Northwestern Tip of India Presents One of Great Britain's Most Serious Problems

By WEBB MILLER
United Press Staff Correspondent
PESHAWAR, India, June 9.—The British government is engaged, in the northwestern tip of India, with one of its most serious Indian problems of the present time.

The persistent raids of the Afridi tribesmen, which extended last week even to the outskirts of Peshawar, the guardian city of Khyber Pass, present far more serious immediate possibilities than the passive resistance campaign which is going on simultaneously in more southern sections of India.

There is no question of non-violence here. The government must deal with one of the fiercest of fighting tribes, which has never been completely dominated. Fighting, killing and looting are the principal occupations of the Afridis.

Estimated to number 25,000 fighting men armed with modern rifles, the Afridis fight partly for love of fighting, partly for religious and political reasons, and partly for loot. Since 1929, when the British first came into contact with them, the Afridis have continued their operations. They occupy a mountainous country so difficult to reach, conquer or administer that neither the government of India nor the government of Afghanistan has found it practicable to rule them, although their strongholds are within sight of Peshawar across the sun-baked, flat plains in the direction of Afghanistan.

On the right and left of the Afridi country are the unruly Swat and Waziristan tribes, making a total of about 200,000 fighting men ready to become hostile at the slightest chance of successful outbreak.

It was these Afridis who pushed boldly across the plains and attempted on Wednesday and Thursday to attack Peshawar, a walled native city of 80,000 dominated by a huge fort manned by strong forces of British troops and the easternmost of European section of the city containing perhaps 10,000 or 15,000 inhabitants. The contention is surrounded by barbed wire entanglements.

A small vanguard actually reached the outer gardens south of the city, but the main body was attacked by British and Gurkha troops and airplanes, being driven back with casualties estimated at from 50 to 100.

The British losses were three borderers killed, several Gurkhas killed and a few wounded.

Thursday morning a column drove the tribesmen from the area between the Bara and Kohat roads only a few miles outside the cantonment. The Afridis had felled trees, destroyed culverts, and strung several telephone wires across the roads to block pursuit.

Last night when I arrived here from Simla it was rumored a party of Afridis was still in the neighborhood. Precautions were taken to send British living outside of town to the safety of the fort. Airplanes reconnoitered this morning.

It was rumored that Jurgas (tribal meetings) were being held in the hill villages to decide whether the raids should be renewed in the near future.

The state announced ready in the case against Dave Henson and the defense announced they would be ready by the time the case was called.

Both the state and defense announced ready in the case against Pat Sellers.

The state announced ready and the defense was absent when the case against R. F. Hamit was called.

A doctor's certificate was presented showing that Mrs. Bob White was ill and unable to attend court and the case against her was continued on motion of the defense after the state had announced ready for trial.

When the case against Ernest Oglesby was called the state announced ready for trial but no defense attorney was present and the defendant was not in court. The case was passed until later in the week, when it will be called again.

Fleagle Gang Death Sentences Upheld

DENVER, Colo., June 9.—Ralph Fleagle, Howard Royston and George Abshir, members of the notorious Fleagle outlaw gang, must die on the gallows, the Colorado state supreme court ruled today.

The supreme court upheld their conviction and sentence of death in the Prowers county district court for two murders committed during the robbery of the First National bank at Lamar, in May 1928.

The execution of Fleagle was set for the week ending July 12, and those of Royston and Abshir for the week ending July 19.

6 KILLED AND TEN OTHERS ARE INJURED

Explosion Occurs in Tube Under Bed of Detroit River

DETROIT, June 9.—An explosion of dynamite 200 feet below the bed of the Detroit river buried 18 men in a tunnel today killing six and injuring 10 others. Two escaped without injury.

As the blast reverberated through the tunnel, which is being constructed by the water board, and up the shaft, the bodies of men nearest its center were hurled against the rock walls or the temporary structure of the mole.

Everyone in the tunnel was knocked down and some were partially buried beneath the rock and dirt jarred down by the blast.

