Brownsville Citizens Are Arming to Fight Negro Troops

PRESIDENT APPEALED TO

Houston, Texas, Aug. 18.—Dispatches to the Chronicle from Brownsville say the citizens are deeply resentful that no attention is being paid repeated appeals to national and state authorities for aid and removal of the negro troops.

Appeal to President "We appeal to you again in our great necessity. Our position is misunderstood. We cannot convince our women and children that another outbreak may not occur at any time.

Fear Bloody Clash "We know that an accidental discharge of a firearm, any overt act of an excited citizen, and our citizens are fearfully excited, would precipitate a bloody clash.

Families Moving Away "Many of our citizens have removed and are moving their families. A Texas town should not be left unaided in this condition.

President Delays Action DALLAS, Texas, Aug. 18.—United States Senator Culberson tonight received a telegram from the war department at Washington in reference to his request for the removal of the colored troops from Brownsville, which says in effect that the request was referred to the President, who declined to interfere until the war department investigates the matter.

Only Five Officers Present "Only five officers are present and an outbreak would prove of fearful consequences, entailing heavy loss of life and the probable destruction of the city.

Riot Imminent "It is hard to tell what may happen. It is almost certain should any citizen, either through excitement or other cause, fire off a weapon, a riot would ensue and should any of the negro soldiers come into town they would probably be killed, which would without doubt precipitate further outrage by the soldiers, who have threatened to burn the town.

Appeal after appeal has been sent to President Roosevelt, Governor Lanham, General Hulen and United States senators, but without response, save from General Hulen, requesting that he be posted by wire, and from Culberson, promising immediate attention.

Meanwhile many families are leaving by homes every night, going to watch and anxiety. The

5,000 ARE DEAD CITIES IN ASHES

Santiago Destroyed and People in Terror Flee for their Lives

SCORES OF GHOULS KILLED

CONDITIONS APPALLING

The beautiful city of Santiago is in ruins, the result of the earthquake which rent Valparaiso asunder. Reports coming in show that fatalities and damage have been underestimated.

Special to The Telegram. LIMA, Peru, Aug. 18.—Word came here late this afternoon that the magnificent city of Santiago de Chile, the third city in South America in wealth and population, had been practically destroyed by the terrific earthquake shock which wrenched the west coast of lower South America on Thursday.

The telegraph service is so badly demoralized that only most meagre reports are coming through, but every dispatch gives color to the growing belief that the splendid capital of Chile is a mass of ruins which are being consumed in many places by flames.

Thousands Homeless More than half of the 350,000 persons who made up the population are believed to be homeless and many of the great public structures are destroyed or badly damaged.

Dead Number 5,000

Special to The Telegram. LIMA, Peru, Aug. 18.—Word has just reached here that the number of dead at Valparaiso is now placed at more than five thousand.

Bodies Mutilated Many of the dead are mutilated beyond identification, among them being scores of women and children. Latest advices now indicate that the casualties at Santiago are not over fifty.

These include the magnificent capitol building in which the supreme court meets, the great cathedral, which is one of the finest in South America; the palace of the archbishop of Chile; the summer residence of the president of the republic, colleges, convents, municipal structures and the homes of many of Chile's best men.

Walls Hurlled Into Streets When the first shock, which was the most violent, seemed to rip the very foundations of the city walls, the electric light system was put out of commission.

People Flee Half Dressed The scenes that followed were pitiful. In the poorer sections of the city the inhabitants fled half dressed to the streets and as shock followed shock their cries and supplications could be heard above the crash of falling walls.

Whole City Threatened Blocks have been blown up and the flames are still spreading with alarming rapidity. The business section has suffered worst thus far, but the residences are seriously threatened, and if the spread of the flames is not soon checked practically nothing will be left of the city.

Reports Come in Slow At this time it is extremely difficult to gain even the vaguest estimate of the number of dead, either in Santiago or Valparaiso, owing to the confusion and excitement which prevails in those places.

Skies Lit Up by Fires Everywhere fires were burning and the heavens were aglow for miles with the reflection of the flames as they came their way from street to street.

Valparaiso in Ruins VALPARAISO, Chile, Aug. 18.—This, the greatest seaport of the Pacific coast of South America, is today a hopeless mass of ruins and the fires which are still burning are adding to the terror and desolation.

Save for the police, the troops and the firemen, who are working night and day, the city is practically deserted. Thousands of the inhabitants have fled to the interior, leaving the shattered homes a prey to the elements. It is difficult, even on the ground, to glean any clear idea of the happenings of the last forty-eight hours.

Streets Littered With Debris A correspondent who penetrated to the great public square says that it is littered with debris from the fall of the buildings around it. The center of a desolated district, the streets in every direction are strewn with the wrecks of splendid structures, the walls of which have pitched outward on account of the violence of the first shock which was far the worst. The electric light wires and fallen trees and telegraph poles litter many of the thoroughfares.

Air Laden With Gas The gas mains seem to have been torn apart by the wrenching of the earth until the streets are laden with the odor of escaping gas. In like manner the water pipes were wrecked and the supply of water cut entirely off. Not a street car is running in the city. Many of the dead who are believed to be in the ruins, have been taken out, and no estimate of their number is possible.

Gardens Blackened In the outskirts the pretty gardens are blackened and withered as if scorched by fire. The houses are tenantless, the inhabitants having left in the first panic which seized upon all classes alike.

Troops Kill Ghouls Both in Santiago and in Valparaiso the authorities with great promptness called the entire military force and the soldiers, acting under orders, were shooting down the looters who put in an early appearance. Dozens of ghouls have been shot and above the clang of the bells and the walls of the people, could be heard at intervals the ominous crack of the rifles, telling of the work of the troops.

Many Towns Destroyed Dispatches received here today also tell of the destruction of a number of smaller towns in Chile, which country seems to have borne the brunt of the disturbance.

Leguio is said to be in ruins. This is a town of 15,000 and is a prosperous commercial center.

Vina del Mar is also a wreck and most of its 12,000 people are homeless. Little remains of either Limarce or Quilque remains, they had about 4,000 population each and were tributary to Valparaiso. In every instance flames followed the earthquake and people by the thousands are left homeless.

So far as can be learned at this time the effects of the convulsion are worse than at first reported. The whole of the most fertile and prosperous section of Chile seems to have been practically laid waste. Railroad tracks have been wrenched from the roadbeds, cuts have been filled in, tunnels blocked and the earth's surface ripped and torn for miles.

ONLY THREE DAYS LEFT

Three days are left of the time in which the committee working to secure a permanent fat stock show and an exposition building for Fort Worth, hope to complete their canvass for 250 subscriptions.

During the past week excellent results were accomplished, but they are not enough.

Eighty-five more shares are needed. That means that thirty persons on Monday and Tuesday and twenty-five Wednesday ought to come forward and show their patriotism for Fort Worth and Texas by helping assure an institution which will benefit the whole Southwest.

It is a time when there are few if any urgent demands on the purses of citizens. Even if there were, there is no public enterprise which could more meritoriously claim support.

Why not telephone your subscription to the Board of Trade if no member of the soliciting committee has called on you? Another appeal ought not to be necessary.

Worst Results From Insects Come From Palestine Region—Rain Has Been Excessive

The season of 1906 is one of the years when the mid-August reports of the cotton crop are good, or if that is too strong, they are not bad. The general condition of the plant may be described as good and from that down, though but few, if any of the reports, are of cotton that is actually in a bad condition.

Weevil Damage Slight

The boll weevil injury to this date has been but slight in northern and central Texas. The ravages this year seem to be basing the statements on the reports received in southern parts of the cotton growing portion of Texas or, more exactly, the southeastern part of the state, some of the worst reports of damage coming from Palestine and in below there. Other places in eastern Texas also make bad reports in this respect.

"RESERVATION" STAYS

As Citizens Protest and Council Reconsider Decision

ALLAS, Texas, Aug. 18.—On account of the vigorous protest of citizens the city will not remove the reservation to North Dallas. This was decided at a meeting of the committee and citizens of North Dallas yesterday afternoon.

HOUSTON'S EXPERIMENT IN MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT AND HOW IT IS WORKING

The city of Houston, Texas, has been under the commission form of government for one year, and there is no sort of disposition to go back to the old system. The commission form of government was adopted only after a most vigorous fight by the old regime of politicians. The whole subject was thoroughly thrashed out in advance and it was decided that the new form of government could be no worse than the old, and might be better, and it has proved itself worthy.

Under the old system the government consisted of a mayor, twelve aldermen elected by the city at large, but representing wards; tax assessor and collector, city marshal, city treasurer, health officer and street and bridge commissioner, all elected for a term of two years and each practically independent of the other if he did not care to work in harmony. Each of these officials appointed his own force, though the appointments had to be made through the mayor and confirmed by the aldermen, hence it paid each of them to stand in with the mayor and a majority of the aldermen. The mayor had a large number of places to fill, and the aldermen saw to placing their favorites in the various departments by a system of swapping support with the mayor or heads of departments. A man once placed was safe to stay until the end of his term, no matter whether he did his work or not.

Under the new system the elective officers are a mayor and four aldermen, elected by the city at large and without regard to subdivisions, the remainder of the city's employees are appointed by the mayor, with the confirming power lying in the board. But the very greatest reform instituted under the commission form of government lies in this very fact. There are no longer "terms" for any of the city officials save those five named. The rest are employed by the month, just as are the employees of any corporation, and are subject to removal without notice if they do not perform the work for which they are paid. It doesn't take an impeachment trial to get one out. He can be notified that his services are no longer needed and dropped from the pay roll. If the commission had accomplished nothing more than this it would have been a success.

Under the old order of things policemen were appointed for terms of two years, and if removed during that time could recover the salary they did not earn, unless they were removed by court process; in fact, a number of policemen did recover judgments against the city. Under the new system the firemen and policemen are hired by the month, and if they don't come up with their work they don't stay even to the end of the month.

Safe and Sure.

In the past there has been a lot of petty grafting; the city has never had any money on hand. Bond issue after bond issue, when improvements were needed have piled up the public debt until it takes half the revenues from all sources to pay the interest and to provide the sinking fund. So far as is known but one issue of bonds of the city has ever been paid when it became due, and that has been by the commission within the month.

The commission has cut off the graft to a great extent. The police officers had a scheme for taking prisoners sure to be convicted before a justice. The officer getting $4 or $5 out of the case if the fine was paid. The other cases were carried to the city court. Now the policemen get no graft, the sort and all cases go to the city court. That is just an instance.

No improvements had ever been made for the city out of the general revenue. It always took a bond issue. The commission has promised three miles of vitrified brick paving (and has bought the bricks), three new schoolhouses to have an aggregate of thirty rooms, an extension of the sewer mains and other things for the coming year, all to be paid for out of the current revenues and without any bond issue. In fact, the contract for one of the schools has been let at a cost of about $35,000.

The revenues of the city give about $700,000 for general revenue purposes during the year. Under the old system the sum did not meet the expenses, and when the commission took hold there was a floating indebtedness of $285,000 and no money in the treasury. Within seven months it had cleared up the debt and pays the current bills as promptly as any merchant. In addition, there has been expended $30,000 in repairing bridges, which had for years been regarded as unsafe and even dangerous. No former administration could find the money to do this, and instead of the risk of damage suits for killing or maiming the city rather than cut off the revenues of the political favorites who chanced to be in with the administration.

Only a few days since there died in Chicago the man who was mayor of the city during the carpetbag regime of 1870-74. He died a millionaire. Under his administration the city paid $500,000 for a city hall that was afterward rebuilt (it burned) for less than $80,000. That was only one item. The illustration gives a pretty good insight into what sort of a government Houston had for a long term of years. In more recent times the city government has expended thousands of dollars for such modern necessities as a garbage crematory, and it was out of service in a year because there wasn't any money for the favorites in having such a thing on hand. A big plant to dispose of the sewage was built at a cost of many thousands, and when the commission took hold of it it was nearly ruined and was of no practical use. Yet a few thousand dollars and a bit of common sense and a lack of politics would have put it in shape where it is doing the work it was intended for.

In the paving that is to be done during the coming year the city will do the work without the intervention of a contractor. In the past the paving that has been done has cost twice what it should; or, to state it in another way, for the price paid the city has secured only half the paving it was entitled to.

Under the old regime the paved streets were dirty and out of repair, while the unpaved streets were almost impassable after a heavy rain—not at all an uncommon occurrence. Under the new order of affairs the paved streets are kept cleaned and are being put in repair as quickly as possible, while the unpaved streets are kept ditched and graded as nearly as may be, and there is always a passable street within a short time, even if a flood has fallen.

Under the old regime politics prevented the attempt to compel property owners to build sidewalks; under the new scheme sidewalks are to be built and paid for by the property owner will be subject to a criminal penalty, if being a misdemeanor punishable by a fine to disregard an order to put down a sidewalk.

Under the old order of things policemen were appointed for terms of two years, and if removed during that time could recover the salary they did not earn, unless they were removed by court process; in fact, a number of policemen did recover judgments against the city. Under the new system the firemen and policemen are hired by the month, and if they don't come up with their work they don't stay even to the end of the month.

Under the old plan it was nobody's business to see that property was on the assessment rolls or that the duplication of assessments were corrected. The commission has already inaugurated a system of bookkeeping whereby it is not possible to duplicate assessments and practically impossible to prevent the assessment in the name of the owner of record. Considerable property has already been brought out from concealment and placed on the rolls. This is all due to the fact that it is somebody's business in particular now to see that it is done.

The rendition of property for taxation is also being equalized. In the past aldermen constituted the board of appraisal and it depended largely upon the conscience and the pull of the property owners as to the percentage of the market value that was placed upon the rolls. The commission has raised everybody indiscriminately, although the amounts vary. The renditions are not yet equalized, but it takes a strong showing to get a reduction, and favoritism plays very small part. If the property is really assessed at 65 per cent of value, it could be sold for the valuation of the owner is accepted, but if not up to that mark there is an inquiry to find out what the market value is and a note is made for future reference.

The commission is the result of the years of misgovernment, graft and extravagance and malfeasance in office of the cities of Houston and Galveston. Galveston was the first to adopt the plan; it was carefully studied by Houston, and has been adopted and even improved upon. Dallas will adopt it next year when the legislature gives its sanction. Beaumont is in line for the same thing. Waco sentiment is very strongly in favor of such a change and good citizens of Fort Worth and San Antonio are even now agitating the question. The question will probably be

MORE WORK NEEDED FOR FAT STOCK SHOW

Committee Has Yet Several Names to Secure

THREE DAYS LEFT

Desired 250 Subscribers Be Secured Before Beginning Out-of-town Canvass

A meeting was held at the Board of Trade rooms Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock to canvass the situation as to the status of the subscriptions to the guarantee fund, which is to insure the building of the exposition hall and show room for the fat stock show or to give it is proper name the exposition hall of the National Feeders and Breeders' Show of Fort Worth.

The meeting was well attended by those interested in the success of the show, and among some of the more prominent were to be seen Captain Burnett, Marion Sansom, Dr. Bacon Saunders, Captain Paddock, Judge Armstrong, W. B. King, Stuart Harrison, Frank Hovenkamp, J. B. Burnside, Dr. Frank Boyd and others.

Much Work to Be Done

The general sentiment is that there remains much work before Fort Worth has done her share in the matter of securing the hall and for the purpose of giving the citizens a chance to do their part, the work of the committee will be continued during the coming week and the committees will meet with a Board of Trade committee Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock to hear the report on progress to that time and will then be continued to Saturday if it is found necessary.

A committee of three was named to work on the North side especially with the assurance that the committee would have the aid of any and all of the members of the exposition company.

Auditorium Fund Suggested

An effort is to be made to have the trustees of the Auditorium fund subscribe to twenty-five shares of the stock and to Wednesday of next week a committee of three was appointed to confer with the said trustees. It was pointed out that the fund could not be used for any other purpose than to aid in the building of an auditorium, and it seemed to the speakers that this was a full compliance with the declared object of the Auditorium Association. Additionally attention was called to the fact that there was now no hope of ever getting any more money for that purpose and, therefore, no better use could be made of the funds in hand than to invest it in that way with proper safeguards for its ultimate return to the auditorium fund.

Captain S. B. Burnett presided over the meeting and soon called to order after the appointed time, 4 o'clock. Judge G. W. Armstrong moved that a committee of three be appointed by the chair to take up with the auditorium fund trustees the matter of subscribing to as many shares of the stock of the fat stock show as could be paid for out of the fund in hand. He understood that it now amounted to about $2,350, and if so the trustees would subscribe to twenty-five shares. He was of the opinion that a proper arrangement could be made with the stock yards people for the protection of funds of the auditorium association such, for instance, as having an agreement made that the fund should be deemed sacred and in the very improbable event of the failure of the fat stock show, in which event all of the guarantee fund would be forfeited or so much of it as might be necessary, that forfeiture should not apply to the auditorium fund. There were several ways that this fund could be protected and he was confident that the matter could be satisfactorily arranged. The motion prevailed and the chair appointed on the committee Judge Armstrong, Captain Paddock, and Stuart Harrison.

