Home Delegation Declares It Carry Him to White House in 1909

By Associated Press. FEW YORK, Aug. 30 .- This is "Bryan Day" in New York and although the Nebraskan who last night slept in a launch in Gravesend Bay, not again set foot on his native soil until later this afternoon, many welcoming delegations in town were early astir putting the finishing touches on several and varied prorams. Weather signs were not protious. It was after 1 o'clock this norning when Mr. Bryan retired on board Colonel Goltra's yacht, the Illini, It had been planned not to disturb him early today and he took advantage of the opportunity to fortify his physical powers against the fatigue of tonight's meeting at Madison Square Garden.

Given a Serenade

At the home of Lewis Nixon at Stapleton, Staten Island, where Mr. Bryan spent last evening with personal friends, he appeared in robust health. He has a clear complexion and his eyes shone as he talked. Shortly after dinner Mr. Bryan was serenaded by M. V. G. Linigheie's German singing society, thirty strong. This is the society which took the third prize at the international singing contests. Its first number was "My Old Kentucky Home." Mr. Bryan made a short speech, thanking the singers, telling them he would always remember the incident. Several singers were introduced to Mr. Bryan and he expressed a wish they meet Mrs. an. When Mrs. Bryan was called out by her husband Mr. Bryan said:

German in Wife's Name

"I have no German blood in my veins, but my wife has. All my German is in my wife's name, so I can't thank you in the language of your

"We are all good Americans now," mid the leader of the society. "Those who love the Fatherland always love the land of their adoption and make the best kind of citizens," Mr. Bryan replied.

Speaks of Phonetic Spelling There were several callers later in the evening, among them Burton Harrison. One of them asked Mr. Bryan what he thought of the phonetic wstem of spelling, and he said it was most interesting. He remembered a boy who once spelled church, "churtch," and said he thought boys like him would be especially pleased with the idea of spelling by sound.

Mr. Bryan refused to talk politics during the evening. Just before he left to re-embark for the night on the Illini he expressed himself very grateful for the kindness shown by President Roosevelt in facilitating the landing of himself and family. The members of the "Nebraska home folk" delegation were elated today over their share in the informal reception yesterday, when Mr. Bryan spent some time with his neighbors on a tug boat after leaving the steamer.

Addresses Nebraskans

Once they were alone, the Nebraskans yelled for a speech. He replied "Ladies and Gentlemen: The United States is the greatest country in the world; Nebraska is the finest state in the United States. (Cheers). Lincoln is the best city in the state and Fairview is better than Lincoln. I am glad to be here and glad to see you here. I would have been with you in six days, but you come here to me. I s good of you and I thank you for it I am going home now and am going to o all I can to help you democrats.

May Stay in Nebraska "And we'll keep you here until March 4, 1909, and then we'll take you to Washington," broke in Mayor J. V. Danlman of Omaha. "Ill be glad if you let me stay there until that date," resumed Mr. Bryan, "and I may stay there afterward, though not of my accord," he added smiling. "I had a great deal to say abroad about things in general, as you may know. I think I shall have a great deal more to say when I get home about things abroad, so I won't have much to say here and now.

Couldn't Feel Better I only want to say that I am willing to give a month's wages to the man wao can express adequately how good feel, and I think I express it well myself. But my supply of language not really adequate." Afterward a reporter asked what e meant when he spoke about staying in Nebraska after March, 1909,

Texan, Claiming to Be Lost Youth, Will See Relatives in the East

Special to The Telegram. GALVESTON, Texas, Aug. 30 .-William Van Hodge, claiming to be Charles Ross, long lost from his parents, and whose remarkable case has created a world-wide interest, is preparing to once more visit Germantown. Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia, where he expects to establish his identity without the least trouble. Van Hodge is securing evidence of relatives and friends of his abductors and several witnesses who will swear that Van Several years ago Van Hodge, who is a shipping clerk for the Morgan line in Galveston, visited Germantown, but a brother of his had learned of his intention and had the house guarded to prevent his mother seeing her longost son. Two years ago Van Hodge sent his wife disguised as a missionary to interview Mrs. Ross and daughters.

No Doubt He Is Ross

From what she gathered and saw there is no doubt about the woman being the mother of the man claiming to be Ross. It is alleged Walter Ross stated his mother's and sisters' eyes were not the color of Van Hodges', but Mrs. Van Hodge completely established of Charles Ross has been found.

It will be impossible for the family in Pennsylvania to longer throw Von Hodge off the track in establishing the fact of his relationship to them, and it is claimed that if it were not for the large estate which Van Hodge or Charles Ross will share the identity of the man's real mother would have been declared before now.

Distinguished Statesman First Greeted By Neighbors Who Meet Ship in Tug

Special to The Telegram. NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Under gray skies, but in exuberant spirits and bronzed by the suns of many climes during a year of travel completely around the world, William Jennings Bryan of Nebraska, twice the nomihee of the democratic party for president of the United States and already indorsed as the candidate of 1908, steamed up New York Bay yesterday afternoon on the steamer Prinzess Irene and received an ovation from welcoming parties which went down to the quarantine to meet the incoming vessel and its distinguished passenger.

Mr. Bryan did not enjoy his usual health during the voyage, but was much better today and said that he felt sure he would be able to carry out the plans made for him during the next few days. He was much fatigued when he boarded the steamer, and through the entire voyage suffered from indigestion and sevele headaches. His illness was not serious enough to interfere with his work, and he devoted a large part of the nine days at sea in preparing his speeches and in keeping up his correspondence.

Greeted by Neighbors

He was taken off the Prinzess Irene by special permission of President Roosevelt shortly after the vessel had anchored in quarantine. First he went aboard two tugs which had been chartered by "Bryan's neighbor homewhere he was exultantly greated and hailed as the next president. He then went aboard the yacht Illini, owned by his friend and school-Edward Goltra of St. Louis, and and where such well known democrats as Norman E. Mack national chairman of New York, and D. J. Campau. national committeeman for Michigan, were awaiting him. Aboard the Illini-Mr. Bryan was taken to the landing of the Ocean Yacht Club at Stapleton L. FIRST ARREST MADE IN POISON MYSTERY

Joe Allen Held on Charge of Murder Following the Death of Young Asa Fitzgerald in County Jail After Eating Bon Bons Sent Through Mail

STRYCHNINE IS IN CHOCOLATE

No Clue to Sender of Box, Who Disguised Handwriting and Filled Contents With Deadly Powder-Five, Other Priscners Also Poisoned Are Recovering from the Effects

IVALLING in complexity the Santa Fe killing mystery, which, involving the death of two young men in a railroad cut north of the packing houses, several months ago, has not yet been solved by either the police or the sheriff's office, is the crime which caused the death of young Asa Fitzgerald in the county jail Wednesday

As told exclusively in Wednesday's Telegram, Fitzgerald, 19 years old, and an inmate of the jail two weeks on a charge of complicity in a saloon burglary, died in agony from strychnine poison less than an hour after eating chocolate candy which had been sent him through the mail Monday morning. Five other prisoners with whom Fitzgerald shared the candy became ill, but a physician succeeded in saving their lives.

The first arrest in connection with the poisoning was made late Wednesday afternoon when the police locked up Joe Allen on a charge of murder. Allen is said to have had a quarrel with Fitzgerald at the jail Tuesday. The whole story leading up to the tragic death of Fitzgerald Wednesday is one of a band of wayward youths led from mischievous pranks to conflict with the law's strong arm, arrest, imprisonment and then the crime for which some guilty person may be given the penalty of death.

Arrested Aug. 22

Aug. 22, for alleged complicity in the burglary of the combined grocery and saloon of Fahey, in West Fifth street, Asa Fitzgerald, aged 19 years; Henry Peak, aged 19 years, and P. W. Brannon, aged 20 years, were arrested by the police force, and later in the day transferred to the county. Monday a box of candy, chocolates with a half kernel of English walnut affixed to the top of each piece, was mailed through the city postoffice to Asa Fitzgerald at the county jail, Fort Worth, Texas. It was received by the morning delivery Tuesday, was opened, examined, as is the rule, laid aside and overlooked until about noon Wednesday, when it was delivered to Fitzgerald in his cell, No. 4, on the second floor. There were thirteen prisoners in that part of the jail and Fitzgerald passed the candy around, eating several of the pieces himself. In but a few minutes he was prostrate on the floor, writhing in the characteristic convulsions of strych. nine polison. Peak and Cross, two of his cellmates, were also severely poisoned, but heroic measures saved them.

Five Others Also Poisoned

Five of the prisoners other than Fitzgerald, partook of the candy, except one man, who merely chewed his piece and noticing the bitterness of it spat it out and escaped the sufferings of the others. The prompt arrival of County Physician West with a stomach pump saved the lives of the others. Those who partook of the poisoned andy other than Fitzgerald were: Henry Peak, charged with burglary, being alleged that he was implicated in the burglary with which Fitzgerald was charged. Louis Weaver, charged with theft of over $50 and arrested Aug. 24. W. H. Norris, awaiting trial on a charge of forgery and a prisoner at the jail since June 11. Frank Grundy, awaiting trial in the county court on a charge of fornication, having been arrested Aug. 15 J. T. Cross, arrested March 27 on a charge of robbery. He was convicted in the district court and the case is now in the court of appeals.

Noticed Candy Was Bitter

Grundy, when he had bitten his first piece, remarked that he would not eat it, for it was as bitter as if it had quinine in it, but as the more peculiar and pronounced bitterness made itself apparent, he said: "That is too bitter for quinine; it is strychnine, and I would not eat it."

Poison Acts Quickly

Soon after partaking of the candy was found that there was something the jail was given, to which Jailer Deason quickly responded. He found Fitzgerald, Peak and Cross in a serious condition, called medical help at once and prompt measures as stated saved Peak and Cross, but the poison had entered too fully into the system of Fitzgerald and he died shortly after the doctor arrived. The box used in sending is the roughest kind of straw board, wrapped in light brown manilla paper. The ad and with an evident attempt at disguising the writing. The box looks as it was one of those cheap boxes Several exchanges of shots have been used for holding hardware. Some of the candy looked as if the tops had been raised and the poison thus placed inside. A certain knowledge is shown by the fact that the chocolate covering the candy is of the unsweetened kind and, being naturally bitter, it would to a degree disguise the taste of the strychnine. Who did it and what could be the motive? are the vital questions.

