additional crime of perjury, punishable by the State Courts. Every man who pays less income tax than he should is guilty of the further offense of cheating his neighbor who is honest, for since the Treasury must have the money to run the Government, the conscientious taxpayer must make up the deficiencies of those who cheat.

Now these men who attempt to defraud the Government—what do you suppose are the methods they use? How do they falsify their papers? What are the dodges here and there and yonder to which they resort to beat the Government? And how, do you suppose, does the Government frustrate their dishonest attempts? How does it keep them from evading this tax which is the principal support of the Government? How does it catch Tom, Dick and Harry, here, there and yonder if they do not make proper returns?

Well, this is what I asked Elmer Dover, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. This man Dover was secretary to Senator Mark Hanna back in the days when he was a President-maker, and was later secretary of the National Republican Committee. For the past decade he has been Pacific Coast manager of a great public utilities corporation. Now he has come back to Washington to take an executive post under Warren G. Harding, of Ohio, with whom he has worked indirectly for twenty-five years—Elmer Dover, big, blond, genial man of affairs, who has been hitting the line of interesting accomplishment for these thirty years past.

MR. DOVER relied upon his subordinate for a list of cases of income tax evasion of the past, showing typical methods used in trying to avoid proper payments, and told me about them. Since there are only a few scores of schemes that can be worked, and since it therefore becomes necessary that violators resort to variations of these few schemes, there are the devices to which men will be resorting from coast to coast these next few weeks. Since examiners have learned to recognize these devices a block away, and since there are no new ones, it is upon these stock tricks that men will be going to jail for years to come.

"There are large groups of citizens in the United States," said Mr. Dover, "who are subjected to certain classes of temptations. There was the case, for instance, of a merchant who took a fancy to a prosperous shoe store in a Middle Western town. He was highly respected in the community, a member of the city Council, an active man in the various progressive enterprises of the community.

"The income tax return of such an individual, one might figure, would be accepted on its face value, and if it seemed to be reasonable, the shipping off of items here and there might be expected to go undisturbed. Here, however, is just what happened in the case of this shoe merchant, and just what may happen at any time with relation to any merchant. A less prosperous rival, out of jealousy for the success of this shoe merchant, drawing a long bow, sent an anonymous letter to the collector, charging this merchant with having falsified his income tax return. This charge led to a visit to the merchant by an agent of the Internal Revenue Bureau, and this agent subjected the accounts of the shoe man to certain tests. The agent knew that one of the stock ruses of merchants was that of falsifying their books with relation to the amount of goods bought and sold. If a merchant, for example, bought 2000 pairs of shoes in a season and sold them he might so fix his books as to show that he bought 1500 pairs of shoes and disposed of them. This would show the profit on 500 pairs of shoes which he would not report in his income tax return. All of which seemed very simple and very unlikeli of detection.

"This agent of the Internal Revenue Bureau, however, looking over the shoe man's books, jotted down a few figures. He noted for each year the quantity of shoes purchased and the manufacturer from whom they were bought. He jotted down these items for the past four years and went away. It was all done in half an hour.

"These figures he sent to agents of the department located in the cities where the shoe manufacturers have their headquarters. These agents went around to these establishments and asked to examine the accounts of this shoe merchant for the years in question. They ran back these accounts and found that the times for the past three years were entirely correct. In the fourth year, however, there was a discrepancy. This dealer, early in his income tax experience, had cheated the Government a bit. He had bought more shoes than he entered in his books. He had sold them, and the profit did not appear. So he had four years ago cheated the Government out of a somewhat inconsequential amount of money. His conscience had evidently hurt him and during the following years he had made an honest return. He had undoubtedly considered his old shortcomings as a closed chapter. As soon as his books were examined, however, the experts found his dereliction, and he was called upon to correct and forced to make good. All of which goes to show that even though one seems to have been successful in evading income tax, his ancient shortcomings may arise at any time to plague him.

"Quite a different type of merchant who come tax to avoid payment of his income tax is shown in an Eastern city who conducted a business which amounted to millions of dollars every year. This man's business was so large, and the amount that he should pay to the Government was so great, that he should logically expect his returns to be carefully examined, and even that his books should be inspected. It was necessary to his business that he have a true set of books for his own use, and his usual resort was that of building up a duplicate set of books so falsified as to show less profits for the inspection of the revenue agents should they present themselves. In a big firm of this sort, therefore, it became necessary that the bookkeeper become a part of the scheme to deceive.

"This woolen manufacturer, therefore, called upon two members of his bookkeeping staff, long in his employ, and instructed them in the preparation of a duplicate set of books.

"These two men immediately set about the making up of such books. They were, however, honest men, and the further they went the more their consciences smote them. They were aware of the fact that this wholesaler was deliberately cheating his Government out of millions of dollars. In the end they consulted an attorney and this attorney advised them to report what they knew to the Government.

"This they did. The result was the arrest of their employer, the collection by the Government of the full sum due it, with penalties, and the sentencing of this employer to a term in jail.

"The department has come into contact with at least one case of which falsification of accounts and the manufacture of a duplicate set of books has been developed into a considerable industry. In one of our great cities there was a firm of accountants keeping the books for hundreds of businesses. They received the possibilities that lay in this scheme of duplicating books for their different clients, showed those possibilities and offered to provide the proper sets of books for defrauding the Government on a basis of 50 per cent of the money that was so saved.