165 Subscribers Secured

The reports of the committees were then read as to new names and the total on the list foots up 165, though it must be stated, as will be seen from a perusal of the list, as herewith printed, that twenty-five or thirty of the subscribers reported are from non-residents of Fort Worth. It was the expressed views of those present that the citizens of Fort Worth should have the true status of the exposition guarantee fund explained to them and it should be made very plain that it would not be a good showing to go to the country outside of the city, asking for aid for what is regarded by many as a Fort Worth enterprise, and making no better showing than is now made. For that reason it was decided that all of the committees could have more time and Wednesday of next week was suggested as a good date for the next meeting, with the hope that at that meeting success as to Fort Worth could be assured.

It is determined to begin the campaign on the outside and a draft of a letter was read, that is to be sent out to all of the men who might be interested with several blanks for subscriptions. The letter was not in the exact form desired, and it was referred back to the committee, to be put in proper form and then copies are to be mailed out by the committee and other copies are to be sent out by merchants and others in the city to their correspondents, commission men, cattlemen, banks, flouring mills, jobbers, wholesalers and all others who can, by any stretch of imagination be supposed to have an interest in the success of the show.

North Fort Worth Committee

To aid the present committee of twenty-one, which is continued and to work especially in North Fort Worth, this committee was named: W. D. Davis, E. E. Baldrige and L. G. Pritchard.

The out-of-town campaign will begin Monday or as soon as the circular letter can be printed. It is to be accompanied by a list of those in the city who have subscribed, that those who are approached may see the character of the men in Fort Worth, who take an interest in the fat stock show. Judge Armstrong read the letter, which is as follows:

Fort Smith, Ark., Aug. 16, 1920.

My Dear Sir—I have your esteemed favor of August 1 and note what you have to say in regard to a modern live stock exhibition building at your city. I have been keeping up with this proposed enterprise for some time and am greatly pleased to know that you now have the matter well in hand. Yes, I will be glad to act as one of the original twenty-one directors of the first year and to give you all the assistance I can in the premises.

I am an enthusiast over the proposition of concentrating the live stock interests of the Southwest at Fort Worth, Texas.

In my judgment it is the strategic point where such interests should be concentrated and I expect to live long enough to see Fort Worth the greatest live stock market in the South. I sincerely believe that through that gateway all sub-quarantine animals will finally move to market, and I believe that the time is not far distant when the live stock exposition to be held at that point will be second to none on the continent.

I should be pleased to hear from you later in regard to further details, and will also be pleased to handle the subscription contract when the same is presented. Thanking you for your generous consideration in this connection, I beg leave to write myself, with high personal regard, your friend very truly,

OSCAR L. MILES.

Could Get Farmers' Congress

Marion Sansom and Judge Armstrong spoke on the character of the proposed building and deprecated any local jealousy as to the part of Fort Worth in which the building should be held at that point which was for Fort Worth, and with the excellent car service which was now available as if it was right where we stand today. Such a building was a great need here. If we had one, said Mr. Sansom, we could have the meetings of the Farmers' Congress, and such a building as it is the design of the Farmers' Congress, would be the only kind of a building which will accommodate the Farmers' Congress. Not only so, but it is a fact that the packing house people want them to come; they want to get into closer touch with the men who make up the Farmers' Congress and they are willing to help pay for it, too. Their interests are so inter-related that it is the earnest desire of the packing house people to have the Farmers' Congress come here and that desire takes the practical form of a willingness to spend some money to have them come. With such a position held, the congress could meet here, with all of the exhibits that make the gathering so attractive, even to the outsider. We had one of the meetings here in the summer, when there are no other meetings of the kind to be held.

Judge Armstrong followed in about the same vein. Nine of the committee of twenty-one of the Board of Trade have not yet reported or had not when the meeting adjourned, about 5:30 o'clock, to meet again Wednesday at 4 o'clock, when it is expected the Board of Trade directors will also be present.

SUBUR TO OPEN SCHOOL TENTH OF MONTH Trustees Name Day in Fort Worth

The board of trustees of the Fort Worth public schools met in a regular session last Thursday night. Members present, and President Littlepage presiding. One of the questions to be decided by the board was the date for opening of the term, Sept. 10 was finally chosen. This is the second Monday in September.

The question of employing a music instructor came up, but of making definite action, the board turned the matter over to Professor H. Moore, with power to act without judgment. Regarding the new negro school, the territory near Exchange it was decided to open the territory as soon as the number of negroes justified the employment of an additional teacher. In case that a few negro pupils to start the school, the territory near Exchange avenue has been dropped for the present, and the sessions will be held in the negro church building.

The North Fort Worth school opened with an exceptionally good faculty, as follows: M. H. Moore, principal; A. B. Fincher, principal; H. C. Saunders, second principal. The teachers are: Miss Erskin, Sadie Moore, Christian, Nannie Osce, Mary Maggie Moore, Grace Burkett, Mace McFadden and Lucy Boyd, Eva Williams. Miss Guyra is principal of the negro school, with Mrs. Fow as assistant.

The following compose the board of trustees: T. E. Littlepage, president; P. P. Hopkins, treasurer; J. A. Her, J. W. Strain and J. W. Moore.

Fort Worth has heard the song of the mosquito. Fort Worth has felt the incision of the genus culex and his Jersey ribbed bill as it drilled into the cuticle until the tender spot reached, he took an intoxicating and satisfying pull at his victim's blood, all the while keeping his north eye open for indications of murderous blows expected from the extremities of his enemy.
Mr. Culex is born any old place. His ancestors inhabit old rain barrels, slop buckets, floors under leaky sinks, from Siberia to Jersey and from the snowbound land about the place Peary looked for even into the everglades of Florida.

But, bad as he is, Culex harms no one by scattering disease. He has cousins, smaller in size, that are the allies of chill tonics and sure cures for malaria. For malaria, the people are indebted to that branch of the mosquito genera known as Anopheles.

bottom of a sack into which were poured hundreds of "copper cents,"

"Punctu" started in to drilling holes in the pennies—hence his nickname has been adopted by science and today his full appellation is "Anopheles graphed on several occasions and has three-fourths of the length of the front of which emigrated in 1899 to the prov-

the most dreaded. Relatives of this

Greenwall's Open Season

Greenwall's opera house, which has been extensively refitted and redecorated for the coming season, opens Monday, Sept. 2, with the "Rajah of Bhong," a musical comedy fresh off the bat.

Among the attractions listed for this season here is the jolly comedy,
"Foxy Grandpa." Since last season much humor has been "written in" and many new songs have been added, among them "The New Polly, Pretty Polly," "The Boiling Lesson," "My Brown-Eyed Daisy," "I'm Not at Liberty to Tell You," and the "Poor Old Sislar."

James O'Neill, who has just returned from his two months' tour of Ireland and the continent, says the considerable has been written about sea-sickness, and that there is a standing reward awaiting for anyone who can discover a remedy for it. Since Mr.
O'Neill's arrival here, he claims to have discovered the remedy and his remedy seems simple enough. "When you feel the symptoms coming on," says Mr. O'Neill, "all you have to do is to go out and sit under a tree—then you will soon recover."

With the engagement of Thurlow
Bergen as leading man for Florence Roberts, who was last seen in "Zaza," two years ago, John Cort has completed the cast of "The Strength of the Weak," which will go into rehearsal at the Berkeley Lyceum theater, Sept. 1, and open the season of the Broad Street theater, Philadelphia, Sept. 17, for two weeks. Miss Roberts will use "The Strength of the Weak" next season until she returns to New York with several new plays.

The company engaged in support of Max Figman this season includes Helen Holmes, Wilson Forbes, John C.
Brownell, William O'Day, E. F. Power,
Ernest Orr, Clara Louise Chapman,
Beatrice McClure and Cecil Bennett.
Mr. Figman's season in a recent successful comedy begins in Troy, N. Y., Oct. 15, and embraces a tour of the northwest and south, after which he will be seen in New York in a new comedy by an American author.

Handsome and talented S. Miller Kent will appear this season in "Raffes," the Amateur "Cracksman."

Here's another story by Al H. Wilson, who is looked for an early appearance in his latest and greatest success entitled "Metz in the Alps." Mr.
Wilson was playing last season at Niagara Falls, and to make it pleasant for his company, hired several rigs and invited everyone to a view of the great water fall. When they arrived in sight of that immense sheet of water, rushing in a graceful curver over the precipices to the rocks below, they were filled with astonishment and awe—and expressions of amazement were the order of the moment. Mr.
Wilson, turning to an old German smoking a pipe, exclaimed, "Isn't it grand, glorious, wonderful how it flows!" The German looked at him a moment, knocked the ashes from his pipe, and said, "I don't see anything wonderful about dot-vots to hinder it."

OVALATION GIVEN COL. CAMPBELL

His Journey Home Is Marked by Triumphs

CROWD AT STATION

"Campbells Are Coming" Is Struck Up by Band on Arrival in Palestine

PALESTINE, Texas, Aug. 18.—The greatest ovation ever tendered a Texan was given to Governor Thomas M.
Campbell and party upon their arrival here from Dallas tonight.

Fully two-thirds of the population of the city turned out to greet the man who was so highly honored at the state Democratic convention this week. Before the arrival of the train bells were rung and whistles blown, and Captain Bob Harris and Crawford Lane, Dashiell of Jewett, as the train rolled into the station.

Palentine band played while the crowd cheered.

In the Campbell party were Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, Miss Fannie Campbell,
Mitchell Campbell, Judge S. Mc-Means, A. G. Greenwood, Bus Barton and others. The party was escorted to the depot, where the exercises of the evening took place.

Judge Morris made the first speech. The first number was the song
"The Campbells Are Coming," by Mrs.
Edward Kunz, accompanied by the band and Professor Kunz on the violin.

Campbell Thanks Texans
Judge Morris then introduced Mr.
Campbell, who made a short talk, heartily thanking citizens for the ovation and people of Texas for the honor conferred upon him. He also reviewed part of the campaign. He was frequently applauded. Campbell said the only political ambition he ever had was to be realized; that there were dangers confronting the country no man would deny, and he was proud that the people had at last decided to let the people run the government. He was followed by A. G. Greenwood, who during the talk said the party had been given ovation all along the route, especially at Longview and Jacksonville.

McCMeans Cheered
Next came Judge S. McCMeans, the man who is responsible for such good organization during the Campbell campaign. He was loudly cheered.
L. J. Dashiell of Jewett followed. Mc-
Means and was heartily cheered.

Congressman Gregg followed and was given the attention of an entire plaza of citizens and public men made talks. T. B. Greenwood, president of the Anderson County Campbell Club, reviewed the talk made at last decade of his speech. Mr. Campbell has cause to be proud of the magnificent ovation given him. Stores and saloons of the city were all closed during the hours of exercises.

Campbell Worn Out
Campbell is worn out by the long journey and the strenuous work done during the exercise a handsomely decorated carriage took the Campbell party from the depot. Reception takes place Monday night.

NEW CITIZENSHIP LAW A CORKER

Inspectors Will Make It Hard to Become American

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Making immigrants into American citizens will be a much more difficult matter after September 27. On that date the new law goes into effect, and every citizenship applicant must appear in person in the future the federal government is to supervise all naturalization business. The old plan of leaving everything to clerks at state and other courts is to be abolished. A new office is now being organized in Washington—a department of naturalization—under the department of commerce and labor, and every alien who becomes a citizen will do so with the knowledge and consent of this department.

What are the requirements of the new law? The answer is long and complicated. But here is a typical case.

Let us suppose that Joseph Spagetti comes to America from Rome, arriving September 28. The new law will not be of effect.

Suppose Spagetti decides to go to Hazelton, Pa., to work in the coal mines. He has friends in Hazelton, and now there is no hurry about Joseph's papers. He will gain nothing by applying at once, for, under the new law, he must have lived in the country five years before he can become a naturalized citizen, and he must wait two years between his first and second papers.

Suppose, at the end of a year or two,
Joseph Spagetti decides that he will stay. He will have to go to the clerk of the court (either federal or state), having jurisdiction where he resides, and make his declaration. This will cost $10. He can do it through an interpreter, if he is unable to speak English. The clerk of the court will fill a form, and the applicant is to sign it, white, or a negro, etc.

There are nine states in which this simple declaration will entitle him to vote. It will also entitle him to take up public lands.

Joseph Spagetti must now wait two years, at least, before he can be re-elected. So Joseph waits until the five-year period has expired—at five years from the date of his landing.

He is back in Hazelton, in September. Joseph looks up two neighbors for witnesses—for this time he must go to the court with witnesses. These witnesses must be persons of good character and they must be able to swear of their own knowledge that Joseph Spagetti has lived in the United States five years.

This time Joseph must also $2 as a fee for the clerk of the court.

But, before he goes to the clerk, he must do another very important thing.
He must write to Washington, to the bureau of naturalization, asking the clerk to send him a certificate showing that he has been in the United States five years. The bureau will examine the immigration records at New York, and finding everything all he has represented, will send him this certificate free of cost.

So Spagetti goes to the court for final citizenship with his certificate, a copy of his original declaration, and his two American citizen witnesses.

This time, the law specifies, he must tell his desires to the clerk in English and the clerk must find out if he can talk English.

Then the two witnesses will be questioned. The answers to these questions thereupon under oath, and will be put into the shape of two affidavits.
The witnesses will be asked whether Spagetti is a good law-abiding person;
whether he is within the best rested or sent to jail; whether he knows about
the American constitution and form of government, and likes it. The witnesses court also be asked a few questions about themselves.

If everything appears satisfactory
Spagetti will sign the forms application and the witnesses will sign the affidavits. Then the clerk will tell Spa-getti to come back on a certain date—about three months later—when the court is in session. So he gives up his $2 and all his papers and goes away.

Three months later, the ceremony of naturalization is held. The applicant is made out in duplicate, and one copy, with the affidavits and certificate attached, is within the best rested or sent to jail; whether he knows about
the American constitution and form of government, and likes it. The witnesses court also be asked a few questions about themselves.

If, however, Spagetti is found to be unworthy, he will be refused. He will then be asked to appear in court on the day set for Spagetti to come in, and to oppose the granting of citizenship to him. The court, perhaps, will finally accuse him of being unworthy, and the district attorney could note an appeal to the higher court.

PRICES DECEIVE

Leading Brokers Acknowledge

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Leaders of the present sensational advance in the stock market deny indignantly that all signs point to the contrary. They say they are not selling to the public and don't want the public in Wall street in the fact of their piling up wealth.

Prices and Values Differ
Leading bankers insist that the present prices do not by any means mark the value of securities. This is true in many instances and the course of prices indicates the argument which for several months was made to look fallacious, that honesty in the conduct of corporations and a bull argument.
That argument was originally enunciated in this column, but the campaign of "The Seven" which finally accomplished its purpose of making the federal government promise not to prosecute the trust criminals, made the argument ridiculous until now, but financial markets are resuming the normal condition.

CROP TO BE ENORMOUS

While there will undoubtedly be tight money this autumn, the enormous value of the crops must not be lost out of sight. Wall street proposes to discount the value of the crops early in the season and to move them later.
There is evidence that the public is beginning to buy stocks being incited by the great profits that have come suddenly to the investors.

MISSING DUKE NOW PLANTER

French Traveler Finds Archduke Johann of Austria

THOUGHT INSANE

Lives Near Buenos Ayres and is Contented With His Present Condition

(Copyright, 1906, by Hearst News Service.)

BY MALCOLM CLARKE.

BERLIN, Aug. 13.—Archduke Johann of Austria, or Johann Orth, as he is preferred to be known, who disappeared many years ago and whom everybody had thought dead, is now said to be alive after all.

The famous French author, George Lozier, who has just returned from an extensive trip through South America, states that he found the former archduke living happily as land owner and cattle raiser not far from Buenos Ayres.

"One evening," he says, "when I was detained after a long day's travel, I was received with great hospitality at a hacienda. Although my host spoke French fluently, his accent told me that he was either a German or an Austrian."

"The next morning, when I was looking over his large library, I found it to contain nearly all German books. Over the fireplace hung a painting of a man in a military uniform. While I was looking at this my host entered and I then recognized him."

"Your Imperial highness, everybody in Europe considers you dead. How do you know that," he replied, with a

TEAGUE GROWING AT LIVELY RATE

New Freestone County Town Developing Rapidly

Special to The Telegram.