Two possible motives are suggested: One that the youths implicated in the Fahey burglary are tools and the real inspiration of the crime, fearing detection through the confession of one or the other of the accused, sent the poisoned candy with the hope that by death damaging evidence might be suppressed. The other is that, in a spirit of boyish revenge, one of the former associates of the accused forwarded the poison, accomplishing the end in view. The first is pure speculation. As to the other there is this to be said: Tuesday there appeared on the court house north steps a young man who had "run with the gang," and he and Fitzgerald indulged in an exchange of such opprobious profanity that Depe uty Snow was forced to go out and drive the youth away from the court house steps. Ante-Mortem Statement

When death seemed to be inevitable, Fitzgerald, it is said, responding to questions as to the possible sender of the candy, stated that if they would find the boy who ran with "Goat" Roscoe they would get the one who sent The "doped" candy. About a year ago Meyerson's furnishing and clothing store, in Houston near Weatherford, was burglarized.

Joe Allen Arrested Joe Allen is accused of "snitching" in that case, that is he turned state's evidence. He, it is also asserted, is the youth who had the "cussing match" with Fitzgerald Tuesday. Joe Allen was arrested late Wednesday afternoon and is still held at police headquarters with the charge of murder entered on the blotter against

Thursday morning there were no new developments in the poisoning case or in the charge against Allen. There is one phase of the matter which may, or can, warrant the postoffice inspectors getting into the case. On the box, inside of the wrapper, these words were written in the same style as was used for the address:

"How are you kid? From your pal." As the candy was mailed as merhandise, any writing inside of the package is a violation of the postal aws and can be made the subject of inquiry by the postoffice inspectors to determine if it is possible who mailed the package and thus violated the federal postal laws.

Justice Rowland held the inquest so the body could be moved from the jail and the body was taken to the undertaking establishment of L. P. Robertson, there to be prepared for burial.

One of Large Family

Fitzgerald was one of a family of seventeen children and all of them bear excellent reputations. Asa had caused his family some annoyance by his persistent absences from home.

RUSSIANS FLEE MASSACRES TO FIND GREATER HORROR IN U. S.

ty Associated Press. NEW YORK, Aug. 30.-After having paid fleeting visit to a world filled with the tortures of poverty, the twin babies of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Blackman, refugees from Russia, lay side by side today in a mere box of a grave out in Potter's field.

They were born ten days ago in a cellar in Harrison street. The mother was a wreck from starvation. One of the tiny babies lived seven days and then with a feeble gasp it passed away. Blackman, un-

the request of his wife, placed the dead child beside her. And thus with the one lifeless twin nearby and the other fighting in her arms against death, she lay for five days more. At the end of that time the second twin gave up its fight. Then husband made his way to a police station and a coroner was summoned. Blackman said that he and his wife had fled from Russia to escape the Jewish massacres. "But," he said, "now I wish I had stayed. It would have been better to able to understand English, half crazed | have been murdered than for these through his inability to find work, at I little ones to perish thus."

Capt. B. B. Paddock Feature of

Entertainment Wednesday

(BY J. B. ROBERTS.) CONFEDERATE PARK, Tarrant County, Aug. 30,-Colonel R. M. Wynne was the speaker of the day Wednesday at the annual reunion of Confederate Veterans, Sons and Daughters for the Veterans and Captain B. B. Paddock was the speaker of the day representing the Sons and the Daughters of the Confederacy. Colonel Wynne's address was an eloquent tribute to the Confederate soldiers, a defense of the cause he fought for and a glowing eulogy on southern citizenship because of the accomplishment of southern men

Captain Paddock's address was a heartfelt appeal for a proper recognition of the southern women-mother, wife and daughter-by the men of the south and a just tribute to them for their devotion to the southern cause and their untiring work at home amid the most gloomy surroundings for the men in the army. Captain Paddock spoke with a force and a feeling that awoke responsive echoes in the hearts of all who heard him and while he talked the people applauded his uterances and when he concluded the audience redoubled the applause.

both in times of war and times of . The second day of the reunion was an ideal one of Texas weather. The synshine was bright and warm, but all day there was a delightful south breeze, making even the sunshine

The attendance was not so large as was expected, but by night there were 1,500 people on the grounds and people were still coming in from Fort Worth and the surrounding country. Judge C. C. Cummings arrived from the city at noon and as one of General Van Zandt's aids took charge of the entertainment features, and announced the program for the week including Sunday, memorial day, which was as has heretofore been published in The Telegram, with the addi tion that Rev. R. C. Armstrong would preach the memorial sermon.

A letter was read from General W. L, Cabell, commander of the transthat himself and daughter, Mrs. Katie Cabell Currie, would arrive at the park Sunday morning.

Afternoon Program

At 2:30 p. m. a large audience assembled at the pavilion, where the regular program of exercises were begun. Judge C. C. Cummings acted as master of ceremonies and announced that the regular program. would be opened with prayer and introduced Dr. A. P. Brown of Fort Worth, who offered a brief prayer.

Judge Cummings followed with a brief history of the establishment of Confederate Park, that it resulted from a suggestion from the late Duke Goodman, who had visited Joe Johnston camp at its annual reunion on its own camp ground, located far away from the usual haunts of men in a beautiful grove of timber, where the old soldiers and their families could foregather and spend a week or more in quiet enjoyment and rest and listening to reminiscences of the war and speeches eulogistic of the southern soldier and in defense of the cause for which he fought. Following a suggestion by Goodman a committee was appointed by R. E. Lee camp, U. C. V., consisting of Duke Goodman, J. W. Adams, E. M. Daggett and R. E. Beckham, which committee visited every section of the country and recommended the acquisition of the land where Confederate Park is now located and it was purchased by the Confederate Park association. "This is our fourth annual reunion here and since the first there has been no regret for its establishment and our meetings will grow in interest year after year," said Judge Cummings. "The people of Lone Star, Azle, Smithville and the surrounding country take an interest in it, give us their support and each night of our reunion will furnish entertainment. I will now introduce Colonel R. M. Wynne, who will speak to you as a representative of the Confederate Veterans.

Colonel Wynne's Address

Colonel Wynne, beginning his address, said: "I have often thought on occasions of this kind, with due respect to the committee which arranges the program, that the reunion would be more enjoyable with speaking eliminated, for if any man had the eloquence of Demosthenes he could not add to the tributes that have been paid the noble men who bore the brunt of the greatest war in the history of the past-great because it was fought by the greatest people on earth-great because 600,000 untrained men held in check for four years the soldiers of tho greatest government on earth.

The causes leading up to the war were then reviewed, the speaker denying that slavery was the main cause. though it was the immediate cause. The causes of the war are well known. he said, but they could not be told too often in order that the children of the south be prevented in time to come reaching wrong conclusions. The question of local self-government state rights, was the cause of the war, a right recognized by our fathers and not denied by the leaders of the government the south fought against, President Lincoln being one of them, a

The speaker did not sympathize with the sentiment that the war between the states was unfortunate; It had to come. It could not be expected that 600,000 men would submit to the destruction of a billion dollars worth of property without a struggle. To have done so would have placed a stigma on their names and characters and on the south, and the south can now point with honor and pride to the accomplishments of her soldiers on the field of battle and to their achievements since the war in building up from chaos the magnificent south of today, which results from a war that some say was unfortunate.

South Since the War

"The accomplishments of the south since the war." said the speaker, "have no parallel in the history of the world, and what the southern soldiers did during the war challenged the admiraion of all men. Without arms almost they met the foe and armed themselves on the battlefield with the guns of dead enemies and pushed on to victory in the fight and for four years without money, credit or help kept at bay the best equipped armies of the

"But now the war is over and we are all reunited under one government our government, not the government of the north; our flag, 'Old Glory'-not the flag of the north; a government made by the people. The southern leaders in the great war between north and south and their descendants have been recognized and given high places in government and have been instrumental in making great the country of us all. The badge of a Confederate veteran is now honored all over the land—all over the world. It was at one time necessary for southern people to defend the memory of their beloved dead, but now it is different; even their enemies join us in paying tribute to southern patriots. Even a northern soldier President, while making a tour of the south, did honor to himself in a speech by saying that the dead soldier of the south was entitled to the same honors as the soldier of "People speak of our struggle as the Lost Cause.' Our cause was not lost, but will live forever. State rights, local self-government for which we fought, will never die."

The south under reconstruction and carpet-bag government and all its attendant horrors was reviewed, the provocation men had to again take up arms and fight, but patient under the greatest outrages, the conquered south remained loyal to its parole until the day of redemption through the ballot came and the south sprang like a giant and forged its way to its present grandeur.

"But," continued the speaker, "we should not lose sight of the fact that there are breakers ahead of the ship f state and the man at the helm and the crew are steering the vessel against a rock on which it will be wrecked unless the course is changed and the party of the people brings i back to safe moorings. Seventy-five million people will not submit much longer to the domination of 30,000 money changers. A private citizen is now preparing to land on his native shore after a tour of the world, and millions are gathering to welcome him home-this means something. It means that W. J. Bryan will be the banner bearer of the people, and I hope for the welfare of the people of the entire nation that he will bear it to victory. If he does not, and the present money changer power is perpetuated, the time is coming that there will be on our shores the bloodiest conflict the world ever saw. This question means more than the slavery question ever did."

"The speaker referred to the nomination of a private citizen for governor of Texas as significant, and said the people were acting.

Captain Paddock for Sons Captain B. B. Paddock, for the Sons f Veterans and the Daughters of the Confederacy, was the next speaker and his talk was one of his happiest Beginning his remarks with a review of his coming from Wisconsin south at the outbreak of the war in the spirit of adventure and enlisting as a southern soldier without knowing what the war was about and not learning until five years after the war what he had been fighting for, Captain Paddock said he was in a bette: position to give an unbiased opinion on the subject than some other peo-

"I wish it could be," he said, "that the sons and grand sons, daughters and granddaughters of Confederate reterans would study up on the hisory of the war between the states and the causes that led to it so that they would be so well informed that they could defend their ancestors when they were spoken of as rebels, and bring up the proof to show that they were not rebels but patriots. I have no patience with man or woman who speaks of the Confederate soldier "The text books in our public schools should be supervised or censored and everything that tended even by insinuation to place the Confederate soldier in the position of a rebel should e eliminated. "The southern soldier was a patriot and not a rebel. I was a Confederate soldier and I am proud of it. Our children should be taught this: That their ancestors were patriots and not ebels, and they should study up from the compact of the original thirteen states to today. The original compact guaranteed the right of any state to vithdraw from the union, and that right was never denied by our greatst statesmen. "But my mission today is not to talk of the southern soldier, but to ell what the southern women did. Had it not been for what the women of the south did during the war between the north and the south the war would not have lasted half as long as it did. yield to no man in my admiration carried guns who did so more cheerfully, more bravely than the men of the south; no men were truer to the cause they fought for than they were; no men ever faced death on the battle field more gallantly than they did, and no men ever gave up their lives more freely for their country than the soldier of the south did! nowhere in history have men endured what they endured but, notwithstanding the English language is not sufficient to tell properly of their brave deeds and heroic struggle, what they did is but as a mole hill to a mountain compared with what the women of the south did. It is easy for men to go into battle. The battle's roar, the rattle of musketry, the booming of cannon, the cheers of comrades and even the bravery of the foe encourages the soldier and in his enthusiasm he loses all of victory; but women are not surrounded by these things-these incenives to action and brave deeds-but desolate firesides sit and with reaking hearts and tear dimmed eyes wait for loved ones or news of loved ones that never come. Watching and waiting with aching hearts they scanned the death list after every batle fought, to read there the name of husband killed and then turning to the youngest and last son and putting gun in his hand say:

'Go, take your father's place in the ranks. "What heroism! What sacrifice was Working by the dim light of a tallow candle making clothes for their soldiers in the field or preparing lint for the wounded in the hospitals and on bended knees praying for the soldiers. Hungry and poorly clad they oiled, spun and wove for the soldiers in the field without a murmur. "You tell me your men were brave that they suffered. I tell you the men's suffering was nothing, though they died, compared with what the women suffered. "And you veterans and you sons of reterans here, what have we done in return for this sacrifice for us? Upon what hillside, on what plain is there a shaft to show what the women of the south did for us? There are shafts of marble and granite and statues of bronze to the heroism of the Confederate soldier, but nowhere, notwithstanding the efforts made, is there a

ONCE ARRESTED

Traveler Claims the General Was Thrown in Jail for Horse Stealing

Special to The Telegram. EL PASO, Texas, Aug. 29.-I. A. Barnes of El Paso was private secretary to General Leonard Wood when the latter was governor general of Cuba, after the Spanish war and is acquainted with all the Cuban leaders, both loyalist and insurrectionary, and is taking a deep interest in the present Cuban rebellion as a result. He was personally acquainted with Quintin Bandera, the first insurrectionary leader to fall in battle in the present crisis and has a number of photographs of the dead leader. He does not place much of an estimate on Bandera as a soldier, however, and says he was a better boaster than a

"Quintin Bandera was an ignorant Spanish negro who attained some notoriety during the last Cuban-Spanish war as a leader of a band of cavalrymen, as they called themselves," said he, "Their method of warfare was that of keeping pretty well within the woods and under cover as much as possible especially during the day time, sallying forth at night or at break of day to destroy a sugar mill or burn a field of cane, or something of that sort. I never heard of his having been in an actual engagement with the Spaniards, unless it might have been to attack some scouting party of Spaniards when

Too Foxy for Spanish.

"He had a certain following, of ourse, among the negroes of the island and managed to get himself talked about to some extent, and no doubt the Spanish forces made considerable effort to capture him, as he tantalized them not a little, but this they seemed unable to do, as he was a pretty foxy sort of fellow and managed to steer clear of the trans set for him and his gang.

"My first acquaintance with the old fellow was made on board one of the steamers running along the south coast ing one of the officials of the United States census commission as interpreter and secretary on a trip of inspec. tion around the island. There were number of Spanish merchants and their families aboard and several American government employes, with a few Cubans and some negroes, and during the first part of the trip Quintin had kept pretty well in the background.

Bandera as Braggart.

"After passing Manzanillo, however, and gradually getting nearer to Saniago, that hotbed of discontent and disturbance where the colored race predominates he began to put himself more to the front. In fact, after leaving Manzanillo he was given a seat at the captain's table. I remember that he was seated at the table just opposite the government official with whom I was traveling, and at the first meal and without being invited to do so, he began to give an account of himself and his alleged valiant deeds. As he proceeded, he became more and more agitated and began throwing out some pretty broad hints tending to show his dislike of the xplained to me what a great-soldier had been, why it was natural for him to be a soldier and how his sword was waiting for him the minute his ervices might be demanded to protect luba against all foreign foes, etc. In fact, his egotism was alike remarkable and amusing, and when I expressed a desire to take his picture, he was wilingness personified. He proceeded to place himself pretty well in front of his companions, carefully adjusted his sombrero and assumed his most dignified look for the occasion.

"At the particular time to which I refer he was engaged in collecting funds from the former members of his company, who were then earning good American dollars at honest labor, thanks to the Americans in charge of affairs, his avowed purpose being to establish a newspaper. He proved to be a pretty good collector, but the newspaper failed to materialize.

Convicted of Horse Stealing.

"At one time during General Wood's administration of the affairs of the island the old negro was convicted in the courts of horse stealing and I believe was sent to jail for a brief neriod. He made an awful roar about it and said he was going to leave the island to its dreadful fate and never return, but he remained. He afterward created a scene in the Cuban congress by making a speech from the visitor's gallery, demanding that he be given a piece of pie and that he would then be good; otherwise he would be a bad man.

"In his present campaign he seems to have been dealing with people who knew the bypaths through the woods just as well as he. I am of the opinion that General Rodriguez, the commander of the rural guards, will make short work of some of those malcontents. He certainly will not mince matters in the least. TEMPLE, Texas, Aug. 30.-Mrs. H. E. A. Otto met with a very painful accident at her residence last night that came near resulting fatally. As it is, she is painfully burned. In turning the gas jet of her gas range, Mrs. Otto neglected to light it. Consequently, in a few moments the oven was full of escaping gas and when she finally opened the door to apply the match the gas ignited and puffed forth in her face, burning her badly about the head and arms. Her daughter, who was standing near by, had the presence of mind to throw a garment over her mother, smothering the flames, saying her from an awful death.

AFTER BAPTIST SCHOOL $ San Marcos Citizens to Raise Funds

Special to The Telegram. SAN MARCOS, Texas, Aug. 30 .-At a meeting of the Commercial Club and other citizens at the court house last night in the interest of the movement to secure the Baptist school for this city, a decidedly forward movement was taken. Aver much discussion, a motion was acopted offering Dr. J. M. Carroll of Waco $2,500 a year and traveling expenses for a year for him to take the field to raise a sum with which to build the school here. The idea is that Dr. Carroll will come to San Marcos and raise what money he can and go out into the state and raise an equal sum.

Francis Marion LeBow, who lived with his daughter, Mrs. C. C. Drake, at 509 Adams street, died shortly after 11 o'clock this morning of heart disease. He was 69 years of age and had been in active health up to the time of his death. Thursday forenoon he went into the house after having been working about the place, and sat down in a chair to rest. He fell asleep and when members of the family went into the room later it was discovered that death had come while he slept. Mrs. LeBow was away from home at the time of the death. Physicians were called at once, but life was extinct. Mc. LeBow was a member of the Cannon Avenue Presbyterian church and a regular attendant on church services. He leaves, besides his widow and Bow, and one in Waco, Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been nights ago.

An earnest of the vim and determination of those having in hand the matter of the out-of-town campaign for the fat stock show guarantee fund is shown by the fact that about 3,000 or 4,000 letters have gone out to stockmen and others who might be interested and the fruits of that labor will begin to be harvested by the beginning of the coming week. Fully 3,000 of the letters have gone out from the office of the company and all of that work has been done by Mr. Hortenstein.

The desire of the promoters of the fat stock show exposition building that the interest may be as widely distributed as possible and, in spite of the great work done in Fort Worth by the several committees, the exposition company would like to get about 250 memberships outside of Fort Worth.

Responses made it probable that this will be done. One of the features impressed on the out-of-town people is the great value which the shows add to the already good market Fort Worth is for thoroughbreds and high-grade stock of all kinds. Too much emphasis cannot be laid on that point and that is the text for the sermons to out-of-town people.

ARRIVES IN JAPAN

Letter Received From Miss Sophie

Manns, Missionary sionary of the First Methodist church of this city, who left July 17 for Shanghai to take up her educational duties in the McTier school at that place, a training school where the natives are fitted for missionary work. The letter was written at Yokohama about the 8th inst. The ship had to stay there several days that a part of the cargo, several thousand tons of steel rails, might be unloaded. Adantage was taken to visit several of the Japanese cities. Miss Manns was accompanied on the trip by Misses Tarrant and Waters, returning missionaries, and Bishop Chandler, the missionary bishop of the Methodist hurch to Japan and China, was also on the steamer. Miss Manns was in excellent health and had enjoyed the trip to that time.

Franklin. CAPTAIN HURLBURT.

We were at the club, idlers all, and a death notice had been posted. It read simply:

"Geo. Jas. Hurburt, captain, died at sea, aged 32." "Best thing he ever did," said a young fellow. "There were some shady stories about him." "Yes," said a second. "There was a money transaction that hurried him out of this country. Never heard the rights of it." "Gentlemen," I said, "the man is There were some mumbled apologies and then I added. "I had the full story from the lips of his father. I'm going to tell it to you. Perhaps it will give you a better occupation than to tear down the reputation of a man whom I was honored to call my friend." My first words were commonplace enough. I asked them all to have a drink, and then I think I talked well, for my heart was in it.

"At the time that Capt. Hurlburt left the regiment his father was in financial trouble. The young man could not afford to stay in the expensive regiment and he disappeared. There was nothing crooked about his disappearance. He went to the gold fields and was successful. He sent his old father $15,000 and saved him from bankruptcy. For five years he has supported the old gentleman.

"Recently he started for home. I was on the ship with him. Two days out of Madeira we were sitting on the deck when a woman screamed. "'My God, there is a child overboard." I shouted.

Capt. Hurlburt picked up a cricket club that somebody had left on the deck and drawled: 'Lots of sharks about here, old man; may need this, Goodbye, if I don't see you again. "He was over the rail in an instant. The steamer was stopped and turned back and several hundred feet away we could see Hurlburt with the child on one arm, lashing the water furiously. There were sharks all about him. A boat reached him and he handed the child up, and just as they pulled him into the boat there was a snap of awful teeth, and the life went out of th bravest man I ever knew." One by one the men arose. It was very still. "Gentlemen," said the man who had traduced him most, raising his glass, I give you a toast to Capt. Geo. Jas. Hurlburt, a MAN."

We drank it in silence and my friend was back on his pedestal. God rest his soul!

FORTY DISTRICTS IN DANGER

No man of average comprehension can figure on the matter of the impending congressional elections without arriving at one definite conclusion and that is that a republican house of representatives in the Sixtieth congress is in doubt-very grave doubt.

No one knows this fact better than Congressman James S. Sherman, chairman of the republican congressional campaign committee. Congressman Sherman is a good politician and he is playing the political game well, and just now he is engaged in the effort to put to sleep the democrats and the labor allies of that great party. That was what he intended by the recent remark that the house was safely republican on the prosperity issue.