"Proceeding very carefully, these accountants made an arrangement of this sort with some fifty of their clients. They had taken the books of these fifty clients to their offices and were already at work on the duplicate sets. Then the head of the firm approached another client, laid out the scheme before him in all its possibilities, and told him how successfully it was being worked in other cases. This client, being an honest man, conceiving his duty to be the same as though he had discovered a plan to loot a bank or burglarize a house, carried his information to the proper Government agency. A raid was made upon the establishment of these accountants, the fifty sets of books were seized and very excellent cases made against all parties. Much money was saved and a series of convictions secured.

"REGARDLESS of the line of business in which a man may be engaged, the department has at its disposal methods of checking, many of which are of such a nature that the individual does not conceive of their existence or of the possibility of applying them. Take, for example, the contractor whose business it is to build railroads. His work is out in the country and his chief item of expense lies in the labor that he hires. When he goes to make up his statement of income he is likely to see the possibility of padding his payrolls, thereby increasing his apparent expense and making it more nearly balance with his income. These gangs working on his railroad are today distributed along the right of way and tomorrow have melted like the snows and gone. It seems to him entirely safe that he should pad a little here and there and save himself this money.

"It developed that he had in fact never paid income tax to the Government. When questioned he declared that the reason he had not done so was because he had made no profits during the life of the income tax law, but had, instead, sustained only losses. His statement to the Government showed profits that he had made in all lands, but balanced against them were losses that he had sustained on land in Mexico. He had apparently sold that real estate at a very substantial loss. Careful investigation, however, revealed the fact that the purchaser was a member of his own family and that the sale was more apparent than real. The outcome was that this man was required to pay a very handsome tax with penalties. The position of the Government is that honest citizens have a right to be curious with relation to the returns of such men and that the bureau is glad to hear of their suspicions.

"Another method of evasion of the salary roll is out of proportion to the volume of business done in this store. He makes an investigation, finds that the store is incorporated, that the wife of the owner draws a salary of ten thousand dollars a year as vice president, that his daughter draws five thousand dollars as a director, that all the children of the family down to the baby in the cradle are on the payroll. The merchant finds himself in trouble.

"There are many individuals about the country, whose occupation and whose sources of income are not particularly obvious. There was, for instance, the case of a man living in a comfortable hotel in a city near the Mexican border who gave evidence of possession of abundant funds and with relation to whose income a casual acquaintance became curious. This acquaintance was a conscientious taxpayer and he wondered if the other individual who lived at ease and luxury was contributing his share to the support of the Government. He asked the collector of internal revenue, to whom he had made his own income tax report, if this man had done likewise.

"The individual here and there over the country making his return may say to himself that there is no method by which the Government may determine whether or not these are the facts. In so stating he is deceiving himself and putting himself where he may be called at any time as a criminal before the bar of justice. The fact that he has made a false return years ago and nothing has come of it is no assurance to him that he has escaped detection. The record of his crime still exists and sooner or later the Government will arrive at a point where his case will be taken up and he must face the possibilities of penalties and prison.

"A bootlegger, a gambler, a burglar, a forger may with impunity come to the office of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, report his income, pay tax upon it and walk out. It is not the business of the bureau to pursue individuals for crimes they have committed, and, in fact, it is instructed by law to hold such information in its possession as confidential.

"THERE was the case, for instance, of a man in one of the industrial cities who lived lavishly, his income being derived from the occupation of bookmaking, which calling was of questionable lawfulness. Since he paid no income tax an agent instituted an investigation. He found that this man kept no books, but in the year past had run through a local bank a sum which amounted to half a million dollars. He summarily assessed that half million as the income of the bookmaker. This threw the burden of proof on the bookmaker, made it necessary for him to accept that assessment or explain the manner in which he had got the money, his income and expenditures. As the easiest way the bookmaker paid income tax on $500,000.

"These are but a few of the cases which illustrate the methods to which individuals may resort in attempts to evade payment of income tax. But a few of the obvious methods of detecting these evasions are here revealed. In handling the multitude of returns from his millions of citizens who make them, agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue become so familiar with every device to which the evader may resort that they are quite readily recognized. So well developed are the tests which these agents may apply to any individual return that its correctness or falsity may be very easily determined.

"The individual here and there over the country making his return may say to himself that there is no method by which the Government may determine whether or well-to-do came to light when an agent went to investigate the returns of a certain retired and elderly couple somewhat well known in the community for their apparent interest in charitable organizations. This couple had, in fact, created a charity organization, the declared purpose of which was to provide vacations for working girls. They had bought a tract of land in the country for which they had paid $1500. In the heated season they had spent as much as $1000 in sending girls out to this place.

"In the meantime, however, they had transferred millions of dollars worth of securities to the ownership of this charity organization in which they held legal title and had thus succeeded in setting up a claim that the securities held by a charitable organization were tax free. They had for a time escaped payment, but in the end were forced to disgorge the full amounts with penalties.

"The man who resorts to fraud in making his income tax return nearly always is forced to put himself at the mercy of some other individual. Some bookkeeper, clerk, neighbor, rival or confidant is pretty sure to know that this man is not making his proper returns. There is always a chance of a disgruntled employe, a faithless confidant, a friend who has been converted into an enemy, revealing knowledge which will lead to the undoing of the maker of false returns.

