Motor Truck Transportation Assists Texas Producers

ALL PARTS OF STATE GLEAN MUCH BENEFIT

Places Market at Door of Every Farmer in Texas

Motor trucks have solved transportation problems that have perplexed the producers in sections of Texas which have been without railroad facilities. Every section of the state has reaped the benefit of motor truck transportation. It has placed the market for the producer at his door, although he may live 150 miles from town.

It has given the rural and small town merchant a quick delivery of special orders at his door within a few hours after sending it in. Good roads radiating throughout Texas have been factors in having regular scheduled truck lines maintained. These lines aid both the producer and consumer. They give the ruralite all the advantages of the city.

Trucks have made it possible for the farmer living more than 100 miles from his market the round trip in a day and then get back home for an early evening meal before having done his shopping in town.

The livestock markets attention is paid to the truck transport of animal. An average of several hundred of animals are received daily at the various livestock markets of the country by trucks.

The growth of truck transportation industry has grown to such an extent that now it is under the supervision of the various corporations and railroad commission of the state. Truck lines now are considered common carriers and the owners of these lines have cheerfully acquiesced in obeying the rules and regulations of those bodies.

Speed with safety has been the motto of the truck lines of Texas. They have arranged their schedule so as to conflict as little as possible with the normal traffic handled over the leading highways of the state.

A large number of the truck lines use the highways at night when private vehicles are not generally used. Truck transportation has made it possible for a rural or small town merchant to phone in a rush order for goods in the afternoon and have it filled and in his store early the next morning.

The average freight rates charged by the truck lines compare favorably with any other transportation. These rates are fixed by the commission that gives both the patron and the operator of the line a hearing.

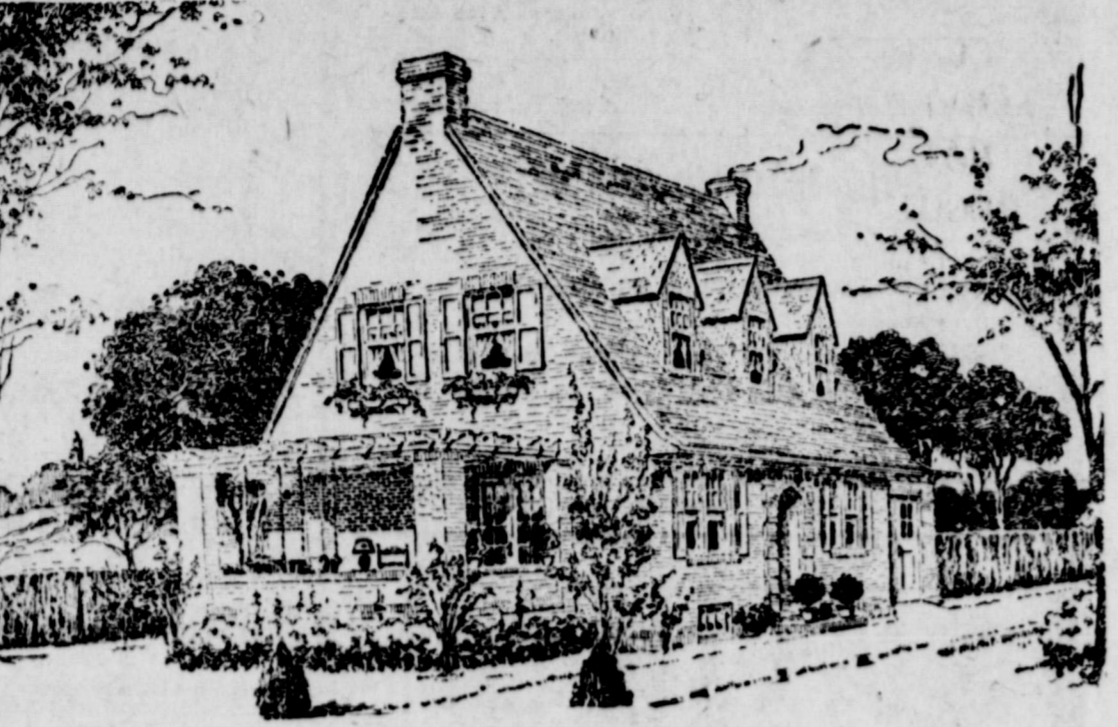

Demonstrations have shown that truck transportation is an aid to railroads in that it does supplementary work of rail lines. To further improve the service, the truck owners and operators have organized an association so as to help the shipper and others interested solve the truck transportation problems.

