AS BYRD RETURNED FROM ANTARCTIC

CANNON PUTS NEW DARE TO REP. TINKHAM

Challenges Him to Waive Immunity for Entire Speech

WASHINGTON, June 23.—A challenge by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., to Rep. George Holden Tinkham to waive congressional immunity for his entire house speech of June 17 is the latest development in the controversy between the two men.

The Methodist bishop threw down his challenge in a public statement prepared Saturday night for publication today. It was in reply to one the Massachusetts vet issued Friday night, repeating, over his signature, a previous charge made on the house floor.

In his house speech Tinkham said, among other things, that Cannon had violated the corrupt practices act in connection with reports on funds employed in his 1928 Virginia anti-Smith campaign.

Some time ago Bishop Cannon intimated he would press charges against any one making statements about him which his attorney considers libelous.

The bishop's latest statement said: "I have read the carefully-worded statement of 135 words, purporting to be a paraphrase of the 3,000-word speech of Congressman Tinkham.

"In his speech Congressman Tinkham said: 'The statement of Bishop Cannon that he made no report of such receipts and expenditures as none was required by law was a falsehood and obviously made with the intent of not accounting for the $48,300 alleged in his telegrams of February 12, 1929, to E. C. Jameson, to have been spent in the state of Virginia.

"Again Congressman Tinkham asked whether or not any of the money received from E. C. Jameson was used by him on account of any personal indebtedness?"

"Again, Congressman Tinkham said, 'he Bishop Cannon will stand convicted in the eyes of all honest men of having appropriated that money to his own uses.'

"The above statements, and many other similar statements contained in the speech of June 17, not only do not appear, but are referred to in the 135-word purported paraphrase already appeared in the newspaper.

"As the greater part of the speech has already appeared in the newspapers as congressional privileged matter, and as some papers might not desire to republish it over his personal signature, if Congressman Tinkham desires to be held responsible for exactly what he said on the floor of the house, let him have several copies of his entire speech typewritten, signed by him personally, then sending one to me and to each of several other indicated persons, thus effectually disclaiming immunity for his entire speech as actually delivered."

World's Most Famous Baby Has Blue Eyes and Curly Hair—May Be Christened Today

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., June 23.—"Charles" it was understood today is the name selected for the son born Sunday to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Augustus Lindbergh.

What the middle name of the famed aviator's child would be was not revealed.

Lindbergh went to New York today to greet at a hotel Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, who arrived from Winchester, Va., Byrd extended congratulations on the baby's birth and Lindbergh replied with congratulations on Byrd's latest exploring achievements.

A rumor had it this afternoon that Mrs. Lindbergh was insisting on "Charles Augustus" and Lindbergh was holding out for "Charles Morrow."

Mr. and Mrs. Morrow, it was said, were not participating in the discussion.

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., June 23.—The world's most famous baby weighs 7 1/2 pounds, has blue eyes, curly hair and, as yet, only one name—Lindbergh.

The son who was born yesterday afternoon to Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh may get two more names today. When the christening is over, he is likely to be known to the world either as Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., or Dwight Morrow Lindbergh, the latter in honor of his grandfather.

Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh gave birth to the child at 3:15 p. m. yesterday—her 24th birthday—in the Morrow home here, a white house on a hill where she herself was born. One wing of the mansion had been converted into a hospital where the nurse and two specialists who attended Mrs. Lindbergh found every facility available.

Today Mrs. Lindbergh and the child were reported to be doing nicely.

Dwight W. Morrow, Mrs. Lindbergh's father, who went through his successful campaign for the republican nomination for senator from New Jersey, without once losing his calm, judicious bearing, was reported to be jubilant and excited over the birth of his first grandchild.

Lindbergh, however, apparently retained his customary calmness, and found time in the midst of the excitement to send a telegram to the New York office of the United Press, congratulating Col. Roberto Fierro, Mexican aviator, on his non-stop flight from New York to Mexico City.

All through the night and into this morning messenger boys were bearing telegrams of congratulations to the Morrow home. The messages began arriving soon after news of the baby's birth became known.

It was reported today that Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, mother of the flier, might come for a visit here to see her grandson. She is a school teacher in Detroit.

TRIAL BEGINS THIS MORNING AT EASTLAND

Selection of a Jury Expected to Be a Tedious Process

The state will ask for the death penalty in the Thomas Davis murder case now on trial in the 88th district court at Eastland it was announced this morning before the attorneys began questioning the special venire that had been called.

