Higginbotham's

PHILOSOPHER IS OUT AGAINST ZONING FOR HIS JOHNSON GRASS FARM

Editor's note: The Bayou philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on the Bayou is probably is misconstruing matter he's discussing week. It's not the first time.

Whenever a city gets a certain idea, say big enough to have armed policemen and one-street zoning, the next step naturally is what's called zoning. As I understand it, it gives the right to decide what building can be put up in a given area. This idea, I think, to keep livery from going up next door to cream parlors and saloons to churches, and is used to keep supermarkets from residential sections, and away from city parks.

What brought this up was an article I read in a newspaper where somebody sent me thru mail reporting a governmental official in Washington has decided that what this country needs is a nationwide system to prevent further of America's agricultural lands.

"According to him, about a million acres of productive land are being taken for such things as highways, airports and housing projects every year, and he thinks all the land ought to be zoned so this thing can be headed off.

"At first I thought this was a good idea, anybody can figure that a million acres a year, if kept up very long, would eliminate farming and therefore eating, although you can say this for it, it certainly would solve the farm problem.

"But if Washington gets the right to decide which land can be used for a housing project, which land has to stay in cultivation, it wouldn't be far to the point where it could decide not only which land has to stay in cultivation, but how it should be cultivated, or even worse, how often. This is where I draw the line.

"If city people want to give their city government the right to decide whether you can open up a TV repair shop in your garage or a beauty shop in your spare room, that's entirely their business, but the last thing I want is Washington zoning this Johnson grass farm and telling me I can't graze cows in my front yard or that my propped up fences and sagging gates don't meet the nationwide zoning standards.

"Yours faithfully,
"J. A."

The U.S. Savings Bonds that send you money

Twice a Year

Buyers of the H Series of U.S. Savings Bonds receive interest money every six months by Treasury Check. This is why people who want to save for regular extra income buy H Bonds (just as they save for a specific purpose by E Bonds that pay the interest to maturity). Facts about H Bonds: Buy them at full face value. They earn an average rate of 3 1/2% over their 10 year maturity period. Your investment is guaranteed safe by the U.S. Government. You can get your money back if ever you need to, anytime after the first six months, on one month's notice. If your H Bonds are lost or destroyed they will be replaced free. You save more than money.

(Note to owners of E Bonds: You can trade E Bonds, matured or not, for H Bonds, and postpone paying income tax on the accumulated interest. If you're retired, or about to retire, this may be for you.)

"I wonder why our Electric service (bill) is higher this month?"

HERS GOOD NEWS
 In homes served by WTLU, the average cost of a kWh of service is 20% less than it was 10 years ago.

Beg pardon, lady, but aren't you enjoying the big reason why?

OVER there in the window. Isn't that air conditioner new this summer? Naturally, every time you get some new electric servant you use more electricity. Naturally, your bill will be a little higher. But remember these two facts about the electric service you now enjoy:

First, you do use more electricity for the simple reason that it's about the most efficient and dependable servant you can get! Second, the more electricity you use, the less you pay for it per average kilowatt-hour.

Can you think of a bigger bargain?
