POT SHOTS AT POLITICS

Where a Pledge is Worthless A Richmond dispatch tells the story that the Rev. David E. Herburn, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league of Texas, in a statement issued to the paper called upon all Virginia democrats to participate in the state democratic primary, Aug. 6, and then support it wherever they wished in the general elections.

In politics a sportsman takes his medicine. If he is a participant in a primary and is outvoted, he owes to the decision of the majority for the season that if his slate of candidates goes over he expects those who lose to remain on the political reservation and vote the ticket straight on general election day.

There should be a general realignment of voters in all American states. There should be—no the bogus trade marks of the old political party are dearly prized by the old-timers.

Canzoneri Will Box Mandell in Title Fight Friday

LIGHTWEIGHT CROWN HUNG UP FOR BOUT

Former Feather-weight Title Holder Billed for Scrap

Tony Canzoneri, a bouncing little Brooklyn Italian who won and lost the world's featherweight title last year, will try for another ring crown this week when he meets Sammy Mandell for the lightweight championship at Chicago Friday night.

Canzoneri won the 126-pound title from Benny Bass, National boxing association champion, February 10, 1928. Previous to that Canzoneri had won recognition as featherweight champion in New York state by defeating Johnny Dundee, undefeated titleholder who came out of retirement to defend his laurels.

Andre Routsis of France lifted the 126-pound title from Canzoneri on CHICAGO, July 30.—Being his best chance for victory lie in body punches, Tony Canzoneri today continued to train in fighting in training for the title bout with Lightweight Champion Sammy Mandell here Friday night.

September 28, 1928, by outpointing the little Italian in a 15-round bout.

Bill Mandell gave his superb exhibition of boxing in defeating the 135-pound title against Jimmy McLarin at the Polo grounds last night, the Rockford (Ill.) sheik was regarded as a joke champion.

Like Tommy Loughran, Mandell seems to be able to rise to the occasion in a pinch. Mandell's greatest fight was against McLarin, with his title not at stake. Mandell has performed feats worthy of the greatest "ham" champion of modern times, Johnny Wilson, former middleweight title holder.

Mandell was beaten by Billy Peck in a no-decision contest at Minneapolis in January last year and in September, after he had defended his laurels so gallantly as "Baby-Face" McLarin, the former champion, lost out to a former 135-pound title holder, Canzoneri, who can throw many a heavy blow in a 10-round fight. Peck's greatest feat is a tendency to play to the gallery and to his opponent to take a sock in the chin.

Canzoneri has never been knocked out and Mandell has no reputation as a puncher, but if Tony keeps his big nose in the way Sammy is expected to spread it out more than it is with a sharp jab.

In his last appearance in a New York ring before leaving for Chicago to begin training, Canzoneri won and defeated Phil McGraw, aged Detroit, Greek, but he did not show anything worthy of a boxing lightweight champion. McGraw opened a deep wound over Canzoneri's eye which took some time to heal. It won't do Tony any good to have it re-opened by one of the champion's sharp thrusts.

Oddly enough, Chicago was scene of the last battle which saw a former champion win his second title. Everything can happen out in the windy City, where boxing is common.

After losing his welterweight title to Pete Latzo at Scranton, Pa., May 1926, Mickey Walker won the middleweight title from Tiger Flowers at Chicago December 3, 1928.

Johnny Risco Wins 12-Round Rocco Bout

CLEVELAND, O., July 30.—Johnny Risco, Cleveland heavyweight fighter of the checkered career, today seemed headed for the top position following his sensational 12-round victory over Emmet Rocco at Elwood City, Pa., in public hall last night.

Fighting the entire distance at speed the former bakery boy scored a previous loss to the Italian here last spring. Risco won 10 of the 12 rounds.

DECATUR, Ill., July 30.—Mayor W. Smith of this city has just returned to the city treasury one cent paid him in excess of the salary he earned last year.

LIKES OLD STANDARD.

