STRIKE LEADERS CLAIM ONE HUNDRED PER CENT

Rail Executives State that Strike Will Have Little Effect on Operations.

By Associated Press. CHICAGO, July 1.—With the country-wide strike of shopmen declared by union leaders practically 100 per cent perfect, the nation's great transportation machine continued its work, without interruption.

Railway executives were unanimous in their belief that the strike would have little effect on the operation of the country's railroads, and that any move toward a settlement would have to come from the United States labor board or the employees.

B. M. Jewell, president of the railway department of the American department of labor, who yesterday refused to appear at a federal inquiry into the strike, reiterated that the only basis for settlement would be to come from the United States labor board or the employees.

Ben W. Hooper, chairman of the board, declared in a formal statement that the power of the government could not be used to force a settlement, and that the only way to settle the strike was by agreement between the labor board and the employees.

The walkout began in all sections of the country promptly at 10 o'clock, and the men threw down their tools, singing and cheering as they threw down their tools.

As reports came into the headquarters during the day, leaders reported that the ranks of the strikers would number more than 1,000,000.

The only display of force reported during the day was at Beardstown, Ill., where several hundred shopmen failed to appear for a meeting.

In Chicago, where it is estimated 100,000 men are affected, no disturbances of any kind were reported, and the city's business was not interrupted.

The executives also asserted that the strike was far from being 100 per cent perfect in the Chicago district, several thousand men remaining at work.

The labor board received assurance from the administration in Washington of complete backing of its policies.

At Topeka, Kan., Governor Henry J. Allen summoned industrial court judges and Attorney General Hopkins in conference to consider means for dealing with the strike.

KATY ISSUES ORDER FOR ALL TO RETURN

Order Reads That Men Not at Work On July 5 Will Lose Seniority.

Local railroad crafts which went out on strike Saturday morning walked out one hundred per cent strong, according to information from reliable sources.

A check-up made by both the Port Worth & Denver and the Wichita Falls & Northwestern revealed a total of 256 men on strike.

C. E. Schaff, receiver of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railroad company, issued an order which was received in the Northwestern office Saturday afternoon to the effect that all men who were not at work on July 5 would be regarded as having severed their connections with the company and that those who did not return would lose their seniority rights.

The order issued from the receiver's office to the men also stated that all leaves of absence were cancelled and that all men on leave should report back to work on the morning of July 5.

Men who have been in the employ of the railroad since they were first employed will lose their seniority rights if they do not report to work on the date specified.

RAIN DAMPPED SURFACE BUT NOT SHINNERS' SPIRITS

BARKERS BARK AND PEOPLE THROUGH EDUCATIONAL SIDE SHOW.

LUCILLE AND MEN ONLY HAVE HEAVY RECEIPTS

Carnival Row With Its Red Cap Criers Leads Us to the Main Show Tent.

A drizzling rain Saturday night dampened the surface, but the dazzling shinner spirit persisted and the opening night of the great Shrine circus was a success.

"Have you seen Lucille?" "Men only are wonderful! They're wonderful because the barkers and the coin-getters admit it and people who have seen it declare that it shouldn't be missed. Lucille is simply the kind of a performance that grips your very inner soul and sets you wondering what the devil the imagination and careful coaching could perfect such a performance."

"Men only" quite naturally needs but little advertising, but strange to say, it was not advertised and the women are permitted to enter just at certain times.

Paul is the man who explains the show to the inside, while Eddie Eddie guides you to the ticket booth with his harmonious voice that is heard far and near.

In this enclosure the management succeeded in assembling several attractions which undoubtedly will draw the attention of the world.

RECALL PETITIONS SHY 100 NAMES AND ONLY 5 DAYS LEFT

CANT GET ENOUGH OF FITTS SUPPORTERS TO SIGN.

TIME FOR FILING TO EXPIRE NEXT FRIDAY

Deny Report That Abandonment of Recall Movement is Contemplated.

Those seeking to recall Police Commissioner J. B. Fitts have just five days left in which to secure the required number of names for their petition, as the 30-day period since the filing of the recall affidavit expires next Friday.

The petition must have, according to charter provisions, at least 450 signatures; of these, half, or 250, must be of voters who supported a five-day extension in the election of 1916. Difficulty in securing 240 signatures from voters answering that description is delaying the petition.

"We had plenty of the other kind," said Mrs. Roy Taylor Saturday, "but it isn't easy to find voters who will admit they voted for him last July. We still lack about 100 signatures of men who voted for him."

The remaining 240 signatures can be of any qualified voters, regardless of whether they voted for Mr. Fitts in the last election.

One cabinet member, acting as an observer for the president said he believed the strike of 600,000 union miners could be settled this week will be "over soon."

TWO RECORDS ARE BROKEN SATURDAY BY WEATHER GODS

RAIN FALLS IN CITY FOR FIRST TIME IN 23 CONSECUTIVE DAYS.

STORM PREVENTS RISE OF MERCURY TO 100

Rain is General Throughout The District Touched By Local Rainfalls.

The weather powers Saturday broke two records. For 23 consecutive days no rain had fallen and Saturday evening it rained. For nine consecutive days the mercury had risen above the 100 degree mark, but Saturday it failed to reach that mark.

Although the quantity of the rain up to a late hour did not amount to much, the quality was good. The storm served to bring the mercury down to more comfortable levels.

Throughout the district touched by local rainfalls agents reported rain Saturday afternoon. Long heavy rain fell in Wichita Falls reports were had from Electra, Burkburnett, Henrietta and Holliday that a heavy rainfall was had.

The storm arose in the southwest and kept threatening locally throughout the afternoon. The storm that brought the rain to cities on either side of Wichita Falls seemed headed in this direction, but broke and went on either side.

All along the Wichita Valley agents reported a rainfall from a quarter to an inch of rain. At Seymour earlier in the afternoon the agent reported that rain fell in torrents for 15 minutes. He reported a local dispatches that he was unable to see across the railroad tracks.

In the vicinity of Electra, Burkburnett and Henrietta a heavy rain was reported.

The rain was welcomed by all the farmers as the land had reached a point where there was absolutely no moisture in existence.

The highest point reached by the thermometer during the afternoon was 96 degrees. At 3 o'clock when this point was reached a cool wind from the southwest sent it down one degree and when the rain began falling at 4 o'clock the thermometer dropped eight degrees in five minutes.

Swallows fly low when rain is near, the insects on which they feed in flight having been driven down by the colder air.

TIMES PICTORIAL TO BE SEEN AT STRAND FIRST TIME MONDAY

The first showing of the Daily Times Pictorial will be made at the Strand theatre Monday afternoon and night.

Considerably more than 500 feet of film will be shown in the first issue of the Wichita Falls pictorial which will include pictures taken Saturday afternoon.

Preliminary showings of the pictorial were made to members of the Times staff and to the Strand theatre staff Saturday and to Duffy Mapee, the photographer, and all were more than pleased with the pictures, which they believe rank in quality with those of the nationally known pictorials. While all the pictures are good and clear a number of shots of the Shrine circus parade and close-ups of some of the individual floats are declared to be unusually good.

Included in the subjects that will be shown this week are the Kemp public library, the Day Nursery, the grand jury in the 89th district court, the reunion of Mrs. J. W. Akin and sisters, scenes at the Golf club, the Puckett-Moore wedding party and Shrine parade.

Efforts are being made to make the pictorial timely and representative of the life of the community and the suggestion of friends will be appreciated. Telephone suggestions to the pictorial editor, phone 4891.

LOCAL MAN, VETERAN CLOWN, TO APPEAR IN SHRINE CIRCUS

The most important feature of any circus is the array of clowns. There is no circus in the country that is complete without a clown.

It is surprising to some of the folks of Wichita Falls to hear that one of their citizens and prominent local men at one time was the greatest professional clown in the country. He has been with the biggest circuses and trouped with Ringling Brothers, Adams-Pore-Faugh, Barnum & Bailey, and all the big ones. At one time he was leading clown with John Ringling circus. How come, and who may he be? Well we are glad to let you all in on the information. That gentleman is no other than L. M. Forcier, and a member of Market Temple at that.

This is the way the news leaked out. The Flying La Vans arrived in Wichita Falls. This attraction you no doubt heard or read about, and one of the greatest and oldest flying trapeze acts in the world, Harry La Van, owner of the act, by accident came across L. M. Forcier upon his arrival at the Kemp hotel.

"Well I'll be hanged," were the first words uttered. "If there isn't old man Forcier."

"Well Harry La Van it's high on to 20 years since you and I tramped together with the big circus."

Of course that started the big talk and all night conversation. You will soon find the result. You know what happens when trouper meets trouper.

EXPERT COMING TO PLAN SOIL SURVEY IN WATER DISTRICT

FEDERAL AUTHORITY DUE MONDAY TO CONFER WITH OFFICIALS.

LOCATION DETERMINED FOR FLUME ON RIVER

Will Be North of Denny School—Topographical Survey Progressing Steadily.

A. C. Jackson of College Station, representing the federal department of agriculture, will arrive in Wichita Falls Monday to confer with irrigation district officials and others relative to a soil survey of the lands to be under irrigation.

Irrigation district and chamber of commerce officials have been trying for some time to get a federal soil expert here for such a survey, which has been considered a most important preliminary to the coming of the water. It is hoped to have a survey made on such a scale as will furnish a soil analysis of every section under irrigation, determining what crop is best adapted to, what treatment is required if any, and other information, as to the nature of the soil.

Without such a survey, those who start farming would be working in the dark, to a large extent. A telegram announcing Prof. Jackson's prospective visit was received Saturday by R. A. Thompson, chief engineer of the project.

Another preliminary to the starting of irrigation has also been receiving the attention of irrigation officials without any definite steps being taken; this refers to the organization of District No. 2, which will comprise the lands to be irrigated. Directors of both districts are at work on plans for completing organization of the second district.

Northside surveying parties last week determined definitely the location of the river crossing. This will be due north of the Denny school, almost exactly at the point indicated on the map published in The Times on May 11 as a tentative location for the crossing. North of the river the surveyors have worked almost to Iowa Park.

The topographical map of the irrigated lands is progressing steadily. All of the territory from the diversion dam to a line drawn north and south through Holliday having been mapped. This map, which will show elevations in two-foot contours, will be used in locating canal laterals and secondary ditches and will save a large amount of engineering work.

Work on the project kept well up to schedule during the week. Concrete was poured steadily on the conduits at the storage dam and at the big culvert at Blackberry creek crossing. Embankment work at the diversion dam continued without interruption. There is still some secrecy of labor.

RURAL SCHOOLS TO SPEND $40,000 ON BETTER BUILDINGS

CONTINUE IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM STARTED SEVERAL YEARS AGO.

FAIRVIEW DISTRICT HAS MOST AMBITIOUS PLANS

Friberg, Clara and Valley View Schools Also Planning Improvements.

One new seven-room brick building, one three-room frame building and an addition to each of two other schools, representing an expenditure of approximately $40,000 will mark the extension of the county school system during the summer before the beginning of the 1922-1923 semester.

The county schools have made great strides of improvement during the past few years but during the last four months more interest in the school's developments has been shown than at any other time.

The trustees of the Fairview school district, after studying the problems that confronted them in that district made a move that is heralded throughout the state as one of the most progressive ever taken by a country school district in the state of Texas.

The officials determined that it was quite necessary that the 750 children of the district be offered the opportunity of securing a high school education as well as affording the younger students better facilities of education.

As a result a new seven room brick building will be erected during the summer which will accommodate the pupils from the fifth grade up through the high school.

The other buildings which were used last year will be put in shape to house the beginners up to the fifth grade.

In addition to the new building a superintendent's home will be erected as well as a home for the teachers employed. This will be done at an approximate cost of $12,000. Bonds were voted at a recent election to cover practically all of this expense.

The Friberg school district voted $5,000 worth of bonds, the money realized to be spent in the erection of a new three room school building. Up until this time this has been a two teacher school but as soon as the new building is completed three teachers will be employed.

The Clara and the Valley View districts will add an additional room to the present building which will necessitate the employment of an additional teacher at each one of the places. When the addition is completed the Clara district will then employ seven teachers.

The work on the erection of the Fairview school will begin at once it is announced while on the other improvements work will begin so that it will be completed by the time the school opens next September.

Superintendent Huri Bryant stated that practically all the teachers for the coming year have been employed. Never before, he said had he received so many applications from teachers. Even now he said hardly a day passes when an application is not received in person.

The county school system of Wichita county received publicity throughout the state following the report of the survey made last winter. The comment on the system here in general was highly commendable which partially accounts for the large number of teacher applications.

CITY GARDENERS REPORT THAT SUN HAS RUINED CROP

Growers of gardens in the city reported Saturday that practically all of their garden stuff has withered and died under the intense heat of the past week or 10 days.

Edgar Ellis, president of the Gardeners' club, stated that the green beans were rapidly disappearing and that no longer was he able to boast of the fresh vegetables that adorned his table.

Tomatoes seemed to have suffered the most, the man said. Green tomatoes the size of an egg had developed on the stalks but under the rays of the sun they had also dried and shrivelled up and had begun falling off.

SPACE IS GETTING SCARCE ON SECOND TRADE TRIP TRAIN

Space is getting scarce on the special train for the second of the summer trade trips, which will leave Wichita Falls a week from tomorrow for visits to points on the Katy east to Gainesville, on the Rock Island south to Graham and on the Southern between Breckenridge and this city. Arrangements for the trip are rapidly being perfected and it will be "greater and grander than ever," as the circus advertisements would express it.

CHAUNCEY RESIGNS FROM CITY COURT, EFFECTIVE JULY 3

W. H. CHAUNCEY SAID TO BE SLATED TO SUCCEED TO PLACE.

RETIRED OFFICIAL HAS PRAISE FOR ASSOCIATES

Health of Young Son Necessitates Trip to Pacific Coast This Summer.

W. H. Chauncey, judge of the corporation court, has tendered his resignation to take effect Monday, July 3. This action was made necessary, according to Mr. Chauncey, by the fact that his son is ill and doctors have advised that he be taken to the Pacific coast for the summer. Mr. Chauncey expects to leave in the near future and will probably be gone until the middle of September.

In resigning from the police court bench Mr. Chauncey has nothing but praise for the manner in which the police force have handled their work. Of J. W. McCormick, chief of police, Mr. Chauncey says, "He is the best officer I have seen my privilege to work with. Mr. McCormick believes in enforcing the law and he has the courage of his convictions."

Judge Chauncey's successor will be appointed at the regular meeting of the city council, Monday night. Unofficial rumors about the city hall Saturday morning seemed to indicate that W. H. Caldwell would be appointed to fill the vacancy.

Following is the letter that Judge Chauncey submitted to the city council:

"Gentlemen: The doctors have advised that I take my son who has been sick for more than a year, to the Pacific coast for the summer. I shall leave immediately and will likely be away until the middle of September.

STOCK DIVIDEND OF 25 PER CENT MADE BY FIRST NATIONAL

LOCAL INSTITUTION INCREASES ITS CAPITAL STOCK TO $1,000,000.

PER CAPITA DEPOSITS HERE MAKE GOOD SHOWING

Believed to Outrank Most Cities of Southwest—Cash Reserves Are Ample.

Stockholders of the First National bank on Saturday received a stock dividend of 25 per cent, increasing the capital stock of that institution to $1,000,000; its capital was formerly $800,000.

A cash dividend of four per cent was also declared. The bank now has $1,000,000 capital, $500,000 surplus, and $200,000 undivided profits.

Local bankers generally feel that institutions here are in better position than most Texas banks; the cash reserves are larger. Wichita Falls deposits average about $8 per capita, a showing which is exceeded by few, if any, southwestern cities.

Although at this season deposits are usually at the low figure for the year, deposits here have recorded a substantial gain since the first of 1922.

MIKE TUCKER'S MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL OVERRULED

Motion for New trial filed by Mike Tucker was overruled Saturday morning by Judge P. A. Martin of the 29th district court. Tucker was convicted of the charge of criminal assault and sentenced to a term of six years in the state penitentiary.

Etzel Ellidge, a young girl, was the prosecuting witness in the case. It being alleged that the defendant criminally assaulted her one Sunday night while out automobile riding.

The defense set up in its motion for new trial that the court erred in refusing to excuse prospective jurors for cause when so challenged which required it to exhaust its peremptory challenges.

Insufficiency of the evidence was also another ground upon which a new trial was asked.

A hearing was had Saturday morning before Judge H. R. Wilson of the 26th district court in the case of Ed C. Smith, charged with a statutory offense. This hearing was had in view of setting bond following the return of an indictment against him.

Smith has been held in jail since his preliminary hearing at which time Justice of the Peace R. V. Gwinn set his bond at $10,000. The grand jury now in session Friday returned an indictment against him and Judge Wilson permitted the bond to remain at the original figure.

2884 ENROLLED IN COUNTRY SCHOOLS DURING PAST YEAR

AVERAGE DAILY ATTENDANCE OF ALL SCHOOLS FOR YEAR WAS 1,851.

69 TEACHERS WERE EMPLOYED DURING TERM

Average Length of Term Was 164 Days Actually Taught, Excluding Holidays.

During the school term of 1921-1922, a total of 2,884 students were enrolled in all of the country schools of the county. The average daily attendance for the entire semester was 1,851.

The daily attendance average is apparently low considering the total enrollment but a part of this is accounted for in the fact that were a child moved out of the county after attending school for only one week, it is counted absent for the remainder of the term for the purpose of the superintendent's annual report. In the same manner where a student moved into the county and only attended classes one month for the purpose of the record he was counted absent for the first eight months.

During the year a total of 69 teachers were employed. This is a larger number than the required amount as several resignations were tendered and accepted during the term and successors appointed. This total represents all those who taught one day or more.

The average length of the term for the year was 164 days actually taught exclusive of holidays. Of the number of teachers employed seven held permanent teaching certificates and only seven are college graduates. Six were graduates of normal schools and 26 graduates of high schools. The average salary paid teachers for the year was $1154.

ELECTRA, PIONEER, AND YOUNG FIELDS GET COMPLETIONS

NUMBER OF BIG PRODUCERS ADDED TO LIST DURING PAST WEEK.

EASTLAND COUNTY IS SEEING MUCH ACTIVITY

South Electra District Gets Several Completions, Including One in New Sand.

Several additional producers at Electra and two extensions to the Young county pools featured developments in the north end of the district last week, while the Pioneer and Eastland pools added several good wells.

Electra had three good completions, that of the Planet company coming in Saturday for 500 barrels, resulting out another busy week in that section.

The Pioneer district in Eastland is one of the business sections in Texas just now, with scores of new tests under way.

Many New Electra Tests. After the past few months of frayed activity, the Electra field has settled down to a steady and extensive drilling campaign.

Extending the 150 foot sand almost a mile to the south the test of Wakefield-McAdams in the Gibson survey is still making its progress.

The best completions for the week in the district being the No. 4 of the Planet Petroleum Co. on the Burnett tract making at the rate of 500 barrels from the 1900 foot sand.

On the Rio Bravo tract in section 21 of the Waggoner lands the test of John O'Neil is attracting a great deal of attention by the operators in that part of the field.