Giant Seaplane for Gar Wood

FIVE CONVENIENT ROOMS IN ENGLISH STYLE

House No. 529

Here is an unusually attractive design for a five-room house. It was inspired by the style that has given the English cottage such a picturesque and popular appeal. This style of architecture is now in high favor, for it is admirably adapted to the modern small house and can be given attractive and interesting treatments.

This house lends itself to many situations. It is ideal for a corner lot, or it may be placed either endwise or broadside to the street on an inside lot, and so be built on either a wide or a narrow frontage.

Face brick, so admirably adapted to modern home construction, has wisely been chosen as the ideal material to bring out the lines of the architecture. With the colorful beauty of the brick set off against mortar joints of harmonious color, this really small home appears much larger than it actually is.

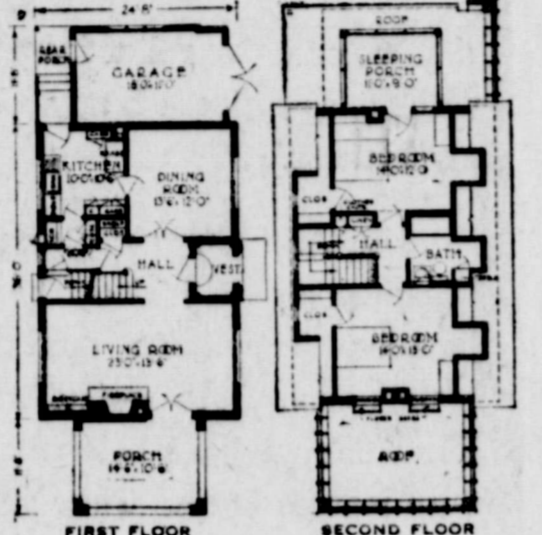

Double casement doors open from the living room to the porch, and a wide opening leads to the hall, which is centrally located, thus making communication with all parts of the house easy. The dining room opens from this hall and connects directly with the kitchen, which is equipped with cabinets.

On the second floor there are two good bedrooms each occupying an end of the house with a bathroom between. A sleeping porch at one end is an added feature. Besides the bedroom closets, which are large and ventilated by windows, there is a convenient linen closet near the bathroom in the hall.

The garage is built in connection with and heated from the house. One may enter it from the outside by way of a roofed back porch. The outside entrance makes the garage safer from fire than when it is directly connected with a room of the house; besides gasoline fumes and odors cannot enter the house.

The ceiling heights are 8 feet 6 inches for the first floor and 8 feet for the second floor. The content of the house is 32,000 cubic feet.

If you are interested in working drawings for House No. 529, the editor of this paper will gladly tell you where they may be obtained.

By SAMUEL DASHIELL
United Press Staff Correspondent.
PARIS, July 27.—Raymond Poincare resigned as premier of the French republic today in spite of the pleas of his colleagues that he remain at the head of the government.

After Poincare refused to be swayed from his inflexible determination to resign, the whole French cabinet handed in its resignation to President Doumergue.

Aristide Briand, minister of foreign affairs, and Louis Barthou, minister of justice, visited the premier at his home in an effort to induce him to withdraw his resignation. They pleaded with Poincare for 25 minutes. When they saw that their efforts were futile they departed for Elysee Palace, where they conferred with President Doumergue.

Insurance Offered Veterans Described

INDIANAPOLIS, July 27.—The privilege that has again been extended all veterans of the World War to take out government life insurance is explained in detail by Frank T. Hines, director of the United States Veterans' bureau, in an article that will appear in the August issue of the American Legion Monthly. As director of the Veterans' bureau, Hines is in direct charge of the government's insurance business. In the article he stresses the value of insurance and the advantages offered veterans by taking out government policies.

"It will be real news to many service men, veterans of the World War—important news too—that the right to obtain a United States government life insurance policy is still open to them, providing they are in good health," the article will say. "Congress on May 29, 1929, amended the World War Veterans' act extending indefinitely the period in which applications could be filed for government policies by those entitled to them. The privilege expired on July 2, 1927, except for new entrants in the service. It is noteworthy that in the few months before this time limit expired approximately 250,000 men filed applications for policies."

