LAWS TO PROHIBIT TEACHING FOREIGN LANGUAGE INVALID

THREE MILE WALL FORTIFIED BY NEW TREASURY RULING

APPLIES DEAD LINE TO LIQUOR FOR BEVERAGE USE ON ALL SHIPS.

INTERNATIONAL COMMERCE IS INVOLVED IN DECISION

Congress May Relieve What is Generally Considered Embarrassing Situation.

PARIS, June 4. (AP)—A general strike of the stevedores and firemen on the steamer Lafayette, sailing from Havre for New York on June 9 and on all French ships scheduled to leave for the United States after that date is threatened unless the more restrictive liquor laws are amended.

WASHINGTON, June 4. (AP)—Application to the letter of the supreme court's decision barring all beverage liquors from territorial waters of the United States is provided in regulations issued by the treasury to take effect after 11:31 a. m. June 18.

Besides the exemption granted liquor for medicinal and sacramental purposes, the only exception in the wall thrown up against liquor transportation with the three mile limit are the usual immunity accorded diplomats and the privileges allowed foreign vessels of war.

While some treasury officials felt congress might find a way of revising a situation which is generally agreed would prove embarrassing to international commerce, others were convinced that only a change in the tariff amendment itself would permit this.

It is provided that the regulations shall not apply to vessels which were in the harbor or on the coast prior to June 18 and which arrive at a port of the United States after the effective date.

Ranger Man Is Still Stepping; Seven on Floor

ST. LOUIS, June 4. (AP)—Seven persons today remained in the competition in the national marathon race which began here yesterday night in effort to break the world's record for endurance dancing.

June 4.—After dancing 141 hours in a local pavilion, Miss Jennie Mae McLeRoy of Dallas, Texas, fell asleep during one of her rest periods and failed to awaken when the time came for her to continue. Only a few minutes before she was pronounced dead, she was in good physical condition.

JURY COMPLETED FOR FRED LUNDIN TRIAL AT CHICAGO

CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY TO DEFAUD SCHOOLS OF CITY.

TWENTY-FOUR ARE NAMED IN BLANKET INDICTMENT

One Granted Freedom, Another Separate Trial While Third Gets Away.

CHICAGO, June 4. (AP)—Trial of Fred Lundin, former congressman and known as a dictator of former Mayor William Hale Thompson's political faction of the Republican party, and 29 defendants, charged with conspiracy to defraud the Chicago school board of more than $100,000, actually got under way today. Six weeks were spent in selecting a jury.

As the attorneys for both sides appeared, primed for their opening statements, one of the defendants, Louis Piquette, former city prosecutor under the Thompson administration, was granted freedom. Piquette formally demanded trial at four successive court terms, and each time it had not been granted.

Under the law his counsel declared he had been denied his right to early trial by Judge and Judge Charles A. McDonald discharged Piquette. Lundin often referred to as the "silent boss" while Mayor Thompson was in office, and who styled himself the "Swed" and "33

Clara Phillips Declares Carson Robbed Her In Order to Buy Liquor Thrown Into Street By Hotel Man

LOS ANGELES, June 4.—The fourth chapter of her startling narrative Clara Phillips today told of her hurried flight from Mexico to Compton and her life there up to the time of her arrest. In the preceding chapters she told of the slaying of Albert Meadows, her conviction, escape from jail and flight to Mexico.

CHAPTER 4.

LOS ANGELES, June 4.—Some time in the latter part of March Carson received a "tip" off letter from Los Angeles, saying that the authorities wanted him for arson and bootlegging. Also, or being with me up to this time I had known absolutely nothing about Carson's past life. I knew that he had certainly performed a very daring stunt at the Los Angeles county jail when he tested his outwit. I had no conception that he had ever been guilty of any other crime.

He admitted to me that he had been in the jail next day for a Whittier Boulevard. He said he had not gotten a square deal there, as he could not have the store, so one else could have it. He declared that he went out to the place and, at first, put dynamite under it. He later decided that would make no sense, so he substituted someone for it, he said.