Another company has mapped out an extensive drilling campaign in the south pool. The Pathfinder Oil Syndicate will develop their 50 acre lease offsetting the Graveland Co. and Bryan Oil Corporation properties on the east located in the Burnett-Lloyd tract in section No. 5.

back in activity is being staged on all sides of the town. Attention was called to the district about two months ago when the Eastland Oil company completed No. 2 on the Martin farm with a flush production of 1200 barrels which gradually increased to 2500, causing a stampede of oil men to the new territory south of town.

The field has over 70 wells drilling at the present time with numerous locations being made which assure this section plenty of work during the summer and far into the fall.

Eastland Sees Much Activity. Eastland county is still leading the district in the number of good wells completed, although on a scale of a sensational nature have been brought in since the Bryson and Eakin gushers were finished.

Very few dry holes are reported from any section of the Pioneer pool, and small extensions are added to the proven area daily. The W. A. Eakin well that was finished a few days ago is still keeping up its production around 800 barrels.

WELL THAT PUT NEW LIFE INTO K. M. A. FIELD RECENTLY

The Kemp-Munger-Allen field got back into the calcium recently, for the first time in two years, when the well of J. M. Franklin on lot 17, block 24, started flowing from a new sand at 1850 feet, and has been producing at the rate of 225 barrels daily since.

Another good well was added to the big number of producers in the Curry pool located about six and one-half miles southwest of town. The Humble company's No. 1 on the Rush farm blew itself in with an initial flow of 500 barrels, extending the field a short distance to the south.

Due to a lack of big completions the weekly production fell off, but not to any extent, and remains about normal on account of the care taken of the hundreds of older producers in all parts of the county.

The only development of importance to report from Young county was furnished by the district east and north of the original Bunker pool, known as the Herrick City area, which extends the proven area three-quarters of a mile to the east by the encountering of a sand at 2400 feet in the No. 2 test of the Tyrrell Oil company on the Williams tract.

The well has all the appearance of a producer good for 300 barrels. Another interesting one is that of the Penn-Cities-McCarney company on the Abernathy survey to the east. This test is making 15,000,000 feet of gas from a depth of 2344 feet and spraying oil, but drilled to 2373 when it started to flow as above. The same company's No. 3 Martin is drilling at 2200 feet.

Following a shot of 50 quarts of nitro late Thursday on the Dakin farm, John Seale and associates brought in their first well from the 2200 foot sand with a production estimated from 500 to 600 barrels. This well is located about 1000 feet from the States corporation well on the Martin, after flowing for a few hours a bridge formed and preparations are being made to drill and clean out the hole when the production is expected to increase in the neighborhood of 1000 to 1500 barrels.

The town of Pioneer has numerous derricks and every block has a location well drilling or a producer on it. There are now five producers with a total production of 3000 barrels. At present the district southeast of the townsite has shown up as a gas producing area, nearly all the tests having encountered heavy gas pressure, but no oil, although a quantity of oil increased, and it is expected the future will find these tests transferred into oil producing wells.

Local Men Interested. The Pioneer section of this county is not alone in activity as the attention of the oil fraternity is also centered on the territory surrounding the town of Eastland, which is bringing in some of the best wells since the finding of the first sands a couple of years ago, and a come-

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY
I laid me down and slept; I awakened; for the Lord sustained me. I will not be afraid of ten thousand people.—Psalm 3:6-8
Sleep, that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of care,
The death of each day's life, sore labor's bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course,
Chief nourisher in life's feast. —Shakespeare.

AN EFFORT TO EXTEND ARBITRATION TO THE GENERAL PUBLIC.

There was established in New York City a few days ago a tribunal of justice whose workings will be followed with the closest interest throughout the country.
The new tribunal is the creation of the Arbitration Society of America, to it the disputes of individuals, corporations and organizations may be carried. Two parties may go to it, choose a third, who may be a layman, to sit in judgment, and the decision will be final. There will be no appeal except where fraud or corruption might be shown.

The power of the tribunal is derived from a law passed by the New York legislature in 1920 which provides that any persons who wish to arbitrate a dispute may select an arbitrator to hear their case. They may present it, with or without the aid of lawyers, in their own way without legal technicalities. The law gives the arbitrator the power to subpoena, the power to render judgment and behind him stand the courts to render his orders and subpoenas effective.

The purpose of the new tribunal is to make the settlement of controversies more promptly and less costly and to relieve the courts of the handling of many cases which clog their dockets.
The purposes of the Arbitration Society of America for which a New York charter has been issued are summarized as follows:

- 1.—To conduct an international campaign of education in promotion of the general cause of arbitration in all disputes and differences.
2.—To organize, equip and operate in New York City and later in the larger cities throughout the country, a Tribunal of Arbitration for the speedy, inexpensive and just determination of controversies and differences.
3.—To move for a uniform law in all the states of the Union, and for the insertion of an arbitration clause in all trade and industrial contracts.
4.—Settlement of controversies by arbitration is no new thing. Arbitration committees, both local and national, are maintained by employers and employees in a number of trades. Various associations in this country have their arbitration committees and arbitrators who settle controversies between members. In these organizations arbitration has proved its worth and usefulness. But the tribunal created in New York is the first, so far as known in this country, to be opened for the general public.
The new tribunal is being supported by the Lawyers Club of New York. At first thought it might appear that the lawyers were putting a crimp in their own profession. But only the lawyer who uses his craft to clog the wheels of justice is likely to suffer. If, as hoped, the tribunal will remove many cases from the regular courts thereby giving an opportunity for prompter action through these courts on important cases lawyers will be benefited as well as litigants.

THE CHALLENGE OF THE SHOPMEN'S STRIKE.

The action of 400,000 railway shopmen in going on a strike Saturday is a challenge of the right of the government asserted through an act of congress to regulate the wages of railway workers as a means of preventing a tie-up of the country's transportation.
The shopmen have gone on a strike in defiance of the ruling and order of the federal labor board. Their president has refused to obey the summons of the board to appear before it.
The situation that has developed is one in which there is much interest. It is the first check in the movement that has been in progress for some time under which the matter of labor and wages as well as the operation of the railroads were coming more and more under government supervision.
If the shopmen by their strike force the railroads to accept their terms, the prestige of the federal railway labor board will be very greatly reduced and it is doubtful whether it could ever again be of aid in the settlement of wage or other controversies. If the shopmen lose their strike and come back to work upon the wages and conditions laid down by the federal board it will have the effect of discouraging future violations of the board's findings. If the government takes a hand in the strike in support of the board and the men are forced to go back to work the board will gain a prestige that will make its findings unquestionable in the future.
The strike is likely to have the effect of definitely determining the status of the board. The chances are that its status will be determined as giving its findings the effect of law which cannot be questioned.

Hilons can have its Herrin horror all in one or two days; Texas strings her horrors out over several weeks or months.
The Tuskegee institute reports that there were thirty lynchings during the first six months of 1922. Of these 19 or 63 per cent were in two states, Texas and Mississippi and Texas outdid Mississippi; the record was Texas 12, Mississippi 7.
Of those lynched, 2 were whites and 28 were negroes. Eleven of those put to death were charged with the crime of rape and nineteen were charged with other offenses. Five of those put to death were burned at the stake and 3 were first put to death and then their bodies were burned. Four of those lynched in the year 1921 were burned at the stake and three were first put to death and then their bodies were burned.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama 1, Arkansas 2, Florida 1, Georgia 4, Louisiana 1, Mississippi 7, South Carolina 1, Oklahoma 1 and Texas 12.

The Chicago Tribune deplors the lynching of negroes in Texas. Texas editors deplor the horror at Herrin. There is enough in the Herrin incident and in the lynching record in Texas to make everybody ashamed.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE MAN WHO CAME TO TOWN.
No one expected Him to come. So there was no one at the station to meet Him. It was a usual arrival. The crowd hastily stepped from the train, each traveler going his separate way.

To one leaving a train all folks are strangers, so that this particular Stranger excited neither notice nor interest.

So down the street He went—and was soon lost in the thing which He came to town to do.

First, however, one word about his mien. His dress was simple, though neat. He wore no hat. His wonderful hair fell like the silk from ripe corn—naturally. While His bodily covering consisted only of a great flowing robe of something like homespun. Sandals were on His feet. Yet so firmly did He move in His bearing that the passerby gave Him but casual note.

And, besides, dusk was creeping in.
But there were sick in the town, sorely discouraged ones, those that were desperately despondent, those worn in body through toil and worry. And the town was full of problems. A mist of unrest and revolt filled the air with a sort of stagnation.

The Man who came to town knew this in advance. That's why He came!

And so He lost no time. He immediately got to work. He laid out His plans. People in all walks welcomed Him—especially the poor. He went about doing good, sparing not His body. Little children loved Him. Strong men asked Him to their homes. Men's minds and hearts took upon great change. And a new life, both in effort and hope, came about. And the next day was one of gladness.

For the Prince of Peace had come to that town! And it is possible for Him to come to any town. But He always comes unannounced.

Owing to illness Mr. Adams is unable to write his Daily Talks this week. He is taking this opportunity to reprint for his readers six Talks for which he has received many inquiries since their first publication. In the hope that all of his readers as well as those who have written him, will enjoy seeing them again. —The Editor.

JUST FOLKS

By Edgar A. Guest

ASK YOUR MOTHER.
Pa, may I go to the show tonight?
Ask your mother.
If I spend a dime will it be all right?
Ask your mother.
May we go to the woods on Saturday?
And take our lunches? And all I say.
Is the phrase of most fathers on earth today?
Ask your mother.
Pa, may I go to the candy store?
Ask your mother.
That pie is great. May I have some more?
Ask your mother.
Instead of a positive "yes" or "no,"
I answer him in a kindly way;
With the simple phrase which all fathers say:
Ask your mother.

But well I know she has said before:
Ask your father.
Playing parental battledore,
Ask your father.

So I take his hand and I hear his plea,
And then whatever the case may be,
I issue this verdict evenly:
Ask your mother.

What should I do if I couldn't say
Ask your mother?
Sparing myself in this arduous way,
Ask your mother.

Better her judgment than mine, and so
Whenever there's need for a "yes" or "no,"
This is the readiest phrase I know:
Ask your mother.

A CHINA IN MOB RULE.
Houston Chronicle: Let us not be too hard on Herrin. Her people, albeit with the assistance of neighbors, pulled off quite a stunt, but by no means an original one. We have said that if the mob spirit were permitted to ramify, other than the negro would suffer, and other crimes than assault would be taken up by the mob. We have said that if group power were invoked, the law would become helpless. Herrin proves that, also. Herrin proves that when justice becomes a matter of local sentiment, there is safety and redress for no one. But, and this is the important point, Herrin has proved that it is not the mob that is the danger. Her mob may have proceeded in a shockingly businesslike manner, but it was not the first mob to do so. It was not the first mob to do a thriving trade, but they were not the first bootleggers. Her leaders may have justified the profession of a matter of local sentiment, but they were not the first to use such an argument. Herrin merely shows us how far we have gone since the days of "taking the law into our own hands." At that she didn't burn a human being at the stake. Her sheriff and county prosecutor laid down the law, but we can think of others. Her coroner's jury gave a farcical verdict, but it is not without parallel. Her people resent criticism which is, in fact, praise for those who have convinced themselves that the mob is right. And there is another aspect to this affair, for, while her particular mob has been broken up, the success of a strike, the mob spirit is not confined to the United States. Whether the mob is organized labor, indeed, it has manifested itself more frequently in other elements of our population. It is not the mob that is the danger, but the mob that is the danger. It is not the mob that is the danger, but the mob that is the danger. It is not the mob that is the danger, but the mob that is the danger.

MULTIPLICATION

Joshua White died in 1868 at Rockingham, Vt. At death he had 13 children.
A check-up shows that at least 3,000 direct descendants of Joshua have entered the world up to the present time.
This shows the wisdom of death. In nature's scheme of things, without death, earth would become so populated that it would be a surface covered by a closely-packed crowd of standing-up humans. We have to die, to make room for newcomers.

THE WHITE MAN'S BURDEN

Does the apple prove the existence of the apple tree? Yes. Then the "days of miracles have not passed."

In the realm of the human mind, "believing is believing." But in the realm of fact, "believing is seeing."

Again we will say that the gospel of healing is not new. It is as old as hoary time, and the hope of our deliverance from sickness and disease is as "bright as the promise of God."

It has simply been forgotten and has become hidden beneath the debris of ages. But God who has said "my word shall never pass away in praising up men who will believe Him," and thereby proving that the "days of His miracles" are not past.

WM. BURTON McCAFFERTY, Pastor of the Assembly of God, corner Fifth and Broad streets.

"The Healing Farce" Challenge. Editor The Times: There seems no little stir in the city over the so-called "Healing Farce" challenge.

There seems no little stir in the city over the so-called "Healing Farce" challenge. The word had a Latin origin, but it means—the system which prevailed in Europe in the middle ages, based upon the relationship between lord and vassal; the vassal being an inferior who placed himself under the lord's protection, accepted a grant of land from him, generally upon hereditary tenure, but amenable at the lord's pleasure; and who, in return for these favors, acknowledged his superior's authority over him and his right to demand certain services, varying from military duty to cash or property payments or mental tasks. It was characterized, says an authority on the subject, by the merging of public and private law, so that office, jurisdiction and even kingship were forms of property.

It is used like this:—The special policy committee of the American Federation of Labor asserts that industrial feudalism seems to have found a foothold in the country.

A woman who feet only six inches long steps into the spotlight in Washington, D. C. She is Mrs. Carl W. Linker. She believes that she has smaller feet than any other American woman.

Many women will say "hey," whether an extremely small foot on a woman is artistic, however, does not mean that the standard of beauty, established by the ancient Greek sculptors, decreed that a foot to be artistic must be a sixth or a seventh the height of the body.

How close do you come to the specifications? Get out a yardstick. Here is one form of statistics that is not apt to cause headache.

STRIKE OF SHOPMEN GENERAL OVER U. S.

held holiday congestion of travelers caused officials to post notices in the Grand Central station that "all trains are subject to delay." The New York Herald and Hartford Post issued a statement saying that out of 1,500 men on one of three shifts of shopmen all but 375 withdrew from service. The statement added that "practically all" men being covered by competent men. The New York Central announced that out of 3,000 shopmen employed between Buffalo, N. Y., and Chicago, 2,000 quit work. This road also announced that its shops at Collinwood, near Cleveland, would be opened Monday. All men reporting for duty will be given employment and protection.

From San Francisco it was reported that the walkout was more than 90 per cent effective in California, Oregon and Washington. Reports from Atlanta said that upward of 30,000 men in the southeastern territory answered the strike call. The Pennsylvania announced that "practically all" its shopmen in the central region extending from Lancaster, Pa., to Mansfield, Ohio, walked out.

APPROXIMATELY 15,000 WALK OUT IN TEXAS

DALLAS, July 1.—Approximately 15,000 railway shop craftsmen left their posts in Texas today in compliance with the nation-wide strike call, according to tabulated returns received here tonight. Forty maintenance of way men were reported to have struck at Houston in sympathy with the shopmen.

No disorders occurred according to these reports.

STRIKE OF SHOP CRAFTS GENERAL IN SOUTHWEST

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 1.—The strike of shop crafts in the southwest was nearly one hundred per cent effective tonight.

Men, holdmakers and others quit their jobs throughout Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas promptly at 10 o'clock today in compliance with orders from international headquarters. Few sympathizers, however, joined the walkout.

The Kansas industrial court held continuing conferences today during the day discussing the situation. The only official action, however, was an order against picketing.

Strikers in Kansas City, Kansas, and other cities held meetings during the afternoon.

EMPLOYEES AT HOUSTON OBEY ALMOST TO A MAN

HOUSTON, July 1.—With reports from various sources indicating that the strike call of federated shop crafts was obeyed almost to a man. Approximately 1,000 went out in Houston. These are principally Southern Pacific workers. About 500 went out at Palestine where the I. and G. N. shops are located. A hundred left their jobs at Kingsville, on the Gulf Coast line. Other points employing only a few men report the walkout complete. The only place as far reporting part of the forces remaining at work is Victoria, Texas, where the Southern Pacific employs about 150 members of the shop crafts. Only 13 left their posts there.

In every instance the men left their work in an orderly manner. No trouble is anticipated in this district.

REPORTS INDICATE STRIKE IS HUNDRED PER CENT

DALLAS, July 1.—Maintenance of regular service and "protection of the public interest" is expected by operating officials of the railroads in Texas, they said following the walkout of shopmen in connection with the nation-wide strike which became effective today.

Operation of the trains almost on schedule is expected according to a member of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad operating staff here. J. L. Lancaster, receiver of the Texas and Pacific railroad, announced an effort would be made to maintain both passenger and freight service.

Special guards have been engaged by most of the railway lines operating in Texas for the protection of property, railroad officials reported. The railroads in this territory affected by the walkout include the Katy, Texas and Pacific, Santa Fe, Fort Worth and Denver City, Rock Island, Orient and International and Great Northern.

Reports from all parts of Texas indicate the strike is virtually 100 per cent effective.

TAKE OFF OVERALLS AND LEAVE PREMISES

MARSHALL, TEXAS, July 1.—The Marshall shops of the Texas and Pacific railroad, one of the largest establishments of its kind in the southwest, was depopulated of its workmen at the stroke of 10 this morning when every member of the six federated unions affected by the strike order took off his overalls, wrapped up his tools and left the premises.

STRIKE IN OKLAHOMA IS REPORTED COMPLETE

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 1.—The strike of railway shopmen in Oklahoma was described today by union leaders as complete.

More than 4,000 men were reported out.

The greatest effect of the strike was seen at Shawnee, where 750 men struck. The Rock Island shops and 150 employed by the Santa Fe. Five hundred men quit work at the shops in Muskogee of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas, the Frisco, the Kansas, Oklahoma and Gulf and the Midland Valley, and nearly as many walked out of the tool shops of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas, the Rock Island and the Frisco.

TOO SERIOUS TO SMILE SAYS BERT M. JEWELL

CHICAGO, July 1.—Bert M. Jewell, president of the shop crafts, didn't have a smile in him tonight. "Look at the birdie and smile," coaxed one of a dozen cameramen, trying to snap him.

"I can't, boys," Jewell declared, "this is too serious."

DIVISION OFFICIALS DO WORK OF THE STRIKERS

COFFEYVILLE, KAN., July 1.—Division officials of the Missouri Pacific donned overalls and began work in the roundhouse and shops here tonight as a result of the shop crafts strike.

Phil Carroll, division superintendent, and other officials will remain on duty until 8 o'clock tomorrow morning when another shift of "white collar" men will replace them.

Advertisements for men of all classes of shop and roundhouse work were printed in newspapers here today.

The roundhouse and shops are surrounded by a double line of pickets, according to figures given out here today. Some officials expressed fear of disturbances.

NEW BANDIT BAND BEGINS OPERATIONS IN TAMPICO FIELD

WASHINGTON, July 1.—A new bandit gang has begun operations in the Tampico oil district, according to word reaching the state department late today.

