Drunwright was selected as chairman and a committee of five was appointed to make arrangements for the celebration. Plans for the celebration, while yet only roughly formed, include a bathing revue, a fireworks display and perhaps a picnic.

PRESIDENT BEGINS SECOND TERM

Despite the charges and threats that have been made against his "machine" administration, the president of the Republic of Cuba is safely launched on a new term. Here you see the impressive scene in the new $16,000,000 capitol at Havana as General Machado y Morales took the oath of office for the second time, and for a term of six years. The ceremony took place in the Hall of Lost Steps, where towers the imposing symbolic statue of Cuba, seen in the background.

Twenty Students Are Trapped by Lava Flow From Vesuvius While Endeavoring to Witness Eruption

NAPLES, Italy, June 5.—Twenty students were trapped by a flow of lava today while they were endeavoring to witness the lava eruption of Mt. Vesuvius at close hand. Several were injured by the bursting of the lava as they tried to flee. An official communique said the eruption had increased in violence, with the flames attaining a height of 1,500 feet at 4 a. m. The eruption was considered probably the most spectacular since 79 A. D., when Pompeii and Herculaneum were destroyed.

LAVA THREATENS CITY.

NAPLES, June 5.—The lava flow from Mt. Vesuvius, creeping down Hell Valley like a huge, crackling serpent, was scarcely 1,600 feet from the main square of Terzigno today and was threatening reservoirs supplying large towns on the mountain's sides. Terzigno's reservoirs and several outlying houses already had been destroyed by the mass of smoking cinders, 32 feet high and more than 200 feet wide, as it pushed slowly down the mountain towards level ground.

Two Missing in Refinery Blast

EAST BRAintree, Mass., June 5.—Two men were reported missing, another was believed near death, two more were in a hospital and nearly a score were suffering from minor burns and injuries after a triple explosion and fire at the Cities Service Refining company's plant early today. Those unaccounted for were night Superintendent Grand Chase and Wallace Minot, a workman. Although this constituted the last of missing as announced by company officials, it was reported that several other employees had not been accounted for.

McDonald Will Form British Government

WINDSOR, Eng., June 5.—J. Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the victorious Labor party in last Thursday's general election, was asked by the king today to form a government. He accepted. Great Britain will have a Labor government for the second time in history. The first was in 1924, when MacDonald headed a government which was short-lived, going down to defeat when Lloyd George, leader of the Liberals, withdrew his support.

COUNTY JUDGE IS PRESENT AT BOARD MEETING

Highway 23 Situation Is Gone Into at Session.

Clyde L. Garrett, county judge of Eastland county, and Birt Britain, commissioner of Precinct No. 4, were the guests of the board of directors of the Cisco chamber of commerce last night when highway matters of particular interest to this section of the county and to the county as a whole were discussed. Highway 23, Eastland county's outlet to the northwest and regarded by all thinking citizens as of untold value to the county because offering the only practical avenue to large and valuable oil and agricultural territory, came in for particular discussion at this meeting. Possibility that the county would issue warrants of sufficient denomination to meet the state in paving this road was talked. It developed that a majority of the commissioners court is against the issuance of such warrants. Judge Garrett explained his position on the matter to be one of opposition because of a conviction that no one or two men in public office should obligate the people in such large sums without submitting it to them for approval. He declared that he had made a promise to this effect in his campaign, that promise forming the basis of his platform. For that reason he felt obligated to oppose such a program.

For the Highway.

"I am for highway 23," he said. "I think it is not sectional but countywide importance and I want to say that I will do anything legitimate in my power to see this road topped." Pointing out that only a mere fraction of the money proposed for highway 23 in the pre-bond election agreement had been spent on the road, F. D. Wright asked if the matter should not be regarded in the nature of a binding obligation, thus justifying the issuance of warrants by the commissioners court to match state funds and carry on the work.

Commissioner Birt Britain, who spoke, held tenaciously to this view, a view he has maintained all along in his efforts to secure for the road the consideration it deserves.

