SENATE PASSES FARMER TARIFF MEASURE SAT'Y

Would Grant $500,000-000 For Soil Conservation Uses.

Flowing under a-merican opposition by an almost three to one margin, administration forces last Saturday, won passage of the $500,000,000 soil conservation-subsidy brand of crop control.

The bill was promptly sent to the house. The senate vote, climaxing eleven days of debate during which the measure's constitutionality was challenged and defeated, was 56 to 20.

Forty-nine Democrats, five Republicans, the farmer-laborer, Benson, and the progressive, LaFollette, voted for the bill. Democrats and 11 Republicans opposed it.

for the set roll call, a motion picture, Mr. McNary, Republican, sent the bill back to committee with instructions to report out of committee in three weeks, was reduced to 21. The bill was "undone and unconstitutional." He later at the senate quit for the same state would challenge it.

argued it was unconstitutional. The supreme court's interest in the decision killing the bill is intended to be followed by Senator McNary, a substitute for a measure by Senator McNary would authorize a billion dollars in aid to farmers based on crop land soil improvement.

Roy Helson Is Not Interested In Enochs Package Liquor Store

That Roy Helson is contemplating opening a package liquor store in Enochs, is an error, according to his statement last week, when he approached Judge J. E. Adams as to the source of his information regarding the news item published in last week's issue of the Journal. Mr. Helson explained that he had made application for permit to transport liquor by truck, as required by law; but that he was in no way interested in opening a store for the sale of it in Enochs.

Helson explained that his information came direct from the Texas Liquor Control Board, Austin, under signature of C. R. Miller, administrator, the notice of application for permit being addressed to the County Judge of Muleshoe, Texas, and stating: "You are hereby notified that Roy Helson, has made application to the Texas Liquor Control Board for a Package Store permit."

WATER EVAPORATION ON PLAINS IS ABOUT SIX FEET PER ANNUM; NEED OF FARMER CONSERVATION IS GREAT

Very few people, relatively speaking, realize the great loss of rainfall through evaporation and that the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at its various sub-stations located all over this state from the Upper Panhandle to the Rio Grande river, has for years past been gathering and compiling pretty exact data regarding such evaporation.

Farmers of this section years ago realized the value of keeping a dust mulch on their soil so as to break down capillary attraction and retard rapid evaporation. Since the recent drought of this area, they have also begun to learn the value of deep plowing, so as to store away as much moisture as possible, letting it out gradually as growing crops required.

Completed statistics show that evaporation increases gradually from the eastern to the western part of the state. The total annual evaporation from a free water surface ranges from 45 to 55 inches in the eastern part of Texas, from 55 to 65 inches in the central part, and from 65 to 75 inches in the western part, or a range of from four to six feet per annum.

When conditions are highly favorable to rapid evaporation, a loss of from one-half to three-fourths of an inch of water may occur in a 24-hour period. While in the eastern and southern parts of this state the annual rainfall may be slightly more than the annual evaporation, yet in many sections of the western area the annual evaporation totals 61.65 inches, approximately two-thirds of it occurring during the six warm months.

open tank evaporation has been an average of 62.158 inches. At Dalhart, where partial records have been kept for 25 years, the average annual rainfall has been 18.95 inches, and the open evaporation has averaged 49 inches per annum.

There are several meteorological conditions that enter into evaporation, not all of it being caused by the sun. Maximum and minimum temperatures enter into the computation, wind, relative humidity, and all component factors in arriving at the evaporation rates. Dry atmosphere and rapid wind movement are especially favorable to a high rate of evaporation.

Of course, lesses through evaporation have an important bearing upon crop production and farming, as well as upon economic and adequate planning of reservoirs. A careful study of moisture conservation is invaluable to every crop-grower and the more successful farmers are in holding ground moisture the more abundant crops they will be able to grow.

In the Blackwater valley around Muleshoe, where irrigation is practiced at some length, there are wells producing from 500 to 2,000 gallons of water per minute from the great reservoir beneath the surface.