American Consul Shaw wired that hitherto unheard of bands of General Larrago had swooped down the Palo Blanco camp of the Penn-Mex Fuel company, an American concern located 80 miles of Tampico, and demanded 100,000 pesos.

Shaw did not state whether the camp was held.

The Mexican government has moved 400 federal troops into the Aguda district, where the rebel general Gorosava has been operating. This move was made in preparation for the threatened return of Gorosava to collect ransom funds demanded from the Cortes Oil company, La Corona Oil company, and the Mexican Gulf Oil company; for

KLANSMEN DEMAND REMOVAL OF CLERK, ADOPT RESOLUTION

KNOXVILLE, TENN., July 1.—The Ku Klux Klan of Tennessee, North and South Carolina, Texas and Maryland and several northern and western states have served notice upon imperial headquarters in Atlanta that until Edward Y. Clark, acting imperial wizard, is banished from office, support of a national organization by state domains will cease, according to authoritative information here tonight.

A resolution setting forth the Klan's stand has been sent to the imperial council and is said to have drawn a denial from Wm. J. Simmons, imperial wizard, that he has been "shipped or shelved."

The resolution is said to have originated with the Chattanooga, Tenn. Klan and is reported to have been read in the meeting there, attended by representatives of other Klans in the state and is declared to "shake the very foundations of the order."

CLERK'S WIFE WILL NOT RETURN FROM EAST

By United Press.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 1.—Reports that Minta Durfee, who went east shortly after Roscoe Arbuckle, her husband, was acquitted of manslaughter charges at San Francisco, would not return to him, were denied today by Arbuckle and several of his friends.

At the time Miss Durfee went to New York with her sister, Marie Durfee, she stated that she was intending to settle her affairs in the east, which were hastily dropped when she came west to join Arbuckle at his trials. She said then that it was a resumption of the separation which had existed for some years previous to Arbuckle's trouble, and that she would return.

Arbuckle said today that his wife would return to him as soon as he is able to "stand on his own feet." The comedian barred from appearing in pictures by order of Will Hays, head of the motion picture industry, still maintains hope that he will ultimately be permitted to attempt to regain his screen popularity.

CLERK'S WIFE WILL NOT RETURN FROM EAST

By United Press.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 1.—Reports that Minta Durfee, who went east shortly after Roscoe Arbuckle, her husband, was acquitted of manslaughter charges at San Francisco, would not return to him, were denied today by Arbuckle and several of his friends.

At the time Miss Durfee went to New York with her sister, Marie Durfee, she stated that she was intending to settle her affairs in the east, which were hastily dropped when she came west to join Arbuckle at his trials. She said then that it was a resumption of the separation which had existed for some years previous to Arbuckle's trouble, and that she would return.

Arbuckle said today that his wife would return to him as soon as he is able to "stand on his own feet." The comedian barred from appearing in pictures by order of Will Hays, head of the motion picture industry, still maintains hope that he will ultimately be permitted to attempt to regain his screen popularity.

MUCH INTEREST IS MANIFESTED IN THE BUNGER TERRITORY

CONSIDERABLE ACTIVITY RESULTS FROM ROARK PRODUCTION.

MANY WELLS BEING DRILLED IN THE FIELD

Latest Producer is That of Fred B. Foster and Company.

GRAHAM, July 1.—Much interest is being manifested in the Bunger district on account of the Roark production. Many wells are drilling to this oil horizon and the southern part of Young county is destined to become not only a big producer of oil but to be generally exploited because of the many pay sands.

The Gulf has made their No. 1 location on the Mahaney land, offsetting the Dyer No. 1 which is making 250 barrels from the top of the sand and not drilled in yet.

The Southland Oil Company is 1800 feet deep on the E. J. Ribble survey and 2300 feet in its No. 1 Bunger.

Mackenzie Oil Company No. 1 Greenwade is drilling at 2000 feet. Collette & O'Keefe No. 1 T. C. Greenwade is drilling at 1700 feet.

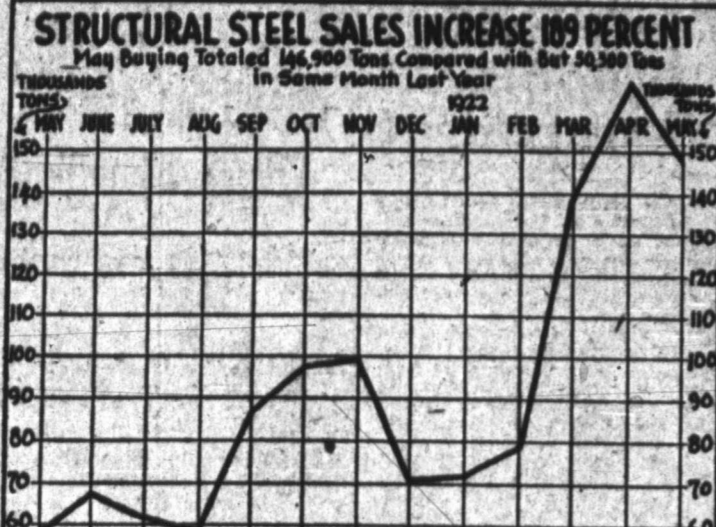

Gulf No. 1 Askew is making considerable gas at 355 from the gray lime and due to reach the Roark pay shortly, and its No. 1 Newby is making 40 barrels in the 2150 foot sand.

The Southern Oil Company is 1800 feet deep on the E. J. Ribble survey and 2300 feet in its No. 1 Bunger.

KATHLEEN NORRIS Woman to Woman Talks

Weddings and Attendant Parties Continue to Feature Local News

Weddings and their attendant festivities, which have been furnishing entertainment for Wichita Falls young people for the past several weeks, continue to hold the center of the stage. July will be just as busy a month as June, with the Graves-Fraser wedding this week and the double wedding of Miss Grace Lee Clark's daughters to Paul J. Fond and Clifford Deaton next week. And from very frank and informal talk among the young folks who are making up the wedding party groups now, August is going to be just as busy as July.

WICHITA FALLS GIRL HONOR GUEST AT MANY PARTIES IN WACO, TEX.

Miss Margaret Duncan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Duncan of the South street, is being welcomed back to Waco, Tex., by her former home, where she is spending two weeks, with wide open arms by the young people of that city. Miss Duncan went to Waco last week to visit a number of girl friends and take part in the wedding of Miss Beth Skinner there this week. Since her arrival the Waco Times Herald has carried the account of half a dozen beautiful planned parties given by Waco maidens and young matrons in her honor, and the bride-elect shared honors with her at half a dozen more. Thursday's paper carried accounts of a dinner dance at the Fish Pond, a pretty Waco resort, given in honor of Miss Duncan by Dr. Watson, C. L. Watson and Miss Elizabeth Watson; a bridge luncheon honoring Miss Duncan and Miss Skinner jointly given by Mrs. D. H. Coleman and a dinner dance honoring both given by Miss Shirley.

FRIDAY BRIDGE PARTY HONORS MRS. WEAVER

HAND-MADE FROCKS LEAD

More popular than any other one-kind of frock this summer is the one that is handmade or trimmed with handwork. Little hand-made dresses of sheer voile, organdie, linen or tulle do much more for the smartest shops. They are usually simple slipover dresses with a elastic at the waist and are trimmed with bits of plain drawn work and double hemstitching. Many of the crepe de china dresses are trimmed with Russian embroidery in brilliant colors—peasant designs of fruit or flowers for the most part.

"MY COUNTRY 'TIS OF THEE"

By KATHLEEN NORRIS "America's Most Popular Woman's Writer"

Her maids were capped and aproned; her butter was in livery. She had her French grandfathers' arms upon her limousine, and her two girls were in a carriage school. She broadened her heels, she said "Directly!" and "Rather!" where you and I might say "Coming!" and "Oh, yes!"

KATHLEEN NORRIS SAYS

It is an unfortunate thing that the Fourth of July has come to mean, to most of us, something extremely material. It stands, nowadays, supremely and primarily as a holiday, a day of rest, a day of "What'll we do over the Fourth?" says fifty million voices in late June, and fifty million minds begin to buzz with the possibilities of paper napkins, bathing suits, beaches, woods, chocolate layer cakes, and tons and tons of ice cream.

MOVIE CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK AT LOCAL THEATRES

Atmosphere of Erin Is Found in Film of Irish Life

"My Wild Irish Rose," the big Vitagraph special adapted from the famous stage success by Dion Boucicault of bygone days, will be shown at the Strand theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

"My Wild Irish Rose" was directed by David Smith and makes the first special production filmed under his direction which has a foreign country for its locale. The first was "Black Beauty," with its scenes laid in rural England; the second was the "Little Minister," with its action in and about the town of Thrums, in Scotland, and now "My Wild Irish Rose," with colorful Ireland as the background and with few scenes laid in Australia and on the famous prison ships of the period of the story. Vitagraph is confident that this new production is a worthy completion of the line.

The recent agitation of the Irish question and the formation of the Irish republic as the background of the picture to the always present interest in the much-discussed island and its struggle for freedom, and President Albert E. Grosser, who has been producing a big, spectacular special production with the cause of Ireland for its theme, the romantic and picturesque mountains and lakes of the Emerald Isle for the backgrounds and two engrossing love stories intertwined, is more than timely—really an inspiration. It is neither time nor money has been spared to make the photoplay as perfect as human hands and ingenuity can make it.

OPENS AT STRAND THEATRE ON MONDAY

SCENE FROM "MY WILD IRISH ROSE"

Little Richard Daniels made such a hit in Vitagraph's production of "The Little Minister" that a special part was written into the story of "My Wild Irish Rose" for him. Young Daniels is known as the "freckledest" actor on the screen today—and the word "actor" is well deserved in all sorts of emotions. Unlike most child actors he is never "staged" or affected. Above he is shown in the novel vehicle which he manages in "My Wild Irish Rose." At his right is Pat O'Malley, who with Pauline Starke is co-starred in the production.

Mae Murray at Olympic Theatre in "Fascination"

"Ever since I visited Spain, I have been dreaming of doing a Spanish picture, and now my chance has come!"

The new picture, which will be shown at the Olympic Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, is "Fascination." In it Mae Murray appears as the child of a Spanish father and American mother. Most of the scenes are laid in Spain.

"Spain, of all countries, remains the land of romance," said Miss Murray. "Miss Murray" visited Spain a year and a half ago when making a vacation tour with her husband, Robert Z. Leonard, who presents her in the new picture.

"It is a country of such unforgettable beauty that I have been haunted by memories of it," she said. "I think in the picture, we have captured that beauty and will make it live on the silver sheet. Moreover, it is the land of real, emotional drama. Although the Spaniard is ordinarily the gentlest and most charming of individuals, he is so recklessly, devil-may-care, vivacious, flapper, eager to seize life as a dazzling adventure, bubblingly intent upon extracting the quintessence of excitement from it, yet tenderly appreciative of real human values, and Viola Dana romps through the part with a joyous abandon that brooks no rivalry. She adds just the right touch of sentiment that carries with it a little heart tug, but she is never sentimental, never sugary. There is too much unglaring gaiety in her personality for that.

Not often does she have a role that gives her such a dazzling opportunity as she finds in her Metro picture, "The Fourteenth Lover," which will be seen at the Gem theatre Tuesday. It would seem that Alles D. G. Miller had written the story with the idea of exploiting Miss Dana's charms to their fullest. But Miss Miller had no such intention. The story is quite able to stand upon its own legs. It is a merry, bright and clean conception, adapted for the screen by Edith Kennedy in swift moving continuity.

Miss Dana appears as a wealthy girl with thirteen wealthy suitors. Her "fourteenth lover" is the family gardener, a young college boy, and their romance affords great suspenseful pleasure.

Colleen Moore At Empress in "Come On Over"

Rupert Hughes has duplicated the feat of writing another comedy as fine and entertaining, in a different style, as was his "Scratch My Back," the comedy hit of two seasons ago. The new comedy from his pen is called "Come On Over," which will be seen at the Empress Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Mr. Hughes has taken as his heroine a young Irish girl, Moyna Kilkea, who is left behind by Shane O'Malley, when he goes to America, with the promise that he will soon send for her. But Shane has ill luck in New York, included in which is the fact that Judy O'Grady falls in love with him because he has helped her to get a job for her father and induced him to promise to let her go alone. Also he is out of a job so much that he can't save up enough money to send for Moyna.

The girl is brought over by friends and she finds Judy and Shane planning to go to the priest and have Judy's father has consented to take the temperance pledge. Moyna thinks they are going to be married and the tantrum into which she falls keeps the comedy hitting the high spots of fun till the very end. It is in this role that Miss Moore emerges a comedienne of parts. Her triumph is as great as it was in the role of the ungainly girl who develops into a beauty in Mr. Hughes' photoplay, "The Wall Flower." She never misses a laugh nor does she overburden a comedy situation into farce.

"Come On Over" is the kind of photoplay that pleases everybody and wins new friends for the theater showing it.

"The Easy Road"

Some of the sweetest romances ever told are those which develop after marriage, when the husband and wife, estranged or separated perhaps, are finally brought together again with that understanding that insure future happiness. Such is the romance in "The Easy Road," the new Paramount picture, starring Thomas Meighan, which will be shown at the Empress Theatre, Friday and Saturday.

The husband, who in spite of hardships has achieved fame as a novelist, settles down on easy street with his rich wife to enjoy life. But with pleasure as his false idol, his life and his character deteriorate. His wife, in the hope of renewing his ideals goes abroad. The novelist goes from bad to worse. He is about to commit suicide when something happens that inspires him anew and he again becomes the man of old. The wife returns, half thinking to get a divorce and marry another. The ensuing episodes show how both find happiness.

Gladya George has the leading feminine role opposite Mr. Meighan and Grace Goodall, Arthur Carew, Maxine Elliot and Lura Anson are in the cast.

"The Church and Its People" New Play on Monday

Large crowds have been attending the Majestic theatre the past week to witness the dramatic performance of the Fox Stock company. It seems that the amusement going people of Wichita Falls are hungry for amusement of this kind. Each program produced by this company seems to improve over the last, as it was the general opinion of those attending the one for the first half of the past week.

A story of a different kind has been announced for the first half of this week, a story dealing in religion entitled, "The Church and Its People." This is a good sermon preached over the footlights, with different characters such as you will generally see in every day life. The good minister, the hypocrite, the sinner, and other people both in and out of the church. The management has spared nothing to make this one of the best stories that has been produced by this company.

The story already announced for the last half of next week, commencing on Thursday night, will be that good old story dramatized from the book of the same name, entitled "St. Elmo."

A matinee at bargain prices is always given on each Wednesday and Saturday afternoon at 2:30.

The City National Bank of Commerce will safeguard your savings, have them ready for you when you want them, and pay you 4 per cent compound interest in the meantime.

Who wouldn't love her? Shane did—but he lost jobs so fast he couldn't send for her. Then she arrived without notice—and found her sweetheart married another girl at the priest's. Maybe it didn't get her "Irish" up. It's the funniest thing Hughes has written—it's homely, and human.

PUBLIC LITTLE INTERESTED IN TWO INNOVATIONS PROPOSED IN MECHANISM OF GOVERNMENT

By MARK SULLIVAN
National Political Correspondent of the New York Evening Post and Wichita Daily Times.
(Copyright, 1922 by the New York Evening Post, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. July 1, 1922.—The writer felt some surprise that the two innovations in our mechanism of government, during the past week have not engaged public attention. It is true that the public and the newspapers have probably come to look upon such proposals as not always meaning any early or complete fulfillment. But the two suggestions made during the past week are in a class by themselves. They have an amount of vitality and are backed by a sufficient weight of authority to make it certain that they will finally come into being and be of great importance.

Senate Seniority Rule
The suggestion for the abolition of the seniority rule in the selection of chairmen and members of senate committees comes from within the senate itself. The proponent of it is Senator Medill McCormick, of Illinois, and he is a man of rather extraordinary energy. From the fact that there is no senator with so small a number of years service who has put his back into and has successfully brought to fruit so large a number of important innovations. One example is enough to mention. The adoption of the budget system was largely due to Senator McCormick's initiative and persistence. Senator McCormick's present proposal might be supposed to have in it a considerable degree of self-interest. He is one of the largest number of younger senators who are deprived of the opportunity to give their energy full swing because the important committees on military affairs and membership are, under the seniority rule, monopolized by the older senators. But while Senator McCormick is one of this group of younger senators, he is also an exception to it. His energy is such, and certain lines of his ability are so important, that he has been able, in spite of the fact that he is only in his fourth year of senatorial service, to achieve a degree of power and to entrench himself in important places in the senate to a degree hardly approached by any other senator of equal youth.

Subject to Criticism
The seniority rule which Senator McCormick now proposes shall be abolished, is subject to criticism for more than one reason. In the first place, it brings into the ethereal of power, such as chairmanship of the finance committee, the foreign affairs committee, the judiciary committee, and the like, senators who, under the working of the seniority rule, come into these positions automatically, merely by virtue of the longer duration of their experience in the senate. Now it is not by any means to be asserted that the senators who come into these positions by virtue of length of service are in all cases not the best fitted for the positions. Quite the contrary is true. In many cases it is conceded that the older men who now hold these positions are the best fitted for them. If Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, were the chairman of the committee on foreign relations by virtue of seniority of service, he would be given that position by virtue of his unique knowledge within that field. There are persons, especially, for example, among those who favor the league of nations, who would like to see Senator Lodge deprived of his position. But the fact is that an unprejudiced person, looking over the senate for the best man for that particular position, would undoubtedly select Senator Lodge. If the seniority rule is abolished, Senator Lodge, under any rule that is substituted for seniority will undoubtedly be given the same position. The same thing is true of the committee on commerce. This committee has charge of shipping and of all the matters which, like the proposed subsidiary affect the United States shipping board. The present chairman of that committee, Wesley L. Jones, of Washington, has come to the position through the working of the seniority rule. But everyone can see that Senator Jones has a unique degree of knowledge and experience in this field, and that his energy and vitality are adequate to the immense amount of work it entails. But the finance committee, on the other hand, illustrates the dissatisfaction with the seniority rule. The present chairman, McCumber, came to the position automatically, through the working of the seniority system. Senator McCumber is a fairly able man and, as it happens, his capacity for sustained industry is unique. Never the less it is undoubtedly a fact that if the Senate as a whole were called upon to elect the chairman of this tariff-making and tax-making committee, there are some other senators who would get the choice before McCumber. Very probably the choice would be Smoot, of Utah.

Another Vice Mentioned
Another vice of the seniority rule is that by its nature it results in a condition in which practically every chairman of an important committee is an elderly man. The only young senator who is chairman of an important committee, is Senator Wadsworth, of New York, head of the committee on military affairs. He is a marked exception. The senators who are chairmen of the following important committees are all above 40 years of age: namely: Senator Warren, of Wyoming, chairman of the appropriations committee; Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, chairman of the foreign relations committee; Senator Cummins, of Iowa, chairman of the interstate commerce committee; Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, chairman of the judiciary committee; Senator Page, of Vermont, chairman of the naval affairs committee; Senator Dillingham, of Vermont, chairman of the committee on privileges and elections.