TEAGUE, Texas, Aug. 13.—In these days when, though Texas is constantly assimilating the stranger from afar and adding him to her ever-increasing population, her towns are, generally speaking, mapped out, built and possessed, it is refreshing to study a community which is yet in its first flush of growth, where the builder is yet in the struggle with the primitive, and where the cotton stalks are scarcely obliterated in the streets. Your representative had thought dead, is now said to be alive after all.

Five months ago the site of Teague was merely a cotton patch, about one month ago regular passenger train service was extended there, the freight depot still being duty as a passenger station, while today a national bank, the First National, with a capital of $50,000, has just moved into its handsome new brick building, and a number of other brick business houses are under rapid construction. The railway is constructing a $20,000 building of cream-colored brick for a passenger station and division offices and thoroughly up-to-date shops, with twelve-stall roundhouse. These to be operated and lighted by electricity and fitted with the most modern machinery. In a few months the pay roll at Teague will approximate $30,000 per month.

From this point one division of the line reaches northwest to Fort Worth, in connection with the Santa Fe, at Cleburne, a distance of 120 miles, another northeast to Dallas, ninety-eight miles, which will soon be completed, while another is being pushed southeast to Houston, 150 miles, as rapidly as men and machinery can do it. The growth of the town has been almost meteoric, but in no sense speculative, for behind every dollar of investment here there is a solid, concrete reason, product will carry the name of Freestone county throughout all the great fruit markets of the country. The soil which is mostly a sandy loam, and quality are already established, and are now very low, ranging from $5 to $15 per acre. These lands are perfectly adapted to vegetables as well as to fruit and to cotton, corn and staple crops.

Lignite coal of good quality is found within a mile and a half of Teague, while shale clay is found of fine quality and ample quantity near the town. This is the location of a brick works, a canning factory, a steam laundry and a bottling works. Stores with ample stocks of goods are already established in the principal lines of trade, and more are coming. There is a weekly paper, the Teague Chronicle, ably edited by W. T. Patton and another bank, with a capital of $25,000, will soon be opened for business.

"DROWNED" MAN SAVED BY GRIT

Rescuers Persistency for Two Hours Effective

Special to The Telegram.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 13.—In restoring to life a man who had been under water at least twenty-three minutes, perhaps half an hour, United States life savers have made a record and put a new aspect upon drowning cases.

It shows that many a life has been thrown away by rescuers who have thought it not worth while to work longer to revive victims of the water. It is hard work and takes muscle, but it brings results if done diligently.

Robert Mooney, 34, blacksmith, of Wakefield, R. I., is walking about a live man, because Captain E. M. Knowles, superintendent of the Third district, continued his efforts long after Mooney would have been given up by less experienced hands and carted away to the morgue.

With two companions Robert Mooney was in a flat-bottomed sail boat, which capsized. Mooney was caught by the sail and held under water by it. After extricating themselves, Mooney's companions lost some time in going to his aid. He was then still struggling. A man who could not swim held onto the boat with one hand and took Mooney by the head. The other, Mooney thus remaining under water until the trio was rescued.

Life Savers George W. Streeter and James H. Moore were working on the man five minutes before Captain Knowles arrived and took charge. Life Saver Charles F. Whaley and Life Saver George Gardner and Charles H. Whaley also took part.

Here is the chronology of the Mooney case:
4:20 p. m.—Boat capsized. (Mooney's watch stopped).
4:25 p. m.—Mooney's struggles ceased.
4:53 p. m.—Mooney gotten ashore. Laid on face, mouth pried open.

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 13.—Up to noon today no further advices were received by either the executive department or General Hunter regarding the situation at Brownsville.

General Hunter was seen regarding the conference he had with General McAuskey, commander of the department of Texas, relative to the situation, but General Hunter said nothing could be given out for publication. That the government intends to take steps in the matter is evident, but what these steps are have not been disclosed. General McAuskey is thoroughly familiar with the situation.

Rockefeller Is Attacked by Cholera Morbus

Special to The Telegram.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 13.—Over-indulgence in the luscious watermelon caused John D. Rockefeller to suffer an attack of cholera morbus Friday. He likes watermelon and, despite the advice of his physician, ate too freely of it Thursday night. He suffered much pain Thursday night and remained in bed Friday, remaining away from prayer meeting at the Euclid Avenue Baptist church.

Unable to Keep Date
The news came out today as the result of his falling to keep an engagement with the passenger agents of the Erie railroad, who had been invited to visit Forest Hill Friday. The agents arrived in motor cars and were met at the lodge at the entrance to Forest Hill by W. C. Rudd, the old king's brother-in-law, who informed that Mr. Rockefeller was indisposed and would be unable to meet them as he had planned to do.

Mr. Rudd, in his famous brother-in-law's automobile, headed the party and a trip over the estate was made, the guide pointing out places of interest.

QUAKE RUINS RICH LANDS

Best Part of Chile Damaged by Shocks

WIND FANS FIRE

People Pray in Streets of Valparaiso While Numerous Building Collapse

Dozen Towns Ruined

This includes most of the rich section of the progressive little republic, and within it are dozens of thriving towns. Most of them are in ruins. The disturbance was felt, but not in its full severity in the most northern boundary of the country. There was not a shock in La Serena on the frontier, but subterranean rumblings were distinctly heard.

WIND FANS FLAMES

Following the earthquake a severe storm came down from the north and it is blowing a gale from the sea. This makes it all the more difficult to cope with the fires, which are constantly starting in new places.

QUAKES CONTINUE

To make it still worse, the quakes are continuing and every few minutes there is a renewed tremor of the ground. As a result of this the entire population that remains in panic-stricken. It is feared that what is left of the city will be reduced to a fresh shock. Even if no further damage should result, the loss of property will be stupendous and the death list much larger.

FIVE THOUSAND HOMELESS

The entire country between here and Santiago was swept clean. In this area of devastation there are only a few towns of Huelmo, about midway between Santiago and Valparaiso. There were about 5,000 people there, and nearly all are rendered homeless. All are suffering from the lack of food. Fires have in every instance, so far as can be learned, followed the earthquake.

What was left after the first shock was destroyed by fire. While it is too early to speculate, it is safe to say that it will be years before Chile recovers from this, the greatest blow she has ever suffered. The present property loss will run far into the millions. Business of all kinds is at a complete standstill and must remain so for weeks.

FIRES UNCHECKED

At this hour (6 p. m.) all hope of stopping the flames has been abandoned. Rapidly the fires are eating their way northward and not a vestige of the buildings are left behind them. All is swept clean. As far as the eye can see is one sea of flame. The fire started at the Plaza de Armas and the shock had hardly subsided before the streets were lighted up by burning buildings. Many of the engine houses were torn down, and the destruction and the machines were unavailable.

DARKNESS OVER SCENE

Fully half of the town is gone and the flames are sweeping on unchecked. Whole blocks of substantial buildings were literally thrown from their foundations and the walls pitched into the streets in a jumble of wreckage, under which many persons are believed to be dead or injured. Darkness, as over the whole scene, save for the frequent flashes of fires which are cutting paths in the night.

FOOD GROWS SHORT

The telegraph operator in Santiago said he could hear the roar of the guns as they hurled shot into the deserted buildings. In the path of the flames were most of the great warehouses where much of the surplus food supplies are stored, and the loss of this is irreparable. Thousands of persons are almost without a bite of food. The stoppage of the railway prevents supplies from coming in.

PRAY IN STREETS

A messenger has arrived from Quilicura, twenty-six miles out, and he says that the town is in ruins. When he left the people were praying in the streets and it was evident that the loss of life has been very heavy. He declared that the entire district through which he traveled to reach Valparaiso, looked as though it had swept by a cyclone.

SHOCK CAME SUDDENLY

It is recalled now that the first shock came without the slightest premonition. Thursday was calm and beautiful and the sea was as placid as a summer lake. Suddenly after 8 o'clock there was a sudden wrenching, and with a loud roar buildings fell in all directions. Many persons did not have a chance to leave their homes and were buried in the wreckage. As the earth swayed and rocked there were loud rumblings and after the first shock tremors continued throughout the night. Most of them were light, but there was sufficient force to produce a panic.

PRIESTS FAIL TO REASSURE

The native population, most of whom are very poor, gathered in the dark streets and falling on their knees prayed loudly for hours. The priests did everything within their power to reassure their parishioners, but even they were almost helpless to restore anything like a feeling of confidence. All night the panic went on and when morning broke long lines of pale-faced persons could be seen wending their way to the hills, many of them dragging with them their poor little belongings. All were hungry and none had slept a wink.

Dead Left Unburied All day the exodus has continued and now the police and troops are the chief residents left. They have been working without intermission ever since the first shock and most of the time without food. They have strict orders to shoot all looters and many of these should have been summarily executed. No effort has been made to bury the bodies, many of which are still where they fell. The banks have been heavy sufferers.

Most of them are in ruins and their vaults are buried under tons of wreckage. They are being guarded by troops as far as possible. It is now believed that the sweep of the earthquake was of greater extent than at first believed. A report has come in from Valparaiso, which lies 300 miles north of Santiago, that the towns are wrecked and in flames. It was a thriving place of about five thousand inhabitants.

REPUBLICANS MEET

Negroes Are in Majority at Assembly of Party in Indian Territory

MUSKOGEE, I. T., Aug. 13.—The republican convention for the purpose of electing committeemen from each township, town and ward, was held in this city today, pursuant to a call of the Indian Territory republican executive committee. A spirited contest ensued over the election of a temporary chairman.

J. S. Holden of Fort Gibson was named as chairman by C. W. Raymond and his negroes. C. C. Ayers was elected and presided at the afternoon session.

There were thirty-five delegates of the tenth recording district, which were negroes. In the convention, two-thirds which were negroes.

WANT CITY PARK FOR EASTER HUNT

Early Application Has Been Filed With City Council

If the early bird catches the worm, then the Ladies' Aid Society of the Christian Tabernacle has a good chance to get a prize. It has been a custom now sanctioned by years of observance, to hold on the Saturday before Easter Sunday, an egg hunt at the city park.

The affair has become of so much importance that it has become one of the desired things. At first the proceeds for an admission was charged for all who entered the grounds, went to the increment of the fund available for the improvement of the park. Later by the custom has been departed from and it has become a private speculation, or at least the profits, if any, have not gone to the park fund, but to some other object in which the general public is not concerned.

Among the papers which will be submitted to the city council Monday night is the application of the Ladies' Aid Society named above, for the use of the city park for the egg hunt of Easter, 1907. It is signed by Mrs. J. H. Kennison, as secretary.

REVOLUTION BREAKS OUT

Santo Domingo Again Hot Bed of Rebellion

CAPE HAITIEN, Hayti, Aug. 13.—A serious revolution, according to advice received there by a courier today, has broken out in Santo Domingo. Revolutionary bands, under the command of General Navarro are said to have landed at the city and attacked and captured Dajabon, which was pillaged and abandoned after twenty persons had been killed.

The revolutionists are now said to be near Guayubin, and are marching on to Monte Christi. The command of General Deschamps is anxiously awaited by the revolutionists. It is understood that he will assume the command of the forces and date the government in favor of former President Jimenez.

A state of anarchy prevails in the northern part of Santo Domingo. All commerce with the interior has been stopped and traffic in the northern districts has been prohibited.

13 YEARS OLD AND A MOTHER

Physician Finds Pitiful Case. Infant Dies

PAULINA, Pa., Aug. 13.—Called to investigate the death of an infant at McKeesport, Deputy Coroner S. M. Paulin discovered one of the most pitiful cases ever reported to the coroner's office. In a room at 5033 Bryon street he found two children, one living and one dead. On a cot he found the body of Lillian Green, 18-months-old infant, and by the side of the bed another child, Fannie Green, the mother of the baby, was dead.

Thirteen-Year-Old Mother. On questioning the child-mother, Paulin found that she was but 14 years old and that her child was born when she was only 13 years of age. Mrs. Fannie Green is a good looking girl and was broken-hearted over the death of her daughter. She has not been living with her parents and has been forced to work at house work in order to support herself and child.

It was with difficulty that the coroner could persuade her to let him make an autopsy on the infant. He found that the child's death was due to natural causes.

TRAIN WRECKED NO ONE INJURED

Twentieth Century Limited Derailed During Fast Run

ELYRIA, Ohio, Aug. 13.—A misunderstanding of signals caused the derailment of the Twentieth Century Limited train on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad.

No one was seriously injured although the passengers were badly shaken and several railroad men were slightly injured. The train was east bound and running at a high rate of speed, hit the derailer at the junction of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and the engine, tender and two cars, the buffet and the diner left the track. The engine was badly derailed and was knocked on its side, while the chairs in the two cars were pushed into one car and the passengers were thrown in a heap on the floor.

Remarkable Escape That no one was seriously injured is remarkable. Engineer Charles W. Smith, F. J. Wallace, stuck to his post and was badly bruised, Fireman J. Hartwick, who is reported as responsible for the wreck jumped and escaped with a few bruises.

BIG HOLLISTER'S LONG SHOT

BY JOHN B. CARRINGTON, San Antonio, Texas.

It had not rained for five months through the brush, looked like a scorched, white-brown fuz. The hot sirocco-like wind stirred now and then, its course marked by a trail of white dust. In the mud of a nearly-dried water hole stood a sorry-looking bunch of scrawny cattle. On the hillside above the water hole a buzzard circled and flapped, an ascending spiral reaching up toward the brass sky, a living signal of disaster. The steers nibbled at the happy owner of this ranch.

Big Hollister, trotting his pony through the brush, looked like a gaunt and dour-thidden. His face was lined and seamed and showed the hard look of utter desperation, the bitterness of a man who has seen the forces of life were leagued against him. He looked at the dead cattle on the slope above and he opened her dress and tried to staunch the flow of blood. The bullet had grazed her side, and she had fallen. He was binding it up when she recovered consciousness and opened her eyes.

"Don't," she said, "what are you doing?" "Don't," he said, "with my modesty she pulled her dress over her half-bared breast. "Are you hurt?" he asked hoarsely. "My God, I hadn't thought of that. I can't marry her, I'm a ruined man. I'm worse than a beggar—I'm in debt." "Let me call Sally, she'll know what to do."

Old Mrs. Kincheol took the same view. It was agreed to say that Betsy would not go to the Ancona picnic with Mrs. Kincheol's Mary, and having arrived too late had stayed all night. The fact that everybody from the ranch had gone to the Ancona picnic except the two old people made the matter simple.

"That afternoon the cowboys returned from town and Hollister rode off with them to find the missing horses of the McCarty ranch, and if possible catch the escaped thief."

A month later the mortgage on Hollister's ranch was foreclosed and the place was sold from under him. He later left the town with the remnants of his cattle which a ranchman fortunate enough to have running water had purchased.

"Your dogies look bad," he said to Hollister. "Dam bad," said Hollister grimly. "What are you going to do?" "Sell out and quit the country," said Hollister shortly.

"I'm sorry to tell you I have a warrant against you."

"For going to Spotty Bowers' house on the Fourth of July, setting fire to it, and shooting Spotty when he came around the roof to put the fire out."

"Oh, I didn't do any such thing." "Where were you on the Fourth of July night, you weren't in town."

"On the Fourth of July," repeated Hollister blankly. "Why I was at my ranch."

"One of your men was before the grand jury and testified that you left early that morning and didn't come back until the next afternoon."

"Did he?" said Hollister curtly, "well I guess that's straight."

"Well, wasn't you mind telling me how you spent the night of the Fourth of July?"

"I reckon that's my business," said Hollister. "The sheriff struck his right thumb carelessly into the belt over his pistol holster."

"You'll come along with me to jail without any trouble?" he asked.

second shot, as the fellow pitched forward out of his saddle. Quick as a flash he shot the man on the side of the head. The horse stamped and in the melee the third man dashed into the brush. Hollister's brain reeled as he saw Betsy carried off tied to a wild galloping horse. He dashed forward in pursuit, regardless of danger, and a minute later two bullets whistled close to his head. Hollister bowed over his horse and rode on. The running horses struck a trail and turned down in pell-mell. Hollister flanked and as his own horse was fresh a moment later he seized the bride of Betsy's pony, serving into the brush he drew rein and pulling his knife out the ropes that bound her.

"Are you hurt?" he asked hoarsely. "My God, I hadn't thought of that. I can't marry her, I'm a ruined man. I'm worse than a beggar—I'm in debt."

"I reckon that's my business," said Hollister. "The sheriff struck his right thumb carelessly into the belt over his pistol holster."

"You'll come along with me to jail without any trouble?" he asked.

