Editor's Note: The Bayou Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on the Bayou discusses the housing situation this week. We think that's what he's doing.

Dear editor:

Every time the Russians criticize us, it's not necessary to answer them, but I was especially interested in a criticism Premier Khrushchev made the other day about American houses, which he is an authority on since he has never been in one.

According to him, American houses look all right, but they're not made to last over 20 or 30 years. "Such a method wouldn't suit us in Russia," he said. "We will build in the Russian manner, so that the houses may be used not only by us and our children, but also by our grandchildren and great-grandchildren."

Well, maybe so, but things don't always work out like the Russians claim. You don't notice Stalin's children living in the house Stalin used, do you? Khrushchev has a pretty good house at the moment, but I wouldn't bet on any of his children taking over when he's gone.

Also, I don't know how a Russian can leave his house to his children when he can't own it in the first place. As I understand the Russian position, if she builds any houses, she'd build durable ones, but in the meantime the people can have one room per family in a state-owned apartment house.

And when it comes to building homes that last only 20 to 30 years, if Russia keeps brandishing its military power around, the average Russian house may not last that long, regardless of what it's built out of.

Now as to American houses, I don't know how long they'll last, but the one I'm living in has been here a lot longer than 30 years and will be here a lot longer, if I can ever get around to patching the roof and fixing the front porch.

Moreover, when a man builds one of these modern new fancy houses, he doesn't want to put too much performance into it, he never knows when a new super highway will come along and pass right through the middle of it.

But even so, I believe I'd rather live in a house of my own that's going to last only 30 years, than live in one that's going to last for 200 years, if it was owned by Mr. Khrushchev.

Yours faithfully,

J. A.

PHILOSOPHER FINDS HE'D HAVE LITTLE ENTHUSIASM FOR LIVING IN RUSSIAN HOME

tie on an anchor in the middle of the line. This drops the center of the line to the bottom. The hooks then vary upward in depth from the anchor to the stakes, in two directions. If no anchor is attached to the center of the line, and it is stretched tight, the baited hooks will ride just under the surface.

There are other variations of the trotline set. Many variations will occur to the fisherman as he surveys the water where he plans to operate.

Best time to set out a trotline is at dusk. This because a catfish is notoriously a night feeder. As most other fish feed in the daytime, the night fisherman avoids stealing of bait by the other finny ones.

Of course, catfish do sometimes feed during the daylight hours, especially the channel cat.

As indicated above, one of the main questions about setting a trotline is whether you want it deep or shallow. Your decision on this part will depend on what kind of catfish you're going after. And what kind are most numerous in the body of water where you are fishing.

Yellow and blue cats feed on the bottom. In fact, so do most varieties, except the channel cat. The latter usually will be found close to the top.

Trotline fishing varies a great deal with each locality and each body of water. The fisherman will do well to learn the feeding habits of the fish he seeks. Channel cat will come out of the deep water to feed along the banks on insects that fall off the trees and bushes. There- fore, a line stretched parallel with the bank in two or three feet of water is in a good position to catch some fish.

Another good place to set your line is at the mouth of the creek as it empties into the lake, or a creek into a river. The running water usually brings different sorts of food into the deeper, quieter, lake water. Here it is best to set the trotline across the running water, just upstream from the ripples.

If there are large patches of cattails, or small trees and brush, growing in the water where the blackbirds and other birds roost, a good set can be made by circling the patch. This situation usually occurs in the fall when the birds are migrating. Catfish of all kinds will be caught near such a roost.

One caution—there are about as many laws on catfishing as there are lakes, rivers and counties. Always check with your local game warden before going out. There's another good reason for seeing this official. He wants you to catch fish and likely will give you some good tips on where to go and how to set your line.

Length of line usually is governed by local regulations. Just remember that two short lines are better than one long line. The minute you start running your line, the hooked fish on it will start fighting to get off. The longer it takes you to reach him, the more chance he has of tearing himself loose.

Don't stop to bait empty hooks until you have finished running the line. Bait them coming back.

Trotlines should be checked every three hours at night to remove the captured fish and to rebait the hooks.