Let no one suppose that all, or even any, of these men do not make good chairmen of their respective committees. As it happens, in the case of nearly all of the committees, named, the chairman has a unique equipment of experience and of the particular kind of work required for the particular committee. But the respect in which age may be, and occasionally is, a handicap, lies in the degree of work required from the chairman of an important committee. It happens again and again that the chairman of one of these committees must hold hearings on a proposed measure. These hearings frequently run into weeks or months. Often the chairman of the committee must preside for six or eight hours a day over hearings in which the witnesses are argumentative and contentious. The drain on the vitality of the particular kind of work is most serious. At the same time, while holding these hearings he must not neglect the regular sessions of the senate. Neither must he neglect his correspondence nor the ordinary work of his office. The net of all that can be said about the mere factor of age is that some means should be provided by which a younger man can take on his shoulders the immense burden of hard work involved in an important committee chairmanship and that the older men should be given more leisure for reflection and greater opportunity to allow the benefit of their experience and wisdom in the shape of speeches and discussions within the Senate itself. There should be in the Senate as there is among colleges and universities, the sort of position that is known as "President Emeritus," or "Chairman Emeritus."

Young Men Held Back
The final vice of the seniority rule is that new senators who have relative youth and the energy that goes with youth are deprived of giving to the senate and the country the full value of their energy and ability. They are put at the bottom of the lists of committee memberships and must wait for three or four years until they reach places of power. Anxious families of the senate can readily call off a long list of young and able men, who have not the opportunity to give as much service to their country as they are capable of. There is Pepper, the new senator from Pennsylvania, as well as the other men who will probably be elected also starting from Pennsylvania in November. Mr. Reed, there is Lamont, of Wisconsin. There will be Beveridge of Indiana, if he is elected this fall. There is McKinley, of Illinois. There is Northcutt, of North Dakota, and McNary of Oregon, and many others. One among them is the author of this proposal, Senator McCormick, of Illinois. Senator McCormick is only forty five years old, and even among young men he happens to have exceptional energy. Although, as I have previously said, Senator McCormick has done better than most of the other younger senators in getting into the senate of power, he would undoubtedly be still more fortunate if the seniority rule were abolished, as he now proposes.

It is undoubtedly desirable to see the much confusion among religious people today; and we believe, as we have always believed, that it is all the result of a failure to heed the admonition of Paul as to rightly handling the word of truth. The Bible contains the whole revelation of God to man, from the beginning of creation; and as God has dealt with his creatures under different laws at different times, it is necessary to recognize this fact in the application of his will to men. He who fails to recognize this fact will find himself in hopeless confusion respecting the teaching of God's word. When Paul wrote to Timothy, he said, II. Tim. 3:15, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." It is expected that the sermons at both hours Sunday will deal with this question, "Right Dividing the Word of Truth." The sermon at the morning hour, it is thought, will be with reference to salvation from past sins; and the one at the evening hour will deal with spiritual gifts, such as casting out devils, speaking with new tongues, taking up serpents, drinking deadly poison, and healing the sick.

First Baptist Church.
In announcing the services at the First Baptist church, Rev. Powers states: "Sunday evening I will preach from the subject, 'Perils and Hopes of America.' Before the service is concluded, everyone present will be convinced that Wichita Falls is a part of this great country which is menaced by perils and inspired by hope. The color of the perilous clouds may change, but the sky is always blue. This will be a patriotic service, since the fourth of July is so near at hand. The national song will be sung, led by the chorus choir. At the morning hour, I will preach on 'The River of Life.' Special music for the day includes, for the morning, an anthem by the choir, and a mixed quartet number, sung by Messrs. Elizabeth Hamilton, Grace Ritter, Messrs. Vaughn Ray and William Young, with special part duet for tenor and baritone. The quartet will sing again at the evening hour.

Public confidence has been an important factor in the success and the prestige of the City National Bank of Commerce—confidence in its policies, in the men who for more than thirty years have carefully safeguarded the funds of thousands of west Texas people.

WICHITA FALLS IN MAIN ARTERY OF TRAVEL-TALLEY

FORMER PRESIDENT COLORADO-GULF HIGHWAY POINTS OUT ASSETS.

SPOKE AT ANNUAL MEET OF ROAD ASSOCIATION

Says Highway Traverses Nearly Every Character of Soil Rich in Production.

Wichita Falls is one of the main arteries of travel in the United States, according to a statement made by David P. Talley, former president of the Colorado to Gulf Highway, who in an address to the annual meeting of the association held recently, told of the greatness of the highway system and pointed out the assets.

Mr. Talley, who is a resident of Wichita Falls, is engaged in business in Vernon, and has learned by actual experience the value of good highways and especially the Colorado to Gulf.

In speaking of the highway Mr. Talley said in part: "It was believed about one year ago that I was winding up my part in the game of life, but somehow it often-times turns out that the men who get turned down by life insurance companies come in handy as pall bearers for the men who don't get turned down."

"Thanks to my all-mighty God, I have been permitted a privilege I value most highly, the great privilege of addressing this meeting of men engaged in an undertaking which can be quite properly designated 'empire building.' The purpose of your association have for ten years been very close to my heart and its successful realization of the wonderful possibilities of your highway is one of the chief ambitions of my life. I am proud of the privilege of being a citizen of the magnificent 'City that faith built'—Wichita Falls, but am not addressing you as an official representative of that city; other gentlemen have been designated for that purpose. Let me hope that I can appropriately in my report representing every town and county on your highway in now addressing you. However, it would be an honor to speak in behalf of Wichita county and Wichita Falls and I trust it will be considered a pardonable pride to refer to the undoubted leadership of that city in our cause. That city holds the distinction of having had published and widely distributed in 1912 the first road log book issued in Texas. The idea of forming this association was conceived in that city soon after that, in 1912, and it caused to be called the first meeting you held. It also caused to be done at its own expense in 1913 the first pole marking gone in this state, when it had the poles striped from Wichita Falls to Decatur, through parts of four counties. It now enjoys the proud distinction of owning the longest continuous stretch of solid concrete highway in Texas, this stretch being a section of about 32 miles of the C-to-G highway extending from the city through Iowa, Park and Electra to the west county line. A stretch of about four miles of the C-to-G to be same character of construction from the city to the east county line will be completed in the near future. Please do not think this accomplishment should be credited to the 'oil boom' that city enjoyed, as the greater part of the bond money was voted by the county prior to the discovery well at Burkburnett, and every mile of the grade of the C-to-G was engineered and constructed prior to this 'boom,' in the year 1912, the year of double drought—absence of rain and absence of saloons. The county has set a pattern we would be glad to see all of you meet, but which you can not hope to surpass. Now to my subject:

Purposes of Our Organization

"The old mill wheel being grinding corn and is now driving dynamo. And so it is with your association. It began by devoting most of its attention to inducing the actual building of improved roads, but it now has other great purposes. The possibilities of interstate highway—includes some of the greatest assets available to your communities, only a part of which will be touched upon in this address.

Tourist information bureaus are conducted in nearly all the leading cities of the country, or handled through the chambers of commerce, and one of the duties of your association is to place and keep prominently before the traveling public, through these channels, printed road guides and by means of maps and other advertising matter the merits of our highway.

Following are some of the popular log books, strip maps and regional maps used by cross country tourists, nearly all of which are published annually or oftener. The blue books and road maps published in New York, Chicago and Europe; the strip map books published in Kansas City; Harry Locke's strip maps published in Los Angeles; Classon Map company's maps and guide books published in Denver; the Texas Highway Guide; the San Antonio Auto club, Dallas Auto club, Austin Auto club and Fort Worth Auto club log books of certain districts in this state. Some of these are corrected annually to meet the ever changing routes, and it is incumbent upon our association to see to it that these publications are supplied regularly with authentic information, as an unsatisfactory map or guide book makes an unsatisfied tourist who may thereafter seek another route.

The Texas state highway commission prepared periodically an official series of designated state highways. The highway commissions of the other two states probably do the same thing. Your association executive committee can lay claim to part of the credit for being able to say that every mile of our highway in all three states has been officially designated as prominent part of the state's systems. It is doubtful if this would have been a fact had we had no organization to keep awake to the situation.

Elaborate and comprehensive maps are published and widely distributed among the touring bureaus by the national highways association of New York and Washington; by the American Automobile association of New York and Washington; by the United States department of good roads and department of interior at Washington, and it is important that your association keep in close touch with these and keep them properly advised of the status of our routes. The National Automobile association recently organized in St. Louis; the Texas Highways association recently organized in this state; the Texas Good Roads association, and the Texas Automobile association all have more or less influence in the destinies of our interstate highway and it behooves your association to see that all these are kept familiar with the many great physical advantages of our route and its possibilities as a tourist route.

There is no question but what keeping alive an active and thorough organization it is possible to establish the C-to-G as one of the nation's greatest arteries of tourist travel, of motor and horse-drawn transportation, of war-time social intercourse. Let it be the duty of the Texas highway commission, both of whom last year assured one of our officials that they considered the C-to-G one of the most important highways in Texas.

Your most important mission is to keep wide-awake and active to the great value to every community of products of large packing plants in four of its leading cities, and practically every kind of food, feed, building material, etc. etc. It means at Denver, the 'Rocky Mountain Military highway' which runs north to Canada and whose cooperation, and possibly its organization, we can acquire, and we are negotiating with parties in Brownsville, Tampico and Mexico looking towards an extension of our highway into the heart of Mexico, thus offering you the opportunity of making ours a great international highway, perhaps the longest organized highway in the world, thus further strengthening our position with the national government in the establishing of a national system.

The Hon. Theodore Roosevelt knew America. He knew the section traversed by the C-to-G. He has been quoted as having said this vast region running from the foothills of the Rocky mountains to the Texas coast was 'The Garden of the Lord' and that in the fullness of time its people would make a paradise out of a comparative wilderness. Had he been familiar with the routing of the C-to-G he undoubtedly would have been in hearty agreement with two splendid highway authorities—the federal highway engineer for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas and the chief engineer of the Texas highway commission, both of whom last year assured one of our officials that they considered the C-to-G one of the most important highways in Texas.

Your most important mission is to keep wide-awake and active to the great value to every community of making certain that our entire highway is to be included and retained in any national system established by Uncle Sam. Please mark the prediction that if any of your communities should fail to secure location on one of these trunk line highways it will experience years of extreme regret thereafter. Having one trunk line of railway does not stop any town from hustling for a second one, or several more. Why any different in the case of a trunk line highway? A county may have already constructed a splendid paved road every mile of our route within its border, yet it still would need our association and our association need its support. There is a vast difference between a good road project and a highway organization. The former has but one object, whereas the latter has several distinct purposes, the accomplishment of any of which is of great importance to every community on the route. All good roads are not highways, neither are all highways good roads. The C-to-G was organized in 1912, making it the second oldest highway organization in Texas. We should in no way discourage any other interstate highway organization, but should cooperate with them to the fullest. However, while wishing them every success, let us not sleep on any of our rights or advantages. Speaking of the work and extravagant expenditures, this caused the growth of a disjointed system of roads. Thus, jealousies were aroused between local communities until finally a larger unit—the county, took over the more important routes and built roads of various types and construction, connecting the various portions of the county. In a more comprehensive and efficient manner. Soon the same difficulties developed upon a larger scale. No attention had been paid to interstate highways and consequently roads developed which did not properly connect with various parts of the State—hence the creation of State Highway Commissions and State Highways. Thus, uniformity of construction and maintenance could be secured. Now we are confronted with the large problem—connecting all parts of the country. Should we not apply the lessons learned by the experience of the past? Can effective inter-county and State highways be obtained efficiently, speedily and economically through the disjointed efforts of several communities, each community working separately and exclusively for its own selfish ends? And can Federal aid, which is now upon its limited degree and will increase annually, to these separate communities produce anything but chaos—poorly roads, roads beginning nowhere, ending nowhere, and at a cost of great sums annually upon which there will be no returns but a constant expense to county and state? No Federal aid is or should be obtainable under such a disjointed system. What we need is cooperation, highways constructed according to some definite plan along logical lines throughout the country. It is not a local community problem. It is a National, State and County problem and can be met only by the whole country working together intelligently as a unit.

Public sentiment has awakened Northern and the Southern Pacific everywhere to our overwhelming lack of proper highway facilities and their attendant evils. We have in its movement if not guided and led by a definite and logical plan. We need the earnest co-operation of the individual in a county have always been one of the greatest drawbacks to the development of both county and community, and the end invariably works to the detriment of the selfish community. Legitimate advertising and broad gauged efforts to attract trade to any community are commendable and help to build up both community and county, but when it comes to a public movement of universal benefit, such as the highway movement, the community that holds back and makes demands for purely selfish advantage at the moment, always finds in due time that it has not only retarded the growth of its own county as a whole but has also held itself back. Anything that will help make your county one of the greatest in your State will certainly help each and every town and community far more than can possibly any selfish scheme.

The argument advanced by some, particularly in the smaller towns and on the farms, that we want roads from town to town, is unquestionably sound. We do want them, but how are we to go about it to get them? Does this argue against first a definite system of highways? Quite the opposite. The same argument was advanced in the early development of railroads. The farmer of one State believed he did not want to teach another State. He thought he wanted short nearby places. Did he get them? Were they first to be built? Not at all. The great Pennsylvania pushed on through to Pittsburgh. The New York Central and Lake Shore built on to Chicago. Likewise the Great

If you have any prospects that are doubtful about the performance of the Little Six, just send them around to take a ride in mine.

After driving this car for over seven thousand miles I am convinced that it is the best thing I have ever owned. It is a real money saver and gives you the most of the big six as though they were a big six.

I just completed a 900 mile drive and used less than three quarts of oil and saved about 15 miles. I can just say for me that I am a one hundred per cent Studebaker booster.

The Little Six Studebaker has proved itself the most economical car in the automobile business and the endorsement of the Little Six is based on absolute knowledge of what car performance should be.

If Your Car Could Speak It Would Cry Aloud for Dealer Service

"SERVICE." A word full of meaning. The dictionary defines it as performance of labor for the benefit of ANOTHER. That is exactly the spirit that prevails in the Service Department of your authorized car dealer. Work done upon your car is for YOUR benefit first and last. YOU are the one that must profit. YOU are the one that must be satisfied and kept attached to the make of car you drive. Upon it depends your dealer's future.

The motorist owes it to himself, to his car, and to his car dealer to get none but dealer service. In no other way can automobile ownership be the pleasure it should be.

TWAS A HUNDRED AND SOME-ODD IN THE SHADE LAST SUNDAY, BUT THEY WENT TO BIBLE CLASS JUST THE SAME

The men's Bible classes of the city's principal churches held a joint meeting last Sunday morning, as guests of the K-K class of the First M. E. church, south, and a total of 444 turned out for the service in spite of the altitude record made by the mercury. Classes represented included the host class of the First M. E. church, south, of which Oral Jones is president, and Judge John C. Kay is teacher; the First Presbyterian class, of which Julian Montgomery is president, and Judge A. H. Carrigan is teacher; the First Christian church class, of which J. W. Hopper is president, and Rev. J. Lem Keevil is teacher; the Floral Heights M. E. class, of which T. A. Key is president and Willey Robertson is teacher, also from several other churches. Last Sunday morning Judge John C. Kay teacher; and members of classes spoke to the assembled class.

Systems and all other great west-ern roads. The branches developed after the lines were built and were supported by and acted as feeders for the trunk lines. It must be the same with roads either present or to be built. They, being also means of communication, must follow the same law. If the towns and farmers wait the roads will be paid for by the centers of population. The greatest immediate and lasting benefit will accrue to the rural districts that will have direct access towards their building. The greatest increase in real estate values will come to the rural districts. The decreased cost of hauling farm products will benefit both classes. Large sums will be spent in the county communities that otherwise would be diverted elsewhere.

NASH & LOWERS RECORD IN WEST BY OVER 7 HOURS
Blazing a trail through what has been described as the most rugged country in America and making the shortest route between Salt Lake City and the Pacific Coast, a strictly stock Nash Six Five-passenger touring car arrived in the Utah metropolis from Los Angeles after a record breaking run of twenty-six hours and twenty-one minutes. This was the elapsed time between checking stations in Los Angeles and Salt Lake. The entire distance of 813 miles between the two terminals included but 140 miles of hard-surfaced roads. The former record set in 1919 was lowered by seven hours and five minutes.

KNOWLEDGE FOR CAR OWNERS
Interesting and Important Facts That Every Motorist Should Know.
Weak magnets cause misfires, especially at low speeds.
A damaged gasket is of no use and should be replaced with a new one immediately.
When driving, it is well to note the different sources of noise and eliminate them gradually.
Batteries that have been fully charged, washed, dried and laid away, require a filling with a similar acid electrolyte.
The radiator should be provided with some form of vent pipe to allow steam, which at times generates in the radiator, to escape.
Any defect in the interrupter mechanism will cause a total failure or an erratic action of the high tension current.
A defective condenser will cause a failure of the magneto to operate properly, as only a very weak, if any spark, will be obtained.
Leaking water pipes may be temporarily repaired by binding around several layers of string well soaked in thick oil.
When the interrupter points become dirty, a few drops of kerosene will remedy the trouble and restore the parts to good working order.
The universal joints should be cleaned thoroughly several times during the year and then inject a small quantity of high quality steam cylinder oil, rotate the joints for several minutes to permit the oil to work its way into the bearing surfaces.
When the pistons become rusted as the result of storing the car in a damp place, put some crude oil directly into the cylinders and allow it to remain there for several hours. If you are unable then to crank the motor, jack up one rear wheel, and with the gear in first speed force this wheel around. The additional leverage for slow speed and power work, while more air and less gas are drawn into the cylinder for economical high speed driving or light load pulling.

KING OF SPAIN ORDERS CHANDLER ROYAL DISPATCH
No mere figure of speech is the appellation "fit for a king" that has been applied to the Royal Dispatch recently brought out by The Chandler Motor Car company. A king has recognized the class of this smart new model and ordered one. The export department of The Chandler company has just received a cablegram from the Chandler distributor in Madrid to make immediate shipment of a Royal Dispatch that has been sold to King Alfonso of Spain. The Chandler Royal Dispatch is distinctly a sport type car, equipped with six wire wheels, the spares being carried on each side of the car behind the individual front fenders. A rear trunk rack with cast aluminum protecting bars, aluminum steps, nickel radiator and motor-meter and nickel trimmed head and cow lamp are among the attractive style features of the four-passenger Royal-Dispatch. Superbly satisfactory spectacle service supplied by Fred Goss, optometrist, with Kruger Jewelry Co., Wichita Falls, Texas.

sure that the master speedster's thirty year's experience on the speedway and in the manufacturing business can bring it off. The Oldfield "99" is unquestionably a forward step in tire building not only offering economics as far as price is concerned but going a long way to solving the problem of the most miles for the money.