TOPEKA, Kan., July 30.—President Dale Gear of the Western league would return to the old standard ball of baseball, he told the United Press.

"The lively ball has a tendency to concentrate attention on a fewer number of stars. It cuts down base running, it cuts down the double play, and reduces spectacular infield work.

"Under the standard ball, it has been easier for more players to build up followings.

"The long hit and home runs are not the only features in baseball."

In his first game with the Fort Worth Panthers since 1923, Lil Stoner yesterday downed the Dallas Steers, 7 to 6. Stoner tightened up during the last few innings in time to gain the victory after he had let the Steers get a number of hits in the first frames.

By taking both games of a double-header at Houston the Buffs fought their way into a tie for the first place in the League standing. The first game was 2 to 1 and the second 4 to 3.

Shreveport defeated Wichita Falls in the first game of a double header played on the Sport diamond yesterday and was fighting hard for the second game when it was called because of darkness, with the score 3 to 3.

In a 5 to 1 victory, the Beaumont Exporters evened the series with the Waco Cubs. Caldwell, Cub pitcher, saw some hard hitting on the part of the opposition.

HAD TO REMAIN HOME MONTHS

"Stomach trouble and indigestion had me in a terrible nervous, rundown condition. I was so weak and worn out I would have to stay in the house for months at a time. Constipation was helping to make my life miserable and there were times when I didn't care whether I lived or died. A good friend of mine told me about Sargon and how much it helped her so I decided to try it.

"What a blessed relief it is to be free of the troubles that worried me for 12 long years. The Sargon treatment has literally made me feel like a new woman. My stomach now is in perfect condition; my appetite is fine and I eat just anything I want, without any ill effects. My nerves are back to normal and I sleep sound and get up feeling just fine. Sargon Soft Mass Pills ended my constipation without ever griping or nauseating me.

"I'm so happy over regaining my health that I'll be glad to tell anyone what Sargon has meant to me. Just have them 'phone 2-7783 if they want to know what I think of this wonderful treatment."

Mrs. W. H. Higgins, 507 W. First street, Fort Worth.

Sargon represents the dawn of a new era in the field of modern medicine. It is turning old-fashioned moss-grown health theories upside down and is restoring countless thousands by methods undreamed of only a few years ago.

SCHMELING MAY MEET SHARKEY IN SEPTEMBER

Detroit Named as Probable City for Battle

NEW YORK, July 30.—Max Schmeling, German heavyweight whose boxing license has been revoked by the New York Athletic commission, and Jack Sharkey, Boston sailor, will meet in a bout to be promoted by the Madison Square Garden corporation next September, according to William F. Carey, president of the corporation.

The place for the bout, Carey said, has not been selected, but the United Press learned that Detroit probably would be named.

The announcement came in direct defiance to the New York State Athletic commission, which said Friday any person or corporation in the state of New York which negotiated for a bout involving Schmeling would face revocation of its license.

Yesterday's hero: Babe Herman, Brooklyn outfielder who made two singles and as many doubles in five times at bat. He aided the Robins in their 10 to 2 victory at Cincinnati and raising his batting average to .404, becoming the only batter in either league above the .400 mark.

The Chicago Cubs increased their lead in the National league to three and a half games with a 12 to 10 victory over Philadelphia. It was Hack Wilson, pugacious outfielder, who saved the day for Chicago. With the score tied at 9 runs in the eighth inning Hack hit a home run, his 28th of the season, scoring Heathcote ahead of him. It was Chicago's eighth straight victory.

The Pittsburgh Pirates faltered in the ninth inning, allowed Boston to score three runs and lost to the Braves, 10 to 9. Swetonic, Meine, Fussell and Kremer labored on the mound for the Pirates but were unable to check the Braves.

New York's infant winning streak attained its third game when the Giants best St. Louis, 11 to 2. Latty Benson was reached for 10 hits, but coasted home under the shelter of the 17 safe blows his teammates totaled off Sherdel, Frankhouse and Hallahan.