The court opened at 10 o'clock and the district clerk began calling the roll of veniremen. After the legal excuses were heard and those who had excused had been dismissed, Judge Elcoz then excused a few who had business excuses.

When all had been excused there were but 52 of the original venire of 150 left from which to select a jury.

The state announced that one witness was in court in another county and would be here Tuesday morning and that with the understanding that the case could be delayed until the witness got here the state was ready for trial.

R. N. Grisham, senior member of the firm of Grisham Bros., who are representing the defendant, announced that the defense was ready.

The county attorney and the defense lawyers then began the slow process of questioning and challenging the veniremen. It was thought that the jury would not be completed until tonight at the earliest, and some expressed the belief that it would be noon Tuesday before the taking of testimony would be started.

Pre-trial estimates were that it would require a day and a half to select a jury and the whole trial would consume about four days.

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., June 23.—Representative Howard, Dem., Neb., read the following resolution in the house today:

Resolved, that the speaker of the house of representatives be and is hereby earnestly requested to forthwith appear before the president of the United States and there carry in his most pleading voice the united prayers of the membership of this house from the farm states, that the president and the secretary of the treasury may be pleased to refrain from uttering any more prophetic warnings that the bewitched goddess of prosperity in her ship with silken sails is in the offing."

Howard indicated his conviction that recent declines in the price of farm products were due to optimistic prophecies of President Hoover and Secretary Mellon.

Asks Re-Election

VICTOR B. GILBERT.

Victor B. Gilbert of Cisco, is seeking re-election to the state legislature as florial representative from Eastland and Callahan counties. Mr. Gilbert is basing his appeal to the voters of the two counties upon a platform which cites experience in legislative matters, with particular reference to taxation, a subject of intimate concern to the people at this time, and his belief that counties which have voted road bonds should retain one cent of the four-cent gasoline tax now being collected by the state, to be used in retiring these bonds.

Mr. Gilbert is chairman of one and member of four very important committees of the house of representatives. He is chairman of the committee on revenue and taxation and a member of the committees on appropriations, highways and motor traffic and public lands and buildings.

His work with these committees, he cites, has given him thorough experience in matters of taxation and appropriation of taxes, has taught him how to cut out useless appropriations, to defeat harmful and promote beneficial legislation and has acquainted him thoroughly with the needs of state institutions.

Prior to entering the state legislature Mr. Gilbert was for four years county judge of Callahan county.

NO RELIEF IN TORRID WAVE IS FORECAST

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 23.—Scorching weather of the weekend gave way to normal summer in the southwest today when scattered thunder showers and slightly cooling breezes halted the climbing mercury.

KANSAS CITY, June 23.—Weather forecasters could foresee no relief today from the torrid wave which swept down on the middle west over the week end, bringing skyrocketing temperature, and much suffering among city dwellers.

Temperatures as high as 101 degrees were recorded in various cities Sunday.

Residents of the crowded portions of cities locked to the parks and highways over the week end. Theater with temperature control systems were packed. In Kansas City entire families slept in the lavias when interior of houses became unbearable.

Simmons drew a pistol, Jeanes said, and John Jeanes, in attempting to act as peacemaker, stepped between the two men and was shot.

BANKERS IN ANNUAL CONVENTION.

Chain banks and the so-called ill-effects of the former were discussed by financiers at the 28th Annual Convention of Banking held in the city of Denver.

An Arkansas banker submitted the proposal that bankers organize to reduce the acreage of farm products which are being over-produced and the plan could be accomplished, he said, by curtailing credits to farmers. He advanced the theory that the urgent need of agriculture today is not for more credit but for some method of getting farmers out of debt.

A New Orleans banker, Rudolph Hecht, characterized the development of chain banks as the most outstanding change in the financial world of modern times. He said, there are now about 270 well defined groups or chain banking systems in the United States, they comprise about 2000 banks and more than fifteen million dollars in aggregate resources and the country, therefore, is facing the necessity of deciding whether our national banking policy shall be group and branch banking.

Money is the laziest talker in the world and yet as dumb and inanimate as an over, but since the beginning of time the coin of commerce has found a way to force a solution of the problem of its activities. How to get the farmer out of debt is a bigger problem.

LEGISLATIVE CANDIDACIES.