Mr. Britain declared that he did not intend to give up the fight for highway 23. He said that he had supported precinct No. 1 in his successful effort to secure a highway north out of Ranger and that he had done so on a basis of just reciprocity with the expectation that he would be supported in the needs of his own precinct. The same attitude of co-operation has been displayed in other cases, but so far all efforts to obtain for precinct 4 what it deserves and needs in the way of improved highways have been generally unsuccessful.

Other Reports.

The board of directors also heard the report of Mr. Senter, airport expert of the United States department of commerce, which was made to the bureau of aeronautics at Washington, read. This report contained descriptions of a number of available airport sites about Cisco, in particular the municipal site now being prepared, together with recommendations. A number of other matters, including the movement on foot for a brick plant here, were also taken up an reported upon. The board heard a report from G. W. Collum, bandmaster, and authorized a campaign to secure new capes and other equipment for the band next year.

Element of Mystery Enters T. & P. Wreck Cases Here

June This Year in Texas to Have 3 Weddingless Days

DALLAS, June 5.—There will be three weddingless days in Texas this month — traditionally the "month of brides." Between June 14 and 18 no weddings will take place in conformity with the new state marriage license law which goes into effect June 15. This law, designed for the purpose of preventing hasty marriages, specifies that three days' notice of intention to wed must be filed with the county clerks of the different counties. During the three days of June 15, 16 and 17 the county clerks can only receive "notices of intention to marry." No licenses can be issued until the morning of June 18.

Carter, 1855-". A bunch of flowers he had placed on the Grace Memorial, were withered. Under the inscription was a verse: "As you are now, so once was I, As I am now, you soon shall be. Prepare for death and follow me. As the old man mumbled the last line, his lips faltered and ceased to move. "Heart disease," an ambulance doctor pronounced. ### JUDGE DAKAN BURIED TODAY AT EASTLAND

Funeral services for Judge G. W. Dakan, pioneer Eastland county attorney, who died at his summer home near San Angelo, Monday, were conducted from the First Baptist church at Eastland this afternoon. Burial was in the Eastland cemetery under the auspices of the Eastland Masonic lodge. Judge Dakan was one of the oldest and one of the best known citizens of the county, having resided here for more than 50 years. For many years he was engaged in the practice of law, being associated with Judge D. K. Scott, now of Cisco. Later he served Eastland county as county attorney and county judge and was active in local and state Democratic politics. With the coming of the oil boom in this section Judge Dakan retired from the practice of law to look after his interests here and in West Texas. Judge Dakan is survived by his widow, who is his second wife, and the following children: C. B. Dakan, an Eastland; H. C. Dakan, San Antonio; Mrs. Buford Galloway, Mesquite, and Barry Dakan, Dallas. Mrs. Mary Jane Brown of Mineral Wells is a surviving sister.

Land Withdrawn

Meanwhile the legislature in a hastily passed bill withdrew all land from the market. Still later a bill was passed under which future disposal of university lands is placed in a board consisting of the land commissioner and two regents. Re-valuation of school land by Commissioner Robison under statutes for that purpose, were also investigated by the legislative committee and the expenditure of a re-valuation expense fund. This fund was raised by assessment of a cent an acre upon all lands designated for re-valuation. Unexpended portion of the fund was to be returned pro rata to those from whom it was collected. Lack of a complete record of this fund was severely criticized by the committee. Land Commissioner Robison contended it was not a public fund. The committee reported that $32,970 of the fund received by Robison was not accounted for and that land owners returned $6,782 to him as gifts of gratuities. These revelations were authorized by the legislature following drought conditions when many land purchasers were unable to meet the payments on the land. Subsequently the discovery of oil sent some of this land to unexpected heights. Testimony at the investigation showed that even after revaluations and before oil discovery some of the owners sacrificed the land. Robison declined to comment upon the demand for his resignation.

ORDINARY MADE BEAUTIFUL AT TRIPLITT HOME

Many people create beauty about their homes while others take advantage of natural features that already exist and turn them into unique examples of attractiveness. Such is the case with the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Triplitt, 509 West Sixth street. Theirs was a place with large native oak trees that lent an air of rustic beauty. In these back yard where most of these trees are growing, were large piles of stone that had been rather an unsightly problem to those who had lived there in past years. Now all this is changed. The stones have been used to build a pond which drains into the street, a young willow tree, growing in the south. Other stones used to build a little column on top of which is fixed a ver pet containing a plant. A very attractive native stone curb built about a group of cannaes which will soon be blooming, to add their beauty with that of other flowers planted here and there. The extreme back fence is hedged with flowers which will bloom late in the autumn.