Hollister burst into mirthless laughter. "Hell, yes, if you'll first help me drive these dogies over to Bob Walker's." "I reckon I ought to tell you," said the sheriff, "that the case is pretty strong against you. First Spotty Bowers has stole cattle from you, you have shot at him and threatened his life, then you was missing on the Fourth of July, and last, and worst of all, you are the only man in the country who could have killed Spotty Bowers the way he was killed. He was shot from the side of a mountain 750 yards away, and shot plumb through the heart first time. You are the only man on the Big Divide that can shoot that straight."

Hollister smiled grimly. "I can shoot a little," he said, "but considering I was something over forty miles away from Spotty Bowers' on the night of the Fourth of July I don't believe I can shoot well enough to put a bullet through his heart at that distance."

"But where were you on the night of the Fourth?" "That," said Hollister, "is my business, I reckon."

And this was the only answer that he would give during the trial at Ancon the next week. Why would he not tell where he was on the Fourth of July? Had he not threatened this man's life? Besides he could shoot. Hollister could, for he had given evidence of it at picnics and turkey shoots, as well as in the district where the shot that killed Bowers was, according to the widow's testimony, a phenomenal hit at 750 yards by moonlight.

Things were looking bad for Big Hollister. The worst of it all was his tactful attitude of grim indifference. He had failed, failed utterly, and quietly with himself there would be a little theatrical satisfaction in drying the sweat from his forehead.

But that was one person whom Hollister reckoned without. Von of the trial reached her, and the understanding that Hollister's guilt lay in his inability or refusal to prove an alibi. Big Doble had told her a little jeeringly of Hollister's failure and the selling of the cattle. The meaning of Hollister had done flashed over her, and the chivalry of what he was now doing to protect her roused the woman in her. She mounted her horse and galloped to Ancon.

It was a starry cool room that listened to her fiery outburst. With Irish eloquence she told the story of how Hollister saved her from the horse thieves and now chose to risk hanging rather than bring her good name in jeopardy.

"That's the man," she cried with tears on her lashes, "who is worth a woman's love. And if you hang him for being the bravest man and the best shot, you'll have to hang me too, for I love him."

It was an unprecedented thing, but the jury rose up and cheered her. The old judge beamed over the top of his glasses before calling for the verdict, and said:

"Maybe Big Hollister can't shoot well enough to hit Spotty Bowers' heart at forty miles, but he made a mighty long and mighty good shot when he reached Miss Betsy McCarty's heart."

Good wicks needs no bush, and a gold brick needs no hod carrier.

Hollister burst into mirthless laughter. "Hell, yes, if you'll first help me drive these dogies over to Bob Walker's." "I reckon I ought to tell you," said the sheriff, "that the case is pretty strong against you. First Spotty Bowers has stole cattle from you, you have shot at him and threatened his life, then you was missing on the Fourth of July, and last, and worst of all, you are the only man in the country who could have killed Spotty Bowers the way he was killed. He was shot from the side of a mountain 750 yards away, and shot plumb through the heart first time. You are the only man on the Big Divide that can shoot that straight."

Hollister smiled grimly. "I can shoot a little," he said, "but considering I was something over forty miles away from Spotty Bowers' on the night of the Fourth of July I don't believe I can shoot well enough to put a bullet through his heart at that distance."

"But where were you on the night of the Fourth?" "That," said Hollister, "is my business, I reckon."

And this was the only answer that he would give during the trial at Ancon the next week. Why would he not tell where he was on the Fourth of July? Had he not threatened this man's life? Besides he could shoot. Hollister could, for he had given evidence of it at picnics and turkey shoots, as well as in the district where the shot that killed Bowers was, according to the widow's testimony, a phenomenal hit at 750 yards by moonlight.

Things were looking bad for Big Hollister. The worst of it all was his tactful attitude of grim indifference. He had failed, failed utterly, and quietly with himself there would be a little theatrical satisfaction in drying the sweat from his forehead.

But that was one person whom Hollister reckoned without. Von of the trial reached her, and the understanding that Hollister's guilt lay in his inability or refusal to prove an alibi. Big Doble had told her a little jeeringly of Hollister's failure and the selling of the cattle. The meaning of Hollister had done flashed over her, and the chivalry of what he was now doing to protect her roused the woman in her. She mounted her horse and galloped to Ancon.

It was a starry cool room that listened to her fiery outburst. With Irish eloquence she told the story of how Hollister saved her from the horse thieves and now chose to risk hanging rather than bring her good name in jeopardy.

RAMPOLLA DYING OF BROKEN HEART

Cardinal Wanted to Be Pope of Rome

It is reported that Cardinal Rampolla is seriously ill. It is even said that his death may only be a matter of a few days. While he is still a comparatively young man, his health was undermined by the labor he performed while secretary of state to Leo XIII and his disappointment over the failure to be elected to succeed that prelate was so keen that he has never gotten over it.

Cardinal Rampolla is one of the few members of the sacred college of noble birth. He holds the family title of Marquis del Tindaro. He has had no important office in the church since the death of Leo XIII and is seldom consulted by the new pope, never the subject which he studied for so many years. The relations of the vast can to foreign countries.

Cardinal Rampolla was born Polizzi in the island of Sicily, thirty-three years ago and was educated in the Jesuit college in Rome. He entered the papal service in 1869 and before being appointed secretary of state to Leo XII, he was papal nuncio at Madrid.

When Leo XIII died it was considered almost certain that Cardinal Rampolla would be chosen his successor, but his election was prevented by the interference of the emperor of Austria, who protested strongly to the college against it. It is interesting to know that the emperor of Austria, who protested strongly to the college against it, was made at the request of Emperor William of Germany.

THE STORK HAS MEDALS FOR THIS

Special to The Telegram.
NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—The stork never flies over the Emanuel Leudesdorff residence. He always stops. He made his twenty-first visit there recently, in Stuyvesant Heights, Brooklyn.
This time a little daughter was brought. She is their seventeenth living child, and her parents welcomed her as though she was the first one. Her eight sisters also rejoiced.
"It was this way," says little Minnie Leudesdorff, five from the bottom, "it wasn't a burglar brought the baby, it was a stork, a real one. I know, for I have seen him in Central park."
"I was asleep in bed the last time he came, for it was night time. He was at the window and knocking to get in. He had awful long, long, legs, a long neck, and a long, long, long bill. Then he went away, but he must have gotten in some open window. There was a lot more noise, and after awhile, I went to sleep. Then papa came after us, and all the children went into mamma's room and there was a new baby. And we all liked it."
"Children are fine," declares Papa Leudesdorff, who assumes to speak with authority. "The stork can never come too often to suit me and my good wife."
"Children are a blessing. It is no trouble to bring 'em up if you only know how. The best method is to spend your money with the butcher and baker. That is what my wife and I believe, and our children are all healthy. No doctor or druggist has ever gotten rich out of us."
None of the twenty-one children born to this remarkable household have ever been quadruplets, triplets or even twins. Their old stork believes in single, individual and undivided babyhood.

WHY FRET AND WORRY when your child has a severe cold?

You need not fear pneumonia or other pulmonary diseases. Keep supplied with Ballard's Horehound Syrup—a positive cure for Colds, Coughs, Whooping Cough and Bronchitis.
Mrs. Hall of Sioux Falls, S. D., writes: "I have used your wonderful Ballard's Horehound Syrup on my children for five years. Its results have been wonderful." Sold by Covey & Martin.

MILLIONS WON; WHO IS LOSER?

Other Candidates Threaten to Street Buying

ALL STOCKS SOAR

Union and Southern Pacifics, Copper and Reading, Centers of Excited Market

Special to The Telegram.
NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The total number of shares of stock sold today was 1,611,660, against 257,350 the same day a year ago. The total par value of bonds sold today amounted to $1,965,000, against $1,404,000 the same day a year ago.

Pandemonium reigned in Wall street today. Conservatism was thrown to the winds. Investors, speculators and gamblers sat side by side buying stocks, buying everything and anything that they happened to think of. Everything went up. Millions of profits were made and the close of the day saw prices at the top figures with thousands of buying orders unfilled.

Advance Unchecked

Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania, the United States Steel shares and Copper and Reading were the most active issues. The Harriman pool in Union Pacific distributed the stock freely but was unable to check the wild advance. London was closed for a holiday and the thousands of orders came by cable to the New York market. This result of this condition was that today's trading was the heaviest Saturday in the history of Wall street, not even excepting the wild times of five years ago.

Sold in Blocks

The first transaction in Union Pacific was 30,000 shares, which left the prices at 155, an advance of 6 1/2 points over the previous day's closing. It did not get above that price during the day, but hundreds of thousands of shares were dealt in between 153 and 155. Transactions in Southern Pacific were almost as heavy, the price of 91 being established shortly after the opening with a block of 35,000 shares. Pennsylvania was up to 146 on the opening transaction. Steel was taken in hand early in the day and marketed to 45. Smelters rose to 160.

Harriman Trick Condemned

Just before the close there was a bear panic in Reading, which leaped 5 points to 149. "What's happening?" was the question in Wall street. Harriman's trick in putting Union Pacific on a 10-per cent basis is admitted to be conservative, there is universal condemnation of the action in using his knowledge of his pool in the stock.
It is common report that the Harriman pool in Union and Southern Pacifics was carrying about 1,000,000 shares. The pool's profits on this basis must amount to at least $16,000,000. The financial world does not hesitate to brand Harriman's action as highly dishonorable and while there is angry talk of bringing him to legal account for betraying his stockholders, it is believed in the street that there is no legal way to do so.

GRAIN MARKET HOLDS FIRM

Weather Conditions Have Good Effect on Corn

WHEAT GOES DOWN

Volume in Provision Trading Shows No Improvement. Oat Price Fluctuates

Special to The Telegram.
CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—Lower prices for wheat futures and for spot wheat, Liverpool being dull, is taking the edge off the keener tone of yesterday's market here. The easier tone abroad was the greater part of the day and up to about ten minutes of the close was dominated by the bears, but after that the unexpected strength developed by the coarse grains scared some shorts and reduced the amount of the day's decline. At the close September was 79 1/2 against 79 3/4 at the close of the day before. It touched a point today just a shade under its previous lowest.

Domestic Conditions

As far as domestic matters went there was a slightly better outlook for the maintenance of prices. Country acceptances of bids from here were reported decidedly smaller, one of the regular handlers of the cash grain stating that his firm's sales are now exceeding its purchases. The market for the greater part of the day and up to about ten minutes of the close was dominated by the bears, but after that the unexpected strength developed by the coarse grains scared some shorts and reduced the amount of the day's decline. At the close September was 79 1/2 against 79 3/4 at the close of the day before. It touched a point today just a shade under its previous lowest.

Weather Good For Corn

There being still no reason to complain of the weather for corn but rather much to make glad the heart of the farmers in that respect, traders here could see in the outlook nothing but lower prices and at the opening backed their opinions by liberal sales in the small trade.
When being heavy at the time was an additional inducement to work the bear, side, which was successful to the extent of 1/4, after that the market benefitted of friends and the hope of a rally, however, a few local operators took hold and gave the market a lively boost so that after selling at 84 1/2 while May after selling down to 44 1/2, rallied and closed at 44 1/2.

Oat Market

Selling of oats against what was bought in the country on yesterday afternoon's side was again a prominent feature of the cash trade. Buy- ing was slack until after the price had suffered to the extent of about half a cent. Near the close buying orders were sufficient to absorb what was then for sale and to make necessary the raising of prices. Traders in provisions were indifferent and the market showed no improvement so far as its volume was concerned and there was scarcely

BIG PRICES FOR MULES

The state of Missouri has gained a great reputation for growing big mules. It is said that the Boer was took all the small stock, and since then the point has been made to grow large mules. The demand and prices have grown accordingly. A Missouri paper mentions sales at $900 for a single mule, and the sale of a car load of twenty-four for $5,000, and that three large mules sold for $825, grown in Callaway county. A short time ago a span of roan mules grown in Cooper county, Missouri, which weighed 3,900 pounds, sold at $512.50. Another farm- ing man in that state sold eighteen mules for $4,200, one pair in the lot again sold at $600, which were 6 years old. There are several counties in Missouri which have become famous for the mules they grow. A good market for them is found at St. Louis, and a large part of the supply is sold to cotton planters in the south, where the mule is in more general use than elsewhere, and it is said that good prices and demands have prevailed in the last few years.
The Breeder's Gazette calls attention to the fact that the construction of the Panama canal is a new source of demand for mules, and says:
Now comes a third and most important factor in the trade. Uncle Sam has undertaken to make two islands of the Americas by trenching the Isthmus of Panama. The steam shovel and the dump car running on the track are already biting away in the cuts, but soon there will be need for the thousands of mules to do hauling and the other labor common on such construction work. The heaviest mules are being sought for this demand. Prices in the court day markets in Kentucky and Tennessee up to $500 a pair have already been paid for "Panama mules." This is encouraging. It makes no difference whether Uncle Sam is going to peel off his coat and do the work himself or whether he shall let the big job to contractors, the mules will be required and the money will be forthcoming for them. This demand will take out of the country thousands of the long-eared hybrids. We can well afford to lose them—they are without hope of posterity—and one man's money is as good as another's when it comes to paying for a mule. There is nowhere else for the government or the contractors to go to get the mules for the work on the big ditch. They must spend their mule money in the United States and they must buy big animals in order to make working them pay. It

POISONED BRAN FOR CUT-WORMS AND GRASSHOPPERS

According to the Oklahoma experiment station cut-worms and grasshoppers can be destroyed with poisoned bran, by placing the same in small piles on the infested areas, in the afternoon or evening. These insects not only prefer the bran to vegetation, but are attracted for some distance to it. The mash is made as follows: Bran fifty pounds, Paris green one pound. Thoroughly mix.
Moisten the above mixture with sweetened water (may be sweetened with two quarts of cheap molasses) and stir to a moist mash, but do not make it sloppy.
The mash should be used fresh and not put out when sour.
For cut-worms, the piles should be placed from two or three feet apart each way. For grasshoppers, the piles may be more widely scattered. Usually it is necessary only to put the poison around the edges or along one side of the field.
Do not allow the stock or fowls to get the mash on account of the contained poison.

Own a Little Dirt.

We notice in the Atlanta Constitution an editorial urging young men to invest their earnings in real estate, and that is good service. Every young man should make it a point to own a little dirt. The Constitution cites in its argument that there is money in real estate, that saying of old General Benjamin Butler: "My son, the Almighty is making more folks every day, but He is not making any more land." General Butler further said that he had traversed for forty years the route in Boston from the Lowell depot to his law office, and that at the time of the speaking he could not see along the route the signs of half a dozen commercial firms that were in business on that route when he first began to travel it. But, on the other hand, he did not know of half a dozen commercial firms that were in business in Boston at the beginning of the period, and held on to it who were not wealthy and sold, either for themselves or their families, at the end of the period. That is about the state of things everywhere. The man who buys a piece of real estate at a reasonable price, as a rule, makes a good investment. There is such a thing as being land poor, but there are not many men who are land poor. We repeat that every young man should make an effort to own a piece of the soil. There is no better savings bank than in a judicious investment in real estate. Dirt does not shrink up nor move away.—Monroe Enquirer.

GOOSE EGG FOR WACO Panthers Make the Score 9 to Nothing—Oh, My MAKE TWELVE HITS Wonder of the Game—Brown Strikes Out Nine Men. Play Here Today

The score was 9 to 0, and the game was played, not forfeited, as would be the natural supposition with that score. Waco might just as well forfeit them, though, for all the chance she has against the Panthers who could not beat the Irish Tons Glants. It was "an awful slaughter."

Table with columns: AB, BH, PO, A, E. Rows for Maloney, Magg, Pendergast, etc., showing statistics for the game.

The Navigators started off just as bravely as if they thought that they could have won that game yesterday, but that mood did not stay with them long. When the Panthers began to pile up runs on them, they got weak and gave up hope.

Table with columns: AB, BH, PO, A, E. Rows for Alken, Coyne, Shelton, etc., showing statistics for the game.

Browning was put on the firing line for the visitors and it seemed that he either struck out a batter or he let him get a hit. After the smoke had cleared away, it was perceived that he had caused nine men to take three futile vicious chops at the empty zone.

Table with columns: AB, BH, PO, A, E. Rows for Bigbee, Melver, Wallace, etc., showing statistics for the game.

Notes of the Game Waco is here again today. Game called at 4 p. m. "9 to 0." That sounds like some one had gotten mad at the umpire and took their dolls and went home.

AIR BRAKES FOR CITY STREET CARS Opening Wedge Put in on the Hemphill Line

Some of the big cars which were formerly in use on the stock yards line are now in use on the Hemphill street line. They are Nos. 62, 64, 65 and 66. One of them is equipped with air brakes and there is a reason for that.

