WILL PUSH CAMPAIGN FOR RANDOLPH College's Building Record Continues to Show Progress REVUE WILL BE BIGGEST AND BEST

DETAILS ARE WORKING OUT FAVORABLY

Road Leading to Lake Oiled to Prevent Dust Trouble

All of the numerous details incident upon the annual West Texas Bathing Revue and July Fourth celebration at Lake Cisco next Thursday are shaping up in a splendid way. Entrants for the revue are coming in rapidly, with the prospect that more than 40 will participate, according to Revue Chairman P. B. Glenn; the arrangements for the polo game between Woodson and Coleman have been completed; numerous boats are being entered in regatta; the fireworks display provided for; contestants swimming and diving events awaiting the installation of a loud speaking system arranged; the wiring of about the big swimming or the multitudes of multi-lights is being done, and it is anticipated that anything else will be no dust!

No Dust

Work from Cisco to the lake has been graded and thoroughly oiled. This means a condition has been created which has caused annoyance in past years at the lake will be entirely eliminated. Crigger Paschall, city street commissioner, placed his road machinery on the highway and graded it into first class condition. A treatment of road oil was then sprayed upon the stretch so that today it is a Fourth of July traffic with a promise that no matter how many cars traverse it during the day it will remain entirely dustless.

Cooperation Wins

An evidence of this co-operation is seen in the response of merchants to the request to place girls in the revue representing their stores. So far about 25 business men have agreed to each have a representative in the revue. The list of those who have agreed to this as furnished by P. B. Glenn is as follows:

- Miller-Lauderdale; J. J. Collins; Moore Drug Company; E. Garner; Acorn stores; J. Penney company; Bleasie M. company; Cisco Lions club; Cisco Amusement company; Locke, Jeweler; Leach stores; Brothers; Spann Chevrolet; Dean Drug company; Iron Lumber company; City; Norvell and Miller; Western Motor company; Texas Utilities; Ellobt Drug; Laguna hotel; Rockwell's company; Red Front store; Herron-Owens Slipper shop.

These, together with a number of others, will be in the revue.

Resignation of Seymour Lowman, Assistant Treasury Secretary Within Thirty Days Is Forecast

WASHINGTON, June 29.—The resignation of Seymour Lowman, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement, within 30 days was forecast in high official circles here today following reports that President Hoover had decided upon a shift in the dry enforcement machinery because of recent sensational news stories relating to enforcement activities.

Reports that President Hoover has summarily dismissed Lowman from the service, however, were denied at the White House and Lowman emphatically denied his resignation had been requested.

Hoover has given close attention to prohibition activities this week and is known to have consulted treasury officials in at least two instances relative to his new program for the prohibition bureau. On both occasions the president expressed disapproval of recent sensational prohibition enforcement stories. Following a White House conference between the president and Secretary Mellon Thursday evening, reports were current in the treasury department that both Lowman and Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran soon would be replaced.

Twenty-four hours later Lowman called at the White House in an angry mood demanding to confer with the president. Lowman was reported to have carried with him on this occasion the formal notice of dismissal from his post. The president refused to see Lowman and has not seen him since.

Lowman denies that he went to the White House concerning his dismissal notice.

PERMITS FOR FIVE MONTHS ARE $137,000

Tendency Toward Building of Homes Feature

Although the first months of the year are usually conceded to be the dulllest in the building trade, the total of building permits in Cisco since January 1, reaches $136,916. This is a very conservative estimate and the exact cost of the various buildings and houses probably totals around $175,000.

In view of the dull conditions that seem to hover over the entire country at this time this is an excellent record and one that Cisco may well be proud of. It obviously refutes any idea that conditions in Cisco have come to a standstill, economically speaking. It makes plain that this city is continuing, in spite of talk of hard times, a steady, permanent development that will keep it abreast of other development in West Texas.

Two permits were issued for buildings of considerable size and cost. They are the Cisco Ice company building, on Sixth and the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. building on Seventh. The majority of permits were for homes.

April tops the list among the months with a total of nine permits issued. January is a close second with eight and June has a good beginning with five.

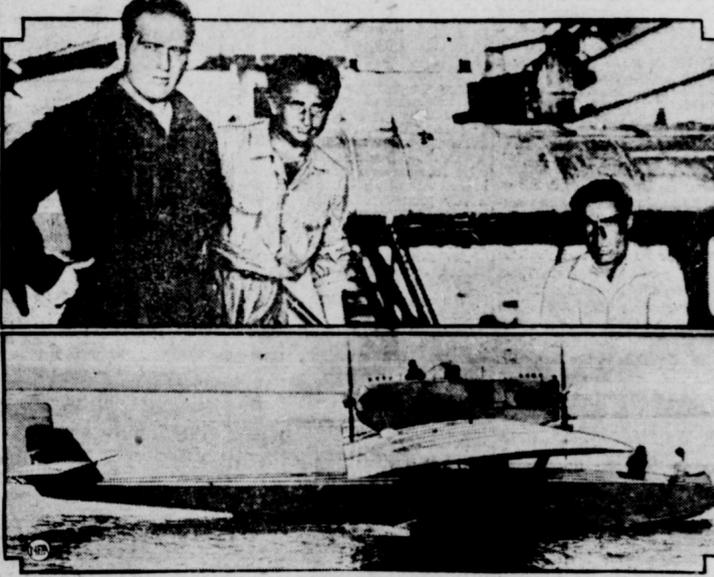

Aside from the general construction, extensive repair work and improvements have been made which amount to approximately $130,000. The average cost of the home is around $4,000.

The fact that most of the permits were issued for the construction of new homes or the repairing of existing ones indicates clearly that people are finding Cisco a splendid city in which to live and its advantages of climate, schools, etc., too apparent to be overlooked. With such growth in the residential district it can be readily surmised that the business district will increase likewise.