He also told me about having been in quarantine at Oxnard, Kan. He said we would have to move on, or if they came looking for him they would find me, and he had no intention of giving me up anybody. At the same time he took all my jewelry from the dresser and pawned it there. He spent all this money for liquor. I never saw a cent of it. The jewelry is still in Mexico City.

In Mexico City, on Carson's advice, I dye my blonde hair red. He wanted me to tan my face by blowing it to get sunburned. This did some good.

Sister Arrives.

My sister, Etta Mae Jackson, surprised me by walking into our apartment in Mexico City. She had received a letter from Carson telling me I was sick. He never had said a word to me about it, and I had not received the surprise of my life. In fact Carson wrote many letters to different people, but I only wrote four in all the months she was gone.

After sister arrived Carson decided it was time to move on, because of the "tip off" letter. So he packed our things and went to Tepic, Cruz. From there we journeyed by train to Sochilco, on the Mexican-Guatemalan border. Here we crossed the river into Guatemala and went bathing.

I had quite a difficult time getting my money changed in Guatemala. I had some money, but I needed all the Guatemala cash in the town. In the meantime, we were gradually learning Spanish, as it looked as if we would have to spend the rest of our lives in Spanish-speaking countries.

Sister and I also developed a code language all our own, so that we could say things no one else could understand. It was this language which later had the police of Honduras guessing so hard.

From Sochilco we went by train to Aysita, and thence by train to Guatemala City. There we stopped at the Continental hotel. Carson went through his usual drinking performance of this place, despite the strenuous objections of sister and myself. It got so bad that Etta Mae and I looked the door from the inside several times.

Carson Throws Out.

There was nothing to do in Guatemala, nothing we would do. Carson had a drunken fight one night with the manager of the hotel, who threw him out in the street and his baggage after him. Carson had previously grabbed my purse containing $1,500 of Guatemalan money, and a Guatemalan manager said I told him he could keep the money, but that I wanted the passport, as we were figuring on leaving the next morning for San Salvador. He said I would have to stay there as long as he wanted me to. He grabbed my arms and started to attack me. Etta Mae came to my rescue. Carson threatened to kill us both. He said he was going to choke me. We were both under, with all the other troubles that we had.

He left on the train next day for San Jose, Guatemala, where we were to be taken to the United States. Then we went to La Union, and from there to Amapala, Honduras. We went to Honduras at the suggestion of Carson, who declared that the country was not recognized by the United States and that we would all be perfectly safe there.

I later learned that Carson planned to start a revolution there and had made plans for it. He had been in different revolutions in Mexico. I then learned that it was his intention to use me if he could to further his revolutionary plots. From Amapala we went by launch over night to San Lorenzo. There we stayed over night with a woman. I never will forget that night, there were no more bats.

Reverend About Bats.

He was very nervous about the bats and over the possibility that we might be robbed. Although we were all very tired from the trip, we got up at 1 o'clock in the morning and got a truck driver to take us and our baggage to Tegucigalpa, the capital.

It was a seven-ton truck with about 16 tons of baggage. And it was a hairpin turn overlooking deep ravines. We held on for dear life. Several times we thought we were going over a cliff. But the driver kept right on as fast as the truck would go. Carson was so unconcerned that he went to sleep on top of the truck.

We arrived in Tegucigalpa about 2:30 in the afternoon. Our money was running low. I had started out on the trip with $140 and Carson had $1,100. Sister brought some money with her, about $50. With these funds we made our long journey through Central America and we went to Mexico for more.

We had been at the hotel Aguirre, where we had decided to stay. The manager and more secluded quarters. We knew that all Americans came to this hotel and we were conspicuous in this Spanish country. So we read the advertisements in the newspapers and inquired from an interpreter as to a good private house to go to.

Here's a closeup of Clara Phillips, Los Angeles "hammer slayer," snapped at New Orleans as she was brought back from Honduras, following her sensational escape. On her left is her sister, Etta Mae Jackson, and on the right, Mrs. Eugene W. Biscailuz, wife of a Los Angeles deputy sheriff.