The Chicago White Sox Bested Philadelphia, 8 to 6, in the only game scheduled in the American league. Red Faber pitched the first six innings for Chicago and was credited with the victory. He allowed three hits and one run before the heat forced him to retire. Ted Lyons, who relieved him, allowed five hits and as many runs.

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, July 30.

Undoubtedly the finest vacation in Europe this summer is that enjoyed by a soldier in the Belgian Army of Occupation in the Rhineland.

This little detachment of 5,300 men has shattered all traditions of armies that march on foot. The Belgian occupation forces ride all day in their work. Every Belgian soldier in the northern zone of occupation is provided with some form of mechanical locomotion, whether it be the bicycle of the cycle corps or the automobile of the motorized machine-gunners or the motorized field-artillery.

No one walks in the Belgian army of occupation, and that is perhaps why you can travel over a radius of 20 miles around the old city and never see any soldiers. If you had not been assured at Mayence and Brussels that the Belgian army was still on the Rhine you would seriously doubt it.

The Belgians have organized perfect occupation without fraternization, but the Germans, nevertheless, are howling for "complete liberty" and the immediate handing off of the "yoke of subjection."

Five yokes are visible around Aix. The cyclists cover about 20 miles a day in maneuvers, and successive classes of young Belgians have been given bicycles and sent to the Rhineland, so that in 10 years nearly 100,000 Belgians, who are to form the bulk of the army for 40 years to come as reserves, have been shown the geographical topography of every inch of German soil between the Belgian border and the Rhine.

That, after all, may prove to be one of the outstanding advances of 10 years occupation. Every army has taken plenty of opportunity to stage maneuvers and practice marches in the country bordering France and Belgium on the East.

Wife Says Plane "Shakes" Dishes

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 30.—That a low-flying airplane keeps her awake and "shakes dishes off the shelves" in the wee hours of the morning was the complaint made to the police here recently by one housewife.

"It flies so low it wakes us all up and the vibration from the engine shakes dishes off my shelves," said the woman, adding that she wanted "something done about it." The sergeant promised to do his best, though as yet there are no "air cops" on the force.

and if there should happen to be another war within this generation's existence and with the Rhineland as the theater, the Belgian and French armies would swing into action with the advantage of knowing the ground perfectly.

The British have made good use of their time on the Rhine to perfect themselves in field artillery. They have moved entirely out of German territory with their field pieces and have gone into French Lorraine where there are some admirable artillery ranges, and for months at a time the British artillery hangs away at the Vosges.

When the books are balanced after occupation is at an end, it will probably be found that Germany, although she paid the expenses of the occupation armies up to September, 1920, is money ahead. The armies are spending vast sums in Germany and if the Rhineland has enjoyed a prosperity which contrasted strangely with the economic crisis of the rest of the Reich it was due to the spending of the Allies.

There is nothing so indicative of prosperity or an economic slump as bank earnings. The figures of the Rhineland "Caisse d'Epargne" or savings accounts, speak of themselves. In January, 1920, the total was 3,222,000,000 marks, but by March, 1921, the total had risen to 6,375,000,000 marks.

These are the figures, which inspired Herr Koerel, minister of public economy of the Hessian state, to declare last May during a session of the Landtag that "the reserves constituted by the savings bank progressed in such a manner that the total practically equals the economies of the empire before the war."

The Tourist Trade
The Germans, especially business men, complain that the armies have driven tourists away, but there are statistics available which would tend to dispel that. According to official municipal statistics, Mayence entertained 126,438 tourists in 1913, and in 1921, cared for 156,238. In Cologne, tourist figures for 1922 showed an increase of 35 per cent. over 1921.

The many watering places along the Rhine have a right to complain. They have had several disastrous seasons, but the cause will be found in the increased cost of living inside of Germany rather than the presence of foreign soldiers.