"THERE was the case, for instance, of a man who ran the meanest business of which I have ever heard. He advertised that he stood ready to purchase Liberty Bonds from the poor and suffering for the relief of their misery. He never paid the relief of their misery, and when he bought them from the ignorant who had not known them to elude the coupons from them he never showed them their mistake. He preyed particularly upon those who had come unlawfully into the possession of these bonds. If a shifty individual came into the shop and offered bonds for sale, the proprietor would take them for inspection and betake himself to a dummy telephone in the rear of the establishment and pretend to call up police headquarters in a tone just audible to the man outside and inquire if Liberty Bonds of these numbers had been reported lost. If the man outside had come unlawfully into possession of these bonds, he would probably see, leaving them behind and the proprietor would appropriate them unto himself.

"This man made much money. He bragged of his earnings and in the manner in which he made them to the girl of his kind to whom he was engaged. With prosperity, however, came wild life, a no these are the facts. In so stating he is deceiving himself and putting himself where he may be called at any time as a criminal before the bar of justice. The fact that he has made a false return years ago and nothing has come of it is no assurance to him that he has escaped detection. The record of his crime still exists and sooner or later the Government will arrive at a point where his case will be taken up and he must face the possibilities of penalties and prison.

"There used to be a feeling that failure to pay taxes was a thing rather to be winked at, that stealing from the Government was really not stealing. That feeling is passing and people are now reporting the violators just as they report the burglar whom they see entering a window. This is largely because they have come to realize that when the crooks escape taxes honest folks have to pay more. Wherever questions arise in the minds of citizens or employes these days they are coming to feel themselves called upon to give information to the authorities. This may even be done in anonymous letters. Investigations will be made and if the taxpayer is honest that fact will be established. If he is a tax dodger he will be forced to do his share. The citizen can render service to his Government by giving information, addressing his letter to the Collector of Internal Revenue of his district.

"Lawless is the individual who, during the weeks that are to come, makes a false report in black and white and swears to it, for he is then and there suspending over his own head the sword of Damocles, which may fall at any moment through the years that are to come."

High and Dry

"THE real estate agent was endeavoring to impress Mr. Klinker with the extreme desirability of the house in Narville. He opened the door at the cellar stairs with a flourish.

"We'll go down if you like," he said briskly, "but you can see there's everything anybody could wish in a suburban cellar—hard cement bottom, whitewashed sides, good coal and wood bins, approached by raised platform; furnace the same, set tubs the same."

"What's the need of those raised platforms you speak of?" asked Mr. Klinker, peering into the darkness.

"HENRY is the missing and fall rains," said the agent. "Shows the advantage of this location. That they're all you need. Street below this, I'm told, a small boat goes with every cellar, but we don't handle that street at all."

WHEN PRESIDENT WASHINGTON WAS SOCIETY'S HOST

The Colorful Days of the Infancy of the Republic Are Here Recalled With the Belles and Beaux Making Their Bows to the First Lady of the Land

By Mary A. Clarke

DURING the period of Washington's administration in Philadelphia, the Quaker City, the heart of the Nation, became its capital, the home of its statesmen and the center of its social life.

Under the Constitution New York had been the metropolis for less than two years, during which time a gloom had been cast over the official world by the dangerous illness of Washington with anthrax and the death of his mother. So when Philadelphia was chosen as the temporary capital, a choice chiefly due to the efforts of Robert Morris, a veritable boom took place; houses were built, rents were doubled, the markets became desolate, fine dry goods shops were opened on Front street all the way from Arch to Walnut, where importers displayed most enticing wares; prominent persons from all parts of the country took up their residence here; elegant equipages were set up, and a new theatre was built. Gayety was in the air; even the Quakers became infected with it. And as strangers poured into the city, the Philadelphia women speedily became renowned for their intelligence, beauty and grace.

The house of Mr. Morris on High street, now Market street, was rented for the President's home. It was on the south side of Market between Fifth and Sixth, now the site of stores and big warehouses, and was at that time the best single residence in the city. It was a double house of brick, even then dark with age, three and a half stories high, with two lampposts before the door. To the east a brick wall extended well toward Fifth street and inclosed a garden shaded by noble trees and running back to what is now Ludlow street, where the stables stood. It is much to be regretted that this building was not preserved, but in time it came to be used one-half as a boarding house and the other half as a confectionery, then disappeared.

Washington was one of the richest men in America and the foremost leader of the Virginia aristocracy. He and his wife represented the best elements of American society, for the framework of society was still aristocratic, though the popular tendency was democratic. And in Philadelphia they established a federal court far more stately and elegant than has existed at any time since, and marked by a high moral tone and pure taste.

The first lady in the land was born Martha Dandridge, of good Virginia family and the heiress to a large fortune. She had troops of suitors before her first marriage at seventeen to Daniel Parke Custis. Later, when she was the handsomest and richest widow in Virginia and won the love of the young soldier of Mount Vernon, Washington had many competitors, but it was a case of the brave only deserving the fair, and only she brave could win her. A portrait of her at twenty-seven, just before her marriage to Washington, shows piquant beauty and a pleasing grace, which is said to have been her greatest distinction.