As has been well said by Mr. Coleman Du Pont, the Chairman of the Board of Councilors of the National Highways Association: "Roads in brief, is the plan of the National Highways Association. Sound in its conception. Definite. Logical. Effective. If it can be put into effect throughout the Nation, it will be more valuable than a dozen Panama Canals; it will mean more than all the Navies of all the seas (and he is a great manufacturer of war munitions) and it will be more important than any thing ever done by any government in the history of civilization. In a word, it will mean increased happiness to every resident under our starry banner."—Especially the "Daredevil" of Tallahassee, Fla., the Hon. C. G. Hwy. Ass'n.

EXPLAINS ORIGIN OF WELL KNOWN 999 TIRE SYMBOL
Although many automobile and truck owners in this city are already familiar with the symbol "999" as identifying the Oldfield tire for light motor vehicles, it is very likely that few realize the historic interest that surrounds the creating of this name. This was recently explained by Mr. E. A. Martin of the E. A. Martin Tire Co., local distributors for the Oldfield line. It appears that in 1912 Henry Ford built the first racing car successfully produced in the United States and named it the "999". Selling it to Barney Oldfield king of the speedways, this master maker broke the five mile dirt track record and right there was born the idea that has now expanded into a master tire made by a master racer.

When the pistons become rusted as the result of storing the car in a damp place, put some crude oil directly into the cylinders and allow it to remain there for several hours. If you are unable then to crank the motor, jack up one rear wheel, and with the gear in first speed force this wheel around. THE MOTORISTS' PROBLEMS

By WILLIAM H. STEWART, JR.

Motor Department: Have been reading your columns about automobiles and their problems and would like you to answer a question for me. I have taken all the connecting rods out of my car and would like to know the proper method for putting them back on to get the same tension on each. It is a six-cylinder car. The bearings are all G. K.—E. C.

Make sure that each connecting rod goes back into the same place as when removed. Fit one bearing at a time by removing shims. Do this until you have a snug fit when the bolts are locked. You can judge the fit somewhat when you test each one separately with the hand crank. Only a slight resistance should be noted. When you have the pins properly fitted, then loosen up on the locking nuts enough to free the bearings so that you can properly judge the fitting of the next. After you have each bearing fitted in this manner, then lock them all and install the cotter pins. The accumulated rust on the cotter pins may make the engine difficult to crank at first, but after the first hundred miles of careful driving you should have no trouble.

Motor Department: In 1918 I purchased a new Ford touring car which has given me trouble from the first day on. The car starts hard, does not seem to hold in high gear and seems to drop from high gear to low and back in high again. The handle is all adjusted G. K. If I drive for 100 miles on a trip I have to return in low. The car seems to have no power. I never have the handle off and notice that my intake valves do not close until the pistons are about three-fourths of an inch on their compression stroke. Kindly state if this thing is correct and obligate, C. K.

Would suggest that you write the Ford company at Detroit, Mich. for one of the instruction booklets which will give you detailed information about your car and how to make needed adjustments. From what you have stated it appears that the clutch is in need of repair. Also the carburetor may need adjusting. Intake valve should not close until piston is part way up on their compression stroke. About forty degrees past bottom center. Most of your trouble appears to be in the transmission which can be overcome by proper adjustment. The "Ford Manual" will explain the details.

Motor Department: I have a light motorcycle using bicycle tires. I have trouble with the rear tire. The rim seems to cut it. Can you tell me the cause and suggest a remedy? If you have a license to run an automobile, can you run a motorcycle without getting a motorcycle license—A. M.

Remove the tire and inspect the rim carefully. Smooth down any nicks or rough places with a file. Be sure tire is correct size for rim and keep inflated to proper pressure. Apply to state license bureau for copy of motor vehicle law. This will explain all details.

Motor Department: If a person wishes to be his own driver and look after his car as far as possible himself, would there be any preference between a demountable rim and the other kind where you have to insert a new inner tube in case of puncture while on the road?

Please tell me which is the quickest, easiest, cleanest and most economical when it comes to tire repairs.—W. B.

The demountable rim is best for many reasons. It enables you to make a quick change on the road with the least amount of trouble. You can then replace the tube when convenient and have it pumped up by an air compressor instead of by hand. As you want readily understand, it is the policy of this department not to recommend any particular device on the market.

Motor Department: Kindly advise me through your columns if a man's top can be made waterproof by any kind of application. If it can state what kind of dressing should be used. Would it be advisable to paint a motor top, the top referred to means water fairly well, but does not have a half rain leaks considerably. There are a few badly worn spots in same, evidently made by friction when top was supplied dealer may be able to get you a special waterproofing compound and also patches for leaks which match the color very closely. It is not advisable to paint the top.

Motor Department: Please explain how I can remove the old oil from my transmission system. There is a drain plug in the bottom of the transmission case. Would it do any harm to put a little kerosene in to wash it out. There is a generator on the car and when it revolves it starts to squeak, and when I push the clutch pedal three-quarters way down, it also squeaks. Thanking you for your advice.—H. E.

Drain all the old grease and replace plug. Four in a gallon of kerosene and wash all the parts thoroughly. Then install fresh lubricant. A little experimenting with an oil can should locate the squeaks in the clutch pedal bearings. Rub a little vasoline on your finger and touch it on the commutator of the generator. This should stop the squeaks caused by the brushes.

Motor Department: Will you kindly give me the following information at earliest convenience: I have a new Ford car and I am putting leather boots on steering gear connections to protect from dirt. Can I pack same with cup grease, or will oil be best for new connections of this character? What is the best lubricant for the differential? Also transmission? When using reverse pedal it sticks and will not release. What is the cause and remedy?—Owner.

Use cup grease in boots as any fluid or semi-fluid lubricant would work out in a short time. Use a gear case compound in differential, as this flows back into the gears as fast as it is squeezed out. The Ford transmission is oiled from the engine and needs no separate attention. Remove transmission case cover and see if the spring is broken or the bevel on the reverse hand tough. The rod may have too tight a bearing where it passes through the case. Apply oil to the outside and work it backward and forward a number of times.

Motor Department: In using a spark plug pump to inflate tires, is there any danger of putting coil if the wire terminal from coil to spark plug should hang free? Would it be advisable to tap out one of the trouble had gone on much greater harm would have resulted, besides the loss of power caused by a defective bearing.

During the hot weather there is apt to be an accumulation of water in the crank case due to condensation or leakage. This contaminates the oil and reduces its lubricating qualities. As most of it accumulates in the bottom of the oil pump it is easy to remove. Draw off a cup-full at a time until it is all gone.

This does not clean out the oil channels, which should be cleaned as follows:— Run the engine for ten or fifteen seconds. This splashes out the oil which should then be allowed to settle for several minutes. The pump is then opened again and sometimes more water may be drawn off. This applies to the oil and reduces its lubricating qualities. The pump is then opened again and sometimes more water may be drawn off. This applies to the oil and reduces its lubricating qualities.

PAY TRIBUTE TO OAKLAND MOTOR CAR OFFICIALS

PONTIAC, MICH., July 1, 1922.—Two hundred officials and department heads of the Oakland Motor Car company, assembled in the Brookline Country Club Tuesday evening, paid tribute to George H. Hannum, president and general manager, and E. M. Orr, assistant general manager. Both these officials were being toasted on the anniversary of the completion of their first year's work with the company.

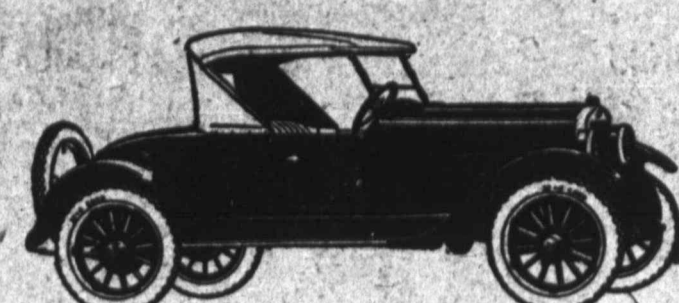

C. J. Neplier, general sales manager, acted as toastmaster and warmly commended the work of Mr. Hannum in the production of a new model that he said, has been proclaimed the best Oakland ever turned out. Each of the two honored guests received appropriate gifts. Mr. Orr receiving in addition a huge badge, gun, and ball and chain in commemoration of his recent appointment as deputy sheriff of Oakland county.

Previous to coming to the Oakland Motor Car company, Mr. Hannum was president and general manager of the Saginaw Products company, a division of General Motors. Before that he was superintendent of the Detroit Lubricating company. He has held important executive positions with the Auto Car company, Electro-Dynamo company, the Cramp Shipbuilding company, and the New York Shipbuilding company.

Mr. Orr has been factory manager of the Republic Truck company, foreman at the Buick chief inspector at Studebaker, and superintendent, Marquette Motor Car company.

Congratulatory telegrams were received from more than 25 of the Oakland branches throughout the United States.

To prevent oil leaking out of the crank case through the bolt holes, back off the studs a quarter of an inch or so and then wind several turns of cotton twine around the bolts.

AUTOMOBILE THEFT SITUATION MORE GRAVE EACH YEAR

Until some surer law, appliance, method or principle against automobile stealing is devised than exists at present a large share of the cost of upkeep will go into their insurance.

That the automobile theft situation is even more serious than ever is proven by the fact that automobile insurance companies have been assuming only 75 per cent of the risk.

And yet inventors have come forth with many varied devices, more or less effective, that would hinder the motorist car thief. Some have been considering, and some have passed, laws requiring an abstract of title with the sale of every new and used car.

In the busy sections of large cities mounted police keep watch over parked cars. And the federal Dyer law has been directed against interstate traffic in stolen automobiles.

What Is Wanted

What is wanted, however, is something that can effectively stop the business of automobile stealing. Some system also is sought that will keep the financially embarrassed automobile owner from losing his car to the insurance company.

Insurance underwriters have found that the more popular the automobile the more liable it is to theft, no matter what anti-theft device it may have attached. It is therefore the discovery after theft, rather than prevention, that their chief seems to fear. For the less popular car can be more easily recovered.

Solution

The solution lies in some sure method of recovering stolen automobiles. Abstract of title laws are devised with this view.

In England every motorist is required to display his individual license, which includes all information about him and his car, in some conspicuous place. It has even been suggested that the owner's photograph accompany the license.

Licensing the garage men and used car dealers is another way suggested for controlling the exchange of automobiles. But protests arise from all sources that might be hit in any way by anti-theft laws.

And the problem of curbing the auto thief remains.

BUSINESS DEPRESSION IS FAST SAYS TIRE MAN

Mr. Harrington of the Cut Rate Tire Company believes that business depression is a thing of the past, for he judges business conditions in general by the volume of his sales.

"When times are bad people never buy as many tires as they do when prosperous, and as our business has increased considerably during the last few months I do believe that better times are coming and that business in general will improve. Compared with our sales per week three months ago our present weekly sale of tires and tubes shows that it has been almost doubled.

"As an example, we are each week receiving a large shipment of Howe Tires and Tubes. A short time ago we would never have thought of ordering such immense quantities as we are at the present time. But improving business conditions have made such things possible."

Among the Dealers

W. K. White, formerly with the Excelsior Motor company is now selling Stephens for the James Motor company.

A. L. Weissborn has been as busy as the well known one armed paper hanger this week. Within the next few days the S. Demrod Auto & Supply company will be quartered in their new home on Scott street.

F. D. Kelm received a much needed car load of Little Six Studebakers but Walter Daugherty and his crew of salesmen made the shipment look sick in a few hours time. The Studebaker factory is making every effort to keep up with the demand but it looks like a hopeless task.

R. A. Ebner of Overland Motors company, reports that interest in the Jewett has even surpassed his expectations. There is undoubtedly a heavy demand for such a car as the Jewett, a light six delivering for $1195. The fact that the car is not an unknown quantity but is made by the Fajet, Detroit Motor company, will go far in making it a popular one in Wichita Falls.

D. L. Frits has no superiors as an automobile merchant. The Marmon engine tear down demonstrations staged in the Kamp hotel last week attracted a great deal of attention and interest. Such a campaign of education is bound to result in adding to the already long list of Marmon friends. To top this off D. L. is giving away a miniature Marmon engine at the Shrine circus.

Well, the Shrine circus automobile show is off in a blaze of glory. Marmon's hoping that the automobile tent is the center of interest and that many sales are the result.

L. M. Cregor of McFall Brothers announces that the 1932-33 contract with Dodge Brothers has been signed up. Mr. D. A. Carson, district representative of Dodge Brothers with headquarters in Dallas was in town for a few days to attend to this matter. The new contract calls for an increased car allotment due to the splendid results achieved during the past year by McFall Brothers and the more than bright prospects for the coming year. Mr. Cregor states that much interest is being displayed in the new business coupe. A shipment of this new model is expected early in July.

Gaines Motor company is doing mighty well with the G. M. C. truck. Milt reports that June was very satisfactory in point of sales and July gives every indication of surpassing June.

Dad Procter, the new service manager of the Overland Motors Company has arrived and is on the job.

FRANKLIN DELIVERS 322 CARS IN A SINGLE DAY

The Franklin Automobile Company reports that on June 19 a new record of sales to owners of water-cooled cars was set up, 322 such sales being made out of a total of 323 deliveries on that date throughout the country. This is more than double the number of Franklin cars ever sold at retail in one day to owners of water-cooled cars. Of the remaining deliveries, 10 per cent went to Franklin owners and 5 per cent to persons not previously owning any car. The total number of cars delivered has been exceeded only once before—on May 1 of this year—when deliveries aggregated 402.

TIRE EXPENSE IS DECREASING SAYS GOODRICH SELLER

"Motorists today take their tire service and mileage for granted," says a veteran Goodrich representative who has seen the growth of the tire industry from its inception. "They have become so accustomed to getting eight, ten, twelve and even fifteen thousand miles or more from their tires that they do not appreciate what science and inventive genius have done for them.

"In the early days of the pneumatic tire, as any old motorist will tell you, every tire was a gamble. If a man got five hundred miles from a tire without having trouble he was surprised. He really expected tire trouble with every mile he drove, and when a motorist started out to drive his car he 'yondaged' if the tires would hold out until he got to the next town.

"Tire manufacturers naturally set their minds to the problem at once, and the Goodrich organization, being the pioneer in the industry, quickly produced many improvements in both materials and methods of manufacture—all making for longer mileage and better corner.

"One of the greatest steps in advance on the part of Goodrich was the production of the Silverstone Good tire. This tire revolutionized not only in the tire business but also in motoring. It established a new and higher quality standard and it gave the user so many more miles that it was instantly recognized as a genuine economy. Today the Silverstone has reached its final perfection, and is regarded as the standard of comparison.

"Both in cords and fabric tires Goodrich has responded to the motorist's demand for longer mileage at a lower cost, and today the man who buys a tire never thinks of asking a dealer for a guarantee as to mileage. He knows he will get many hundreds and even thousands more miles than any guarantee could promise, and that in addition he will receive the service which Goodrich developed years ago and which has become an integral part of the operation of every Goodrich dealer's store."

R & V KNIGHT SIX GETS RIBBON DESPITE ACCIDENT

An R & V Knight Six Sport Model was entered in the Southwest Automobile Style show classic held at Dallas, May 14th. Unfortunately a workman set it on fire while cleaning it. At the last minute a regular stock model R & V Knight Six Touring Car was substituted. Competing against the finest and highest priced six and eight cylinder cars groomed especially for the occasion, the R & V Knight last minute entry was conceded to be the very best looking car in the show.

NEW OVERLAND GARAGE ERECTED AT ELECTRA

On account of the increasing business at Electra a new brick garage is being erected by the Overland Motors Company. The new building will be 80 by 150 feet and will be the largest and most modern automobile place in Electra. The garage will not only keep open all day and night but will furnish night service work. The building will be ready for occupancy by August 1, it is thought.

PEERLESS SALES MAKE A RECORD IN MONTH OF JUNE

Members of the Peerless organization are being congratulated over the way in which the company's June business is holding up after the remarkable sales showing in May which broke all previous Peerless records since the company was formed 31 years ago.

The first two weeks of June, it is said, have developed even more remarkable sales records, under the circumstances, than did the first two weeks of May.

Chicago has reported the best week of the year.

Philadelphia is breaking all past June records.

San Francisco telegraphs that it fully expects a bigger sales month in June than in May.

In Cleveland, the home of the big factory, the retail department advises that it has not yet started under its May record for the corresponding period and there is every reason to expect that the record may be surpassed before July 1. Likewise, Philadelphia, New York, Boston and other Eastern points are continuing to call for more cars far in excess of allotment.

The factory still reports a shortage of five-passenger Sedans, but increased production facilities are such as to alleviate any hardship for prospective owners who may insist on quick delivery.

All of the associates of R. H. Collins who followed him into the Peerless organization when he assumed control of the plant last Fall insist that they will not be wholly satisfied unless June furnishes just as favorable a showing of its kind as did the record month of May.

TEN CARLOADS OF NEW OVERLANDS IN TRANSIT

A Radio "Fourth" the Season's Novelty

How Patriotic
Orators and Anthems
Will Sound Clearly in the Most Remote Corners of the Country.

MMUSIC will appropriately and literally "swell the breeze and ring from all the trees" this Fourth of July. Orations, symphonies, and martial tunes will leap from the ether into the attuned ears of audiences scattered from coast to coast, into homes and offices and roadside taverns. Campers in remote woodland places, revellers at the seashore, girls idling in canoes, explorers on mountain peaks—will by the simple turning of a dial become one with the more formal celebrants of the Nation's birthday, gathered together in the cities.

For this will be America's first radio Fourth. What was once the petted darling of the laboratory has become the willing servant of all the people. Within the past year the radio has emerged from its trammels of technical process and phraseology into commonplace use. It was once a scientific instrument comparable to a laryngoscope or an X-ray. Now it is a household accessory.

The widespread popularity of the radio came about when large manufacturing houses put inexpensive receiving sets on the market and at the same time established broadcasting stations from which regular programs of music and other entertainment were dispensed. Now the evening radio concert is an institution in millions of homes.

With this fact in mind the operators of the many big broadcasting stations throughout the United States have prepared special Fourth of July programs for their far-flung audiences. In addition, the necessary mechanical arrangements have been made for the broadcasting of speeches delivered in public spaces. The radio, in conjunction with the magnavox, will thus take the voice of the Fourth of July orator from the bandstand in the public square to the whole countryside.

No longer, then, is it necessary for the farmer to travel to town, or the city dweller to leave his apartment in order to pay tribute to the founders of the nation. They can now do this in the bosoms of their families. They can take it at their meals, if they like, or even while taking a bath.

So vacation spenders will not have to alter their schedules in the least in order to observe all the amenities of the Fourth. Wherever they go they can take their wireless receiving sets with them. A hundred feet of copper wire, an iron peg, a crystal detector and pair of phones make up a complete unit.

About the time the program is scheduled to begin at the broadcasting station, the roadside camper, for instance, can unpack his receiving set and attach it to a tree. If it has been raining he will have to oil the cord that holds the wire so that the current will not escape from the antenna and run down the cord.