Schedule a Fast One. The Hemphill street schedule is very fast and it is impossible to make it, if much time is lost in stopping and starting the cars. Those big cars weigh about as much as the smaller interurban cars, and they are, therefore, not so easily handled as the lighter cars.

SPECIAL FIRE INSPECTION ON

Inspector McFarland to Make General Report

GOOD FIRE DEPT Representative of Texas Fire Prevention Association Watches Men

James K. McFarland of Dallas, an inspector for the Texas Fire Prevention Association, which has its headquarters in that city, is now busy making a general inspection of the Fort Worth fire department, the waterworks system and the configuration hazard in the congested district and will make a report to the association following the completion of the work next week. Mr. McFarland began the work last week.

The details of his report will show as follows: Fire department—Construction and location of each fire station. Lists of apparatus and equipment employed. A general description of the fire alarm system used in Fort Worth. Waterworks—A general description of the mains, hydrants, water supply, number of hose streams available and a general description of the water supply, pump, engine, machinery and the boilers at the pumping station.

Hazard in congested district—A general description of the construction of the buildings in each city block in the downtown districts, with reference to each story.

The report will also contain general information as to the police department, the building laws, the fire limits and ordinances and their friends will participate in a smoker. Members of the club have been sorely vexed by the long wait for their furniture and even though the light fixtures, portieres and sash curtains have not been completed, but as J. B. Hawley, a member of the committee, says, "The temporary drop lights will answer every practical purpose and the other furnishings are luxuries rather than necessities so we can patiently await their coming, which will be in about two weeks."

Nothing has been spared to make the club rooms fit to meet every demand which the membership may put upon them. The heavy mission furniture, designed especially for the club, gives the rooms a home-like atmosphere, which is intensified by the plain woodwork and unostentatious wall hangings. Members and their friends who have had a glimpse of the interior of the rooms are complimenting J. E. Head, chairman of the house committee, on his selections of the elegant furnishings. Mr. Head has labored long and diligently to make the rooms of the University Club of Fort Worth the most suitable for the purpose of any in the south. The front room on the second floor of the building is to be the library, and except for the large fireplace which will occupy the wall on the south side, the walls of the entire room, which is 23x32 feet in size, will be lined solidly with bookcases. Several hundred books in uniform binding will be purchased by the club and these, combined with those which will be contributed by members, will fill the cases. Next to the library is the reception room and back of this the cafe. The buffet opens from the west and the billiard room is situated to the east of the building. The billiard table, which is of mission design, corresponding to the remainder of the furniture, is in process of construction and will be in place shortly. It will be one of the handsomest in the city. The chandeliers are being made to order after special patterns and are to be hammered wrought iron. The third floor of the building will be used as private apartments for members of the club.

Asked as to the progress of his work in making the inspection, Mr. McFarland said that it would be completed in about two weeks, and he was not able to say whether any suggestions as to improvement would be made. "The collection of refuse, trash and other matter said to be unsanitary, increase the fire risk in a densely populated district," he said. "The fire hazard is not a fire hazard," he said. "The fire hazard is not a fire hazard," he said. "The fire hazard is not a fire hazard," he said.

"They do," he said. "If a place is kept in good sanitary condition it is not the hazard that it is found to be dirty." "The fire hazard is not a fire hazard," he said. "The fire hazard is not a fire hazard," he said.

Asked further as to the inspection being made, Mr. McFarland said: "The districts in Washington, in recent years, and especially that in San Francisco, may be said to be responsible for similar inspections in other larger cities throughout the country. Reason for them is that insurance companies are now making extensive work for the prevention of disastrious conflagrations. Such an inspection has been made by the Texas Fire Prevention Association in Dallas and other cities of Texas."

Work of Fort Worth, on several occasions, has been the occasion of the work of your fire department at fires and from what I saw the Fort Worth fire department showed itself able to do its work promptly and effectively on these occasions.

"From what I have been told the water supply system is able to afford good pressure."

"As to rates, I can only say that the association has absolutely nothing to say about them, as they are fixed by each company. The association simply acts as a bureau of information to the companies, whose rates representatives inform the organization. Inspectors for the association make inspections in all parts of Texas."

Among the inspections made by Mr. McFarland since he has made his headquarters here, Jan. 1, 876, is a visit to the Texas State Fair at Dallas, where he inspected the exhibits of Armour & Co. and Swift & Co.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Lassiter and Misses Helen and Henry and Mrs. Davis left Wednesday for an absence of several weeks. Mrs. Davis will stop for a visit with Missouri friends. Mr. and Mrs. Lassiter and the young ladies will go on to the Lake Michigan resorts.

Mrs. Bacon Saunders and Miss Ray Saunders left Thursday over the Denver road for Denver, and will be away until the latter part of September. Miss Roberta Conner of Dallas joined them here and will remain with them during their absence. Both Mrs. Saunders and Miss Saunders have practically recovered from the injuries received in the Denver wreck near Fruitland a week ago.

Mrs. Wallace Hendricks and Miss Lillian Hendricks were the guests last week of Mrs. John Swabey. This week Mrs. Hendricks will be with Mrs. Geo. White and Miss Lillian with Mrs. Jas. Swayne. Mrs. Swayne has returned from Chikasha to be with Mr. Hendricks, who is here undergoing medical treatment. Mrs. Hendricks, who for a time was thought to be in a despondent state, is improving rapidly and a certainty of recovery is given out by the attending physicians.

ENCAMPMENT ENDS

Texas National Guard Shows Up Well at Camp Mabry

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 15.—The encampment of Texas National Guard comes to an end Sunday morning at about 10 o'clock. At that time state troops will begin leaving for their homes in different sections of the state. It will take about two days to get all the troops out. Adjutant General Hulen pronounced the state encampment a great success. A grand division review, which was scheduled for this afternoon, had to be declared off on account of heavy rains. This caused great disappointment to thousands of visitors who came to Austin to see the big event. The visitors had to wade through mud to get away from the camp. The regular troops will remain here until Oct. 15.

FAMILY DROWNS

Farmer, Wife and Babe Lose Lives Fording Swollen Creek

CHARLESTON, S. C., Aug. 15.—A special to the Evening Post from Wallhalla says a farmer, his wife and infant were drowned while trying to ford a swollen creek. John Wainwright and family were on their way to visit friends in the country. The night was dark and the farmer could not see. The wagon overturned and the occupants were swiftly swept down stream.

The University Club of Fort Worth opened its quarters on the second and third floors of the new Trammell building Friday for the first time and from this time on the rooms will be open to the members from 9 a. m. until 12 p. m. every day in the year. Members of the club have been sorely vexed by the long wait for their furniture and even though the light fixtures, portieres and sash curtains have not been completed, but as J. B. THE PAST

Jonathan—Ulrich, slender, delicate, pale, and Leo, sturdy and passionate, to their life comes Felicitas, Leo's aged rake, Rhaden, the sin between Felicitas and Leo occurs. A duel results in the death of Rhaden, and Leo appears, leaving his estate in the hands of an unscrupulous uncle. Four years later Leo returns from his wanderings and disquisitions, resolved to redeem the past, and to save his ruined estate. Here the story begins. He finds that two years before his return Ulrich had married Felicitas—not suspecting the real cause of the duel, and to remain true to his life-long companion, Ulrich, the noblest and most unselfish of men. In this struggle the deepest depths of hypocrisy, remorse and despair are sounded. The complex, the infinite detail, the thousand and one minute touches of the artist by which the marvelous results have been produced can only be hinted at in a brief review. With all its passion, action and variety, it is a sobering book, and on the whole moral and uplifting in its effect.

THE FACT ABOUT THE "BLUES"

What is known as the "Blues" is seldom occasioned by actual existing external conditions, but in the great majority of cases by a diseased liver.

THIS IS A FACT which may be demonstrated by trying a course of

Cutt's Pills

They control and regulate the LIVER, they bring hope and buoyancy to the mind. They bring health and elasticity to the body.

BLOODY WAR WAGED IN THE WISCONSIN WOODS

John Dietz's Two-year Defense of His Dam Against a Corporation a Remarkable Incident in History of North—The Daughter Uses Rifle as Well as Sons

Special to The Telegram. MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 17. — Struck by his rifle, his wife and his family of six children, John Dietz for two years has defied officers of the county, state and national governments at his cabin on the Thornapple river, in the heart of the northern Wisconsin forest. Several men have been shot in battles waged in the woods with the Dietz family.

Dietz's children have been taught by their mother, who is a school teacher. The two older boys, Walter and Clarence, have both shot their man and have learned to know the spiteful hiss of bullet fired in anger. Clarence, the elder of the two, at present wears bloody bandages about his head, a mark left by the last sheriff's posse that went into the woods after Dietz.

In a rude cabin on the crown of the hill overlooking the dam, the Dietz family continue to fight the unequal battle which they know can only have one ending—the death of the defenders. During the summer, his 100-acre clearing is inaccessible, although in the winter narrow sledges have been taken in over the uncertain trail through the hardwood forest. The lonely family subsists on deer and other game shot along Thornapple river and the produce from the small farm in the clearing. Two newspaper men recently followed the faint trail through the woods to Dietz's clearing, were met at the edge of Thornapple river by the outlaw with his rifle in hand, and were finally permitted to wade across to the forbidden territory. They spent an entire day on the Dietz farm with the fearless settler.

As first appearance, John Dietz is not a fighting man. His face is open and frank and his blue eyes sparkle with humor. When he tells the story of his wrongs, the transformation is sudden and almost terrifying. The blue eyes become mere slits in which little glistering needles appear. The lax mouth straightens itself and the soft drawing voice grows cold and repellent.

OUR LAY SERMON

The wages of sin is a proposition often brought home to us in the most unexpected manner. If we were able to foretell the home coming we would perhaps be in better position to withstand the effect, but this privilege is invariably denied us. As we sow, so must we also reap. That fact must also be considered in connection with paying the wages of sin. Try to get around it as we may, we are ever face to face with the cold-blooded fact that the reaping must follow the sowing and the harvest must comport with the seed that were committed to the soil.

they are bound to receive the wages of sin, if they persist in their wrong doing. Experience has clearly demonstrated that it does not pay. The thousands who have traveled that road have had the very same story to tell when they came to the end of the journey. No man can afford to go up against such a fixed proposition as this, and the only hope is to turn resolutely back and avoid such contingencies. The man who hesitates is lost. It takes nerve and determination to overcome, but the overcoming is always worth far more than the cost.

MAKING HIS PARTY RESPECTABLE

Colonel Cecil Lyon has done more to make the Republican party respectable in Texas than all his predecessors combined. While he very pointedly and emphatically denies any sympathy or predilection for the lily white movement and says he simply means that the party shall stand upon its merits, it is clear that Cecil Lyon intends that Republicanism in Texas in the future shall stand for something more than it has in the past. The El Paso convention and its proceedings is ample evidence of that fact. It is said there was hardly enough negro faces in the El Paso gathering to constitute a proper color scheme, and in commenting on the paucity of the Senegambian influence, says:

"The emancipation" of the Republican party in Texas began at the convention four years ago. The disposition shown at that convention was to give the negro his rights, his share, but not the whole thing. Since then the dominance of negroes in party affairs has been diminishing, until now the Republican party in Texas can no longer be spoken of as a "black man's party."

There is no reason on the face of the earth why the Republican party in Texas or the South should longer pose as the "black man's friend" or bear the name of the "black man's party." The party is friendly to black men and men of every color, and it welcomes men of all colors and callings, but they must be men; they must be intelligent and honest and decent citizens, worthy of trust and scornful of favors. Such men will find political equality with the Republican party.

When recent Republican state conventions withheld from the negro element a degree of consideration altogether out of proportion to the relative numbers or influence of the race, they took a long step toward the "emancipation" of the party in the state. The real strong element among the negroes, the element that will be of use to the state and the nation, and to the party, in accomplishing real good, are not the ones that will object to the withholding of special favors. The intelligent, hard working, self respecting negro does not ask for favors, and is inclined to resent the spirit of patronage that prompts them. The negro of Texas need not be afraid that they will not get what is due them from the Republican party in the future and in the present, but the day of "negro domination," whether real or apparent, is well past.

It may be that it has dawned upon the Republican leaders in this state that the negro is a useless appendage and his affiliation with the party a questionable advantage. At any rate, Chairman Lyon adopted a very effective method of dispensing with his presence at El Paso, and the result was another Republican convention held at Houston, with hardly enough whites present to break a painful monotony, and the launching of the second Republican state ticket in the field. This means a warm fight before the national Republican convention for recognition in the future, in which Lyon will have the sympathy of many Texas people, for it is realized that he is but trying to make his party more respectable and raise it to a plane where it will correctly represent the progressiveness of Texas.

THE SNUBBING OF LANHAM

The Fort Worth Telegram boasts of its Democracy and its regularity. The following editorial calls for comment: "If Governor Lanham was making that same old Confederate speech that he has been accused of carrying in stock since the surrender, when he was hoisted down at Dallas, then the blame was not altogether on the one side. The governor has delivered that speech until it has become a trifle wearisome, and Dallas was made his tim-tried and ever-faithful Confederate. But Governor Lanham did not make or attempt to too hot a town for the indulgence of many platitudes." speech. He attempted to defend his official family and his administration, and the delegates and spectators yelled in unison, "Sikido!" It was a sorry spectacle, a humiliating picture—one of the regrettable incidents of the convention.—Dallas Times-Herald.

If Governor Lanham was not intent on delivering that time worn Confederate speech at Dallas, then the interference which resulted in his withdrawal from the platform was truly reprehensible. It makes no difference that the Lanham administration was endorsed—the fact that the head of that administration was treated with such grave discourtesy will always stand as a reflection upon the Democracy of Texas. And the men who indulged in the discourteous procedure brought more contempt upon themselves than upon the gray haired veteran they hooded off the platform.

The Lanham administration is a Democratic administration, and when Governor Lanham appeared upon the rostrum it was not as an individual, but as the chief executive of the greatest state in the American union. He was entitled to the deference and respect of his official position, but the seeds sown by a few Texas newspapers and political screamers in the late state campaign brought forth the expected harvest and Texas Democracy bows its head in shame in remembrance of the spectacle.

The Telegram is not a defender of Governor Lanham save to the extent that The Telegram is a Democratic institution, and believes it is the duty of every Democrat to support and sustain a Democratic administration that has been honest and economical. It may be true that the Lanham administration has been weak in comparison with some of its predecessors, but it must be conceded that the honor and integrity of the governor of this state has never been assailed and Lanham has done the best he could under very trying circumstances. He is entitled to a square deal—which was unquestionably denied him at the Dallas convention.

Williams was slaughtered because he once opposed Bryan, and Bailey was permitted to run the whole Democratic show at Dallas, in spite of the fact he was guilty of the same irregularity. Verily, consistency was the real virtue of fools at the late Democratic state convention. Those negro troops at Brownsville will be a constant source of trouble so long as they are permitted to remain, and the outrageous action of these men will cause the further stay of negro troops in any portion of Texas quite hazardous and undesirable.

subscribing liberally to the stock of the fat stock show, but that fact need not deter any progressive and patriotic citizen from coming forward with a liberal subscription. Every dollar that can be raised in Fort Worth for the purpose makes the result more absolutely sure. Saturday should find the amount assessed against Fort Worth more than subscribed.

It is reported that the occupancy of the position as chairman of the Texas state democratic executive committee cost Frank Andrews the sum of $5,000. He might as well have been a candidate for governor.

Judge Brooks was second in the popular vote of the state, but the lowest man in votes before the convention. This is but another visible effect of the beautiful workings of the Terrell election law.

The political agony is now over, and the tired and perspiring Democracy can now get down to business again. There is no danger to be apprehended from any of the rival state tickets.

The Telegram's gubernatorial craft went down Thursday afternoon, but it went under with the Bell flag still flying.

Colonel Tom Campbell will be the next governor of Texas, and The Telegram feels it will have just as good governor as any other individual or institution in Texas.

The man who hedges may get in at the death, but it is hard to cover the tracks made before the hedging began.

A glass factory is the latest for Fort Worth, but the product will not be utilized in the building of any of our political houses.

At any rate, Fort Worth still has good artesian water.

The factory idea was not lost in the catastrophe at Dallas.

Our political toe hold may have slipped, but we still are the fastest growing city in all Texas.

It is now time to quit talking politics and get down to the new idea of building factories all over Texas.

It is not generally believed the Texas democracy will desire to hold another August convention in Dallas.

THE TELEGRAM AND THE TEXAS PRESS

Fort Worth is trying to raise money for the fat stock show while the great political show is on at Dallas. Fort Worth always was plucky.—Brownwood Bulletin.