Permits issued. The following is a list of permits issued during the period of five months covered: W. R. Tomlinson, 1102 West seventh, repair and improvement—$700; R. A. Williams, Belmont addition, frame residence, $300; Sam Wilkins, East sixth, frame building, $150; L. A. Tullis, Liggett street, frame residence, $3,600; Presbyterian church, West Sixth, repairs, $773.35; A. G. Clett, remodeling of Red Front

Spanish Fliers Overshot Their Mark They Reveal After Rescue

These Spanish airmen, attempting a transatlantic hop to North America, were lost at sea near Azores for days while ships and planes carried on what appeared a hopeless search. Saturday they were found floating in their disabled plane by the British aircraft carrier Eagle. Commandant Ramon Franco, hero of the Spanish flight to South America in 1926, is pictured center in the group. Left is Commandant Ruiz de Alda and right is Captain Gallarza.

HOUSE PASSES ANTI-MONKEY RESOLUTION

AUSTIN, June 29.—An anti-evolution resolution, was adopted by the Texas house of representatives today.

The vote was 59 to 39. Three members present refused to vote. The resolution requests the state text book commission not to purchase any text books teaching that man developed from a lower animal or teaches that the Genesis account of creation is untrue.

It also calls upon regents and directors of the higher state institutions of learning to prohibit such teaching. The resolution takes the place of a bill to prohibit teaching of evolution as a fact. The bill failed to pass at two previous sessions. It was reported unfavorably by a committee at this session.

COMMITTEES OF BUSINESS MEN TO WORK

Fulfillment of Pledge Is Vital Matter to Cisco

The campaign in Cisco to help place Randolph college on a firm basis has by no means closed. On the contrary it will be aggressively pushed, as indicated with the announcement by Mayor J. M. Williamson, in charge of the campaign, that beginning Monday morning, committees of prominent business men who have volunteered their services, will undertake to see every Cisco citizen in the interest of this vital matter.

In this connection the following statement by Mayor Williamson is self explanatory: Due to a number of causes, the drive for Randolph College in Cisco has been put off from time to time until at this time it is imperative for the interest of the school that the matter be closed up. Pledges in amount slightly in excess of $50,000 have been taken, but very few of them have been signed up or the first payment made. Within the next week committees who have volunteered their services in this important matter will undertake to see every citizen of Cisco in the interest of this important matter.

Outline of History. For the benefit of those who are not acquainted with the history of the present situation, it might be of interest and save time of the committee to give an outline of the history leading up to and producing the present situation. There has been much discussion about this matter which was inadvised and, in many cases, entirely out of line with the facts. In the interest of correcting these impressions and that every citizen may know the facts, the following is reproduced: Several years ago when Midland college was removed from Midland, Texas, to Cisco, the citizenship through the chamber of commerce, agreed to assume certain obligations of Midland college and to certain things for the college in its new home. And, in turn, the school agreed to establish a Junior College of the first class and to maintain it as such. Only a small part of the things agreed to be done by the citizenship of Cisco were actually accomplished. The college in many respects, due to financial handicaps for which we are in a large part to blame, has been disappointing. On the other hand, they have established a Junior college of the first class and it is so rated by the department of education and the Association of Southern colleges, as well as the National Rating Board for colleges, and has built up a patronage of two hundred who are being instructed by one of the best junior college faculties in the south, according to the statements of examiners.

Heavy Expenditure. The college was confronted with a heavy expenditure in order to build up the library, laboratory and faculty to the standard required by the various rating and standardization authorities, and with no funds with which to do it. It must either abandon the school or create these obligations and provide the finances later. It chose the latter and today has a first class junior college. This is

AWARDS ARE GIVEN SEVEN BOY SCOUTS

Seven Boy Scouts of Cisco were awarded merit badges at the court of honor held at the First Presbyterian church Friday night. The committee, consisting of Judge Lanford, chairman; H. C. Henderson, C. L. Black, and L. A. Carter, were present to award these badges.

Those in troop No. 1 getting second class rank badges were Hagan McMahon, Forbes Lee Wallace, Coleman Williams, Carl Siddall and John St. John. In troop No. 2 J. W. Shepard was awarded a Cycling Merit Badge, and in troop No. 4 David Wells was awarded a 10-hour Civic Service Badge.

Eve Was Sole Entrant in World's First Revue

By E. A. B. Just when and where bathing revues originated may be a mooted question but for us there is no mystery about it. They began when the Creator slipped up on Adam's blind side and deprived him of the extra ribs. The statement is based, of course, upon the accepted biblical version of the creation and not upon the creation of certain anthropologists who hold that the genealogy of the species extends back into the dim years of a monkey populated earth. It is certain, holding that man sprang from immediate nothingness as the result of a celestial idea, full panopied in his present mental, physical and spiritual attributes, that his ideas and responses concerning the opposite gender were essentially the same when

Adam decided Eve had "it" as they are today. It is also to be reasonably surmised that Eve was possessed of those wiles and foibles common to the modern version of her sex. She was a perfect specimen of beautiful womanhood. That much is certain. Otherwise how could the Creator have been induced to propagate his handiwork? she was the last thing created in this wonderful world and since that eventual phenomenon she has been both first and last. Her wardrobe as she arrayed herself before the astonished eyes of her primordial mate was nothing to speak of. Hence it will be merely mentioned. Fortunately, or unfortunately, as one may consider it, necessity in providing that wardrobe chanced upon what is regarded today as a cardinal principle of physical adornment—particularly in bathing revues. Eve, in other words, established a standard and since her day her charming prototypes have striven mightily toward that standard. It is to the credit of Eve, nevertheless, that her adoption of the mode was without self-consciousness. She was innocent. She was a woman forced to expediency. She recognized a necessity but the exigencies of the moment dictated the fulfillment. So do most great discoveries chance. So do men flounder upon great inventions. You see what Eve's floundering has done! But this, while proving that this woman Eve really started all this stir and flutter, this posing, this ogling, this histrionic costuming of a row of bewildered judges whose jobs are so perilous that their identities must needs often times be zealously kept secret, this, repeating, gets us only started on the subject. Without doubt bathing revues, or their equivalent, had reached a considerable development before the Great Deluge. Hence the deluge. It is a matter of common knowledge that old Noah kept his eyes on his business and that he seems to have been able to enforce that attitude upon the other members of his immediate family. You know how he escaped the cataclysm, although the old rascal, after Divine wrath had worked its purpose and set him down on dry land again, attempted to pull off a revue of his own making. So it was that instead of irrevocably burying the revue idea on the other side of the flood he brought the idea across that gulf and perpetuated it to the delight and consternation of the human race. So far as strictly private revues are concerned Solomon has never been excelled. Old Brigham has since attempted to exceed the Israelitish monarch's record but Brigham lacked the diplomatic finesse that old Solomon possessed, so the best he could do was to keep 40 satisfied. That is a mere start toward such a museum of pulchritude as the palace of his predecessor in polygamy boasted. But even Solomon in later years repented of his enthusiasm. He found that revues are all right to look at but the task of supporting them is burdensome. On top of that to live in the same house with a revue is tragedy. He said so himself. Modern man, profiting a little from Solomon's experience, has learned the invariable art of cooperation. He has learned now to make the other fellow put on the revue while he reaps the benefit. Half a loaf is better than no loaf at all, he says, so he selects one as a permanent possessor (or possessor) and distributes the rest with a judicious eye for entangling alliances. But in spite of all the sage advice and solemn warnings that have come thundering down the course of time from Adam to Adamson there have been ambitious gentlemen who have regarded their Apollonic attributes as sufficient to the task. They have invariably come upon disappointment and

