The double ring ceremony was performed before a large alter arrangement of white daisies flanked by antiqued gold fern stands holding urns of ivy and lemon leaves. The couple knelt on a white and gold pret deux. Yellow satin ribbon and ivy marked the family pews. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white embroidered Swiss organdy. The dress was designed with an empire waist. Long puffed sleeves were caught at the wrist with three self covered buttons. A ring of scalloped organdy accented the round neckline. Her chapel train fell from controlled side fullness with embroidery and drawn work extending the full length. A sholder length veil of white bridal illusion was caught to a cap of daisies and leaves. The bride's bouquet was an arrangement of pale yellow cymbidium orchids, stephonitis, velvet leaves and ribbons of pale yellow lace atop her mother's wedding Bible. Miss Melissa Lewis, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Miss Sissy Parr, sister of the groom, was bride's maid. They wore identical ankle length bright yellow and white polka dot dresses of voile. The modified empire bodices featured square necklines and were sleeveless. A deep ruffle attached with white embroidered daisies accented the skirts. Wide yellow ribbon sashes tiere in the back and fell the length of the skirts. Hairpieces were bows of yellow horsehair braid holding streamers of daisies. They carried nosegays of yellow daisy mums and baby's breath.