Thus there will be a continuous blooming of plants here. There are fruit trees such as peaches, apricots and an apple tree. Some of these are full of fruit. A number of blackberry trees are planted about, which will give the place a still more native forest appearance.

front lawn is in bermuda regularly planted number of plants at corners and angles of the lawn. The front curb is plantamental shade trees which are growing rapidly. The front porch is a tangle of plants for which a trellis is planned. This will be an addition to the already attractive lawn. Hedges have been planted at proper places and cared for in such manner too, will add much to the beauty of this home.

"On the level" this picture is no fake. A close "slant" at it shows the tractor pulling up a 60-degree grade, dragging a farm implement behind it. Similar tractors are being used all over California to cultivate steep hillsides. They have been brought into use by fruit farmers since level land has been taken up. This particular tractor is on the farm of L. J. Mowers, Vacaville, Calif., and is shown in use on a hillside where formerly only goats climbed.

BRONZES FOR UNIVERSITY ON DISPLAY

AUSTIN, June 5.—The heroic bronze figures to surmount the Memorial Gateway at the University of Texas are now on display in the rotunda of the state capitol. They are figures of Robert E. Lee, Albert Sidney Johnson, Jefferson Davis, John H. Reagan, James Stephen Hogg and Woodrow Wilson.

The figures were made by Pompeo Coppini, sculptor, who was here this week for conference on completion of the memorial structure.

The gateway is provided for in a bequest of $250,000 left by the late Major George W. Littlefield, H. A. Wroe of Austin and Will Hogg of Houston are trustees for this fund.

Advance of building costs since the gateway was planned necessitated some changes and the conference here was in regard to these.

As prepared, the plans call for the most pretentious memorial yet erected in the state. Jefferson Davis is represented as proclaiming states rights and Wilson as representing the League of Nations covenant.

The complete edifice will have a frontage of 100 feet and will extend back 200 feet. A 50 foot plaza will form the foreground.

There are to be two terraces. The first, about 18 inches above the walk will have its center in a lower basin which receives water from a central fountain. The second will be some two feet above the first terrace. There will be a central figure of a woman representative of ### America with her guards and riders of sea horses, leading the way to the "sea" toward the south.

Water will be discharged from the nostrils and forefins of the horses, and hidden conduits will discharge it against their sides. A perpendicular ring will throw the water against the prow of the ship upon which "America" stands, thus giving it the appearance of being in motion. The water is to flow in cascades from the upper to the lower basin.

On each side of the pool, at the side extremities of the memorial, will be placed on pedestals the bronzed figures, two on the right and two on the left. Wilson and Davis will be placed immediately in front of the 25-foot pillars at the back of the structure, and will form the gateway to the university.

At the end of the sculptured group, in the center of the pool, will be placed a bronze memorial tablet bearing the names of persons represented in the figures, and other data.

Back of the pylons, curved stairways will lead to higher levels on the campus. At the head of the stairs, which will be some five feet in height, a life size bust of the donor of the bronze memorial tablet will be placed.

Frank Still Trying to Have Concerts

Frank Perkins is still trying to have band concerts at the lake. For the past several Thursday evenings he has hauled the Lobo band and their paraphernalia to the pavilion at the swimming pool and on each occasion rain has interfered with the program.

He said today that he will make another attempt tomorrow evening with the prospect that fair weather will favor the effort. The concert is to take place at 7:30 and is free to the public. There will also be exhibitions in the pool.

UGHTER OF SENATOR MARRIED

WAFFINGTON, June 5.—A romance began nine years ago in Texas that culminated in the marriage of Miss Mary Elizabeth Culbertson, daughter of the late United States Senator Culbertson of Texas, and Alexander E. Robertson, a British war veteran.

The pair was married in New York Sunday, a friend said. Robertson met Miss Culbertson at the University of Texas. After matriculating there he went to Syracuse, N. Y., to become associated with and automobile company. Miss Culbertson came to Washington and entered Holton Arms school.