"Under the amended law the former service man has very definite insurance rights today. The government will grant him insurance in seven forms of policies against death or total permanent disability. He may take out a policy for $1,000 or $10,000, or for any multiple of $500 between those sums. The right is granted to any veteran of the World War who has hitherto applied for or been eligible to apply for yearly renewable term insurance (war-time insurance) or United States government insurance (converted insurance)."

"But to get insurance now a service man must be in good health and furnish evidence to that effect which is satisfactory to the director of the Veterans' bureau. And the total amount of government insurance he can carry is $10,000. If he already has a policy for $5,000 he is permitted to take a new policy of no more than $5,000. Finally he must have served in the military or naval forces of the United States sometime in the course of the World War, from April 6, 1917, to July 2, 1921, and have applied or been eligible to apply for insurance."

"The Veterans' bureau provides a standard form—bureau form 739—for use in making applications, but any statement in writing, sufficient to identify the applicant, the amount and the plan of insurance, together with a report of a physical examination and a remittance sufficient to cover the first monthly premium, will be sufficient as an

Cent-a-Hole Golf Is Instituted

PARIS, July 27.—Popular golf at one cent a hole, pay-as-you-play, has been instituted by the two English professionals, Aubrey and Percy Boomer, at Saint Cloud in an effort to make golf a game for the French masses.

At that price, the Boomers furnish a miniature course and provide the players with a brassie and a wooden club, which they carry around themselves, thus eliminating caddy fees.

There are 18 holes on this course which has taken the name of the Golden Valley course, just one good drive away from the Saint Cloud Boomer hung up his record of 61 and Horton Smith took the French national championship a few weeks ago with a pair of 66's.

Groceryman May Heir Much Wealth

WAYNESVILLE, O., July 27.— Suddenly revealed as the heir-presumptive to a share in a $350,000,000 fortune, James L. M. Hopkins, whose grocery here is the meeting place for the village whittlers, hopes to live the rest of his life on easy street.

Hopkins, who is 60 years old, expects to be adjudged a great nephew of Mark Hopkins, a "forty-niner," who died interstate at San Francisco in 1878. The local grocer estimated his share of the reputed $350,000,000 estate at $30,000,000.

Besides Hopkins, there are 59 other claimants to the "forty-niner's" wealth, living in Kentucky, Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina and Oregon. Their suit charges a young man who designated himself as Timothy Hopkins, adopted son of Mark, is now illegally enjoying the latter's wealth.

Hopkins—when his dream train comes in, if ever—said he planned to buy a mansion with hot and cold running water, electric lights, and above all, an electric washing machine for "Mom"—his wife. Others who claim to be great nephews of Mark Hopkins are: Mack Hopkins, Morrow, O.; Steve Hopkins, Wallins Creek, Ky.; brothers of the grocer; Henry Hopkins, Milton, Ore.; Joe and George Hopkins, Crab Orchard, Ky.; and A. A. Boursaville, Ky. Each claim $30,000,000.

"ON WITH THE SHOW" IS NEW FEATURE FILM

Manager Greer of the Palace theater announces next Sunday as the opening date for "On With the Show," Warner Bros. first 100 per cent natural color, talking, singing, dancing Vitaphone picture.

"On With the Show," beside the glamor of back stage life—it is a play within a play—combines a tender heart story, with the fantasy that is in the extravaganza which the standard company of players are determined to put on despite the fact that the "ghost" refuses to walk.

Gorgeous costumes and settings are seen in their own brilliant colorings, and the tintings make the players all but living. Beside the great cast, "On With the Show" has a chorus of dazzling beauties, numbering over one hundred.

One of the interesting things about this story is the fact that it is the first play of Humphrey Pearson, who went to Hollywood for his health, casually flung his brain-child into the Warner Bros. lot—to find himself a fortnight later—with a job as a special writer for them, and with "On With the Show" in production.

"On With the Show" marks a distinct innovation in the picture industry, being made by a new process which reproduces colors in their true values, and is no more to be compared to previous color films, than the gaudy cover of a cheap magazine with a fine colorplate reproduction of the National Geographic Magazine. This process is combined with full Vitaphone effects, with music, singing, and dancing on the stage, and full dialogue as the humorous and dramatic story of the heart-aches and triumphs of a new musical comedy at its first try-out are recorded back stage.