Homer Abel, who was fifty feet from the dynamite charge, was knocked to the ground. When he was able to get up he raced to the tunnel head, hundreds of feet away, and up to the top where he spread the alarm.

Rescuers immediately went down the shaft. Injured were brought out first and rushed to hospitals, while all available police and firemen aided or formed a cordon to keep the curious back.

The dead, their bodies mangled by the force of the blast, were brought up wrapped in sheets. They were so badly crushed, police said, that they could not be identified immediately.

Two later died at St. Mary's hospital. The lives of four were crushed out in the underground tomb almost instantly.

The men who died at the hospital were Ellis Howe and Samuel Seabolt. Neither recovered consciousness. Their heads were almost blown off, physicians said.

The explosion occurred, police said, when a charge of dynamite, placed yesterday, was accidentally discharged.

HELEN REFUSES TO "MAKE UP" WITH CAROL

BUCHAREST, June 9.—Princess Helene whom Carol of Roumania left in 1925 when he chose the love of the sun-baked Mme. Maria Lupescu in preference to the throne, refused today to be reconciled.

The princess thereby frustrated plans of the Roumanian ministers to annul her divorce from Carol—the one step needed to restore the dynasty to its normal order after Carol's proclamation yesterday as king. It previously had been reported that she would agree to a reconciliation, if only for the purpose of preventing a split in public opinion.

Michael, the 8-year-old son of Carol and Helene, was taken immediately into the custody of his father when the latter received word of the princess' refusal. The boy who for three years sat on his country's throne became a grand duke and heir apparent when the parliament voted that the king's title had never been valid.

Today the child played with his mechanical toys in the royal nursery, glad that his father was back. To console him for the loss of the kingship, the parliament made him grand Voevod of Alba Youlia—a title said to have been taken from a Viennese musical comedy.

Alleged Riot Leaders Plead Not Guilty

CHICASHA, Ok., June 9.—Twelve alleged leaders of the riot in which a negro accused of attacking a white woman was slain, pleaded not guilty when arraigned today before U. S. Commissioner Howard C. U. S. Commissioner Howard C. Burney searched for five other alleged leaders named in information charging destruction of a national guard truck during the riot.

Round up of the leaders was started today after a negro had assaulted Dr. J. A. Anderson, named in the federal information as a mob leader. In the negro section early Sunday, Anderson was arrested when he was discharged from the hospital.

Caraway Denies He Gave Interview

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Chairman Caraway of the senate lobby committee returned to Washington today but refused to commit himself on the controversy between his committee and Bishop James Cannon, Jr. of the Methodist church, South, until he has had a chance to talk with other members of the investigating group.

Caraway denied he had given an interview at Jonesboro, Ark., after Bishop Cannon walked out on the committee, defending the Bishop's action.

Caraway denied today that he had said Cannon's action did not constitute contempt but did not deny the portion of the interview contending the committee had no authority to question the bishop about his political activities.

The next scheduled meeting of the committee is Wednesday though with Caraway back it may be held sooner.

Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, who acted as chairman during Caraway's absence said the committee was within its rights in questioning the bishop about his political activities in the 1928 campaign. Walsh also contended Cannon was in contempt of the senate for walking out on the committee last Thursday.

City Can't Restrain Drilling, Says Court

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 9.—The city apparently lost its control over drilling of oil wells on small lots within the city limits today when District Judge T. G. Chambers ruled that the city had no authority to restrain the Plains Petroleum company from drilling a well within the city limits.

The oil company had obtained an injunction restraining the city from collecting a drilling fee of $1,000 for city drilling. The city countered by restraining the company from drilling within the city.

The decision held that the company could continue drilling and did not have to obtain a permit or pay the fee. It was estimated that it will cost the city thousands of dollars to hire inspectors to regulate drilling in accordance with ordinances to protect life and property against oil well fires and wild wells. The decision removed the revenue means by denying the validity of the fee.

City officials were granted a five day extension in restraining order on drilling wells within the city limits while the case is appealed to the state supreme court.