A dozen candidates are out for the governorship of Texas, and a goodly number desire to be lieutenant governor or attorney general. In consequence, any casual observer might infer that Texas politics are characterized by spiritual controversies all down the line.

HEAT RECORD BROKEN

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 23.—A heat record of five years stand was broken here yesterday when a temperature of 101.4 degrees was recorded in mid-afternoon. It was the hottest day St. Louis has experienced since 1925 and marked the third time in five years that the mercury has climbed above the 100 degree mark.

The heat caused the death of Harvey Duncan, 28, a negro, while William Rogers, 57, was taken to the hospital after suffering from prostration. His condition is serious.

DALLAS, June 23.—Trial of 14 alleged participants in the Sherman riot several weeks ago, that ended with the destruction of the Grayson county courthouse and the burning to death of George Hughes, negro charged with criminal assault on a white woman, was continued by District Judge Charles A. Pippen today until the September term of court.

All Dallas district courts will begin the vacation season soon, at which time all juries will be dismissed for the duration of the summer months. It would be virtually impossible to try all of the cases before the closing down of courts for the summer season, Judge Pippen explained in continuing the cases.

FURIOUS FINISH PROMISED IN GOVERNOR'S CONTEST

By RAYMOND BROOKS
AUSTIN, June 23.—The fury of its finish promises to make up for the false starts, the lagging lead-off and the wobbly first half of the governor's race.

The past week has seen the principal starts reaching their stride. It saw the last of the four draft horses dropping out.

Main developments were the retirement of Lynch Davidson and Pink L. Parrish from the race; the opening by R. S. Sterling of his campaign in his first speech at Huntsville; and the trend of the withdrawing candidates who have votes with them, to get behind and support their choices among those in the race to the finish.

Lynch Davidson who received 125,000 votes four years ago when all his supporters knew he could not win, told a group of friends before he got out that if he did not run he would support Clint Small. Indication of this same purpose has been given since he declined to run. His friends believe he can swing votes that may turn the tide in a closely-drawn contest for one of the two coveted places in the run-off.

Senator Parrish, who said he hadn't been a candidate at all, declared his support for Senator Small.

Taken together, the week appeared to have been a Sterling-Small week, with both these candidates making definite strides forward.

Thomas B. Love predicted for himself that he would lead his nearest opponent 50,000 votes. He may have whistled as he talked to try to make himself believe it. Love, with his fight just on the ballot, was apparently just in that position—his fight on an issue won, and interest lagging in his fortunes thereafter. The cause for his being a central figure in the pictures was no longer.

Definite evidence of campaign weakness, even in the counties where he figured on being strong, have developed. Senator Love apparently has never fully learned that the Hoover vote of 1928 was not cast at his behest, or because he was in the movement, or as to that, for him or because of him at all. It would probably be more accurate to say that he was the agitator, rather than the leader, of the Hoover vote movement.

Less Than Before
Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson's candidacy has caused much less interest and agitation than have Ferguson races in the past. It hasn't "clicked" in the big exciting ways of the Ferguson fights of old. Unrestrained expressions in her prepared copies of speeches with respect to the courts, and her statement that "elect me and you will get two governors for the cost of one" have caused uneasiness among the Ferguson faithful and have failed to gloss over James E. Ferguson's political concern in the race.

Earl B. Mayfield seemingly has held his own following, as previously organized, during the changing and readjustment and formative alignments of the past week. He is plugging away hard, and has built up a working campaign organization in the second trenches. It probably can be said accurately that Mr. Mayfield did not benefit by the decisions of Gov. Dan Moody, Lynch Davidson and Pink Parrish to stay out of the race.

James Young and Barry Miller may be assumed to be practically at their stride, whatever it is. These views are the format of opinions, conclusions, arguments, campaign documents and general comment heard both at Austin and in a swing of 600 miles through the state during the week, sifted down by an attempt to analyze the trends of sentiment. They may be right.

Taken together, the week appeared to have been a Sterling-Small week, with both these candidates making definite strides forward.

Thomas B. Love predicted for himself that he would lead his nearest opponent 50,000 votes. He may have whistled as he talked to try to make himself believe it. Love, with his fight just on the ballot, was apparently just in that position—his fight on an issue won, and interest lagging in his fortunes thereafter. The cause for his being a central figure in the pictures was no longer.