When conditions are highly favorable to rapid evaporation, a loss of from one-half to three-fourths of an inch of water may occur in a 24-hour period. While in the eastern and southern parts of this state the annual rainfall may be slightly more than the annual evaporation, yet in many sections of the western area the annual evaporation totals 61.65 inches, approximately two-thirds of it occurring during the six warm months.

A Yaqui History Is Published By Tech. Contains 9 Chapters

Strange mixture of the primitive and the advanced among a tribe of Indians who grind corn by hand, carry maniocettes, laugh and dance at funerals, and encourage illiteracy, at the same time they farm with American-made machinery, profess Catholicism, wear straw hats, and elect a governor once a year is described in a bulletin published recently at Texas Technological college, "Studies of the Yaqui Indians of Sonora, Mexico."

The book contains findings made when an expedition led by Dr. W. C. Holden, Texas Tech anthropologist, penetrated the lower Yaqui river region and visited four Indian villages in March 1934. Relations between Yaquis and Mexicans are still hostile. Though the men of the river villages are officially a part of the Mexican army and receive pay, they do not drill or take orders from the Mexican army, Dr. Holden says, explaining that "in each village there are two agitators, one Mexican, one Yaqui. They are paid by the same government but spend their days watching each other."

A description of Yaqui organizations by the first chapter of the report reveals that Yaquis pay no taxes, and do not wish to accept valid political offices. Men who refuse to be influenced by the argument that it is their duty to accept offices have been whipped until they agreed to assume the new positions. All Yaqui villages have a central government in the form of a chief and council, to which all the inhabitants of the village belong.

The average Yaqui, Dr. Holden says, puts in more time at the council house than anywhere else, barring the time he spends at home. If there is anything to deliberate upon, he either talks and spits or listens and spits. If there is not anything to deliberate about, he merely spits," Dr. Holden explains.

The book contains nine chapters on organizations; marriage, child-rearing, and education; La Fiesta de Gloria; Yaqui funerals; household economy; Yaqui architecture; medical practices; physical characteristics; and Yaqui agriculture. Dr. Holden is author of the first five chapters.

One Killed and Three Injured In An Auto Crash Saturday Nite

A serious auto collision disaster occurred last Saturday night 20 miles south of Muleshoe, when a Buick passenger auto driven by a doctor from Pampa, accompanied by a nurse, who was taking a patient to an Oklahoma City hospital, crashed into the back of a truck being driven by Wesley Moore, this city, and belonging to the local Consumers Oil Co., resulting in the death of the patient the following morning, seriously injuring the physician, the nurse sustaining a broken leg and other serious injuries, according to report. Moore was only slightly injured.

Details of the accident are not available at this time; but according to report, Moore was having some trouble with the motor of his truck. He had been stuck to the side of the highway and was in front of the truck preparing to crank it, when the collision occurred. The rear of the truck is said to have been considerably damaged, while the passenger car crashing into it was totally demolished. Moore has been a resident of Muleshoe for the past five or six years, and has many friends who seriously regret the accident.

"Passing the Buck" The phrase "pass the buck" is derived from the game of cards. In each game, the counter or other object is placed on the table before the dealer and passed by him to the next dealer to prevent mistakes as to the position of the deal. In poker, a marker is put into a jack pot, another jack pot being in order when the deal is passed to him who holds the buck.

When any Dealer Offers you More for Your Used Car than you know it is worth... Look out. Take a Good Look at the TOTAL DELIVERED PRICE of his car... the price you have to pay. No one is giving you any presents... You have to pay for "extras."

What you pay for your new car is more important than how much you get for your trade-in. It's the difference between the delivered price and your allowance that counts. Remember THAT when you buy your next car. Remember also that no one is giving you anything even when the trade-in allowance seems generous. Always ask the TOTAL DELIVERED PRICE of every new car offered you. Subtract your allowance from this price and you may happily discover that you can buy a Ford V-8 for less.