If there is no tree or cliff about, a fishing-rod will serve. The rod can be supported by cords running from it to stakes driven in the ground. The top of a tent or another rod serves as the other point of attachment for the antenna. Of course, with a vacuum tube set, no antennae are necessary.

Thus will the radio bind up the whole country on the Fourth.

The Romance of a Million Dollars

By Elizabeth Dejeans

THE STORY THUS FAR.

DUNBARTON-KENT'S millions have been left with his widow, in trust for two nephews, Brock and West, and a niece, Bella. They are to divide the fortune provided none commits a crime—and Brock has been rearred a thief! Mrs. Brant-Olwin's jewels are stolen and $100,000 and some gems disappear from beneath Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's pillow. Brock and a mysterious "Mrs. Smith" are suspected, but he denies all. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent censures her efforts on recovering the gems, forcing Brock to leave, and protecting the family name. Into this atmosphere of mystery and suspicion walks lovable Marie Angouleme, war heroine, to become champion for Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent. She learns the family secrets from Allen Colfax, a third nephew, when she discovers him embracing Bella and when she demands the reason for her own cold treatment by the household. Marie finally wins the affection of Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent and is invited to become a member of the family; West proposes and is rejected, as Marie has been attracted, despite herself, to the somber Brock. On the morning she moves to Kent House she finds a revolver in her room, and a note reading: "Carry this wherever you go; you may need it." At dinner Brock subtly warns her of danger.

NINTH INSTALLMENT.

MARIE had undressed and had carefully disposed of her red gown, pondering meanwhile an entirely new idea: Perhaps Brock was a little insane? West seemed to think that he was. That would explain many things: Brock's brooding, withdrawn look and the strange things he said and did. Probably from the time he was a child he had not been altogether right in his mind. Think of the life he had lived, a neglected boy, locked up in prison, where he must have brooded. His uncle must have had a good influence upon him; but that had not been for long. There had been no one to care for him, and he had begun to steal again. Then those fearful years in a German prison! Perfectly sane men had lost their minds under such privations and sufferings. Men came out of prisons with faces carved and still like Brock's and minds quite changed.

And those who were unbalanced had strange hatreds. Brock seemed to hate West. Whenever he looked at West his eyes were like a knife. It was terrifying, the way in which he had looked when he said, "If one wanted to drown one's enemy—"

And the warning way in which he said, "Look the roadster over, well before you ride in it, Marie Angouleme." He wanted to frighten West and he wanted to frighten her. He had given her the pistol in a secret and terrifying way. He was trying to frighten her away from Kent House, and instigating him was Mrs. Smith. She would use a man who was not quite sane. She was capable of anything.

Hot and at the same time shivering, Marie locked her door, then got into bed and gathered the covers about her. Her heated brain evolved question after question. Why did Bella's height and long lines remind her constantly of Mrs. Smith? She had not noticed Bella particularly that first day when Gibbs had brought her into the library. Bella had been seated at a distance, and ever since she had seen her only when she was wearing her veil and her long fur coat. But the moment she saw her in the Colfax house without her coat she had reminded her vividly of Mrs. Smith. It was strange, that hateful woman's resemblance to Bella and Brock—light eyes with black lashes like Brock's and a body like Bella's, long and strong and graceful.

Then came tormenting thoughts. Brock must meet Mrs. Smith often and secretly. Doubtless he loved her passionately, as Bella loved Colfax. Most likely Mrs. Smith had not really gone away, but was hidden in her house. Certainly Brock had been going to meet her that night when she was playing the piano. She was going out to meet him, that was why she was putting on her furs.

Marie was so tense and excited that when some one knocked on her door her heart leaped into her throat and she could neither speak nor move. She found her voice only when the knock was repeated. "Who is it?" she asked.

"Have you gone to bed?" It was Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent.

Marie hurried to let her in and Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent closed the door, then looked Marie over, her flushed face and wide eyes, and her little figure in its nightdress.

"I suppose you were asleep? But it's early, and I want to talk to you," she said.

"Get back into bed, child—I'll sit beside you."

She was fully prepared for more trouble. She must meet it as best she could. When she saw Marie, looking like a child startled out of sleep, she felt immeasurably distressed; she was a motherless girl and they had done nothing to guard her from such a man as Brock. If Marie had fixed her affections on him there was a bitter heartache in store for her.

"I'll sit here beside you," she repeated. "I simply wanted to ask you something."

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's coming was a relief from wretched, terrifying thoughts, and Marie lay as close as possible to the chair Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent drew up to the bed.

"I am most glad you have come, madame," she said with sincerity.

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent put her hand on Marie's shoulder and looked into her eyes.

"Marie," she said gravely, "you know, don't you, that I am fond of you and would stand by you in any trouble? And, too, that I would never pry into your heart out of mere curiosity?"

Marie braced herself instantly to answer questions and yet keep her secret; Willetts must have told Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent that she had talked with Colfax, also about the spaniel. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's manner was affectionate, but purposeful. "I am certain of it, madame," she said gravely.

"I want you to tell me then, child, truthfully and honestly—do you love my nephew, Brock?"

That question was utterly unexpected. Marie flamed scarlet, but also she shrank and shivered, and her answer was instant: "No, madame." She met Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's keen look with flushed directness.

"Has he ever made love to you, child?"

"Never, madame. I am certain that he does not even like me—he has always avoided me."

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent drew a breath of relief. The shiver that had run through Marie's body was as convincing as the shudder that had shaken her when she had told of her experience with Mrs. Smith. But there was flushed misery in Marie's eyes as well, and Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent persisted.

"How do you feel toward him, child? What do you think of him?"

Marie tried to explain carefully and yet truthfully. "At first, madame, I thought Mr. Brock a strange but lovable man, and I felt great pity for what seemed his loneliness. But now that I know him better I shrink from him. He is too strange. As this evening at dinner, things he says are frightening to me. And at the same time, as Mr. West also feels, I have pity for him that he should be as he is. Please excuse me that I speak so of any one in your family, but of my feelings to him I am telling exactly the truth—I think of him as an unfortunate man." Marie felt that she was telling the truth; she had covered the face of her love and had buried it—alive, perhaps, but she did not realize that.

"It's the best way to think of him," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said.

She was tremendously relieved. West had been right to some extent; Brock had appealed to the girl's imagination. But there was no mistaking Marie's shiver. She had sensed in Brock the things she did not know and had been repelled. She could rely on Marie's instinct and she could keep her at Kent House. More than half of Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's consternation had been because she would lose Marie's companionship. As she had told Marie, she had carried about with her an empty heart.

With a sudden stir of affection she slipped her big arm under Marie's shoulders and drew her close, and, with a caught breath of surprise and joy, Marie flung her arms about her neck. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent kissed her and Marie kissed her again and again, on both cheeks.

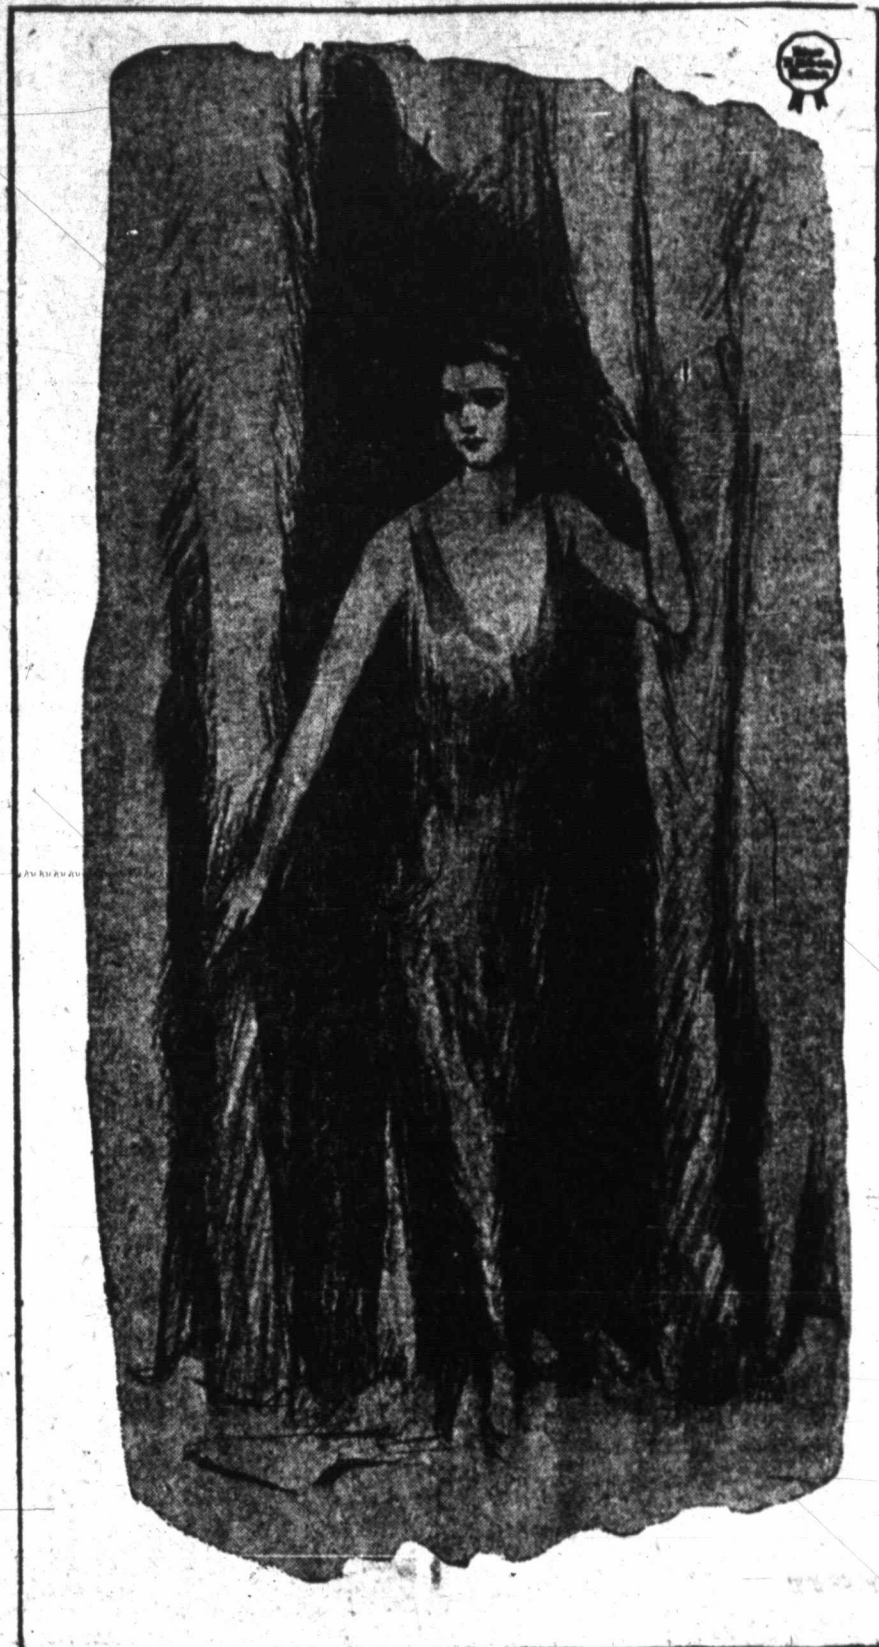

"You're sweet, child," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent whispered, and Marie returned, "O, madame, it is all love for you in my heart. I wish to do only what will make you happy."

"Be kind to West, then, child. He has his faults, but at bottom he's a fine sort and he loves you. Outwardly West is lively and carefree, but he's not a happy man—there's a restless craving something about him which I have never been able to understand—that and an intense reserve. Love will make a fine man of West, I think. I would like to see one member of this family happy," and she sighed.

"I will remember, madame," Marie said softly. "To make you happy I would do almost anything. I have great respect for Mr. West and much gratitude, and I think that by and by I shall feel more happy with him. My interest is now entirely centered upon this family, quite as if it were my own, and to you I have absolute devotion."

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent patted her shoulder.

"Now go to sleep," she advised. "I'm glad we've had this talk—it's brought us closer together. I did want to know just how you felt toward Brock, who is an anxiety to us all. Owing to circumstances, when you first came here, and for which I'm sorry enough now, you saw more of Brock than of any one else. I got into a panic after dinner, thinking that perhaps the reason you didn't respond to West was because you might have taken a fancy to his cousin. I might have known better—your instinct is pretty true. I'm a plain spoken old woman, I don't know how to be anything else, so out I came with my question." She patted Marie's shoulder again. "But it's all right now."

"It was strange, that hateful woman's resemblance to Bella and Brock."

Marie wished that she could tell her everything. She hid her hot cheek against Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's hand. "There is one person whom I know I love," she said tensely, "and that is yourself."

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent patted her cheek then and smoothed her hair. "Good-night, child; good-night."

When Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent returned to the library West was pacing the floor. It was a perturbed face he turned on her when she entered. In all her experience with West—and he had been part of her household since he was twenty—Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had never seen him look as he did now. Since Marie had taken hold on him he had shown more genuine feeling than she had observed in him in all the years she had known him. He was so evidently suffering that she felt a stir of affection for him.

She closed the door behind her. "It's all right, West," she said reassuringly. "The honest little soul told me the truth, as I knew she would," and she related exactly what Marie had said. "She shivered when she talked of Brock, and it was more convincing, even than what she said. She'll avoid him; you have nothing to fear, so quiet down."

West had quieted. He drew a long breath. "It's a relief! Thank heaven, you didn't rage at her."

"I had no intention of raging at her," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said with feeling. "If there was anything between them I was to blame—I let Hasett have his way. I didn't forget that for a moment. I've liked the child from the beginning—I loved her tonight. I've had little enough affection bestowed on me these last few years. I've felt a desolate old woman since your uncle died. You shall have your chance, West; if she grows to care for you, well and good; marry her and be happy—I shall rejoice over it.

But if you don't succeed the child shall have a home with me. When the time comes, as it will, when we can't hold our heads here on the north shore, she shall go with me—if she wants to."

West smiled at her. "You have a big heart, Aunt Bulah."

"And a big body," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent supplemented a little dryly. "I hurt your artistic sense a thousand times a day. But that's neither here nor there—Marie's quaint enough to satisfy your liking for the unusual, so go ahead and win her, then make a home somewhere for yourselves."

"I will," he said firmly. "That's exactly what I want to do. But, Aunt Bulah, I'm still desperately anxious." They had spoken in low tones, now he dropped his voice to a whisper. "Brock has some object in talking and acting as he did tonight. I've been trying to think it out, and I've decided that he is afraid of Marie—he wants her out of the way. He must know that she recognized Mrs. Smith that night in the park. Certainly the woman must have told him about her experience on the train, and they are both of them keen enough to have made the connection. They are afraid of her. And I'm afraid for her. Brock was trying to terrify her tonight—I think she's in actual danger."

The look of grim distress returned to Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's face. "They wouldn't dare to hurt her," she said anxiously.

"Their kind will dare almost anything—to remove an obstacle. That incident on the train would be a telling bit of evidence against Mrs. Smith. I believe, as Hasett does, that either she had Mrs. Brant-Olwin's jewels with her on the train, or she had made some journey connected with them."

"If only we could get the jewels into our hands," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said longingly.

"Yes, I know. But, Aunt Bulah, I'm thinking of Marie," he urged. "Don't keep her here. I don't want harm to come to her. I don't want her to be mixed up in any exposed there may be. I love her, Aunt Bulah—can't you understand?" He was tensely earnest.

"I know, West," she said distressedly, "but where could she go where she would be as safe as she is here? I talked that over with Hasett the morning after she was hurt, and it was his advice to keep her here with me. I was considering you, too. Here you can be in the same house with her. Send her to Canada—I'll follow her there. Send her anywhere that's a distance from here—clear away from all this mess!"

"You talk as if she were a bale of goods!" Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent retorted with sudden exasperation. "I've offered her a home with me, I tell you. The child has a mind of her own, and a will of her own—I can't pack her off, hither and yon, at my pleasure! She wouldn't accept even her traveling expenses—she's independent. She wouldn't stay here if she didn't think that she's earning her keep. If I showed her that I didn't want her here she'd go into town and work, and that's the worst possible thing she could do. You see, West," she said more calmly, "I went over the whole situation with Hasett. He thinks it would be a great mistake to let her leave Kent House. Of course, he takes a lawyer's view; he says that to let her fall by any chance into the hands of Mrs. Brant-Olwin's people would be fatal; that she could give them the clew they want. He advised me to keep her here and to attach her to me; make her our friend in every possible way. God knows, I haven't acted out of mere self-interest in offering her a home; I love the child; nevertheless I realized that Hasett was talking sense. And, West, Brock's a crook, like his father, but I won't believe for a moment that he'd do a bodily harm to that child. He wouldn't do it. That woman might, if she were in terror of capture, as she was on the train, but I don't believe she'd do it deliberately—there'd be too much danger in it for herself. I'm sorry you're worried, but Marie is going to stay here. If between us we can't protect her we're a poor lot." She ended with a decision that dismissed appeal.

"Perhaps you're right, you and Hasett," West said doubtfully, "but I shall be anxious about her—I can't help it—he looked ugly this evening."

"Keep watch over her, West. And make her care for you—that's the important thing."

West was studying the fire. "If only there was some way out of this trouble! Those damned jewels! Aunt Bulah, I haven't meddled with suggestions or advice; Hasett is much more capable of advising than I am; but I've thought for some time that there might be a way out."

"What way?" she asked quickly.

"Ransom the jewels. It makes me sick—letting a premium on crime—but isn't it the only way out for us? I believe it's what they're playing for—their deep game. Hasett over suggested it?"

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent hesitated. "Hasett has more than suggested it, West," she said finally.

"What do you mean?"

"He made Brock the offer after we talked, the morning after Marie was hurt."

"No!"

"Yes, he did. He went to the farm and took Brock aside and made him the offer—four hundred thousand; the full value of the jewels. I gave my consent to his doing it—it was his advice."

"What did Brock say?" West asked scarcely above his breath.

"Hasett said that Brock looked at him without any expression at all, except that the muscles in his face twitched. Then Brock turned his back on him and walked away—not one word."

West had flushed hotly. "God! Think of it being possible to offer such an insult to a Dunbarton-Kent!"

"It made me feel ill," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said in a thick whisper. "Hasett looked ill when he came back to me. After all, he's a Dunbarton-Kent," she said to me. The proposal was that Brock was to find the jewels for me, turn them over to me in any safe way he could devise, and receive the reward I offered. In return he must bind himself to go to Europe and stay there—and keep straight." Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's big body shook with disgust and anger. "Brock would still be his uncle's heir, between us all we would be evading the law and shielding a criminal, but anything, anything rather than the thing that's coming now: public disgrace, our good old name soiled as it will be—the misery to you and Bella, and Kent House—a byword!" The tears had gathered in her eyes. "Right or wrong, I consented. West—and Brock turned the proposal down. Hasett is in search of Mrs. Smith. He says he hasn't given up hope of some solution, but I'm simply waiting for the inevitable." She drew a huge quivering sigh. "Giving Marie a home, such as it is, has been a pleasure—I've been sick for a bit of sunshine."