Chairman Sherman has recently admitted, however, to the President and other administration leaders that the republicans stand to lose forty seats they are now warming in congress. This would mean a drop from the majority of 112 in the last congress to 32 in the next, and when the republicans concede a loss of forty, it is pretty safe to conclude they have cut the estimate just about half in two, and the next congress is seally going to be democratic.

It is freely admitted that no living man wno feels there will be a loss of forty congressional districts to his party can safely make the prediction that the loss will not be fifty and pernaps more, and a loss of fifty districts in the coming election would tie the house. This is due entirely to almost unparalleled conditions which prevail in the republican party organization in a dozen states, and to agitation along socialistic lines for the destruction of parties, which is now sweeping slong like a prairie fire. The districts that Chairman Sherman expects to lose evidently are those which were carried by the democrats in 1902, and which were swept into the republican column by the phenomenal popularity of Theodore Roosevelt in 1904. Those districts are as follows:

|------------|---|----------------|---|
| California | 3 | Missouri       | 8 |
| Delaware   | 1 | Nebraska       | 1 |
| Illinois   | 7 | New Jersey     | 2 |
|            |   | New York       |   |
|            |   | North Carolina |   |
|            |   | O'aio          |   |
|            |   | Pennsylvania   |   |
| Minnesota  |   |                |   |

Incidentally the democrats wrested from the republicans three districts each in Maryland, Massachusetts and West Virginia, and these, all other things being equal, they may be counted upon to retain.

There are troubles of the first magnitude for the republican party in New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Iowa, and there are obstacles to easy party success elsewhere, but these states will suffice to point out the difficulties the republican party will labor under in its effort to depend for prosperity alone as the winner in the impending congressional elections. It does not require the exercise of much optimism to see success for democracy in the control of the next lower house of the national congress.

A TARIFF OBJECT LESSON

President Roosevelt in his republican campaign document recently given to the public, declares the republican party stands unequivocally for the principles of protection, and it is a well known fact that the party of which the President is a member hopes to win in the impending congressional elections on the cry of general prosperity. But it will require something more than this cry of prosperity to convince "it seemed safe to make an investigation." the masses of the American people that the republican party should be perpetuated in power. There are too ing the workings of the protective theory for them to be any longer hoodwinked. Take for instance the contract for army blankets, which has just been awarded to the American Woolen company by the Federal government. The contract was for 40,000 blankets, involving about $200,000, and the lowest bid was $5,000 under that of the American Woolen company, which is otherwise known as the Woolen Trust, and protected by the tariff in plundering the government and the people who buy its products through the tariff tax on blankets, which ranges from 72 per cent to 159

Army blankets weigh between five and six pounds and as the blanket covered by the contract above mentioned costs about $4 each it follows that each pound of wool contained in one of these blankets costs about 70 cents including the cost of manufacturing and profit. As the Woolen Trust is protected from foreign competition and can therefore charge enormous profits, the cost to the Woolen Trust of these blankets sold to the government was probably not more than 50 cents per pound.

Turning to the official list of imports, it will be found that imported blankets costing not less than 40 cents and not more than 70 cents per pound in the country where produced, are taxed by the tariff law 125 to 144 per cent of the value and that there were imported 7,111 blankets of the value $4,147, on which the duty paid was $5,202.56, or 58 cents per pound.

The object lesson in the situation is that the government had to pay to the Woolen Trust probably double the price that these blankets would have cost, if such an unreasonable tariff tax had not protected the trust in its operations. And every one else who purchases blankets is plundered in like manner by this high protective duty.

And yet, the republican leaders, ignoring the very general demand for tariff revision, refused to consider any bill for tariff reform, even the bill introduced by Representative Williams, the democratic leader, to reduce to 100 per cent all schedules that exceeded that amount, being turned down. And these same republican leaders have again agreed that they will stand pat, and President Roosevelt solemnly assures the country that the republican party is irrevocably committed to the principle of protection.

Is not such extreme protection robbery, in view of the fact that it completely protects the trusts? These are the things that are putting the people to thinkin; and making the political sky so ominous for the republican party.

GOD STILL REIGNS IN GEORGIA

The nottest political campaign ever waged in the state of Georgia has ended, and Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, is about as badly defeated spirant for high position as was ever seen in Georgia. But Clark takes his drubbing philosophically. "God reigns," he declares in a triple column editorial the morning after the election, "the people are busy and rich in the rewards of labor and industry, and the state is at the pinnacle of its most abundant and far reaching prosperity.'

Editor Howell proceeds to calmly and dispassionately review the causes which he thinks led to his defeat, and accepts the verdict of the people in the best of humor. In conclusion he says:

"Now that it is all over, the best thing for us all to do is to accept the result and pull together for the velfare of the state.

"I renew my pledge of heart, hand and head, to the perpetuation of its glory. "Georgia is 'good enough for me,' whoever may be he chief executive. I have never yet sought the shadow in defeat and it is too late to begin now. Whatever happens I prefer to live in the sunshine of the sentiment so aptly expressed by Stanton:

> This old world we're livin' in Is mighty hard to beat; We get a thorn with every rose, But-ain't the roses sweet?

"Defeat is that thorn today, but I would not exhange it for the friendships that have been so generously manifested in this campaign. They are the roses that make defeat easy.' There were two principal reasons that led to the defeat of this brilliant young Georgian. The first one was the belief that existed among the masses of the people that he was the ring candidate for governor, and the people in this day and time are taking prompt action in the matter of putting every ring possible completely out of business.

This opposition to ring rule has always existed among the masses, but it is only of late years that it has almost reached the proportions of a mania. It existed among the people of Pennsylvania and Ohio in recent state elections, and it is as rife in Georgia as in any other state of the uniion.

The other cause leading to Howell's defeat was his campaign of personal abuse and villification. The people have tired of that method of campaigning, and are showing a very commendable determination to compel candidates for public office to stand squarely upon their own merits. And this is one of the most gratifying signs of the times, even though it involves the defeat of such promising young politicians as Clark Howell of Georgia.

THAT BROWNSVILLE INVESTIGATION

The recent trouble with negro troops at Brownsville has attracted a great deal of attention in the eastern papers, and there is a very decided tendency to criticise the government for its action first in sending the Legro soldiers there, and again, in the apparent disposition to shield them from the consequences of their transgression. The investigation conducted by the post commander also comes in for condemnation. The New York Times says:

A curious feature of that unpleasant incident at Brownsville, Texas, is the reported course of the commandant, Ma. Penrose, after his garrison was 'awakened by a fusillade' -the popping of the service krag-Jorgensens that is, which his negro soldiers were firing off in the streets of the town and into the windows of the citizens' houses. "As soon as the shooting eased and it seemed safe to make an investigation all but two soldiers answered roll call, and the rifles were in place and showed no marks that they had been fired." Why should the commandant, who was aware of the state of feeling between his men and the citizens, and presumably familiar with the note of the service rifle, wait until the "shooting ceased?" Above all, why should he wait till "it seemed safe to make an investigation?" Apparently the delay involved in these considerations was material. For we read fur-sible parties in the search for whom he has since shown such polite readiness to accept the assistance of outraged and indignant citizens, unfortunately unable to identify them? The Times believes the version of the affair was correctly reported in the Texas papers, and closes its scathing editorial as follows:

The hint that the President is to punish Brownswille by discontinuing the garrison "for the present," though of course officially denied, may or may not have basis of act. It does not, however, appear that the town is in need of punishment. For the raiders to escape without severe discipline would be a scandal. But the real responsibility lies at the door of the war department for the incredible folly of placing negro troops in Fort Brown in the first instance. The army, which exists for very practical ends, is not charged with any duty of teaching lessons in ethnic

FIRST FLOOR ONLY TO BE BUILT NOW

the assistant secretary of the treasury states that the appropriation granted by congress for the addition to the Federal building at Fort Worth is insufficient to erect an addition which could afford all the room needed by the office here, and consequently it is deemed best by the department to build now but the basement and first floors of the new wing and add the upper stories as money is made available for this purpose. The plans for these two floors have been received by Mr. Barkley and they show that the building when completed will be truly a magnificent structure. The extension will be made to the west of the present building and will extend almost to Monroe street. There will be a large entrance on the west and another smaller one on the north side toward the west end. The corridor on the first loor of the building will be extended west from the present corridor on the north side of the building and will run on around the west side. The office of the postmaster will be in the new part and in the southwest corner, the sternal revenue collector's office beng moved into the present office of the postmaster. The assistant postnaster's office and the money order department will also be placed on the west and next the postmaster's office. By the plans received from Washington the entrance for carriers will be way for the wagons at the southeast corner of the block, so that wagons an come in from Jennings avenue. The mailing room will replace the present money order room and extend also farther west. But Postmaster Barkley thinks that this arangement can be bettered by placing the driveway in the center of the block on the south side and making separate entrances for carriers and drivers. In this way the carriers would not have to go through the mailing room, as would be the case under the Washington

The mailing rooms and city delivery rooms will be much enlarged by the addition and the congestion in these departments which has resulted from their cramped quarters will be greatly relieved. There will also be provided nuch more space for lock boxes. Place for an additional elevator is provided at the northwest corner and also a stairway to the basement. In the basement will be public toilet rooms, rest room for the carriers and toilet room for them, coal storage room and lookout gallery for the postoffice inspecors. The first floor provides an office for the inspector.

EIGHTH WARDERS HEAR FRANCHISES DISCUSSED

Speakers Appear For and Against Traction Company

A FEW PERSONALITIES

Debaters Grow Warm in Advocating

Respective Causes-Meeting Adjourns Without Action

Of all the meetings held this summer by the various clvic leagues of Fort Worth to discuss the question of taxing street car franchises probably none has been so interesting to the man who goes to hear the speeches as that held by the Eighth Ward league Wednesday night at Magnolia and Hemphill streets. The number of men In a letter to Postmaster Barkley, taking part in the debate was larger than usual, the discussion was much more lively, some of the speeches seeming to be inspired, and some of the speakers indulged in personalities which made things all the more exciting for the crowd.

When Judge F. E. Dycus called the meeting to order but about twentyfive men were present, but this number was increased as the meeting progressed. Four new members were taken into the league.