MONEY IN BEANS

At a recent dinner given by the East Texas Chamber of Commerce every dish served from the introductory soup, through the salad and its dressing to the meat substitute, the vegetables, the bread, the pie and the coffee, and the so-called milk, was made with soy-beans. The idea was to show the many possibilities of this recent addition to the vegetable world, a product from which more and more rural residents are reaping a handsome profit each year.

That dinner in which the soybean was the chief factor ought to interest everyone around Muleshoe since it shows in a way the rapid rise of this product's culture in the United States. In Asia it has been cultivated for human food since remote times. It came into this country chiefly because an oil made from it is extremely useful in the manufacture of paints, varnishes, soaps, lubricants, linoleum and various other uses. It is now being widely now as a forage and soiling crop, and it is understood that its newly-formed admirers hope soon to extend its use in this country to the dinner table.

There may also be a lesson in the soybean applicable to other agricultural products. The more uses that may be discovered from any particular crop, the more profitable becomes its cultivation. The agriculturist who has investigated the growing of soybeans may be standing in his own light.

BONUS "RACKETS"

While actual payment of the soldiers' bonus is not expected to begin before the first of July, warnings are already being sent out from Washington that should be heeded by every veteran entitled to share in it. We repeat the warning here in the hope that it will be of value to all World War soldiers around Muleshoe who are in line for a bonus payment.

The money to be distributed in the form of "baby bonds" and already attempts have been made by sharpers in various parts of the country to deceive veterans by inducing them to donate money to mushroom organizations supposedly organized in their interest. Ray Murphy, national organizer and commander of the American Legion, says the tactics employed by the promoters smack of racketeering and are palpably intended to separate the soldier from the reward for which he has so long and so strenuously contended.

Merchants are also warned that peddlers are gathering in considerable money by promoting the purchase of "bonus shields," claiming that the display of these shields will go far toward securing the patronage of World War veterans when they start in to spend their bonus money. This, too, is declared to be a racket, as the "shields" are not endorsed by any one connected with the American Legion or any similar veterans' organization.

Many other forms of racketeering are expected to spring up in all parts of the country. So a warning to World War boys and those they will be doing business with is not out of place now.

OLD-FASHIONED WINTERS

There are still a few people around Muleshoe contending that "we don't have old-fashioned winters like we used to have." If they will read a government weather report for the entire country they will have occasion now to change their minds. Reports for January, gathered in state in the union, reveal that only no part of the country ever low temperatures than in those states boasting high temperatures while are freezing up reported.

It's a mighty good idea to follow—when you're right on the brink of a verge, with bankruptcy hot on your collar, the way to get out is to "merge." With an extra in your eye, you'll find a way to get out. Buying Power in Small Towns

Politicians who doubt where the strength of America lies should examine the report made from a survey of thirteen north-central states in relation to farm and town trade.
It is found that in towns of 2,000 or less population, the farm trade represents about 70 per cent of the total. In dry goods it represents 80 per cent; in hardware 85 per cent; in building material 90 per cent; in furniture 70 per cent, and in clothing 68 per cent.
Automobiles are sold in these small towns to the extent of 80 per cent of total consumption. These figures are startling and they run only slightly lower in towns of from 2,000 to 25,000. The small town consumption is more than fifty per cent in every line.
This survey shows where the market lies for American manufacturers. It emphasizes again the importance of national legislators looking after the interest of the farmer. The farmer is awakening to a sense of his strength politically and economically. Unless he receives more serious consideration he is likely to prove a troublesome factor.
The writing is on the wall. Politicians both in the states and in the nation should keep their ears to the ground. The voice of the home town is well worth listening to.

Pavement Pickups

"A free country," says Al Carpenter, "is one in which a few people run things because the others don't give a darn."

WANTED: Have customer who wants to rent a farm close for raising spaghetti and grape-tins. Brown. Irrigation well desired. R. L. Brown.