Money is only a symbol. People really borrow things. If one borrows a thing which he uses productively and profitably, the use of credit is legitimate.

Most of the present credit stringency and high rates of interest are due to the hope of speculators that they can borrow securities and sell them later at a profit which will be sufficient to pay high carrying charges and leave to the borrower riches which he has not earned.

Wishful speculators in Holland, commodity speculators in 1920, gamblers in Florida lands during the boom two or three years ago, all suffered from the same delusion.

We are told by hopeful security salesmen that "we are living in a new era, but whether we are or not, laws of gravity and of supply and demand still operate."

New W. T. C. C. Advisory Board Expresses Policies to Be Followed

ACTIVITIES OF ORGANIZATION ARE REVIEWED

Constructive Exploitation to Be Key-note of Efforts

To the Membership and Friends of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce:

In assuming the direction of the West Texas chamber of commerce, we feel that some expression of the policies that will be pursued might be of interest at this time.

In an all day meeting held at the home office on June 26, the board and manager-elect, together with all four members of the advisory board made a careful survey and study of the work accomplished under the administration of the retiring manager, Homer D. Wade, and his staff of workers. Mr. Wade sat with us during this session, and gave complete accounting of all work in the various departments, as well as a satisfactory stewardship of his managerial activities. We were all impressed with the faithfulness and fidelity that was evidenced, and if the membership and friends of the organization could be fully advised as to the results that have been accomplished, they would, we believe, be more impressed with the importance of the organization and its great service to west Texas in particular and to the state in general.

All are more or less prone to give scant attention to the things that do not effect them directly. Hence matters of general interest to all pass without full appreciation of their importance. The membership is more or less familiar with a number of the major accomplishments of the organization in recent years. Others have escaped them, or they have not been fully exploited. Still others of these accomplishments have been of outstanding importance to the sections of the territory. A single instance that came to the attention of the board while in session which illustrates this fact, though dozens could be cited. The manager reported a complete survey of the raising stock needed for the harvesting season in the wheat growing belt of west Texas, and advice to the railroads as to what the grain crop now being harvested could be moved as expeditiously as possible, amounting to 32 million bushels. Service of this kind should and will be continued.

Major Activities
The general public is more or less familiar with the passage of what is known as the "River Bed Bill" which had for its object the quieting of titles in so called navigable streams in west Texas, affecting thousands of acres of valuable lands, not only in west Texas but throughout the state. The organization originated this legislation, and aided in its passage. To Senators Small and Woodward, and Representatives Cecil Storey and Coke Stevenson, is due much credit for its safe conduct through the legislative halls, and its passage over the governor's veto. Judge Charles E. Coombes, general attorney for the Swenson interests in this case appears before our advisory board in commenting upon the passing of this bill declared that it was the most constructive accomplishment of the Board under the administration of Mr. Boardman. In fact Judge Coombes said, "The passage of this bill alone, justifies the expenditures necessary in the conduct of the organization for years to come." This for the reason that it quieted titles to a large area in west Texas, which but for this bill would have been exploited by "land sharks" at the expense of the real owners, who have endured the hardships incident to the settlement and development of this section of the state.

As a major activity of the incoming administration the board adopted a resolution favoring the passage of a bill at the earliest opportunity providing that no supposed money or recoverable excess in suits should be open to purchase until judicially ascertained. It brought by the state against claimant and giving the owner an enclosure 90 days preference after the judgment had been final in which to purchase same at the price for which the same was sold, plus accumulated interest and fixing the venue of such suits in the county in which said land, or a part thereof, is situated.

The lands in west Texas were surveyed at an early date, with crude instruments and in Indian times and because of the hardships incident to such work and the crude instruments available a large quantity of such lands is excessive. As between adjacent owners the boundaries have been settled by lapse of time or litigation. The development of this section and the fencing of the lands has obliterated many of the evidences of the correct location of boundaries. The state could not do this to purchasers, but for railroads and to railroads construction and the agents of the state and located and owners.

in possession. The locations and extent of acreage have been recognized over a long period of time. The titles have passed, in many instances, from the original grantees and have vested in those who have improved them, claimed them as their own and paid taxes thereon for more than a generation. Cities and towns have been built on these surveys. The equitable segregation of the excess has become in most instances impossible.

Policy of State
It has been the policy of the state from the beginning of statehood to recognize the title to all the lands within the boundaries of these surveys and this has been the trend of judicial opinion of our courts. But, as these lands become valuable in the development for oil and gas a great incentive has arisen to plaster files and leases on supposed vacancies and excesses and thus the title of the true owners is continually eroded, jeopardized and threatened, and the difficulty of proving the corners and boundaries is becoming greater by the obliteration of natural and artificial objects and the death of locators and surveyors.

The expense incident to a defense of suits brought to recover these supposed vacancies and excesses, where the venue is now fixed by law in Travis county, is very great and works a hardship on the real owners. The instigators of such suits are usually "land sharks," who have all to gain and nothing to lose. It is therefore believed legislation along this line is imperative, and as important as the River Bed Bill to quiet titles to west Texas lands and aid in the development of this section of Texas. Moreover, like conditions exist throughout the state.

A committee was appointed to draft the bill and press the same to final passage at the earliest opportunity. It appears to this incoming administration, that such constructive ideals as these should compel the moral and financial cooperation of every land owner in west Texas.