W. M. Knight was the first speaker He discussed at length various phases of the situation, admitting that there were arguments for and against the franchise question. In speaking of the proposition to grant the franchise now and later levy a tax on them, he thought this might be more easily said than done, as no way had yet been devised whereby the value of franchises could be accurately estimated. It would also be impossible to charge an occupation tax as the state law says that a city may not levy on any property on which the state does not evy and to this date the state has not levied an occupation tax on street car companies. The Williams intangible asset law does not include street car companies' franchises, 'The speaker urged the citizen to look at the matter from an unselfish standpoint. "If these valuable franchise rights we might as well do it now as to wait," city would be given the power to compel a company having a monopoly of a street to allow another company to use its tracks, paying an adequate compensation for the same; also to compel an interchange of transfers between different companies. He argued that the companies are given the right to use the streets because they are public service corporations doing a public business, and having been given the privilege for this purpose the company has no right to use the street for private business. When the ompany is given a franchise and lays its tracks on the street that track becomes public property and you have as much right to drive upon the track with your buggy as the company has to run its car along the track. "Just so," he said, "we can compel one company to let another use its tracks. The state constitution states that no city has the right to grant to any corporation a monopoly, yet when we grant to a street car company the right to lay two tracks along Main street we are granting a monoply, because no other company can build there as there is not room for the tracks. Mr. Knight closed by saying that he had fully made up his mind to vote against the franchises and he hoped others would do the same. He was ## vigorously cheered as he retired.

was the next speaker. He wanted every one to vote against the franchise grants because these franchises are valuable and he believed it would be wrong to give them away. He referred to his encounter with Attorney apps of the Northern Texas company at the Sixth ward meeting and ridiculed the idea that he might be employed by the Texas and Pacific railway dompany to fight the traction company. He stated that in the examination of the traction company's report to the city secretary he had found that figures had been juggled in order to make a poor showing and onceal the company's actual earnings. Under the head of operating expenses had been placed interest charges of over $100,000 and cost of new lines and equipment amounting with the interest to about $285,000. After all, he said, the earnings amounted to 1112 per cent. He believed that if the city would limit the earnings of the company to 15 per cent and take all over that amount in fifteen years the city would be reaping over $100,000 annuall from the franchises of the one Judge Dycus gave instances of the value of franchises as recognized by the companies. He stated that a St. Louis gentleman had come here several years ago and offered the electric light company $75,000 more for their plant than it could be erected for now. This extra $75,000 the gentleman said he had put in as the value of the rights which he company had on the streets of the city. He stated that in Dallas the city demanded $100,000 worth of paving from a car company before granting it a franchise and the company willingly did the paving. Roberts for Traction Company

Stating that he was not for the traction companies but for the people who had to trudge blocks and blocks to a car line, Mr. Roberts opened a pare it with Baltimore and Chicago. He did not want to antagonize any outside capital which was willing to invest in the city. All large enterprises here had been built by outside capital. He thought that it would be unjust to tax the car companies and leave free the cabmen and hack drivers who charge $2 to take you home if you miss the last car when attending a banquet or other function in the city. These men are in the public service business as much as the car companies. Referring to the value of encouraging outside capital he used as an illustration the railroads, which he said had been the cause of the development of the country. In the early days they had to build into new country and watt until settlers could be induced to take up lands before hoping to have a paying investment. "What would Texas be without her railroads? Or Fort Worth? Let every one come that will. Again we make the car companies keep up this pavement, yet it is the heavy wagon which destroys it and we let them go without tax. This is class legislation. I am for this car line, for the Arlington Heights line, for any which will come into the city. Let them all come," said he

C. T. Hodge was the next speaker, opening his remarks with the statement that he was for the franchise first, last and all the time. Let all get their shoulders to the wheel and help push all the outside capital into the city that we can get. He said there was not a lot south of the railroad tracks that would be worth more than $500 without the car lines. As to high taxes paid the city by the Chicago car lines, it was sufficient to say that all these lines were in the hands

S. D. Moody

One of the best speeches of the evening was made by S. D. Moody, an old resident of the city and former alderman. He said: "I reckon I ought to be heard on this matter, as I'm the daddy of the town south of Magnolia. gave Hemphill street to the city, not receiving a cent for it, and now the city has given it to the car company. they didn't ask me about it either." He objected to the statement of Mr. Roberts that the railroads had made Texas. "I say the state of Texas has made the railroads. It has given them lands which, if sold today would built ten miles of track for every mile now built. This town has given the railroads $1,000,000 to get them to come here. And now what do they do? They give the district judge, the county judge, the county attorney, the unty board of equalization and nearly all other county officers and the city officials free passes to ride on their roads, so that they will be let off with taxes which are but a small percentage of what they should be. We are taxed 40 to 50 per cent of our valuation, while the railroads are not taxed for 10 per

Mr. Moody said that after the car companies had been given the privilege using the streets they act as i they had a sole right to them, and if your buggy happened to get in the way of a car and be struck, you were told when asking for damages, that you had no business on the street.

Referring to the franchises given the ighting companies, the speaker said that although they use all the street and pay the city nothing, the city is compelled to pay $10,000 a year for the few miserable lights furnished on the

"If we had the right kind of men in ur city government," said he, "we would enlarge our city light plant and say to these companies 'you furnish us light free or we will go into the homes of Fort Worth and give the people their lights for one-half the price they now pay,' and we could do it."

Charges Discrimination

Mr. Moody related his experience while in the council with water charges. On investigation, he declared, e had found that the Texas and Paific road, which, he said, had two men n the council, was paying but 20c a housand for water, while the Denver paid about 25c, and the Fort Wort! and Rio Grande was charged 371/2c for its water. He said the same discrimination was practiced among the laundries, one paying but 20c while others had to pay 45c a thousand. He said be thought that all corporations and citizens should be taxed for what they

When Mr. Moody referred to the use of passes by city and county officials. Dr. Harris rose and stated that the nayor does not use a pass. W. H. (Buck) Smith, a member of the city board of equalization, was present and he said the members of the board do not use passes. Mr. Moody said he ald prove that they did, to which Mr. Smith replied that he knew he didn't use them. Mr. Moody said: "Oh, well, you haven't been there long

Judge Dycus then interposed by say ing the question was not one which hould excite personal animosities, but simply a matter of cold dollars and ents. Probably there were some who had axes to grind, but the man who opposed the franchise certainly had none. There was certainly no selfish motive n voting against it, he said, and there should be none in voting for it. He thought there might be three classes of persons who would take the matter eriously: First, those who believe from public spirit that the companies hould pay; second, those who would profit by the car lines, and third, those who are hired by the company to work for the franchises. This statement by Chairman Dycus at once provoked a statement from Mr. Roberts. He asserted that he belongs to neither of the first two classes and certainly no company would hire him to work for it, as he was no orator, as all present would allow. Mr. Dycus at once added another class for his benefit, including those who had nothing to gain by the

Mr. Hodge quickly followed Mr. Roberts in taking exception to Judge Dycus' classification. He said the chairman had made an unnecessary discrimination and that he seemed to have placed him, Hodge, in the third class. He said he had as much right to be for the franchise as Judge Dycus had to be against it. "I make my money by selling lots," said he, "and I want to see this property advance. I make my bills at thirty days and my notes at four months and I don't look further ahead than that. I don't look ten years ahead to estimate the value of these franchises Judge Dycus, he thought, had exeeded his authority when he called him a hireling of the traction company.

Judge Dycus defended himself by saying that he had not mentioned Mr. V. K. Wedgeworth then asked to speak and made some very pertinent emarks on the franchise question, defending the taxing of franchises. He said the matter should be considered in speech which frequently brought forta an unselfish spirit. He also denied laughter and cheers from part of the that the railroads had made Texas. The crowd. state offers land to good citizens, but does not give it to them. Why then should we give these car companies the valuable franchises? A. N. Evans gained the floor and spoke briefly for the company, and he was followed by Mr. Davies, who opposed granting the franchise. After Mr. Davies had finished the meeting

FORT WORTH MEN GET RARE RUGS

Valuable Skins Imported by Russians

Probably what is the rarest bargain in valuable skins ever obtained by residents of Fort Worth was driven Tuesday by three gentlemen of the city, headed by J. E. Head. Mr. Head and friends obtained six magnificent specimens of mounted skins at a price which would have been moderate for either of three of the skins. The purchase was made from two professional taxidermists.

The skins are those of a Polar bear, Siberian grizzly bear, royal Bengal tiger, Chinese leopard, Russian wolf and an Asiatic puma. All the hides are mounted with the heads in natural shape and the work shows that the taxidermists are masters of their art. In fact the gentlemen are highly educated men, who make a business of hunting and mounting skins and importing them to this country. One of them, S. E. Rosenstein, of Rigo Russia, is a graduate of the University of Warsaw and the other, whoes name is not learned, is a graduate of the University of Vienna. The purchasers of the skins are overjoyed with their acquisition and it is safe to say that no finer skins can be found in Fort Worth and few that could be even compared with these. The Polar bear hide measures 10x8 feet and is a skin which would grace a palace drawing room. The long heavy fur is as white as snow. The head is well mounted, showing the expanded mouth and powerful tusks. The Siberian grizzly is dark brown and black and measures about 8x5 feet.

The very heavy woolly fur of the grizzly attests to the rigorous climate in which he made his home. In size about equal to the polar bear skin, but in marked contrast to it in its rich colorings, is the skin of the royal Bengal tiger, the "king of the jungle." That this dreaded member of the cat family was not brought to earth without a struggle is shown by the patches which the taxidermists found it necessary to put in the hide where bullets had penetrated and a knife in the hands of the hunter had slashed the ferocious beast's side and head. Although the history of the capture of this stately ruler of the Indian forests is not recorded in words, the skin bears sufficient evidence of the bloody fray which ended in the death of the tiger and probably the severe wounding, at least, of his conquerer. Here the taxidermist has again shown his ski! in the expression which he has put on the tiger's face. The mouth is open the eyes gleam from their sockets like balls of fire and so lifelike is the entire expression that the observer at first glance is struck with fear lest the monster spring upon him. The Chinese leopard measures 7x5 feet and the coloring of its skin is beautiful. Here, as in the others, the expression of the face of the beast has been perfectly reproduced. The Russian wolf esembles guite noticeably the lobo wolf of Texas. The color is gray and the fur is heavy and smooth. Th smallest skin in the lot is that of the Asiatic puma or mountain lion, which is mounted on a bear skin. The gentlemen who purchased the

"The Rajah of Bhong"

The musical comedy success of the season is "The Rajah of Bhong," which will be seen at Greenwall's opera house Monday (Labor Day), matinee and night, Sept. 3. The bright particular stars of the organization are the Elmore sisters, who may be said to have fairly won their success that is now pouring in on them. Step by step they have labored long and hard to climb that visionary ladder sometimes called fame, and they have so far succeeded in their endeavors that they are now welcomed everywhere as one of the events of the season. There i an atmosphere about their work that is all their own. For a number of years they have been one of the leadng lights and headliners in the highclass vaudeville theaters throughout the country, and it was while in that ine of work that Eugene Spofford, always on the lookout for talent, conceived the idea that fitted with the proper vehicle, the Elmore sisters would take rank with the best of our operatic stars. Mr. Spofford engaged Miss Eunice Fitch to write the book and lyrics of "The Rajah of Bhong" and Carleton E. Colby supplied the catchy music. The result was instantaneous, for "The Rajah of Bhong" has proven a most remarkable success from the night it was first produced. Boston had seven weeks of it last season, with another long engagement contracted; New York had nine weeks of it; Washington, Philadelphia, Cleveland and Chicago also fell in line and return dates will be played in all these cities before the present season closes.