Treasury experts say they have a surprise coming regarding the "baby bonds," but Gib Wollard says he'll bet his bottom dollar that they're not going to hit about quintuplets.

"The old-fashioned kiss was not a mere peck, as many suppose," says S. R. Little, who declares he can remember when it took some time to get through the whiskers.

A contemporary newspaper recently carried a story about a teacher who plastered tape over the nose of some of her pupils who persisted in talking and whispering out of time, and H. C. Holt says the idea might work pretty well on some of the politicians.

Muleshoe has always prided herself in doing things with dispatch. Now comes Ray Carter, who last week received a letter at Baleyboro 15 minutes after it was mailed from Muleshoe. The Muleshoe postmark said 10:00 A. M., while the Baleyboro postmark said 10:15 A. M. Ray evidently didn't know there was airplane service between these two points.

The visiting Baptist preacher here last Sunday, as he began his discourse, counted several rows of empty benches between himself and his congregation perched congestively on the back rows, and remarked that they must have been used to a preacher with a strong voice which would cover all that intervening timber before reaching them. But he was all wrong according to Parson Jones, who insists they were just more used to going to picture shows than to church, back seats at the movies being more desirable.

"I've been reading a lot recently about foundation patterns, in the Muleshoe Journal," remarked Curtis Taylor the first of this week, which I suppose is alright," and I've noticed there are some women in and around Muleshoe who have pretty good foundations for such patterns, while still others don't have much, tho' they both sit on them. Seems to me like this A. M. school could invent a machine for this foundation outfit, that would save the women a lot of trouble and the demonstration agent a heap of worry. In fact, I've a pretty good idea of making one. Of course it would have to be adjustable and somewhat automatic for the latitude and longitude of all women isn't exactly the same, by a whole lot, some having quite a bit more of one than of the other. But it could be done alright! Just turn a jigger over and push a hickey with your left hand while you pull down on another little jim-crack with your right, then press down the doodad with your foot and pull the thimble with your left hand and you'll have it. When the machine starts changing and adjusting to a different form, push down on a little doodny with your left foot, yank up the umpidity, release the foot doodny and put your

MOTHER'S THRONE

A great deal is being said and written about women's position. Superficial men and women are talking about the broader field for women. About women's opportunities, about her equality with man, and about her rights. It would be most difficult to find a series of subjects more disgusting, more superficial and more unbecoming to woman's position, than the talk about the broader field for women. She no doubt longs for the day when she can open the front gate and stroll the sidewalks as unimpeded female liberty.

It may be that some poor, neglected, long-suffering and over-burdened wife has listened to the strain's song of the larger liberties of woman. She no doubt longs for the day when she can open the front gate and stroll the sidewalks as unimpeded female liberty.

Whether these subjects are discussed seriously or frivolously, all will be compelled to arrive at the conclusion that the highest road to respect, respect and grandest place on earth is woman's intractable throne of home, sweet home.

You cannot seal women to the fields without neglecting the front door of God's mansion—Home, sweet Home. You cannot put women in the positions of masculine competition without turning the children over to the juvenile court and the cold charity of the state. You cannot put women in competition with men and continue to populate the earth. You cannot find a substitute for Mother.

The position which bears its head above the conflict of winds and the flight of birds is woman's God-created throne—Home, sweet Home. When she takes her seat as a Christian wife and a Christian mother, the angels bow in respect to her imperious and yet so all unassuming, fitfulness of her scepter.

America needs Christian wives, Christian homes, and the industrious little thrones of Christian mothers.

Women should take only liquid laxatives

MORE people could feel fine, be fit and regular, if they would only follow the rule of doctors and buy the laxative that is regular.

Never take any laxative that is harsh in action. Or one, the dose of which can be exactly weighed out. Doctors know the danger if this rule is violated. They use a liquid laxative, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why it should be a liquid like Syrup Pepsin.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if it doesn't give you absolute relief, if it isn't a joy and comfort in the way it overcomes any sluggishness or constipation, return your money back.

