Hoover Indicates Veto of Vets' Bill

WASHINGTON, June 24.—President Hoover today denounced the pending world war veterans bill in vigorous language which indicated his intention to veto the legislation.

However, house leaders hoped to forestall this action and announced shortly after Mr. Hoover's statement that they would propose at a republican caucus tonight a promise in the form of a straight-out pension bill.

This compromise bill, presented early in the session by Representative Swick, republican, Pennsylvania, was rejected by the house when the matter of compensation first came up for consideration.

It would provide regular pensions for certain disabled veterans rather than authorize immediate recognition of compensation claims.

Mr. Hoover spoke in a forceful tone while delivering his attack upon the veterans' bill. His language and delivery indicated he was thoroughly aroused.

"The veteran bill," he said, "is bad legislation. It is no more in the interest of the veterans than it is in the interests of the taxpayers."

Describing the bill as wasteful and discriminatory, Mr. Hoover said it was a very bad thing for the government to set a standard of subterfuge for the people.

"In this problem we are dealing with sick and disabled derived from the war itself. These cases before us, except for a comparatively small number of marginal ones, are in reality men disabled from incidents of civil life since the war.

The whole matter is one that must be approached in a high sense of justice and utmost sympathy. But this veterans' bill is just bad legislation. It is no more in the interests of veterans than in the interests of the taxpayers.

The financial burdens, the amount of which has again been reaffirmed by general Hines (and they were then increased by senate amendments yesterday) do constitute a serious embarrassment to the government and to the country, but there are other objections even more serious.

"This bill selects a particular group of 75,000 to 100,000 men, makes provisions for them in the most wasteful and discriminatory way conceivable and entirely neglects the equal rights to help of over 200,000 more veterans who are likewise suffering from disabilities incurred in civil life since the war.

"Furthermore, the very basis of the bill sets up an untruthful and according to our physicians, a physically impossible presumption, and predicated its action upon this. For instance, a man who has served a few days in the army in his home town or in camp and afterwards enjoys seven to twelve years of good health, then after all that time incurs any affliction is thereby declared to have a disability.

SON OF FORMER COMPTROLLER FACES CHARGE

SAN ANTONIO, June 24.—H. B. Terrell, son of former comptroller Henry B. Terrell, was free on bond and facing an assault to murder charge today as the result of an altercation Sunday night at the home of his sister, Miss Alta Terrell, the complainant.

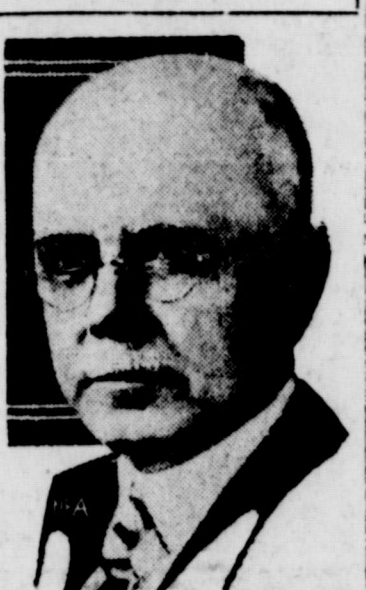

The charge was filed late yesterday in justice court and revealed only today. It was also learned that city detectives were confronted with a pistol when they went to arrest Terrell Sunday night, but that he made no apparent attempt to resist arrest.

A family argument between Terrell and his sister is said to have arisen over financial matters, and Terrell was accused of slapping her with his hand. A ring on his finger on her lip. The woman ran hysterically through the neighborhood telling neighbors that her brother had attacked and beaten her, witnesses said.

Terrell is a brother of Sam Terrell, who followed his father's office as comptroller of the city and was believed likely that enough house republicans would join the minority to carry the issue.

Bogger.—Roads leading out of the city improved.

ility due to the war and is to be compensated or pensioned on the same basis as the man who suffered in the trenches from actual battle.

"It contains many other discriminations and injustices.

"These things violate not only the fact but the very integrity of government. It is a sad thing for our government to set standards of subterfuge to our people.

"It is unfair to all other veterans who have become disabled in civil life. It is unfair to the whole spirit of the world war veterans.

"There are emergency and marginal cases which I have insisted should be cared for and which will be cared for. There is the additional necessity for us to study the broader subject exhaustively before we plunge.