American, was suggested. He has some rooms in his spacious house that he sometimes rents to Americans. He, of course, knew nothing about us except that we were Americans.

Introduced to Consul.

To turn back a few steps. As soon as we reached Tegucigalpa, Carson boldly called on the American consul, Robert L. Keiser, and took me along. Carson said he had been in the chain grocery business in California, but that business was poor. So he had come to Honduras to look things over from a business standpoint. Carson introduced me to Consul Keiser as his wife. In the court of the hotel we played handball and were very happy. We also became very popular. American men in Tegucigalpa were very much interested in us, but Carson warned them off by saying that I was his wife and the other woman my sister.

We had been in Tegucigalpa only two or three days when three natives came to the door of our room and knocked. I opened the door. They asked if Mr. Keiser had the name—was there. I told them no and closed the door. They came back twice, asking the same questions. Both times I shut the door in their faces. The driver questioned, to see that he was one of the three who had knocked on the door. He told us then that had we admitted him we would never have been arrested.

Received Late Society.

We became acquainted with the leading families in Tegucigalpa and were invited to the best society of the city. I was given a card to the International Club, but did not go. We did go machine riding with different people and promenaded part on the nights of concert, which are given three times a week. I now know we were shadowed for a week by the Tegucigalpa police.

We spent the night of April 21 at Dr. Pound's house. Chief of Police

Rates came to the house next morning at 10 o'clock with three or four officers. He first encountered Carson, who was drunk as usual. He told Carson that he wanted all three of us to go over to the office of the minister of justice to answer a few questions.

Carson came to our room, where we had hidden out from him to prevent annoyances. He said, "There's going to be a pinch made. The place is surrounded by officers. They say they heard there was a person here named Clara Phillips."

At first we thought Carson was joking, because he was so drunk, and was simply trying to frighten us again. And then we realized he was not. For a few minutes we thought things over. We could have gone over a small wall through the back patio and away, but even if we had, there would have been no place to go.

I was worried more about my sister than myself. Personally, I was so disgusted with the way Carson acted that I did not care. Sister left it all up to me.

Carson said we had better go over to the office of the justice and talk him out of it. He was one of the three men who had called on us at the hotel before our arrest.

The minister asked which was Mrs. Carson. Carson spoke up, pointing me out, and said: "This is my wife, Mrs. Carson." (Another installment tomorrow.)

JOHN SKAGGS, TRUCK DRIVER, BADLY HURT IN AFFRAY SUNDAY.

WOUNDS NOT LIKELY TO RESULT FATALLY

Assailant is Jailed After Officers Trail Him By Means of Blood Marks.

John Skaggs, aged 25 years, a truck driver and head of a family of three children, lies in the General Hospital in a critical condition and C. E. Holcomb is being held a prisoner in the city jail as the result of a cutting affray that took place Sunday evening at Seventh and Lamar streets.

Skaggs was cut and slashed about the face, neck and chest and the cut that nearly cost him his life was one that extends from ear to ear. Physicians stated that the large blood vessels in the throat were severed but that the canal leading to the lungs and stomach were not impaired.

According to witnesses, Skaggs stumbled into a back yard near the corner of the street intersection and fell in a faint due to loss of blood. He was rushed to the hospital, where it was first announced that the man had but little chance for recovery. Later in the night, however, he responded to treatment and Monday morning word was given out that the man had a good chance to recover.

MRS. R. DARDEN GAINED 25 POUNDS AND FEELS FINE

Tania, has won her life-long gratitude for it relieved my trouble and built me up twenty-five pounds in weight after I had been told I would never be well again. The statement of Mrs. Roberta Darden, who lives at the Tillery residence at 33 1/2th St. Paris, Texas, reads: "About four years ago I suffered an accident as a result of which I was told my stomach and digestive organs would never be normal again. Absolutely everything I ate hurt me and I suffered the most awful pains imaginable. For a long time I was almost too weak to move and at last I had to give up. It was when I used the first bottle of Tania I was able to walk and in a short time I was able to take up my work again. I have not taken a drop of medicine or any doctor's treatment in three years and I give Tania full credit for the wonderful health I now enjoy."