Definite evidence of campaign weakness, even in the counties where he figured on being strong, have developed. Senator Love apparently has never fully learned that the Hoover vote of 1928 was not cast at his behest, or because he was in the movement, or as to that, for him or because of him at all. It would probably be more accurate to say that he was the agitator, rather than the leader, of the Hoover vote movement.

Less Than Before
Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson's candidacy has caused much less interest and agitation than have Ferguson races in the past. It hasn't "clicked" in the big exciting ways of the Ferguson fights of old. Unrestrained expressions in her prepared copies of speeches with respect to the courts, and her statement that "elect me and you will get two governors for the cost of one" have caused uneasiness among the Ferguson faithful and have failed to gloss over James E. Ferguson's political concern in the race.

Earl B. Mayfield seemingly has held his own following, as previously organized, during the changing and readjustment and formative alignments of the past week. He is plugging away hard, and has built up a working campaign organization in the second trenches. It probably can be said accurately that Mr. Mayfield did not benefit by the decisions of Gov. Dan Moody, Lynch Davidson and Pink Parrish to stay out of the race.

James Young and Barry Miller may be assumed to be practically at their stride, whatever it is. These views are the format of opinions, conclusions, arguments, campaign documents and general comment heard both at Austin and in a swing of 600 miles through the state during the week, sifted down by an attempt to analyze the trends of sentiment. They may be right.

By RAYMOND BROOKS
AUSTIN, June 23.—The fury of its finish promises to make up for the false starts, the lagging lead-off and the wobbly first half of the governor's race.

3-X APPEARS TO HAVE CHOSEN NEW VICTIM

NEW YORK, June 23.—While police were investigating several reports that "3-X" the maniac murderer, had been seen, the self-styled "man behind the gun" appeared to have selected another victim today and the mass of clues at hand became more confused than ever.

The third man "marked" unless he returned an "important document," Meyer Newmark of 113 E. 13th street, Brooklyn, received a letter warning him, making the date to date two murders and nine letters.

If the latest missive actually is from the same man who wrote the others, he changed his murder plans over the weekend after checking his list of "important international documents."

Saturday "3-X" informed the newspapers in a "final" note that the two murders he had committed and the warning he published, had put fear into the hearts of those "holding out" on him, allowing him to "reprieve" the persons marked for death. He said he had nothing left to do but mount his speedy flight for the Russian headquarters of the Red Diamond society, of which he was the avenging hand.

Now, it seems, Newmark has document "U. J. 4-3-44," and he'd better return it any morning between now and Saturday or suffer the consequences for "X14-31-C."

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON E. WAITE
Shawnee, Oklahoma.

N. D. Wiley, editor of the Bartlesville (Okla.) Morning Examiner, says:

That there is magic in newspaper advertising and there is no substitute for newspaper advertising, but this magical performance is not mystical. It works because it is common sense in action.

Too few merchants are using the newspaper advertising columns and availing themselves of the full cooperation of the advertising solicitors and the advertising counsel of the newspapers.

Too many merchants are holding to the idea that it pays to make it hard to get copy and depreciate the value of the cooperation offered.

The advertising solicitors and the advertising counsel of the newspapers are in reality the aides of the merchant. They are interested in his success. They usually desire to give the utmost for the money expended. They do not desire to over-sell for an advertiser and they hate like sin to run bad copy.

No solicitor who can't be trusted by the advertiser has a right to solicit, and no merchant can afford to be indifferent to the aide and counsel of the right kind of a solicitor.

Fundamentally all business is conducted alike. The matter of detail and the adaptation of these fundamentals to the particular business which is using advertising is again a matter of common sense in action.

Advertising is the life of trade, but it must begin and end in confidence. It can't begin with distrust and end in confidence.

Several heat prostrations were reported in Kansas City and other metropolitan centers where tenement dwellers were deprived of even the dubious relief from heat-laden winds.

Four persons were drowned, one died from the heat and many were prostrated as the state sweltered under the highest temperatures recorded this year.

The dead: Lester Reese, Des Moines, drowned; William Scriber, Des Moines, drowned; Martin Matz, DuBouge, drowned; Ben Craven, Fort Dodge, drowned; D. E. Wetrich, Stuart, heat victim.

Suspect Trails Lead to Powerful Gangs

CHICAGO, June 23.—The combined agencies of law enforcement hunted a suspect today in the assassination of Alfred J. Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, on trails that led toward the powerful liquor gang of George "Bugs" Moran and Joe Aiello, two of the "Big Four" in Chicago racketeering.