The new color process that was used brings out costumes, settings and players in their natural tints. It is the first all-talking all-color picture to be filmed, thus marking another milestone of film progress, just as the advent of Vitaphone pioneered by Warner Bros., wrought

The picture will have a run of 3 days, starting next Sunday at the Palace.

COBLENZ THE NERVE CENTER OF RHINELAND

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is the fourth of a series of five articles from cities in the occupied zone of Germany, which may soon be evacuated.

By RALPH HEINZEN
United Press Staff Correspondent.
COBLENZ, July 27.—The week before Christmas, in 1918, I marched into Coblenz as part of the American army of occupation under General Henry T. Allen. It should have been like coming back home, but amazement awaited my return today for Coblenz glittered in the morning sun from the million reflections of thousands of pointed helmets which seemed to fill the streets.

Coblenz is the only spot in the occupied Rhineland where German uniforms, other than those of the police, can be worn. And advantage is taken of that ruling. The arrival coincided with that of the national federation of firemen who gathered here for their annual convention.

The fireman in any American town is a calm looking fellow in a serge, but not so the German. These visiting firemen were dressed out in Prussian uniforms, which rode the "Pickelhaube" pointed helmets such as were worn by hunters among the American doughboys hunted back in 1918. Quite a few of the visitors were even adorned with swords, though I have yet to see my first sword-wearing American fireman. Most of them had rows of ribbons and medals, and not a few sported the iron cross.

Before the firemen trooped here all their glory, the Catholic priests came in spiked helmets. I understand that as soon as the firemen's condition was cleared away, more dramatic organizations will be on the way.

Nerve Center of Rhine
Coblenz is the nerve center of nationalist manifestations on the Rhine. Largely because of the permitting the wearing of uniforms but also because since the Americans' departure, Coblenz a stamping ground of three British, French and Belgian soldiers. In any one really having charge of the area, this place has become a parade ground of German super-patriots.

Few Allied Uniforms
The Interallied High Commission Rhineland territory sits here, in an allied bodyguard. But there are so few allied uniforms to be seen that you have to walk ten blocks before you see a soldier. German police really outnumber any one really having charge of the area, this place has become a parade ground of German super-patriots.

Coblenz never forgets the American occupation, and 500 German uniforms from in and around Coblenz now living in America keep the ties. The place does not seem the same as in the few years before 1918 when the Stars and stripes were unfurled over Ehrenstein. The townfolk will tell you that they were lucky to have the Americans who did not stay long and paved the town with cobblestones while they stayed.

The American doughboy on duty drew more than a dollar a month and he spent even more than he drew. The French police makes five cents a day and he saves half of it. Coblenz would never grow rich off the French occupation.

But the German resident of Coblenz feels that he must be an arch-patriot for spite. He is certainly more patriotic now than he has ever been, or probably ever will be again after the foreign troops pull out.

In the lowlands where the Moselle joins the Rhine stands an enormous equestrian statue of Kaiser Wilhelm. American doughboys from the army of occupation remember it well. The site is known as "das deutscheck," the German corner, and it is the mecca of the arch patriots.

On the base of the statue is the sculptured phrase:
"Never will the Fatherland perish, if you stay united and faithful."

It would be hard to estimate how many times that sermon has been repeated during recent years. "Occupied" Germans swear allegiance to the "Free" Germans of the east bank, and vice versa. Today when evacuation is only a matter of short time, the patriotic manifestations double and treble.

Depression Feared
Some persons pretend to be nervous over the possibility of a clash when the troops leave, but anyone knows the German character knows that the minute the troops leave Schupps will be ripped. But the Rhinelanders dream only of the day when the tricolor will be hauled down, atop Ehrenstein, and the German flag run up over the fort in which so many Alsations and Lorrainians were kept because of their Francophile sentiments during the war.

"Have you made your plans for the evacuation of this zone in 1930?" I asked a high official of the high commission.
"Absolutely none," he replied. "The Allies will get together and fix a time for the evacuation, and we have only to execute the order they will give us. For the present, there are only movements of troops within zones, replacing of regiments by new outfits from the rear, but absolutely no orders for evacuation, even partial, have been given."