Tania is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 25 million bottles sold.

NEW PRESIDENT OF OKLAHOMA A. & M. SECURES THE KEYS

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 4.—George Wilson, former Non-Partisan League organizer in Kansas and North Dakota, who yesterday installed himself as president of Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College at Stillwater with the assistance of five national guard officers in plain clothes, was expected to return to Oklahoma City today for a board of agriculture meeting. Wilson owed his selection as A. & M. head to the action of the newly-appointed members of the board said to be under direction of Governor J. C. Walton.

ELECTRICIANS JOIN STREET CAR MEN IN THREAT TO STRIKE

CHICAGO, June 4.—Electricians supporting the track layers in a demand for immediate attention to a wage increase threatened to tie up the street car and elevated railway transportation system here tomorrow. With W. I. Mahoney, president of the electrical union, counseling further negotiation, it had been indicated the forthcoming strike threat would be held in abeyance for at least another week.

ONE MAN IS KILLED MUCH DAMAGE DONE BY WIND AND HAIL

REGINA, SASK., June 4.—One man was killed, several cottages were blown to pieces and 400 miles of farm lands were covered with hail and torrential rains last night in this province. The dead man, Wassy E. Sewie, was struck by lightning.

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, June 4.—Reports were received here today of a heavy rain storm which broke over the Margaret district carrying away 12 bridges along the Canadian railways between Margaret and Dunrea, and washing away the grade at Seven Crossings. Ninette was also reported to have been affected by the storm. There was little damage to crops.

FORD PARADE HERE POSTPONED AND WICHITANS WILL JOIN IN BIG FORD DAY AT IOWA PARK

The parade of Ford cars, announced to have been held in Wichita, Kansas, on June 3, has been postponed until June 6. The postponement is on account of the big Ford day to be held at Iowa Park, near Des Moines, Iowa. The date for the Ford parade here was fixed without knowledge of Ford's big day at Iowa Park, and when brought to the attention of those promoting the parade here there was quick agreement to postpone the event to give full scope for the big day at Iowa Park.

ANTI-LIQUOR LAW FOR SWITZERLAND DEFEATED BY VOTE

BERNE, June 4.—The Swiss people in referendum have rejected a proposed law under which the government would have to extend taxation increased and the ancient privilege of farmers and owners of distilleries to distill their own spirits. The proposed law was inspired by a desire to fight alcoholism, which has been particularly on the increase recently in Switzerland. The people spending $100,000,000 annually for liquor, or $100,000,000 more than for bread and milk together. The present price of the Swiss red wine is about 100 cents per gallon. The proposed law would have raised the price to 150 cents per gallon. The law would also have raised the price of spirits to 150 cents per gallon. The law would also have raised the price of spirits to 150 cents per gallon.

MRS. CROKER SAYS HUSBAND WAS NOT RICH AS CLAIMED

DUBLIN, June 4.—Direct examination of Mrs. Bula Croker, widow of Richard Croker, one-time Tammany chief, was resumed today in the court action to test the validity of his final will, brought by the widow and Mrs. Croker. The widow testified that she was present when her husband made the will now being contested but that she did not interfere in the drawing up of its provisions.

Mr. Croker's last illness covered five months but during this time only one of his children, Florence, inquired about him, the witness said. She added that Richard Croker was "a saint". The judge refused permission for counsel to question her as to the alleged hostile campaign against her in the American newspapers. As for her husband's wealth, people had said he was a millionaire but she did not discover it to be so. Mr. Croker himself told her he had been wealthy but that his family had robbed him and he desired her to have what was left.

Will Amundsen Find North Pole?

Peary is supposed to have found the North Pole, but he could not have driven a stake or set up a flag at the exact spot because the Pole is not stationary. If King Tut had sent an expedition to plant the flag of ancient Egypt on the top of the world, and Amundsen found that same flag of the Nile in the arctic region this summer, he would be fooled, for the pole is not where it was 3500 years ago.

WILL Captain Roald Amundsen reach the North Pole?