Big Tent Theater

Tonight at the Big Tent theater, corner Fifth and Throckmorton streets, H. D. Rucker's famous Korak Wonder company will present Bret Harte's great western melo-drama, "Beyond the Rockies.' Tomorrow night the play will be T. S. Arthur's beautiful version of "Ten Nights in a Barroom," in five ects, with allegorical effects. Saturday night they will present "Wanted: a Monday night, "The Planter's Wife." High-class vaudeville is given between acts.

which I did not need, at a grocery. News of my arrival had evidently reached the villagers; I was conceited enough to imagine that my presence was probably of interest to them; but the station master, the girl at the postoffice and the clerks in the shops treated me with an unmistakable cold reserve. There was a certain evenness of the chill which they visited upon me, as though a particular degree of frigidity had been determined in ad-

I shrugged my shoulders and turned toward Glenarm. My grandfather had left me a cheerful legacy of distrust among my neighbors, the result, probably, of importing foreign labor to work on his house. The surly Morgan had intimated as much; but it did not greatly matter. I had not come to Glenarm to cultivate the rustics, but to fulfil certain obligations laid down in my grandfather's will. I was, so to speak, on duty, and I much preferred that the villagers should let me alone. Comforting myself with these reflections I reached the wharf, where I saw Morgan sitting with his feet dangling over the water, smoking a

I nodded in his direction, but he feigned not to see me. A moment later he jumped into his boat and rowed out into the lake. When I returned to the house Bates was at work in the kitchen. This was a large square room with heavy timbers showing in the walls and low ceiling. There was a great fireplace having an enormous chimney and fitted with a crane and bobs, but for practical purposes a small range was provided. Bates received me placidly, "Yes; it's an unusual kitchen, sir. Mr. Glenarm copied it from an old kitchen in England. He took quite a pride in it. It's a pleasant place to sit in the evening, sir." He showed me the way below, where I found that the cellar extended under every part of the house, and was divided into large chambers. The door a heavy padlock and grilled area windows gave further the impression of a house, I swore-if I did not laugh-The room was used, I noted with deasure, as a depository for potatoes. asked Bates whether he knew my randfather's purpose in providing a

"That, sir, was another of the dead master's ideas. He remarked to me once that it was just as well to have -his humor again, sir! And it comes quite handy for the potatoes.' In another room I found a curious llection of lanterns of every conhelves, and next door to this was a tore room filled with brass candle sticks of many odd designs. I shall ot undertake to describe my sensa ions as, peering about with a candle n my hand, the vagaries of John Marhall Glenarm's mind were further lisclosed to me. It was almost beyond belief that any man with such whims should ever have had the money to

I returned to the main floor and studied the titles of the books in the library, finally smoking a pipe over a very tedious chapter in an exceedingly dull work on Norman Revivals and Inluences. Then I went out, assuring myself that I should get steadily to work in a day or two. It was not yet 11 o'clock, and time was sure to move deliberately within the stone walls of my prison. The long winter lay before me in which I must study perforce, and just now it was pleasant to view the landscape in all its autumn Bates was soberly chopping wood at a rough pile of timber at the rear of the house. His industry had already impressed me. He had the quiet ways of an ideal serving man. "Well, Bates, you don't intend to let me freeze to death, do you? There must be enough in the pile there to last all winter. "Yes, sir; I am just cutting a little more of the hickory, sir. Mr. Glenarm always preferred it to beech or maple. We only take out the old timber. The summer storms eat into the wood pretty bad, sir." "Oh, hickory, to be sure! I've heard it's the best firewood. That's very houghtful of you I turned next to the unfinished tower in the meadow, from which a windmill pumped water to the house. The iron frame was not wholly covered with stone, but material for the remainder of the work lay scattered at the base. I went on through the wood. to the lake and inspected the boat house. It was far more pretentious than I had imagined from my visit in the dark. It was of two stories, the upper half being a cozy lounging room, with wide windows and a fine outlook over the water. The unplastered walls were hung with Indian blankets; ounging chairs and a broad seat un-

the floor and a few prints pinned upon the Navajoes gave further color to I followed the pebbly shore to the stone wall where it marked the line of the school grounds. The wall, I observed, was of the same solid character here as along the road. I tramped beside it, reflecting that my grandfather's estate, in the heart of the republic, would some day give the lie to foreign complaints that we have no ruins in America. I had assumed that there was no opening in the wall, but half way to the road I found an iron gate, fastened with chain and padlock, by means of which I climbed to the top. The pillars at either side of the gate were of huge dimensions and were higher than I could reach. An intelligent forester had cleared the woods in the school grounds, which were of the same general character as the Glenarm estate. The little Gothic church near at hand was built of stone similar to that used in Glenarm House. As I surveyed the scene a number of young women came from one of the school buildings and, forming in twos and fours, walked back and forth in a rough path that led to the chapel. A sister clad in a brown habit lingered near or walked first with one and all very pretty and interesting and not at all the ugly school for paupers I had expected to find. The students were not the charity children I had carelessly pictured; they were not so young, for one thing, and they seemed to be appareled decently enough.

I smiled to find myself adjusting my scarf and straightening my collar as beheld my neighbors for the first As I sat thus on the wall I heard the sound of angry voices back of me on the Glenarm side, and a crash of underbrush marked a flight and pursuit. crouched down on the wall and waited. In a moment a man plunged through the wood and tumbled over a low hanging vine and fell, not ten yards from where I lay. To my great surprise it was Morgan, my acquaintance of the morning. He rose, cursed his ill luck and, hugging the wall close, ran toward the lake. Instantly the pursuer broke into view. It was Bates, evidently much excited and with an ugly cut across his forehead. He carried a heavy club, and, after listening for a moment for sounds of the enemy, he hurried after the care-

say it quickened my curiosity. I straightened myself out, threw my egs over the school side of the wall and lighted a cigar, feeling cheered the opportunity the stone barricade offered for observing the world

To the Man Whose Advertising Is Paying—

If you can get better results for your advertising appropriation you want to know it. If you cannot get better results for your money, you want the satisfaction of knowing that your present investment is paying as well as it can be made to pay.

MANY a successful advertiser feels that although his advertising is paying, if he could only eliminate running waste and the element of chance, that it would pay better.

And very often that's true. If we can show you the way to greater returns for less money you will be glad to have us do so. And we will be just as glad to tell you to go ahead as you are going now if we find that your present advertising is developed to the maximum of efficiency. We offer you, free of charge or obligation, an opportunity to have your proposition subjected to the light of the Lord & Thomas Record of Results.

This Record is a tabulation of actual results, inquiries and sales known positively to have been produced by scores of classifications of selling plans and copy advertising hundreds of different commodities in all good newspapers and other media. No matter how successful your advertising is at present the Lord & Thomas Record of Results may point the way to greater returns for less money - the difference to be credited to your profits. For the Record of Results is a guide to the three essentials of advertising-plans,

Do you think that your advertising, based on unrecorded experience, and judgment, and opinion, would prove 100% right as to plans, copy and media, when subjected to the light of the Record of Results?

Our records and tests have in some cases proved 80% difference in selling power in favor of copy based on the Record of Results over copy prepared on judgment, opinion and unrecorded experience.

The waste mediums in lists used by advertisers who have transferred their accounts to us has proved as high as 33%.

When you consider these facts can you afford to ignore the opportunity we offer you? It may be, even though your advertising is paying, that it could be made to pay better. Or it may be that you are now reaping the maximum of possible results. Isn't it worth finding out which is the case? One of our representatives is in your city every few days looking after the interests of some of our present clients. That is why we are advertising in this newspaper -to you-NOW.

We ask you to write today—granting us an interview in your office. You will in no way obligate yourself by asking us to

We are issuing a series of small books (cloth bound) covering advertising in all its phases, which we send free to interested advertisers.

NEW YORK STOCKS NEW YORK COTTON Hardening of Call Money Rates Checks

Advance in Price-Best Levels

Not Maintained Special to The Telegram. NEW YORK, Aug. 30 .- The strong one developed during the latter part yesterday's session of the stock exchange resulted in quite a large accumulation of buying orders over night and was still apparent at theopening of the market today, being fostered by a booming London market for American securities, with a rise of %d to %d in values. The Bank of ingland discount rate was unchanged. Opening prices here were materially shove yesterday's finals, a gain of 21/4 ints-for Union Pacific being the eature. Large blocks of this stock were bought on the call and the price soon rose another 1/4, placing it within of the previous high level. St. Paul was also in excellent demand and attracted attention by reason of an nitial rise of 11/4 to 11/2 points. Low-priced rails, which were active esterday, were again conspicuous in the trading and business as a whole was fairly good for the first hour, les to 11 a. m. being 405,300 shares, but the advancing tendency of prices was brought to an abrupt termination by the hardening of call money rates, which rose to 614 per cent soon after the first loans were made at 6 per cent, and before midday the list developed an easier tone, while prices re-ceded materially from the best level.

During the first hour of the afternoon session trading in the general list was almost at a standstill, sales for that period being but 159,000 shares, and the crowd confined itself to watching the antics of Union Pacific, which was being ballooned in reat shape. Large blocks of the ock changed hands and the price shot with celerity to 191%, a net gain of points and a new high level. But price did not remain at that pintacle long, for with the rise of call oney rates to 8 per cent the inflated oon bursted and an incipent panic sued. - Stock was thrown on the arket and a great deal of the gain nished. The general market closed egular, although net changes either y were in most instances of small

Bull Crowd Growing-Daily Additions to the Ranks Make Hard Traveling for Shorts Special to The Telegram,

NEW YORK, Aug. 30 .- The cotton bears are experiencing a peck of trouble in their endeavor to put a quietus on their opponents. While on the other hand the reaction crowd are working overtime and their dogged persistence is meeting with some reward, for it cannot be denied that proselytes are coming in daily and more prominent interests are linked with the bull cause than was the case a short time ago. The conversion of a prominent local firm which was responsible for the sharp rally yesterday was not without its effect on shorts today, and while bulls did not achieve a signal victory, they managed to shoot prices up several points early in the day and stave off any material decline. The Journal of Commerce summary for Texas, Indian Territory and Oklahoma reported unfavorable conditions in the first two, but was optimistic for the latter district. However, Liverpool prices did not make the expected response to yesterday's local rise and, owing to this disappointment, the market opened quiet with prices 1 to 4 points lower. Shorts and commission houses were good buyers in the trading immediately following the call and the initial loss was soon recovered, prices rising to a level 4 to 5 points above yesterday's finals. Offerings were rather free on this advance and for a time the market exhibited an easy tone, prices receding quickly until shortly after the second call, a break of 12 to 13 points from the high had been effected. But bulls never gave up and at this level short covering increased, starting prices upward again.