Water Rights
Another instance of constructive protection to all west Texas is cited. Reference is made to our sacred water rights. Two years ago the people of this section awoke to the fact that all of the water in the Colorado river watershed had been decided by the state to a power company. No water flowing into this river according to this grant could be used except by consent or purchase of such power company. The West Texas chamber of commerce, ever watchful of the interests of west Texas entered its protest. It was obvious to the organization that if the waters of one stream could be ceded to a power company for the purpose of generating hydro-electric power, then the waters of all streams could be disposed of in the same manner, and the God-given waters of the west, were thus menaced to the domestic users of the people of west Texas. The result of the campaign in this situation caused the backers of the Syndicate Power company who had been given these valuable concessions to withdraw their support. The state board of water engineers, have been stopped by public opinion in making such grants. While our board was in session, a telegram was received from Senator Walter C. Woodward, announcing his bill fostered by the organization fixing a state policy defining priority rights, and placing municipal, domestic and irrigation uses ahead of hydro-electric uses, had passed the senate by practically a unanimous vote. In this historic victory has been achieved, and yet if the house does not reach the bill, it will be necessary to continue our efforts until final success is attained. We regard this as a major duty of the organization. We covet the cooperation of all west Texas people in our efforts along these lines.

We wonder if the members and friends of the West Texas chamber of commerce realize that the organization is leading a fight to cancel all differential charges in freight rates. Application is now pending before the interstate commerce commission to accomplish these results, and if it is successful, then the saving to west Texas shippers alone will be more than four million dollars per year. Is this worthwhile? Such far reaching ends can only be attained by organized effort. Trained men and men must carry on this work, and talent of the right kind must have adequate compensation.

We give our solemn assurance that every economy will be exercised consistent with the proper service to be rendered.

Oil and Gas Conservation
The organization through its oil and gas bureau has worked wonders in the conservation of the oil and gas resources of the west. Policies of this bureau have likewise attracted widespread attention. The idea of conservation and protection as advocated by the oil and gas bureau is resulting in bringing crude oil from low levels which have obtained until a few weeks ago to at least an upward trend. We believe this will be continued to the point of consistent prosperity in these great resources return.

The position of the organization upon these matters are now being better understood by both major and independent companies. The incoming administration appeals to those interested in the oil and gas industries to give helpful cooperation to the West Texas chamber of commerce to the end that it may better serve their interests, because no section can prosper without the prosperity of the various units in that section. The basis of wealth as is generally recognized is bound up in the development of the agricultural and live stock interests of a country. The incoming administration feels that its greatest opportunity for service lies in the constructive and orderly development of both. While the organization has steadfastly exploited opportunities in line with these ideas, yet it is our ambition to make still greater progress. The west is by nature and environment a stock farming country. The organization has overlooked no opportunities in demonstrating these facts.

One of the fundamentals in the protection and development of the live stock and agricultural interests is that of conserving the soil and the prevention of erosion. A constructive system of terracing throughout west Texas will we believe work wonders along these lines. The organization has accomplished much in this connection but the new administration pledges itself to still greater efforts. It pleads with bankers, merchants and business interests in general to lend the fullest possible cooperation morally and financially.

Coordinated with agriculture and live stock is the natural complement of dairying and poultry raising. In these lines, we believe lies the greatest opportunities of the west. We give our earnest and sincere pledge to foster and encourage these industries in every possible manner.

We also expect to give more careful attention to the development of the sheep, goat and hog industry as well as to the marketing situation.

Other Legislation
The organization has been keenly alive to legislation that is for the betterment of West Texas, and has opposed such legislation as might be inimicable. It is in favor of redistricting this section to the end, that the west may have her just representation in the legislative halls in Austin and in Washington. We believe also that there should be adequate and proportionate appropriations for the state institutions located in west Texas; that our experiment stations should be enlarged and increased in numbers, and that the extension work of the A. & M. college should be fostered in every practical manner.

West Texas demands no favors, except to secure the things to which she is justly entitled, and we expect to give our best efforts along the lines of securing full justice to this section of Texas.

The incoming administration expects to devote every energy in

It keeps your food safe — the temperature is well below 50... always!

For family health... for appealing menus... this is vital

In the General Electric Refrigerator the temperature is kept several degrees below fifty... always. Fifty degrees is accepted by scientists as the "danger point" in the preservation of food. When the temperature rises even a degree or two above that, bacteria multiply, foods become unsafe to eat.

Perhaps you think your own refrigerator is always "cold enough." You cannot be sure unless you actually take your refrigerator's temperature. It is constant cold which is needed.

Countless superiorities give the General Electric Refrigerator its outstanding position... an hermetically sealed, dust-proof mechanism, mounted on top... an accessible temperature control... a new standard of quiet operation... no oiling... no troublesome machinery... simplified installation... no radio interference... an unqualified two-year service guarantee.

The new all-steel cabinets and the hermetically sealed mechanism combine to produce what we believe is the finest refrigerator ever made. More than a quarter of a million homes are enjoying the convenience, economy and health-guaranteeing services of the General Electric Refrigerator. And not one of these owners has ever paid a dollar for repair or service! This is a record in the industry.

The new all-steel General Electric Refrigerators are priced as low as $215 at the factory. A small payment down places one in your home. Visit our display rooms—see the new models—you'll agree that they offer the greatest values of all.

CISCO WILL SHOW WEST TEXAS GOOD TIME JULY 4

REVUE TO BE MAIN EVENT ON PROGRAM

Polo, Boat Racing, Fireworks, Other Entertainment

By W. H. KITTRELL, Jr.
Cisco is going to show West Texas a good time on the Fourth of July. There will be fireworks, of course, a baseball game, and a Yo-Yo contest. For the aesthetically inclined there will be a bathing girls revue in which the winsome beauties of the West will vie with their more sophisticated sisters from Fort Worth, Dallas, and points east. There will be motor boat races on Lake Cisco, and here and there are heard subtle references to an epochal badger fight that will be staged if the humane society can be circumvented, the minions of the law evaded, and a personage of sufficient integrity and necessary lack of bias can be found to officiate. A polo game for the championship of west Texas will be the major athletic event. Woodson and Coleman are the contending entries. The bathing beauty revue will be held on the Enchanted Isle in Lake Cisco bathing pool, the largest artificial swimming pool in Eastland county, the world, or anywhere else. The pool and the contestants will be floodlighted; the judges, who are prominent west Texans of unimpeachable integrity, will be provided with eyestyles, while the spectators will be massed amid twinkling red and green lights on the picturesque hills that form a natural amphitheatre encircling the pool. The Dallas nominee will come in a cabin cruiser monoplane. The Albany entry will detrain at the east end of Lake Cisco, and be borne to the scene in a motor boat. It is thought that none of the neighboring nymphs will find it necessary to walk.