His plan for reaching it is wholly novel. He proposes to fly over it in an airplane, and descend upon it.

But when he arrives, it may not be there. At all events, it may have shifted away from the spot where it was a few months earlier, and its precise location may not be ascertainable.

Peary found the Pole. That is to say, he found just about where it ought to be; but he could not drive a stake or set up a flag at the exact spot, because the Pole is not stationary. It is continually on the move.

The North Pole, of course, is the northern end of the earth's axis. One might reasonably expect, therefore, that it would "stay put." But it doesn't, for the simple reason that the axis wobbles.

If it were possible, let us say, from a balloon suspended high in the air, to watch the Pole, it would be seen to oscillate, not with any regularity of movement, but changing its position continually, in some years slowly and in other years much more rapidly; not, however, beyond a certain definite range. It may change its location by as much as sixty feet in six months; but, having gone just so far, it comes back.

Inasmuch as it is the axis that shifts, the South Pole necessarily wobbles in corresponding fashion. And, as a result, there are corresponding changes of latitude all over the earth. We are accustomed to regard a line of latitude as definitely fixed, but it is not. A given line of latitude six months hence may be thirty feet north of where it is today; or it may be thirty feet south.

THIS is shown by observations of the stars. If the zenith be represented by a straight line drawn east and west through the middle of the heavens, a star south of that line may be north of it six months from now, or vice versa.

It is by such observations that latitudes are determined. The German Geodesic Service, a while ago, established stations, sixty-seven in number, around the world, all of them on the parallel thirty-nine degrees eight minutes, to measure oscillations of the stars with relation to the zenith. They continued the work through a period of fifteen years, one result of it being proof beyond question that the Pole was constantly shifting.

More recently, much work of the same kind has been done by Prof. George A. Hill, of the Naval Observatory at Washington, one of the foremost living astronomers, who has "plotted" the curves described by the Pole in its movements. He says that Peary could not possibly tell where the Pole was, exactly,

That explorer, to locate it, made observations, taking the altitude of the sun; but the sun, with relation to the north end of the earth's axis, may have been thirty feet away from where it ought to have been.

What makes the Pole wobble? There you have a question which is to science a very interesting puzzle. One theory is that the wobbling is caused by enormous accumulations of snow and ice.

Prof. Hill's idea is different. He thinks that the wobbling is caused by a slipping of the outer shell of the earth upon the core of the planet. Says he: "We do not pretend to understand it; but we tell the geologists, whose business it is to know about such things, that something is going on inside the earth which they do not suspect."

Suppose King Tut had sent an expedition to find the North Pole. Let it be imagined that the goal was reached, and a post driven to mark its precise location. Would Amundsen, if successful in his present project, find the Pole in the same spot, just where it was 3500 years ago?

Hardly. It could not, however, be far away. From a given center suppose a circle to be drawn with a radius of thirty feet. Inside of that circumference the Pole is always to be found.

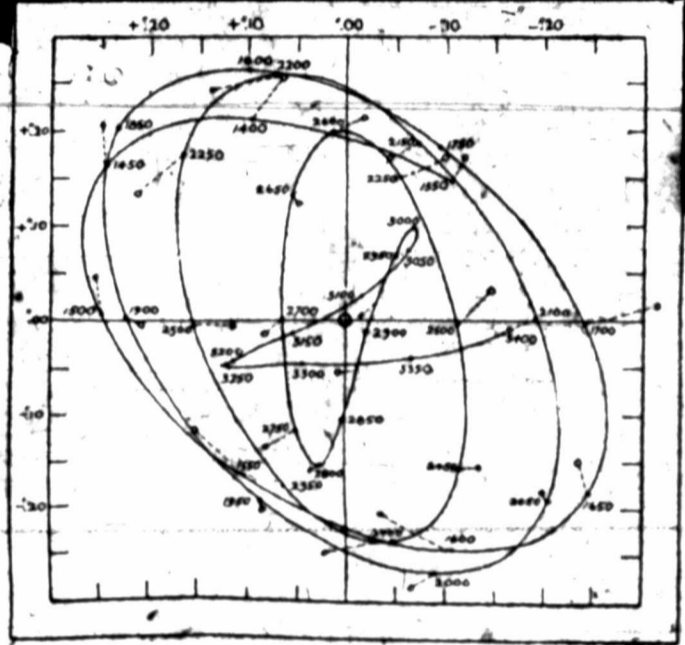

Today the Woolworth Building in New York is not exactly in the same latitude that it was last month and will be next month. By next December it may change its position in this respect by as much as the width of Broadway—an equal distance, that is to say.