West patted her hand sympathetically, his face grave. "Don't give up like that, Aunt Bulah." He looked thoughtfully at the fire and there was silence for some moments. Then he said with conviction, "It's sickening to think of, but Hasett's proposal was a move in the right direction, only he didn't approach the right person."

"What do you mean, West?"

"He should have made his offer to Mrs. Smith."

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent stared at him.

"How could he? It would be fearfully dangerous! We have only suspicions to go on."

"Nevertheless she is the one to bargain with. They know they are in imminent danger; they're just as anxious to turn those jewels into money as you are—to receive them intact and return them secretly to Mrs. Brant-Olwin. Don't you see, Brock isn't going to risk losing his inheritance—he'll be careful to maintain his innocence. Of course he turned down your proposal.

But Mrs. Smith won't. They've counted on your making some such offer—they're clever crooks. She'll demand a stiff sum, but with it divided between them, or shared, Brock will cease to trouble us. He'll go."

"Perhaps Hasett had something of the kind in mind when he said that the one thing was to find Mrs. Smith?" Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent asked quickly.

"Of course he did. Think of being rid of this incubus, Aunt Bulah, if it can be settled in that way I'll contribute something toward the ransom—tell Hasett so."

"Go see him—talk to him yourself, West."

"I have kept out of it so far, but I will," West said with decision.

"I suppose we can find a safe way of returning the jewels—if we're fortunate enough to get them," she added with a sigh.

As was characteristic of West, he indulged in at least an outward light heartedness. "A safe way! Drop them down her chimney, tie them to her door knob, let her come out from trying on a thousand dollar gown and find them on the seat of her ousine." Then he said longingly, "Little Marie and I and a clear future—it's too much to hope for. Don't worry, Aunt Bulah," he said, affectionately. "Right is right, after all."

"One might question the 'right' of what we're doing," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent returned, grimly. "Mrs. Brant-Olwin would probably have a different opinion."

"She loves her pearls," West said, succinctly. Then, "I didn't tell you, I was afraid you'd worry, but she's back—she telephoned me just before dinner."

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent looked anxious. "I did hope she would stay away. I'll have to call on her—I can't help it—he looked ugly this evening."

"I'd be as friendly to her as possible," West advised. "She feels that you've never really given her your social countenance. It may help us in the future. I've always liked the little woman."

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent sat thinking for a time. Then she announced abruptly, "The thing I ought to do—it would make a friend of her—is to give her a party. The right sort, West—a dinner dance, with all the people included who have held off from her. I'd make them come and be charming to her. It would be a triumph for her—she'd forgive our family a good deal, if ever I have to ask a favor of her."

West considered a moment. "Well—why not?" he decided. "Do it. I'll get some men out from town—men she'd like to meet."

"I'll have Hasett—have her meet him. It's just as well she should meet him and like him."

"Surely."

"A week from Friday, that's—"

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent began, then paused to listen. "Some one knocked, West?"

"I'll go," he said. "It sounds like Gibbs' circus-pump tap," and he rose and went to the door.

West was right; it was Gibbs whose gentle knock had interrupted their conference. "The night watchman is asking to see Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent, sir," he announced, and West saw Willetts looming behind Gibbs' portly body.

"It's Willetts, Aunt Bulah," West said.

"Tell him to come in," she answered, apprehensively. "More trouble, I suppose?"

Gibbs gave a jolt to Willetts and vanished in the direction of the pantry. West stepped out into the hall, looked up the stairway, and into the adjoining rooms, then returned to the library, closing the door behind him.

"Nobody's about out there, Aunt Bulah. I'll leave you two to talk."

"No; stay," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said, anxiously. "Willetts has something important to tell us."

"It's more a suspicion of mine than anything," Willetts explained. "Just that I'm pretty certain that many a night when we thought Brock safe in his room he's been out, quite likely in town or at the Smith house, or anywhere else he chose to go."

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent looked startled and West asked, gravely, "What makes you think so?"

"Well, there was something happened last night—or yesterday rather—the little girl brought a spaniel pup into the garage. She's been out walking up on the High Road, and Colfax waylaid her and gave her the dog. When we came back from my driving you to the dressmaker's, Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent, I missed her from the garden and was out looking for her and saw Colfax talking to her and saw her bring away the dog. It was all right enough," Willetts added quickly, for Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's brow had darkened. "I was there and saw it all, Colfax just nosing about as usual and of course wanting to get her into trouble with you over his having given her the dog. Besides, she told me about it; that she didn't want to talk to him and wouldn't answer his questions and didn't want to listen to his grievances. The little girl's all right," Willetts said positively. "The baby spaniel appealed to her, that's all—she's been pretty lonesome. She told me about it; she's all right. This morning when the pup was gone she thought it had gotten out of the garage some way and had gone back to Colfax Hall."

West had been eyeing him keenly. It was evident that Willetts was still another friend Marie had made. "Certainly she's all right, though you didn't always think so," he said. "We don't need to discuss that; just go on with your story."

Vacationing on a Pioneer Basis

WHILE cottages at Bar Harbor, New York, and equally smart resorts are sparkling with guests and every ocean liner is carrying its social quota to some European port, all equipped with elaborate summer wardrobes, the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution and Mrs. Charles D. Walcott are getting out a few simply made khaki things and packing up their old kit bags in preparation for their annual camping trip in the Canadian Rockies.

And these mountain trips that Dr. and Mrs. Walcott take are not the lazy, easy-going, aimless, vagabondage kind that inspire poets to ecstatic abandon in verse. On the contrary, to any but the persistent scientist, who can work for years to get the tiniest bit of truth, and the real lover of the majestic Rockies, such camping jaunts would be hardships. In fact, the Walcotts tried taking with them, a year or two ago, a pseudo-scientist who had been experienced in camping as a Boy Scout master and who felt that the trip would be of value to him and that he would be of value to the party. A few days out of touch with civilization quite convinced him and the Walcotts, that all concerned would be more comfortable if the "tenderfoot" returned to week-end camping trips short distances from town and in the valleys or among the gently sloping hills—but certainly not the Canadian Rockies.

The purpose of this summer's camping trip in the Canadian Rockies will be similar to those of the last few years—namely, for Dr. Walcott, the continuance of the geological work sponsored by the Smithsonian Institution for "the increase and diffusion of knowledge," and for Mrs. Walcott, an opportunity to enlarge her collection of wild flowers that abound in the recesses and on the cliffs of the rugged Rockies.

IN THE Walcott party when it leaves Banff there will be five people—ordinarily four comprise the party, but this year an extra man is being taken in order to give Dr. and Mrs. Walcott more time for scientific search—and fifteen horses (ten pack and five riding). Mrs. Walcott as usual is the only woman in the party. But even with the addition of an extra man this season a large amount of camp work will be done by Dr. and Mrs. Walcott, for there is a good deal of labor incident to making and breaking camp and keeping the party happily fed. Then there is the "big game"—mountain lions, deer and bears—that some members of the party is lucky enough occasionally to "pull down," and which must be skinned and the meat salted away for camp food, in all of which work Mrs. Walcott uses her delicate skill.

"Did you ever kill a lion?" I asked Mrs. Walcott as we talked in her office at the Smithsonian.

"Oh, no! And I never had such an ambition," she replied with amusement in her brown eyes at my question. "I don't care vigorous, glowing examples of perfect health? Indeed, in a world of so many painted female faces and pesty-white male faces, one gets a feeling of actual buoyancy in merely looking at the genuinely rosy complexion of Mrs. Walcott and the ruddy-hued complexion of her husband. Which reminds me of a little incident that happened at a dinner given the last season by one of our high officials in Washington. At the conclusion of the dinner, when the company rose to leave the room, a man guest observed a small sea-foamy cake on the floor. He remarked facetiously to Mrs. Walcott standing near: "Oh, your powder puff."

"Don't accuse me. I never use one," replied this out-of-doors enthusiast, whose nature-painted complexion was in striking contrast to the made-in-our-boudoir complexions so conspicuously evident.

Mrs. Walcott was the original inspiration for this article and is the main character in it—but, inasmuch as their present interests lie in such parallel lines, it is well-nigh impossible to write about one and exclude the other. However, just one brief paragraph about Dr. Walcott and then he will be kept in the background.

The geological observations that Dr. Walcott has made in the Canadian Rockies have been most significant in revealing the history of the earth and life thereon. He has found in the rocky formations of the ancient Cambrian and pre-Cambrian periods evidences of such a highly developed flora and fauna that his discoveries tend to revolutionize the hitherto advanced scientific prognostications concerning the age of the earth and its early manifestations of life. His observations have opened to the imagination still vaster stretches of time before human life appeared on the earth than was ever suspected by even the most astute geologist. Despite the geologic data already secured by Dr. Walcott from study in the Canadian Rockies, to quote from a pamphlet entitled "The Glaciers of the Canadian Rockies and Selkirk," written by Mrs. Walcott and her brother, George Vaux, Jr., "there are many problems still to be solved, and it is only by careful and accurate observations covering a series of years that the facts can be learned by which theories may be crystallized into Nature's laws."

This summer will be the twenty-fourth summer that Mrs. Walcott has spent in the Canadian Rockies. In her early girlhood she used to go there with her father and brothers summer after summer—she and her brothers venturing farther into the mountains than any of the "tourists" staying at the hotels on the edge of civilization in that direction. The father, being somewhat of an invalid, was unable to accompany the younger members of his family on their most hazardous expeditions.

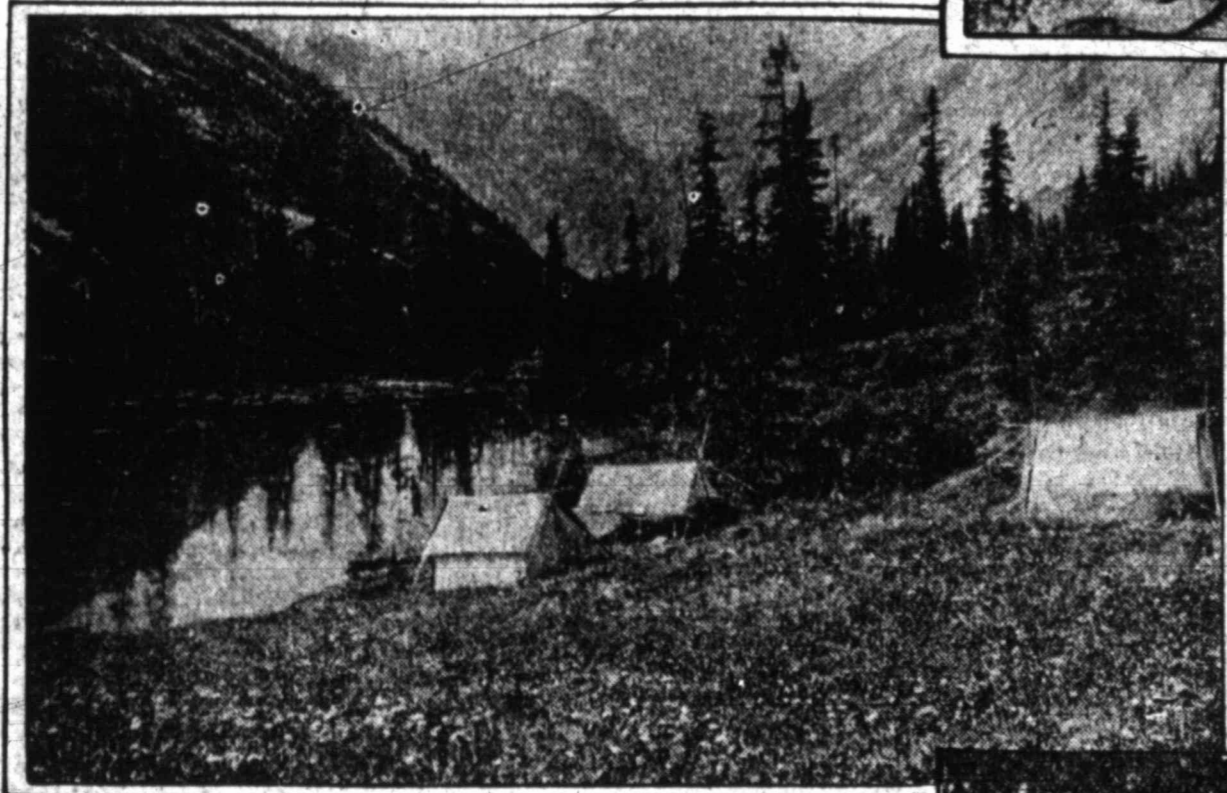

Hereditary and environment both seem to have played a part in producing in Mrs. Walcott a love of all the out-of-doors. An uncle was a very famous geol-

Mrs. Walcott leading the pack train in the Canadian Rockies

Wild Flower Camp, Canadian Rockies, where seventy-eight different kinds of wild flowers were in bloom around this camp at one time for shooting, although I suppose I could use a gun or pistol if I had to."

In accompanying her husband on these trips, Mrs. Walcott evinces that delightful congeniality of tastes and interests that is characteristic of their life together.

To quote from Secretary Walcott's report of last summer's trip will give an idea of the nature of the trip and the endurance, love of the out-of-doors and devotion to work that one must have to "put it over" successfully:

"The season was an unusually cold and stormy one. The party started with a pack train from Banff June 30. During this period there were thirty-five stormy days, twenty-eight cloudy and cold days (20 to 45 degrees), and more or less snow fell on twenty days in August and September. While on the trail thirty camps were made. But owing to weather conditions and to the fact that snow remained on the slopes and cliffs above timber line, a relatively small amount of productive work was accomplished."

WHEN in concluding his report Dr. Walcott has this to say:

"The morning we broke camp to go to Lake Louise Station the horses were pawing away the snow to get at the grass beneath, and the snow was very beautiful on the trees and along the stream below camp. The trail was obscured by it, and to make matters more complicated, snow driven by a strong east wind beat into our faces during the seven hours' march. The next day the sun came out and the storms were forgotten, except for the wonderful snow cones along the trail down the Pipestone River."

How is this for a summer vacation? Is it any wonder that the Walcotts are ologist and her father was a keen amateur student of glaciers. Her childhood and girlhood as Mary Vaux were spent on a country place near Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, which estate Mrs. Walcott still owns. The beautiful piece of woodland back of Bryn Mawr College is a part of the Vaux tract. Then there were summer trips into the mountains just mentioned. So all in all Mrs. Walcott has a right to be a nature-lover.

Mrs. Walcott's hobby—and it may later be considered her life work—is the preservation, pictorially at least, of the hundreds of varieties of wild flowers that are found in the Rockies. Already she has made water-color sketches of about five hundred kinds. Mrs. Walcott observed these flowers in their habitat and made sketches of them, which are exquisitely beautiful and truthful pictorial reproductions. The sketches are done entirely with the brush and have no harsh outlines to mar their beauty—a noteworthy achievement in itself.

"So you are an artist as well as a botanist," I remarked to Mrs. Walcott as I viewed an exhibition of her wild-flower sketches given recently in the Smithsonian.

"I am neither an artist nor a botanist," she replied laughingly. "But I know my plants and I can mix my colors."

Despite Mrs. Walcott's modest claims she is an artist, or at least she is so considered by professional art critics. Only last summer Powell Minnegerode, director of the Cooperan Art Gallery, was so impressed with the art beauty of her wild-flower sketches that he insisted upon having some of them exhibited in the Cooperan Gallery. And so insistent was Mr. Minnegerode that Mrs. Walcott finally consented to their exhibition as works of art.

Mrs. Walcott has no interest in botany as an analytical study; she does not care to dissect the flowers and plants which she knows so well—that botanical phase has no appeal for her—it is rather the "tout ensemble" of the plant that holds her attention, and holds it so well that she is able to express perfectly on canvas what she has seen in its native soil.

THIS twofold ability of Mrs. Walcott is the more remarkable in that she has had no professional instruction in either botany or art, and it can only be accounted for, it seems, in her love for and appreciation of the beauties of nature.

And so while Mrs. Walcott considers herself an amateur and "neither an artist nor a botanist," she certainly gives her wild-flower sketches the "truth-is-beauty" touch of the true artist and scientist.

As we went back to her office from viewing the exhibit Mrs. Walcott told me of a wish that she wished most deeply and consistently to come true, namely, that some day a person who could afford it financially would be interested and generous enough to make to the Smithsonian a contribution sufficient to insure the "just right" edition of volumes containing her sketches of wild flowers in the Canadian Rockies, which volumes would, of course, be the permanent property of the institution.

"It would take a great deal of money to fix them as they should be," continued Mrs. Walcott. "and I wouldn't care to see them any other way. Civilization is making such inroads into the Canadian Rockies now that within a few years many of the exquisite specimens that abound there will be extinct save for preservation by means of the brush."

Mrs. Walcott riding through the Canadian Rockies

Mrs. Walcott "knows her plants" was evidenced a few days ago when the classification of two trees on the Department of Agriculture grounds was in dispute—professional botanists maintaining that they were one kind and Mrs. Walcott maintaining that they were another. Later Mrs. Walcott's contention was proved to be the correct one.

In addition to the household duties that are incumbent when the family consists of a husband and one daughter, this amateur artist and botanist finds time to spend several hours almost daily at the Smithsonian, where she is of valuable assistance to the secretary. This work she does merely "for the joy of the working."

"I have also heard that you are a remarkable photographer," I remarked to Mrs. Walcott on one occasion.

"Well, I know how to take and develop pictures, if that's what you mean," she replied. Then, after a moment of reflection, "I learned photography backward. When I used to trail along with my brothers on their mountain jaunts, they would take pictures—any number—but would rarely develop them—and they always promised pictures to many people. This condition went on for a few summers, when it occurred to me that I might as well be useful, so I began to learn to develop films long before I know how to use the camera. After I learned the picture business there was a delivery of promised pictures."

In conclusion I would like to quote from the pamphlet on "The Glaciers of the Canadian Rockies and Selkirk," written by Mrs. Walcott and her brother, which quotation seems so entirely 100 per cent North American and 100 per cent enthusiasm for mountain climbing:

"Formerly it was thought that if one would really enjoy fine mountain scenery one must go to Switzerland, the mecca of all mountain climbers, but now the Alps have come to be the yardstick by which we measure the Rockies of our Western world. Apart from their grandeur and beauty as masses of bare rock and verdure, the Rockies have superb and everlasting snow fields and mighty glaciers, making a combination of color and light effect which is seen only in regions of lofty mountains. Those best qualified to judge are unanimous in the opinion that, all things considered, this new Alpine region is greater and more beautiful than that of the Old World."

As a preliminary to the summer to be spent in mountain climbing Mrs. Wa. is caring for a vegetable garden in the municipal garden plots down in the Potomac Park. She plants crops that will mature in the spring and early summer and in the autumn, so that while they are away in the Canadian Rockies there are no vegetables for them to pine for in the home plot when mountain fare becomes less palatable.

Hot News From Oatman, Ariz.