The suspect hunted was James "Red" Forsythe, henchman of the north-side gang leaders and branded a "potential murderer" by a circuit judge when he was arrested last year.

Convinced that Forsythe was the murderer of the reporter, the authorities seemed hesitant about advancing a motive. Reports that Lingle had refused to ask favors from a former police administration for the Moran gang were discounted by the authorities.

Sumos that Lingle paid with his life for a partnership in gangland still are part and parcel of the investigation. The Tribune editorially has said that the rumors were being investigated.

MEETING JUDITH

CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN
 COPYRIGHT 1930 BY CHELSEA HOUSE

"Judy, if Clarissa won't marry me, will you?"

Stornaway by colleagues of his struggling days.
 Max Dickbread's studio was a hazy by comparison; but then Dickbread was a genius, and would have burned every stick of furniture he possessed to make a fire to warm his hands by, if they were too cold to burn.
 "Miss Judy must see my sister's portrait," Gideon said to Stornaway, when they had finished tea, and his subtle flatteries had made the girl seethe her prickles to an all but imperceptible extent. "I should like her opinion of it."
 The artist smiled, though he might not have been pleased to have an uneducated model, whom he had called only a "common little cat," asked to pass judgment on his work. However, with perfect good grace, he led the way to the other end of the studio, and, wheeling out an easel, disclosed an unfinished canvas.
 Judy saw a foreign-looking woman who bore a certain resemblance to Bruce Gideon. She wore a low-cut black gown, and huge, pear-shaped diamonds dropped from her ears. Her skin was yellow, her eyes startlingly black. It was a very fine piece of work, Stornaway had let himself go, with subject was a great relief from the chairmen of companies and aldermen's wives.
 Judy admired it immensely, partly out of gratitude to the artist and partly because the bold, half-humorous stare and the finished assurance of the woman of the world appealed to her.
 So it was with everything during their stay at the studio, Gideon deferred to her opinions as if she were a connoisseur in art matters. When she left, he insisted on accompanying her.
 "Where can I drive you to?" he asked, as they came out by the garden gate, where his big car was waiting.
 "You can't drive me anywhere," the girl answered. "I'm going in a bus."
 "But surely you will allow me?" "I will not."
 "Then I'll walk to the bus with you."
 He made a sign to his chauffeur to stay where he was, and set off beside her. Judy looked up at his great hooked nose and fleshy, pulchre face with a kind of dislike that was half timidity—an emotion that she had never experienced before. His sheer bulk affected her; and the light in his pale eyes, once they were alone, made her put all her prickles out again.
 "You were very cruel to me the other day, Miss Judy," he said, "I don't know what you mean," she answered coldly.
 "Why, you said goodbye to me in such a final tone. I thought I was never going to see you again."
 He smiled down at her, and she shrank again from that big, grasping personality. As she would have put it, it seemed as if he had only to stretch out his hand and put her in his pocket. She had never felt her smallness before.
 "But this had been such a delightful surprise," he went on, "I see that you have changed your mind about me."
 "No, I haven't," said Judy, looking steadily in front of her.
 "Then why did you stay to tea at Stornaway's?" Gideon asked.
 "Because Mr. Stornaway asked me."
 "You know I was coming?" "I don't think it mattered one bit."
 "You are smiling."
 "You are to come and see me one day, Miss Judy, if you have wonderful taste. I have some rather nice things, too."
 "I don't know anything about them," was the tart reply. "I was only trying to please Mr. Stornaway. Old Max Dickbread would roar with laughter if he could hear you. He calls me an ignoramus."
 "Do you care for dancing?" was the next question.
 "Yes, I love it."
 "Where do you dance, if I may ask?"
 "I don't dance often—can't afford it; but now and again one of the boys gets an extra bit of cash, and treats me to the Lemon Grove."
 "What is that—a dancing club? In the Village?"
 "Yes, it's an old garage they've turned into a club. It's great fun."
 "I wish you would take me there, Miss Judy."
 "You wouldn't like it. It's no place for high hats!"
 "I assure you I'm not a high hat," Gideon said, his soft voice taking on an earnestly persuasive note. "I am deeply interested in life—in every possible kind of life."
 "But you're rich!" she objected.
 "I can't help that, I believe the most interesting things in life have nothing to do with money."
 She looked up at him with mischievously laughing lips.
 "Honor bright!"
 "Honor bright! Do you remember you said that you your friend was well again you would both come and dine with me, if it would amuse her? I want to meet her again."
 "She's got a young man now," Judy said.
 "I hope he will come, too."
 "Oh, they will be married very soon."
 "Then what will you do?"
 "Same as I did before, Mr. Punch."
 She flung the words at him as a sort of challenge.
 "It's very unkind of you to refuse to be friends," he said.
 "I don't say I do or I don't," she answered. "I don't know you at all."
 "Then give me a chance, at least."
 "Your world's not the same as mine."
 "I'd like to show you a little of it—just the bits that I think you'd like; and I want to see some of yours. Come, it's a fair exchange! Let's do a bit of exploration together—Judy and Punch!"
 She did not look as if she were listening to him. They had reached the corner of the street, and she stood still a moment. In her ears sounded another voice—a young voice, harsh and tense with pain.
 "Judy," it said, "if Clarissa won't marry me, will you?"
 And she heard herself answering:
 "No."
 Something in Alan's face and voice when she left him a little while ago made her fear that Chummy's happiness was in jeopardy. Alan had looked desperate. His heart and mind were set on Judy, and not on the girl who loved him so truly and faithfully. Judy had seen that.
 She turned to the man by her side.
 "Here's my bus," she said. "If you like, I'll dine with you tomorrow, but only me—not the others. You can call for me at 8 o'clock. I'll be downstairs."