For Emergencies

The American Legion presented a bill designed for emergencies which had had the earnest support of many administration members, but their views have been overridden. The sensible thing is either take care of these emergencies on marginal cases and then soberly determine future action, or, alternatively, to make the beginning of sound action now on such foundations as will contribute to the ultimate settlement of the problem with real justice to veterans and with generosity in solution for the future. Such action can be taken within our present financial resources and I believe the nation would support that."

In a subsequent statement, Brigadier General Hines, director of the veterans bureau, said his estimates of the cost of the bill were conservative and that senate amendments open the way for large additional costs.

Removal of the word "active" preceding the word "tuberculosis" in section 10 of the bill opens the way for very large additional costs he said.

If the bill is passed and vetoed it is considered practically certain both houses will pass it over Mr. Hoover's veto. The direct purpose of the compromise plans of house leaders is to avert if possible, such an embarrassment to the administration.

There was considerable doubt, however, that this plan would succeed as the entire democratic side of the house is certain to support the compensation bill and it was believed likely that enough house republicans would join the minority to carry the issue.

TENTATIVE BUS SCHEDULE IS ADOPTED

More Satisfactory Service In Prospect Now

Results very satisfactory to Cisco were obtained yesterday at the Mineral Wells hearing on proposed revision of bus schedules.

The hearing was attended by two members of the railroad commission, bus owners, chamber of commerce representatives and others who are interested.

The revision worked out at the hearing is tentative and subject to further changes should it become necessary. The new setup of schedules will be sent to all affected parties for study and a new hearing will be held, where such defects as will have been found to exist will be ironed out and the revision put into effect.

The setup devised by the meeting of chamber of commerce representatives of Cisco, Eastland, Ranger and Baird at Eastland prior to the hearing yesterday was not adopted as prepared but the idea behind the proposed scheme was carried out in the tentative revision in a satisfactory way.

For instance the new setup gives the section an early morning bus each way and an evening bus each way.

The tentative westbound schedule is as follows:

6:15 a. m.
11:15 a. m.
1:30 p. m.
3:30 p. m.
6:45 p. m.
9:15 p. m.

The present westbound schedule is:

3:30 a. m.
11:15 a. m.
3:00 p. m.
7:20 p. m.
8:30 p. m.

The tentative eastbound schedule is:

1:00 a. m.
8:10 a. m.
11:15 a. m.
2:10 p. m.
5:25 p. m.
8:00 p. m.

This compares with the present eastbound schedule as follows:

1:00 a. m.
8:25 a. m.
12:30 p. m.
6:10 p. m.
9:05 p. m.

Lingle Death Probe Takes New Turn

CHICAGO, June 24.—The investigation of the murder of Alfred J. Lingle, Chicago Tribune Reporter, took a new turn today with announcement of State's Attorney John A. Swanson that his office "has not overlooked conditions that existed prior to the assassination of Lingle and at the proper time I will direct an action against those responsible."

Swanson's announcement was interpreted to mean that he will investigate reports that collusion between police and public officials and gamblers brought about the murder of the reporter three weeks ago.

"The action is only being held in abeyance for the time being so as not to jeopardize a possible solution of the Lingle murder itself," the state's attorney added.

Last Man's Club Will Carry On

CHAMBERLAIN, S. D., June 24.—The Last Man's club will carry on to the end—"nothing preventing."

Charles Lockwood, 87, lone survivor of the gay civil war company that pledged itself to toast the departed comrades when all but one had gone, told the United Press today in an exclusive interview that he would redeem his promise on July 21, anniversary of the day the oath was made 45 years ago.

"Nothing preventing. I will go down to Stillwater," Lockwood said when informed that reports had been circulated that he would not keep the pledge to toast his comrades who have gone, because of the long trip to Stillwater, Minn., where the club was founded.

What plans the people of Stillwater will make were unknown to Lockwood, but he said he expected to sip a bottle of wine which was set aside nearly half a century ago for the toast to the dead.

The bottle was opened several years ago when only three veterans were still alive and it was found the wine had turned to vinegar.

Only Lockwood remains of the 34 members of the company B, first Minnesota volunteers, who gallily made the pledge to the dead on July 21, 1865. A tired man of 87 years, he went to the funeral of his last clubmate, John Coff in April.