Overloading Boat Cause of Drowning

LONGVIEW, Wash., June 9.—Overloading was the reason given today for the drowning of six men, who lost their lives while attempting to cross the Columbia river in a rowboat.

The party, consisting of three brothers named Josi, Ned Lami, and two other brothers, named Koki, started last night from Winlock, Wash., to row across the river to Walkers Island. In mid-stream the boat capsized, possibly because of the movement of one of the passengers.

Their bodies had not been recovered early today.

Tariff Bill Ready For Final Vote

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The Hawley-Smoot tariff bill was ready for a final vote in both house and senate today when the conferees between the two houses compromised upon the last rate dispute.

The bill will be reported to the senate again later today with slight alterations in the watch duties, requiring the rates on jewels from 20 to 15 cents each, and eliminating the duty of 15¢ each on dials.

The conferees' action today, it is believed, clears the way for a final vote on the bill this week in the senate and early next week in the house, if it passes the senate. Debate will begin on the modified conference report tomorrow and republican leaders hope to get an agreement to vote by Thursday or Friday in the primaries this year.

Callahan Farmers Plant Good Seed

PUTNAM, June 9.—The farmers of Callahan county are becoming more interested in planting good seed than ever before. With the co-operation of the bank at this place and the business men of the town of Putnam they have purchased and planted about 1500 bushels of staple cottonseed which, seeded about 5,000 acres in this territory. They have had a hard time getting a stand on account of insufficient moisture and the cool weather that prevailed all spring. The poor stand will likely reduce the acreage to some extent in this territory.

But Steyne really loved Judith Grim, Clarissa's chum, and asked her to be his wife. And Judith, secretly liking Steyne, spurned his advances out of loyalty to her girl friend. How this tangled situation is unraveled is told in a fascinating new serial story, "Dancing Judith."

FRIDAY, JUNE 13TH

The Husband Hunter

© 1930 BY NEA SERVICE INC. BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Natalie Converse, jealous of her husband's friendship with Bernadine Lamont, leaves him. Alan is consoled by his secretary, Phillipa West, who is seeking to make an advantageous marriage.

Natalie returns, and Alan realizes that he loves her, but the engagement that Phillipa has cleverly engineered prevents him from attempting a reconciliation. Phillipa refuses to release him.

Natalie's sister, Florence, fakes an illness to bring Alan back to his home. But Alan's chivalrous feeling for Phillipa permits her still to stand between him and Natalie.

Natalie goes to Alan's office and here meets Bernadine. Her old jealousy flares up again and she quarrels bitterly with Alan. The next day Natalie comes to the office to plead for forgiveness, but Alan is out. He telephones and Phillipa does not tell him that Natalie is there. Natalie leaves in despair.

Phillipa, fearful Alan's anger will not endure, uses a letter from Bernadine in a plot to discredit Natalie. She changes the name of a stock Bernadine wants to buy to one that is worthless. Bernadine comes to the office after the order has gone through and discovers the change that has been made in the letter. Suspicion, directed by Phillipa, points to Natalie. Alan believes her guilty.

Natalie is stricken to utter hopelessness by his accusation. Alan leaves her and goes to Bernadine to offer to repay her losses. He tells her he is through with Natalie for all time. Bernadine is worried over her little boy, Bobby's, future.

Not long after this Alan is hastily summoned to her bedside. Her death leaves him with Bobby to care for. Alan turns to Phillipa.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLIII

Alan telephoned for Phillipa and put her in charge of Bernadine's home. Nellie made no objection, being overcome with grief, and having an interest only in Bobby. Phillipa turned the boy over to her without interference, though this was against Alan's expressed wish that she herself should look after him. She had small fear of being found out, for Alan was very busy with the many matters that had to be attended to at once. And when he did come to the death-shrouded house she appeared devoted to Bobby.

This was easy for her to do, as Bobby could not be kept away from Alan when he was there. The rest of the time she occupied herself in managing the household in such a way that she was able to satisfy her curiosity in regard to much of Bernadine's private life.