Regatta.
The power boat regatta has attracted the attention of the boating enthusiasts of the surrounding territory, and the entries include the owners of some of the most powerful boats in the west. The course will be a two mile straight-away on Lake Cisco, where ninety feet of sparkling water cover a vast area once known as a part of the great American desert.

Much secrecy attends the arrangements for the badger fight, which does not have the sanction of the chamber of commerce. Pulling the badger is a quaint native diversion that has been superceded in a large measure by golf, bridge, and kindred pastimes of a more genteel origin, but some of the older inhabitants see in its passing and evidence of decadence, and will make a strenuous effort to revive this white spot of the old west.

The winners of the polo will be awarded the championship of west Texas, as the Woodson team has proven its superiority in the northern part of the region, and Coleman stands at the top in the southern half.

This section has long been noted among the Meadowbrook polo devotees as one of the best polo pony breeding sections in the world. Texas bred and trained horses are favorites with Long Island's multimillionaire followers of the aristocrat of all sports, Gayboy, the favorite mount of Malcolm Stevenson, long a member of the famous Meadowbrook team headed by Devereaux Milburn, was bred by Will Gay, captain of the Coleman players who will contest at Cisco on the fourth.

Sold Gay Boy.
Chas. G. Coyle, a Ciscoan who has trained and shipped more polo ponies than any other Texan, sold Gay Boy from the Coleman team, and sold him to Averill Harriman, wealthy Long Island sportsman, and member of the famous Harriman family noted in the transportation world. Gay Boy enjoyed the reputation of being the world's best polo horse. Coyle is soon to bring out a mare that he confidently expects to prove superior to the redoubtable Gay Boy.

Polo ponies are born and not made, Coyle says. Unless the necessary spirit, stamina, speed and balance are inherent, no amount of training will make a championship polo mount. Given these qualities, and the west Texas horsemen breed them into their products, the Texas-bred pony has advantages not surpassed in England, Ireland, or South America.

ITALY AND CHURCH MADE PEACE

RADIO SETS FOR POLICE ARE TRIED

DETROIT, June 29.—Detroit patrolmen soon may walk their beats with a new weapon—individual radio receiving sets concealed in their clothing. Spurred by the success of broadcasting messages and orders to police automobiles equipped with radio, the Detroit Police department is experimenting with a miniature receiving set for the use of the individual patrolman.

The experimental set is four inches wide, six inches long and an inch and a quarter deep. The aerial consists of 75 feet of wire sewed into a piece of cloth. The remainder of the set includes three dry-cell batteries and an ear phone similar to those used by the deaf. The weight of the outfit is less than four pounds.

The batteries slip into pockets of the vest; the aerial can be sewed to the back of the vest and the receiver itself may be attached to the belt, a shoulder holster or in a special pocket in the vest or coat of the patrolman.

Sergt. William H. Burkuhl, designer of the set, says that the ear phone can be worn under the coat lapel when not in use. A penetrating sound arrests the wearer's attention when the reports of a holdup, burglary or other crimes are broadcasted.

The local police department, under the direction of Commissioner William P. Rutledge, was one of the first in the country to equip police cruisers and scout cars with radio receiving sets and loud speakers. More than 700 arrests are credited to the radio-equipped cruisers.

JIM KELLY WILL ATTEND PRESS MEET

Pal of Reg Robbins Will Be Seen at Sweetwater

SWEETWATER, June 29.—Jim Kelly, now vacationing on a ranch near Breckenridge, will be among the prominent figures to attend the West Texas Press association convention in Sweetwater, July 12 and 13, it has been definitely announced.

Both Kelly and Reg Robbins, pilots of the "Fast Worth" in its recent record breaking endurance flight, were invited to attend the convention.

D. W. Carlton, manager of aviation activities for the Fort Worth association of commerce, notified Monte E. Owen, secretary of the board of city development this week that Kelly would be able to greet West Texas newspaper men at the convention here, but that Robbins, who is in California, may not return in time to attend.

It is expected that the West Texas Press association convention will be the largest attended by airplanes of any convention ever held in the southwest and there is an effort being made by the local committee to get even more to attend so that it will be the largest number of visitors riding airplanes of any convention ever held in the United States, outside of aeronautical meets.

Already word has been received from the following, who will fly to Sweetwater for the convention: H. S. Hunter, editor El Paso Times; TURN TO PAGE 2, COLUMN 4 THIS SECTION

Cisco Druggist Finds Gypsies Not as They Are Pictured in Romances; How They Got $12 Is Still a Mystery

I. C. Inzer, druggist for the Elliott Drug company came very near being a sadder man Friday and as a result he is now a wiser one. Prior to Friday Mr. Inzer's knowledge of Gypsies was perhaps what one would call second-hand but today he can claim knowledge by actual experience. Consequently he regards Gypsies as an affliction, utterly devoid of any romantic tinge.

Friday two women of the genus Vagabondia came into the store during a quiet hour. They offered being a playful nature at times, sensed an opportunity for some wholesome fun.

"Put money in palm," one of the Gypsies directed him. He placed a five-cent piece in his hand. After a series of mysterious incantations during which the women professed to peer into his future, they evidently found the vista considerably dimmed by the five cents.

"Put money in palm," they directed. Inzer reached into the cash register near at hand and took out several bills of considerable denomination. More incantations, their result apparently more satisfactory.

"Rub money on chest," he did so. They showered him with happy predictions. Then they left.