Certainly there was a love match, and they lived together on the happiest terms, never differing except on points of discipline as concerned her children, and subsequently the grandchildren. The President entertained very formally. He invited to dinner only officials and strangers of distinction. His dinner parties were always given on Thursday, at four o'clock, and the guests were waited for, Mrs. Washington was usually present, and if there were other ladies, they sat on each side of her. The President always asked a blessing at his own table, and in a standing posture. His receptions were held on alternate two large drawing rooms on the second floor on Friday evenings from 8 to 10, and were attended by all persons connected with the Government and their families, by distinguished strangers and by all men and women whose social position entitled them to a place in cultivated society. The first one was on Christmas Eve, 1790. Full dress was required. The visitors were seated, and refreshments of tea, coffee, plum and plain cake were served. All were expected to leave early; Washington invariably appeared as a private gentleman with neither hat nor sword, and conversed affably with the ladies who, excepting intimate friends, rarely had other opportunity of meeting him. At one drawing room he came upstairs and bowed to every lady after she was seated. Proud of her husband's fame, Mrs. Washington was scrupulous in exacting for him all the courtesy to which he was entitled. She always spoke of him as "the general." The Democrats objected to her drawing rooms as tending to exalt her personally, and to introduce the customs of foreign courts.

ALTHOUGH Mrs. Washington has been described as a notable housewife, the correspondence of Washington concerning the fitting up of the presidential mansion indicates that she did very little to relieve the general of the trouble of household affairs, so minutely does he enter into the details of furnishing the new house and equipping it with servants, their duties and clothes, the packing of china and glass, the cost of the butler's table as compared with his own, the selection of and hanging of looking glasses and hall lamps, the ordering of a mantle for ironing clothes. He even designed a wine cooler, an article which, for twenty-five years thereafter was considered indispensable on every dining table. Many letters show his thoughtfulness for his wife. In one to his secretary he writes, "Furnish Mrs. Washington with all the money she may want, and from time to time ask her if she does want any, as she is not fond of applying. At sixty-two, when she came to Philadelphia, Mrs. Washington looked somewhat older than the President, although they were born in the same year. She was short of stature, rather robust, very matronly, wearing usually a plain cap over her gray hair and full rosy face, as we see her in the portrait painted by Turnbull. At a birthday ball in her husband's honor, Lady Washington wore black velvet trimmed with silver lace. But usually her raiment was extremely simple, and this was the more noteworthy because, even at that day, the extravagance in dress of the American women had been remarked by foreigners, who marveled to see our merchants' wives clad to the tip in French fashions. At the first inaugural, both the President and his wife were clothed entirely in the manufactures of our own country.

Lady Washington always returned visits on the third day, usually in coach and four, but sometimes on foot, most likely accompanied by either Tobias Lear or Colonel Jackson, the President's secretaries. A footman would go before her and knock loudly, announcing Mrs. Washington, whose visit would be easy, pleasant, unceremonious, like that of any other Virginia lady. This coach was the most splendid ever seen in Philadelphia. It was of cream color, globular in shape, the panels ornamented with festoons of flowers and cupids. It was drawn by four Virginia bays with long tails and splendid harness. Some say it was presented to Washington by King Louis XVI, of France; others that it was brought to the city for the use of Governor Richard Penn. As at sixty-two, when she came to Philadelphia, Mrs. Washington looked somewhat older than the President, although they were born in the same year. She was short of stature, rather robust, very matronly, wearing usually a plain cap over her gray hair and full rosy face, as we see her in the portrait painted by Turnbull. At a birthday ball in her husband's honor, Lady Washington wore black velvet trimmed with silver lace. But usually her raiment was extremely simple, and this was the more noteworthy because, even at that day, the extravagance in dress of the American women had been remarked by foreigners, who marveled to see our merchants' wives clad to the tip in French fashions. At the first inaugural, both the President and his wife were clothed entirely in the manufactures of our own country. Lady Washington always returned visits on the third day, usually in coach and four, but sometimes on foot, most likely accompanied by either Tobias Lear or Colonel Jackson, the President's secretaries. A footman would go before her and knock loudly, announcing Mrs. Washington, whose visit would be easy, pleasant, unceremonious, like that of any other Virginia lady. This coach was the most splendid ever seen in Philadelphia. It was of cream color, globular in shape, the panels ornamented with festoons of flowers and cupids. It was drawn by four Virginia bays with long tails and splendid harness. Some say it was presented to Washington by King Louis XVI, of France; others that it was brought to the city for the use of Governor Richard Penn. fashionable people, the gardens being described as a perfect paradise.

One of the few persons that Washington is said to have really loved was Alexander Hamilton, Secretary of the Treasury, and his wife became one of Lady Washington's nearest and best friends. She was Elizabeth Schuyler, daughter of General Schuyler of Revolutionary fame, and came of a race of women noted for charm, intellect and high courage. The Hamiltons' home was at the corner of Third and Walnut streets, and here they entertained many foreigners of distinction, such as the exiled Abbe Talleyrand and the Duke of Kent, father of Queen Victoria. It was at a dinner at Mrs. Hamilton's that Jerome Bonaparte met the beautiful Miss Patterson, of Baltimore, whom he subsequently married, and, at Napoleon's command, repudiated. After her husband was killed in the duel with Aaron Burr, Mrs. Hamilton lived in great retirement in New York City, where she founded an orphan asylum for girls.