Municipal officials fear a period of economic depression when the Allied troops leave, but contend that the Berlin government will have a plan to meet the situation. During the absence of the burgomaster, I asked another high official at the city hall whether Coblenz had benefitted or lost by ten years of occupation.

"Undoubtedly there has been a flow of French, American, British, and Belgian gold but our economic activities have definitely slowed recently, and we are faced with an unemployment problem," I was told.

"Before the war there were great arsenals in the Rhineland, occupying thousands of men, but since the Rhineland has been demilitarized these men are jobless. The Reich will aid us to meet our deficits if necessary."

POSSIBLE AMBASSADOR.
WASHINGTON, July 27.—Senator Walter E. Edge, Republican, New Jersey, virtually has been selected by President Hoover to be the American ambassador to France, his friends said here today. However, no announcement of his appointment was forthcoming from the White House, although his name has frequently been mentioned in speculation regarding the Paris post.

Edge would succeed to the post vacated in Paris by the death of Ambassador Myron T. Herrick.

1930 BUICK TO BE BEST EVER BUILT

Reports and rumors concerning the forthcoming 1930 line of the Buick Motor company are due to be answered by actual facts in the near future, according to Buick officials who now let it be known that the lines and specifications on the 1930 Buick were approved some time ago, and have been placed in the hands of the production department.

An atmosphere of mystery pervades the mile-and-a-half long plant at Flint, Michigan, where the 1930 Buick is in the course of production. It is evident from the intense activity displayed through the entire organization, from the iron foundry, the sheet metal plant, and on through various assembly plants and up to the executive offices that the 1930 Buick is rolling off the assembly line.

But there is no detailed information available as to the changes that are embodied in the new car, although Buick officials state that in appearance and performance, the new Buick will out-rank any previous car in Buick's 25 year history as a leader in the production of fine cars.

Although the exact date of the presentation of this new car has not yet been announced, it is evident from the fact that the factory is under production, that the new 1930 models will be offered to the public, probably about August 1st.

The great band of horses will swim the river, preparatory to being loaded into railroad cars and shipped to the final destination of the range horse—a packing plant.

Two thousand of the horses will come from the ranch of George H. Young. The others have been gathered from various sections south of the Missouri.

RIVAL CHURCH FACTIONS OPEN NEW ARGUMENT

By WALLACE CARROLL
United Press Staff Correspondent.
LONDON, July 27.—A new controversy between rival factions in the Church of England, which threatens to become as bitter as the dispute over the revised prayer book, has broken out over the question of church patronage.

The conflict arose over the purchase of "advowsons"—the right to fill vacant church offices. High church officials alleged low churchmen were seeking to gain control of the church by cornering all available "advowsons" and filling the offices with men of their own faction. Officials of the low church group made the same charges against high churchmen.

The purchase of advowsons had been viewed with disfavor for some time. For centuries church offices could be sold much the same as land, but in 1924 parliament confirmed a measure passed by the church assembly, declaring it illegal to sell a church benefice more than twice.

The measure was intended to end the right of sale entirely within the course of years. All parties in the church agreed in the desirability of the reform.

Conflicting Charges

The measure, however, developed the present conflict. Each side charged that the other was buying up the "advowsons" and thus obtaining for itself the permanent right to fill certain offices with its own men.

During the past year prices of advowsons have soared, although the normal effect of the legislation would have been to cause a decrease in value owing to the ultimate inability to dispose of the property.

The Bishop of Liverpool, writing in the Liverpool Review, quoted instances of profiteering in the sale of benefices.

"The cash value of advowsons," he said, "has been considerably increased. This is largely due to the eagerness with which benefices while they are still saleable, are being bought up by party societies with the object of imposing a particular color upon the church in question, irrespective of the parishioners' desire."

Strongly Financed

Among those who accused the low churchmen of inaugurating the "scheme for advowsons" was the Rev. Arnold Pinchard, secretary of the English church union, an Anglo-Catholic organization.

"There is not a shadow of doubt that there is a great deal of activity going on in the purchase of advowsons," he said. "I have no definite information as to who is behind it, but I feel sure it is largely by the low church associations."

"I think there is being waged a very strongly financed campaign for securing the patronage of as many benefices as possible in what are called the low church interests. It is a scandal that ought to be dealt with at once."

Prescott Upton, editor of "The Church Intelligencer," a low church organ, denied emphatically that the protestant element was bartering in advowsons.

