Civic Society Chairman Says Report to Congress Contains Idea Already Protested

By Associated Press. HARRISBURG, Pa., May 9.—J. Horace McFarland of this city, president of the American Civic Society, which organization led the effort for the preservation of Niagara Falls, made a statement today regarding the report of the International Waterways committee transmitted to congress Monday by President Roosevelt.

"This report merely reiterates the recommendations of the American section of the waterways commission as transmitted to congress March 27, against which we protested to Mr. Roosevelt April 4. The report recommends the authorization of the total diversion of Niagara water of 64,500 cubic feet per second, which is forty per cent of the minimum flow of the falls and would, in the opinion of all but the power companies and waterways commission, be a disaster to the great cataract as a scenic feature."

"This report was disregarded by Mr. Burton, chairman of the rivers and harbor committee of the house, who framed the Niagara preservation act, known as the 'Burton-Lodge bill.' This bill stops Niagara destruction at the present point and, by prohibiting the importation of Niagara power electric power from Canada, will restrain Canadian diversion. The report of the international waterways commission held, it is understood, that if the commissioners believe what they assert, that it would be a sacrilege to destroy the scenic effects of Niagara Falls, saying this, they yet propose to bleed forty per cent of the water, giving full vitality to all existing franchises, except one, and that one is an American franchise. It looks as if they proposed to allow as many mosquitoes to sting a defenseless man as they thought he would stand without tumbling over."

"We will renew our protest to President Roosevelt at once against this vicious report, so favorable to Niagara grabbers and so dangerous to the Falls. We have advice from all over America that lead us to believe the people want the Falls preserved unharmed and not tamed for private gain to the danger point or beyond."

Mr. McFarland stated that many letters in his possession assured a strong congressional support to the Burton-Lodge bill.

GRAND ARMY TO FIGHT COL. LYON

Old Soldiers Not in Harmony With Republican Leader

Members of the Grand Army of the Republic in Texas promise to take a leading part in the fight upon Colonel Cecil Lyon now said to be rounding into shape for action at the coming state convention in El Paso.

Charge that Colonel Lyon is not in sympathy with that organization and has discriminated against its members in the distribution of federal offices is the cause of the opposition upon part of the organization.

So far as can be learned no official sanction of this position has been tak- ing by the camps in this city or other parts of the state, and it is considered unlikely the matter will reach such a stage. Individual members, however, will work against Colonel Lyon, com- mencing with those who declare the appointment of his term as national committeeman and state chairman to this year is not in accord with party aims.

In appointments under his rule, it is claimed the "Old Soldier" has received a little favor, charge being made that Colonel Lyon has even taken the position that they have enough at the present time.

Whether or not this is the position held by Colonel Lyon, it is certain the coming appointments in the state in- stead of the past year have gone to the younger men. It is also remembered in re- lation circles that Colonel Lyon at a recent convention in Fort Worth declared that the officers would go to the party workers, his admonition to those present being to get out and dig. Who will be the leader in the fight against the present controller of republican destinies is as yet unknown.

IS A "SPOTTED COUNTRY"

Henrietta Stockman Talks of Conditions in Monahan

D. C. Koogler, one of Henrietta's stockmen, who makes it a habit to keep on feed a goodly string of mar- ketable stuff, came in from the west and was investigating the chances for obtaining something that would suit him to put on grass up in the range country.

"I have been out in the Monahan country," said he, "ever since the cat- tlemen's convention looking into mat- ters and things pertaining to cattle out there. Rain has fallen enough to make that country look as green as it ever does. It is a peculiar coun- try indeed. It is what might be called the spotted country when it comes to grass, for where the sand is exposed to the winds the grass is literally blown out and the sand is bare of vegetation as the sands of the seacoast. Where there is any protection it does well enough, but the most protection it has is around the small mesquite. Of course where the soil is stiff and has some resisting qualities, the grass grows finely. They have the Gramma grass also that seems to be indige- nous to the country and holds its own with a wonderful tenacity against wind and everything else.

"I am on my way up to Archer county where I have some cattle graz- ing. My foreman has just written me to come up, as the cattle are doing well and are getting fat. My place is on the railroad from Wichita Falls to Seymour and from all accounts mat- ters are in excellent condition out there. It has been rather cool lately, but altogether cattlemen cannot com- plain at conditions as they are, for they might be much worse."

CLUB TO MEET

Third Ward Democratic Organization Will Have Ball

The Democratic Club of the Third ward will meet at John Hendrickson's store on East Front street Thursday night for the purpose of discussing ward boundaries and matters in con- nection with the building of a public hall in that ward. Over half the money necessary to complete the proposed hall has already been secured, and to help get the balance a ball will be giv- en at Hendley May 25, the proceeds to go to the hall fund. Everything has been arranged by the club for this ball, which the promoters say will be the grandest affair of the kind ever pulled off in or near Fort Worth.

WOMAN REACHES HERE

Tells Her Experiences at Time of Earthquake and Fire at City of San Francisco

The condition existing at San Francisco at the time and following the recent earthquake and destructive fire which laid waste seven-eighths of the city is testified by Mrs. C. F. Bennett, with her husband and his daughter resided at 1825 Market street and who is now residing with relatives of her husband in this city, J. T. Camp, 611 West First street.

"It would have been impossible for the newspapers to have exaggerated the situation," said Mrs. Bennett. "In- stead of this, it is my opinion that the whole thing beggars description en- tirely. It all seems to me a dream to me now. At the time of the shock I did not feel frightened—I was born and raised in 'Frisco and we have been accustomed to earthquakes. I didn't think it amounted to much and re- turned to my bed after the big shock on that Wednesday morning. About an hour and a half afterward neigh- bors roused us with cries of 'My God, are you people still alive? We think the city is burning up.' My little girl was sick at the time and it was not until a half an hour later, when we saw the fire in the next block, that I finally decided the thing was going to be really serious. I don't think that many of the people in our vicinity thought at first that San Francisco was going to be utterly destroyed.

Woman Was Shot Down

"But, if many thought like this, they were soon disappointed, because the flames seemed to sweep over things like a forest fire, or even worse. Within on the second day, it was thought that the greater part of our end of Mar- ket street would be saved, a woman was discovered who had built a fire in the rear of a building which she owned. There was no place to go. The whole city was in a panic and she had picked wood from the ruins of her house to build the fire. The soldiers ordered her to put out the fire, but she resist- ed and was shot. The regulars did this.

"I brought with me a Mexican can- ary bird caught among the ruins in the residence district of San Francisco, which was singed, but he actually sung on the train coming over.

No More Ham for Her

"This is my first trip away from California. I must say that the train load of refugees who are being trans- ported was treated with generosity all the way across the country. The only trouble seemed to be that everybody fed us the same character of food. It was ham and eggs, bread and butter sandwiches, black coffee and cheese and cheese and black coffee—all the way through and into Kansas. The first real nice meal we had fur- nished us was at Los Vegas, N. M., where the women seemed to divine that the season called for something beside a winter diet. At Los Vegas we had great fresh lunches of bread, radishes and onions and almost the whole train failed to pay any attention to any meat, preferring the vegetables.

"I can hardly bear to look a pig in the face, and I know I never want to see a can of tomatoes again so long as I live.

"There is one instance I have heard of printed that I can say I know is true. I saw the woman who was carry- ing two bird cages and yet who had omitted to dress herself. I also saw a woman wearing a costly looking cloak over a night gown and with neither shoes or stockings on. As she crossed the streets she would gather the folds of the gown in her hands and hold them about her face, as if to hide her face from the time either. Why, there were fourteen of us in one little shack in Golden Gate park.

Still Loyal to 'Frisco

"My husband is there. He is in service with the California guard. I expect to remain in Fort Worth until the city is rebuilt and, when my husband is installed in another place of business I shall return. To us San Francisco is the only place. Every- body living there has almost a foolish pride for the place. They think it's the only place in America to call home. They don't know why it's go- ing to be rebuilt so fast."

CALDWELL CASE TO BE DISCUSSED

Question of Legal Aspect to Be Considered

Announcement that at Wednesday night's prayer meeting statement of the legal aspect of the case of Rev. William Caldwell, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Fort Worth will be read, has caused considerable interest not only among members of that congregation, but also in Presby- terian circles of the city.

It is understood that the statement will present some new and vital argu- ments on the status of the case and that by these arguments which prob- ably will be presented to the general assembly of the Southern Presbyterian church, friends of Dr. Caldwell hope to not only quickly dispose of the case when it comes up for consideration, but to have the action of the Texas synod, which voted to sustain a pro- test against Dr. Caldwell's reception into the Fort Worth Presbytery an- nulled, and the original action of the Presbytery in receiving Dr. Caldwell and installing him as pastor of the First Presbyterian church here fully sustained.

History of the Case

In the fall of 1904, Rev. William Caldwell, after being called by the First Presbyterian church of Fort Worth, Texas, as its pastor, presented to the Fort Worth Presbytery, application to be received as a member of that body. His application was accom- panied by proper credentials and dis- missal from the Fort Worth Presbytery to the Fort Worth Presbytery, and after being duly examined by the lat- ter presbytery, and after complying with all the requirements of the law of the Presbyterian church, necessary for membership, he was, by a majority vote of the Fort Worth Presbytery, duly elected as a member.

Rev. J. V. McCall and other mem- bers of the Fort Worth Presbytery at the time, who voted to reject the ap- plication of the Texas synod, with the Texas synod, alleging, in effect, that Rev. William Caldwell was not in ac- cord with the standards of the Pres- byterian church of the United States, and, on that ground, complained to the synod against the action of the ma- jority of the presbytery in receiving Rev. William Caldwell.

In November, 1904, the Texas Synod met in Austin and took up this com- plaint for hearing, but there being no record of the answers made by Rev. William Caldwell when examined by the Presbytery on experimental reli- gion, church government and theo- logy, and no method of determining, with any degree of certainty, what he did answer, the synod referred the matter back to the presbytery with instruction to again examine Rev. Wil- liam Caldwell and report his answers to the synod at its next annual meet- ing. This instruction was complied with by the presbytery, at a meeting held in Weatherford, Texas, in No- vember, 1905, at which a majority of whom again elected him to mem- bership. Rev. J. V. McCall and others again voted to reject Rev. William Caldwell, and again filed the com- plaint with the Texas synod, alleging as a ground of their complaint that Rev. William Caldwell was not in ac- cord with the standards of the Pres- byterian church of the United States. The complaint was heard and sus- tained by the synod at its meeting held in Houston in November, 1905, by an order expressly declaring null and void the action of the presbytery in receiv- ing Rev. William Caldwell and in in- stallating him pastor of the First Pres- byterian church of Fort Worth.

From this action of the synod, Dr. Caldwell, as well as his church, gave notice of appeal and complaint to the general assembly.

In April, 1907, at a meeting of the Fort Worth Presbytery, seat was refused to Dr. Caldwell by the pres- bytery, who went as a delegate from the First Presbyterian church of Fort Worth to the general assembly, being based on the decision of the Texas synod.

Actions Held Illegal

It is understood that the legal argu- ments to be presented by Dr. Cald- well's friends before the general as- sembly will take the position that the whole series of proceedings against him has been contrary to church law; that he was regularly and legally re- ceived as pastor of the First Presby- terian church, and that precedence in jurisdiction and church rules for the conduct of actions against members has been observed. It is stated that the decisions made thus far in the case have all been illegal and are therefore void.

NORTH FORT WORTH ROSEN HEIGHTS.

North Fort Worth city council met in regular session Tuesday night, the full board of eight aldermen being present. Mayor Davis having been called to San Antonio in the interest of the exchange suits now pending, was absent and P. J. Conway was elected mayor pro tem. Mr. Conway took the chair and the meeting was called to order at 8:20 o'clock.

City Secretary Proctor read the minutes of the last meeting, which were accepted. Chairman Conway then called for the reading of the various committee reports.

Another report on sanitary affairs, Aldermen Daniel, Coffey and Frazier, submitted a motion to the effect that the city marshal appoint a city sani- tary officer to look after the sanitary conditions of the city, and to be headed G. W. Maynard for the position. Alderman Thannisch made a motion that a policeman be appointed to look after the hygiene of the city, and that a discussion City Marshal Montgomery stated that he and his assistants were already looking after it and the motion was tabled.

Proctor then read the re- port of the water works committee on the question of a new superintendent.

Aldermen Daniel and Kelley of the committee recommended the appoint- ing of John Williams. A minority re- port from Chairman Blanke was read dissenting and nominating William Mink as superintendent and giving the details of his duties and salary.

At this point Alderman Conway stated from the chair that by electing him to the position of mayor pro tem he had been deprived of his vote, that he was armed with the veto and would use it if necessary. It was finally de- cided to discuss the matter in execu- tive session. No definite action was announced.

A report from the water works com- mittee recommending that the city secretary be instructed to have water connections when desired and let the consumers pay the minimum rate un- til the meters, which had been ordered, arrived, was accepted.

Another suggestion from the water works committee that free water be supplied for the meeting of the Sev- enth Day Adventists, to be held in the new building on the city park property, was adopted.

The report of the police committee suggesting that A. E. Castle be ap- pointed a mounted policeman at a salary of $70 per month, beginning May 1, was adopted, after an amendment by Alderman Thannisch that the mounted policeman also be appointed sanitary officer had been tabled.

City Jail

The public improvements committee, consisting of Aldermen Kelley, Daniel and Thannisch, submitted plans for a concrete city calaboose, 18x40 feet, and 12 feet high, with a 24-foot run- around, 12-foot walls and separate compartment for females. The com- mittee was instructed to obtain esti- mates of the cost, and report at the next meeting.

Deestrick Skule

The "Deestrick Skule" entertain- ment given in North Fort Worth Tues- day night, for the benefit of the Eudeergarten Association, proved a great financial success.

Professor W. H. Moore handled his "skule" in a manner that signified much disciplining of the pupils. Dr. Haggard as Equine Bucklehead paid a visit to the "deestrick" and addressed the pupils, complimenting them on their splendid work.

The entire performance kept the au- dience of about 500 persons in a con- tinuous uproar.

A RUSH FOR HOMES

Hines Clark Tells of Arrivals in Neuc- oes County

Hines Clark, from south Texas, was in with a lot of cattle which were shipped from Alford, a station on the railroad in Neucos county. He re- ports plenty of rain and grass and everything doing fine, especially weeds. However, cattle are not as fat as might be expected for stockmen at market stuff go into the winter to- day. There is a great rush for lands down there and the desire for homes seems to be genuine. Of course a lot of land is being bought up that is to be held by speculators, but this is to be expected. A man who has a body of land that is suitable for agricul- tural purposes is careless of his own interests when he sells it in a lump to a man who will cut it up and sell it for three or four times the price he paid for it. Anyone who has gone through many years of stock raising cut in our country ought to get all he can out of his land, for he has cer- tainly earned the reward for the hard times he has gone through. The narrow escapes he has had from utter ruin by drought, hail and other com- plications, not forgetting to mention that terror to all stockmen, the mortgage.

MANY FIREMEN ATTEND

Delegation From Fort Worth and Other Places Leave For Wells

Another big delegation of state fire- men reached Fort Worth Wednesday morning en route to Mineral Wells, where the annual meeting of the state fire association will be held. At the Texas and Pacific passenger station over fifty delegates from different Texas towns were gathered Wednesday morning and took the Mineral Wells train for the convention town. Among the delegates that left Fort Worth Wednesday were those from Schu- lenberg, Cuero, Austin, Corsicana and Belton. Chief Gus B. Depmon of the Schu lenberg department and Chief Ruhe Freedman of the Corsicana de- partment agreed that the meeting at Mineral Wells would be the largest gathering of volunteer firemen ever held in Texas.

Dr. P. S. Turner, former president of the Belton fire department and B. Nordhaus, president of the Schu lenberg fire department, each with ten members from their towns, were in the crowd that went out from Fort Worth Wednesday. The Texas and Pacific, in order to accommodate the travel to Mineral Wells on account of the state firemen's meeting, is running a spe- cial train from Weatherford.

W. E. Biddleker, chief of the Fort Worth department, and Captains Bishop and Hinkle left at 8:45 o'clock Wednesday morning to attend the con- vention.

NEW WEATHER ORDER

"Is Today Normal?" the Latest Bu- reau Question

The local weather bureau, in charge of D. S. Landis, has received notification from Washington that hereafter Fort Worth will be a permanent normal station, which means that a daily record will be kept of the average precipitation, temperature and winds compared with the daily records of the past ten years and figures published showing how much ahead or below the normal is each day's report.

Railroad Commission Routine

Special to The Telegram.

AUSTIN, Texas, May 9.—The rail- road commission yesterday afternoon refused the application of the Texas and New Orleans Railway Company for an increase in the freight rates of 20 per cent on the Dallas-Sabine division of the road, extending from Sab- ine to Dallas, a distance of 318.4 miles. The action of the railroad commis- sion was unanimous in the matter. The application for an increase in the pres- ent rates was filed Monday by Judge H. M. Garwood, general attorney of the road, as mentioned heretofore in these columns.

There is some rumor here that the Texas and New Orleans will resort to mandamus proceedings in the supreme court to compel the commission to take up the matter and consider the ap- plication and grant it upon a proper hear- ing. In the application it was shown that the road had lost from operation for the twelve months ending June 30, 1905, the sum of $19,776.73.