The dead woman's intimate personal belongings were so much manna to her greedy spirit. She looked into every closet, chest and drawer, without a shred of compunction. She was disappointed in the jewels. "No wonder no one troubled to lock the safe," she said to herself over the imitation pearls and semi-precious stones of the costume jewelry. She had expected to find something worth while among what was left.

She knew Bernadine had had to do with Bobby's future.

Phillipa was torn two ways by her own wishes in the matter. It would be best, of course, to put him in a school, but she saw a way to use Bobby to induce Alan to open his house in Hillshire again. He had not been in it, she knew, since Natalie had closed it and sent him the keys when she went to her aunt's home in Philadelphia, where she was living to establish a legal residence.

With Bobby in the house, requiring attention, she, Phillipa, could spend much of her time in Hillshire, while she and Alan waited for his release from his marriage to Natalie.

She decided she would rather live in Hillshire than any other place she knew. After all, Alan might as well keep this house. What a fool he was anyway! She was thinking of the money he had put into Bernadine's estate to pay for the loss she had suffered through his brokerage firm.

Now it would go to Bobby. Well, that was bad enough, but she didn't want Natalie to get the Converse home and come back to Westchester. Alan said Natalie didn't want it; but she might change her mind, Phillipa reflected. If he and Bobby were living in it, then Natalie would be more definitely out of it.

For Natalie would never want to come back to Alan, Phillipa was certain. Her letter to him—Alan had let her read it—was very bitter. He had believed her dishonest and dishonorable, when the proof was not contestable.

Natalie had intimidated—her letter was written with bitterness had replaced her bewilderment—that she knew Bernadine Lamont was responsible for all her trouble. How Phillipa had smiled over that!

Natalie was sorry as soon as she sent the letter out to be dropped in the mailbox. Alan was mad. He must have been mad. She knew he was mad. She should not let him fall victim to a wicked woman's machinations without fighting to save him.

She had called out to stop Ethel, but the girl had closed the door of the room behind her, and at that instant the telephone rang. She heard Natalie's call, but she thought the telephone was more important. Besides, she had gone to her mistress many times, only to find that she was not wanted for anything. Natalie moaned and cried out frequently. It had got on Ethel's nerves.

She answered the telephone call with nervous haste. It was a wrong number call. She was tired from climbing the stairs "day n' night." She decided not to go back up to Mrs. Converse until she had mailed the letter. "Any way," she thought, "why can't she answer the phone herself, with one right there at her elbow?"

Natalie had told the maid to answer all calls downstairs, because she did not expect Alan to telephone, and she could not bear to talk with anyone else.

She heard Ethel go out with her letter—then she relaxed with a sickening weakness closing in on her.

At the end her pride had commanded her—the pride she had sought to rule. She had turned on Alan—flinging his charges back at him and her promises to free him with them, like so much dirt. She was deserting him when she knew he was losing himself in the coils of a serpent-woman.

She remembered what her sister Florence had said. She had left Alan alone for months. She had no right to ask what he had done. She should have stayed to fight for him then. Perhaps all this would never have happened. But she had given her enemy a clear field and now she was defeated.

Before Ethel returned from mailing the letter, Natalie was resigned to its reaching Alan. She felt he was hopelessly lost to her. But had she waited until she was calmer to write to him, she would not have been so cutting in what she said. She might have left a sweeter memory of herself in his mind. For it was inevitable that in time he should discover the falseness of the woman he had chosen to believe in against her, Natalie, his wife.

She turned her head in a great weariness and closed her eyes. It was done. What did it matter how it had ended? Dragging her pride in the dust would not have changed the ending. Alan belonged to Bernadine.

Natalie believed this until she read of Bernadine's death. The event was blazoned to the world on the front pages of the nation's newspapers. For Bernadine Lamont was known from coast to coast. Natalie read of the mountain of flowers and the distinguished pallbearers with amazement.

Were all the men as blind as Alan? Had no one seen behind the beautiful glitter of the woman to her soullessness?