Commission Meets Monday Afternoon

The Cisco city commission met yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the city hall. The commission spent an hour in going over bills and approving them and another hour in discussing a form letter to be mailed out to holders of city bonds and warrants explaining the local situation in response to inquiries.

With Commissioner Burnett voting negatively the commission approved the letter. Commissioner Burnett objected on the ground that the letter would commit the city to too great a degree.

A number of tax matters would be brought up for adjustment at the last of the session.

As the bandits fled they noticed Hiram Broene, merchant, standing in the doorway of his store. Without provocation witnesses said, they opened fire on him.

Handwriting experts today identified the letter received by Margalo Gilmore, theater guild actress, as written by the maniac, Miss Gilmore is believed to be the blonde mentioned by the maniac in previous letters.

G. S. WILLIAMS PIONEER CISCO CITIZEN DIES

Death 3:30 Monday Was Due to Acute Indigestion

Funeral services for Gomer S. Williams will be held tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 from the First Presbyterian church. It was announced this afternoon. The Rev. B. C. Boney, pastor of the church, will officiate. The Old Fellows will have charge of the burial in Oakwood cemetery. The active pallbearers will be: Will McCall, E. P. Crawford, W. J. Foxworth, R. W. Mancill, J. T. Anderson and Charlie Hartman.

Gomer S. Williams, 78, pioneer citizen of Cisco, died suddenly at his home yesterday following an attack of acute indigestion at his home 208 W. Fifth street. His death removed a man who for 48 years had been intimately associated with Cisco and its growth from a small village to a thriving West Texas city.

Twenty-one years of that period were spent as postmaster of Cisco prior to the Wilson administration. Mr. Williams was a life-long republican.

Funeral arrangements are being held up pending arrival of a son, John D. Williams, of Oklahoma City, who was expected to reach Cisco at noon today. Another son, Stuart L. Williams, of Pasadena, California, is expected tomorrow.

Mr. Williams appeared in splendid health until about noon yesterday. At 11 o'clock he had gone to the postoffice to mail a package. He came home complaining of not feeling well. A physician was called and after treatment Mr. Williams appeared relieved. Near mid-afternoon, however, he was stricken with a severe attack and died at 3:30.

Born in Pennsylvania

Mr. Williams was born in Scranton, Pa., July 3, 1852. He moved from Pennsylvania to Jacksboro, Texas, and then came to Cisco in 1882. September 6, 1887 he married Miss Isabella H. Evans, a Cisco girl, at Fort Worth. Mrs. Williams survives him.

Upon their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Williams moved into a new home built at 206 West Fifth street. Except for a brief period the family has resided continuously at this location. The interim was occasioned by the necessity of erecting a new home on the site after the cyclone of 1893 had demolished the former building.

Soon after removing to Cisco Mr. Williams was connected with the Cisco Furniture company, operated by Erwin Fisher, and later was with the general mercantile establishment of Patterson and Winston. He was appointed postmaster of Cisco while John Wanamaker was postmaster-general and was connected with the local post office, at intervals, for over 21 years.

He was one of the earliest members of the First Presbyterian church of Cisco.

He was also a member of the Oddfellows order. Had he lived six days longer he would have been an Oddfellow for exactly 48 years.

In addition to Mrs. Williams and their two sons, Mr. Williams is survived by one sister, Mrs. Maggie Davis, of Scranton, Pa., and three grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements are in charge of the Wippert Funeral home.

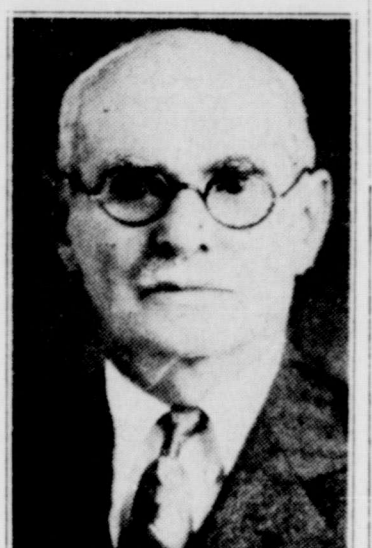

CISCO WOMAN TO BE BURIED TODAY

Mrs. Ann Williams, 67, died at her home in the Olson addition here this morning at 5:45. Funeral services will be held at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

Mrs. Williams, long time resident of Cisco, is survived by her husband, J. W. Williams, and three children: Mrs. R. S. Bean, Breckenridge; W. J. Williams, Denver, and Mrs. N. E. Bockman, Amarillo.