The second rise encountered little or no opposition and developed momentum as the session progressed. So much, in fact, that long before the close buying became almost general and the advance bordered on the spectacular, a level 21 points above the lowest being touched in the final half hour, while the market closed very steady with prices at a net gain of 11 to 12 points.

The spot market ruled quiet, prices

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 30 .- Holiday evening up helped the bulls in the cotton market today, short covering bethe principal feature.

Liverpool's failfure to respond to yesterday's American advance caused the loss of 1 to 4 points at the opening, but a report by the Journal of Commerce showing rather unfavorable conditions for Texas and the Indian Territories was a greater factor, and tended to further increase the fear of a bullish government report in September, while many did not care to hold their commitments over the approaching three day's holiday and, as a consequence, shorts were active purchasers during the initial trading and prices not only recovered the initial loss but also attained a net gain of 6 to 7 points before the close of the English market.

Bulls experienced little difficulty in rallying the market and the desire for cover by shorts grew to such proportions that prices were bid up easily without bringing out much until an advance of 17 to 18 points had been attained. The market closed steady with prices near the best at a net gain of to 10 points. The spot market ruled steady with

September Longs Getting Out and Wheat Prices Drop-Corn Also Cheaper-Oats Firm

Special to The Telegram. CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 30.-With the probability of having to accept heavy deliveries of wheat day after tomorrow, which was bought at prices considerably above prevailing levels confronting them, September longs chose to accept the alternative and some large lines were liquidated during the morning, causing a drop of 1/2c to %c in prices. But the market was not entirely without support, as help came from unexpected sources during the afternoon and the market developed a steadier tone, while prices recovered a part of the loss, finals being a shade lower for September and %c off for other options, with the market easy. Local receipts 47 cars as compared with 44 this day last year. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 19 cars.

Corn Corn trade was light, liquidation furnishing the principal part. The market had an easy tone throughout the session, and final figures showed a net loss of 4c to %c. Local receipts 223 cars as compared with 140 this day last year. Estimated for tomorrow, 314 cars. Oats

Oats were in better demand than the other cereals and the market had a firm tone at all time. Closing prices showed a net gain of \c. Local receipts 167 cars as compared with 230 cars this day last year. Estimated for tomorrow, 310 cars.

Provisions Provisions were in good demand by packing interests and a drop of five cents in live hog prices was ignored, closing quotations being 3c to 15c up for the list, with the exception of September pork, which incurred a loss of 10c.

Hogs Eleven loads of hogs formed the body of the swine supply today. Quality was fairly distributed among Oklahoma, Indian Territory and Texasraised hogs, and there was but little difference in the selling prices of the best hogs. The market declined again today before bidding began on big runs north. The loss here was 5c to 71/2c on the best of the supply and 10c on the thin stuff. Two loads went to an outsider at the top price of the day, packers contenting themselves with taking the leavings at still lower figures. ## CHICAGO GRAIN CATTLE AND HOGS VIEWS ON THE MARKET

Vivion Commission Company FORT WORTH, Texas, Aug. 30 .-

Cotton prices have reached a level where legitimate support can be expected as the result of surrounding mated at 2,500 head, of which 2,400 had conditions and that this support will be offered is exemplified by yesterday's sharp rally and the good tone which prevailed in the markets today. Even the most pronounced optimist is bound to admit that the steers sold last week from the same condition of the crop has undergone a bunch at $3.65. This shows the loss on serious change for the worse during the past ten days or two weeks. Especially is this true of Texas, for almost every report which comes to hand tells of great deterioration in sections feeder men. Later these were turned where only a short time ago the outloose at $3.10, $3.15 and $3.25. Sales look was flattering. The Journal of Commerce in their report today tells of less favorable conditions in Texas 46...1,038 $3.25 and Indian Territory, but is optimistic as to the outlook for Oklahoma, but it is probable that more deterioration has occurred since they received their data. The bears use the argument that deterioration during August is a matter of yearly occurrence and that is true, but the damage this year is probably somewhat more than normal. Although as the government report will only deal with conditions up to the 25th inst. it may not reflect the true status of affairs. Nevertheless. pending this report, which will be issued about Sept. 8, the short side should be avoided, for the crop is undoubtedly somewhat late and the ginning returns which will be given out the same day as the condition report will probably make a bullish compari-

The day's market was fairly active and short covering was the principal feature. Liverpool's response to yesterday's advance was disappointing, and spot prices there lost a point, with business dull at the decline, the turn over aggregating 4,000 bales. But after meeting Liverpool prices on the call, the market developed a firm tone under active covering by shorts and some good actual buying and prices rose to a level 2 to 3 points above yesterday's best figure. But on this rise offerings were plentiful and a sharp recession occurred. At the low level short covering became more prominent than formerly and the second rise carried prices up about $1 per bale from the lowest, finals being near the best.

Spot prices were unchanged in New York. Both New York and New Orleans markets will observe Saturday and Monday as a holiday.

Mr. Bryan will drive to Madison Square Garden soon after this.

Program Adopted A conference at Mr. Nixon's house last night resulted in the adoption of a definite program for Mr. Bryan during his stay in the east. He will go to Newhaven Friday and have a reception at noon on the college green. On the following day he will be in Bridgeport as the guest of Senator Archibald McNeil. On Saturday afternoon he will speak in Newark and Jersey City, attending a dinner given him by the New York newspaper men in the evening. He will leave New York for the west Sunday or Monday.

Preparation for Entree The yacht Illini, on which Mr. Bryan slept last night, anchored off Stapleton, Staten Island, this morning, and a little after 10 o'clock preparations were made to take Mr. Bryan ashore again. He will go to the home of Lewis Nixon, where he will meet Mayor Johnson of Cleveland and others and discuss the various features of tonight's program. The yacht Illini proceeded up the harbor and off the battery at 11:30 a, m. Bryan did not visit Lewis Nixon this morning. National Committee in Parade Members of the democratic national committee now in this city today decided to join in the Bryan procession from the battery to the hotel this afternoon. They will ride in carriages. It was also announced that seven Nebraska mayors will be included in Mr. Bryan's escort. Among the early arrivals today of democrats from other cities to attend the Bryan reception are Governor Blanchard of Louisiana, Mayor Dunn of Chicago, at the head of the Iriquois Club; Ryerson Jennings with twenty-five Philadelphia delegates; Governor Swanson, Senators Martin and Daniel and Congressman Flood from Virginia, Governor Folk of Missouri with a state delegation; Governor Warfield of Maryland, twentyone delegates from New Hampshire and a delegation from Minnesota.

Police to Handle Crowd Scores of workmen in Madisou Square Garden early today were arranging seats and decorations for the Bryan reception tonight. A tremendous crowd is expected and elaborate police arrangements for handling the people have been made. Chief Inspector

Cartwright will be in charge and he will have under him two inspectors, nine captains, ten sergeants and 600

Fourth street and Madison avenue and Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh streets are to be roped to prevent the crowds from getting too close to the entrances. Crowds of visitors from various sections of the country were largely augmented this morning, every train arriving in the city this morning bringing scores of men, many with their families, who wish to take part in the celebration. Among the visitors westerners seem to be in the majority. Broadway hotels are filled with them. Blocks from Twenty-third street to Forty-second street are filled all day with typical men of the west waiting for Bryan to come ashore.

INTERESTING TALES OF INDIAN DAYS

LAWTON, O. T., Aug. 25,-"It was the understanding among the Apache Indians," said W. T. Melton of Anardarko, a prominent cattleman, recently, "that at the time they assembled in Skeleton Canyon, Ariz., in 1886, when Geronimo was preparing to surrender to General Miles under a treaty, that they were promised by the general'in case the treaty could not be perfected, the Apaches would be allowed to proceed to the mountains before any further fighting would follow." Mr. Melton and J. D. Pruitt were the only white men at the Melton & Pruitt cow camp on the border line between Old Mexico and Arizona, This camp was 200 miles north of the first settlement in Mexico and seventy-five miles to the nearest station in Arizona, which was Sasimon, located on the valley of the same name. These gentlemen were in the employ of the Sasimon Cattle Company, and with ten other cowpunchers, who were scattered at points along the boundary line, were in charge of 15,000 head of Texas cattle. It was their duty to ride the border lines and see that none of the cattle strolled down the valleys and into Old Mexico. Mr. Melton was at this camp from 1882 until 1887, and has many interesting stories to relate concerning the raids and crimes committed by that band of warriors.

At the camp of the cowboys was the only place at which a well was drilled for water and in case of a dry season was the only place at which water could be secured for vara miles. Captain Lawton and his soldiers went in camp 200 yards from the cow camp in 1886 and soon Geronimo and his band were camping only a few miles away, ready to surrender as soon as General Miles and his soldiers could arrive. They were there several days before they made their final surrender.

Mr. Melton is a native of Jack county, Texas, where he lived until he went westward in 1882, and during his five years' stay in Arizona he returned home but once. He became quite intimately acquainted with Captain Lawton, as the captain camped at Skeleton canyon several times, but he only saw General Miles on the one occasion when Geronimo gave up to him.

When Mr. Melton first went to Arizona there were no cattle there, except those that were running wild, having crossed from Mexico. Many times Melton has trailed the Apaches because they had stolen his horses, but he was never injured by them. Several times for days he and the Indians were camped only a few miles apart, but never knew it. Immediately upon the Indians learning that they were so near the white men they would begin to slip around in an attempt to kill them.