Fort Worth is raising money for the fat stock show. This city does not try to do things.

The Fort Worth packing houses are shipping train loads of meat to Chicago. Do the Chicago houses have to ship in meat that is not tainted in order to hold their trade?—Bonham News.

It is a fine lot of meat the Chicago houses are getting from Fort Worth. No better is furnished from any source, and the demand for the Fort Worth product is steadily growing.

If Judge Terrell still stands by his election law just as it is he ought to announce the fact, for everything seems to indicate that it has not a staunch friend in the whole state.—Denison Herald.

Judge Terrell is out of politics, and his election law should be relegated to the same position. One trial of that measure has aroused the people from one end of the state to the other.

That Fort Worth street car incident, in which two passengers were accidentally shot as a result of the sheriff's effort to hit a negro on the head with a six-shooter, does not, so far as we can see, afford any argument in favor of the custom of officers striking recalcitrants on the head with guns.—Houston Post.

It should be understood that the gun play referred to was not made by "the sheriff," but by a sheriff. The gentleman who did the work was from east Texas.

Cleburne needs factories; small factories, medium sized factories, and large factories. It is the manufacturing plant which employs skilled labor and pays high wages which is of real benefit to a community.—Chicago Enterprise.

It is the proper development of industrial enterprises that will make Texas truly great. The cities and towns which first get the idea will be the first to be benefited by the development.

This week the curtain will fall in Dallas on the last scene of the last act of the political drama, to rise no more for two years. Amen! We are certainly glad the political theater is going to close down for awhile.—Bonham News.

All Texas will rejoice when the end has come regardless of who is nominated. It has been a long and tiresome campaign from start to finish and the people are anxious to turn to other things.

Mrs. Mary Cope was nominated at the second primary in Fannin county for district clerk over her opponent, Frank Blair, Saturday. The ladies are not permitted to vote, but the gentlemen can vote for the woman who will vote in this country before many years in general elections, from Maine to Texas.—Sherman Democrat.

Well, hardly. It will be a long time before there will be woman suffrage in Texas. We already have more masculine votes than we know what to do with.

Just at this season of the year the state is being flooded with mail order literature, all temptingly displayed. The wise man is the one who takes all of this literature and then applies a match to it. Such people believe in building up home institutions and standing behind the place that stands for them. There are people on this order to be found every once and awhile, and they make the class of citizens that count. There is no discount to be placed on them.—Terrell Transcript.

It is always a safe rule to patronize home industries, for in this manner the money is kept at home and home institutions are built up and strengthened.

The people of Texas have unanimously renominated Senator Bailey for another term in the United States senate and this action will be endorsed by his election by the democrats when the legislature meets. It is a great triumph for Senator Bailey, who had enemies within and without his state, and his election will be welcomed by democrats everywhere, as they regard him as a champion to expose and denounce republican abuses and corruption.—Austin Statesman.

The people of Texas have not unanimously renominated Senator Bailey, but it is evident he will be returned to the senate for another term without opposition. After that time much depends on future developments.

MUTTERINGS OF A MISANTHROPE

"There's nothing so confirmed as the reputation of the summer widower. He is written down "Rake" as indelibly as your number on your laundry.

The man whose wife is away becomes a furtive object of suspicion from the minute her train pulls out of the union station until he again surrenders the front door key to That Poor Deluded Woman. To live up to the popular conception of his cussedness he really ought to pull his hat down over his eyes, turn up his coat collar as he skidooes out of the train shed to the railroaders' saloon across the street for a bowl of refreshing suds. From then on it is a maddening whirl—so popular fancy has it—a riot of frivolity and buoyant freedom, a constant shuttle from Hattskeller to Turkish bath and not a thought of Home until a sanitary policeman advises him that the cat has starved to death in the basement. Then remorse and just time to hurriedly frisk himself for scented notes and incriminating suds gloves to be hurriedly thrust down some catch basin before the Summer Resort limited pulls in with sun-burned, trusting young spousy-wousy.

That's the way it is doped out, but is it true? This much is: The Summer Wid. was NOT sorry to see her go. He even, with a low cunning, got her started Saturday noon instead of Monday morning. He had planned to himself how he would cut loose. With his shoes freshly shined Horace hies himself early to the local or Kokohokushine great white way, where the frivolous crowds with laughter on their lips bust open their pay envelopes. He mingles.

However, he doesn't meet a soul he knows. His boon companions of yore are all at home sprinkling the lawn. Nobody notices him. He doesn't care to drink many beers alone. He gets sleepy when he's out somewhere beyond the hour when he usually creeps into his little white iron bed.

With a sort of lost feeling he foregoes the anticipated pleasure of a ride home on the owl and hits his own front door about 10 p. m. to the scandal of the neighbors, who have been taking the air virtuously on their porches.

Two weeks elapse. The Summer Wid. is a dissipated looking wreck. He needs a hair cut and a shave. His digestion is off. His clothes need pressing. This is not the result of drunkenness and depravity. He has been home before dark every night but one. He couldn't think of a place to go nor a thing to do. The worst crimes he committed was leaving the bed unmade and eating sardines in the kitchen without cleaning up after it. The first sign of buoyancy is noted on the day when he is to meet wife.

Nevertheless he is a vicious vampire and must not be referred to any other way than as a Gay Lothario.

A BROKEN DISH, SOON MENDED

BY THE CITY MAN.

Just like a million other families is about all you could say of John and Mary. They loved, they married, and they went to live in a four-room house. A four-room house is big enough for a great deal of happiness.

John was a plumber and Mary was a good housekeeper, and the skies were blue, until—

A two-day drunk for a man less than six months married and he had sworn not to touch a drop for a year. Why that pledge was his wedding present to Mary.

What did she do? "John has broken his pledge," she said simply, and then continued washing the supper dishes.

She dropped a fancy fruit dish, and then, by an inspiration, gathered up the pieces and entered the room where John and I were sitting.

There were fine tears in her sad eyes as she said: "John, dear, you told me that a broken dish, if quickly mended, would last longer than a new one. Wouldn't a quickly mended broken pledge also last longer?"

Lot of soul in those words and they went straight to a man's heart.

Mary went back to the dishes. John went to the minister and "mended" his pledge for a year.

I saw John and Mary the other day. Took dinner with them and the two fine children. God had been good to them all. Better home, better living and the same old wonderful love.

I asked Mary if she had broken any more dishes. Her eyes sparkled as she went to a closet and brought out the fruit dish this story is built around. "Thank God," she said, fervently, "this is the last one we had to mend."

From John's lips came some more of the beautiful story. His life had been mended, to stay mended, he hoped and believed, and he was drawing daily dividends from the happy faces of his wife and loved little ones.

Oh, it paid all along the line. It paid when good citizens met him on the street and were glad to greet him warmly and take his hand. It paid in respect, in love, in money, in health.

And that is a true story. Just remember John's philosophy: "A broken dish, if mended quickly, will last longer than a new one." And try it on the weak spot in your life.

THE KING OF CANYONS

(BY A. W. GRANT.) There is little cause for wonder that many visitors coming from Arizona are highly colored. It is a land where nature has spilled her tint-tubes with a lavish hand. In the northern and eastern states there are mountains in which the colors are laid so regularly they might have been lithographed. The hills curve evenly, the streams wind smoothly, the dark green of the trees melts easily into the purple of the horizon. In the autumn the leaves are colored with such a delicate balance that many a landscape looks as if ready for a frame. But in Arizona there are sunsets that suggest nothing so much as a painter's unwashed palette after a busy day. The colors are more splashes against the sky, but such splashes that they buffet the mind and tries to classify them according to either spectrum or prism. When an Arizona desert is red it is redder than the earth or sand that may be found anywhere else in the Southwest. When the mountains are blue it is with a vividness that almost stands out against the azure of the sky. Pure ochre does not surpass the yellow of the sandstone and the whiteness of alabaster on distant cliffs is that of mountain snow. If a story coming from Arizona then, seems over-drawn, lay it to the brilliancy of the sun, the rarity of the air, or the largeness of the big outdoors which seems greater there than even in Texas.

From Williams, Arizona to the Grand Canyon is a ride of less than four hours. It is not a route that suggests anything of the marvelous sight at its end. Part of the way is a climb and part of it winds through a valley of the greatest winter ranges for sheep in the United States because storms seldom penetrate it. Occasionally there are washouts, coming from the mountains above, especially in the summer months when the most rain falls. At such times the Irish and Mexican men gather up their crews of Navajos, Greco and Mexicans, pile in stones and dirt, straightening up the lines and rails and let the trains proceed. It is at least interesting sight of the ride to watch the representatives of three of the oldest races on the globe—Irish, Greek and Spanish, laboring side by side to make a path for an American locomotive. Climbing up the rocky slopes of the canyon, through cuts, and surrounded by a forest of pine which only the view in every direction, the first glimpse of the Grand Canyon comes suddenly at mid-afternoon, through a cleft in the hills. The view is gone in a moment and a minute afterwards the train stops at the little station which marks the end of the line. Then there is a climb up a steep hill and from there the first real view of the canyon is given.

Maybe the full blazing glory of the afternoon sun dwarfs the distances, but the first glimpse of the tremendous chasm is not inspiring. Two hours afterwards the canyon looks almost twice as great as it did at first sight.

Later as the sun goes down in a gap of the canyon walls, the distances increase and just before sunset the lengthening shadows begin to point, with wonderful effectiveness, the undreamed height of the projecting cliffs.

One of the best times to see the canyon is at dawn. Not for colors, but for measurement of the time it takes for the rays of light to reach down into the cavern and bringing out of the shadow the trees which look like tufts of grass, far below. In the subdued light of early morning the depths appear green, the cliffs more steep, and the opposite walls further away than they do when the sun gets higher and the purple haze of summer becomes more pronounced.

Yet at all times when the canyon seems most wonderful, is when, after sunset, the August moon begins to rise. There is still in the sky some reflected light from the vanished sun.

Sitting on the edge of the canyon rim one can see far below in the shadow the dim outlines of the smaller chasms that gully the river's sides. A mile straight down and more than half a dozen miles away, the Colorado, churned to a muddy foam by its battle for a channel through the solid rock, roars and seethes, but the sound is lost in the distance and none of it rises as high as the canyon's brink. Somewhere below the nightbirds and bats have left their crevices in the rocks where they slept the day through and are circling about in search of food, but their cries are never heard above.

On the rim of the canyon there is no sound, not even the chirping of a cricket. The locusts, so much making insects in this region, are gone to sleep, for the altitude is so high the hum of a mosquito is never heard.

Nature lovers grow enthusiastic over the tumult of a storm at sea and the awful majesty of the waves breaking mountain high. The shrieking of a prairie blizzard, whipping its sleet and snow across the plain into the heart of even the bravest man; but nature's silent is more awe-inspiring, more terrible, more wonderful than even the crashing roar of Niagara, or the booming thunder of breakers driven by a hurricane.

Suddenly there is a gleam of light at the base of a butte 3,000 feet below the canyon's edge. It might be the reflection of a camp fire, but as it grows in brightness and climbs slowly up the ruddy sandstone on glances across to see the source and gets a glimpse of the moon climbing slowly up into the horizon.

The ruddy glow changes to yellow as the moon's brightness increases, and slowly the whole side of the butte is illumined.

Half an hour after the first glimpse of light was seen at the bottom the rays have reached the top of the butte. Then they stretch over and begin lighting another butte.

Minute after minute passes and steadily the light below grows lighter. A glance at one's watch shows that an hour has passed since the moon began to rise and still there are shadows below yet unreachd.

Another hour passes and the moon has risen higher than half way up the sky. The tops of more than half the buttes below are clearly visible but at their sides hang dark shadows. The silent depths of the canyon are too great, and although it has been striving light and maybe 10,000 years, the moon has never been able to conquer fully, and light all of the dusky caverns.

It is midnight and the moon is near the zenith. The light is so bright the purple haze begins to disappear about the buttes and some of the colors of the sandstone cliffs may be distinguished. But as at midnight, morning, or mid-afternoon, in mid-winter, fall or spring, the great gulf lies silent, mysterious, moonlight softens its roughness more softened by the moonlight, the witching beauty made more enticing, its thousand wonders intensified, but its marvelous immensity factors than ever beyond human grasp.

It is a good time to come away.

QUAKER REFLECTIONS

Time is money, but it is often quite difficult to effect the exchange. The beauty about breaking a record is that a person is always made.

A SIGH FOR PEACHES

There is sadness in the thought that hundreds of car loads of the finest peaches have rotted along railroad tracks in northern Georgia because of the failure of the Western and Atlantic railroad to provide cars for moving them. They are the peaches that might have eaten—forever lost because of inadequate railroads!—Springfield Republican.

Dyspepsia is the commonest disease of the stomach. The word dyspepsia is a Greek word which means difficult digestion. It is a very difficult form of it from the structure and heartburn to the horrible ever-present agony. The mildest cases are always cured by a teaspoonful of the Bile Beans taken immediately after meals. There is a form of dyspepsia called indigestion which is accompanied by a great deal of heartburn and makes a half glass of water with 10 or 15 drops of lemon juice or 10 or 15 drops of lemon juice before meals. No Dyspeptic ought to diet to death. If you know any one who is suffering from indigestion, trouble without an action on the bowels, and it ought to be cured. IF POSSIBLE, without a doctor, take an action on the bowels immediately after breakfast. Take a glass of lukewarm water, or glycerine suppository. But see operation WITHOUT PAIN and you will recover. Milford, Texas, June 2. I have used Ware's Black Beans and can say that I am entirely cured of my stomach trouble. I could not sleep before I commenced using Ware's Black Beans and now I can sleep and work all day, when before I could not sleep and work but just a few hours. I have lost hundreds of dollars with doctors they did not do me much good. I am sound and well for 3 weeks. Ware's Black Beans are the best thing I have ever used. Thank you many times. GREAT WORK FOR FRIENDLESS CHILDREN BEING DONE BY FORT WORTH MINISTER

Rev. I. Z. T. Morris Finds Homes for Waifs All Over Southwest—Has Placed Almost 600 in Good Families—Work Is Systematized and Safeguards Taken to Prevent Children Getting in Wrong Surroundings

ties in order that best results may be obtained from its aid. Has Placed Over 500 Waifs. During the time that he has been engaged in this work Mr. Morris has placed nearly 500 children in good homes. Of this number scarcely one has proven to have been misplaced. Mr. Morris is very particular to investigate all conditions before placing a child. He makes it a rule not to put children in homes where there are already children because he believes that if parents want to take a child when they already have one of their own, they usually want to ber of our paupers and does not add to our desirable citizenship. I understand there are now several of these children in the state reformatory at Gatesville. In fact there are two or three of them in our own Tarrant county jail at present. Of course, the society which sent them is not to blame for the conduct of the children, but it should exercise care in placing them. Several western states have laws prohibiting the importation of children in this way and this is what we need here. Regarding the abuses to which the children have been subjected, Mr. Morris said: "Although these children were

Fort Worth has many charitably disposed persons among her 80,000 souls, but one of the most interesting of them all is a retired preacher of the Methodist church, south, who, although retired from active pastoral service, is yet busily engaged in a broader field of labor, a field which covers the entire state of Texas. He is Rev. I. Z. T. Morris of Polytechnic Heights, superintendent of the Texas Children's Home Society, an institution which has for its object the care of foundlings and orphans and the finding of suitable homes for these children. The officers of the society are Fort Worth men but it has local boards in all the cities of the state and in many towns. Colonel R. M. Wynne is president, Judge Irby Dunklin, vice president, and W. L. Smallwood, secretary and treasurer. These constitute the state advisory board. The executive committee consists of William Bryce, W. L. Smallwood, J. B. Baker, H. B. Francis and W. E. Williams. This society works in conjunction with the National Children's Home Society and there are organizations in twenty-five states. At the last annual meeting of the society the following resolutions were adopted: That the principal societies whose object it is to find homes for deserted and orphan children co-operate.

make a servant of the child, and he places children—not servants. He always endeavors to find out whether the people who ask for a child really want it and will treat it as their own. He also tries to place the children in Christian homes. He believes that there is "a child for every childless home in Texas and a home for every homeless child." Just now Mr. Morris is especially interested in the condition of a number of children in the homes of Polanders in and about Brenham. It has been reported to Rev. Morris that these children were placed in the homes of uneducated foreigners and are being used virtually as slaves and made to work in the fields with men, though themselves but mere children. In last week's issue of the Texas Christian Advocate Rev. T. S. Williford of Brenham published a letter treating of the abuse of these children and urging legislative action to prevent its recurrence. State Law Needed. In speaking of this matter, Mr. Morris said: "We want the legislature to pass a bill to prevent the importation of children into our state by the car-load lot. This only increases the num-all placed in Catholic homes, we have nothing to do with the religion of these Polanders. What we have to do with is the abuse of these children. We can by law take these children away from them if the abuse can be proven. The law says that upon the report of the abuse or mistreatment of a child to the county judge, that county judge must proceed to act in the matter and if he finds the allegations to be true, take the child from the guardians." Mr. Morris is going to Brenham this week to investigate the matter and endeavor to help the children to better homes. He received a letter from Mr.