A short while later it occurred to Inzer that a check-up of the money in the register would be a proper precaution. Imagine his chagrin when the check revealed the cash $12 short. There was considerable activity about the Elliott drug store for a time. Inzer had visions of $12 of hard earned wages taking wings. Officers were notified and Deputy Sheriff Tub Wilson located the Gypsies at Carbon. A quick trip to that city and he had overtaken that don't say "ditto"

HAVE you ever hesitated in the choice of a birthday gift for a friend or relative, and wondered how many other people were going to give the same thing?

Most of us think along conventional lines. But one of the delights of gift-shopping here is that you needn't.

We have the most amazing variety of gifts... so rich in odd, wanted but unexpected things... that you can say "Many Happy Returns of the Day" in a characteristic but unduplicated way... very easily in this store.

And no matter for whom... Dad or Mother... brother or sister... Him or Her. For example, an ELGIN Watch is always sure of a welcome. We have a most delightful display of other gifts for both sexes. And incidentally, our business is to have "ideas" about what makes a welcome gift... as well as the gift itself. Come in and counsel with us.

Cisco Has Very Low Death Rate, Health Records Reveal

CLIMATE AND SUPERVISION RESPONSIBLE

Section Is Noted for the Longevity of Its People

A recent visitor to Cisco, who according to his own statement suffered badly from asthma, declared he spent the most comfortable night here that he had in years. He had never been able in other parts of the country to find relief from his ailment, but the Cisco climate was of such a nature that he was able to sleep soundly the entire night. He is Henry H. Van Buskirk, an oil operator from Pittsburgh, Pa., who is making his first trip to Texas. So delighted is he with the climate that he has declared his intention to return to Cisco. He purchased several oil leases near here.

Mr. Van Buskirk's statement is but one of a long list of testimonials to the healthfulness of Cisco's splendid climate. This section of the state is noted for the longevity of its people, instances in which individuals have attained a century or almost a century of life being very common.

Few Serious Diseases

There are few serious diseases which are indigenous to this section, although that is not to say that the human body is made invulnerable to the ravages of disease merely by living here. On the contrary, a person who fails to observe simple rules of health cannot hope to be immune from such attacks in any climate, no matter what its God-given attributes.

In this section, such insect-bearing diseases as malaria and typhoid are scarce and none of them have been known to originate in Cisco. According to Health Officer John H. Brice, only three cases of malaria have existed in Cisco since his advent into office six years ago, and these he knows to have been brought in from another state, while there have been absolutely no typhoid.

Contagious and infectious diseases such as mumps, measles, scarlet fever and a few cases of smallpox seem to prevail, though to a smaller extent than in other towns. In addition to the climate, pure air and altitude, the healthfulness is largely responsible for the unusually splendid health record of Cisco. Pure water is assured by the regular examination every two weeks by the sanitary engineer, Helman Rosenthal, of Dallas, pure food and milk by the strict food and dairy regulations, and a comparative freedom from flies and mosquitoes by the laws governing the disposal of trash and garbage.

351 in Five Years

The total number of deaths during the past five years in Cisco and the surrounding territory, including approximately 13,000 people reaches only 351, with the majority of causes of a sudden nature such as apoplexy and heart failure where the skill of a physician would have little effect. Pneumonia seems to head the list, with tuberculosis which is common in other parts of Texas, in the minority.

The year 1924 was an unusually poor one for the undertaker, as one wonders if, out of the 27 deaths, an average of 1.8 deaths to the thousand, an average far below the ordinary death rate, two of those whose causes were listed as starvation were not of this profession.

The next year the number jumped whence come his principal rivals for polo supremacy.

West Texas is the natural habitat of the cowboy and the home of the cow pony and the strengthening and stimulating atmosphere that developed the endurance and agility of the cowhorse are equally valuable to the polo mount, while the innate horsemanship of the cowboy makes of him the ideal trainer. Indeed, there is a growing suspicion in this part of the country that Texans can play a wicker game of polo than the elite of Meadowbrook would suspect. The men who considered riding a horse that could turn around on a dime and leave a nickel to spare for change just a part of a day's work, have found in the swift evolutions of a polo a thrill very much to their aptitude and to their liking. The games that were part of the routine of training the ponies for the effete Easterners have grown into contests founded on the love of the sport.

Takes Polo Seriously

An evidence that the West is taking its polo seriously is found in the tendency of the players to shed their ten gallon hats and hairy chaps for the pith helmets and whipcord pants that are being worn in the east, don't you know, and the heavy swell fork range saddle has been replaced by its dainty English counterpart. Rob Weddington, local ranchman and pioneer polo enthusiast, says that he would not be surprised to find them serving tea between chukkers. Rob does not like the term "chukkers," and neither does Coyle, who says that folks called them periods up till about 1916 or '17 when the Long Island set began to ape the terms and mannerisms of the British players.

Thursday's game will be played in the regulation equipment. It will be staged on Chesley Field, the scene of many historic football contests. The field affords ample space for the players, and comfortable accommodations for the spectators. The day will not be lacking in provision for those who would rather be participants than onlookers. The lake and the pool are ideal for swimming, fishing, and boating, the regulation amusement devices offer rides and thrills, and nobody is barred in the Yo Yo contest.

U. S. FLOWERS IN ENGLAND

LONDON, June 29.—One of the interesting exhibits of the Chelsea Flower show, which brought forth approving English comment, was a tent entirely devoted to products of the California desert. The exhibit, which included redwood, cacti, birds and insects of the desert, was brought to England by Mrs. Sherman Hoyt, of Pasadena.

OWLS SAVINGS FOUND

GALESBURG, Ill., June 29.—While washing the front of a down town building here, a workman found a 50 cent piece lodged behind the ear of one of the metal ovals which adorn the cornice. The coin is believed to have fallen from the pocket of a workman when the building was under construction years ago.

REVERSAL OF ROLES

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 29.—G. C. Cloud, slightly crippled, stays at home and does the housework while his able-bodied wife works in a factory and supports the family. Mrs. Cloud says her husband is an excellent housewife, and Cloud declares his wife an able provider.

INFANT A "BURGLAR"

ASHEVILLE, N. C., June 29.—Answering an emergency call to combat "burglars" at a residence here, Police Sergeant J. M. Downs found that someone had placed a new born baby on the front porch of the home. A note signed "unfortunate girl" asked that the infant be cared for. Sergeant Downs took it to a hospital.