The Chew girls of Germantown, Margaret, Sophia and Harriet, were great favorites with Lady Washington, and the general treated them almost as if they were his children. Harriet accompanied him when he sat to Stuart for his portrait, and Washington always insisted that his pleasant expression in this portrait was due to Mistress Harriet's enlivening conversation.

Mrs. John Jay, as the wife of our first Chief Justice, had been a prominent and charming figure in the first Administration in New York, where her fitting list numbered 118 persons, the "400" of New York society at that time, but the care of a growing family prevented her from spending much time in Philadelphia.

The daughter of Governor Livingston, of New York, born to affluence and carefully trained and educated, Sarah Livingston was married at seventeen to John Jay, and at twenty-two accompanied him when he went to Spain as our first Minister, as she did also three years later when he was sent to Paris as one of the Commissioners to arrange a treaty of peace with England. Her career in Madrid and Paris was a brilliant social success. The foreigners were enthusiastic in her praise, and wherever she went she became a favorite. A lifelong intimacy sprang up between Mrs. Jay and Madame de Lafayette; they were congenial spirits, both being very domestic.

Mrs. Jay was graceful and very handsome, as well as pleasing in manner. In one of his letters the grave Chief Justice bade her tell him "whether her eyes were as bright as ever." She was capable in the Taken altogether, she was a remarkable woman. Her chief charms were her perfect sincerity and a republican simplicity of manner. But she also played an important part in the Nation's early history.

OF ALL the residents of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Morris were by far the most prominent, and a warm friendship had long existed between them and the Washingtons. Mr. Morris was United States Senator from Pennsylvania. Mrs. Morris was of Maryland birth, which had probably first attracted Lady Washington to her. She was the sister of Bishop White, and very highly accomplished. When the Morris mansion was being fitted up for the presidential home, Mrs. Morris advised the Washingtons at every turn as to the disposal of their furniture and other domestic arrangement. At Mrs. Washington's levee Mrs. Morris always sat at the right hand, and at all the presidential dinners, public or private, which Robert Morris attended he was placed at Mrs. Washington's right side. At balls in Philadelphia Mrs. Morris was led in first to supper. Both Mr. Morris and his wife had simple, affable manners. Mr. Morris strongly resembled the King of France.

In their home at Sixth and Market streets they entertained more frequently than any one else in the city. Their style of living was the most comfortable known; no badly cooked or cold meals were served at their board; no pinched fires were seen at their hearths; no lack of waiters at their feasts. They originally had a country home on the site now occupied by the Preston Retreat, but it was burned down in 1784, and during the time that Philadelphia was the capital their country seat was at Lemon Hill, which became the great resort of the Tuesday, between 3 and 4 in the afternoon, in the dining room of the Executive Mansion. These were open to all respectable citizens as well as strangers properly accredited. The visits were optional and without invitation. All chairs were removed from the room, and at 3 o'clock the door was opened, disclosing the President standing by the fireplace, and surrounded by his Cabinet. His hair was powdered and tied in a silk bag. He wore a coat and breeches of black velvet, with a white or pearl-colored vest, yellow gloves and silver knee and shoe buckles, his cocked hat in hand, and with a long sword in white leather scabbard. He never shook hands, even with intimate friends. Names were distinctly announced, and he rarely forgot one. By Washington's own account, gentlemen in great numbers came and went, chatted with each other, and acted as they pleased. A footman showed them into the room, and they retired from it without ceremony when ready. On their entrance they saluted Washington, and he returned no visits. "Bayadere," a Daring de Francisci Sculpture at Cleveland Which Critics Say Is Both Modest and Sensual.

How the Face That to the World Symbolizes "Peace," Stands for "Love" and "Faith" to the Struggling Sculptor Who Has Won Fame at Last.

wonders whether such a figure in life would have been seeking to capture admiration, or merely throwing all of her grace into action for the sheer joy of living, heedless of the multitude, or any part of it.

Its conception is obviously drawn from the Greek, with a touch of Egypt, and a spice of the Latin belt. An artist might fall in love with such a creation, as Pygmalion brought his Galatea to the queenship of his heart.

The strange little man at whose door Fame knocked had other moods, and in one of them he produced "Faith"—a faith that leaves no doubt of early religious veneration, and the innate reverence of his native region for the holy.

But the heart story of the little man is all represented by a head—the head of a child, and of a child in study. In "Theresa," he has done the head of his own wife, and it, the simplest of his collection, is the most cherished of his work.

The beautiful little woman sat in his studio with him when I called. She is of that peculiar, diminutive type that seems half-child, half-woman. Raven hair frames a profile that is regular. The face is rounded and soft. It is the face of the southern seas, and in this respect becomes interesting, because for many years the face of Liberty on the American dollar has been of the strong, forceful type that represented the women folk of those intrepid souls who blazed a trail for the refuge of other peoples.

It was Miss Williams, a typical American of British line, whose face had always been seen on the dollar before, and the transition to the softer type of the land of olives carries with it the suggestion of forcing a study in national expansion, and of the change in the all-American type of citizenship.

Mrs. de Francisci came here when a child. She was taken to Clinton, Mass., where she acquired a good English education, and there is no trace in her speech of any land than that of their joint adoption. She might step into any American home without giving the least suggestion of being out of her element.

She loves the swarthy artist with a devotion that is pretty, and it is the wife who tells you best what he has done, for he still speaks English with difficulty and mixes the accent of Italy under the stress of excitement.