"I consider that by far the

ANNIVERSARY AUSTRIA MOVE UPON SERBIA

PARIS, July 27.—Fifteen years ago tomorrow the mauling of nations of national hatreds were fanned into a blaze, with Austria-Hungary's declaration of war which eventually involved more than one-third of the population of the world and cost 37,600,000 human lives and 1,812,000 million gold francs.

Ten years after the signing of the defunct peace accord finds France almost completely re-created from the severe destruction of four years of hostilities. Determined to prevent a recurrence of the devastating profanation of French soil by the enemy, France is actively engaged in the construction of an enormous fortified frontier from Belgium to the Mediterranean.

The war's toll for France was particularly heavy and can be summarized in the following table:

War damages 100 billion francs.
War dead, 1,368,535 in army and navy.
War injured, 8,589,602 in army and navy.
War widows and orphans, 810,000.
War destruction: 6,609,560 acres of farms, farmland damaged; 17,616 public buildings destroyed; 7,000 schools, 9,332 factories, 3,652 offices, 400 railroad stations razed.

Within the week from July 28 to August 4, 1914, history was written. Three days after the start of Austria-Hungary's hostilities in Serbia, Russia mobilized to aid her little ally. France mobilized her army on August 1, the day Germany declared war on Russia. Germany invaded Belgium on August 2, and declared war on France on August 3. The following day, Great Britain declared war on Germany and President Wilson proclaimed the neutrality of the United States.

Army Reduced

Since the war, France has materially decreased the strength of her peacetime army and has shortened the length of compulsory service of military conscripts from three years to one year. The active army is of 600,000 strength today, compared with the army of 650,000 men before mobilization in 1914.

At the outbreak of the war, France mobilized 3,200,000 men in her army, but the full strength today if all the soldiers were mobilized would be 2,200,000.

The peacetime navy today contains 57,500 officers and men, compared with the peacetime navy of 69,000 men in 1914. Aviation has increased from 3,000 to 40,000.

It was only recently that the French government was able to figure its exact war loss in men, for there are still 2,500 officers and 250,000 soldiers of whom all trace

Report "Abduction" of Montana House

BUTTE, Mont., July 27.—Abduction of children, automobiles, accessories, cattle and other livestock is common enough in Montana, but until recently, the abduction of a 4-room house had never been reported.

Sheriff's deputies armed with a warrant, are searching for William E. Sullivan, who is alleged to have stolen a 4-room house, moved it a mile from its original site, and sold it for $200.

Sullivan, the complaint charges, pulled the vacant house on rollers, hauled it to an empty lot and sold it to Mrs. Isabel Lloyd. The house was owned by Mrs. Anna Walsh, Seattle, Wash., formerly of Butte, Mrs. Lloyd, becoming suspicious, investigated. The abduction was disclosed, and the hunt for Sullivan launched.

PLAYS ORGAN 80 HOURS. Frank Norfleet to Face "Talkie" Came

NEW YORK, July 27.—J. Frank Norfleet, Hale Center, Tex. rancher by occupation and a hunter by choice, is about to face his bow before a "talkie" camera when he was fleeced by a notorious Joe Furey, and who cleared a vengeance on crooks who led him to capture 82 men who were handed, has arrived here.

VETERAN DIES.
BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 27.—Major Philip Lenham, 39 years, who attended the Paris Peace conference in which the American flag was born and who fought East Side Post No. 888 of the 6888th Central Postal Directory, died here following an operation.

LESSON ON FRONTIERS

The League of Nations committee of activity recently published in Paris the first complete figures of the war's real cost. These statistics show losses to all armies of 10,135,000 men killed. In addition it is figured there was a birth reduction of 50,850,000 and an increase of mortality directly traceable to the war and its privations of 6,015,000, making the total loss nearly 37 millions.

France learned as her greatest lesson from the war, the necessity of making her frontiers so strong that an enemy will smash up its army in attempting to force its entry.

When Germany made a feint towards the French frontier in August, 1914, France, anxious to avoid war, withdrew its troops ten kilometers back along the whole border. That was followed by German invasion in seven points even before the German government had officially declared war on France.

A German column coming through Luxembourg came into French territory until stopped by the French forts of Longwy.