Pellagra Is Not A Common Disease In Texas, But Beware!

Austin, Feb. 19.—Pellagra, while not a communicable disease, is of concern to the State Department of Health as many people die of it each year in Texas. Pellagra is a disease that is caused by the lack of proper foods. It comes on slowly and may not be recognized until the victim begins to have a sore mouth, stomach trouble, and reddening and scaling of the skin. When these symptoms appear, the disease has been present for some time, stated Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer.

The longer a person has pellagra the harder it is to cure, so one should be on the lookout for the early symptoms, such as nervousness, indigestion, and burning of the feet and hands. The disease may become so severe as to affect the mind.

Pellagra is not contagious. As long as a person eats enough of the right kind of food and does not eat what is diseased, he is in no danger even if he lives with a pellagra patient.

The prevention of pellagra depends upon eating the right kind of food at all times. To make sure that the diet is right, it should always include plenty of milk daily, some fresh meat, and as many fresh vegetables as possible. Tomatoes, whole wheat products, salmon, brewer's yeast, and fresh fruits are especially valuable. Having provided these essentials of a proper diet, the rest may be arranged according to family and personal likes. In this way pellagra may be avoided.

23 Are Convicted For Violation Of Food And Drug Act

Austin, Feb. 18.—During the past month the Food and Drug inspectors of the State Department of Health have collected a total of 133 samples of ground meat, and of this number 48 were found to contain illegal preservative. So far 23 convictions have been secured—the fine and court cost averaged about $40 per case. Other cases are yet to be filed.

The most common illegal preservative is sulphate of soda. This acts as a deodorant, preservative, and color restorer. Meat treated with this sulphate may look invitingly fresh even though stale, and its effect as a deodorant is such that it masks the smell of decomposition.

The Bureau of Food and Drugs has a field force of eight men whose entire time is spent in the inspection of food and drug establishments in order that articles not fit for human consumption are withdrawn from the channels of trade, and that products are properly labeled; also, that merchandise and places of business are kept clean and sanitary.

CITES LAX CHARTER POLICIES IN THE PAST

Finds a Chief Cause of Bank Failures Was Too Many Banks—Existing Sound Banks Serving Communities Well

NEW YORK — Existing sound banks, especially the small banks in the rural districts which are serving the communities, should be protected from any return of the over-banked local conditions caused by former lax chartering policies, which were mainly to blame for the unfavorable failure record of the past, says the Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association.

The Commission's study gives an impressive revelation of how great a part mistaken bank policies in the chartering of banks played in creating the unsound banking structure which finally collapsed with the Bank Holiday in March 1933.

Over-production of banks, literally by thousands, over many years in the face of insistent warnings not only from bankers and others who recognized the danger, but even more so from the mounting records of bank failures.

But sound laws and conscientious application of them are not sufficient safeguard in any field of our complex national life unless they have the active support of public opinion.

UP GOES POWER DOWN COME COSTS... The facts show a distinct causal relationship between the over chartering of banks and the abnormal bank failure conditions that prevailed from 1929 to the bank holiday in 1933. It is desirable that studies be made on the basis of experience to develop standards governing the number of banks or the volume of bank capital which can be successfully operated.

Banking Officials Queried... An inquiry among state bank commissioners shows a preponderant opinion against increasing materially the number of banks, coupled with the fact that present laws give them sufficient discretion to prevent a repetition of the grave errors of the past.

Conference on Banking... NEW YORK — An eastern states conference on banking service will be held by the American Bankers Association in Philadelphia January 23 and 24 as a part of the organization's nationwide program of banking development.

The general topic of the conference will embrace the numerous legislative and operative problems confronted by all classes of banks. An outstanding phase of the meetings will be the development of plans for promoting a general better public understanding in regard to bank functions and policies.