LOVE VETERAN OF FIELD IN STATE RACE

DALLAS, June 23.—Thomas B. Love of Dallas, former assistant secretary of the U. S. treasury, former democratic national committeeman from Texas, and later leader of the Hoover forces, is the candidate for governor who might most fittingly be described as having political "it."
 He has made more political enemies and stronger political friends than any other man in Texas politics in the last quarter century.
 It was almost that long ago that his political connections in Texas began. Love in 1896, when he was but 26 years old and a Missourian, came to Texas and helped pledge the Texas delegation to the national democratic convention to support Richard P. Bland—which it did till the bitter end. Shortly afterward, Love came to Texas as a citizen. He took up his residence in Dallas. He is next heard from raising the (for that time) great sum of $20,000 as a contribution to William Jennings Bryan's campaign fund.
 Love's first Texas office was as a member of the state legislature from Dallas county, and he served through three sessions, one of which passed the Terrell election law. This law placed party affairs in Texas under strict provisions. Love's knowledge of the details of the enactment of this law was used by him in recent arguments before the state supreme court in proceedings by which he forced the state democratic executive committee, against its will, to certify him as a candidate in the democratic primary.
 Whether Love is a democrat in spite of his support of Herbert Hoover, whose successful campaign Love largely directed, is one of the big issues in the race.
 He was the original Wilson democrat in Texas. When Wilson was nominated for governor of New Jersey in 1910, Love looked two years ahead and wired: "I am for you for president in 1912." Later he called a political conference, organized Wilson supporters and helped pledge the "immortal forty" Texans who stood by Wilson and are given credit for forcing his nomination at Baltimore.
 Following his service in the Texas legislature, Love had served as state commissioner of insurance and banking and when the entry of the United States into the war caused an expansion of federal departments, he was made an assistant secretary of the treasury. In that office he disbursed $500,000,000 without a transaction being called in question.
 "Luck" as well as the political "it" that enables him to read the public pulse has been with Love. Back in 1903 as a legislator he was advocating a bill to make the street car companies furnish vestibuled platforms for the trolleyman and conductor. The bill was not going so well until the day it was set for a committee hearing.
 Before the night hearing was called a norther of great intensity swept over Texas. Austin shivered in the teeth of a winter gale. Nobody then opposed weather protection for the street car men.
 Love became democratic national committeeman from Texas in 1920. He was winner that year in sending a Texas delegation to the national convention pledged to William G. McAdoo and again fought for McAdoo at the New York convention of 1924 and was again re-elected national committeeman.
 "In 1924," Senator Love said, "my conscience told me that it was my duty to support the republican nominee for governor. I therefore resigned from the democratic national committee and worked for the election of George C. Butte." In this Love continued an opposition to James E. Ferguson that had dated back to 1918, when he came from Washington to Dallas for the express purpose of voting for former Governor W. P. Hobby.
 In 1926 Love again entered the legislature, this time as a state senator. He says this was done with the approval of then Attorney General Dan Moody, candidate for governor, with the belief that he could best help Moody's administration by coming to the senate. As a part of that Moody support in the senate he voted against ousting of the state highway commission. One vote, defeated the measure.
 In 1928 Love worked for the selection of a Texas delegation to the national democratic convention at Houston opposed to the nomination of Governor Alfred F. Smith's nomination. Cisco Woman Is Glad She Took Friend's Word