She put down the paper and stared across her Aunt Emma's heavily laden breakfast table with an expression on her face that brought a cry of alarm from the pudgy old lady who had just taken a seat opposite her.

"For the land sake, Nattie, what's the matter with you?"

Natalie hated to be called "Nattie," but she endured it from her Aunt Emma, who had offered her a refuge which she had preferred to living at home and burdening her family with her troubles. Florence was happily enjoying her engagement to Andrew Jones. Natalie would not shadow that happiness with her own mournful presence.

"What's the matter?" her aunt repeated impatiently.

"She's dead," Natalie said tensely.

"Who's dead? Give me that paper!" She reached out a much beribboned hand and grabbed up the newspaper. "THAT woman," she squealed, for she knew what Natalie believed about Bernadine.

Natalie had been forced to tell, pestered into it. There was no living with Aunt Emma and keeping a secret if she knew you had it. But she was a kindly soul and Natalie had her deepest sympathy without the hint of a suggestion that the blame for the triangular trouble might be threefold.

She had never given Natalie advice, but she had a simple attack for difficult situations. Unless they were too difficult, when she left them entirely alone. Such Natalie's situation had seemed to her. But now it was different. The other woman was wiped out. She sighed heavily and sincerely.

Yes, she knew Natalie was unhappy, but "she kept it properly to herself. She wasn't a whiner, always complainin'." And Aunt Emma had been sure she'd get over it. She'd had a love affair of her own once and "didn't eat a thing for a week."

She broke open a hot biscuit and put a large pat of butter between the two halves. Funny how love interfered with the appetite. She was glad she was too old to be in love.

Natalie now—she looked starved. It would be a good thing for her to go home and cook for a man. Perhaps she would eat a decent meal herself once in a while. "I'll miss you," she said, with another sigh, and bit into her biscuit.

Natalie shook her head. "I'm not going back, Aunt Em," she said quietly.

"Hey?" the old lady shouted. "Not going back?"

Natalie touched the newspaper. "This," she said, "doesn't make any difference. Alan still believes that I made that change in the letter. He's mentioned there, again she touched the paper; "they were friends; he hadn't found out. I can never prove it to him now."

Aunt Emma finished her biscuit and wiped the butter off her fingers. She would honestly like to have Natalie stay on with her, but she guessed Alan would be wanting her back, and the sooner the better, for Natalie was plainly eating her heart out for him.

"Land's sake, don't be silly," she said matter-of-factly. "The poor man just got himself dazzled, hat's all. It happens to the best of 'em. I hear my friends say. It's your duty, Natalie, to go and help him now."

Calmly she reached for another biscuit, and carefully avoided looking at Natalie.

Schmeling Tapers Off His Training

ENDICOTT, N. Y., June 9.—Max Schmeling was to box only five rounds today in his next to last boxing workout in preparation for Thursday night's heavyweight championship bout with Jack Sharkey at Yankee stadium, New York.

Schmeling looked in his best condition yesterday's workout, and was outboxed by Charlie Belanger, Canadian light-heavyweight champion, and Lou Barba, Greenwich village heavyweight.

Schmeling will end training with a 4-round workout tomorrow. He will rest here Thursday, and fly to New York Thursday morning, arriving in time to weigh in at 2 p. m.

SHARKEY MAY END BOXING TODAY.

GRANGETOWN, N. Y., June 9.—Jack Sharkey may end his boxing today, Trainer Al Lacey said after Sunday's speedy workout. If Sharkey's workout is satisfactory, Lacey may decide to call off Tuesday's boxing. Sharkey boxed five rounds yesterday, using a left hook to the body to good advantage against Johnny Grosso, who went three rounds. Sharkey's handlers announced he weighed 198 and would probably be down to 196 the afternoon of the fight.

Wykoff Takes Place as Greatest Sprinter

CHICAGO, June 9.—Curley-haired Frank Wykoff, the Southern Californian, took his place today at the head of the world's greatest sprinters.