Winning Honor in a Hurry

"How did I come to win the prize that was awarded for the best design for the new dollar?" he repeats, at the rate of 300 words a minute. "I don't know. I thought that I was always to run second. I made many designs. Sometimes I got second place, but it looked like Fate had placed me always second."

"But, dear," says the wife, "one must start somewhere. One must be second some time before one can be first."

He explains to one that he studied and worked with James Earl Fraser and Adolph A. Weinman. Mr. Fraser designed the buffalo nickel and Mr. Weinman the current dime and half-dollar. Both are distinguished artists.

"I had only eighteen days' notice to make this design," said Mr. de Francisci. "I had to work many hours a day before I got the right idea."

During all of this work the wife posed for him. It was his babyish head of "Theresa" that finally suggested the winning design. The coin itself is simple; a mere head, surmounted by a crown, with the plainest lettering, and the reverse side carries the conventional eagle bird, dressed in the conventional feathers, which no eagle ever wore coin fashion, but which seem to have no hindering effect upon the rapid spending of the ultimate product.

"Peace" runs the legend under the bird. The broken sword, which had been first suggested for one claw of the eagle, was discarded when many protestants insisted that a broken sword was no kind of tool for an American eagle to be carrying around.

But the point of this story is that Fame followed to an humble studio and crowned a young artist who tirelessly tried. And in the crowning, Fame divided the laurels with the beautiful young woman who shared the toil that led to the heights.

By Betty Van Benthuisen

FAME turned west from Broadway into Sixtieth street, New York City, and scanned the row of weather-beaten houses that huddled together as if to keep the winter wind from entering the seams and fissures that time had opened in the facades. He stopped in front of No. 24. Then he entered.

Up the winding, carpetless stairway Fame climbed, even to the topmost flight, then stopped before the double doors of a studio and knocked. A little, tawny man of thirty-four, roughly clad in working clothes of the artist, a soiled smock that bore the stains of clay and the trades of paint, answered the door.

His was a dark face, shaded by a shock of sable hair, only partly covered by a student's cap which draped itself with the abandon of a pirate's in his home cave. He did not know the visitor—Fame had never come his way before! But the little man in the smock is kind to strangers and he invited this stranger in. Fame entered.

The next day all the world knew the name of Anthony de Francisci—the man who designed the new dollar for the United States government; that dollar which is being struck for the purpose of proclaiming Peace throughout the world, just as a certain grand old bell once cracked itself proclaiming Liberty.

And the world knew, also, of Theresa de Francisci, his wife, whose head and face represent Peace and Hope on the new dollar.

Love Lit the Way for Fame

Hand in hand these two had labored, these children of the Mediterranean, and, hand in hand, Fame found them, ready to share the honors as they had shared the toil. It could not have been otherwise, for Love had visited the studio long before Fame, and still dwells there.

De Francisci was born in a little town in Sicily, down where the fables of ancient times still pass for tradition, and near the rocks upon which the sirens sang. In the atmosphere of story, of tradition and of folk lore, he passed his childhood. His father was a carver, working with chisel and knife upon wonderful wooden figures. Thus it happened that the son, at the age when most children make "mud pies," was fashioning figures out of the damp soil just as he had seen his father work on the obedient wood.

When he was seventeen, the young artist came to the United States. He had read of opportunity here. His books told him of President Lincoln and the way that he was able to achieve peace from a cabin. So he set his face to America with a heart full of hope and the desire to do something worth the doing.

It was a slow, painful process. Young foreigners, with nothing more tangible than hope, must expect to work if they would win. He did what he could. He turned his quick hands, fol-

a dragon, with the feather headdress of an Indian, suggesting the location.

They are daring, active productions, with the notion of speed and force in every line.

In the Church of All Saints, in Madison avenue, New York City, one finds his genius taking the opposite tack, and producing a "Triptych" that centres one of the softest Madonna effects between two marvelously executed figures which hold the delicacy of line, the repose and subdued atmosphere that is the antithesis to the word, wild fantasy made for the home of the real estate millionaire.

Again his mind and hand switch, and one finds a figure of "War," that combines gladiator and Amazon, the ruthless brutality of the arena and the inspired courage that turns horror into patriotism and self-sacrifice. Strange combination of elements! They have rarely been put in a figure that is supposed to typify War—and yet, come to think of it, they are all there.

Students of genius and of those who win laurels will find his next attempt even a greater change of motive and style. In his "Bayadere," made for the city of Cleveland, he poses the beautiful figure of a young girl, so that the lines and the action of the ancient Greek dances and games are given to a bit of sculpture that holds and charms. There is at once such a contradiction of suggestion—strong sensuality and modesty of ignorance of intent to offend—that one

Ice Can Now Be Compressed

EXPERIMENTS recently made with enormously high pressures—up to 20,000 atmospheres, or the equivalent of 800,000 pounds per square inch—have developed results as remarkable as they were unexpected. Up to now 8000 atmospheres was the maximum tried. Under a pressure of 6000 atmospheres mercury passed through walls of massive steel.