Ware's Black Powder CURES DYSPEPSIA Catarrh of Stomach and Bowels, Constipation, Sick Headache, All Stomach and Bowel Troubles

Dyspepsia is the commonest disease in the world. The word dyspepsia means faulty digestion. There is every possible form of it, from the slightest irritation and heartburn to the most horrible everpresent agony. The mildest cases are always relieved by a teaspoonful of the Black Powder taken immediately after meals. There is a form of dyspepsia accompanied by a great deal of heartburn. Persons so suffering should take Lactic Acid and make a half glass of water sour with 10 or 15 drops of it, and drink before meals. No dyspeptic ought to diet himself to death. If you know any articles that agree with you, LIVE ON THEM ALONE, and use the Powder after every meal. You can never recover from Dyspepsia nor any other stomach trouble without an action daily from your bowels, and it ought to be secured, IF POSSIBLE, without a purgative. Take an injection every morning immediately after breakfast, of quart of lukewarm water, or use a glycerine suppository. But secure an operation WITHOUT PURGATIVE and you will recover. Milford, Texas, June 3, 1906. Ware Black Powder Co., Dallas, Texas. I have used Ware's Black Powder, and can say that I am entirely cured of stomach trouble. It is worth its weight in gold. I will not eat or sleep before I commenced using it, and now I can eat anything I want, and work but just a few hours at a time. Just think that I have spent hundreds of dollars with doctors, but they did not do me much good. You cured me sound and well for $3 (three bottles of Ware's Black Powder). I thank you many times. Hoping you will continue to do good to others as you did for me, I am, your obedient servant, W. H. WARD.

age who has been arrested shall, as far as possible be admitted to bail and be placed in the custody of some relative, friend or benevolent person or institution willing to be responsible for his or her appearance. Third—Where a child cannot be admitted to bail the sheriff or officer having the direction of such matters shall have authority to contract for temporary care and maintenance of such child with any person of his wife or individual possessing facilities for the same keeping and proper care of children until the case is disposed of and any expenses thus incurred shall be charged upon the municipality in which the child has last resided for one year. Law Against Desertion. The bill to prevent desertion of children by parents follows: An act making it a misdemeanor to desert without just cause or willfully neglect to provide for the support and maintenance of any person of his wife or minor children in destitute or necessitous circumstances, and to provide a penalty therefor. First—Be it enacted by the legislature of the state of Texas, that any person who shall, without just cause, desert or willfully neglect to provide for the support of his wife or minor children in destitute or necessitous circumstances, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by imprisonment in jail not exceeding one year; provided that before the trial (with the consent of the defendant), or after conviction, instead of imposing the punishment hereinbefore provided, or in addition thereto, the court in its discretion, having regard to the circumstances and financial ability of the defendant, may have the power to enter an order, which shall be subject to change by it from time to time, as the circumstances may require, directing the defendant to pay a certain sum weekly or monthly for the space of one year to the wife or to the custodian of the minor, and to release the defendant from all further probation for the space of one year upon his entering into a recognizance, with or without sureties, in such sum as the court shall direct. The condition of the recognizance shall be such that if the defendant shall make his personal appearance at court whenever ordered to do so within the year, and shall further comply with the terms of the order or of any subsequent modification thereof, then the recognizance shall be void, otherwise to remain in full force and effect. If the court shall be satisfied by information and due proof under oath at any time during the year that the defendant has violated the terms of such order, it may forthwith proceed to the trial of the defendant under the original indictment or sentence him under the original conviction, as may be. In the case of forfeiture of a recognizance and enforcement hereof by execution, the sum recovered may, in the discretion of the court, be paid in whole or in part to the wife or to the custodian of the minor. Second—The county courts of the counties, respectively, shall have exclusive original jurisdiction of all prosecutions and proceedings under this act. The sheriffs received Mr. Morris cordially and many expressed approval of the reforms. In his address before them he said: "A father who would abandon his child is not fit for a citizen, but under the right kind of an overseer he can be made a good road hand."

5408 Bust Corset and Reducer. 36 to 46 Bust.

Bust Corset and Reducer 5408
Every stout woman knows the need of some such garment as this one. The fashionable corset is low cut and perfect comfort cannot be insured unless some additional comfort be worn therewith. This one is both shapely and simple and can be trusted not alone to make the wearer thoroughly comfortable but also to aid in reducing over abundant flesh. Twill, heavy linen and similar strong materials are the most appropriate for a first necessity in durability and strength. The fact that the garment is laced together at the front is especially worthy of note as it allows of adjusting to the figure day by day while it means a far snugger fit than is possible with buttons and button holes, all of which are stitched firmly together. There are straps of elastic at the shoulders and eyelet holes are worked at the front edges.
The quantity of material required for the medium size is 1/2 yard 36 inches wide.
The pattern 5408 is cut in sizes for a 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inch bust measure.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Strange Case of Lowther
Poor old Lowther! They had all liked him immensely; he was a jolly fine sort, and true as steel. But he was no longer fit for service. He would go, as others had gone before him, and his end would be such as theirs.
He had had a sunstroke they declared. It was the saddest name they could find for the mysterious disease which had him in its grasp. But they all knew, his comrades in the mess, that it wasn't sunstroke. That wouldn't account for the strange look in his haunted eyes, for the odd ac-

FEATHER-WEIGHT HOUSE-KEEPING.

By Virginia Stanley Lee.
This is the day of hot sweating in old Maghanna. The constantly increasing number of "family" and "apartment hotels" is appalling. They rise up in the night, and the next day are overflowing with that curious anomaly—the domestic family.
In the hotel apartments the accommodations and living facilities are perfect, but home-making and housekeeping are complete—yes, in most cases elaborate.
There are queer phases of this modern "housekeeping" which are not generally known. For instance, the electric ironing board is not used in the ordinary way. The ironing board is not used at all. The ironing is done in the bathroom, where it is done on a special ironing board, and when everything is folded and stored away, it is done in the bathroom.
Of course, the chafing dish, alcohol lamp, and the electric cooking stove are the things that are used in the kitchen. The electric stove is used in the kitchen, and the chafing dish is used in the kitchen. The alcohol lamp is used in the kitchen, and the electric cooking stove is used in the kitchen.
An actress I know has this "feather-weight" housekeeping. She is an actress, and she is a very successful one. She is a very successful actress, and she is a very successful one. She is a very successful actress, and she is a very successful one.

A TEXAN EXPRESSES DEEP GRATITUDE

After 100% relief to C.F. SCHOLEWA GALVESTON TEXAS
Gentlemen:
Nine years ago I got the dreadful skin disease called eczema while working at a saw mill in Leggett, Polk County, Texas. I have had not less than thirty-five different doctors, but none could cure me or do me any good. I tried all kinds of patent medicines, but none did me any good. I had given up being cured, as I had suffered for eight years with eczema of the most distressing kind. It would break out all over my body and the skin would scale off and then swell up. My face would swell up until I could not see, and the itching would be unbearable. I was an object of disgust to myself and everything would be unbearable. I was an object of disgust to myself and everything would be unbearable. I was an object of disgust to myself and everything would be unbearable.

I have known Mr. Scholewa for many years as a good, reliable citizen and hard working man. I have known of his sufferings and final cure by the use of Imperial Remedy. His statement is true. (Signed) PAT BARRY, Ex-Alderman Fourth Ward, Galveston, Texas.

Peanut Soup—Cook until tender two cups of shelled and blanched peanuts with a slice of onion and a stalk of celery; press through a sieve, reheat with one pint of white stock and stir into a white sauce made of one-fourth of a cupful each of butter and of flour and a pint of milk. Season to taste with salt and pepper.
A sewing rug is a great convenience. Sew together sixteen yards of light-colored denim into a four-yard square and stitch a two-inch hem all around. To the back of this hem attach here and there small metal weights. This will keep the rug in place. Before sewing or ripping spread the rug on the carpet. It may be gathered up at the end of the day and easily shaken free of all loose threads and lint.
Women can't be too particular in the small items of dress. A woman's veil or a musy looking collar will spoil the most admirable costume. Many a plain woman with good taste in dress and the happy faculty of making the best of herself has gained a larger share of admiration than more beautiful sisters.
Sweet Potato Rolls—Boil two pounds of potatoes. Pass through a colander. Add two ounces of butter, one egg, milk, a little salt, a gill of yeast and as much flour as will make a dough. Set to rise, when light, roll into flakes. Let rise for one hour and bake.

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—The scandal is spreading, and more men of hitherto unblemished reputation are found to be embezzling, greatly to the joy of the press, whose papers say that the revelation means a surprise to the Emperor. Erberger, the radical member of the reichstag, who came muckraker in chief today in Germany, that not only the Emperor, but also the Kaiser, for more than two years that of Agriculture von Podbielsky understanding with the firm, Zippelskirch & Co.
When the Kaiser was informed that his minister had been refused to believe it and informant off short with the "Von Podbielsky is a gentleman officer and would never do such a thing as you allege. You have been misinformed," he even hurt his feelings by asking to defend himself against the famous slander.
The fat exchequer has, it is believed, been less of a gentleman than the minister master thought, for Erberger has made and proved a number of questions which place the minister in a most unfavorable light, among being that the Woermann line paid double price for the transport troops to German Southwest Africa and that the excess money into the minister's pocket.
The Kaiser, who is greatly interested in the revelations, has now the books of the firm of Von Podbielsky & Co. seized, and intends to have every one who has any confidence and used his official title to enrich himself severely punished.
One must not believe, however, that Erberger has received thanks for starting to clean up the Augean stable. On the contrary, he has had to suffer all kinds of attacks at the hands of the autocrat whom he exposed.
Not long ago the political searched his flat for papers which he drew his information from his desk in the reichstag's chamber.
Now that the Kaiser has taken hand in the matter it is safe to say that he will not move to similar indignities.

BY LADY HENRY SOMERS
LONDON, Aug. 18.—Western Bryan has for centuries been the English political lion. It is where the past lives and speaks great hall of William Rufus, which, as Macaulay says, "has sounded with the sacred tones inaugurations of thirty kings, to which has witnessed the just of Bacon, and the just of Somers, the hall where the eloquence of Stratford had for a moment melted the victorious party in its just resentment, the hall Charles had confronted the high of justice with the placid of which has half redeemed his fame by a touch of freshness which the deep windows and lit the roof, eloquent of the light which an assembly must inevitably be of new country. A peace convention was being held, men of all colors were assembled there—distinctive representatives of great nations.
The two who probably attracted attention were Apponyi, the Hungarian minister for education, and Mr. Count Apponyi spoke perfectly and delivered a speech that forgot, for it was a mixture of reason and charm.
"Patriotism is love," he said, "should it be allied with hate? Patriotism is self-immolation—why should it be allied with the immolation of others? Patriotism is ambition—why should it be the ambition of the prize for the victory of the noble? Patriotism is the love of the noble, the love of the noble, the love of the noble."
Side by side with him stood Bryan. "Unless some nation take lead," he said, "no nation will take a touch of freshness which only come from an American, as a fresh water to the parched earth. Men speak of a glorious world rather be living today in any age of the past. It is as easy to influence the whole world as in the old days to influence the in which a man lived."
The note of hope certainly from America.

The countess is looking much better than she did about a month ago. She has been greatly comforted by the presence of her sister, the Countess de Castellane, and her children, and she has done much to calm the nerves.
On Oct. 17 the count will deal with the divorce, the question of the property, and the division of the children and the date of the marriage. Until that date will be done.
There is one sure way to make a man love you, and that is to sit and wait for something to turn up.

NEW YORK STOCKS

Wall Street Raging with Bull Fever. Everything Ignored but Movement of Harriman Pacific

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Wall street in the throes of a bull fever has little time to dissect a bank statement or think of the possible effect of an earthquake or such mundane matters as the monetary situation, and thus it was that a poor showing by the banks and the news regarding the Valparaiso disaster was entirely ignored while speculators carried on their frenzied operations today. The market was replete with animation and there was not a minute during the brief session when the tension was not screwed up to its highest pitch; in fact, more business was transacted during the three week-end sessions than in any two or three week-end sessions when ordinary conditions prevailed. As natural, after their phenomenal movements of yesterday, Harriman Pacific were the cynosure of all eyes and as a curtain raiser met with bullish approbation expressed in uncertain terms. The London market being closed today, the effect of yesterday's local developments abroad was entirely a matter of conjecture, but there was no hesitancy visible here as to which course to pursue and an enormous accumulation of over-night buying orders resulted in a spectacular advance to new high levels for both of the Harriman issues on the call. Union Pacific's gain amounted to 3 1/2 points, while that of Southern Pacific was 2 to 3 1/2. In both instances the price of the stock proved to be the highest of the day, as stock came out in goodly volume during the session. However, buying power was by no means exhausted and although recessions of fair proportions occurred, prices never came within reaching distance of yesterday's final, and at the close were only fractionally below the high point. Prices for the list as a whole moved in unison with the leaders, St. Paul being the only laggard among the high-price securities, and even this stock developed strength during the latter part of the session, eventually gaining more than a point. Pennsylvania continued to play an important part and at one time sold 1/2 above yesterday's final, but aside from the Harriman Pacific, Atchison was the stock most closely watched. Rumored of a similar nature to those which have been responsible for the boosting of Union and Southern Pacific during the last few weeks have found more ready believers since yesterday's developments and the speculative fish, which is known to be the most glib of all the tribe, having a rosette vision of increased dividends and a phenomenal rise in value, went eagerly after the bait today and sent the price up 1/2 points to within a point of par. The market closed strong with prices near the top for all issues. Sales to 11 a. m. 785,700 shares.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 12.—Although the decline in cotton prices continued today and new low levels were touched, more good buying was noted than for some time past, which was probably on the part of the weather outlook, as the forecast indicated calls for rains in the eastern belt over Sunday. A weak Liverpool market with prices 10 to 11 points lower was responsible for an initial drop of 2 to 3 points in local prices, but while the tendency was downward at all times, the decline did not have much momentum until early in the second hour, when some hammering occurred, resulting in a quick drop to a level 1/2 to 20 points below yesterday's final. The market steadied, however, and closing prices were at least 1/2 above yesterday's final.

LIVERPOOL COTTON

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 12.—There was no particular feature to the cotton market during today's session aside from a sharp drop in prices, which was expected in view of yesterday's opening slump. The market was 6 points lower for near and 7 off for distant positions. The market closed easy with prices at a net loss of 2 to 10 points.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Trading Fairly Active in All Pits. Wheat Prices Lower—Corn Shows Strength

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 12.—Trading was fairly active in all of the local grain pits today, but except for corn price changes were of small moment. Wheat had a steady tone at the start, the prices were unchanged to 1/4 lower. But the market had to contend with a quite a volume of long liquidation, as well as selling pressure of no mean proportion, consequently a weaker tone was soon developed and prices dropped 1/2 to 3/4, the extreme decline placing September at a level 3/4 below the previous low record and 1/2 below the final hour of the market was supported by short covering and prices worked back from the lowest, the close being easy at a net decline of 1/2 to 3/4. Estimated receipts for Monday, 200 cars.

CHICAGO CORN

Corn was the strongest of the coarse grain markets having a healthy tone at all times, liberal covering by shorts being the stimulating feature. Final prices were at the best showing a net gain of 1/2 to 3/4. Estimated receipts for Monday, 126 cars.

CHICAGO OATS

Oats prices did not sympathize with the movement in the corn pit, breaking 1/2 to 3/4 to new levels early in the session. But at the decline a good amount developed, principally for short covering, and to 3/4, was effected, the close being steady with prices unchanged to 1/4 higher. Estimated receipts for Monday, 315 cars.

CHICAGO PROVISIONS

The provision market was dull and entirely without interest, with prices unchanged to 1/4 lower.

VIEWERS ON THE MARKET

Port Worth, Texas, Aug. 12.—The cotton market today was under the influence of bears and there was practically no recuperative power. Liverpool came worse than due and the weather was favorable. It sold off to 9.10 and closed only one point or bearish, the American visible decreasing 98,000 bales, while spinners' takings were only about 126,000 bales.