Wykoff achieved his honor last Saturday when for the second time this season he ran the hundred yard dash in 9.4 seconds and beat the greatest field of sprinters ever assembled in one race without starting blocks.

The coast star left behind him such men as George Simpson, the flashy Ohioan, Eddie Toppino, Eddie Toian, holder of the present recognized world's record of 9.5 seconds, Claude Bracey and Cy Leland. He beat Simpson by two feet.

Wykoff's performance headlined the national collegiate A. A. track and field games, a meet which saw, besides Frank's new mark, six new N. C. A. A. records broken, one world's record tied and one meet mark tied.

The world mark was tied when Steve Anderson, Washington, stepped over the 120 yard high hurdles in 14.4 seconds.

"Worth Weight in Gold," Says Breckenridge Woman

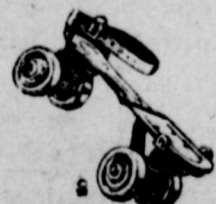

Didn't Think There Was a Medicine on Earth That Would Do Husband Good — Argotane Did.

"This medicine is worth its weight in gold and if the price was much more per bottle than it is, my husband would buy it just the same," said Mrs. Claude Johnson, who lives at 303 W. Sixth St., Breckenridge, Texas.

"My husband had been suffering for five years with constipation, dizzy spells, and pains across his back," she continued. "He was forced to take a purgative all the time and would get so dizzy he would nearly fall. I don't know what was the matter with him, but it must have been something like indigestion. He had been going down-hill for several years and it seemed like nothing he would try would do him any good. He had such a severe pain across his back, for, and never could get a good night's rest, and just felt so bad when he got up every morning he couldn't do a day's work like he wanted to."

"We saw in the papers, where Argotane had helped lots of other people who described his trouble and the first chance he had to get a bottle he started taking it. He had confidence and thought it would help him so quick. It began to feel better right from the start. It takes hold quicker than any medicine I ever saw, and seems to give you an appetite and make you feel good. I simply wouldn't take anything for what it has done for him; and it would be hard for me to figure out in dollars and cents what it has been worth in my husband's case."

Genuine Argotane may be bought in Cisco at the Dean Drug Store—Adv.

LaGuardia Gives Tips on Brewing

WASHINGTON, June 9.—A few tips on the legal aspects of home-brewing and wine-making were offered the public last night by Rep. LaGuardia. Some of them were: 1. The beverage must be made and consumed in the home, not transported. 2. The beverage may not be called wine or beer or so labeled. 3. The beverage must be "non-intoxicating in fact." But the maker as well as the government may introduce evidence on this moot point. 4. The beverage cannot be given to strangers or sold to friends. 5. Police cannot enter a home without a search warrant.

"One Big Haul" Puts Him in Pen

FORT WORTH, June 9.—A one big haul to get on his feet will cause Russell L. Kuykendall, 28, Dallas safe cracker to return to the penitentiary after nearly realizing his ambition. A carefully planned safe job on which he worked for more than nine hours as hundreds of people passed the Fred & company jewelry store, was thwarted Sunday as he was making good his escape with between $7,000 and $10,000 in money and diamonds. Diamonds from one of the packages scattered all over the sidewalk during the flight. Kuykendall is listed as an escaped convict from Huntsville, having been sent to the penitentiary in March, 1926 from Grayson county for doing the same thing that he was arrested here for Sunday.

Putnam Would Stop State Enforcement

AUSTIN, June 9.—Frank Putnam of Houston, wet candidate for governor who is here today for the meeting of the state Democratic executive committee, said that if he is elected governor state prohibition enforcement will stop in Texas. He will then pardon the 650 convicts now serving penitentiary sentences under the state enforcement law, he said.