If you spend several nights on the river or lake, it is wise to remove the trotline after one or two nights, because the rough fish and predators will have discovered it and will hang around to reduce your catch.

You want to use hooks in a size not larger than 4/0. That one will hold almost any big fish you will get, but it is not so large that most catfish can't get it in their mouths. Some trotliners use 2/0 or 3/0 hooks. It's a matter of choice.

You can rig up your own trotline readily enough. Ask your local tackle dealer for supplies and instructions. Or, maybe if you are not a do-it-yourself type, get the Octopus Trotline, manufactured by F. Lawrenz Co. of Dallas. This rig features a two-way swivel that prevents the fish from getting off the hook, no matter how much he spins, jerks or twists.

As to baits, the sky's the limit. The catfish will eat anything: shrimp, small bream, live minnows, commercial baits, chicken entrails, liver, etc., ad nauseam.

Control Found for Iron Deficiency In Lawns

College Station.—Iron chlorosis, a condition of lawngress and ornamentals characterized by yellow or leached leaves due to iron deficiency, was favorably combatted with powdered iron chelate about 85 per cent of the time in 78 demonstrations conducted by county agents last year.

Demonstrations were conducted in various areas of the state in soils ranging from sands to clays and from acid to alkaline.

"The problem is usually associated with soils high in lime, but sometimes occurs on acid soils," explained W. F. Bennett, extension soil chemist. "Nitrogen deficiency symptoms are similar to those of iron chlorosis and homeowners should make sure nitrogen needs are met before treating for iron deficiency."

Mild cases of the deficiency may be corrected with dry applications of iron sulfate, Bennett said. More severe cases on lawn grasses usually require treatment with iron applied as a spray, since it is generally more effective in this form.

Iron chelates are generally more effective and give longer-lasting effects than iron sulfate. Manufacturers directions for use of the chelates should be followed carefully. "Suggested rates vary with the plant being treated and the condition of the soil."

Treatment about every four to six weeks may be necessary to maintain the desired color in areas where the problem is common or severe, Bennett said.

No Time Like Present For Culling Dairy Herd

There is no time like the present for culling unprofitable dairy cows. The low-producing dairy cow is usually in better condition for sale than any other cow in the herd, says A. M. Meekma, extension dairy husbandman. This is because most of the feed she consumed goes to her back and not in the milk pail, and this type cow is bringing good prices on the market, he adds.

This is the season of the year when milk production is highest, says Meekma, and the cull cow is only a burden to the herd. The little milk she produces is always at a loss. If she is culled, the better cows can use the feed she formerly ate to increase their production, says the specialist.

High per-cow production is the key to success in the dairy business. This means more milk per acre, more milk per dollar invested, and more milk per man hour. Here's an example of what the specialist means—if the production goal for the year is 350,000 pounds of milk, it's better to produce it with 35 cows averaging 10,000 pounds of milk each than 80 cows producing 4,370 pounds, the average for all Texas dairy cows.

The goal of dairy farmers in Texas should be to raise the state average to at least 8,000 pounds of milk per cow, says Meekma. To make a high per-cow production average, some system of record keeping is necessary. Texas dairymen points out Meekma, have three such programs available to them through their county agents—DHA, owner sampler and weight-a-day-a-month.

Good breeding, strict culling, and efficient management will help Texas dairymen reach the goal of 8,000 pounds of milk per cow per year, says Meekma.

Frank Taylor of Kermit is spending a few days in Cross Plains while doing repair work on his rent house in the west part of town.

Tips on Your Social Security

One of the goals of the Social Security Administration is to pay benefits as promptly as possible to those persons entitled to payments. R. R. Tuley Jr., manager of the Abilene office stated this week.

T do this, Tuley said, it is necessary for the person claiming benefits to make inquiry for payments at his local social security office. A worker should inquire for payments before he retires if he knows he will be retiring on a certain date. This will give the Social Security Administration and the person claiming benefits time to get the information and evidence together to establish his rights to the payment before the time his first check is due.