But by playing on the chords of patriotism, the ultra-nationalists have been able to convince the Rhinelanders that it is better to be a free man and poor than to support a day longer than necessary the "heel of the oppressor."

It is a strange sight to watch German tourists along the Rhine. They take a delight in rinsing their throats with the palatable white wines of the Moselle and Rhine valleys and then voicing the songs of the empire. In the old days, Rhinelanders sang of the "Tanzenbaum" and of the "Lorelei" who lay on her rock along the Rhine and trapped unwary fishermen. Now they sing of the glory and spirit of war.

There was an effort, a few years after the Allies moved into the Rhineland, to found a republican buffer state. The movement was short lived, but surprised the Reich central government and was really responsible for unusual patriotic activity. Berlin evidently thought of the adage that a stitch in time saves nine and that it is better to lock the stable door before the car is stolen.

China Newspaper Asks Rain Article

A letter from far-away China has come to Boyce House, editor of the Ranger Times, asking him to write an article for the South China Morning Post of Hong Kong on the subject of rain-making. Ranger has had only one rain since May.

The letter from China states: "We are short of water here at present and such an article with scientific data would be most acceptable at this time."

NEW PICTURE FIRST COLOR SONG MOVIE

Stage settings equalling anything done by the girl-glorifying Ziegfeld, furnishes the background for the dramatic action of the story. "On With the Show," Warner Bros. first 100% natural color, talking, singing, dancing Vitaphone picture—coming to the Palace theater next Sunday for a run of three days.

The palace scene which forms the third act of this musical extravaganza is declared by experts to be as fine as anything ever presented on the stage. The dances and entertainments, directed by Larry Cahales, are especially colorful and carry out the enchanting spirit of the piece.

Betty Compton, playing the role of the dream queen, wears a gorgeous head dress which she insists weighs more than 25 pounds.

Particular attention has been given throughout the entire filming of "On With the Show" to color effects. All costumes were especially designed for this picture, as stock costumes even for minor characters, which would have been suitable were the picture being filmed in black and white, could not pass muster because color film is used. Extreme care was used throughout in harmonizing the colors. A new color process is being used, which photographs shades in their exact values. The results may be seen here for the first time in this spectacular production at the Palace next Sunday.

Sally O'Neil, Arthur Lake, William Bakewell, Joe E. Brown, Louise Fazenda, the Fairbanks Twins, Sam Hardy, Lee Moran, Harry Gribbon and many other notables are in the cast. "On With the Show" is based on a story by Humphrey Pearson. It was adapted by Robert Lord. Words and music are by Harry Akst and Grant Clarke, dance and stage presentations by Larry Cahales. Alan Crossland directed.

DALLAS, July 30.—Farm timber in 34 east and northeast Texas counties brought its canners $8,192,000 in 1922, according to State Forester E. O. Sieck.

Commandments of Finance Enumerated

COLLEGE STATION, July 30.—Girls attending the farmers short course at A. and M. college were told that haphazard saving and spending often brings grief and that a budget is the thing for all except millionaires. The speaker was Mrs. Lily Pearl Chamberlain of the North Texas agricultural college, Arlington. "To care for your nest egg," she said, "so that it will finally hatch into a comfortable competency, you must learn and follow the ten financial commandments."

They are: (1) work and earn. (2) Make a budget, (3) record expenditures, (4) have a bank account, (5) carry life insurance, (6) make a will, (7) Own your own home, (8) invest in reliable securities, (9) pay your bills promptly, (10) Share with others.

COLLEGE STATION, July 30.—A salad can't do its stuff for you, dietetically speaking, if you refuse to eat the lettuce or other leaf on which it reposes. This was brought out in the sessions for 4-H club girls at the farmers short course, A. & M. college of Texas, by Miss Otis Neighbors, director of the home economics department, South Texas Cotton Oil company, Houston, who showed that a good summer salad must have a green leafy vegetable such as endive, escarole, romaine, lettuce, water cress, chicory, green mint, cabbage, mustard, beet tops or celery leaves to make it come up to the protective diet standard.