Attempts by the girl's parents to end the courtship failed. In 1922 Robertson accused Senator Culbertson of attempting to coerce him into leaving the United States. British embassy officials later were called into the romance when an aunt of the war veteran becoming alarmed at his disappearance, appealing to them for aid.

Then Miss Culbertson sailed for Europe and the capital lost interest in the affair. Her parents died and she returned to Washington. Recently she was arrested on a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated, after figuring in an automobile accident. The case was settled out of court.

It means something definite when thousands of people who formerly owned and drove far more expensive cars are now driving Chryslers by preference.

Today there is a general recognition of the fact that Chrysler has obsoleted long-established standards.

By scientific distribution of car weight, by new utilization of fuel, by advanced carburetion and correctly applied thermo-dynamics, Chrysler engineering has created a new performance.

A perfectly-balanced chassis, with buoyant vanadium springs anchored in moulded blocks of live rubber instead of ordinary metal shackles, supplemented by hydraulic shock absorbers, means an entirely new and delightful comfort in riding.

Well Folks-

It looks like times are going to pick up. We have had lots of rain—a fine season in fact. Now we are having lots of sunshine. So there is no excuse for the fellow who might want to talk bad crop prospects. Then the recent rise in price of oil, with a prospect for a further rise soon makes this business a lot more encouraging. When these two industries are prosperous we may reasonably expect good times—Farm crops and oil prices good makes good times for Cisco.

So let's come on folks and begin to trade with each other — circulate our money around and forget hard times.

...now it had arisen. And Curtis Morgan, who held a traffic officer reached out and jerked her to safety. Then he grinned at her and wished her "Merry Christmas!" before he sent her on her way.

The thought of Morgan going through the Bethshams of sensational publicity, as well as through the death-hell of knowing himself betrayed by wife and friend, nauseated him. But if she destroyed the letter and allowed Bert Crawford to be acquitted, the old and Morgan would soon find Mrs. Morgan in a doubtful mood that the two—Crawford and Iris—were planning to hope when the trial was over.

But wait! Some doubt perhaps! Crawford was a confirmed lady-killer, as Morgan had jokingly called him. Was it possible that he cared no more deeply for Iris than for Alice Belton, that he had been "using" his lawyer's as he had "used" Alice Belton—the little switchboard operator—why was she wasting time with him? John Curtis Morgan right to this letter, to the ul, incriminating information, no matter how much it might hurt him. And no right to withhold it a longer. She would rather be the messenger that it to him, but there was any choice—with honor.

CHAPTER XIII
Evans, the grumpy mid-law clerk, to keep an eye on sleeping child, whom made comfortable on a his father's private of snatched up hat and an for the elevator. As d, crowded with stenog-ers, and executives, all Christmas gifts and ith holiday goodfellow-ayed alternately that t still be time for the ng letter to be used wford, and that there y time—that the jury y have brought in its will be found guilty? I thought of that all terms. Nan's milling thoughts took her to the Christmas shoppers on the crowded downtown streets. "I'll pray for him to be found guilty before I can reach the courthouse," she decided childishly. "Goodness knows that's the only prayer I can put any heart into."

Her leg moving wordlessly, she plowed through the crowds. The spirit of Christmas was everywhere but in Nan's heart. Salvation Army Santa Clauses dangled bells over iron pots and cringed at wide-eyed children through their white wool beards; women with their arms full of parcels admonished children to "Stay right by Mama, now!" Traffic cops struggled with hopeless jams of cars with unusual amiability; shop windows were crowded with quantities of pink silk and lace, and there was joy everywhere—

"Hey, wanna be killed, sister? Watch where you're going!" And a traffic officer reached out and jerked her to safety. Then he grinned at her and wished her "Merry Christmas!" before he sent her on her way.

The imminence of Christmas had cheated Crawford of a large audience for his verdict, whatever it might be. There were only a few letters about the courthouse as Nan ran panting up the steps. A deputy sheriff recognized her, greeted her with a "Merry Christmas, Miss Nan."