Generally, evidence will be required to prove the age of the retired person and the age of his wife. This may be an old birth certificate or other record of age that is old and valuable. Delayed birth certificates set up recently are not accepted without supporting evidence. Also, evidence of the worker's earnings in the taxable year that ended before he plans to retire is necessary. This may be a copy of the income tax return for self-employed persons or the W-2 for for wage earners.

Tuley again stressed that for prompt payment of your first social security check "inquire before you retire" at your Abilene social security office, or meet a representative of that office when he is next in your community. Your local post office has a current schedule of such visits.

Girls To Play Leading Role In World of Work In Future

"Girls of this generation are destined for a very important role in the world of work," says Brunswick A. Bagdon, Southern Regional Director of the U. S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics, in announcing a new publication.

"We anticipate there will be 11 million more workers in 1965 than there were 10 years earlier; that more than half of these additional workers will be women; and that 1.5 million will be girls and young women under 25 years of age. Of these young women, the majority will be high school graduates.

"Chances are a girl will work for a few years at least, after completing her schooling. This is true whether or not she plans to marry soon after graduation—the young bride of today is likely to continue working for a while if family responsibilities allow."

A recent bulletin of the Women's Bureau contains a wealth of useful information for high school girls, their parents, teachers and counselors. This publication has been written to help high school girls in their planning for the future. In the job guide section, information is given on a variety of occupations that can be entered by young women high school graduates. The nature of the work, job possibilities, qualifications and training needed, and opportunities for advancement in occupations which range from beauty operator to radio and television technicians are discussed.

Among jobs to which a high school diploma opens the door are those of general clerical workers, telephone operator, department store saleswoman, grocery checker and dental assistant, or airline stewardess.

For some other occupations, a high school graduate will need additional training, as well as work experience, in order to advance. These occupations include such technical and professional jobs as nursing, medical laboratory work and engineering aide or draftsman—also top secretarial jobs, and many specialized jobs.

Training for jobs which require more than a high school diploma can be obtained in various ways—through informal training on the job (bank teller); courses at a technical school or university (draftsman); formal apprenticeship (optical technician) and attendance at a business college (secretary) or an approved hospital school (nurse).

Also included are suggestions for obtaining experience and additional training, both in and out of school, how to look for a job and prepare for an interview. Suggested sources for securing further information are also listed.

Copies of "Future Jobs for High School Girls" are available from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Suite 549-1271 Peachtree Street, N. E., Atlanta 5, Ga., at 40 cents a copy.

State Capital NEWS

By Vern Sanford

Senators and Representatives will have only a brief regular and special session of the Legislature. Gov. announced that convene again, the balance the budget for 1960-61, that chore will be number one on their agenda. And most observers think it will take at least two, and maybe more, 30-day special sessions to iron things out.

Only matters specifically offered by the Governor may be considered during a special session of the Legislature, and all legislation started during the regular session must start over, practically from scratch. Revenue-raising proposals will have to be introduced again in the House, heard in committee, etc., before they can go to the Senate.

"OPEN SHOP" TEACHING—Any college graduate could teach school in Texas—at least for a year or two—under a House-passed bill. Bill would grant a teacher's certificate good for one year to any bachelor's degree holder, whether he had had teacher training or not. Certificates could be renewed twice. After that, the applicant would have to take 12 semester hours of teacher education.

Miss Maud Isaacks of El Paso, herself a teacher for many years, sponsored the bill. Professional educators were divided on the merits of the plan. Some said it would increase qualified personnel; others, that it would attract to Texas the misfits and ne'er-do-wells from "all the freshwater colleges" in the nation.

PLOUGHED UNDER—In the final days of a session, there usually isn't time to revive a bill that gets pushed aside. Among the bills whose setbacks were interpreted as death for this year are these: MILK IMPORT REGULATIONS, sponsored by Sen. Grady Hazlewood of Amarillo. House supporters couldn't muster the two-thirds majority to take the bill out of order. Proponents said the restrictions on milk brought across the state line was needed for health reasons. Opponents called it a trade barrier that would raise the price of milk.