"From such vegetables," she said, "we get valuable vitamins and essential mineral salts of the iron, phosphorus and calcium variety. Be sure your salad is attractively arranged, for we eat with our eyes too, and a perfect salad is not only healthful and nourishing but a work of art." Miss Neighbors concluded.

CONSIDER TRIP

STAMFORD, July 30.—The advisability of sponsoring another trip for farmers, dairymen, and poultrymen to California was the main topic of discussion at the meeting of the advisory board of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce which met at Fort Worth Monday.

SUNBURN BEST SUNBURN CURE

BOSTON, July 30.—Sunburn, caused by over-exposure to the sun's rays, can be cured by exposure to the same rays, according to the Boston physiotherapy clinic.

Doctors attached to the clinic report that the infra-red ray is the best antidote for sunburn, which results from exposure to the ultra-violet ray. Out of 60 test cases, they say, 47 needed only one treatment and the others responded to two treatments.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
MOLLY BURKHAM, reporter, was entertaining old friends at a little dinner party, when she learned of the death of RUTH WOODS.

Molly and RITA MELNOTTE and Ruth were dearest friends at college. New Ruth is dead, and Rita is experimenting disastrously with a companionate marriage. Only Molly has achieved the triumphant happiness of which they all dreamed—and even Molly's joy is not complete. She is very much in love with JACK WELLS, who has no money, and seems unable to make any. She and Jack quarrel a great deal over money matters, and because Jack hates Molly's work, and is resentful of her intimacy with newspaper men.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

She slipped the receiver slowly in place. One of her nearest friends was dead. And she could still talk about love! Was there something wrong with her? Something cold and heartless? Were other people like that? "Tomorrow!" her heart kept singing. "Tomorrow!" But she thrust the anticipation from her. And conjured, instead, a vision of Ruth. Bob and Rita took Zip home with them. And Molly, when they had gone, found the memory book of her Freshman year, with all its heart-wrenching memories of Ruth. For she and Ruth had roomed together that year, and that was the year Zip gave Ruth the moonstone she called her engagement ring. All night Molly sat with the book across her knees. When dawn came, she put coffee on, and while it was boiling she took a shower. Then she lay quietly down, not to sleep, but to relax, so that Jack would not know she had not slept all the night. When his train came, she was waiting.

CHAPTER XVI
Ruth was buried in her wedding gown, with her lips touched with violet. Molly thought she looked like Isolde, with her white face and her white eyelids, and her little white hands folded so chastely. She bent to kiss the soft cloud of her hair, and thought of what she had heard. "Tristan had whispered to Isolde, '... your gold hair is not gold. Only God knows who made it. What color it is exactly.' Bob and Rita, and Molly and Jack had bought a blanket made of crosses, to throw over the casket. Bob had filled her arms with heart-roses. The people from upstairs came down, and a few curious neighbors called. Their faces were long, and their words were right. And the woman from upstairs wrung her hands, and called Ruth "the poor dear," and said how awful it was. The neighbors brought in a cold ham and some potato salad, and their voices quivered with the proper degree of feeling.

And Molly, though she despised herself for the thought, wondered if people felt an exhilaration in others' troubles. Those people, for instance, who brought the ham and the woman from upstairs, also.

She turned fiercely to Jack. "Look!" she whispered. "That woman is fingering Ruth's gown. She's indecent."

"Sh," he admonished. "She means well, poor soul. She doesn't know any better."

"Poor dear!" murmured the woman at the door. And, putting her handkerchief to her streaming eyes, leaned a little closer to the dead girl.

They buried Ruth in a lonely graveyard, beneath a pine that dropped its needles softly above her head. Everything was quiet and still. And only a little brood laughed as it ran over the stones and moss.

After the funeral, Bob and Rita took Zip home with them. And Molly and Jack returned together to her apartment.