By Robert S. Doman

Oatman, Ariz.
THE G. A. R. has an active dispute on its hands. Difference of opinion between Native Sons of Arizona and outsiders from the neighboring States of Nevada, Utah and New Mexico have developed and regrettable allegations were made by members of the G. A. R. concerning their fellow veterans.

The dispute arose over an alleged statement by Thomas D. Collins, of Middletown, Mo., which was published by Frank N. Y., which was published by Frank N. Y. in the Oatman News. In this statement Mr. Collins, a Civil War veteran, said that Sherman did not say "War is hell," but "War is cruel."

Mr. J. E. Shank, flagbearer of the G. A. R. and author of a brochure on "The Poisonous Insects and Reptiles of Arizona," took issue with General Sherman's defense. He said: "I hope the telegraphic report from New York is not true. A persistent attempt is being made to defame the name and to distort the historic words of General Sherman in the East, especially down in Wall Street, where their brokers are ruining the farmers, who are then their cattle business and generally raising hell throughout this entire country. (Loud cheers.)

"This New York business is the second case wherein General Sherman has been misquoted and maligned.

liars from New Mexico and other States said that General Sherman went out on the platform of the railroad coach and said:

"What a hell of a country!"

"It was stated at that time that Captain W. A. Hancock, of Phoenix, replied, 'Well, General, it is not such a bad country. We have to the north a rich agricultural valley and the Oatman gold mines. Possibly Arizona is a little bit warm, but all she needs is more water and better immigration.'

"To which the liars of forty years ago state that Sherman replied:

"Bah! Less heat! More water! Better society! That's all hell news!"

"Now, I know positively and for a fact that General Sherman never made no such statement," declared Mr. Shank. "And members of this chapter of the G. A. R., who have now passed away, could hear me out if they were here. The whole alleged conversation was a pack of damnable lies made out of whole cloth and calculated to defame the fair name of our golden State, General Sherman was the best friend Arizona ever had. And I can prove it." (Prolonged applause.)

A FAMOUS Russian dancer in this country, who is himself a good musician, was once a guest at a reception, where, without wincing, he listened to a pianoforte performance, more vigorous than skillful, on the part of the daughter of the house.

"And how do you like the young lady's playing?" some one asked the dancer.

"Ah, madam," replied he, very tactfully, "I think the young lady has a very firm tread."

Weddings in Water the Newest Thrill

The Brides, Scorning the Airplane and the Speeding Automobile Marriage as Old Stuff, Promised to Love, Honor and Obey While the Undertow Was Tugging at Their Ankles.

A Wet Wedding That Didn't Violate the Volstead Law. Scene Shows the Principals in the Nuptials, Including the Mayor and Recorder of Atlantic City, Being Picked Up by Boats After the Ceremony.

leaped in. Mrs. John J. O'Keefe, mother of the Brooklyn bride, who was watching from the pier-end, said her heart jumped into her throat when they all disappeared beneath the surface. She was afraid they would be swept out to sea. The party bobbed to the surface one by one and at a signal from Mayor Bader, Recorder Goldenberg began the service. Meanwhile small boats of all descriptions were circling about them and the pier and the shore were lined with thousands of watchers. Most of the watchers had to keep marine glasses trained on the wedding party. Practically everything both couples needed to begin housekeeping was presented them by exhibitors at the hotel exposition. Fisher, who is 24 years old, served with distinction in the world war. Miss Cassaday and Mr. Detwiler met each other when both were singing in a church choir. Their romance extended over several years. Both are 20. It developed after the party was safe on dry land that none of the four principals could swim.

A Romance Under Water

In the case of the Fishers and the Detwilers, their respective romances reached the climax in water. The romance of Mrs. Helen B. Caswell of Roxbury, Mass., who recently married Eugene Fielding of Boston, started under water. Both Mrs. Caswell and her husband are actors and were playing in a New York vaudeville theatre when they met for the first time a few months ago. Mrs. Caswell's partner in her swimming act was called away for some reason and Fielding, who had had some experience as a fancy swimmer, volunteered to take his place. After a while her act began to go smoothly, and she became aware of Mr. Fielding as something more than a working partner. It was literally in the water, she said, that the realization came to her that he was really a charming fellow. Some such a realization must have struck Fielding about the same time, for he immediately started improving his acquaintance with Mrs. Caswell. Their recent marriage was the result. A water wedding which took place in an amusement park pool in Oklahoma recently has culminated in the trial of the officiating pastor, the Rev. Thomas Irwin, of the First Presbyterian Church of Lawton.

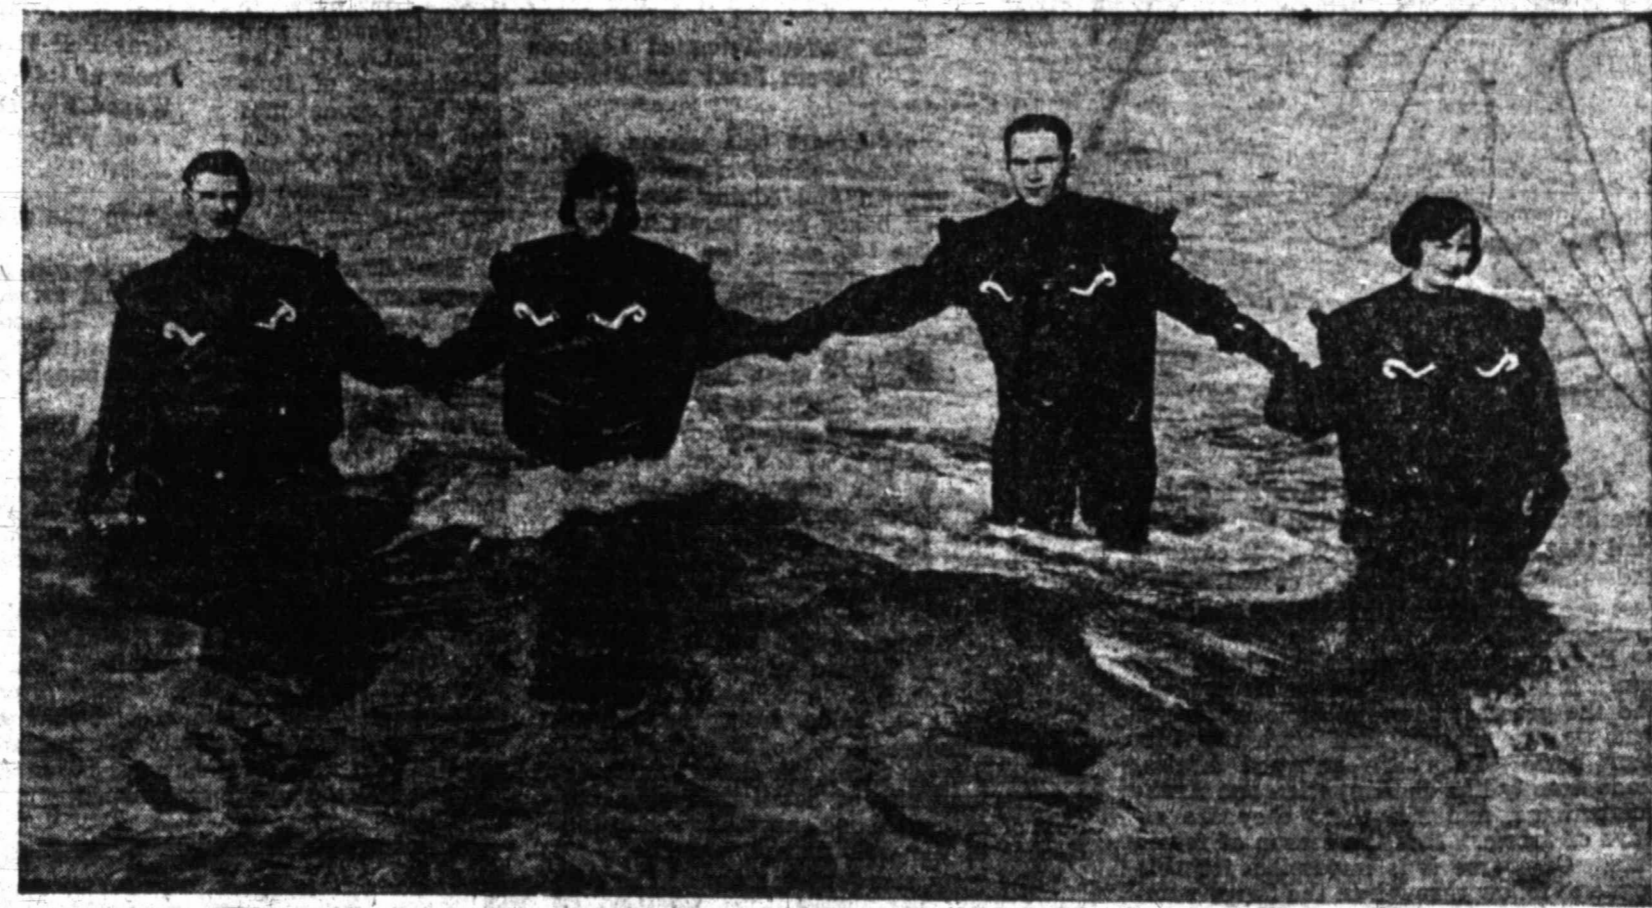

Down the Chute to Her Wedding

This wedding took place after a rapid-fire wooing conducted by Seldon Ashley of Amarillo, Tex., and Miss Grace Graham of Atlanta, Ga. The two met in Medicine Park, a resort situated about half way between Lawton and Chickasha. During the war Medicine Park was a frequent visiting place of soldiers stationed at Camp Donovan, near Fort Sill, and officers at the Fort Sill School of Fire. Mr. Ashley was one of these and his recent visit to Medicine Park was the outgrowth of a whim that struck him as he was on his way from his home in Texas to Memphis, Tenn. He forgot all about his mission when he met Miss Graham. After knowing her a week he proposed marriage. She demurred. He grew insistent. Finally she yielded, but said that she would have to go home and make the proper preparations. Shortly afterward they both went in bathing with several friends. Ashley slid face first down a sharply inclined shoot-the-chute and wished for her to follow. When Miss Graham hit the water Ashley caught her up in his arms. "Let's get married now," he said. "Ridiculous!" she exclaimed. "Let's get married—NOW," he repeated a little louder. "Ridiculous," she answered—a little weaker. Without further ado Ashley dispatched a messenger to the hotel nearby and had him bring out the marriage license. The Rev. Thomas Irwin, it happened, was already in the water and he immediately agreed to perform the ceremony, which he did forthwith. The conservative element in the Rev. Mr. Irwin's congregation immediately rose up in protest. They had already been greatly amused over a sermon he had preached over the body of Jake L. Hansen, who was slain by Clara Hansen, in which the preacher declared that if Hansen didn't go to heaven nobody would. Charges were accordingly filed against him and he must now stand trial before a church commission on the charge of "conduct unbecoming a minister."

A GENTLEMAN conveying the impression of a biology professor out for a holiday stood on the steel pier at Atlantic City and with the aid of opera glasses watched a double wedding ceremony being performed in the ocean, a hundred yards or so beyond. "Very interesting," he said when it was all over. "A resurgence, I should say, of mankind's amphibian ancestry." None of the people standing near made any answer to that. But one of the brides could have told the professor a little differently. She could have told him that everybody she had ever known or heard of had got married in a church, and she—after giving much thought to the matter—had decided to shatter the precedent. The bride in question was Miss Marie Elizabeth O'Keefe of Brooklyn—now Mrs. Frank J. Fisher. Clad not in orange blossoms or bridal veil, but in a rubber suit guaranteed to keep her afloat indefinitely, she agreed to take Mr. Fisher for better or for worse. The wedding party, fourteen in all, surrounded her in similar costume. Mayor Edward L. Bader of Atlantic City gave her away, Recorder Clarence L. Goldenberg performed the ceremony, her sister, Miss Margaret O'Keefe, scattered roses on the water—and the wild waves furnished a wedding hymn. In the same party, and at the same time, Miss Emma Cassaday of Philadelphia was married to Howard Detwiler.

Thrilling? She Should Say So!

"Thrilling? I should say!" declared Mrs. Fisher when she was back on shore. "It was the most thrilling thing that ever happened to me. In the first place, it was my wedding. But it was more than an ordinary wedding. It was an adventure. For just as we were about to leave the pier I heard somebody say that the undertow was very strong. This excited mother very much and she begged me not to go through with it. But nothing could have kept me from it then. If I had known that we were going to be swept out to sea I should have gone on. "As a matter of fact, I felt rather safe, even after the whole party had been launched from the boats and we were all in the water. Once or twice I seemed to feel something tugging at my ankles, but that may have been only imagination. You could hardly conceive of a more romantic setting. The sea all around us was a vivid marine blue and there was an occasional gull soaring back and forth overhead. I thought the surf would be disturbing, but it just rocked us gently. "The only mishap occurred when I was climbing into the lifeboat to go back to land. I slipped and in some way strained my side. I was laid up for a little while and had to return to New York sooner than I expected. But I wouldn't have had it any other way. We originally planned for a church wedding, of course, but I wanted something new and thrilling—and I got it." While it was the bride who furnished the inspiration for this newest fashion in wedding ceremonies, it was the bridegroom who worked out all the details. When Mr. Fisher, who works for the General Motors Company in New York, became aware that his bride-to-be yearned for something a little more exciting than the immemorial march to the altar he immediately got busy. Through friends he got in touch with Howard S. Detwiler of Philadelphia, whose marriage to Miss Emma M. Cassaday, also of that city, was to take place in a short time. Miss Cassaday, it developed, also wanted to get away from the stereotyped orange blossom and Mendelssohn affair. Notes were exchanged discussing ways and means. Finally arrangements were made with the Atlantic City Hotel Exposition whereby the nuptials could take place out in the ocean as a feature of the show.

On the appointed spring day the couples, with their attendants, met in Atlantic City. Mayor Bader agreed to act as parent pro tem to both brides. A rubber company furnished principals and attendants with non-sinkable life-saving suits and shortly after 4 o'clock the whole party set off from the steel pier in the face of a light breeze. A sailboat carried them for about one hundred yards. Mayor Bader then gave the signal for all to jump overboard. "You've got to learn to take the plunge together," he said, when there seemed to be a momentary hesitancy. Immediately everybody

A Midsummer Hat's Trimming

It's a Season of Fabric Headgear, with an Occasional Leghorn and Taffeta Combination, but Egypt and Arabia Show Their Influence in All of the Smart Designs.

A Rhinestone Bird Catches the Folds on This Egyptian Turban of Vivid Red Crepe, a Hat That Makes a Colorful Splash on a Bright or a Dark Day.

THE perfect hat should fit the head cleverly, frame the face, and almost but not quite cover the hair."

This is the verdict of a very clever little actress who is a client of mine and who admits that hats are one of her favorite hobbies. She has several hobbies and many hats.

"I can't have too many hats," she says. "I like to wear hats to suit my different moods, or to improve some of them, and it's remarkable what a perky little hat can do for one on a bad day."

All of us have our bad days. If you've never tried a smart little hat with a jaunty veil on a day when you're feeling blue, try it out and see what it can do to help you. The smartness of the hat buoys you up tremendously and the jaunty veil seems to add the charm which you need.

In hats, as in frocks, the big secret of success lies in having the model which you choose bring out your good points to best advantage and smooth over those which are not so flattering.

Veritably, it fills your soul with joy to don a hat which you know is the right one, the one which accents that tilt of your nose of which you have reason to be proud, and which reveals the contour of your cheek, which you know is good.

Presto! You are transformed from a woman who carried the weight of the world on her shoulders, to one who walks along with light step and joyous air. Your head is held high and you bow with a gracious smile to Mrs. Jones, whom you meet at the glove counter. You know that you look well.

Later, at the club luncheon, you are at ease and forgetful of self because a last glance at your mirror assured you of the effect and now you can forget all about it. Your repartee is almost brilliant. The new hat helps you almost to scintillate.

Again, when someone says something nice about the color of your hair, you are glad that your hat does not quite cover it and that the comfortable crown allows just the right number of well-placed locks to escape.

Every woman wants a chic little turban. It is neat and smart for street wear and the greatest comfort while motoring. And we are making such attractive turbans now. They are wrapped affairs, made exactly like the Egyptian and Arabian turbans, and like them they are always of fabric. It is the season of fabric hats. Of course it is impossible for this vogue to follow through in the floppy summer versions, but the smaller toques are invariably of faille, taffeta, satin—anything just so it is fabric.

Consider the Egyptian turban shown in the large sketch above. Its crepe, in a vivid shade of red, makes a colorful splash on a bright day as well as a dark one, though it is especially welcome on the latter. One has only to use a small bit of imagination to see it against the background of the desert. Perhaps this is why it appears as an especially happy thought when it tops a frock of sand-colored crepe.

The leghorn straw, next in line, is more or less of a jump from Egypt, for it takes us back to the Victorian type of chapeau, drooping and flower-trimmed.

Leghorn and taffeta combinations are very smart this season, the taffeta either forming the crown and edging the brim, or being used partly to face the top, as is the case here. The cream leghorn is offset by the shiny black of the taffeta, while added character is given by the pink rose and the soft black velvet grapes posed across its brim.

Extending down the line of hats at the right, we have a fair example of the soft lovely tints to be had in hats for midsummer. With such from which to choose there is really no excuse for a hat that is unbecoming. There are subtle grays and the richest of tomato shades. There are violets, orchids and canary yellows. And, aside from the colors which make hats things of loveliness within themselves, there are clever finishing touches and bits of detail that give the note of difference one expects to see in the clothes of the well-dressed woman.

The gray straw at the top of the column is an example of this. Its brim is lined with gray chiffon, held in place by the narrowest possible cording of tomato and silver. At the brim we find repeated the twist of silver cord and tomato velvet.

Below this is another gray, this time of hair straw, with gray georgette encircling the crown and posed over the brim in a pleated flange. A bar pin with a moonstone at either end is thrust through the crown front to hold the georgette in place.

Next in line is a hat in black, which by the way continues to be favored in Paris. The drooping black hat is always smart, and this one is very striking with its combination of transparent black hair braid and narrow band facing of canary yellow silk. The roses posed at either side have creamy yellow petals scattered in with their pink ones. Thick green stems are trained across the front.

The hat below is covered with violets applied on flat. In shape it reminds one again of the Russian influence, which is prevalent still in frocks, in hats, in headresses and what-not. All the headresses of Russia have gone into the making of the hats of this shape, while any amount of originality can be employed in the material and in the trimming.

The felt model, too, seems to be with us to stay and its practicability and attractiveness are ample explanation. The one here is of soft orchid felt, while a twist of matching orchid ribbon and a bunch of white waxed flowers do the rest.

Interesting items appear from time to time in the world of hats in the form of new and queer combinations, and of novel trimming notes. The combination of straw and fur may be numbered among the former, and the use of bandanna trims in the latter.

Paris is showing large shapes of timbo straw with brim binding of Kollinsky and chou trimming of Kollinsky tails. Smart New York shops are showing most interesting hats for midsummer, somewhat on the floppy plan, with colorful silk bandannas tied over the crown, bathing cap fashion, and knotted on the side behind.