Another Texas Housewife Gains After Taking Argotane—Suffered Twelve Years.
 "After failing for twelve long years to find a medicine or treatment that would relieve my suffering, I tried Argotane and the result is my troubles are being overcome and I am gaining daily in strength," said Mrs. L. B. Coleman, who lived at 408 West Eleventh St., Cisco, Texas.
 "I was so completely run down when I commenced taking Argotane," continued Mrs. Coleman, "I hardly felt able to do my own housework. My nerves were in terrible condition and I never got a good night's sleep. I also suffered from stomach trouble, so bad that the doctors said I had an ulcer of the stomach. Almost everything I ate would sour and cause me to be perfectly miserable for hours at a time. I was bilious nearly all the time and would often have headaches. The different medicines and treatment didn't do me any good at all, and I just had to suffer from year to year without getting any relief.
 "I was very much discouraged over my condition for I really thought that I never would find anything to overcome my troubles. Just when I was feeling my worst a relative of mine came to see me and told me about Argotane, and advised me to give it a trial. I finally decided to take my kinsman's advice, and it was the best move I ever made in my life, for I commenced to improve in a short time after I began taking this wonderful medicine. I can truthfully say that it is doing me more real genuine good than anything else I have ever tried. My nervousness is leaving me, and I sleep fine every night. There was a time when I actually dreaded to see real time come, but I can hardly wait for it now, for I have a splendid appetite and everything I eat agrees with me all right. Those headaches have left me, and I am getting back my strength and energy. I am glad to have this opportunity to recommend this medicine to everybody.
 Genuine Argotane may be bought in Cisco at the Dean Drug Store—Adv.

Stribling Picks Big Italian to Win From Negro Heavyweight in Philadelphia Tonight

(Editor's Note.—Herewith is an exclusive story by W. L. (Young) Stribling, heavyweight boxer who has fought Primo Carnera twice in Europe. He picks the huge Italian to win from George Godfrey tonight in Philadelphia and in the following article tells his reasons why.)

By W. L. (Young) Stribling as told to Bert Demby United Press Staff Correspondent Copyright 1930 by United Press CHICAGO, June 23.—You can bet that Carnera is a better fighter than he is regarded as being and I think he should win over Godfrey tonight. Godfrey's lay-off has done him no good and Carnera has been fighting. I know he has been battling inferior opponents but he has probably learned a lot. Don't think he is a setup for anyone.

The Italian can fight. I met him twice when he was as green as gourd and I learned in those two meetings that someone will have to knock him out before he is out of consideration as a possible holder of the heavyweight title.

Unfortunately, both of our fights ended on fouls. I am frank to admit that the low punch I hit on the continent was low. I could not help it. Carnera is so tall that his waist is up around the chest of most of his opponents. When I lost on a foul to him it simply was a blow aimed at the stomach which landed in foul territory.

But in the fight I won from him I had him down twice and I still believe that the punches which I scored were responsible for the foul. I had him hurt, when the bell changed ending the seventh round. I turned and started for my corner. Then a charge of dynamite hit me in the back of the head. I'm frank to say that I was dazed and went down. The blow hand landed behind my ear after the bell had rung and the referee immediately disqualified Carnera and awarded me the fight.

I think he was dazed and did not know what he was doing. I'm sorry it did not go on for I think I could have won by a knockout.

HINSON HOLDS ALL-STAR TO LONE BINGLE

It takes hits to win ball games and that accounts for the fact that the Mineral Wells All-Star team couldn't win here yesterday afternoon. Hinson on the mound for the American Legion team, led the visitors to a lone bingle and Cisco won 5 to 0.

The locals collected nine hits to chalk up their victory. The visitors got one man as far as second but there their scoring threat expired hopelessly.

A fair crowd witnessed the game.

Next Sunday the local team will entertain the Hammond Oil company nine from the Hammond camp north of Eastland.

The former idol of National league baseball arrived in Dallas Sunday and within an hour appeared at the ball park where he was a spectator at the Sunday game. He was given a rousing ovation by fans at the park when his identity was learned.