He put his arms about her very gently, and brushed her forehead lightly with his lips. One didn't somehow want to kiss, after that open grave, with only roses to cover the brown earth that would go thudding down on Ruth. Ruth in her wedding gown, with her arms full of sweetest roses.

"You must be hungry," remarked Jack when they had sat in silence for a long time. "Let's go out somewhere and eat. Make you feel better."

She roused herself then, shaking off the pathetic melancholy that had smothered her all day.

"I thought it would be nicer to stay here," she said. "I'd love to cook something, to show you what a smart little life I'm going to be. What do you feel like, juicy steak, big lamp chops, nice fresh lobster?"

"You sound like a butcher," he teased. "I don't want you bothering. Let's go somewhere."

"But I want to bother," she insisted. "I don't pretend to be domestic, when I'm alone. But it's lovely acting up to a man in the house. You stay here, and I'll go out and buy some things. I like shopping, honestly. It won't take long. I've almost everything here. How would steak and mushrooms go?"

"Fine," he applauded. "Here let me pay for the stuff." He tried to put some bills in her hand.

"Oh, this is my party," she decreed. "You've bought me a million meals, honey. Now I'm entertaining."

"Now Molly," he protested, "you can't buy groceries when I'm around."

He took her hand, and forced a note between her fingers. "You may be rolling in wealth, but you can't buy your old beau his groceries. Say, Molly, how much do you suppose I've saved since I've been in New York?" He grinned ruefully. "Honestly there's no such thing as saving."

"Oh, I don't know. Five hundred?" she guessed.

"A hundred and twenty," he confessed.

"That's exactly what Claudia Cabot's wedding banquet cost," remarked Molly.

Jack flushed. But he did not add that he had also met the last installment on the white and shining little diamond that was lost in the mud and slime of the pond in the Gardens. Molly, he reflected, seemed to have forgotten. She was bustling about prettily. Heaping cushions on the sofa for his comfort. Drawing up a lamp and smoking stand.

"There!" she said. "The magazines are on the floor, and I've some new books on the lowest shelf. They come into the office to be reviewed, and I've been begging them to let me do some reviewing myself. Next Saturday I'm to have a column on the book page."

"You're too darn smart," he reproved lovingly. "No wonder you don't want to marry me."

"But I do!" she cried, and kissed him swiftly.

She surveyed the luxury of her little apartment complacently.

"And I love nice things!" she breathed. "Really Jack, I couldn't bear to be poor. Could you? I think too severe a strain on love, I think you see I know lots more about life and love than I used to."

"You and Life!" he bantered.

First she went to the market of the corner. A pound and a half of sirloin, with the bone cut out—Jack must be starved. Mushroom and tomatoes, and some big Bermuda onions. A bunch of celery with a package of cream cheese, a bit of Roquefort and taste of emmentaler, to stuff it. Endive for a salad. Oh, yes—and a jar of cream.

There was a man standing on the corner, when Molly left the store. She had noticed him before when she came out of the apartment. A short, dark, dirty-looking person, with pock marks on his face.

On the corner was a woman's exchange, where they sold little warm rolls, and delicious sweets. Molly seldom went there, since fresh bread and pastries, as everybody knows, are awfully fattening.

"I'll tell Jack I made them myself," she thought. "He'll never know the difference."

Smiling, she hurried up the street. The dirty-looking person spit generously, and trotted along.

"Now I'll get some flowers for the table," she decided. "It will be nice to have everything very companyish."

The man with the pock marks was surely following her! Out of the corner of her eye, she saw him shift his position, lounging awkwardly, his hands in his pockets.

She darted into a drug store and slipped into a telephone booth near the door. From there she could watch through the window. She opened her bag, and pretended to be fumbling for change.

The man had stopped stupidly and was looking about. Yes, surely he was following her. For the moment he seemed to have lost her.