Judge L. J. Storey, chairman of the commission, was seen about the mat- ter, and he said that the road had a surplus of $6,000,000, and that in the

PERSONAL WORK TOPIC FOR DAY

Christian Endeavorers Continue Session Here
ADDRESS BY REV. RAY

New Testament Incidents Form Basis of Discussion—Meetings Continue Through Thursday

"Personal Work" was the topic discussed at the Wednesday afternoon service of the Christian Endeavor district convention being held in this city.

The session opened with a discussion of "The Personal Worker in Church Service," by J. W. Bartholomew. A solo by Miss Freida Downing was heard, following which a quiet hour of Bible study. Rev. G. W. Ray of the First Congregational church delivered an address upon "Some Personal Workers in the New Testament." He said in part:

"The two workers of whom we shall specially speak became identified with Jesus early in His ministry and remained with Him to the end of His earthly life. They were evidently disciples of John the Baptist and were attracted to Jesus by John's remark 'Behold the Lamb of God.' We desire to study them in their relation to friends, to the multitude and among strangers.

"The first thing they did was to find Jesus themselves and become personally acquainted with Him. They stayed with Him till they could say, 'We have found the Messiah.'

"This is the very first requisite for any personal worker. His business is to lead men to Christ and how impossible this is if one does not know Christ. More than this, the spirit of Christ must dwell in the worker and work through the personal worker who would win men to Christ. Jesus said: 'Without me ye can do nothing. He that abideth in me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit. Christ gives the new life. The life produces new growth and the new growth brings forth fruit. Know Jesus Christ first of all, then go after your special friends.

"No sooner did Andrew and John and Philip find Jesus than they went after special friends. Andrew found Peter and 'brought him to Jesus.' John sought James and Philip seeing Nathaniel said, 'We have found Him of whom Moses in the law and prophets did write Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph. Come and see.' The lesson is begun at home. When Jesus healed the lepers He said: 'Go show thyself to the priests.' Begin at home. When He healed the man who had the legion of demons, He said: 'Go home and tell and show how great things the Lord hath done for thee.' After the resurrection He said to Mary: 'Go tell my disciples and Peter.' Begin at home.

"In the twelfth chapter of John we get a lesson on what a personal worker should do among strangers. Some Greeks had come up to Jerusalem to worship. They desired to see Jesus, and so called upon Philip. The lesson has three points:

"Philip knew Jesus. He took the strangers to a friend of his who also knew Jesus. The two went and told Jesus, of course taking the strangers with them. 'Where two or three shall agree as touching any one thing it shall be done for them of my father which is in heaven.'

"We get our third lesson out of the story of the feeding of the multitude. This is the only miracle in the New Testament recorded by all four of the evangelists. Here the multitude had gathered about Jesus and remained all day. So interested were they that they had forgotten to provide themselves with food. In the evening the question was, 'What shall we do with them?' Jesus said feed them. That is what He always says. He had compassion on the people. He always has, and so His command is, 'Give ye them to eat.' But the disciples had no supply. What a pity that it is often so, which it never should be. The church of Jesus Christ, the remedy and the only one, for the hungry multitudes of the world, and they should be fed. Here is a lesson on how to do it.

"They put together what little they had. It was found in the hands of a boy. I wonder if here is our failure. We have lost sight of the boy, forgotten that in his hands is the remedy for the hungry world. It was but little they had. But that is all God needs if properly used. What did they do with it?

"They took it to Jesus. See that you do this at once.

"They obtained his blessing upon it. That is what all the missions of America are doing to feed the teeming millions.

"They distributed to the multitude instead of eating it themselves. Here again we fail. We go to church Sabbath by Sabbath to get what we can for personal use, instead of getting it for the purpose of distribution. Bear it out to the multitude and the hungry ones will all be fed.

"Gather up the fragments that nothing be lost, and they had more than they began with. It is always so. That only is lost which is not used. That which is scattered comes back with laden wings of blessing."

Night Program
Program for Tuesday night at Taylor Street Cumberland Presbyterian church is: Devotional service, led by George Adams; solo, Miss Frieda Downing; address, "The Personal Worker in the Prayer Meeting," Rev. A. E. Dubber; solo, Miss Hilda Reed; address, "The Relation of Personal Work to the Success of the Society," Rev. J. W. Caldwell.

District Large
The district is made up of the following counties: Tarrant, Erath, Somervell, Palo Pinto, Wise, Jack, Wichita, Clay, Montague, Cook, Archer, Young, Denton, Stephens, Parker, Hood and Johnson. In this district there are about fifty societies, with a membership aggregating between 500 and 600; of this number about two hundred reside in this city.

Fort Worth leads the district in the number of organizations, there being ten Christian Endeavor Societies—enough for a local union. These various district organizations are under the control of the state organization.

The state organization was formed in Fort Worth in 1896 and since its organization has met here twice, in 1895 and in 1900. The state at the first general meeting was subdivided into eight or nine districts, as this district could be done in a systematic manner.

The head of this district is Miss Opal Ray of Fort Worth. During meetings in this city, she was president, Rev. C. D. Hall of Hillsboro and the secretary, Miss Lula Smith of San Marcos, will be present.

Each district in the state holds a convention prior to the state convention. The state convention this year will be held in Houston June 5, 6 and 7. Van Ogden Young, the international secretary, of Boston, Mass., will attend the meeting at Houston this year, together with a number of other prominent members and officers of the society.

The Fort Worth delegation as well as the Dallas delegation to the state convention will leave in special cars.

The Society of Christian Endeavor was formed in 1882 by Francis E. Clarke of Maine and with but a small membership. At present its membership numbers into the millions throughout the civilized world.

CITY HAS NEW WATER SUPPLY

Reservoir No. 2 Put Into Service Tuesday

Reservoir number 2, which has just been completed, was first put into Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock, when the water from the old reservoir was turned into the new one. About the temporary arrangement and is done for the purpose of making the pipe connections in the old reservoir.

E. E. Calhoun, chief of the city water works, states the work of repair and making connections will last about a week. Making use of the new reservoir will result in about the city to be somewhat muddy, on account of the sediment collected. By Wednesday evening it is expected that the water will be clear.

Although the city council has not yet accepted the new reservoir, Contractor L. S. Leverage granted the city a week. It for a week, it is stated that the council will take action regarding the matter at its next meeting.

The old reservoir has a capacity of 1,000,000 gallons, but the new one has 2,000,000 gallons, twice the size of the old.

With the completion of the system the city will save 100,000 gallons a day, insuring ample pure water from the artesian wells for years to come.

POLICE ARE BUSY HUNTING CLOTHES

Not Their Own Raiment That Causes Trouble

After giving out a large washing containing clothing valued at $50 to a strange negro five days ago and logging all traces of it since then, Mrs. Galloway, 221 South Main street, recovered the clothing Tuesday night by the assistance of Detective Sebe Maddox of the police department.

Mrs. Galloway states that a negro called for the washing, claiming he was sent there by the negro regularly employed as her wash woman. Later Mrs. Galloway made inquiry and the woman denied sending for the clothing and said she knew nothing of its whereabouts. It is stated at the police headquarters that hunting lost or stolen washing is an everyday occurrence. Many white women give washing to colored women unknown to them and as a consequence find it necessary to request the aid of the police department to recover the clothing.

IS YOUR NAME ON PAWN LIST?

Statement of Pledges to Be Sold Posted

In obedience to a law a Fort Worth pawnbroker has posted at the court house a long list of unredeemed pledges that he proposes to sell on a certain date, giving the name of the person who pawned the article, the amount it was pawned for, and a description of the pawn. The list as posted is interesting, in that it gives the names of a number of well known persons who have interviewed their "uncle."

The list is composed of 362 articles or pawns, ranging from a corkscrew to a diamond ring or gold watch, the lowest amount advanced by the pawnbroker on any one article being 25 cents. Running up from that, the highest is $250 on a diamond ring.

Between the lines in this posted list of pawns that are to be sold because the owner has not redeemed them, there is much to be read. Those who have parted with the property in order to get ready cash are not men only. Women figure largely in the list. Married women outnumber the single ones. The women have pawned not only articles of jewelry, but articles of wearing apparel, such as shoes, shirt waists and skirts. Socks, lockets, finger rings, shoes, belts, and even hose have been pawned by women financially embarrassed while the men, as shown by this list, have pawned everything from a corkscrew up to a gold watch or a diamond ring, valued up in the hundreds of dollars.

Pistols, it appears, are favorites with those who raise the weird from the pawnbroker. In the list thirty-three pistols are named, while only five shot-guns are mentioned. Watches also occupy a prominent place in the list, there being being 110 advertised.

The list also includes numerous pairs of coats, vests and trousers, while hat pawns are not scarce. The evidence furnished by this list, however, goes to show that jewelry is more resorted to for winning purposes than anything else. Diamond rings, rings that are not diamond set, collar buttons, gold chains, lockets, studs and ear bobs constitute a big part of the stock.

Tools Go, Too
The list shows a large lot of mechanical "junk" and quite a number of kitchen utensils. A trunk full of clothes is one pawn on the list, while suit cases are numerous.

Enough for a local union. These various district organizations are under the control of the state organization.

The state organization was formed in Fort Worth in 1896 and since its organization has met here twice, in 1895 and in 1900. The state at the first general meeting was subdivided into eight or nine districts, as this district could be done in a systematic manner.

until it is time for their race tonight at the Summit Avenue Rink.

One of the Dallas visitors who witnessed last week's race, said: "I have been watching Dowd's training and made a point to secure the time on his final try-out at the City Park Rink in Dallas this morning. I am not at liberty to disclose the time, but I will say that his race last Wednesday night is far from being an indication of what he can do. I think that either Taylor or Guyer is an easy mark for Dowd. All this talk about Wallace having the better of it is rot. If Wallace beats Dowd he will have to come near lowering the world's record to do it and he will in any event have to put up a race which he will remember a life time."

FORT WORTH'S BUSINESS PROCLAMATION

WHEN the business conditions warrant a community in declaring its prosperity to the world at large it is fitting that the representative Commercial interests should set forth the fact in its leading newspaper in such a manner that it may become known abroad and thereby enhance the value of its progress.

WE THEREFORE desire these pages to proclaim that few other communities today offer present advantages and future prospects to investors and home seekers more inviting than Fort Worth.

FORT WORTH, county seat of Tarrant County, the railroad, grain and cattle centre of the great Southwest, is a city of more than 50,000 inhabitants and growing faster than any other city in this section. Here have been located the great packing plants of the Swift and Armour concerns with others in prospect giving direct employment already to more than three thousand people and indirectly engaging the energies of a thousand more in kindred lines.

From Fort Worth railways radiate in every direction giving fourteen outlets to the great Wholesale and manufacturing interests. As a city of homes Ft Worth is equalled by few and surpassed by none in the state. In the business section the structures are modern and imposing. A delightful temperature and healthful climate add to the other attractions of Fort Worth. Her Banks are among the strongest in the southwest; she is blessed with every modern convenience, and the educational and religious advantages are of the highest order.

FORT WORTH FASTEST GROWING CITY OF THE SOUTHWEST

The city of Fort Worth was named after General William Jenkins Worth. General Worth was a native of Hudson, N. Y., but occupied a warm spot in the hearts of all true Texans in the latter days of the republic. He commanded the first division of United States soldiers to enter the city of Mexico in the Mexican war and was afterwards identified with the destinies of the state. He died in San Antonio in 1848 and his remains now lie beneath the monument at the juncture of Broadway and Fifth avenue, New York city, where he is revered as one of the greatest sons of that old republic.

The first white man to approach this section of the country according to tradition, was Captain Ed Terrell and his party. They came from the other side of the Mississippi in 1843 and camped for the winter in a tent on what is now the site of the city in the southwest. The next summer Captain Terrell built a log house which, for years, was a landmark in this section and known as the Terrell cabin.

The first election was held in Fort Worth in 1850 in the Terrell cabin and the settlers rode in from miles around to cast their ballots and exchange the meager news of the times. In the next year that great Texan, the late Judge Reagan, held the first court in this city here at the same place. His was then as ever the most prominent barrier of the state and had as his jurisdiction almost the entire portion of Texas.

The first store anywhere in this part of the country was opened in the Terrell cabin by Henry Daggett along about this time and continued for a few years. The settlers in Fort Worth were of a progressive type and improve their embryo city to such an extent that when another great rush of immigrants to Texas from the north and west occurred in 1853, Fort Worth was a most attractive appearance and the next boom and influx of strangers occurred in 1873 when the first rail road was expected to reach here, but which, for various reasons, was deferred until 1876, three years later. From that time until now this city has grown rapidly by natural and man-made among the foremost cities in the entire southwest.

Tarrant County The county of Tarrant, state of Texas, was created in 1849 and organized in 1850. It was named after General Ed Tarrant, a famous campaigner and Indian fighter, it is situated in the northwestern part of the state, bounded on the north by the Red river, on the east by the Texas river, on the south by the Texas river, and on the west by the Texas river. The county is one of the most fertile and productive in the state. It is bounded on the north by the Red river, on the east by the Texas river, on the south by the Texas river, and on the west by the Texas river.

At Austin. It towers on Main street and is one of the first buildings in the city that can be seen when approaching on any of the transportation lines. Tarrant county is a natural productive territory and has within its borders a large number of the natural advantages of the state. Its agricultural possibilities are the greatest, however, and furnish the market of Fort Worth with fresh produce, vegetables, feed, hay, etc., at all times. Livestock is raised to a large extent in the county and lands, improved and unimproved, can be had at a comparatively reasonable figure. The country is well settled and the modern conveniences of the American rural life can be had throughout the county.

Population The earliest records as to the population of Fort Worth are not attainable. However, in the year 1878 there were but a few more than 5,000 people here according to the city directory published at that time. Since then the growth of the city has been rapid and steady. At only one time since 1878 has there been a decrease in the population of Fort Worth according to the directories and that was in 1896-1897. The population figures are as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Year and Population. Data points: 1878-79 (5,044), 1883-84 (8,856), 1885-87 (12,728), 1888-89 (14,709), 1892-93 (20,842), 1894-95 (21,631), 1895-96 (26,485), 1896-97 (24,558), 1899-1900 (29,965), 1901-02 (30,487), 1902-03 (35,482), 1904-05 (46,290), 1905-06 (51,826).

This shows an increase in population of over 5,000 people in the last year, 10,000 the year before, making Fort Worth the fastest growing city in the southwest.

City Government Conditions Fort Worth is governed by a board of aldermen and a mayor. The chief executive, who retired recently, submitted a very comprehensive report of the condition of the city finances from which the following data is taken. The bonded indebtedness of the city of Fort Worth is $1,805,000, $114,000 having been paid off in the last six years. The city spent over $225,000 in the past year on permanent improvements. The waterworks has made a decidedly remunerative department of city government, and 1,071 new consumers have been added in the past year. This department is being improved until it will soon be, if it is not now, one of the finest in the South.

Post Office Receipts The United States government owns and maintains a handsome building in the city. In this building are located the postoffice, the federal courts and the offices of the various government officers in this section. Besides the postmaster and assistant postmaster thirty-three clerks and thirty-three carriers are employed here as well as two special delivery boys and the carriers and supernumeraries for five rural routes that radiate for fifteen miles in all directions of the compass from Fort Worth. Four years ago the clerks employed numbered only fourteen and the carriers, fifteen. The present structure was built about nine years ago for the accommodation of the growing business of the postoffice and has since been used for this purpose.

Location and Railroads Fort Worth is located in almost the exact geographical center of one of the most fertile and productive territories in the entire world with a population of 50,000 and an increase of over $1,200,000 within the city limits. every railway system and steamship line in the country and direct passage can be had to any point in the world from the Fort Worth offices. Churches In the city of Fort Worth there are sixty-two church edifices, making the city, among other things, essentially a city of churches. Every large denomination is represented and every convenience for religious worship is to be found. Enumerated by denominations the churches are as follows: Baptist, 11; Catholic, 2; Christian, 1; Church of Christ, 2; Congregational, 1; Episcopal, 2; Jewish, 2; Lutheran, 3; Methodist, 15; Presbyterian, 6; Christian Scientists, 2; Seventh Day Adventists, 1; Spiritualists, 1; Unitarian, 1; colored churches, 8. The churches are all situated in places accessible to street car lines and are among the most beautiful structures of their kind in the country. Public Buildings Fort Worth surpasses any other city in the southwest with the possible exception of the state capital in the magnificent and substantial character of her public buildings. The Tarrant county court house as has been stated is next to the state capital in its size and beauty and is considered one of the finest court houses in the country. Twelve trunk railway lines enter and leave Fort Worth, giving eighteen outlets into the great trade territory tributary to the city. These lines run between eighty-five and 100 passenger trains in and out of the city each twenty-four hours and innumerable numbers of freight trains. The lines touching this point are: Texas & Pacific, Missouri, Kansas & Texas, Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe, Houston & Texas Central, Fort Worth & Rio Grande, Trans-Continental, Chicago, Rock Island & Gulf, Fort Worth & Denver City, St. Louis Southwestern, St. Louis & San Francisco, International & Great Northern, Trinity & Brazos Valley. These figures total to 813,492 cattle, 463,712 hogs, 125,587 sheep and 17,879 horses and mules for the year. These totals show a substantial increase over the receipts of the previous year with the exception of in horses and mules, where there is a decrease. The percentages of increase were as follows: Cattle 26.6 per cent, hogs 65 per cent, sheep 21.3 per cent. No other market in the world can show such a record for 1905. As has been stated the Fort Worth market is fifth in the United States, being surpassed by Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha only, and the last two of these by a very small margin.