"Any news yet, Bill? Or has Morgan finished his speech?" "The Morning Sun reporter said they were expecting a verdict any minute," the man told her. "Mr. Morgan finished his speech about an hour ago, and the district attorney only took about 10 minutes for his final summing up. Knows he's licked, I guess. You'll find Mr. Morgan in the judge's chambers, Miss Nan, unless the jury's coming in."

She thanked him and hurried into the courtroom where the Crawford case had been tried. There were less than a score of spectators. At the press table a group of reporters, including two women feature writers, were idly talking and joking; and at the counsel table sat Iris Morgan and Bert Crawford, their heads close together, their voices low and earnest. At the sight Nan's anger rose again in a hot tide, and she beckoned to a bailiff loitering in the doorway.

"Tell Mr. Morgan that I must see him immediately," she ordered. "He's with the judge, I believe."

The man was turning away to obey when another bailiff appeared from the passage leading to the judge's chambers, his manner brisk and important.

"I'm afraid it's too late now, Miss Carroll," the bailiff she had addressed told her. "The judge is coming. Looks like the jury has reached a verdict."

Along with the other spectators, Nan stood at attention while the judge entered and took his seat. Then the members of the jury filed in, looking vastly relieved and proud of themselves.

When they were in their places Morgan hurried in and went straight to Crawford, throwing an arm across his shoulder, as if to demonstrate to the world that this man was his friend, no matter what the verdict might be.

There was no time to speak to him. It was too late anyway. "And what is that verdict, gentlemen?" she heard Judge Haswell's grave voice inquire.

"We find the defendant not guilty," the foreman answered loudly.

There were a few cheers, quickly broken off by the sharp rap of the judge's gavel. A moment later the judge had adjourned court; Crawford was blithely shaking hands with the jurors, and Iris Morgan, in an excess of joy, was throwing her arms about her husband's neck.

That there's the greatest lawyer in the middle west," her bailiff friend told Nan feelingly. "It's got so a jury won't convict a man that John Curtis Morgan defends, because they believe him when he says a man's innocent. Reckon you're right proud to work for a man like that, Miss Carroll!" "I am!" Nan choked—and fled.

She could stand no more. And if Morgan caught sight of her she would have to congratulate him. She could imagine the hurt in his eyes if she failed to do so. Why, all these years he had brought his triumphs to her with the vanity of a small boy, sure that she would understand. . . . She did not stop until she reached the crowded shopping district, and then only because traffic compelled her to do so. She had no idea where she was going—certainly not to the office!—but she could have sobbed with rage at being stopped.

"What are you so sore about, Nan? Christmas grouch?" A hand touched her shoulder and she whirled to face Willis Todd, whom she had not seen since the night in early November when she had refused his offer of marriage—that memorable night when Willis had forced her to realize that she was in love with a man who was already married.

Her face cleared somewhat. She was amazingly glad to see him. "Is that Crawford verdict in yet?" Willis asked interestedly, when he had given the order. "Just. Not guilty," Nan answered stiffly. Now why did he have to bring THAT up, just when she was beginning to relax a bit? "Congratulations for you and Morgan are in order, I suppose," Willis said. "I know you two believed Crawford innocent, or Morgan wouldn't have defended him, but personally, I believe the big blond windbag is guilty as hell! How he could have fooled you—" had missed him. . . . "Hello, Willis! I've missed you. Friend or enemy?" Her brown eyes smiled at him wistfully.

"Friend," he grinned. "Let's have lunch. I've wanted to call you up a hundred times, but I didn't dare. Knew you had a right to be good and sore at me. The Traylor all right? Won't be many people in the dining room today. Everybody's snatching a quick bite, but maybe you're in a hurry, too, with Christmas shopping to finish up?"

"No," she answered, following him into the lobby of one of the most exclusive hotels in the city. "I want to dawdle over lunch, if you don't mind. Everything's been so hectic lately. . . . Um! Nice table. Flowers and everything. Thank heaven, there's no orchestra. . . . You order for me, Willis."