A detachment of German cavalry passed the frontier at Cirey-sur-Vezouse and occupied for several minutes the village of Bertrambois, more than a mile inside French territory, until driven out.

A company of German cyclist troops attacked a customs house occupied by 20 German customs men, who returned the fire and drove the Germans back with injuries on both sides. These were the first injured of the war.

HIGH COST OF SCHOOLING.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 27.—An engineering school is the most expensive type of school in the world to operate, according to Arthur C. Rhind, assistant bursar at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The annual operating expense, he says, is about $851 per student, compared with tuition of only $400.

New Campaign for Safe Driving

MASON CITY, Ia., July 27.—A unique campaign for safe and sane driving, which had motorists guessing for a few days, is being carried on in Cerro Gordo county by Sheriff G. E. Cress.

Thousands of drivers have been stopped by the sheriff and his deputies on the highways. The officers promptly display the well-known red card and demand the driver's name. When the latter follows with an attempted alibi, the officer becomes more harsh, shows the "card" in the driver's hand and leaves.

Imagine the driver's embarrassment when he reads this:

"I have watched your driving over a distance of several miles. You drove safely, sanely and sensibly."

"Every day in the state of Iowa there is approximately one person killed and forty persons seriously injured on our streets and highways."

"Safe, sane and sensible driving will stop this loss of life and limb."

"If you don't know what the other fellow is going to do, slow down until he does it."

"Continue to be a safe driver. Help prevent accidents. You may save a life."

"Thanks for your cooperation. Goodby. Good luck. — G. E. Cress, Sheriff."

Cress believes that the campaign is netting results and declares that it is the only sensible system to follow now that Iowa no longer has a speed law.

Speakeasy Hole on Golf Course

DULUTH, Minn., July 27.—"Mountain Joe" Basker, 73-year-old chairman of the municipal golf course refreshment committee has abandoned his post at the sixth hole.

When he found there was no nineteenth hole on the course, "Mountain Joe" set up headquarters at the sixth. He would give an enticing wink, hold up two fingers and served the tired golfers with a drink for 25 cents.

Joe dubbed his first shoe when he gave the wink to three prohibition officers as they labored to get out of a sand trap near the sixth hole.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
MOLLY BURNHAM and JACK WELLS seems fated to quarrel. Molly is a reporter, and headed for a career. Jack is draftsman in an architect's office, and getting nowhere at all. Their quarrel when Molly goes to New York and reads Jack the synopsis of a play, to be called "The Death of Delphine Darrows." It is a play founded on the actual facts of the mysterious death of a woman named BERNICE BRADFORD. A man named Barrows was tried for the Bradford woman's death, and Molly covered the trial. Barrows was acquitted. And, later, RED FLYNN, a police court reporter, discovered some sensational facts which he and Molly decide to use for the plot for a crime play.

They were sitting over their coffee when the bell rang. The finger that pressed the button held it maddeningly.

...mistrial, and the judge is considering the evidence now. You'll probably be called to his chambers any minute. It's Wharton's fault. And now the whole outfit's liable to go to jail."
"Slim! You don't mean it?"
"Sure I mean it. What do you think I am, a practical little joker? Ask any of the boys. Look in the courtroom there. Its empty isn't it? Wharton's been phoning all morning. Wants you to call him. They may take a chance, and send you up to Canada, until the thing blows over."
Molly was genuinely frightened. She had visions of going to jail, and wearing a striped dress like a woman she had interviewed in the house of correction.
A court officer approached her kindly.
"Judge Brewster wishes to see you, Miss Burnham."
"Oh, my lord, Slim! What will I do?"
"Well, you can't very well run, and observe Slim. Go ahead and take your medicine."
Judge Brewster, formidable in his black robes, received her gently, explaining the situation with legal preciseness. He would be obliged, he said, to declare a mistrial. The fault was not so much hers, as the juryman's. He had warned the jury not to read the papers. There had been, it would appear, a serious misdemeanor. A friend of the accused man had sent a newspaper containing a story of Molly's to this particular juryman. Certain passages of the story had been penciled.
"An unprejudiced person reading that article would undoubtedly be influenced against the defendant," declared the judge. "As a newspaper woman you have no right to be anything but impartial in what you write. It is a serious offense, and frequently merits a ...fine, or a jail sentence. In view however, of the evident conspiracy among Mandingo's friends, I am inclined to deal leniently with your own offense."