Some idea of the growth of Fort Worth as a market can be had from the following comparison of amounts purchased by the packers during the year 1905 against that of the year 1904. The packers bought in 1905 473,524 cattle (including calves), 439,877 hogs, and 47,481 sheep, which compares with their buying in 1904 of 340,370 cattle (including calves), 267,870 hogs and 46,922 sheep.

The buying of other than local packers shows even a more striking increase, growing from 94,517 cattle and calves, 11,018 hogs and 8,367 sheep to 172,634 cattle and calves, 19,204 hogs and 4,130 sheep.

This shows that the local packers have largely extended their markets for beef, pork, bacon and mutton, as it also shows that outside buyers have found this a satisfactory market for the purchase of cattle. But few hogs and sheep have been bought here by others than the packers, and the supply has never been up to their demands. In the matter of cattle, however, packers at Omaha have had regular buyers here a large part of the year, and the Cadahy, Schwarzschild & Sulzberger and others have shipped train-load after train load out for their packing houses in the north and east. The takings of feeders have been comparatively light, as the condition of the market makes them skittish about buying for feeding purposes, and the large increase in the takings of other than local packers represents the purchase of other packers. The figures show that the two packing houses at Fort Worth bought and slaughtered more than 1,500 head of cattle per day for each working day of the year, Saturday and Sunday excepted. This is a record for any city in the world. In fact, five days fairly represent a week at the rate of calculation, the slaughtering of cattle has been at the rate of about 1,300 a day.

There is but little difference in the figures showing the slaughter of cattle and of hogs, as the packers took about 440,000 of the latter. This was not more than 1,500 per day for each of the six week days. Either one of the packing houses could have slaughtered all of these and then not had enough. Instead of 1,500 hogs daily, the market here wants and can handle 5,000, at prices equal to those paid at Kansas City. What has been said of hogs may be said of sheep. They are wanted, and each particular kind of live stock purchased at the Fort Worth market for the year 1905 show that somewhere between $15,500,000 and $18,000,000 was paid out here during the year to shippers from this trade territory to Fort Worth. Hence, at the lowest estimate the cattle sold for $10,240,000, the hogs for $400,000, the sheep for at least $285,000 and the horses and mules brought $1,000,000, the total would be $15,500,000. Some of the commission merchants at the Live Stock exchange are of the opinion that these figures are too conservative and that the figures will at least reach $18,000,000 and possibly $20,000,000.

horses for the troopers in the field. Texas horses were found to fill the demands of South African service better than any other, and during the war Texas supplied for the British service 35,000 horses and 27,000 mules. About the close of the war in South Africa, the new stock yards were opened, and this clinched the hold that Fort Worth had on the horse and mule trade of the southwest. Texas has more mules and horses than any other state in the union. Ac-

Mules	62,409
Oklahoma	183,545
Indian Territory	183,545
Louisiana	137,574
Total	2,109,661

635,728 Texas horses and 270,000 mules may be included in Fort Worth trade territory, swelling the total to about 2,200,000 horses and 700,000 mules. This this line of industry in and about Fort Worth. A good price is also paid for eggs in the local market, so that poultry raising is almost as good as the proverbial "goose of the golden egg," only in this case it will be "golden chicken with a high priced egg."

Exports

The making of an export shipment of about 35,000 pounds of beef from one of the Fort Worth packing houses to Liverpool via Galveston has been heralded as an event of importance, as indeed it was, because of its being the first such export shipment. In time we expect to see exports of Texas beef an event of daily occurrence. Texas wool and supplies of the markets of Europe with such beef as is produced here. The distance from Fort Worth to Galveston is 350 miles, and that is but third of the distance by rail from Kansas City or Omaha to the seaboard, and less than half the distance from Chicago to New York. With these advantages in the way of a short high-tide-water, Fort Worth is bound to be the center of the export beef trade of the country.

While on the subject of exports, it is worth while to note that Fort Worth is now doing a heavy export business in other packing house products than beef. Armour & Co. have given us the following figures showing meat products sold and shipped to go abroad during the past year, from their packing house here:

Lard, pounds	4,250,000
Meat products, pounds	600,000
Grease, pounds	1,000,000
Oleo oil and neutral, pounds	665,000
Horns, hoofs, bones and ho-
hair, pounds	250,000
Beef casings, pounds	325,000
Eggs, dozens	90,000

These supplies went to all parts of the world—to Europe, South America and Africa.

The offices of the Reynolds Cattle Company are located in rooms 507-510 of the Reynolds building in Fort Worth, and the firm is managed by Mr. G. T. Reynolds, president, Mr. W. D. Reynolds, vice president, and Mr. D. C. Campbell, secretary and treasurer.

Messrs. Reynolds are moreover the owners of the Reynolds building in Fort Worth, situated on the corner of West Eighth and Houston streets, one of the newest and most modern office buildings in the city. It is built of yellow pressed brick five stories high, with a splendid passenger elevator and has vaults for the use of the renter. The basement also is of the best quality of the building. A street view of the city is at once attracted by the beauty of its outline and its size.

PAXTON & EVANS, PRINTERS

One of the most popular job printing establishments in Fort Worth is that of Paxton & Evans, at 107 Main street. Their plant is complete and equipped with modern machinery of the latest type carries on all the work. Also they carry in stock at all times a widely assorted line of very best paper for business stationery. These gentlemen take much interest in their business and particularly in their customers. The firm is composed of Carl C. Paxton and Marvin D. Evans, both of whom have been connected with the printing business in Fort Worth during their entire business life and justly merit the confidence and support which the public is giving them.

HOTEL TOURNAINE

A beautiful name amply justified by the extraordinary beauty of the building and interior fittings of this new Fort Worth hostelry. It can be truthfully said that the Tournaine is the most magnificent place of its kind in the South. The hotel was opened for business but a few days ago and has received nothing but praise from all quarters since.

Mr. D. A. Miller, a well known hotel and cafe man is the proprietor of the Tournaine and has put his best efforts in giving to the traveling people of Texas the best equipped and most elaborately decorated hotel in the entire South. The house has thirty-five rooms ranging in price from $2 a day up to the building, equipment and furniture all are brand new and of the most expensive patterns. The Tournaine is operated on the European plan only and has one of the most beautiful cafes and several exquisite private dining rooms in the country. In fact the beauty of the place has to be seen to be appreciated. The building is equipped with a banquet hall, public cafe, private dining rooms, a roof tea garden, handsome billiard room, ladies' writing room, spacious halls, private cold storage plant, and every other convenience of the finest hotels in the world. Art has been the main idea in the arrangement and truly artistic work is manifest in every part.

The chef is from the Baltimore hotel in Kansas City and has been employed at the Annex in Chicago and other first class hotels. The head waiter is an adept in his line, having served in this capacity in some of the largest hotels in the country and is thoroughly qualified in every way to give satisfaction.

Mr. Miller has had years of experience in the hotel business and guarantees satisfaction to all patrons of his house. His pride in the Tournaine is justifiable and this hotel is not only the leading one of interest to the visitor in Fort Worth.

Mr. Lon Day, formerly of the Delaware Hotel, is the chief clerk and has in charge all of the office work.

Horses and Mules

The receipt at this market and the selling of more than 13,000 horses and mules is a fact attesting the importance of the horse and mule trade of Fort Worth, and of the state of Texas. Only the old and well established stock yard markets of the country can make such showings.

During the war in South Africa the British government made heavy drafts upon the United States for hardy light

FORT WORTH OMNIBUS & TRANSFER COMPANY

Mr. Daniel F. Murphy is the popular general manager of one of the largest business enterprises in the city of Fort Worth. This is the Fort Worth Omnibus Line and Transfer Company. This firm operates more omnibuses, and transfer wagons in the city than many of the other concerns of the kind put together, and it takes an executive head such as Mr. Murphy to see that everything is manipulated properly and that satisfaction is given in every instance. If this were not the case the life of such a company would be short, indeed. It suffices to say, however, that the Fort Worth Omnibus Line & Transfer company has been in business in this city for a good many years and is becoming more popular each year in existence. The firm is the official transfer agent for each of the many railway lines entering Fort Worth, which is in itself a recommendation. Calls are made at all trains

Fakes & Co.—Established 1876

This well known and reliable firm, located at 1619-23 Main street, their large store having running through the block to 1618-1622 Bush, with a large warehouse at 1700-08 Rusk street is in the wholesale and retail business, dealing in furniture, carpets, matting, house furnishings of all kinds, mats, teils, grates, etc., and is intimately connected with the city's growth and prosperity. The enormous stock carried would do justice in any city. The arrangement as to every detail is perfect and the attention bestowed upon customers the most courteous kind. The stock carried embraces an exceedingly broad range and is very large indeed, affording people of every taste the best value for the money. Every available portion of the large floor space is used in the excellent display of the goods carried. Besides the most luxurious material in the finer furniture and carpet lines, there are many bargains to be had in the medium grade of goods that are the means of drawing patronage from all walks of life. For those who embrace those goods suitable for the man of moderate means as well as for those occupying high stations in life. Throughout the entire establishment the most reasonable prices prevail on all articles, whether they be of the very highest and most elaborate design or the plain, substantial goods. ad of one of the most prominent firms of this section. This firm, under C. Barr & Co., does business in a full line of goods and transact a very lucrative business. They have both bill and prompt attention given orders coming from their customers at the lowest prices that can be had and to do this he must conduct his business on an exclusively cash basis. This fact no hardship on the buyer as the additional profit that is charged to apply to inter-account is removed. This firm and the product rock-bottom figures. Mr. Barr, corn, oats, bran, chops, chicken feed, cotton seed, meal. He deals in all kinds of retail and deliveries are made at all times. Mr. Barr, date business man in all things and has the welfare of his city always at heart.

ISTA CREAMERY CO. Vista Creamery Company named throughout the city because of its products. They are of the finest quality of milk and cream to be had and are manufacturers of cream. Now that the summer is coming on dealers and beginning to think of where to purchase their supplies of cream, remember that the Vista Creamery is able to give the best for the least. Demand promptly. This company gets their supply of milk from some of the best Jersey milk cows in the state of Texas. This is believed to be in securing the best milk on the market and to better satisfy their end at the same time advanced interests. This company has the reputation of being a creamery to the original of excellence that it entails its organization. This company was incorporated for many years ago and is now equipped with the best of machinery. The office is located on the north side of Throckmorton and is between the offices of Anderson, one of the city's best men in the city, president, Mr. Bernie L. Anderson, and treasurer, and Mr. Wren, superintendent. This company is doing excellent work in giving excellent service to all business houses and thousands of homes. The Vista Creamery operates its water plant, which has recently been established at a cost of approximately $100,000. This plant is a sewer system, and when this is completed there will be little to do to make North Fort Worth an ideal place for men in any circumstance in life. The people of the city are justly proud of the school and church facilities. A new school building has been built at a cost of $100,000, and almost every religious denomination is represented by the ten churches that are to be found in this city. The greatest advantage in living in North Fort Worth, however, is that of the numerous business possibilities. There are already a large number of business houses and all of them are making money. Chances are open for all kinds of factories and industries and inducements will be offered to those who see these adjuncts to a permanent city. The country directly contiguous to North Fort Worth represents one-seventh of the live stock industry in the United States, and there is not the least doubt but that the city is now the sixth largest live stock market in the country if not the fifth. The Vista Creamery in this line of business as well as in drawing new capital into the city, all of which are well understood to the city all of which are well understood to the city all of which are well understood to the city.

St. Louis, Kansas City, Chicago and St. Joseph. They work independent of the rulings of the Live Stock exchange and can save you money on expenses in consigning livestock to them as well as make you money on the sales. They see that the interest of every patron is looked after carefully and all telephone or telegram charges are paid by them. It is the idea of the heads of the firm that if the cattle service by them they will eventually be able to break through stringency rulings that have been made by the exchanges. The exchange rules commission which went into effect January 1, 1900, have announced $5 a car on sheep and hogs; $12 to $18 a car on cattle, and do not pay telephone and telegram charges. The North Texas Livestock Commission company charge $5 a car on sheep and hogs and $12 a car on cattle. The officers of this company are J. P. Dargott, president and general manager; J. T. Day, vice president, and B. Burnett, secretary. These gentlemen are well known among the livestock men of the country. Their office is located in rooms 215-216 in the Livestock Exchange building.

CAMPBELL BROS. & ROSSON, INC. Among the most enterprising commission firms in North Fort Worth as well as Kansas City and St. Louis must be mentioned the firm of Messrs. Campbell Bros. & Rosson. They have been established here since the packing industry started as well as having spent twenty-five years in the northern markets and have been very successful in the business. They adopted their standard trade mark of three arrows and wherever they are seen on the stationery they imply skill, dispatch and reliance. This slogan, by the way, is religiously lived up to as is attested by any one that has ever had dealings with the house. In fact, they give as reference "Every body that knows us" and it would be hard indeed to find anyone that would have any doubts as to the fact that they have had the best wishes for the house of Campbell Bros. & Rosson. They make the local house their headquarters, although they maintain large offices in St. Louis and Kansas City and are represented in all other markets. The officers of the company are Messrs. James H. Campbell, president, National Live Stock Yards, Ill., George W. Campbell, vice president, Kansas City, John K. Rosson, secretary and treasurer, and J. T. Day, secretary. Their office is located in room 215 in the Livestock Exchange building.

WAPLES-PAINTER CO. The interests of the city of Fort Worth are as much or more fully represented than any of her many up-to-date facilities. These interests are represented by no firm better than by the Waples-Painter company. The office of this concern is located on the southwest corner of Main and Grove streets in North Fort Worth. It is not one of the ordinary concerns of its kind in the city, but is situated in the part of the city growing the more rapidly than any other. It handles a full line of lumber, shingles, sashes, doors, blinds, and all other hardware, bar, wire, rubber, and all other necessities for the home-seeker.

EVANS, SNIDER BUELL CO. If you have live stock to sell or if you are in the market for stockers or feeders transact your business through the firm of which this article is a short sketch and feel assured that you are receiving the best service possible. The Evans, Snider Buell company is a pioneer in this line of trade in this section and has kept to its original high standard of excellence in the passage of years. Offices are maintained in Chicago, Omaha, St. Louis and Kansas City as well as in Fort Worth. Thus the company is in close touch with the market.

INTERSTATE COMMISSION CO. The Interstate Commission company is one of the best equipped concerns in the city of Fort Worth to handle any business in the live stock line that you may have. They understand their business thoroughly and have specially fitted men in charge of each of their several departments. The company is and St. Louis. Any references needed can be had from the First National bank of Fort Worth, the Stock Yards National bank in North Fort Worth, or W. B. Worsham & Co., bankers, Henrietta. Mr. J. W. Conway has charge of the office for this branch and is in every way qualified and competent to hold this position of trust. Messrs. French, Webb and Miller personally sell all live stock consigned to the firm. Their office is No. 115 in the Live Stock Exchange building in North Fort Worth. Four years ago this company adopted as its motto "Our Service the Best." Since that time they have spared no effort in any department, to make this absolutely true. Today we believe it can be said truly that this company is "Best known because best." They have offices at Fort Worth, Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis and St. Joseph, thus embracing all of the principal markets of the United States. All the world loves the winner, and this concern today numbers among its patrons, over 15,000 of the substantial farmers and stockmen of the south and west.

This company was organized and incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000 a little more than a year ago under the name that it now bears. The company maintains offices in Fort Worth, St. Louis, Kansas City and Chicago. The success of this concern today numbers among its patrons, over 15,000 of the substantial farmers and stockmen of the south and west.

MARLOW'S STABLES When one hires a livery rig of course the best is what is wanted and the place where the best appearing rigs and the finest stock are kept is the place that will be preferred. Such a place is the Marlow's Stables, conducted by Mr. William H. Marlow at 411-13-15 Rusk, corner of East Fourth street. He has one of the best managed and one of the best equipped livery, saddle and boarding stables in the city. It is the nearest stable to the leading hotels and prompt attention is given orders of all kinds. Mr. Marlow has the latest and best rubber-tired rigs of all kinds. His supply of buggies, phaetons, carriages, etc., is large and all of the best make. They can be hired together with some of the finest horses in the city for the lowest rates. Horses are boarded at a price that makes a private conveyance possible for men in almost any walk of life and in their handsome new quarters establishments are kept in the best condition free of extra charge. TEXAS PRINTING COMPANY This firm named after the grand old state of Texas bears out by actual display that they are fully as much entitled to the epithet of "Grand Old" as the state. Their reputation for excellent work, absolute satisfaction in local or sectional, pervades the whole state and extends into other states. The Texas Printing Company is one of the old established firms in Fort Worth and has been a successful undertaking from the beginning because they did as represented and make reasonable prices. They are manufacturing stationery, printers and book binders. Their place of business is located on the corner of Ninth and Rusk streets, where a magnificently equipped plant is maintained. They make rubber stamps, pamphlet stamping, have in stock all kinds of blank books, sectional filing cabinets, loose leaf ledgers, etc., and sell them at the lowest possible price. The firm are the well-known and popular manager of the business. He is a practical man in every sense of the word and knows how to manage the business in order to best advantage in a manner to satisfy all. He has been in the printing and binding business for years and has a state-wide reputation for integrity and ability.