CLEMENCY. AUSTIN, June 24.—Forty clemency proclamations were issued today from the governor's office. There were nine furloughs, 25 extensions of existing furloughs and six restorations of citizenship.

Dies Suddenly

Gomer S. Williams, long a resident of Cisco, who died suddenly at his home 208 West Fifth street yesterday afternoon at 3:30 following an attack of acute indigestion. Mr. Williams was for 21 years, prior to the Wilson administration, postmaster of Cisco.

Prohibition Repeal Plank Agreed On

TRENTON, N. J., June 24.—After a conference lasting an hour and a half at which Dwight W. Morrow, candidate for the senate was in attendance, republican leaders came from the conference room just before noon today and indicated they had agreed upon a prohibition repeal plank for the New Jersey republican platform.

They indicated it would call for repeal of the prohibition amendment and return of control of the liquor traffic to state authorities.

The conference was preliminary to the republican state convention which convenes this afternoon. During the early morning there had been much discussion of the possibility of Franklin W. Fort, which Morrow defeated for the republican nomination for the senate, leading an effort to place a "dry" plank in the platform. It also has been reported that the leaders were planning to "straddle" the prohibition issue.

Bobbitt Replies to Ouster Criticism

AUSTIN, June 24.—Attorney General F. L. Bobbitt, returning here today, asserted that he had been offered the strength of the San Antonio-Bexar county political machine if he would refuse to file ouster suits against officials there.

Bobbitt's statement was issued in reply to criticism of ouster suits at a San Antonio mass meeting Saturday night. At that meeting it was charged that Bobbitt filed the suits for political reasons.

Bobbitt stated that "a prominent Bexar county official" visited him in his office, before the suits were filed seeking to oust Sheriff Alfonso Newton and County Tax Collector E. Neil Campbell, and that the organization would support him for attorney general. Another official, Bobbitt said, called by telephone while the Bexar county poll tax investigation was in progress and said he wanted to give him support.

Bobbitt denied that the suits were being delayed until after election. He said his department had offered to join in a request for immediate trial.

Illinois Bank Is Robbed by Bandits

NOBLE, Ills., June 24.—Four bandits held up and robbed the First National bank here of $20,000 in bonds and more than $500 in cash shortly before noon today.

The men, all unmasked, held employees of the bank at the point of drawn pistols while they scooped up the bonds and all cash in sight. They over looked several thousand dollars in currency.

JURY IN SIGHT. SAN ANTONIO, June 24.—Completion of a jury to try Ernest Young, an escaped lunatic, for the killing of J. M. Bradshaw on the night of last April 9, was in sight when court was adjourned at noon today.

At 8:40 a. m., E. S. 85, her position was calibrated by the S. S. Voiland and placed at latitude 51:08 north, longitude 25:49 west, a position some 700 (CQ) miles west of the point at which she left the Irish coast at 12:15 a. m. E. S. T.

The Southern Cross still had some 1,200 to 1,300 miles to go before making the coast of Newfoundland. At her present rate, she should reach the halfway mark shortly afternoon and might be expected to make Newfoundland late tonight or early in the morning.

NORRIS OF NEBRASKA ON THE RAGGED EDGE

Former Sen. Gilbert N. Hitchcock is a candidate for the Nebraska senate seat now held by Senator George W. Norris. Hitchcock is the democratic leader of Nebraska. He is the editor and publisher of the Omaha World-Herald, the leading democratic newspaper of his section of the country.

He gave William Jennings Bryan his first newspaper job. He was elected to the senate as a democrat and served two terms. He was the close personal friend of Woodrow Wilson and chairman of the foreign relations committee in the Wilson administration.

All the public utilities are said to be a raid against Norris. All the stand pat republicans are said to be seeking his scalp. Now Gilbert Hitchcock has filed as a candidate and his candidacy does not lighten the load of opposition that the veteran Norris is carrying or remove any of the sharp stones from his political pathway.

This is the age of big business. Big business is solidly entrenched. Big business knows what it wants. Big business has the brains and the money. Big business is developing the waste places of the world.