"No, and neither does Nina Blackhull, so far as I know," Morgan answered, his deep voice throbbing with triumph. "If nothing slips up, Nan, we'll get dismissal for the indictment against young David Blackhull and new indictments against Nina Blackhull and Bassett before another week has passed into history. A fine Christmas present for young David, huh? . . . Let's see: about this time last year I was maneuvering an acquittal as a Christmas present for Bert Crawford. Time seems to drag endlessly, and then all of a sudden you wake up to realize that it hasn't been dragging at all, but flying—"

His voice trailed to a constrained pause. Nan knew that he was thinking not only of the anniversary of the opening of the Crawford case, but also of another anniversary that was hurtling inevitably toward him—the anniversary of his adored first wife's desertion. Was there any wonder that he had no thought at all for the significance of the date, so far as he and she were concerned? He had not indicated by word or deed that the twelfth of the month meant anything. . . . Per- it didn't—to him, since the riage was not really a mar- and there was room in his art for celebration of only one anniversary.

"I've often wondered about awford," Morgan went on, his almost normal again. "You w, it's rather hurt me that he never written. After all, I get him out of a nasty situa- . . . By the way, I got into conversation the other day with a new vice president of the First National Bank. He brought up Crawford's name; said he'd heard about my defending him on an embezzlement charge, and thought I might be interested to know that Crawford had been living in Paris. He saw him there about six months ago, playing about with a woman so beautiful that she was the talk of the town." It was Morgan's turn to be surprised. "Up to his old tricks, I suppose," he added, with a wry grin.

Nan's heart stood still. It was tly to hear him gossip with appalling innocence of the who had tricked him into de- a crook and who had his wife. A hundred times had wondered if Morgan had so suspicion at all of the ful alliance of the two who roned him so deeply. She answered now. He had not atest," said on that the woman "so beautiful that she was the talk of the town" was Iris Morgan.

Morgan took his seat on the opposite side of the flat-topped desk, and reached for the thick sheaf of papers which Nan had been pretending to study. His hand touched hers, inadvertently, then "losed over it. "Why, Nan, dear, your hand's like ice!" he exclaimed, instantly olicious. "Aren't you well, child? Did I do something I say upset you? . . . Good heavens, Nan! It—it's of Crawford's name that's made you look like that, is it? . . . I ed to think—why, I even teased u about him! Look at me an!" he commanded sternly. Involuntarily the sleek, brown ad jerked up, a pair of great rown eyes, blazing with angst aked his suddenly perturbed and anxious face.

"Bert Crawford?" Nan flung the words at him. "You think I ever cared the snap of my finger for that—that?" She bit back the word "crook." Just in time Why disillusion him now, when she had protected him all these months?—"that lady-killer?" she amended, but the force of her vehement protest was spoiled. "Oh, John! How stupid, how blind you are! BERT CRAWFORD! I could laugh! I could laugh myself sick!" she went on hysterically, and proved it by bursting into a wild fit of laughter whose final high note broke on a sob.

"Nan, darling! What IS the matter? I don't understand—" "Let me go!" She jerked her hand from his, and sprang up from the desk so precipitately that she overturned her chair. Before he could circle the desk she was through the door. The clam of its closing was like a slap in his face, but what did she care now? It was all over, she sobbed, as she fled up the stairs to her room. Hadn't she known all evening that she couldn't go on any longer? Let him think that his insult had driven her away. Let him think anything he chose. It didn't matter. . . . All that mattered—she told herself, as she jerked open the door of her clothes closet—was that she had reached the end of her rope. She was through through! She had tried her best and she had failed. What if they did still need her? She was sick unto death of thinking of them all the time, of crucifying her love every day on the cross of self-sacrifice.

She was cramming dresses into a suitcase when a knock interrupted her. Her heart leaped Oh couldn't she ever learn not to hope? Let him knock! . . . Slowly, jerkily, she crept toward the door to open to her husband. . . .

CHAPTER XXXIV

For the first time since she had come to occupy it three months before, John Curtis Morgan stepped into his wife's bedroom. Nan clinging to the knob, retreated slowly to make way for him. His face was flushed but grim with determination. He did not see the disorder of the room, the half-naked suitcase; his black eyes bored into hers.

"Nan! Nan!" How thick and queer his voice was! "What did you mean, when you said I was stupid, blind? Nan! Tell me!" he urged with curious violence. "I won't tell you anything!" she gasped, retreating from him until the door banged against the wall. "I've got to know!" He was almost shouting at her, and the flush on his grim, lean face grew darker. "Did you mean—could you possibly mean—that you—love ME?" Nan's hands released the door knob, flew to her cheeks, pressed hard into them, but she did not try to hide her eyes from him. She had never looked so proud as she did in her moment of supreme humiliation. "Of course I love you!" Her nostrils and lips quivered. "Why did you think I married you?" Why was she staring at her so blankly, so incredulously? "And now that you've made me say it—go away, oh, go away! You might have left me my pride—" She whirled sharply away from him, but the next instant her small body was spun about again, but this time not in obedience to her will, but by the strength of his arms, a strength that for a moment threatened to crush in her ribs. Not that she felt the pain. "I—don't want—your pity!" she gasped against his coat. "Let me go—" "Pity?" he laughed, in a voice rough with emotion. "Oh, Nan!" Somehow he shifted her so that her head lay in the crook of his right arm. Above her, coming closer and closer, were his black eyes, liquidly brilliant, wider than she had ever seen them. It was like trying to face twin suns. Blinded, she closed her own eyes. A thousand times Nan had dreamed of his first kiss, and now she learned what pallid things dreams can be beside the ecstasy of reality. If he had released her when he lifted his head at last she would have fallen to the floor. But he did not release her. Oh, no, no! she exulted, as he held her head against his breast, so that she heard the deep, quick throbbing of his heart.

"Was THAT pity, Nan? . . . At least," he laughed, his voice vibrating joyously, "we talk the same language. For three months I've been telling myself that I didn't want YOUR pity—that until you learned to love me I'd not touch you—Oh, Nan, my darling, what stupid, blind fools we've both been! Two supposedly intelligent adults, sick with love for each other, keeping each other at a distance."