Hitherto water has been supposed to be an incompressible substance, but under 12,000 atmospheres it was reduced 20 per cent in volume. Now was it previously known that liquids could be made to freeze by mere compression. Water, when the pressure is pushed high enough, turns to ice, no matter how high the temperature. Water at 180 degrees Fahrenheit will freeze under a pressure of 20,000 atmospheres. Ice, under a pressure of only 2000 atmospheres, collapses 18 per cent in volume, assuming a different appearance and new physical properties. A piece of it will sink in water. If more pressure be applied another kind of ice is produced. Phosphorus under 12,000 atmospheres turns black and assumes an appearance resembling graphite. Under the same pressure soft rubber becomes harder than mild steel.

Inasmuch as all materials far down toward the center of the earth are subjected to tremendous pressures, the laboratory observations above quoted must be particularly interesting to geologists.

Fur Industry

UP TO within a century of the present time, raw furs were one of the most important products of this country, commercially speaking. Immense quantities of them were exported to Europe, where they were dressed, dyed and manufactured into garments.

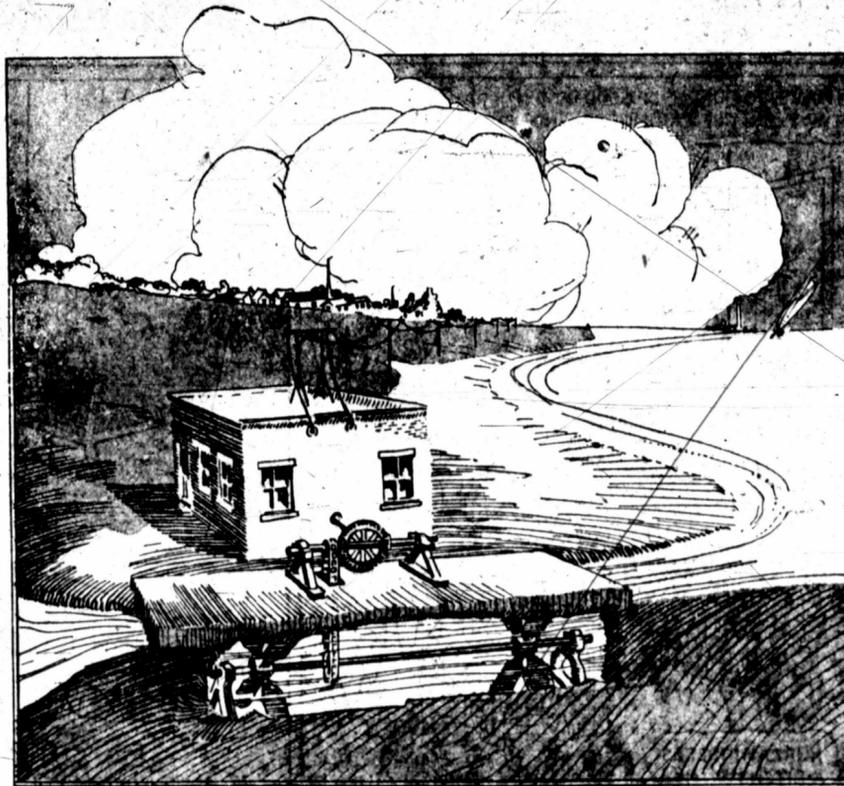

This natural resource has been largely destroyed by the killing off of our fur-bearing animals. At the present time we are largely dependent upon foreign countries for supplies of skins.

Within recent years a great fur-dyeing and manufacturing industry has been built up in the United States, employing 18,000 operatives. We now import annually raw skins valued at $60,000,000, and of dressed skins only about $4,000,000 worth.

A Snake Seemingly Made of Green Glass

IN THE small boy's natural history no reptile is more interesting than the harmless lizard and the glass snake. The former, however, is not a lizard, and the latter is not a snake. Both are lizards.

The most remarkable point about the glass snake is that it can voluntarily part with its tail (to facilitate escape), which may come away in one, two or three pieces. This self-amputation does not bother the

A Motor Operated by the Tides of the Ocean

NEWEST in the way of a tide motor is the invention of George P. A. Weisenborn, of Salt Lake City. He proposes to house its machinery in a submersible barge, which may be sunk to the bottom in suitable shallow water, or anchored at any desired depth in deeper water.

The place chosen would in any case be one where advantage could best be taken of the flow of the tides. Lengthwise through the barge, according to the plan, runs a walled passage, in which several propellers are mounted on a shaft. The tidal flow through the passage operates the propellers, causing the shaft to revolve. Power thus generated is transmitted by gearing to a wheel on the deck of the barge, and is converted into electricity by a dynamo.

An automatic reversing mechanism adapts the propellers in such a way to the returning tide that the shaft continues to revolve in the same direction. Thus the apparatus keeps on working uninterruptedly during both ebb and flow.

Fish Scales Used

NOTHING hitherto has been deemed more worthless than fish scales; yet the commercial fishermen now find a market for them at a very satisfactory price, fifty cents a pound.

It should be said, however, that only the scales of some species of fish, such as the shad, the river herring and the sea herring, have value. These silvery scales are now systematically saved by the fishermen of Maine, Massachusetts and Virginia, and during the last year six tons of silvery scales alone were thus collected and sold.

The scales are used in the manufacture of "pearl essence," which is the material employed for lining the glass globules commonly sold as imitation pearls. It is a beautifully iridescent substance, and, separated from the scales by chemical means, is utilized in the form of a slightly milky fluid which looks as if shot with all the hues of the rainbow.