"I'll telephone the apartment," she thought, "and ask Jack to come and meet me."

She found a nickel and dropped it in the slot. But when the operator said, "Number please," she remembered an old serial movie called "Perils of Pauline," that pictured the lurid and impossible exploits of a girl reporter.

"I'm acting like a girl in a movie," she told herself sternly. "It's broad daylight, and there's nothing to be afraid of. That man's just feeble-minded."

He had turned now, and was walking back toward the apartment, peering from left to right like a silly person.

Molly left the drug store, and hurried toward the florist's, deciding to return on the farthest side of the street. If the man had not passed the apartment by that time, she would run as fast as she could. Then surely she would have across the drug store," the man was saying.

"Oh, yes, I know. Thank you. It wasn't important, though. I guess I won't bother."

Molly gathered her parcels again. Later the florist's clerk to remember that a young lady in green had bought some flowers and returned to ask if she might use her color scheme. She would use her green linen cover, that showed off the buttercup yellow china so effectively. Calendula with nigelle would be lovely in her low black bowl. Besides, she could scarcely stand the odor of roses or carnations today. They were so fearfully funereal. She wondered if the smell of them would always remind her of Ruth and that ghastly brown-earth grave.

"Never mind doing them up," she told the florist. "I can carry them that way."

She shifted the boxes, and took the nosegay in her hand.

Down the street lingered the short, sinister figure. Now Molly was thoroughly frightened. She returned to the flower show, determined to call Jack. But the telephone was out of order. She thought of asking the salesman if he would walk down the street with her. But in a second she had discarded the idea. He would think she was awfully silly. Besides, he wouldn't want to leave the store alone.

Sees 80 Miles Per Gallon by 1939

Within ten years, automobiles will safely travel a hundred miles an hour, weigh less than a thousand pounds, sell for less than a thousand dollars, and cover 80 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

That is the prophecy of Charles F. Kettering, president of the General Motors Research Corporation, and inventor of the self-starter and many other automobile improvements. The pressure of airplane competition will bring this about, he asserts.

"Lightness of construction is one of the things we have learned from the airplane," he says in an interview with Henry Morton Robinson in the September issue of Popular Science Monthly. "Until 1920, we used to boast of how heavy our cars were. Now a chief selling point is how light they are. Aluminum, lyrite and invar all came in to automobile construction by way of the airplane. And right now we are perfecting for commercial purposes a new metal 15 times stronger than nickle steel, yet only one-third as heavy as aluminum. We figure we can allow about four a plane or a car!"

Light weight and improved methods of carburetion are going to double the mileage we can get on a gallon of gasoline. I also believe that many parts will be eliminated on the automobile of the future. The whole method of gear shifting is undergoing a series of changes right now—changes that eventually will do away with the cumbersome lever. Shifting, braking and possibly steering eventually will be a part of the electrical system.

Body design is due for marked changes, also. We are only beginning to learn the possibilities of the stream-line body in reducing wind resistance. Major Seagrave never could have made his recent record unless he had thoroughly understood the science of streamlining.

"As far as I can see—and I am taking a long look into the future—the automobile and the airplane will never conflict. Instead, they'll complement each other—and inside of another ten years it'll be a wise man indeed who can tell, whether blindfolded, whether he is riding in figure we can allow about four a plane or a car!"

LUBBOCK—Work under way on five-story addition to Hotel Lubbock.

TULLOS BROS. Dyers and Cleaners.

Gordon HOSIERY

The Gordon Narrow Heel—like all Gordon Hosiery—has been designed with artistry and science to beautify the natural ankle. It reflects so subtly the narrow heel that Fashion has ordained for shoes.

And the Gordon V-Line carries the charming V-shaped shadows that are based on the natural shadows in the bare ankle.

And the new Gordon colors... not only the costume but the woman herself is considered! They are planned to match skin tones whether pale or sun-tanned—distinctly a modern note in colors. And you will find a particular shade for every occasion.
