FOSTER'S FORECAST

For The Journal.

WASHINGTON, October 18 .- The most severe storm period of October is expected for the week centering on the 23rd. This period is expected to organize storms of the dangerous type and they will cause excessive precipitation in the greater part of North America, especially in the corn and wheat belts where heavy precipitation is not wanted at this time of the year. The great force that is expected to be contributed to this storm period will be from the influence of faraway Jupiter, therefore precipitation will be general but scattered. Those who are interested may watch government daily maps and it is our opinion that precipitation for October will show in spots all over Canada and the United States except the Southwest. Section 9 and west half of section 5 are not expected to receive much of this moisture. It is expected that this storm period will afford the bulls of the grain markets an additional wedge to drive under the present high prices.

We advise the producers of grain and cotton to sell their entire production during the present high prices. with the following exceptions: Seed at least should be held over for the fall of 1925 as advised for months past in these bulletins; to those who can afford to store their production beyond seed that may be needed, we are very confident that much better prices will be had within a year from the date of this bulletin. It would be unreasonable to expect, however, that lower prices will not exist at some time or times within the coming year.

To be a successful farmer today requires brains and the proper use of them. The most successful producers or dirt farmers are those who not only use their thoughts and energy in producing their crops, but also in marketing them. The producer of today, with good judgment and not being forced to sell his products as soon as harvested, is able to profit more by marketing them at the proper time than he is by the long hard work of production and the thought that every dollar made in this manner either comes from the pocket of those who would manipulate the prices of our farm products or keeps the dollar from getting into those capacious pockets should afford a very pleasant feeling to any farmer who is able to market at the right price. Were we able to employ a staff of able men, as large as the pay roll of the U.S. Weather Bureau, we feel confident that we would be able to advise each agriculturist in North America what to do and when to do it, but man power is as much a limited quantity as horsepower, therefore we are held to the limits of our ability to employ competent man power and pay for it. The onice room in which this letter 18 written contains copies of U. S. Government records and tables of deduc clons from those records that have cost this bureau $40,000. Also experiments to find true laws of nature and outld up this system of lorecasting that have cost as much more. This has taken almost the entire income of this bureau for the past 45 years. Yet we know that we have only covered a part of the science that is most important to mankind.