COLP LIVERTY & CARRIAGE CO. Among the high class establishments of Fort Worth, it is our desire to give prominent mention to the concern whose name appears at the head of this sketch. The Colp Liverty & Carriage company, of which Mr. D. E. Colp is the popular proprietor, is an established concern in Fort Worth, and in their handsome new quarters at 705-707 Rusk street are better than ever prepared to cater to every want of their patrons. Their rigs are the best, stylish and right up to now. When you see an unusually smart turnout it is safe to predict that it came from Colp's. As a business man Mr. Colp ranks high, and the success that he has made in his business is a testimony in itself that it is to his hosts of friends throughout the city. If in doubt try Colp's, you can make no mistake.

KNOPF, FRERICHS & CO. Mr. Hermann Frerichs is the local representative of the famous cotton buying concern doing business in Fort Worth under the firm name of Knopf, Frerichs & Co. They have magnificently equipped offices in rooms 214-15 of the Fort Worth National Bank building. Mr. Frerichs is known as one of the largest and most prominent buyers of the staple located in this city. His agents cover all of the cotton territory in the state and he has every facility for transacting a most successful business in every way. There is no business man in the city who has a greater reputation for reliability or straight dealing than Mr. Frerichs. The usual conditions are employed by him and correspondence is solicited. All patrons are accorded courteous attention and every business deal is handled with the utmost care.

L. EPPSTEIN & SON "The home of good whiskeys," built upon the firm foundation of honesty, reliability and purity, is a fitting synonym of the establishment of L. Epstein & Son. This concern with a large branch at St. Paul, has been established in business since 1872. Their present location in this city is 1010-12 Houston street, which place of business they have occupied for a little over a year. They are wholesale liquor dealers on a large scale. Among other first class brands "Jersey Cream," "Tarpon Club," "Myrtle Spring" stand out prominently. Besides handling these excellent grades

PROOF OF PROGRESS

The Telegram so often has something to say about Fort Worth's business growth and the progressiveness of its merchants that these editorial columns alone might be taken as a contemporaneous chronicle of the city's development.

The Telegram is never more gratified than when it has an opportunity to publish some new proof of the Panther City's present greatness and future promise, and in addition it believes it advantageous to occasionally summarize past achievements as an incentive to further accomplishment.

Such is the purpose of this enlarged issue of The Telegram, which presents a compact summary of Fort Worth's claims as a city and a descriptive directory of the leading business firms. North Fort Worth's claims have not been forgotten, and the residence suburbs are also given space.

There has been no attempt to prepare a bulky so-called "special edition," with a wilderness of fulsomely-written descriptive matter, in which the reader is likely to be lost or wearied before even beginning to find what he may wish to know, but the idea aimed at has been one of comprehensiveness, in concise form, ample illustration, and close adherence to actual facts.

As a result of this attempt The Telegram believes that those of its readers who may wish to send copies of this issue to friends in other states will succeed in their purpose of securing interest in Fort Worth better than they may have done with even any preceding publication of this character.

Fort Worth business firms have responded liberally to this opportunity for advertising their city, and the reader who helps further circulate this number will aid them in this patriotic work.

YELLOW JOURNALISM THAT IS GOLDEN

William R. Hearst is known from one end of this country to the other as a fine type of the yellow journalist. The man and his methods in obtaining and serving up the news have long been targets for all sorts of criticism, and in some instances to considerable abuse. But the people who have been making those criticisms do not know the real William R. Hearst.

There is an incident connected with the big earthquake out at San Francisco recently that has not been made public, and it is an incident which well portrays William R. Hearst to be the veritable prince of yellow journalists. It was the morning after the earthquake, when the once proud city was clothed in sack cloth and ashes and the people were mourning their dead and the destruction of the property. The San Francisco Call had published a notice asking all members of its staff to meet at a certain place the next morning, if there was a next morning, and the various newspaper employees of the ill fated city were wondering what on earth they were to do when the newspaper business along with every other had been so completely wrecked. It was about this time that the wires flashed a message from New York to W. F. Bogart, business manager of the San Francisco Examiner. It said: "Keep all the people in all departments on full pay no matter what happens, W. R. Hearst."

The San Francisco disaster involved the loss of a fortune to William R. Hearst. The Hearst building, the house he had made for his favorite paper was lying in a pile of complete ruins. The fine machinery employed in the publication of this great paper was but a mass of smashed ruins, the great library was gone—everything that had been gathered together, with so much labor and expense to make the Examiner, had been wiped out in the twinkling of an eye, and the great money maker of all the Hearst papers had been as completely put out of business as if it had never existed.

And the San Francisco Examiner is now being printed on the press of its youngest daughter and namesake at Los Angeles. There is no work for the army in its employ at San Francisco. There is no space for the special writers, there is nothing for the artists to do, there is little being done in the mechanical department until the great plant can again be established, and the force in the business office is kept busy explaining why the paper cannot accept and print advertising. In fact there is mighty little doing except in the payment of salaries. This is going on just the same as if the San Francisco Examiner were enjoying its usual prosperity and coining money for its owner every day in the week.

If Hearst shed any tears over the fate of the Examiner they were shed in secret. If he sat down and moaned over his great losses the world is none the wiser, and he did not leave the people in his employ to suffer as did the millionaire owners of other San Francisco papers. Spreckels of the Call, and De Young of the Chronicle—what did they do in this trying emergency? Ask the men in their employ who had been with them for years and given so much toward the upbuilding of those great enterprises. They were left homeless and friendless to get out of a bad situation the very best they could. That is what happened to the Spreckels and De Young employes, while every soul on the Hearst payroll is walking up to the pay window in a little rented building in Oakland every Saturday night and drawing pay just the same as if the magnificent old Examiner was still doing business at the old stand.

That is the kind of a yellow journalist William R. Hearst is, and it is a type of journalism that is truly golden. He may have his own ideas as to how his great enterprises shall be conducted, but he also has some ideas as to what is proper between man and man, and in that respect William R. Hearst wins the admiration of the world. He may be a yellow journalist, but he is the prince of the craft and entitled to the plaudits of all who admire true manliness on the part of the man.

OUR RABID NORTHERN FRIENDS

Some of the people of the north are indignant over the action of the people of the south in protesting over Father Sherman's march to the sea, and are expressing themselves in a manner that will cause additional resentment in the south. The Chicago Chronicle says: "We only regret that the President, after calling off Father Sherman's trip, had not sent a whole division down there to march back and forth between Chattanooga and Savannah for the rest of his term."

Just why the esteemed Chronicle would flaunt such a red flag in the face of the southern people is past all comprehension. Certainly, there is no occasion for attempting to revive the memories of that famous march, for there are many evidences on the scene of operations still in existence. There is no danger of the south forgetting that march, and there is no occasion for rubbing it in. The war is over, the people have turned away from its awful memories and are striving to build up all the waste places. It was very bad taste for Father Sherman to undertake the trip in the manner that characterized his action, and the President was right in putting a stop to the foolishness.

If members of John H. Morgan's old Kentucky command should start on a march up through Ohio and Pennsylvania it would be the signal for turning out the state militia and the basis of frantic appeals to Washington for protection from the marauders. And a band of Confederate veterans in the old uniform marching constantly in the vicinity of the Chronicle office in Chicago would cause that esteemed publication to go out one or two conceptions fit regularly into another.

The best thing for the entire country is to let the memories of the war die a natural and peaceful death.

Public sentiment in Fort Worth is strongly in favor of a market house, and the action of the mayor in vetoing the efforts made to provide such an institution is eliciting much unfavorable comment. There may be many other things badly needed by Fort Worth at this time, but this market house project has long been dear to the hearts of the people.

Prof. W. D. Williams has been chosen as superintendent of the Fort Worth city schools, and it is believed a wise choice has been made in his promotion. Prof. Williams is a man who will give the situation the most careful and conscientious consideration.

Now that the spring rains are gone for a few days, north Texas will get ready to harvest one of the best small grain crops in all her history. The oat crop is unusually good, and report says the wheat is considerably above the usual average.

In a choice between Dallas and Fort Worth as the place for holding the next democratic state convention, there should be absolutely no hesitancy in bringing the convention to this city.

Attorney General Davidson will see the attorney general of Missouri in regard to evidence against the Standard Oil trust, and it is evident from this fact that the attorney general is loathing his anti-trust gun clear to the muzzle.

The latest developments in the big penalty suits filed at Austin seem to indicate that it is to be a fight to the bitter end. The assistant attorney general declared that all peace negotiations are off and he will proceed to fight the matter out along the original lines.

Is the Presidential idea of immunity for the individual and also apply in the case of the Standard Oil corporation? This is a point it would be well to have settled in advance so as to properly curb public anticipation.

More dirt has just been broken in Fort Worth for new and handsome business buildings on Main street, and there are more to follow. Fort Worth is the fastest growing proposition today that there is in all Texas.

It is said the port of Galveston shows a greater growth and development during the past year than any other port in the country. And that is a most gratifying showing. The time is coming when this great Texas port will lead all the others.

The people of Fort Worth should proceed to get very busy in the matter of obtaining the next state democratic convention. Popular sentiment is now turning very strongly in this direction.

The Fort Worth Factory Club has held its annual election of officers and made some wise selections. Now let the good work in hand be pushed with the old-time Fort Worth spirit.

The activity betrayed by the state republican executive committee at this time should excite no apprehension. Chairman Lyon is simply getting ready to put his private little machine in good working order.

Most people who make hay while the sun shines make it for others.

THE TEXAS PRESS

Fort Worth citizens seem to have a desire to fill office. It is said that there are seventeen men who want to be aldermen in that city—all candidates for the same place. What a patriotic set they must be in that city, to be sure!—Terrell Transcript.

The esteemed Terrell paper seems to have lost sight of the fact that the season for municipal offerings is over, and there are no candidates for aldermen now. The seventeen patriots referred to reside in North Fort Worth, and they are applicants for the position of superintendent of the water system of that city.

Colonel Sterrett thinks the next legislature will be confronted with a demand that a blanket primary law shall be enacted and that the advocates of such a law will be divided into opposition camps, fighting each other as fiercely as though the blanket could be made large enough to cover all.—San Antonio Express.

The indications are there is going to be a lively tilt over the blanket primary issue, but the major portion of public sentiment seems to be in favor of that measure.

The railroads of Texas have as much right to justice as the humblest citizen of Texas, and the humblest citizen has as much right to justice as the richest railroad. It isn't safe to elect any man to office who wants to represent a class or to oppose a class in office.—Sherman Register.

The people of Texas must elect a man governor who is big enough and broad enough to do justice to all interests. No man should be elevated to this high and important position whose chief plank is war upon any Texas interest.

Over 1,300 cars of cattle have been shipped from San Angelo to territory points during this month. It is thought that the heaviest shipments are over, but no one can really tell until the month has passed. Cattlemen did not ship as many cattle as they expected to ship owing to the heavy and desirable rains.—San Angelo Standard.

Timely rains over a great deal of the Texas range country had the effect of considerably reducing the number of cattle shipped to outside pastures, but there has been a big run. For a time the railways were seemingly taxed to furnish the necessary shipping facilities.

Penalties aggregating the sum of $17,103,000 are sought to be obtained from the big meat packers and other corporations against which suits have been filed by the state. County Attorney John Brady is interested and if the state is successful he will get a large share of the fees and wear store clothes.—Austin Tribune.

Was not the attorney general able to handle the big penalty suits without aid from the county attorney? What has become of that large force of office assistants? The prospect of big fees should never be an inducement for litigation, for it is always contrary to the spirit and intent of the law.

It may be said in reply to the declaration of a capious doctor, that the government expends more money in looking after the health of sheep and cattle than in caring for the health of the people, that the cattle and sheep are not in a position to hire doctors for themselves.—Galveston Tribune.

And in some instances it might prove the same way with the people. But the functions of government should not be brought down to such a low level. This thing of running to Washington with every little ill afflicting the body politic is a procedure that will call for sincere repentance in the end.

The various candidates for governor "announced" last year, they told what they would do if they were governor at the Dallas banquet; for months they have been quietly pursuing the dear voter in his accustomed haunts, and now they tell us that they will "open" the campaign in a few days. One thing is sure with all of them, except one perhaps, their farewell tours will not be quite so long drawn out.—San Antonio Express.

It will be a relief to the people when the campaign for governor is over. It has been too long and wearisome, and the candidates who have been in the field so long find there is little that can be done to arouse enthusiasm.

CHARACTERIZED AS OUTRAGE

The state of Texas has brought suit against the Fort Worth live stock exchange and all its members, the Fort Worth Stock Yards company, Armour & Co., and Swift & Co. It is sought by the state to forfeit their charters and permits to do business in Texas and the penalties sued for aggregate to $160,000 in each case. The plaintiffs' petition alleges that the above named companies fix and maintain the price and charge of selling and buying live stock so as to prevent free competition. The way that it has been carried on is an outrage and should have been stopped some time ago. We as a nation claim to be free when we are as far from it almost as the East is from the West. When a man ships a car of live stock to market he first has to pay an enormous price for standing room for his stock in the stock yards. He next is compelled to pay somebody to sell them for him when he could if it were not for trusts and combines sell them and get just as much as any commission company. In other words, if we understand it rightly, he pays the commission company $12 a car to receive a check from the buyer and write him another less all expenses. Now if the stockmen of Texas have not enough sense to receive a check direct from the buyer instead of paying some one else to write them another check, they had better quit raising only enough stock to supply the demand of their immediate neighborhood.

The corporations sued say it was begun by Attorney General Davidson for political effect, but we don't know about that. But we do know that if these suits are won and this robbery ended that it will have a great political effect. We only hope they will succeed in winning the rights sued for.—Brady Enterprise.

THE DESTRUCTION OF STANFORD

While the individual sufferers from earthquake and fire on the Pacific coast have first claim on our sympathy, the disaster that has come to Stanford university will cause many a heartache. It is pathetic that the glorious structures, dedicated to liberal education and raised to the memory of the founder's dead son, a benefaction inspired by love, should be destroyed by a convulsion of nature such as they were built to withstand. In beauty of design and charm of surroundings there was no American university like Stanford.—New York Sun.

CASES MAY BE DISMISSED

Suit has been filed against the Fort Worth live stock exchange by the attorney general, through his assistant, Jewell P. Lightfoot, formerly of Pittsburg, charging a violation of the anti-trust laws and asking penalties of $116,360 in each of several cases. It is thought by leading attorneys that the cases will be dismissed.—Glimmer Echo.

Ours is truly a great and glorious country; it produces spring chickens all the year around.

HARNES CURE FOR SNORING

Copyrighted, 1906, by the New York Evening Telegram (New York Herald Company). (From an Occasional Correspondent.) Special Dispatch to The Telegram.

DURANDT, Mich., April 28.—Nearly every member of Timothy McKubbin's family had complained bitterly to him about his fearful snoring. They told him that it was fierce, past belief, and that, inasmuch as it was growing worse and worse, they would have to abandon the lower part of the house, where he slept, and take refuge in the upper regions, out of hearing of his nightly performances.

They not only said this, but carried out the program and left Tim all alone down stairs.

This troubled him, for he did not want to be a nuisance to his family, and he set about planning some manner in which he might be cured of his disturbing practice.

He had heard, as every one else has, that if the mouth be kept closed while one is asleep snoring is an impossibility, and he thought that, inasmuch as he could not retain possession of his will power after slumber took possession of him, he would try artificial means to bring about the desired result and in pursuance of this resolution went down to the harness maker and had a halter made for his own personal use.

There was a cap for the top of the head, coming down to about the ears, so that it would be sure not to slip off, and then a piece like a small cap was fastened over the chin. These pieces were attached to each other by straps and buckles and when the caps were in place and the straps drawn up tight the mouth had to stay shut, and McKubbin confidently hoped that his snoring d.e.s or nights, would be over for good.

He retired early before the rest of the family had gone to bed the first night that he had his muzzle in use in order that they might be surprised that he did not break up their evening and drive them away from the house, but he had his feet, and yet, when they went and called to him, thinking he might be ill, he awoke no response.

About midnight, however, he awoke from his slumbers and remembering at once the manner in which he had strapped up his chin wondered whether it had been of any use—whether he had snored as badly as ever or not.

After he had lain awake a few moments he noticed that a gleam of light was coming in one of the windows, and falling on the opposite wall, and on rising to see what it could be discovered that the woodshed standing near the house on his right had been blown down, and John Vanbunder, who was in flames, he commenced hurriedly throwing on his clothes, and while doing so thought it would be a good plan to get out, but could not, of course, utter a word.