COMES TO FORT WORTH

St. Louis Head Beef Man for Armour's
Appointed to Southern Branch

Charles A. Neyer, head beef man for the Armour & Co. plant at this market, leaves for Fort Worth, Texas, where he will act in the same capacity and for the same firm. Mr. Neyer was transferred from Kansas City, Mo., by his firm to this center about two years ago and altogether has been in the employ of Armour & Co. for fifteen years. During his sojourn in our midst he has made many personal friends, not alone among his associates in business, but as well among the boys at the yards.

In anticipation of his residence in the Texas city, Charley decided to take unto himself a bride in the person of Miss Tillie Hase of Chicago, the ceremony of which will be solemnized in St. Louis tomorrow at noon.
His many friends at the plant and the exchange, in presenting him with a beautiful solid silver service containing fifty pieces and a cut glass water set, manifest their esteem both as a well-to-do citizen and as a well-known figure. R. E. Conway, Armour's manager, made the presentation speech, which was the sentiment of all of his friends, to which Mr. Neyer responded appropriately, showing his appreciation of the event.—St. Louis Reporter.

KILLS TWO WOLVES

Man Near Carsbad Gets $51 Bounty
Result of Hunt

Carlsbad, Cent.
In older days when Davy Crockett 'killed a bar' the common currency of the backwoods regions of a large portion of the United States was "coon skins," and many of the homestead that was built up from the proceeds of un-giving marksmanship, or the valor of the faithful "coon dog." Those good old days have long since been numbered with the yester years, but out here in Sunnyside, New Mexico there is still left a reflex of those stirring times when every coon hollow was investigated with an eye to the 12 penny it might yield with a hairy pelt. An instance of this was noted last Monday when J. J. Plovman brought in two large wolf skins and a coyote pelt, and carrying them to the Carsbad National Bank, drew the sum of $51 for the three, $25 each for the wolf and $1 for the coyote. These sums were naturally divided by the Carsbad Raisers' Association, and any bank is authorized to "cash" them as a check or a draft, and draw upon the association. Mr. Plovman is a worthy citizen of Eddy, living in the mountains, and no doubt his prowess will fetch him many an honest dollar in the future. He describes the Coyotes as said to have increased considerably in the outlying districts lately and are destroying many chickens and other small prey.

CUBA WANTS SHORTHORNS

Durham and Shorthorn Mixup Is Straightened Out By Rook

Shorthorns from the United States are now admitted free of duty to the republic of Cuba. Owing to a misapprehension of the terms "Shorthorn" and "Durham" in the original Spanish draft of the order admitting certain breeds free of duty a charge of $8 per head was levied upon Durhams that were naturally and properly taken into the island as Shorthorns.
Senator W. A. Harris of the Shorthorn Breeders' Association took the matter up with Secretary of State in Washington some time ago and the result was a straightening out of the matter in a way entirely satisfactory to American breeders.
Secretary of the Cuban Treasury
Ernesto Fonty y Sterling has notified the United States state department that official action has been taken by which the words Durham and Shorthorn are recognized as synonymous.
There is a good demand for Shorthorn grain in Cuba and the quantity of the milking strains, and they are now admitted free.
A letter from Acting Secretary W.
M. Hayes of the United States department of agriculture to Secretary John W. Groves of the American Shorthorn Breeders' Association confirms the decision granting Shorthorn cattle the same privileges allowed other breeds imported into Cuba.

IN BAYLOR COUNTY

Deep River Farmers Make Good Profit
From Sheep Raising

Seymour Banner.
George H. Geener of Deep Creek called this week and told us something of the sheep business. He, together with A. J. Lambert and Cal Harvey, bought 1,000 head a year ago for $2,300. They have already made $2,200 off the sheep and now have about 1,100. They shipped two cars of mutton to Fort Worth last month.
The wool from the Deep Creek flock this year to 8,000 pounds, and brought 22c, and each sheep represents a profit of $1.50 to the head. A section of land with 300 or 400. They are now advertising for some full-blooded bucks.

An Incentive to Mule Raising.

Germany has expressed a preference for the American mule. A San Antonio, Texas, item says that a German agent from Hamburg has contracted for a cargo of Texas mules of the best quality raised in the state. As further evidence of superior quality the mules contracted for are not to be shipped until after the international fair to be held at San Antonio in October of the present year, where they will be put on exhibition for the prizes offered.

The present sale is to demonstrate the superiority in size and quality of the American southern mule, and this shipment is the beginning of a permanent demand for the best grade of mules produced in this country. The mule raising business in Texas is rapidly on the increase and it is asserted will soon rank among the leading industries of the state. There has been a very urgent demand for mules from Cuba, Porto Rico and Mexico. This new trade starting up with Germany is quite sure to give the big southern mule a favorable recommendation, which will invite other countries to our mule breeding ranches for their needs in this line of livestock.

The mule is an easy and profitable animal produced, and in no country are the advantages of climate, grasses and feeds adapted to its healthy growth equal to that found in the western half of the United States.—

The greatest American Pianist is Edward Baxter Berry. The greatest Violinist of the South is Chas. D. Hann. The most successful Vocalist in the Southwest is Katherine Stewart. These famous musicians are at the head of departments in the Landon Conservatory and are assisted by thoroughly trained teachers of marked inborn gifts for imparting instruction, each teacher being enthusiastic in the work of teaching, and each has a strong magnetic and forceful character, being teachers "by the Grace of God," as the Germans say. This shows how Landon Conservatory has earned a National Reputation, and has attracted students from thirty-three states during its seven years of wonderful growth and remarkable success. The director has furnished four teachers for a well-known conservatory in New York, twelve to the Randolph-Macon College of Virginia. The presidents of colleges in the Southwest call for many times more teachers than it has graduates to supply. Landon Conservatory has a Home Life with active religious influence. CHAS. W. REPUBLICA MEXICANA SEEN BY AN AMERICAN

Dr. Jas. W. Russey Writes From Manana Country

IN OLD YACATECAS

Describes Peculiar Street Venders in Place Known as "Thieves' Market"

Special to The Telegram.

ZACATECAS, Mexico, Aug. 18.—After considerable delay I will now give the readers of The Telegram some jottings of my journey to this country, as well as things I have seen since I have been here. We left Fort Worth at 7:45 on the evening of July 5, ran all night, landed at San Antonio at 8:30 next morning, stopped over there until 11:30, then on to Spofford Junction. We changed cars at the latter place for Eagle Pass, at which place we crossed the Rio Grande and entered the Republic of Mexico.

The first thing which attracted my attention when we crossed the border was that all the coaches of our train were stopped on the bridge, and in a few minutes the officials of the custom house passed through each coach and examined all our hand baggage. This part of the program being through, we proceeded to the border town of C. P. Diaz, where all the baggage was taken off the train and carried in the custom house, where each trunk was weighed and marked, and each passenger must produce his checks and keys and open his baggage for inspection. My trunk failed to appear and I laid over at that place twenty-four hours for the next train as there is only one train a day each way.

Next morning I took a hack and viewed the city, which is of much importance except the churches, which in all Mexican towns, are fine buildings. My trunk came all right on the next train. I had an Edison phonograph, for which they charged me $3.02 duty. I suppose they gave the republic the 2 cents and kept the $3 themselves. (I would, had I been in their place). The funniest thing about it was they weighed the machine, the horn and records, and charged duty according to weight.

I will suggest to anyone coming to the republic, that should you bring any article subject to duty with you, to bond it, so if you should carry it back out they will pay you your money back before leaving Mexico.

I exchanged my money for Mexican money. They gave me $2 Mexican for $1 United States, and as "fair exchange is no robbery" they charge you $2 Mexican for an article which you can buy in the United States for $1.

We left C. P. Diaz at 10 p. m., via the Mexican National railroad (which I am informed belongs to the Waters-Pierce Oil company), for Torreon, 353 miles distance. When but a few miles out from C. P. Diaz it commenced raining and continued for some hours which was a Godsend to us, as the whole trip to Torreon is across the Great American desert, where the cars are filled most all the time with a cloud of dust. It rained all night and next morning until about 9 o'clock. At some places there was a sea of water as far as the eye could distinguish.

The whole route is perfectly level valleys, with mountains to the right of us, mountains to the left of us, mountains before us, and mountains behind us, devoid of forest, except for small mesquite bushes in the valleys. The valleys are level plots up to the foot of the mountains, which rise abruptly, like cones on a level surface. In all this distance there is no sign of farms, except an occasional small adobe house, surrounded by a patch, belonging to some poor Mexican. We saw no living thing except at the stations. There is a notable absence of cattle or other stock, and even birds were not in evidence. I suppose this is due to the fact that the greater portion of the year, the rainy season had just set in, and this was the first rain for months. There is only one town of any importance between El Paso and Torreon. This is Monchova, which I was informed was at one time the capital of Texas, before it was taken from Mexico. Not being familiar with the history of this country, I cannot vouch for the correctness of the last statement.

On approaching Matamoros, about fourteen miles before reaching Torreon, I saw the first irrigation. Fine crops of corn, cotton, hay, wheat, oats and all kinds of vegetables were in evidence. I was informed that there is fine farming land all around Torreon, all irrigated. A number of good mines and a large smelter are located at that place.

At Matamoros we leave the Mexican National and take the Mexican Central, road which runs from El Paso to the city of Mexico, 1,224 miles in length. We arrived in Torreon at 10:05 a. m., the train being eight hours late on the Mexican Central. I laid over twenty-four hours for a train the next day. Torreon is a nice, bustling city. I stopped at a very fine hotel, the Salvador. My meals were at a colored restaurant, which is run by the negro farming land all around Torreon, all irrigated. A number of good mines and a large smelter are located at that place.

The coaches on the railroads in this country are marked either first, second class or third class. On the Mexican National the coaches looked well enough from the outside, but when you look in you find them "whited sepulchers." Our coach (first class) had at one end eight Japanese cane seats, and at the other end two American seats for carrying hogs. We should all sympathize with the Waters-Pierce Oil Company for being so scarce of funds, and not knowing that we were better accommodations for the Pullman company to force you into the Pullman coaches, at exorbitant rates.

I visited the public market in Torreon, where you can find everything in the fruit, vegetable and meat lines. The city possesses some fine buildings. One side of the city is on the hills and some houses are built on the sides of the mountains.

I had as traveling companions to this city three Spanish children, a boy 16 and two girls 12 and 10, and their mother. They had been in New York attending school. They were a great assistance to me, as they spoke both English and Spanish. These children live at Aguas Calientes and their partition is a large grocery store, which is a wholesale grocery merchant of their home town. It is my intention to make them a visit at some future date.

We left Torreon at 11 o'clock Saturday morning, July 8 (513 miles south from El Paso), for Zacatecas, 267 miles from Torreon. There is not a single through the same kind of country as previous journey, but the soil seemed a little better. Some miles out we ran along this river. After leaving this valley we passed over a long belt of dry sandy country, where the dust filled the cars like smoke. After this we entered a valley of as fine country as I ever saw, fenced with stone and dotted with small ranches. The land is all prepared and ready to be planted at this time. Planting will begin as soon as the rainy season sets in. This season is two weeks late. Later in this section, it is said, as everything grows very fast and there is always plenty of water to assure good crops. This kind of country continued until we ascended the mountains, about ten or twelve miles from Zacatecas.

Zacatecas is something over 8,000 feet above the sea level, and is said to be the second highest place in the nation. There is the climate the next I ever saw in my life. I have visited Denver, Colorado Springs, Manitoba and Boulder, Colo., but I have never experienced such a climate as this. I sleep under sheet, heavy blanket, comfort and counterpane every night, with the windows all closed. I have not been able to raise a perspiration since I have been in this city.

Zacatecas is one of the grand old Mexican towns. It is the capital of the state of Zacatecas. We arrived here at 9 o'clock p. m., and boarded a car, drawn by mules at the station, and came down into the city, as it is built down in a canyon. The station is the highest point in the city. I am the Pacific ocean. All the baggage on the train, except hand baggage, is brought from Mexico and put on the backs of Mexicans, called "mule boys." This is about a mile or more, and they will carry any size trunk on their backs all the way down without resting. It is said one of the Mexicans here can carry a piano on his back. I have seen them carry all sizes of drums, trunks, and an American here says he has seen a 14-year-old boy bring out as much as 500 pounds of ore from a mine on his back, and climb a chicken ladder at the way up.

Arriving at the hotel about 10 o'clock, I was delighted to find a nice place and a good bed, where I had a good night's rest. Mr. Irvin and family of Galveston, Texas, were among the guests at the hotel, whom I met. One of the first sights I beheld on opening my window Sunday morning was that familiar sign, "Schlitz, the Beer That Made Milwaukee Famous," and one of the Mexican breweries, not to be confused with the Milwaukee one, the sign in close proximity, which reads as follows: "Malta Alemana, the Beer That Made Milwaukee Famous." This Mexican brewery is located at Guadalajara.

Having a special taste for Schlitz, and desiring to know if there was something as good or better, I ordered a small bottle of Malta Alemana, and I must say that I found it to be a very fine beer.

I visited the market, which is a very large one, after breakfast. Every kind of fruit and vegetable that is raised in the tropics is for sale here. I saw many varieties that were new to me. In the next block, there are peddlers, and in the vegetable line, everyone knows it is pepper. All the butter used by the hotels is shipped from Kansas, as that seems to be an unknown product of this country. When I received my butter, however, I found it was made in the United States. The market house has stone floors, and is kept in a very sanitary condition. The next block, I visited the street market, where there are as many as 100 stalls, where it is said everything they can steal during the week they sell on Sunday. Along each side of the street, the health of the children of Texas is being endangered by the wholesale use of preserving fluids and lack of sanitary measures in handling dairy products.

Holland's for September Tells The Story

Texas is being made the dumping ground for food products which cannot be sold in other states on account of pure food laws. For months Dr. Chisholm has been making for Holland's chemical analyses of foods and drugs sold in this state. Many of them have been found to be GROSSLY ADULTERATED. The results of his work will be given in a series of strong articles by Walter B. Whitman, editor of Holland's.

The first of these articles, "The Adulteration of Milk in Texas," appears in the September number, and subsequent articles will deal with meats, jellies, vinegars and other food necessities. Harmful substitution in filling prescriptions written by practicing physicians will be made the subject of a special article.

up to the sidewalks, they place mats on the cobble stones, which is the material the streets are paved with. On these mats they place their merchandise. It is next to impossible to describe the stock. I saw every article that you will find in a large second-hand store in the states, with the addition of all kinds of things which you could not get out of a dump pile, from empty oyster cans, sardine boxes, old Duke's Mixture and Durham smoking tobacco snuffs, razors with blades broken, empty bottles of every shape, character and size, all shapes, sizes and conditions of paper boxes; in fact almost any kind of an article you ever saw, all in a dilapidated condition.

Every article has an intrinsic value in Mexico regardless of condition. Nothing is thrown away. One would have to visit this market to become convinced of the fact. This market is about a quarter of a mile long with barely room enough to pass between the piles of merchandise on each side of the street. No vehicle of any kind ever passes this street. There is only one or two streets in the city that a motor car can pass through.

The main street is in the bottom of the canyon. Every house is joined to another one, and archways are built for passing in the freight line. No vehicle of any kind in the city, except street cars, and they run only on one street. There are only about five bugaboo cabs in the city. One familiar thing I saw was a Wells-Fargo & Co.'s express delivery wagon. Although everything in the freight line is carried on the backs of burros, such as brick, stone, sand, wood, coal, water, milk and, in fact, almost all the drays are done this way.

Only about ten or twelve Americans reside here, including a dentist, the dentist and the rest are connected with the mines.

I am stopping at the Gran Hotel Frances. It is located in the main street of the city of Zacatecas, with a beautiful plaza in front, called the Jardin Hidalgo. The hotel is joined to the Catholic cathedral on one side, and the palace of the governor of the state of Zacatecas on the other. The hotel is the best I have found in Mexico, so far. Everything connected with it is French. It is conducted by a very estimable French woman, who looks very carefully after the comfort and pleasure of her guests.

We certainly had a very grand blow-out on the night of July 10, being the day of the fall of the French Bastille, in 1789, which all the French people delight to celebrate as we Americans do on July 4. Corks popped, frequent champagne flowed like water. There was a jolly crowd, including Frenchmen, Germans, Spaniards and two Americans, Charles Bentley and myself, a special invitation having been extended to us. Many toasts were offered and drunk to President Fallieres and President Diaz, and one to the "American Eagle," the bird of liberty that permits no liberties. National airs were sung, including the French "Marseillaise," German, Mexican and American.

I visited the theater Thursday, to witness a drama presented in honor of Senora Maria L. de Pankhurst, the wife of the present governor of the state of Zacatecas. They have a very fine opera house, about twice the size of the opera house in Fort Worth. The results will hold two or three thousand people. They have asbestos drop curtain. The attendance was strictly the first-class families of the city, as