Alchemist Tales Revived

THE rumor that European chemists had succeeded in transmuting base metals into gold seems to have had no foundation other than the fact that an ingenious Londoner named Bead recently claimed to have discovered a process whereby mercury could be converted into the yellow standard of value at a cost of about fifty-five cents a pound. With gold at $20.67 an ounce, he ought to be able to make considerable money.

It is interesting in this connection to note that mercury was the metal with which the alchemists made their earliest experiments in gold manufacture, which were the first beginnings of chemistry. Afterward they switched off to antimony. The alchemists are not all dead yet. Some of them, alive today, are firmly convinced that gold is merely a form of copper, and that silver is a form of lead. In their view the fact that silver and lead are commonly found together points to the inference that both were originally lead, and that part of the material, through nature's chemical processes, has been metamorphosed into silver.

But the Government Bureau of Mines declares that even if means were found for converting base metals into gold, the process would be so expensive that the product would be much more costly than the natural substance. Hence there is no reason to worry.

Auto-Locomotive Coming

THE auto-locomotive has arrived. It is the invention of John F. Kehrman, of Booneville, Mo., and is designed for travel on railway tracks.

It may be built for the purpose, or an ordinary touring car can be made to serve, with suitable constructional modifications. Inside, it is arranged as a business car or sleeping car. It may take the place of steam locomotives on branch lines of steam railroads, or may be used for tours of inspection.

The machine is driven by the rear wheels, the power of the engine being transmitted to the rear axle by the ordinary drive shaft.

At the front is a cowcatcher, and mounted upon and above the latter is a screen of wire net in a rectangular frame to keep grasshoppers and other insects from striking the radiator and obstructing the passage of air. Above the front wheels is a mud-box, provided with a pipe for discharging mud upon the rails in front of the wheels when there shall be occasion. The forward end of the auto-locomotive is carried by a four-wheeled truck whose wheels are attached to a separate frame which is pivotally connected to the frame of the car. This arrangement enables the machine to travel at high speed around sharp curves, much in the same way as a wagon can turn corners without danger of upsetting.

An air-pump, driven by the engine crankshaft, operates airbrakes, blows the whistle and works the sanding mechanism. Power and foot brakes can be applied to all the wheels when an emergency calls for a quick stop.

The inventor claims that his auto-locomotive, fitted with a high-power automobile engine, will run easily and safely at a speed of seventy-five miles an hour.

Rainbow Stones

SOUTH AUSTRALIA speaks a market for its white opals—very beautiful gem stones of a kind peculiar to that part of the world. The chief commercial obstacle lies in the superstition that opals are unlucky and bring misfortune to the owner. This silly notion does not worry Americans much and in the United States opals are much admired and commonly worn. In Europe, however, it has a surprising grip. Accordingly, the producers are anxious to put their white opals on the market under another name. They will be called "Iridons," after the Greek word for rainbow.

By no means harmless are the wild bees of that island. They are ferociously militant, disinclined to permit intrusion in their native haunts and carrying extra doses of poison in their stingers. That is why Government surveyors have sometimes found it necessary to adopt a defensive costume such as that here shown. A hole in the part that covers the man's head enables him to use his telescopic instrument.

An Airplane Kite

hand, the newest thing in the way of a kite imitates in form the airplane. It is the invention of Lawrence H. Eddy, of Elizabeth, N. J.

In its simplest form the kite is a monoplane. A long flat stick serves as its backbone, on the front end of which a head-plane is formed with a couple of transverse ribs and a piece of muslin or other fabric stretched over the latter. Beneath the tail end of the main stick is set vertically a rudder—a fin of wire net covered with fabric. The frame of this fin is a heavy wire bent in the shape of a U, its two ends being stuck up through the main stick. Attached to the rear end of the main stick is a horizontal tail-plane. Its front edge is fastened to the main stick by a hinge, while its rear edge is secured upon one end of the frame wire of the tail-fin. Thus the angle of the tail-plane can be adjusted as desired. The various parts of the kite are fastened together with star-wire in such wise as to make the whole affair rigid and substantial, enabling it to fly in strong winds without danger of collapsing. The flying string is attached by a spring clamp to a bridle-loop which is secured to the ends of the main strip. In another form of construction this ingenious kite takes the shape of a biplane.

Monument Honor of an Apple

WHO ever heard of a monument erected in honor of an apple? Nobody, until the other day, when, at Proctorville, in Lawrence County, O., a large assemblage of persons gathered for that purpose and to offer their respects to the "Rome Beauty."

More than a century ago—in 1817, to be exact—the first tree of that now famous variety of apple was planted near Proctorville by a boy named Alanson Gillette. It was a mere twig, which his father threw to him, saying: "You can have that; I don't want it."

The boy planted it carefully and it grew and flourished, bearing in later years fruit that proved to be of an extraordinary quality. Thousands of buds did it yield for grafting, and in the course of time many and extensive orchards came to be made up of its progeny and descendants.

Today the "Rome Beauty" is the leading variety grown in Ohio. As remarked by one of the speakers at the dedication of the memorial, it is "Ohio's best gift to the apple-growing industry."

The monument, established by the Ohio State Horticultural Society, is a huge boulder, somewhat applelike in shape, bearing a bronze tablet with an inscription that recites the virtues of this remarkable apple and its history.