Then he stopped dressing a moment

PUBLIC OPINION

The Chicago Tribune thinks President Roosevelt acted impulsively and hastily in refusing the gift of the Hamburg-American Steamship company for San Francisco. The Tribune says:

San Francisco is the most cosmopolitan city in America. There are representatives of all countries and races among its population. Some of the greatest sufferers are not American citizens, or, if so, are of recent adoption. The German, Portuguese, Italian, Chinese, Mexican and South American nationalities are largely represented. There will be special propriety in having relief measures extended over the whole civilized world. While the American people may have too much pride to appeal to foreigners for assistance, it seems almost churlish to refuse help in so sacred a cause when it is freely and spontaneously tendered. The offered contribution of the Hamburg-American line was simply a recognition of its obligations to the American people. Much of its revenue is derived from between this country and Europe, and American freight forms a large part of its cargoes. There would be special propriety in a contribution from that line for the relief of American citizens, and the managers themselves appreciate it when they make their offer. To have it thrown back in their faces must be surprising to them. It is not in accordance with the treatment that is usually given to contributions in such a cause. "The Lord," it is said, "loveth a cheerful giver." The amount of the gift should not be too closely scanned nor should it be hastily rejected. It is not for any man, or even for any magistrate, to say that gifts offered in such a spirit and for a noble purpose will not be accepted.

Under the heading "Two Wrongs and No Right" the New York Times, discussing the coal situation, thinks the stage has been reached where both parties seem in the wrong to a third party. It says:

Neither party will do well to carry the controversy too far, for both are vulnerable. The miners deem themselves entrenched behind the law forbidding mining without license. But the operators ought to be able to tempt a few miners, and a few will be able to earn almost wealth if they work as hard as they can, instead of as hard as the union has allowed. A few hundred miners would keep busy an army of rough labor. And it is possible to repeal the miners' license law. The operators would do well to walk warily when congress is sitting and Mr. Hughes is about to ask them questions. The temper of the time is different from that when both sides tempted public toleration before. A policy of revenge would be hard to stop. Prudence is a good watchword. Idle labor, idle mines, idle railways and a public clamor for coal make a combination to which the torch of anger ought not to be applied.

WHAT WORRIES DOWIE

Presumably it is not the prospect of being permanently barred from the pulpit so much as the possibility that he may be barred from the profits that is worrying Dowie.—Detroit Free Press.

LOOK FOR IMMUNITY

Unless the interstate commerce commission is exceedingly alert the coal roads will slip in some immunity information.—Detroit News.

THE THREE BUTCHERS

This is the season of the year when the "tree lover," who knows nothing about nature and her ways, gets out his axe and saw and proceeds to massacre his trees, under the delusion that he is "gruning" them.

to take off his muzzle, but the straps and buckles were so new and stiff that he could not move it. He then grew terribly nervous and tugged at it so violently that he even slipped one of the straps a hole tighter in the buckle and this, as though he were smothering with his jaws pressed so firmly together. But it would not do to neglect the fire because of the straps and buckles, and he ran up stairs to awaken the others. But, though he wakened them, he failed to get them out. None of their windows were so situated that they could see the reflection from the fire, and when they were suddenly awakened from some one pounding on their doors and uttering a warning, strangled and muffled moans, they did nothing but scream and cover up their heads.

McKubbin then ran down stairs, out into the street and over to Vanbunder's front door, where he pounded loudly, trying to shout fire, but only able to make a dreadful moaning sound. Vanbunder heard the pounding, but not the moaning, and ran hastily to the door and opened it. A strange light met his gaze and stranger sounds greeted his ears. A barefooted, coatless, hatless man, with a queer rigging on his head, stood there, making wild gesticulations with his hands and uttering meanwhile the strangest and most mournful sound that Vanbunder had ever heard.

It was too much for the startled man's bravery and composure and he turned and fled, but McKubbin had had enough of foolishness from his own family and was in no mood to put up with any more of it from an outsider and, besides that, a man whom he was trying to befriended, so he took after the flying Vanbunder and they raced through the house as fast as they could go in the semi-darkness, tumbling over chairs and furniture and doors till at last Vanbunder reached his own room and, hearing the moaning maniac still in pursuit, sought refuge under the bed, while Mrs. Vanbunder made the walls ring with screaming.

But McKubbin's blood was up now and making a quick plunge, he sized up the situation and, seeing that they were being drawn under the bed and pulling him out from his place of refuge, he threw him over his shoulder, made his way through the disordered house again, out of the front door and around the building and threw him down on the ground in plain sight of the burning woodshed.

Vanbunder then realized that same one was trying to help him, and, looking at his friend in the freight, saw who it was and what the matter with him was. Running his hand down McKubbin's pocket he drew out the knife that the muzzled man ought to have used long ago, cut the straps and freed his jaws, and the two men, then peeling in unison, soon called help enough around them to put out the fire.

McKubbin will use the muzzle no more and the family will continue to sleep up stairs. LE SUEUR LYRE.

VERGET THAT BING

IF WE WOULD

If we would but check the speaker
When he spoils a neighbor's name;
If we would but help the erring
Ere we utter words of blame;
If we would, how many might we Turn from paths of sin and shame.

Ah, the wrongs that may be rightened
If we would but see the way!
Ah, the pain that might be lightened
Every hour of every day;

If we would but hear the pleadings
Of the hearts, that go astray!

Let us step outside the stronghold
Of our selfishness and pride,
Let us lift our fainting brothers,
Let us strengthen ere we chide;

Let us, ere we blame the fallen,
Hold a light to cheer and guide.

Ah, how blessed, ah, how blessed Earth would be if we'd but try
Thus to aid and right the weaker,
Thus to check each brother's sight
Thus to walk in duty's pathway
To the better life on high.

In each life, however lowly,
There are needs of mighty good;
Still we shrink from soul's appeal
With a timid "if we could."

But the God who judgeth all things Knows the truth is, "If we would." —Ann.

MOONSHINE & MUSTINGS

BY SID BARTON

Ask an' it shall be given—if you've eyes full.

Too bad, too bad. Just as we learn how to pronounce Witte's name he is succeeded by Garmykin.

"I don't want to see that young brat around here again. You tell him to keep away. Why, a child of his age should never be allowed to remain out after o'clock."

"He's not as young as that father. He was in last July."

"Was he? Well, he'll reach 23 this year in May."

Somebody is booming Hobson for President. It's either some Atlanta woman or Andy Carnegie.

FORT WORTH UNIVERSITY
 The people of Fort Worth are justly proud of Fort Worth university. This institution co-educational character, started in 1841 under the name of Texas Wesleyan college, has grown rather small beginning, so grown and added to its curriculum that it now includes all the studies and departments usually embraced in the university course. In 1889, under an amended charter the name was changed to the Fort Worth university, the purpose being to found such an institution in the southwest as should receive instruction in any department either of college or university without leaving the state. The School of Law and the School of Medicine were organized in 1893 and 1896 respectively. The success of the school was an assured fact from the very inception. In 1896 the school was found to seek other and better quarters than could be had on the campus proper. For this purpose a large and fine building was erected at the corner of Seventh and Tenth streets and is known as the Fort Worth Medical College.

The Fort Worth university embraces the following schools: I. College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, II. Academy of Music, III. Normal School, IV. School of Law, V. Military School, VI. Medical School, VII. Law School, VIII. School of Commerce.

In the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences the courses offered are (1) Classical, (2) Scientific, (3) Literary, (4) Philosophical. The Academy is designed to prepare students who are not thoroughly equipped, for any reason to enter the college proper and advance their work more advantageously and quickly. The Normal Course is offered to train young men and women for the profession of teaching. In the School of Arts instruction is given in instrumental and vocal music, elocution, oratory, physical culture, drawing and painting, each of these several departments having its own special teachers. The Medical School with its four years' course, trains men and women for the doctors' profession; the Law School with a two years' course, fits the student to enter the legal profession; finally the School of Commerce offers excellent instruction in stenography, typewriting and book-keeping and fits one for a business career. In a word the school not only gives a liberal education to the student, but gives a practical training as well. It is therefore a university in the true sense of the word. The Fort Worth university has already more departments than have some schools which are perhaps more widely known. Moreover, other courses will be given as occasion may demand. It is the hope and belief that in the near future instruction of a more technical nature will be offered, such as engineering in its various phases. Indeed, a beginning has already been made in this line by adding mechanical drawing as an elective in the scientific department.

Fort Worth university has become widely known, not only through Texas, but through the surrounding country as well, by its uniform success in the state oratorical contests. The university is one of six members of the state oratorical association. Out of eight annual contests so far held, the university has won four firsts, three seconds and one third.

Athletics
 Though the purpose of the institution is to afford instruction and cultivation of the mental powers, yet the development of the physical body is not neglected, and athletics are encouraged, thoroughly and yet not to such an extent as to lose sight of the true purpose and function of a university.

TANDY'S DEPOT COLLEGE
 On the third floor of the Stripling building is operated the Tandy Depot College, the only telegraph college in Fort Worth. This school is for the instruction of depot masters and other railway work. Telegraph, typewriting, station work, etc., is taught. The college has proper facilities for instruction and cannot be excelled. Only experienced teachers are employed and the practical as well as the theoretical side is taught. Full information will be given by the president.

Mr. Bert D. Tandy is the president and treasurer of the company, and Mr. Albert M. Tandy, the secretary. Both gentlemen have had practical experience and are competent in every way. It has been their aim to provide a school that will fit men for the practical work.

The management also call attention to the fact that they are in touch with experienced operators not graduates of their school and can save railway superintendents' time and money by supplying competent men on short notice. More than fifty students have just been placed in desirable positions and the school actually has more calls than they can fill. Experienced men temporarily out of work, or wishing to better their positions, will find the Tandy Depot College a splendid medium.

GUNN-APPLEGATE CO.
 It is a fact that some business firms for several years after they are established make very slow progress, while others thrive and prosper from the start. With a capital stock of $10,000 the firm of Gunn-Applegate Co. was established a year ago last January. They are wholesale dealers in butter, eggs and poultry and also handle fruits and vegetables in car lots. They are now located at 1402 Houston, having found their former quarters, 306 West Weatherford, too small to accommodate their growing business. Realizing that honest dealing and intelligent handling constitute the principle elements of a prosperous business they short career of this firm has been remarkably successful. They enjoy a large patronage among the country merchants and shippers, and, as they market country products in all the large consuming centers of the country they are in a position to pay the highest prices for produce.

The members of the firm seeing that Fort Worth with its excellent facilities as a distributing point, its fast developing local trade and the growing importance of the poultry industry among the farmers in this section offered great inducements for business of the kind they are engaged in, were quick to seize the opportunity and judging from their past success they will not regret their move.

THE AMERICAN SEED CO.
 The seed business is one of vast importance to the farming community in all parts of the world, and especially in this case in a section like Texas, where farmers raise such a diversified crop. A wholesale seed establishment located in Fort Worth that holds an excellent reputation and does a large business is that of the American Seed company. This establishment is located on the corner of Tenth and Houston. They handle seeds of all kinds, including garden, field, alfalfa, cotton, field peas and also deal in incubators, gardeners' supplies, beekeepers' supplies, poultry food and box materials. They are the manufacturers of the Diversification Seed Cabinets and have built up a large business.

The company was incorporated last summer for $15,000 and since that time has been increasing the scope of its operations until it is now known over the entire state. The company guarantees everything leaving their establishment to be as represented. Three assistants are employed in the store and four traveling salesmen are kept constantly on the road.

The officers of the company are Messrs. A. E. Bell, president; F. M. Bell, vice president, and M. A. Benton, secretary and treasurer, all of whom are active in the business at all times. Any reference needed can be had from any bank in the city. Their seeds are always fresh and in good condition and they have established an excellent reputation throughout the city.

THE DELAWARE HOTEL
 One of the best established and largest hotels in the city, and one known over the entire state, is the Delaware, situated on Main, Fourth and Houston streets. The Delaware occupies a very large building and is conducted on the European plan exclusively. The cafe in this hotel is one of the best in the state and is operated by the hotel. The proprietors of the hotel are Messrs. Charles F. Long and Carl R. Evans, both of whom have been identified in the hotel business for a number of years. The present partnership was effected January 1. Mr. Long is manager of the hotel and Mr. Evans has charge of the stewarding end of it. Under the present management the Delaware has become one of the best known European hotels in the South, and is thoroughly up-to-date in every particular. The hotel has 140 rooms, fifty of which are equipped with private baths. A stranger coming to the city and stopping at the Delaware will be assured of a good room, good service and courteous treatment.

 The W. M. Smith Photo Co. is located at 503 1/2 Main street. Mr. Smith has been engaged in the photograph business for a good many years in Chicago and other cities and has made a careful study of all of its phases. He does all kinds of carefully view work, amateur finishing and work along this line. Orders are promptly attended to and he is known as one of the best view makers and interior workers in the city. His reputation is of years' standing, and he is a responsible man in every way.

He does commercial work only, and will give prompt attention to viewling in any of its branches and guarantees satisfaction. One trial is all that Mr. Smith asks. If perfect satisfaction is not then given he is willing and ready to give up the undertaking.

He has been established here but a short time in his present location, but respectfully solicits the patronage of the public.

THE ARCADE
 One of the best known wholesale establishments in the state of Texas in their particular line is "The Arcade" of which Mr. Lee Hagood is the well known and popular proprietor. In the Arcade is to be found everything in the way of crockery, glassware, tinware, hotel supplies, hardware and toys. A retail business is also transacted. Mr. Hagood has been established in this line of business for the past six years, and, although the beginning was small, his concern is now one of the largest of its kind in Texas. This has been brought about by correct business methods and the courteous, satisfactory manner in which business is transacted by Mr. Hagood. His establishment is located at 1204-1206 Main street, where there is to be found one of the finest selections ever put on display.

Correspondence and business is respectfully solicited by the firm and everything leaving the store is guaranteed to be as represented or your money will be refunded cheerfully.

JOHN BURKE & CO.
 You needn't worry if you carry insurance and have a properly written contract. The policy then protects you from loss and it is a nice thing to have something to prevent worry. The insurance business is an important one and is represented by a class of men that are responsible and reliable. Such is the case in Fort Worth, where we have the firm of John Burke & Co., which has been established ten years and does a large business throughout the city. The members of the firm are Mr. John Burke and Mr. L. H. DuBose, and their office is located in the Land Title building, phone 2929. The offices are handsomely furnished and equipped with everything that is necessary for a business of this class. They write fire, tornado, plate glass, liability, life and accident insurance; also represent the American Surety Co., of New York, the largest bonding company in the world. They represent such companies as: the North British & Mercantile, of London and Edinburgh; American Central, of St. Louis; German, of Freeport; American, of Newark, N. J.; Delaware, of Philadelphia; Mercantile Fire and Marine of Boston, all million-are companies. Policies written by them are correct in every way and absolutely insure the one underwritten from loss.

GERNSBACHER BROTHERS
 One of the largest crockery stores in the city of Fort Worth is that of Gernsbacher Brothers, conducted near the corner of Houston and Fifth streets, the numbers being 609-11 Houston street. The firm is composed of Messrs. Henry and Aaron H. Gernsbacher, both men being thoroughly posted on everything that pertains to their line of trade. They handle everything in the way of crockery, queensware, toys, tinware, cutlery, glass and china in a large selection. No complaint has ever been registered concerning their prices and the quality is known to be right. Years of experience in this kind of business has taught the members of the firm what the people want and they are therefore in a position to have in their stock just what you are looking for. Their store is large and well appointed. A number of experienced clerks are kept to cater to the wishes of the patrons of the establishment and it is no trouble whatever for them to show goods. One trial of the store is all that is asked. One trial will convince the most skeptical that too much praise cannot be heaped upon the proprietors for the ber concerns in Fort Worth. For business, responsibility and product quality it is equalled by only a few and excelled by none in this section of the state. The location is on the north-west corner of Vine and El Paso streets, where anything in the line of lumber, lath, shingles, sash, doors, blinds, paints, oils, builders' supplies in hardware and otherwise, cement and barbed wire can be procured. A branch yard is maintained at 2066 Ellis avenue in North Fort Worth, where a complete like stock is always kept. The telephone numbers at the Fort Worth yard are 788, and at the North Fort Worth yard, Southwest 2527. Particular attention is always paid orders received in this manner. Deliveries are made when ordered and satisfaction is guaranteed by the management.

The members of the firm are Messrs. George W. and Bryan W. Owens, gentlemen of a thorough knowledge of the lumber business and with years of experience to back their judgment. They are energetic and progressive and have the good will of all with whom they have had business dealings.

AMERICAN NATIONAL BANK
 The American National Bank was organized and began business in 1893, in a building on the corner of Houston and Second streets, but moved to the present location, which is much more convenient in many ways, about eight years ago. In the dozen years and more that they have been engaged in business in Fort Worth the staffs have been selected with care and through progressive yet at the same time conservative banking methods have succeeded in building the American National Bank to the front in the race of the great financial institutions of this section of the country.