But a little later she had to defend herself against his charges of course. "I don't see how you can say I kept YOU at a distance," she gasped jerkily, for her whole body was trembling. "You looked me out on our wedding night," he reminded her gently. "I didn't reproach you how could I? I thought you had married me out of pity—and because you wanted to be a mother to the boy. All that day I had felt like an exiled king about to be led into a new kingdom—and then—I was banished again. I blamed only myself, not you. I tried to resign myself to the truth—that no woman could love me. I blamed you no more than I blamed—Iris—"

It was the first time that name had passed his lips since their wedding day. Nan turned in his arms and stared up at him, searching his eyes with the last flare-up of the old, sickening fear. No thank God, the name had not brought back the shadow of pain to his beloved eyes. Nan summoned all her courage. They must speak of Iris now, of the name would forever stand a barrier between them. "I thought you still loved Iris," she said steadily.

He answered, "I thought I did, too, until—I wanted to take my real wife in my arms and found the door locked against me." "Oh!" The word was a little wail of pain. She forced herself to confess: "I—that night—when you'd gone to see Nina Blackhull—" "You made me go," he reminded her. "I didn't care a damn about a murder case that night but you'd held yourself aloof all day, and at dinner poor, funny little Curtis had said terrible things unconsciously—but go on, darling—" "You hadn't kissed me," Nan accused him. "You hadn't even said you loved me, and—No, let me finish, John! When you had gone, I went into the library and there, among your law books, I found a book of poems. I read the one you'd been reading a few days before, for you'd left a marker in it—" "A poem?" he frowned, in apparently genuine bewilderment. Nan quoted that last dreadful stanza: "And I shall find some girl, perhaps, And a better one than you, With eyes as wise, but kindlier, And lips as soft, but true, And I darsay she will do."

Her husband's puzzled frown did not clear. "I never read any such poem, darling Nan—" "No? You don't remember these lines, either?" she challenged, and gave him the first stanza: "Your hands, my dear, adorable, Your lips of tenderness—Oh, I've loved you faithfully and well, Three years, or a bit less—"

But Morgan interrupted, giving the last line himself: "It wasn't a success." Poor Nan! I read no further than that first verse and the beginning of the next: "Thank God, that's done!" I echoed those words, Nan, with all my heart—"Thank God, that's done!" "You mean—" Nan quivered "Oh, John, don't lie to me now! I can hear the truth, if you love ME, as well as Iris—" "I'm trying to tell you the truth, Nan," he interrupted gravely. He held her away from him for a moment, then stooped and lifted her into his arms, carried her to the one big armchair that the room offered. But one was enough. She lay, child-small, in his lap, her head against his breast, so that she could listen to the beating of his heart as well as to his words. "You must know," he began haltingly "how it was with me. You saw us together for three years. Would you have said that I was a—happy man, Nan?" "No," she whispered. Her fingers took fierce hold on the lapel of his coat. It was still necessary to convince herself every now and then that it wasn't all a dream.

"I was a slave in bondage, Nan. Lord! I don't mean to sound pathetic, but it's so necessary that I try to make you understand now so that we can forget the past and be happy. You know, Nan, I used to get a dim sort of feeling that it made you angry to see us together—" "It did!" she agreed, vehemently nodding her shining brown head against his breast. "She didn't love you, and saw you small, made you small when she was with you. I loved you, and saw you big—" "And MADE me big," Morgan interrupted, laughing exultantly. "Don't you think I realize that Nan has 'made me what I am today'—whether she's satisfied or not? But—did you really love me then?" "Won't you leave me a shred of my pride?" Nan protested, blood rushing into her cheeks. "But—oh, what does pride matter now? I loved you from the first day I worked for you. I tried to be decent enough to resign, when I found out what was the matter with me—" "When was that?" he demanded eagerly as a boy with his first sweetheart.

"Oh!—when Willis Todd wanted to marry me and was jealous of you, and tried to make me say

I loved him and didn't love you," she answered. "And for three months I've been tormented by the suspicion that you loved Willis Todd and married me only because I needed you more than he did." Morgan confessed, "But—about Iris. It had better be said—all of it, and then we can talk about us. I did love her, Nan, with the most painful, shameful, degrading, enslaving love that a man ever felt for a woman who could not love him. She didn't try to pretend that she loved me. As I said a while ago, I don't blame her. But I used to pray to God, in my agony, to wake up the next morning and find myself free of my love. "I knew Iris would be relieved, even if her vanity would have suffered. I must have bored her and annoyed her unbearably with my passion. It made her despise me, and hurt me in thousands of little ways. But—I couldn't cure myself. My malady was so malignant that it required a surgeon's knife—and Iris elected to be the surgeon."

New Advisory Board of W.T.C.C. to Follow Constructive Policies

the constructive exploitation of west Texas, and we sincerely hope for valuable suggestions along these lines. The publicity work of the organization has been of inestimable benefit, and yet we hope to be able to broaden the scope that has been given, if it is possible to do so.

Much more could be said in the way of detail, but we trust that these expressions will suffice to acquaint the membership in general as to the ideals that we maintain. Nothing will be overlooked in the way of service that the organization can render. The president-manager expects to give his entire energies, mind and life to the work, which was placed upon him, by a unanimous and enthusiastic vote of the executive board, attended by over 60 members. He is mindful of the responsibilities he has accepted, but expects to have the unstinted support of the advisory board in particular, as well as the splendid staff, also the executive board, and the entire membership.

Every department of the organization is being carefully studied. We have already realized the imminency of the task that has been assigned us, and which we have accepted. But as West Texans, we believe that there is no task too big and too great for successful attainment. We pledge our sincere efforts for the perpetuation of the organization, that has been so useful, so beneficial and so invaluable to west Texas during the past 11 years of its existence.

We feel meek in the confidence that has been shown in our selection to conduct its affairs until the annual convention to be held in El Paso October 24, 25 and 26. But we feel that we can and will have the moral, mental and financial support of all true West Texans in the work that we have assumed. Without this, failure is already recorded.

It is a challenge to each of us, and to every member and friend of our great organization. We dedicate ourselves to meeting the demands upon us, and with your helpful cooperation we will succeed. Our success in these laudable ambitions means the continued success of West Texas.

Yours for West Texas, (Signed) A. M. ECKHART, President-Manager, CLIFFORD B. JONES, JOE A. WHEAT, RAY NICHOLS, R. W. HAYNS, Advisory Board.