BROADENING THE COMMON PURCHASER OIL LAW, by Sen. Hazlewood. Senate refused to take up the bill which would require pipelines to provide connections to new fields or transport the oil to market by truck. BAN ON SUNDAY AUTO SALES, by Sen. George Parkhouse of Dallas. It passed Senate, but House refused twice to take it up. BAN ON NUDIST CAMPS, by Rep. James Turman of Goben. Senate passed, but House refused to call it out of committee. Committee had referred it to the Attorney General who said it would be legal. HIGHWAY ZONING—Both houses moved quickly toward passage of a bill to protect smaller roads from heavier truck loads. Governor Daniel asked for such regulation when he signed the bill to increase permitted truck loads from 58,429 to 72,000 pounds. Proposed bill would allow the State Highway Department to zone state highways and farm roads for lighter truck load and give same authority to County Commissioners for county roads. INSURANCE QUESTION MARKS—Whether the State Board of Insurance should operate full-time or part-time was an issue expected to carry over into the special session. House made its preference clear by putting full-time salaries in the House appropriations bill and by passing a bill specifically providing for a full-time Board. Senate version of the appropriations bill provided for what would

WTU Electric Times Wins First Place In Contest

The Electric Times, employee's monthly magazine edited by Jimmie Martin of the Public Service Department of the West Texas Utilities Co., was named first place winner in the 1959 Better Copy Contest, sponsored by the Public Utilities Advertising Association.

Cal Young, WTU president, announced today that WTU again has won outstanding honors in the field of advertising but in a new category. The company has won several first awards in this contest in recent years in advertising and window displays, but this is the first time to win honors in the magazine category. The awards were made May 9 at the annual PUA convention in Dallas.

The Electric Times is one of the pioneers in the employee magazine field and is now in its 32nd year of publication. Jimmie Martin has served as publication editor for the past 14 years.

This is the second national honor to be awarded to the Electric Times in recent years. In 1951 the magazine was awarded the Freedom Foundation Medal for editorials and feature articles promoting a better understanding of the American Way of Life. One was awarded the company a second to Martin.

More than 2,000 entries were received in this year's Better Copy Contest, which is the 36th annual contest conducted by the association and the oldest continuous advertising competition. The Electric Times was awarded first place in the top category which includes employee publications of all privately managed electric utilities companies with 100,000 or more customers.

The contest included newspaper advertising, magazines, employee newspapers, direct mail, publications, display, posters, billboards, annual reports, radio and television, and motion pictures.

New Official Highway Map Now Available to Public

AUSTIN, Tex.—The new 1959 Official Highway Travel Map will be available for distribution Monday by the Texas Highway Department.

Copies of the "travel encyclopedia" of Texas, as it has been called, may be obtained by writing the Texas Highway Department, Austin 14, or at the highway district office and travel information bureaus. County tax offices have map cards available for requesting copies of the map.

The new map is the answer to today's demand for more and more travel information. The steady growth of Texas from a state with a population of slightly over seven million just ten years ago to its present estimated population of more than nine million is reflected by the information appearing on the 1959 map.

Nine more cities and towns are shown than on last year's map, making a total of 1,821. The increased mileage in U. S. state and farm-to-market roads is much in evidence. The map reflects some 1,600 miles of multilane divided highway now completed in Texas, including the completed sections of the National System of Interstate and Defense highways located in the state.

The map now shows approximately 61 major lakes and reservoirs, and includes countless rivers, creeks and streams. Roadside parks, long cherished as rest spots and picnic areas by Texans and tourists alike, now number 1,046 as compared to the 1,926 shown on last year's map.

City route maps are provided of the state's 12 largest cities—Amarillo, Austin, Beaumont, Corpus Christi, Dallas, El Paso, Fort Worth,

The reverse side of the map, with a theme of "Texas, Land of Contrasts," reflects, in 20 full-color pictures, some of the outstanding scenic, historical and recreational attractions in Texas. A section entitled "Facts About Texas" gives facts and figures on Texas' natural resources, recreational opportunities, state and national parks, historical points of interest, flora, farming and ranching, terrain features, and climate.

The Official Highway Travel Map is used by all state and governmental agencies in the state for determining highway distances, mileages, zones, and like information. The same map is equally as useful to tourists seeking roads leading to good times in Texas.