That the wobble may be due to a slipping of the crust of the globe is by no means so extraordinary a theory as might be imagined. The planet on which we dwell is not quite such a solid and rigid body as is popularly supposed, and the shell that forms its envelope has a considerable elasticity. The earth goes round on what is called its "axis of rotation." But it has

Intrepid Explorer Plans to Fly Directly Over It This Summer, But Science Says He May Not Find Exact Spot, Due to Wobbling of the Earth's Axis

A specially designed airplane, which was constructed with a view of adapting it to the needs of the explorer, will carry Captain Amundsen in his air hunt for the North Pole.

Professor George A. Hill, of the Naval Observatory at Washington, has plotted the eccentric movements of the North Pole, which swings about a circle whose diameter is about sixty feet.

another axis, an "axis of energy." Originally the two coincided, but now this is no longer the case, and their deviation produces the slipping which is the cause of the wobbling of the poles and the corresponding changes in latitudes.

Says Prof. Hill: "At some time in the distant past the earth started to revolve. Energy started it on its axis of energy, which was thus its axis of rotation also. But, owing to some cause unknown, its axis of rotation no longer coincides with its axis of energy, and hence the wobbling."

"If the deviation between the two axes were to become greater, the wobbling would increase correspondingly. It is not inconceivable that at some future time the Poles might make a great shift, the earth adopting a new axis of rotation, with consequent radical changes of climate all over the globe. If such a notion seems fantastic, it should be remembered that there is plenty of evidence to suggest that there was a time when the North Pole was in the neighborhood of the Equator."

"How else is it possible to account for the tropical climate which the polar regions enjoyed only a few millions of years ago? In that part of the world are found plentiful remains of a luxuriant plant life unmistakably tropical. In Greenland, many miles back from the sea, have been dug up fossil palms, tree ferns, and other plants belonging properly to the equatorial zone. Sedimentary deposits containing such fossils are 500 feet thick, indicating an enormously long duration of tropical climatic conditions. There are beds of coal in Greenland's icy mountains."

If the earth's axis is to be regarded as a pointer, the point in the heavens to which its north end is directed is the North Pole in the sky. But that point is continually changing, a fact which, however, has nothing to do with the wobbling heretofore discussed. At the present time the axis points near to Polaris, which on that account is called the Pole Star, or North Star. Polaris is getting nearer and nearer into line with the axis of the earth, and thereby is steadily becoming more truly the Pole Star.

Twenty centuries from now Polaris will be so far out of line as to be of no use to navigators for indicating the north. Will any other star take its place then? Most certainly, yes. On any clear night in summer we may see, almost directly overhead in the sky, a bright star that is known to astronomers as Vega, or Alpha Lyrae. It will be the Pole Star in the fortieth century.

In some of the Egyptian pyramids have been found tunnels which formerly were a puzzle to scientists. It was surmised that they were intended originally for astronomical observation. If they had pointed at Polaris, a jump might have been made at the conclusion that they were designed for watching that star. But they did not; and, anyway, Polaris was not the North Star at the time the pyramids were built.

However, astronomers took the matter up, and by calculation proved that at that period—forty centuries ago—the North Star was Alpha in the constellation of the Dragon. It was in those days the nearest bright star to the North Pole in the sky, and the tunnels were at such an inclination that it must have been visible then from the lower ends of the passages in question. From the bottom of such a tunnel the stars may be seen in the daytime, just as from the bottom of a deep well. Hence the inference that the passages were constructed for the purpose of observing the North Star.