The officers of this institution solicit the patronage of individuals, firms, merchants and corporations throughout the city and surrounding territory. That infinite care in the handling of the funds for the interest of the clients is shown in the following statement issued at the close of business April 6, 1906:

Resources
Loans and overdrafts	$642,225.93
U. S. bonds (par)	165,000.00
Due from U. S. treasurer	7,500.00
Cash and due from banks	469,147.69
Total	$1,274,882.63
Liabilities
Capital stock	$150,000.00
Surplus and profits	68,598.22
Circulation	150,000.00
Deposits—
Individual	$13,175.92
Banks	30,132.89
U. S. Govt.	15,000.00
Total	$1,274,882.63

This shows beyond the shadow of a doubt the stability of the institution. The officers of the bank are all gentlemen of great business capabilities of high reputation, being widely known throughout the city of Fort Worth and the state of Texas. They are: W. G. Newby, president; W. J. Boaz, vice president; G. H. Colvin, cashier, and E. Renfro, assistant cashier. The board of directors embrace representatives from various lines of business, as can be seen from the following list: Messrs. A. J. Roe, A. J. Long, I. H. Burney, B. W. Jones, W. J. Boaz, Ben J. Tillar, W. G. Newby and G. H. Colvin.

The bank is located on the corner of Main and West Sixth streets. The bank is equipped with one of the finest steel burglar and fireproof vaults in the state and will take care of private papers and documents of its customers without charge.

ROSS & HEYER CO.
 The firm of which this article is a sketch does an exclusive piano business at 711 Houston street, where they have on display one of the finest lines of pianos in the state. The company has been known in connection with the piano business in Texas long enough for the public to become convinced of their reliability and trustworthiness. The firm was incorporated in 1905 with a capital stock of $50,000. This places them on a financial foundation that allows them to meet any competition in the state, and they buy their goods in such large quantities that they are able to sell at prices most advantageous to the purchaser. The officers of the company are all men of the highest business standing and well known in their respective homes. They are: O. H. Ross, president; J. F. O'Neal of Houston, vice president; E. V. O'Neal of Mineral Wells, secretary, and Blamark Heyer of Waxahachie, treasurer. Branches in other towns in the state are maintained by the firm with success and the firm promises to soon become one of the best known in the south.

The advantage to be obtained by trading at this place of business is the fact that nothing is misrepresented; in fact, the management guarantees everything to be as they say upon sale.

FORT WORTH PLANING MILL.

An inspection four through the above manufacturing concern would prove an interesting and instructive trip, and should not be attempted by any one who hasn't a long period of leisure time at his disposal, in which to view and examine closely the many different intricate parts of machinery, which have taken the place of and far exceed the best human skill in the turning out of the beautiful work of this mill.

The Fort Worth Planing Mill is located at the corner of Vine and President streets. Both phones, 292. Their facilities and machinery for the manufacturing of office and bank fixtures, stairs, turning and scroll work, sash, doors and frames are unsurpassed. Some of the handsomest interior adornments in the largest and finest residences and business houses in the city owe their beauty and inviting appearance, as well as their strength and durability, to this thriving concern. Besides doing a large business in its home city, this mill ships its product to distant points, and is constantly adding new customers to its already large patronage.

The owners and managers of this prosperous mill, Messrs. W. H. Norris and J. H. Nichols, solicit estimates on all work in their line, having as their inducement in return for any prospective business, the prompt fulfillment of all orders and reasonable prices. These gentlemen have made many friends in both a business and social way, and with the fair and honest dealings which those who come in contact with them receive at their hands, their future success is assured.

TEXAS BREWING COMPANY

A list of the industries of Fort Worth would not be complete without mention of the Texas Brewing company. Breweries generally attract the attention of the visitor, but a closer inspection will reveal the fact that this prominent position it occupies as a manufacturing feature of our thriving city is not alone due to the quality and popularity of its products, but to the extent and varied nature of its employments. From a small start in 1891, covering a block 200x210 feet, this plant has grown until it occupies five acres in the central portion of the town, and its buildings are modern, substantial and attractive.

For many years it has made within its walls everything in which beer is brewed or handled in shipment with the exception of glass bottles only—this means that the steel vats, piping, tanks, barrels, kegs, casks, boxes, crates and articles almost too numerous to mention have all been actually manufactured by the company using them. This naturally gives employment to many more people that would be necessary for brewing only. Union labor is exclusively employed and the company has labor agreements with stationary fitters, brewers, carpenters, painters, cooper, boilermakers, machinists, stationary engineers, drivers, general laborers and others. From 180 to 300 men find constant employment in this establishment, which calls for the distribution of $150,000 yearly to the "inbucket brigade."

It is not usual for breweries to engage in branches of manufacture which are merely incidental to the making of beer—but part of this was rendered necessary in this instance by the inability to have the work done in Fort Worth at the time, and much of it has grown with the industry itself. Texas Brewing company manufactures its own light and has its own waterworks. It uses its own cars for the transportation of its products and is almost complete within itself. For mail and hops it is obliged to go abroad. Texas not as yet producing either, but it is hoped the time will come in the state's development when Texas beer can be brewed from Texas materials.

It is but right and proper that an exponent of "home industry," such as Texas Brewing company, should receive the unstinted patronage of its home people and we bespeak this for it to the fullest measure.

JOHN BURKE & CO.

Occupying a high position among those who handle real estate in Fort Worth is of John Burke & Co. located in the Land Title building on East Fourth street. This firm has been in operation about ten years and has built up a very prosperous business. They negotiate sales and exchange of city property, farms and pasture lands of all kinds, render property and pay taxes, negotiate

He handles everything in the line of hay, grain, coal, etc., and pays especial attention to telephone orders. His phone number is 147. Deliveries are promptly made in every case and precautions taken to insure satisfaction to the purchaser.

Mr. Bibb takes a deep interest in everything that pertains to Fort Worth and is one of the most earnest workers among those who are seeking to better conditions here. He is progressive in his ideas and as liberal as good business methods will permit. His idea is to live and let live and in consequence he is one of the most popular merchants in the city in his line of business. He misrepresents nothing and guarantees everything leaving his yards to be as stated. This strict honesty has gained for Mr. Bibb an enviable reputation among his associates.

MOYERS & CO.

loans, and give special attention to the renting of houses, the collection of rents, etc. The active head of the firm, Mr. John Burke, is one of the best known men in this section and his opinion regarding land values can always be depended upon. The firm has handled some very large deals in the past and are doing their full share toward advancing the growth and prosperity of the city.

S. T. BIBB

On the corner of Lamar and Front streets is a first-class grain and wood establishment, conducted by S. T. Bibb, who has been in this line of business for the last seventeen years, which is a sufficient length of time to gain the confidence and esteem of the public. His treatment of this confidence has justified the large amount of success that has been his. Mr. Bibb is both a wholesale and a retail dealer and fills some of the largest orders in the city.

der the control of Moyers & Co., neatly arranged and appointed and the service is of the most courteous and attentive kind. The chili served here is made of the best meats procurable, and the appetizing manner in which it is put before you makes you long to sample it, and after having tried it, you will be sure to call again. It is natural for men to say, when they desire a plate of good chili or some palatable lunch, "Let's go to Moyers." Mr. Moyers has followed this business for a long time and knows just what the public desires and expects of such a business, and that he is carrying it on satisfactorily is proven by his many customers.

NATATORIUM LAUNDRY

The Natatorium Laundry, of which this article is a short sketch, and of which Mr. N. E. Gambrell is the proprietor, is equipped in every way to turn out some of the best laundry work that has ever been accomplished in the city of Fort Worth. They use an antiseptic process that is governed by the most hygienic principles and insure clean, healthy clothes.

The management announces that they are out to please particular people and that in all cases they deliver the laundry when promised. Only experts in their various lines are employed and this added to the magnificent facilities in the way of machinery that have been installed insures first-class work. The telephone number is 175, on either phone, and prompt attention given all telephone orders. The laundry is located at 105 East Belknap street.

Mr. Gambrell is an experienced man in the laundry business and one that is responsible in every way.

WESTERN NATIONAL BANK

Two years ago when the Western National bank was organized and began business in this city, Fort Worth was, apparently, well equipped with banking institutions. Therefore the incorporators of the new bank hardly expected to declare a dividend at all the first year and a very small one if any the second year. With these facts in view the work of the Western National bank is more than surprising, it is remarkable. In the two years of its history they have made good earnings.

Despite the fact that the bank has been established but such a comparatively small length of time it is considered one of the strongest institutions in the southwest and has a well defined following from the people of this section of the country in all stations in life.

The officers are all reliable men, well and favorably known in the community and back of them they have an array of wealth that insures the Western National bank an ability to withstand any financial panic that may strike the country.

The last annual statement made at the close of business April 11, 1906, shows the following:

TEXAS BOTTLING AND CANDY CO.

Among the most prominent enterprises of their kind in the state is that of the Texas Bottling and Candy Company, situated at 1008-1010 Calhoun street. The firm is one of the old established institutions of the city and holds the confidence of the entire business world. They handle shelled pecans and are manufacturers of some of the best candy made in this city, besides being bottlers of the following well known beverages: Beerine, Mineral Water, sodas, ciders, ginger ales, champagne cider, rock candy syrup, etc. The firm are the sole authorized bottlers of Peacock in this city and make a specialty of "Tin Top."

The firm employs about fifty people and have a modern equipped plant in every particular. They not only have an immense trade in the city, but ship all over this section.

is known as an absolutely responsible and thoroughly practical man in every way and none need go farther after they have inspected his list.

Mr. Moody's office is located on Main street in North Fort Worth, most convenient to where the cars stop and he courteously solicits a call from anyone interested in real estate in any form.

This company was organized about a year ago with $30,000 paid up capital. It took over the partnership business of Ford & Isbell.

This company operates a line of six retail yards, located mostly in Southwest Texas, besides conducting a wholesale business in all classes of lumber and shingles from this office. They control the output of three yellow pine mills, having a capacity of twenty million feet annually, and are shipping about two hundred cars monthly to the trade in Texas and the northwest. Their facilities are unsurpassed for making prompt shipments and they have built up a large trade in this section.

The officers of the company are W. B. Ward Jr., president; T. P. Isbell, vice president; H. S. Boykin, secretary, and A. C. Ford, treasurer. All of these are citizens of Fort Worth, with the exception of Mr. Isbell, who lives in Uvalde, Texas, and has charge of the retail interests in that locality.

The general offices of the Palmetto Lumber Company of San Jacinto county are located now in the same office and is an associated concern, the stockholders of the Ford & Isbell Lumber Company holding a large majority of its stock and controlling its entire output. This is a manufacturing plant exclusively operating a large mill in San Jacinto county and owning a large body of timber. It has a capital of $200,000 and A. C. Ford of this company is president.

FRANK SIMPSON

Who is it that does not wish to possess a good picture of a friend, a dear relative or perhaps some loved one gone from sight forever? The picture must be a good one, a good likeness in order to give us perfect satisfaction—a picture in which every lineament is preserved and the expression we know so well brought out and the whole thing true to life. Mr. Simpson's pictures possess these charms and no one is a greater adept than he is in their portrayal. His specialty is portrait work, and in this line he possesses the genius of a true artist. That he is a successful maker of pictures is proven by the satisfaction he has always given his patrons, and by the splendid samples of his work that are on view in his studio. Mr. Simpson is located at 403 1/2 Main street, where he invites all who desire work in the photographing line as a perfect human hands can make it.

CITY PLANING MILL

Anything in the planing mill line is done at the City Planing mill, conducted by Mr. Robert L. Brown, at 210 Rusk street. The city planing mill is equipped with all the modern machinery necessary and can turn out the best work and in the shortest time. Mr. Brown manufactures sash, doors, blinds, mouldings, carvings, etc. He also does wood turning, scroll sawing and general mill work. His fine stair work is made a specialty and has been the means of making for him a greater reputation in this locality even than he had for his other accomplishments. Mr. Brown will be able to furnish low estimates on all work in his line and can promise the best work on any contract undertaken. His reputation in Fort Worth for accuracy, speed and reliability is of the best. His business methods are straight forward and he will live up to any contract, no matter what the cost or sacrifice to himself. He employs only the best workmen and demands of them the best that they can do on all of the work that leaves his place of business. Visitors are invited to visit his magnificently equipped place of business and to see the splendid facilities for doing first class work with which he has surrounded himself.

ANCHOR MILLS

Among the business institutions that have helped to develop Fort Worth, and which give the city its present busy atmosphere, may be mentioned the Anchor flour mills.

An increase from a meager fifty barrels daily capacity twenty-five years ago to the present daily capacity of 600 barrels of flour, 100 barrels of meal is the record of the steady growth and success of this business. The demand for increased capacity as well as new inventions and general improvements being offered to the mill, this mill to be kept in the best of condition with the very best facilities for making Bewley Bros. Anchor Flour and White Swan, first class products in every respect. An elevator at Bon-oke, Texas, one at Krum, Texas, two in Fort Worth, together with a new one in course of construction, provides for this mill a total wheat storage capacity of 350,000 bushels.

The Anchor mills run day and night giving constant employment to about forty people.

Mr. M. P. Bewley, founder, owner and operator of this mill is an energetic, progressive business man who has always had the greatest confidence in the future of Fort Worth. He has not only made a success of his milling business, but his name appears among builders of several other successful enterprises of this city.

ST. IGNATIUS' ACADEMY AND ST. STANISLAUS PAROCHIAL SCHOOL

Two schools of undeniable merit are maintained in Fort Worth for the Catholic young of the city. Both of these institutions are under the charge of the Sisters of St. Mary and are located on Throckmorton street, one on the corner of Twelfth and one at 1214.

The St. Ignatius' academy is a school for young ladies. Both day and boarding pupils are taken and the moral, physical and mental welfare of the students are looked after by Sister Superior Leo and eighteen other sisters. The school is a handsome stone structure in the heart of the city where all of the conveniences of the twentieth century have been supplied.

Every year this institution sends forth young women fully equipped for the battles of life, and the reputation of the academy has not only invaded this but also all of the surrounding states. The curriculum embraces all of the studies taught in the institutions of high learning and the faculty has been selected with the greatest care.

In the common English branch, the conservatory of music, the art and ornamental departments and the domestic economic departments the curriculum is sufficiently strong to meet all of the requirements of after life.

WARE & LELAND

The firm of Ware & Leland has been established since 1858, and has 110 offices. They are brokers in cotton, wool, provisions, stocks and bonds, coffee, etc., and have long enjoyed a most extensive business and an enviable reputation. The firm is composed of Messrs. J. H. Ware, E. F. Leland, C. W. Lee and F. J. Fahay. All of these gentlemen stand in the front ranks of business success and are known for their ability and good business judgment. They are members of the principal exchanges of the country and associate members of the Liverpool Cotton Association. The main offices are in New York and Chicago. With these strong financial institutions in the largest cities in the country, they naturally enjoy a prestige in the financial world that places their standing among the best and their references gilt-edged. They have branch offices in most of the states east of the Mississippi, and just recently extended their wires west from New Orleans through Houston and San Antonio north to Fort Worth. They have private wire communication with New York, New Orleans and Chicago, as well as all principal points throughout the territory aforementioned, which enables them to know at all times the conditions of crops and market fluctuations. The branch office of Messrs. Ware & Leland in this city is located at 108 East Eighth street, in the Fort Worth Metropolitan hotel block, and is under the able management of Mr. H. Van Camp. This gentleman has been here keeps them constantly busy. Mr. Blessing is conveniently located and surrounded with every facility for the successful carrying on of his business. He has studied his occupation carefully for many years. Every improvement which it was possible to make and which would bring his establishment on a still higher standard he was prompt to carry out. This constant forging ahead has brought him to a point where he is enabled to take only a short time, but by his fair and honest treatment of his fellow men he has won a large circle of warm friends.

BLESSING PHOTO SUPPLY CO.

A visit to 215 Houston street, at which place is located the establishment of Mr. S. T. Blessing, will convince anyone the fact that this gentleman is doing a creditable business. He handles photographic and kodak supplies, souvenir cards, kodak albums, etc., and finishes amateur work promptly. In this business he ranks as one of the leaders throughout the state. The possessors of kodaks in this city are indeed numerous. Many hundreds of these pictures are taken almost daily. The Blessing Photo Supply Company gets the cream of this trade, which, with the out-of-town patronage, care with ease of all the trade of Fort Worth and surrounding territory in this line.

THE O. L. GREGORY VINEGAR CO.

This firm operates a large establishment in this city and does business all over the state of Texas, being the Texas branch of the Paducah, Ky. house. This branch was incorporated to do business in this state about one year ago, having a capital stock of $10,000. The officers are Mr. O. L. Gregory, of Paducah, Ky., president; Mr. George T. Dunn, vice president; Mr. Thomas P. Wilkes, secretary; Mr. William R. Dunn, treasurer, and Mr. Frederick E. Detrich, general manager and assistant treasurer. They devote their personal attention to the business and see that everything is transacted in a business-like manner of the highest quality. The O. L. Gregory Vinegar Co. are producers of vinegar, pickles and other table condiments and their products are of the best quality. The output of the company has been kept to its original high standard and their fame has invaded Texas from one end to the other. The office is located at the foot of Monroe street, where callers interested in this line of goods will be welcomed. Correspondence is particularly solicited and prompt attention is paid to all telephone calls sent to S. W. 1080-2 rings. Remember the name, The O. L. Gregory Vinegar Co., when you next buy and be sure you get the best to be had for the least money.

C. R. FIELD

The progress of Fort Worth in all directions is a source of gratification to all who have a pride in their city, and is very noticeable in the business districts of Fort Worth. Here, many new enterprises have started within the last year or two, but none of the old firms have dropped out. One of the first grocery establishments to be opened on the south side was that of Mr. C. R. Field, who is located at 1021 South Main street. He has been conducting this business for the past sixteen years or more and has made a decided success of the enterprise. He handled a full and complete stock of staple and fancy groceries of all kinds and keeps only the best qualities. His prices are at all times right in every respect, and he keeps two delivery wagons busy taking out orders. His patrons receive prompt and courteous attention.