The old line democrats apparently were in the saddle at today's meeting with the power to make the restrictions as stringent as the supreme court ruling will permit. Both were present at the committee meeting as were also Barry Miller, Tom Love, James Young, Frank Putnam, Paul Loven, and James E. Ferguson. A telegram was sent to Republican State Chairman Eugene Nolie inviting him to send a "rider" to Austin to gather up alleged "stray" from the Republican herd. CENSUS SHOWS EXODUS FROM SMALL TOWNS

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 9.—Growth of cities and decline of village communities throughout the southwest illustrate the movement from rural to urban centers, a survey by the United Press revealed today. Phenomenal gains by Dallas and Houston, Texas; Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Oklahoma; Kansas City and St. Louis, Missouri, and Omaha, Nebraska, as well as other cities in those states, were shown in census reports. The bulging of the state metropolises was accompanied by intrastate shifts, where one section gained at another's loss. Shipping which came with completion of a canal to the gulf was largely responsible for the 152,535 increase of Houston, to 290,811, maintaining its position as the first city of the Lone Star State. Dallas, a wholesale center, developed industrially, and added 102,421 to its 1920 figure of 198,976 for a total of 299,397. San Antonio, the gateway to the fruit development in the Rio Grande Valley, rose 93,183 to 254,562. Fort Worth, cattle center for west Texas, increased 54,400 to 160,891, while El Paso had 24,415 more for a total of 101,975. These five cities added over 425,000 increase to the state. Seventeen 10,000 population in Oklahoma. The 1930 returns set a dispute between Oklahoma City and Tulsa that the state capital gained 100.2 per cent, adding 91,550, 255 more than in 1920, for a total of 182,845, while the oil capital had 40,531, against 72,075 in 1920.

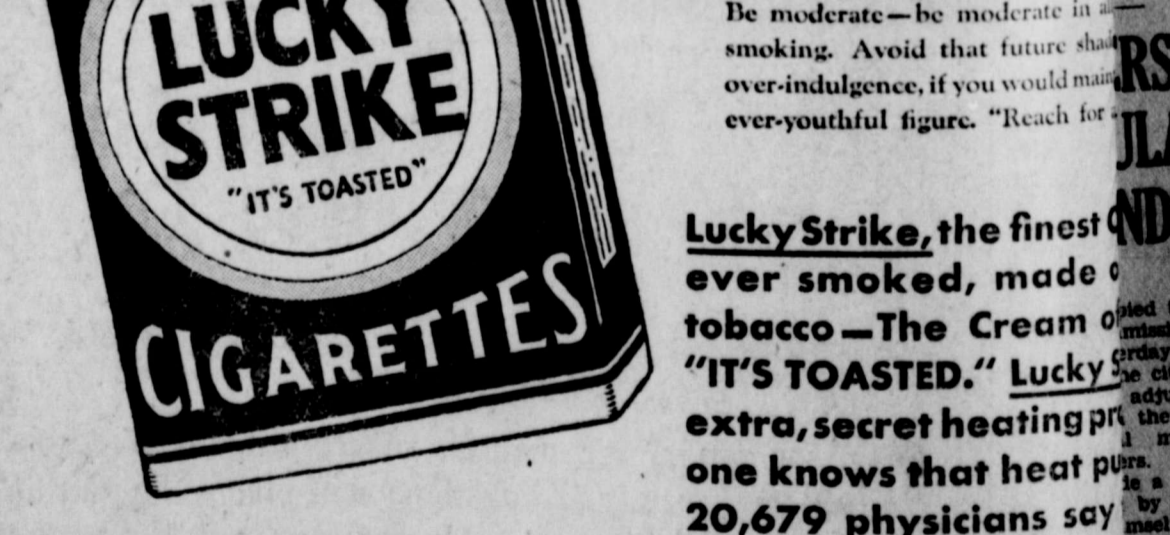

48.4 Per Cent

Jefferson City gained 48.4 per cent or 7010 for a total of 21,500. Springfield boasts 37,490 against 39,631 in 1920, a gain of 45 per cent. The capital of Kansas, Topeka, increased 28 per cent for a total of 64,005. Southeastern Kansas lost, while larger towns outside that section gained. There were declines in the rural districts of southeastern and central Kansas, while numerous western towns