THE NORTH POLE in the sky, the point at which the axis of the earth is directed, is continually traveling in a gigantic circle. To complete the circle thus described requires about 25,000 years. Thus 25,000 years hence the North Pole in the sky will be in the same celestial neighborhood as now, having in the meantime traveled a vast circuit through the constellations. Then Polaris will again become the Pole Star for a while.

The movement of the North Pole in the sky is so conspicuous that it was detected long before the invention of accurate astronomical instruments. It was first discovered by Hipparchus, a Greek observer, in the year 120 B. C.

The bright stars which serve successively as the Pole Star, around the immense circle in question, are gigantic suns. Alpha Lyrae is particularly interesting because it seems to be the goal toward which our sun, with its attendant planets, is traveling in an apparently straight line through the void of space at a speed of ten miles a second.

Before we can reach the neighborhood of Alpha Lyrae, we have still a long way to go. Every year we get about 200,000,000 miles nearer to that goal, yet the star looks to us today much as it looked to the priest-astronomers of Egypt and Assyria forty centuries ago.

SPUDDERS GO INTO SECOND PLACE IN VICTORY OVER STEERS

Meine Turns in Sixth Straight Win for Salms When Spuds Bunch Hits With Numerous Steer Errors

The Spudders stepped into second place, won their seventh game out of the last eight played and Heine Meine won his sixth consecutive contest since joining the Salms in the second game of the Steer series Sunday afternoon.

Again the Steers played ragged ball in the field and made it easy for our hopefuls to score, their five errors contributing largely to the eight runs. However, the Spudders banded out quite a few of the Steers' runs on silver platters, only two of the markers of Meine being earned.

Meine often found himself in trouble due to the Steers' errors and the Spudders' three errors, but he managed to get by safely and the fact that the victory was won by the Spudders is evidence enough that he turned in a great performance.

Meine pitched a good game, but he was not as accurate as he has been in the past. He allowed three runs, two earned, on seven hits and two errors. He struck out four and walked two.

The Spudders' offense was led by George Damaged, who hit a double and scored in the sixth. Heine Meine pitched a good game, but he was not as accurate as he has been in the past.

The Lookout

If the Spudders are to gain any ground on the Panthers, they must do it during the south Texas invasion that will be raging in the next few days.

The Spudders must make a better showing against the south Texas clubs than the Cats do against the Fort Worth gang. That is quite some task, far more difficult than silencing the Cats in games with very near July 1.

Hook Cotter, after playing a sensational game in the field Sunday, came near going down for good when Kal Segrist stepped on him in a close play at the bag.

WATCHING THE SCOREBOARD

CHICAGO, June 4.—Brooklyn continues the sensation of both major leagues. In a driving rainstorm yesterday, with clouds so dense as to make it difficult to see the players from the bleachers, the Steers won their 10th straight game.

Another veteran figured in Chicago's victory over St. Louis 7 to 1. Eddie Collins' brilliant second sack of the White Sox stole two bases.

The rejuvenated Philadelphia Athletics lost ground in their climb toward the top of the league in their first game, losing to the St. Louis Browns 4 to 2.

The victory placed the Dodgers one game above Pittsburgh, second place as the Pirates lost to St. Louis 4 to 3.

WICHITAN WILL GO TO CONFERENCE ON WHEAT SITUATION

Frank Kell has been asked to serve as representative of Texas millers and of the Western Millers' federation, at a conference to be held in Minneapolis June 19 and 20, to consider ways and means of increasing the American consumption of wheat products. Mr. Kell has agreed to attend the meeting. He was one of very few southwestern millers to receive an invitation from Gov. J. A. O'Connell of Minnesota, who called the conference.

PROMISE OF STORM EARLY IN MORNING IS NOT REALIZED

A very threatening disturbance of the atmosphere which drove many Wichitans to storm cellars, struck the city early Sunday morning. For several hours previous to the blow, sheets of lightning flared up continually in the west, although for the most part the skies were clear of heavy clouds. A hard wind, lasting but a short time, a few spatters of rain, and the storm was over.