N. A. CUNNINGHAM

Mr. Newton A. Cunningham, who has, step by step, built up his trade, is at present enjoying a patronage which compares favorably with that of many larger concerns. He is a dealer in new and second hand furniture, matting, stoves, crockery, glassware, etc. His establishment is located at 406-408 Houston street, phone 196. Besides the full line of goods which he has for sale, he has to offer those who trade with him courteous treatment, the same price for one and all—the lowest possible—and prompt attention. Visitors to this store will find Mr. Cunningham or some of his assistants ready at all times to escort them through the establishment. They will be sure to find some bargain in the way of furniture for their home or office, or perhaps a stove, matting, crockery or glassware in this large emporium. Whatever their selection, they can rest assured as to quality, as this feature is always the most prominent about goods coming from Mr. Cunningham's store. He has added a new feature to his installation in the type that stands at the head of the business world, all payments cash. (Copyrighted.)

THE CASEY-SWASEY COMPANY

Liquor used by educated people with the usual amount of common sense and the power of a child can be made a benefit to the health instead of a danger. the entire country. They are a firm that has done as much as any other to forward the interests of the growing city of Fort Worth, and are at the head and front of every movement for the benefit and improvement of this city. Mr. Sam Levy is president of the company, which was incorporated in 1894 for $100,000. He is a practical business man of the type that stands at the head of the business world in Fort Worth and one who has by a careful and prudent management of his affairs made a great success of his life. He acts as manager of the large interests of the Casey-Swasey company and gives his personal attention to all matters connected with the firm. He is also president of the National Cigar Machine company of this city. Mr. Charles J. Swasey is vice president of the company. Mr. Jacob Mayer is second vice president, and Mr. Alvin Kramer secretary and treasurer. All of these gentlemen are actively connected with the business. Mr. Kramer is also treasurer of the National Cigar Machine company. retive Gods stores in the state at 703 Houston street. He handles all kinds of Indian, Mexican and Japanese curios and decorations. He also has fish food, gold fishes, moss and ferns for aquariums. His place for some time has been a great success in this city and none have left, disappointed. His stock is complete in every way and his prices meet all competition. A visitor to the store is assured of courteous treatment and of seeing something which he or she wants and wants badly. Mr. Evans is progressive and keeps his establishment supplied with everything that keeps pace with the advance of art and decorative science. He is an enthusiastic Fort Worth man and in his estimation there is no town in the state quite like this one. The store is also equipped with a full stock of beads for daisy chains.

PALACE OF SWEETS

The Palace of Sweets is a name characteristic of the place. Confectionery, cakes and pastries of all kinds are made fresh every day. Messrs. Alexander and Watson are the proprietors of the place and the manager is F. H. Reid, a gentleman of thorough experience and much success in this line of trade. He is at all times courteous and anxious to please his trade. His prices are made from the best ingredients and satisfaction is guaranteed. The members of the firm are Charles T. Alexander and Matthew D. Watson. Both men have a practical knowledge of the trade and another store is operated in the city at the other end of the interior. The store in Fort Worth is operated at 501 Houston street, where every facility has been installed to give perfect satisfaction to the customers. The store has been established in Fort Worth about twelve years. They do a large shipping business all over the country and pay prompt attention to all mail orders.

J. P. BRASHEAR

A concern which newly established enterprises would do well to take as their model is that of J. P. Brashear, druggist and dealer in drugs, paints, oils, window glass, etc., located at 1300 Main street. This business is today one of the best known in the city. When Mr. Brashear started in this business many years ago he made its foundation honesty and reliability. This firm basis, his thorough knowledge as a druggist, his reasonable prices and the constant determination to please every fair-minded customer, have brought him a patronage of which a larger concern might justly feel proud. The experienced painters are regular customers of this store. They can cure here paints manufactured by the best houses in the country, as well as the highest grades of oils. The physician finds this an excellent place for the filling of his prescriptions. Knowing that a long practical experience and complete knowledge are important features in the fulfillment of his wants, the man, woman or child in quest of any kind of toilet article, perfume, etc., can do no better than visit Mr. Brashear's store. This business is indeed a large one and its prospects are flattering for its continued growth and prosperity.

CICERO SMITH & SONS

Among the largest lumber interests in the state is numbered the firm of Cicero Smith & Sons, who operate an excellently supplied lumber yard at the corner of Tenth and Harding streets. This firm is recognized as being composed of representative business men of the community, whose manner of doing business has elicited the praise and regard of the commercial world in this section. Adjoining their yard, which is new and equipped with every facility for the proper conduct of the business, the firm maintains a first-class planing mill. At this mill all kinds of work ordinarily done in a planing mill of an up-to-date nature is turned out for the trade. They make a specialty of bank fixtures in yellow and white pine and all kinds of hard wood, just as good as can be made in the United States, and will meet any competition in this respect. Only first-class workmen are employed, and after years of experience in the lumber business Mr. Smith and his sons are able to tell the best work from other kinds. The most modern machinery has been installed and in every respect the mill has the facilities for giving satisfaction in all its lines. The members of the firm of Cicero Smith & Sons are, besides Mr. Smith Sr., Mr. Sidney and Mr. J. W. Smith. In addition to their other interests, the firm does a wholesale business in lumber and has means of supply that insure a full stock at all times.

THE GENERAL

In room 2, in the building at 605 Houston street, "The General" does a real estate business. He has been established in Fort Worth but a short time, but in that time he has made a decided success of his undertaking, swinging some very advantageous deals in realty. He has on his lists desirable property in all parts of the city and prices that will appeal to all. Investors and home-seekers in particular will find it to their pecuniary advantage to pay "The General" a call before buying property in the grand old city of the grand old state of Texas. Property improved and unimproved can be had from him. He has bargains in business chances, farms, ranches and lands suitable for colonizing purposes. Patent rights are bought and sold and bargains in hardware, goods, grocery, drug, cigar and other stores; hotels and lodging houses are handled in a large number. "The General" is known as a responsible operator and any references that are needed can be had from any bank in Waxahachie or this city. He is energetic, resourceful and progressive. If he has not what you want he will get it, and get it at terms that makes trading with him an object to all. When looking for really bargains look to see Mr. B. Baumgartner, "The General."

JOE T. BURGER & CO.

attorney of note and is at present the consulting attorney of the Fort Worth & Denver City railroad. He was senator from the Twelfth district and is now carrying on a general practice.

For two years, since their organization as a firm, these gentlemen have been looked upon as two of the most representative members of the legal profession in Fort Worth. They have magnificently equipped offices in the State National Bank building and have one of the best law libraries in this section of the state.

Mr. J. A. Templeton read law while teaching school in Delta county and was admitted to the bar in 1875. He came to Fort Worth in 1884 and has been practicing here since. He is representative in the state legislature for two terms from Delta county and one from Hopkins county and has held other positions of trust and confidence.

Mr. R. H. Smith read law in Decatur, Texas, and was admitted to the Texas bar in 1888. He has developed into an energetic and capable practitioner upon whom his clients can place their trust and confidence.

Both telephones have been installed in their factory, S. W. 2137 and Fort Worth 353, and a call will receive prompt attention.

The officers of the firm are: Mr. H. L. Agee, president and general manager; Mr. W. Scott Wilson, vice president; Mr. C. D. Agee, secretary and treasurer. These gentlemen stand all in the business world, and any statements made will be carried out to the very letter.

Mr. Wade has made a reputation for himself in other parts of the state and has fully maintained this reputation while he has been in Fort Worth. He is looked upon as one of the most prominent members of the local bar.

Mr. Priest is a Confederate veteran, having been a member of Company C, Eighteenth Texas Infantry, during the Civil war, and was later commissioned a lieutenant of another company, holding that position for nearly a year. He is a member of R. E. Lee camp, U. C. V., and well thought of by all who know him.

General Hampton rode none but horses of the proudest lineage. The one he best liked was so many times wounded and killed under him that it was hard to keep account of them.

There is a story about a young recruit who in his first engagement lost his heart. The plink of the bullets terrified him. Spying a hole in the ground, he broke from the ranks, rushed to it and threw himself within, covering against the sand floor.

"An officer, disgusted, ran to the terrified recruit, clapping him on the shoulder, and said: 'Rejoin your company at once, sir!'"

"The lad looked up at the officer and answered: 'No, you don't! You want this hole for yourself!'"—New York Globe.

Mr. Carlock was county attorney of Tarrant county in the later '80s and made a splendid record while in that office. He ranks second of unusual merit, full of energy, resourcefulness and a thorough knowledge of the law.

The head office of the company is located in Atlanta, Ga., but a large branch establishment has been opened at Fort Worth under the name of the Coca-Cola Bottling Works, at the corner of Lamar and West Weatherford streets.

There this delicious beverage is bottled and sold to the trade. Messrs. Foster and H. Busch Jr. are the proprietors and in the comparatively short time that they have been in business here have worked up a tremendous list of regular customers.

Private Wasn't Giving His Hiding Place to Officers Corporal James Tanner, head of the Grand Army of the Republic, was talking in Washington about a grafter.

"He thinks all men are grafters," said Corporal Tanner because he is one himself. So does the coward think all men share his cowardice.

"One evening the conductor was startled to see a complacent smile on my friend's face as he sat in the car, eagerly reading his paper. The official glanced at the lamps, but nothing had been done to add to their brilliancy. He became very curious, and elicited the following explanation: 'When I found that I could not influence this great corporation I tackled a lesser one. And I succeeded in persuading the newspaper publisher to use a larger-faced type.'"

Acetylene

WHAT IT IS—Acetylene is a pure hydro-carbon gas, chemically described as C2 H2.

PROPERTIES—It is clear, colorless, lighter than air and has a strong odor except when burning. It has no effect upon iron, steel or brass.

GENERATION—It is produced by the application of water to Carbide. On pound of good Carbide containing five cubic feet of Acetylene.

CARBIDE—Carbide is manufactured in an electric furnace, from ground lime and coke. Carbide will not burn, but will quickly absorb moisture in any form and cannot be exposed to the air for any length of time without loss of gas; it is, therefore, sold in airtight packages, in which it should be kept until used. In this form Acetylene can be shipped any distance, and stored until required.

THE LIGHT—Acetylene light is pure white; it is like sunlight, all colors and shades are shown as in the day-time. It burns with a steady flame, which is more brilliant than ordinary gas or electric light.

POWER—In actual use it has fifteen times the illuminating power of ordinary gas and four times that of electricity.

DIFFUSION—The rays of the Acetylene light diffuse to a greater extent than any other known illuminant.

PERFECT COMBUSTION—There is no blue space in an Acetylene flame; this shows perfect combustion.

NO ODOR—Acetylene burns without any odor.

SAFE—Acetylene is safer to use than any other artificial light.

NOT POISONOUS—Acetylene will not poison the blood like ordinary gas.

REDUCES FIRE RISKS—The danger from fire is less than with electric lights, oil lamps or gas machines. Pure Acetylene will not explode.

NON-EXPLOSIVE—It will not explode like gasoline or kerosene. It is only explosive, like city gas, when mixed with air in a room, if lighted; but as Acetylene burners are always one-fifth the size of other gas burners, it will take five times as long for Acetylene to escape if a burner is left open, and therefore it is only one-fifth as dangerous as ordinary gas.

HEALTH—It will not injure the eyes, or injure plants like electricity or ordinary gas. It saves health, eyesight and money.

COOL ROOMS—The largest Acetylene burner consumes only one cubic foot per hour. The heat produced is no greater than that of an incandescent electric light; this prevents over-heating the rooms where Acetylene is used.

ADVANTAGES—Acetylene is portable, convenient, safe, economical, clean, reliable; and produces better results than any other illuminant. In either city or country it can be used for the lighting of houses, stores, churches and other buildings.

Every man controls his own gas supply. No complicated mechanism and no special knowledge required. Ordinary gas piping and fixtures can be used, the only change required is an inexpensive and simple burner.

MEDLIN MILLING CO

No community is complete without a milling industry. Fort Worth is particularly fortunate in having the advantages of such a concern as the Medlin Milling Company, a business that is known universally as one of the largest business enterprises in the south.

The Medlin Milling Company not only has a large capacity at both their mills in this city and in Wolfe City, Texas, but they are equipped with all of the up-to-date machinery that has been brought out to improve the quality of the products and the time of production.

The mills in Fort Worth have a capacity of 1,500 barrels of flour and 500 barrels of meal a day, and their elevator holds 400,000 bushels of wheat.

The officers of the company are: Mr. J. H. Blocker of Wolfe City, president; Mr. F. H. Hartzog of Wolfe City, vice president; and Mr. F. M. Rogers of this city secretary and treasurer.

The large plant of the Van Zandt-Moore Iron Works is located at 201 East Front street and 204-206 East Seventeenth street.

They are the exclusive manufacturers of cold storage soda fountain apparatus under L. H. Van Zandt's patent. The use of this apparatus in this new branch of industry reduces the cost of operation of the soda fountain to a minimum.

ROSEN HEIGHTS, A BEAUTIFUL SUBURB OF MODERN HOMES

In three years or less the name of this thriving, pulsing city located in the suburbs of Fort Worth has become a by-word in almost every home in Texas. In March, 1903, the first house in the city of Rosen Heights was completed. Now there are hundreds and hundreds of comfortable homes occupied by families in all stations of life and with very few exceptions almost every house is owned by the person or persons that occupy it.

THE TROUBLESOME TWINS
Special to The Telegram.
PARIS, May 9.—Two of the prettiest brides of Paris cannot tell their husbands apart—except by a password.
Two of the keenest newly-married men of Paris, artists by profession, cannot tell their young wives apart except by a ribbon.
And the two brides are sisters, the two bridegrooms are brothers, they all four live in the same Paris flat and eat at the same table. As they are young folks in good society, the complications of their new estate are de-lighting the whole Paris population.
Possibly this is the first of its kind in the history of the world.
It was extraordinary enough already —the case of the twin brothers Chanteau, born together at Nantes in 1874
in a well-to-do shipping agency family.
Which Was Which?
As usual among French bourgeois, the babes had each a wet nurse, but the father, old Jules Chanteau, known throughout Brittany for originality and willingness, already had the twin idea. Throughout the countryside he sought twin wet nurses; and by the time his wife was tired he found them.
To say the nurses had pains to mix the babies up would be putting it too mildly. The babies soon began to mix the twin wet nurses up. They resembled each other very passably;
and Madame Chanteau, being a well-willed lady, old Jules worked his will upon the nurses' costumes. Like those of all French wet nurses, they were of bright stuff, even silks, with ribbon streamers floating from their lace caps to their heels; and Jules decreed that each should dress exactly like the other.
The babies soon made no difference between them. Little Gabriel snuggled up to Annette's bosom as willingly as to that of Marie; and little Alphonse contentedly mumbled what was left.
But was it Alphonse or was it Gabriel?
It was the same when they were weaned. Was it Gabriel or Alphonse?
Or both, alternately? They mumbled equally when their nurses let them;
and the nurses confessed a strange double pain of heart, seeing which an old crone in the kitchen prophesied:
"Unhappy woman who shall love them grown men!" "Woe!" "Woe!" cried old Jules, chuckling.
Fooled Their Own Mother
Their gentle mother prided herself on being able to tell the boys apart;
but as they grew up they played tricks
on her like the rest.
Gabriel alone would beg her for a cake. He would go down the hall and then in a moment return lamenting: "Little mother, you gave Gabriel a cake! Give me one!"
"Dear Alphonse, surely," she would say, and hand him down the bun; and Gabriel would be gobbling it when the real Alphonse arrived lamenting: "Little mother, you have given Gabriel a cake!"
"Two!" Gabriel would grin with his mouth full. So Alphonse also must have two.
At school they would manage to keep side by side in all the classes. When one would learn the geography lesson, the other the arithmetic, and so, when the teacher's back was turned, they would shift places, each one reading both lessons for the other. When they were caught one would get away while the other took the punishment. When the delinquent's turn came he would claim to have been already whipped or detained.
"All right," the teacher would say,
"I will see you both together tomorrow!"
At "The French Twins" they became famous. They now declare 500 newspaper articles were written about them. The story of their falling in love and marrying when they came back to France is extraordinary.
Time had passed, but the French Twins had not changed. They were full artists, exhibiting in the New Salon. They looked exactly alike, they dressed alike, speak alike, and think alike—, but no.
A change was coming over Alphonse.
Gabriel saw it and wondered why he slipped out by himself of afternoons.
At first he was gay, then he grew moody.
"Alphonse, something is eating you like the canker in the rose!" said Gabriel, at last. "Tell me, can it be a woman?"
Alphonse stood mute. Alphonse loved.
A most extraordinary thing had happened to him. One day, crossing the Place de la Concorde, he saw a delicious young blonde, accompanied by her mother, standing spellbound in the crush of vehicles.
He saved them, led them to the sidewalk, and while they thanked him Alphonse fell in love with the delicious blonde.
The girl's mother saw that he was a French gentleman. She let him stroll along with them. He asked and obtained permission to call.
He called on the delicious blonde three times, but the mutual love had begun shining in their eyes. Then the terrible thing happened. After his fourth visit, Alphonse spoke to the mother alone: "Madame, I love your daughter."
"Which?" she asked him simply.
"Which? Which?" he repeated, wondering. Then she confessed to him the prodigy. He could scarcely realize the meaning of it—that while he and his brother were promanaging their silly resemblance from Paris to St.
Louis and back, there could exist, right here in Paris, so faintly and quietly, two other beings who—
"I have twin daughters," said the mother, "Genevieve and Suzanne, so alike that no one could tell them apart, except when they wish it. Yourself, monsieur, have been deceived completely by the fatal resemblance. Two times you have talked to Genevieve, and two times with Suzanne."
"I love the one I met first—she I rescued from the press of vehicles!"
exclaimed Alphonse.
"I will send her to you," said the mother. In a moment the fair creature entered. Alphonse could swear he saw love shining in her eyes.
"Dear Genevieve!" he murmured.
"I am Suzanne," she faltered.
"You are the one I love," he affirmed stoutly.
"And I am the one you rescued," came a sad, sweet voice from the doorway. There she stood, the vision of the Place de la Concorde, ever to the well-remembered hat and coat. Otherwise she was dressed exactly like her sister.
His position was frightful.
When the girls had meekly withdrawn, he fiercely blamed their mother. Why had she done this thing?
Why had she let him mix them up?
Why had she not warned him?
Weeping, the good woman confessed certain principles. The girls had always been treated exactly alike. When one had a new gown, the other had a new gown. When one had a new hat, the other had one. And gowns, hats and all must be alike—to render exact justice.
"For fifteen years past, monsieur," she said, "he could scarcely realize neither of those treasures. Was it Suzanne you rescued in the Place de la Concorde? Why should blind chance give her the adventure? When you

FORT WORTH MACHINERY AND FOUNDRY COMPANY.