More than once, occasioned by fear, the cowmen had moved their camps. He states that hardly a week passed that the weekly papers of Arizona did not report one or more persons being killed at the hands of Apaches. Most of the traveling in those days in that section was done at night. The traveler had the same advantage with the Indian at night, in that neither could see the other, and in this way the Indians could not waylay and kill them. Even the cowboys were always on the outlook for trouble. Each night when they would leave their tents to go only a few rods away to stake their ponies, they would have a loaded gun in their hands. When Mr. Melton came face to face with Gero remembered him. They had a long conversation, but Geronimo would not acknowledge that he gave up. He claims, "I made a treaty." He asked Melton when he left Arizona and Melton told him he left the next year after Geronimo surrendered. Geronimo jokingly remarked: "You must have surrendered." During the twenty years Melton has seen Geronimo but once, and this meeting of the two has been forgotten by Geronimo, while he very distinctly remembers seeing Melton in what was known as the Hughes house, which proved to be a terror to the Apache Indians and which they knew very little about. It was an adobe house of twelve rooms, owned by Mr. and Mrs. A. Hughes. On the flat roof of the building breastworks had been erected, behind which the customers of the house could go for protection in case the Apache Indians came too near for comfort, Mrs. Hughes, a Mexican, was on the roof on one occasion when the Apaches appeared in the distance and she ran downstairs and gave warning. Three men on the roof succeeded in killing two of the Indians.

As the first Indian dropped dead, the Indians ran back to where the remainder of their party was located and held a council to find out where the shots came from. While the council was in session another Indian was picked off and the Indians dispersed without ever learning from whence the shots were fired.

Two Texas cowboys who lived south of Abilene, Texas, were following a band of Apaches led by Geronimo across near the Gila river, in 1885, trying to regain their ponies, which the Apaches had stolen. It was the belief of the Apaches that if anything was found on their range they had a right to it. Anyhow, they would say: "It is only what belongs to the white man and it is no crime to take it." After trailing the Indians many miles they came within seeing distance of them and dark soon overtook the two brothers, who were alone. Believing it was not the safest plan for them to proceed further, they began a hasty retreat in the dark. Just as they came to a rough place in the timber along the creek they were confronted by the band of Indians they had been following. The Indians, having horses more fleet of foot than the cowboys, had gone around and came in upon

One of the cowboys was shot through the breast with an arrow, and his brother dismounted to assist him, when an arrow came flying by his head, barely shaving his scalp. He made for his camp, which was several miles away, but before leaving dragged his brother behind a stone. A number of cowboys at the camp went out next day and brought the body of the dead brother into camp and buried it.

Mr. Melton relates a difficulty that he witnessed in 1880, while working for Shankling at the Blanco canyon, at the edge of the Staked Plains in Texas. A bunch of three Indians, supposed to be members of the Comanche tribe, comcoming across the prairies from New Mexico, while going past the Dockum ranch, which is vell known to Texas people, ran upon Charles Dockum, a lad of 14 years, and his companion, a boy his senior by one year. The Dockum boy called to his companion, "There comes the Indians. Let us run." He did run, but the older boy did not heed the danger. After the Dockum boy had ridden his pony three miles he got away, but the other boy was captured. The boy who outran the Indians returned home early in the evening and gave notice to the parents. The cowboys employed on the ranch mounted their swiftest steeds and rode off in the direction of the Indians at breakneck speed. They had gone but a few miles when they met the boy on foot, his horse having been stolen. The boy had been struck across the head several times with a quirt, but was otherwise uninjured.

St. Louis Divorce Suit Follows Mailing Wrong Letter

Special to The Telegram. ST. LOUIS, Aug. 30 .- The suit for divorce begun by Robert T. Sturgeon, assistant cashier of the Merchants' Laclede National Bank, has revealed a strange romance, in which fate intervened between a young woman and the man she intended to marry. A mistake in mailing two letters changed the course of three lives, and it is only now, after six years, that there is a chance that the tangle will be straighttold this stody today:

ened out. A friend of Mrs. Sturgeon "Miss Amy Bay, a Virginia girl, came to St. Louis in the late '90s and soon made herself a social favorite. Among her admirers were Mr. Sturgeon and a young Louisville man, who were soon running, a hot race as rivals for her hand. Finally formal declarations came from both, and it was necessary for Miss Bay to make her

"She decided in favor of the young Kentuckian. She wrote to him a letter of acceptance, the note being written without superscription. She also wrote a kindly letter to Mr. Sturgeon, expressing her sorrow that she could not return his love. This letter also did not contain the name of the person for whom it was intended. Then she placed the letter to Mr. Sturgeon in an envelope and addressed it toathe young Kentuckian, and the letter for the Kentuckian was placed in the envelope addressed to Mr. Sturgeon. Thereupon Mr. Sturgeon hurried to Miss Bay's home an accepted

"The young woman when she realized what she had done had not the heart to tell Mr. Sturgeon of her mistake. She thought that maybe after all fate had intervened for her good and that she did care more for the St. Louisian than for the other, and so she married him."

Special to The Telegram. TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 30.-Ora J. Gould, founder of Englewood, Chicago, will tomorrow begin the work of moving the town of Englewood, Clark county, one mile south of its present location. The Kansas town is in the center of Gould's 21,000-acre ranch, and the quarter section on which it is located has a clouded title. It has a population of 450, and the new site of 240 acres is a gift of Mr. Gould, whose home is at Burling-

There is a strong probability of the Mexican National having a steamer line of its own from Galveston and New Orleans, to some Mexican port, to facilitate freight traffic. The line which the Mexican Central road owns is so valuable as an adjunct to the business of the Central that the need for such a line for the National is impressed on them.

To obviate the danger which has been incurred at that points by unexpected washouts, the Frisco will replace the Duck creek trestle with a concrete culvert on a large scale and fill in the approaches to the culvert with a solid embankment. The trestle is one of the high ones of the line and is on a curve which adds to the danger in its use. ## POLICE TO RAID ALL QUESTIONABLE HOTELS

Orders to Be Issued By Chief of Police Maddox Friday Will Direct Officers to Keep on Making Arrests Until the Violators of Law Are Forced to Go Out of Business.

All disorderly notels and apartment houses downtown will be raided and closed whenever I se-• cure evidence to warrant such • action.-Chief of Police Maddox.

Possibly one of the most important orders ever issued to the police and detective departments by Calef of Police Maddox will be served Friday. It has been in the course of preparation for weeks and when it goes forth to the blue-coated protectors of the city it will possibly cause more than one person quite a bit of discomfort. The order will affect the hotels and apartment houses in the downtown portion of the city that make a practice of violating the law. It will be iron-clad and according to Chief Maddox it will be enforced to the letter. For a long time Chief Maddox has een camping on the trail of the proprietors of disorderly houses downtown and the order will be a result of complaints that have been filed at police leadquarters regarding same. It was stated by Chief Maddox Thursday morning that he intended to put the hotels and apartment houses that run on a disorderly plan out of

"I intend to put a crimp in such places," declared Chief Maddox, "and they might as well get ready to pack up lock, stock and barrel and move. will conduct raids whenever I think it advisable and will arrest everybody caught in the places. They are a disgrace to any city and have been the means of causing the police department much trouble. They have got

Violation of other laws is also harged in some hotels-particularly of the wine room law. It is charged that some apartment houses have regular wine rooms in operation and seem to have absolutely no fear of being arrested Every hotel and apartment house in Fort Worth that is conducted along questionable lines is doing a thriving business. Some of the leading ones are located right in the heart of the city's business district and carry on their illegal business as if they were out in the woods. The proprietor of one of the questionable apartment houses in upper Houston street stated to a Telegram reporter that there was no danger of police raids and even went so far as to state that the police were afraid to cause trouble for the place.

Robberies Frequent Last winter more than one robbery was pulled off in the disorderly apartment houses and hotels in this city and they have caused great worry to the detective department. Eyes of the police have been for many weeks on several places operated in the heart of the city and it will be these that war will first be waged

It is understood that several of the places have a strong pull politically and in this manner are able to unlawfully thrive without fear of "being turned up.' In fact the proprietor of one house made the remark, so it is understood, that if any policeman bothered about the place his "head would be chopped.' But it is all over now if what Chief of Police Maddox says proves true. He declares they must go, and says he will keep hot after them until they uit business

Not only has there been much complaint regarding disorderly places downtown, but out in the residence portion as well. Chief Maddox asserted that he had an average of three complaints a day about the way many houses were being conducted in the respectable portions of the city. These will be cared for also.

It has generally been the custom of the populists to launch a state ticket in the field at every election, and this election will be the first time that they

COTTON BELT TO HAVE DEPOT

National Meeting to Be Held | Now Acquiring Property North of Rock Island

> One of the most important railroad improvements in contemplation is that lish a freight depot up in the The property has been quietly acquired that is necessary for the use of the company, and the location embraces Terry's subdivision of blocks 90 and 91 of the original or old town plat of the city. The blocks are bounded by Fifth and Sixth streets and extend from Pecan eastward over Terry and Elm streets to Crump street, what will the better identify the property to most people is the fact that the 460 feet or so that the property runs lies immediately north of the Rock Island vards and freight house. It is well known that the Cotton Bell has long wanted to get up out of the Trinity bottom, where its present freight depot is located, just north of the wire suspension and the Roser Heights bridges over the Trinity. Some time ago an effort was made to get the requisite property over in or back of the Fields addition for the same kind of use, but that project fell

The inconveniences of the present loeation and the handicap it is to the Cotton Belt in its efforts to get business are well known, to the railroad men and to the merchants who have to pay the drayage charges up that steep hill to the city. It hinders promptness in transfers of freight and elivery of freight from connecting nes to the Cotton Belt and in about every way that was possible interferes with the freight business of the line. Every official who had anything to do with that branch of the business has worked on the solution of the problem and to no avail, until the present plan was evolved.

The value of the Cotton Belt's being prepared to deliver and receive freight ty, only five blocks from is plain. Having this in W. C. Conner of Dallas, of the Dallas Belt and the property has been bought, and while all that has been acquired is not known with exactness, enough is known to make certain the fact that the Cotton Belt is to have its own freight depot up in the city. The tracks of the Rock Island will be used, in all probability, for the access to the new freight house when it is

It is not implied that the improvenents are to be made at once, but the company is now in the position o realize long-cherished plans and it will act as soon as it reasonably can. The Rock Island is to do some work improvement near by and the exensive plans of the Fort Worth and Denver road and of the Fort Worth and Denver Terminal Company have een detailed in The Telegram, and these with the Cotton Belt improvement will simply add that much more o making that part of the city one of he most important from the freight point of view of any about the city. One of the tracts of land bought cost the company $20,000, and that will give a good idea of the prices of the land that the company deems necessary for its purposes.

MULE CARS ON STREET Unusual Spectacle Seen on Throck

morton Wednesday By the "overland route" connections were made Wednesday afternoon between the Arlington Heights and the Rosen Heights street car lines, via Throckmorton street. Anticipating the heavy travel sure to come with the Labor Day celebration at the White City, the Rosen Heights line wanted more cars and obtained two from the Arlington Heights line, About 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, with Colonel Voss at the helm, they were jumped from the track in front of the city hall, and, with four mules as the motive power, hauled up Throckmorton street one block to Eighth street, and there placed on the Rosen Heights line tracks.