"Whoever it was who sent the paper containing your story to Juryman Flagger, communicated the fact to attorneys for the defense. They promptly demanded an investigation, and I have questioned Mr. Flagger. He admits having read the article, and declares that he is now predisposed to find the defendant guilty. In view of his sworn statement, I must call a mistrial."
The judge stopped speaking and Molly raised her flushed face to meet his judicial gaze, fixed sternly upon her.
"I'm fearfully sorry," she stammered. "There isn't anything I can say. I've no defense, no excuse."
He regarded her more kindly. "Allow me to commend your chivalry, Miss Burnham. It transcends your indiscretion. It is uncommonly gallant when a person brought to accounting declines to transfer the responsibility for the offense. I have investigated the matter more deeply than I had indicated, and have learned that your city editor ordered the articles."
Molly shook her head. "I write

...my own stories," she insisted. "Mr. Wharton is not responsible."
Judge Brewster rose, and his black robes billowed solemnly about him.
"That is all," he said. "Except that I should advise you, Miss Burnham, for your own good, to be more careful in the future. Gunmen execute fearful reprisals."
Slim was waiting when Molly left the judge's chambers.
"It's all right," she said. "I'm not going to jail."
But Slim was in a dark mood.
"Maybe you'll get shot," he hazarded. "Maybe you'd be better off in jail. They couldn't get at you if you were behind bars."
"Oh, Slim, stop! You make me blood run cold. Have you phoned the office? Judge Brewster declaring a mistrial."
"Sure, I gave them that minutes ago. Wharton's up in the air. The publisher has been seeing him the devil, I guess. As he says for you to keep out of office until he sends for you. Wants the thing to blow over before you show up, I guess. Talk about getting all the breaks! You pull a gag you ought to get sent to jail for, and what do you rate? A vacation?"
Molly laughed light-heartedly. The dreadful cloud had lifted. The dark fear was all dispelled. She felt happy and gay.
"I'll have a little dinner party tonight," she thought. "Not any of the crowd from the office. I'll ask Rita and Bob, and Ruth and Zip. It will be like old times to be with them again."
She telephoned from the courthouse, and reached Rita at Miss Mayhew's. Rita said that she and Bob would love to go. They had talked of dropping in that evening

...anyhow, it was such ages since they had seen Molly.
But Ruth said she didn't feel well. Besides, Zip was busy at the office, and sometimes he didn't get home until pretty late. It made things wretched, because they couldn't very well accept dinner invitations. Not that it made a difference, Ruth added. She didn't feel like going out, anyhow. She couldn't imagine what had come over her lately. Zip said she was like an old woman.
"Maybe you'd be better off in jail," he hazarded. "Maybe you'd be better off in jail. They couldn't get at you if you were behind bars."

Churches

FIRST CHRISTIAN

Our Bible school will begin promptly at 9:45 with the regular superintendent Dean Isaacks in charge. Every teacher should be present before the first song is announced and should urge that the pupils be present on time and attend the regular worship services. Our boys and girls should attend the Lord's supper and preaching service and the older members must set the example. The Bible school that does not emphasize and support the regular worship services is a failure. We are growing in this respect and our prayer meeting on Wednesday nights are a substantial proof. Prayer meeting at 8:10. Sunday morning worship at 10:45 and following the Lord's supper the pastor will preach. Subject, "A Token of God's Righteous Judgment." Night worship from 8:10 to 9. Sermon subject, "The Prophets of Love." We urge all members and friends to attend these services.

FIRST METHODIST

will speak at both services tomorrow. "What Makes the Church Great?" at the 11 o'clock hour. Why is the church the most loved and the most hated of all institutions? What is the secret of her greatness and what is the outlook? At 8:30. "The One Supreme Task of the Church." Everyone is cordially invited to these services.

GRACE LUTHERAN

Two services today—10:30 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sermon topic for the morning service, "Thou Shalt Not Kill." For the night service, "The Majestic Open Air Service at the Foot of Ebal and Gerizim." Sunday school at 9:30. The Bible class is studying the Book of Job. Come and join us. In the afternoon at 2:30 the voting members will meet in special session to discuss building matters.—H. F. PEIMAN, Pastor.

But what if you buy a watch of some unknown parentage? You wait and wait. Then, when the repair bill does come, it is enormous!