It was nice to have him opposite her at table again, nice to have him thinking of her, waiting on her. No one else had ever discovered that she needed and liked being waited on. But Willis had always been a dear. Why couldn't she love him instead of John Curtis Morgan, who only needed her but did not love her. Maybe that was why. . . . "Is that Crawford verdict in yet?" Willis asked interestedly, when he had given the order. "Just. Not guilty," Nan answered stiffly. Now why did he have to bring THAT up, just when she was beginning to relax a bit? "Congratulations for you and Morgan are in order, I suppose," Willis said. "I know you two believed Crawford innocent, or Morgan wouldn't have defended him, but personally, I believe the big blond windbag is guilty as hell! How he could have fooled you—"

Her pride was stung, but an irresistible desire to confide in someone made her answer, in a low, rapid voice: "He didn't fool me, Willis. I believed he was guilty all along, but since he was Mr. Morgan's best friend—"

"A swell friend HE is!" Willis jeered. "What I know about Crawford and— But never mind that now. What's that you're saying about believing Crawford guilty? Has the Great God Morgan fallen and suppressed a little evidence?"

Nan snatched her hand away, her eyes blazing. "He still believes that Crawford was innocent! I don't know why I started to confide in you, Willis. I might have known we'd just quarrel, because it concerns Mr. Morgan. But I've been so troubled, so torn with doubts as to what my duty is. . . . And to the amazement of the waiter who was bringing the consommé she began to cry.

"Eat your soup, honey," Willis urged, as the waiter scuttled away. "You're going to tell me anything you please and I promise not to fight. I like and respect Morgan and I love you—love you well enough not to quarrel with you any more for loving him, instead of me. And you have my word that anything you may tell me will go no further. But I think you know that. You've done a goodish bit of confiding in the past, you know."

She smiled at him, dabbed at her tears with her napkin, and obediently drank most of her consommé before she began her story. The waiter left them in peace so long that Bert Crawford's letter had been slipped across the table before the entire was served.

"What shall I do with that thing Willis?" Nan asked in a small voice when the young man had finished reading the letter. "I hurried to the courthouse with it, so that Mr. Morgan could do whatever he thought best with it, in case the jury had not reached a verdict. But I was too late. 'Not guilty,' she repeated with a shrug. "Shall I give it to him now?"

Willis Todd looked at her with amazement in his gray eyes. "Why, for heaven's sake? To warn him that his wife's going to skip out with his best friend, a man he has just saved from the penitentiary? If this thing's true, they're going to skip anyway, and Morgan might as well not know it till they do. You don't want him killing Crawford, do you?"

long time. No, Nan, you can't show this letter to Morgan! Better tear it up."

But Nan did not tear it up. She folded the stiff sheet carefully and thrust it into her handbag. "Thank you, Willis," she smiled at him. "I just wanted to be convinced logically. I really would have died before I would have hurt him by showing him this letter!"

BRECKENRIDGE WOMAN ISN'T SAME PERSON

Feels Better Since Taking Orgatone Than in Years, She Declares.

"When I began taking Orgatone I was feeling in pretty bad shape. In fact my husband and I formerly had a chicken ranch but I was in too bad health to stay on same," said Mrs. B. F. Head, who resides at 128 E. Walker St., Breckenridge, Texas, and whose husband runs "Sporty's" Cafe that city, in an interview with the Orgatone representative a few days ago. "For several years," she continued, "I had been going down hill and had gotten so weak I couldn't attend to my regular duties about the ranch. I was so nervous and miserable I couldn't sleep and suffered with rheumatism in my arms and shoulders which caused me to be in miserable shape most of the time. I also suffered with bad dizzy headaches which completely upset my nerves. I tried everything and kept getting worse until I lost hope of ever getting well."

"When Orgatone was recommended to me I said, 'no, there's no use trying anything else, nothing can help me.' Finally a friend of mine persuaded me into trying Orgatone and when I started on it I was in a very much run-down condition. My skin was yellow like a pumpkin. But when I finished half of my first bottle I began to feel better and from then on my improvement was rapid. I have taken three bottles now and have gained both in weight and strength. My nerves are quiet, rheumatism don't bother me like it did and I sleep better and my food does me good, as my increase in weight and strength show. I feel stronger and better than I have in years, my complexion has cleared up and my appetite is extra fine. I feel that I owe my present good health to Orgatone and I recommend it to every one who is suffering, no matter what their trouble is."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy and is sold in Cisco exclusively by Dean Drug Store who are direct laboratory agents. Adv.