One look at the mammoth plants of these two concerns will convince even the most unsophisticated laymen in the mysteries of machinery of their value as an industry, not only to the city of Fort Worth, but also to the entire state of Texas.

The Fort Worth Machinery and Foundry Company has recently changed hands, the new management being those gentlemen that in the past have made such a success of the Fort Worth Boiler Works. They are bringing the same energy and sound business judgment into the new concern that has so long characterized the Boiler Works. The foundry is the largest and best equipped of its kind in Texas.

The two concerns are located near together at Second and North Main street, and have an ideal location for the carrying on of the business in which they are engaged. They manufacture the Fort Worth well drilling machinery for the drilling of artesian wells and to a depth of 1,000 feet this machine cannot be excelled. The workmanship is of the best and in the twenty-five years that it has been on the market the machine has been remodeled until it is now perfect. They also manufacture pumps, jacks, hydraulic cylinders, head trees, etc.

In the boiler works they build or repair boilers, tanks, stacks, oil tanks and other sheet iron work. They make a specialty of boiler flues and boiler supplies of all kind, and buy and sell second-hand boilers.

The Fort Worth Machine and Foundry Company also does repairing on electric, refrigerating or power plants of any kind, or mill repair work. They do structural iron work and a general engineering business.

Mr. William Richmond, a most able gentleman, is at the head of the two concerns, and it has been largely through his efforts that the success that they now enjoy has been accomplished.

The Foundry Company was incorporated in 1901, with a capital stock of $50,000, which was amended at the time of the transfer. The officers are William Richmond, president; M. P. Peria, vice president; C. E. Bowman, secretary. Mr. Richmond is general manager and has had years of experience.

MARTIN CASEY & CO.

For the past twelve years the firm of Martin Casey & Co. has been carrying on a most successful business in the city of Fort Worth. Mr. Casey himself has been established in business in this city for the past thirty years, but the present firm came into existence but a dozen years ago. They are now considered among the most prominent wholesale liquor dealers in the state of Texas, and are certainly accredited to this position by the amount of business that they transact. The firm occupies a commodious and well-stocked store room on the corner of Houston and West Fifth streets, where they will be pleased to receive calls from all prospective customers. From three to four traveling men are kept continuously on the road representing this firm in the trade territory covered by them, namely: Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico. The firm name is known over this entire territory, and wherever known is recognized as one of the most reliable and responsible in existence.

Martin Casey & Co. make a leader of "Martin's Best," a superb whiskey for all purposes, but also handle a full line of everything in the way of Kentucky, Sour Mash and Pennsylvania Eye Whiskies in bulk as well as bottled in bond, also imported wines, cordials, and liquors of the finest quality obtainable. They also handle cigars in wholesale quantities. The firm does an enormous business and guarantees satisfaction in every respect. Correspondence is respectfully solicited and prompt attention is paid to all orders received in this way. Prices will be sent upon request to Martin Casey & Co., Fort Worth, Texas.

DERROUGH'S GARAGE

For prompt service, excellent work, most reasonable prices, go to Derrough's Garage, located at 1008 Houston street, which place he has occupied for only a few months, but has been in business in this city for several years. This gentleman has made it a rule to let no job of work go out of his establishment that hasn't the stamp of perfection upon it—as perfect as human hands and mechanical devices can make it. Those who once engage his services will likely continue to do so. Following the bicycle and repairing of auto business, he has fitted himself up with every convenience and facility for carrying on his occupation in the best possible manner. He has and keeps on hand a full stock of supplies and when in need of anything in this line you will surely find it at Derrough's Garage. His continued success and prosperity is assured.

ELLISON FURNITURE & CARPET COMPANY

Probably the finest furniture establishment in the entire South is that known as the Ellison Furniture and Carpet company, which is located at 209, 211, 213 and 215 West Seventh street, and 801, 803, 805, 807, 809 and 811 Throckmorton street. This business has been established here for the past eighteen years, and for the first twelve years of its career was known as the Maddox-Ellison company. Six years ago the firm was changed to the Ellison Furniture & Carpet company, but the present company was not incorporated, however, until July 11, 1905. They occupy the entire five stories and basement of the building at the corner of Seventh and Throckmorton streets, there being 90,000 square feet of space, and both sides of the building on the main floor are almost entirely of plate glass, there being 1,500 square feet in all. An enormous stock of the finest kind of furniture, carpets, mantels and stoves is carried at all times, and this is most attractively displayed. Both a wholesale and retail business are transacted, and some seventy-two people are employed in taking care of the wants of the many patrons of the house, while two traveling salesmen are kept constantly on the road. Their warehouse capacity is about 500 cars of furniture, etc., from which they do their shipping. These warehouses are located on the Santa Fe railroad, giving ample car trackage for loading and unloading. Mr. T. B. Ellison has the management of the business, and the patrons of the house include not only the local citizens, but also residents for miles around the city in the retail department, and the wholesale department, and the wholesale department extends all through the southwest. This company also manufactures mattresses, springs and cots, and has a very large trade in this department of the business. This concern is considered one of the strongest and most substantial business firms in the city, and during the many years it has been in operation here has always been considered a leading establishment.

THE GAMER COMPANY

Among the largest and most representative wholesale establishments in the city of Fort Worth is the Gamer Company, who are doing business on the corners of Front and Calhoun streets. This firm is among the largest dealers in the state in their line. They handle in wholesale quantities windmills, pumps, tanks, iron pipes, fittings, wholesale plumbers' and water supply materials, iron, steel and brass goods, etc. They were incorporated last year with a capital stock of $100,000. The company succeeded to the business of the T. M. Brown Company, and has enlarged and added to that business to a considerable extent. Charles Gamer is the president and executive head of the concern and gives his personal attention to the details as well as to the more important features of the work. He is a thorough, practical business man and is looked upon as one of the most reliable and trustworthy in Fort Worth. He holds the positions of both president and manager of the company, and as such has been largely instrumental in the success of the concern. George Mummet, secretary, and Hubert Fitch, treasurer; J. M. Bird, superintendent of manufactures. All of these officials are known throughout the city and are respected wherever known. If you are handling anything in the line of the Gamer Company it will pay you to get their prices before purchasing elsewhere, as they have the material and their sources of supply are such that they will be able to give you the benefit of the reduced price that they quote on account of being able to buy in such large quantities themselves.

The company now manufactures gas-cylinder engines and gas producer engines of the most modern type on the market. If interested ask for particulars.

FORT WORTH MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS

E. F. Bergin is the well-known proprietor of the Fort Worth Marble and Granite Works, located at the corner of Second and North Main streets. The business was established in 1877, small in the beginning, but growing gradually and surely as the years progressed, until it now stands as one of the first concerns in its line in Texas. Mr. Bergin understands how the work should be done, being a practical workman himself, and employs only the best artisans. He has had years of experience in this business and is qualified in every way to handle contracts of any kind. References as to his responsibility, if any are needed, can be obtained from any bank in the city. He will gladly furnish estimates on work in his line and is more than anxious to please on your work, as he believes that he can convince you to have him do the work.

J. M. ABBOTT OIL COMPANY

The above firm has indeed a hustling, wide-awake representative in John S. Statti, whose office is in No. 301 Wheat building; general offices, Houston, Texas. The interests of this large concern are receiving the best possible attention at the hands of this gentleman. He is supplying the numerous large factories and industries through this section of the state with their fuel oil. Orders sent to him receive immediate possible time. In soliciting business and taking orders Mr. Statti comes in contact with a great many of the most responsible citizens. Wherever he goes he makes friends. He is also a notary public. In this capacity he is accurate and painstaking. With these varied interests he is kept busy. The people appreciating the straightforward treatment which they are always sure to receive at his hands, are giving him all their business appertaining to his line.

N. E. GRAMMER

Mr. Grammer is one of the largest handlers of drugs in the city of Fort Worth. He has been in business in this city for a number of years and has thoroughly ingratiated himself into the esteem of the public by his straightforward business dealings. Mr. Grammer is equipped for the sale of the best equipped stores of their kind in the city. One is located at 100 Main street, corner of West Weatherford, opposite the court house (which is never closed), and the other, one block south, at 200 Main street. Both establishments are large and carry a complete stock of first-class articles, such as are usually dispensed in stores of this character. Prescriptions are compounded promptly and with the best drugs and chemicals at all times, experienced druggists only being employed.

Mr. Grammer is considered one of the most progressive men in the city. He is active in every movement for the advancement of Fort Worth commercially and otherwise, and is one of the best known men in the city. Besides being the head of the two drug establishments, Mr. Grammer is also vice president of the State National Bank and interested otherwise in the city.

COZY CORNER SALON

When the words "Cozy Corner" were prefixed to saloon, they expressed in a nutshell the condition of the popular resort located at 914 Main street. This is indeed a cozy place. The fixtures, furniture, etc., are arranged with an eye single to the convenience and comfort of its numerous patrons. This is due to the watchfulness and care of the proprietor, Martin Lavin, who caters to the wants of his trade with sound judgment. He carries in stock only the best beverages, including the choicest wines and liquors, domestic and imported, as well as all brands of cigars. He gives full measure of everything for money received. He employs the most skilled assistants, who are equally anxious to please. Every evening groups of men can be seen at the "Cozy Corner," which are mostly composed of business men, discussing events of the day and forgetting their cares and troubles, at this pleasure and comfort resort. With its good location, high grade goods, excellent service, this saloon solicits the continued patronage of the citizens of Fort Worth.

BROWN & VERA

Spring brings renovation in a large number of dwellings in Fort Worth, as well as in every city in the country. There is the spring papering and decorating to be done. When figuring on this be sure and get the estimate of the firm of Brown & Vera, 1108 Main street, one of the largest in their line of business in the city.

They do a contracting, painting, paper hanging, wall paper, sign painting, paints, oils, glass, art materials, pyrography materials and sets, pictures and framing business. Everything in their enormous stock is of the best quality and no greater price is charged than for inferior articles. They have a splendid stock of curios and can supply almost any demand for articles in their lines of business.

The members of the firm are Charles B. Brown and Joseph A. Vera, both practical men with reputations for business rectitude and straightforward business methods that will be hard to beat anywhere.

They will be glad to make estimates on any work in their line and have certainly a large selection of wall paper and decorations in stock from which to make your choice. A call will be appreciated.

AMERICAN STEEL FENCE POST AND MANUFACTURING CO.

Fort Worth has every reason to feel proud of the many industrial institutions that are helping to make her the commercial center of the southwest. Prominent among the new industries that have been started here and that are destined to become factors in the commercial life of the city and section may be mentioned the American Steel Fence Post and Manufacturing Company. The plant of this company, which is now located on the corner of Houston and Belknap streets, is being rebuilt and enlarged in order to accommodate the vast growth in the business and its kept running at its fullest capacity to fill orders, not only in Fort Worth, but from all over this section of the country. The fence posts manufactured by this company under patents registered at the patent office, Nov. 1, 1904, cannot be surpassed for beauty, economy and durability. While a vast improvement over fences heretofore sold, the price is no higher than for inferior makes. The company, which is headed by Sam A. Joseph as president, is financially a strong one and able to carry out contracts of any magnitude. A. P. Luckett, secretary and treasurer, is a man of fine business ability, and J. M. Narsh, manager of ware, articles of gold, cut glass and ware, bric-a-brac, etc., of the best kind. This store draws a large patronage from every quarter of the city and from outside points, and everything that is sent out is sold under an absolute guarantee as to quality. This establishment makes organs and pianos, the kind that have been made and have stood the test. People are wont to call on Mr. Walton and let him or his courtiers, who are sure to show them the splendid stock which he has to offer. No trouble to show.

THOMAS & SWINNEY

This firm has been doing business under the present caption for but a short while. Both members of the firm, however, have been in the real estate business in other firms in Fort Worth for some time, and have made a success of their undertaking wherever they were located. The members of the combination are Mr. Andrew S. Thomas and Mr. William L. Swinney. Their office is located upstairs at 500 Main street, where one of the best can be found at almost any time of day.

Thomas & Swinney transact a general real estate business, and always have desirable locations on hand for prospective buyers. They buy, sell or exchange real estate and negotiate loans on real estate security. They are absolutely responsible, and any advance needed can be had from almost any bank in the city. A call upon them before buying or selling will doubtless prove important and in many instances profitable.

NOEL'S COLD STORAGE MARKET

Mr. Joseph S. Noel, at 202 Main street, conducts one of the most modernly equipped meat markets in the city of Fort Worth. He has placed his modern and progressive ideas into execution, gaining as a result a large percentage of the patronage among

WM. B. BINYON JR.

The transfer and storage business forms one of the most important features of a large city's activity, and in this special line Mr. William J. Binyon Jr. is splendidly equipped for the carrying on of his business and is able to fulfill all demands made upon him. This gentleman has succeeded as sole owner and manager of this business, the Stewart-Binyon Transfer and Storage Company, having purchased Mr. Stewart's interest in the business last December. He is located at the southwest corner of West Front street and Throckmorton, where he has all modern facilities to follow his occupation on a large scale. Freight is transferred to any part of the city for heavy hauling of all kinds and quickly and promptly carried out and disposed of in the most satisfactory manner. Furniture packing and moving comprises a most important feature of Mr. Binyon's business. The extreme care which is used by all his drivers under his directions in the handling of furniture and household goods commands the attention and approval of all who contemplate moving and are anxious for their goods to reach their destination in as good condition as when received by the driver. Mr. Binyon ships household furnishings to order, hauls all classes of freight, merchandise, and does a general receiving and forwarding business. He guarantees satisfaction.

JAMES C. WALTON

Mr. James C. Walton, the diamond setter, engraver and jeweler, 607 Main street, has one of the most superb stocks of magnificent offerings in the city. In bringing together the vast collection of beautiful articles for the selection and purchase of the public, this gentleman has exercised the greatest care in choosing only those articles of lovely design and thorough substantiality. He has placed price quotations on his goods which admit of but the smallest profits for bringing to the people a line of sparkling jewels, exquisite sil-

the elite trade of Fort Worth. He handles all kinds of fresh and cured meats, fresh oysters and game, and on account of his splendid cold storage facilities, is able to keep meat in the very best condition. His establishment is equipped with both electric and all phone orders. Deliveries are made promptly. Satisfaction is guaranteed in every particular, and a trial of his kind of business is all that is asked by Mr. Noel. A trial will be sufficient for from that time forth you will be a permanent customer.

Mr. Noel believes in keeping abreast of the times in whatever business you may be engaged, and in his line he has carried out his ideas to the letter. He is enthusiastic concerning Fort Worth and Texas, and says that there is no place like old Fort Worth for him.

HEATON, BURY & CO.

Among the well known real estate men of Fort Worth, none stand higher than the gentlemen composing the firm which heads this sketch. They have built up a magnificent business, and have met with such success as comes to few. They are among the leading operators in land and investments in the city, doing a general real estate business, buying, selling, renting and exchanging city and country property, collecting rents, negotiating loans on real estate, and taking the management of entire estates. As appraisers their services are also available, having an expert and thorough knowledge of land values. They make settlement of taxes, assess property and give special attention to the liquidation of estates. Their office is located at 510 Main street. The members composing this firm are William G. Heaton and Henry G. Bury. Mr. Heaton is also the secretary and treasurer of the American Acetylene Gas Light Company, of which concern Mr. Bury is president. These gentlemen are and thoroughly upright in all their dealings, and knowing every detail of the real estate business.