Big business is all powerful in the halls of legislature but the gambling craze of the millions for a period of ten years and then the financial crashes which smashed the face of things gave big business for the time being a jolt that gave eminent financiers and captains of industry a hard nut to crack.

Low priced commodities lessens the purchasing power of the masses and big business leaders realize that when the purchasing power is at a very low level something must be done to drag the ox out of the ditch.

A MEXICAN EDITOR ON THE WARPATH

A Mexican editor, publisher of the very influential La Prensa of the City of Mexico, editorially urges Mexican legislation for the American tariff act. He declares that the attitude of the United States on tariff is "blind on its insolence" and in retaliation in the Mexican government should prohibit the importation of all American products not absolutely indispensable to Mexico.

He advises that the Mexicans turn to the European markets for the automobiles, radio sets, motion pictures and machinery which they now obtain in the United States. A Canadian protest, uttered by the dean of the law school of the McGill university, should not be overlooked.

He declared a reaction to the new tariff act produced "a wave of indignation from one end of the Canadian country to the other" and is quoted as having said "the most common explanation of the new tariff is that it is a further step in the monopolization of trade on this continent and the selfish consolidation of existing American commercial predominance."

It appears that the American lawmakers gored the Mexican burro and let out some of the life blood of the Canadian ox. An American tariff act that would be hailed with joy by foreign nations and their peoples might play havoc with American industries and American wage workers.

Uncle Sam hasn't taken all the nations of the earth and their subjects under his protecting arm. He is in business for business purposes. He isn't a philanthropist and if his hat is on straight he thinks "he knows what he is doing."

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON E. WAITE
 Shawnee, Oklahoma.

W. A. Kelly, editor of the West Frankfort (Ill.) American, says: "Whatever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Not only is this true with a man, but also with a nation. What greater influence in the nation than its press? Then what a responsibility that the press of the nation shall refrain from sowing seeds of discord, of disloyalty and of selfishness.

If the sacrifice of his life made by Alfred J. Lingle to the Chicago outlaws shall awaken the press of the nation to the horror of the seed that has been sown in disrespect for law, disrespect for Christianity, disrespect for the churches of the land and the inspirational pastors of the churches then his life will not have been given in vain.

"God is not mocked; no press, no man and no people can mock God and prosper for as a man sows, so shall he also reap."

BARRY MILLER IS A STRONG SENATE FIGURE

DALLAS, June 24.—Barry Miller's two outstanding public accomplishments have been cleaning up a court docket so fast that he asked the abolition of his own judicial office, and presiding over the Texas senate six years without once having an appeal from his parliamentary ruling. One ruling was questioned. Miller left the chair to permit a vote on it and the appeal was withdrawn. Perhaps his facility as a presiding officer dates back to his first public office—page in the United States senate. That may also account for his never failing to have the Texas senate by pages executed when the senate goes into a long overtime wrangle.

For Miller knows the hardships of a poor boy. His father, Dr. Thomas Johnston Miller, had volunteered in the Confederate cause and the plantation near Barnwell, S. C., was naturally in poor condition on the Christmas day of 1864 when Barry Miller was born there. The same year his uncle, Major Philip Barry, veteran of Waterloo who had, although past 60, volunteered in the Confederate army, died. His father died when he was five. The widowed mother took him to Washington where he obtained a position in the treasury department, while his grandmother took members of congress to board at their home. Young Barry was a favorite among the congressmen and listened like a "grownup" to their political discussions.

At 16, he became printer's devil on the Washington Post and started out to be a full-fledged newspaper man. An uncle induced him, instead, to come to Texas in 1882—two years before Dallas had a railroad. He went to work there in the law office of Sawney Robertson and Henry Coke. When he was 19, the disability of minority was waived by the courts and he became a practitioner. A year later he married Miss Minnie H. Miller, whose father was the builder of "Millermore," the old county home south of Dallas where the lieutenant governor and his family now reside.

He was assistant county attorney of Dallas county under two administrations, and in 1898 ran for the state senate for the purpose of being able to vote for the late Senator Charles Culbertson. Senators then were elected by the legislature. In 1911 he was appointed judge of criminal district court at Dallas. He served 18 months and was re-elected for a four-year term, but asked the legislature to abolish the office. He had cleaned up the crowded court dockets so that the court no longer was needed. He was then elected to the house of representatives, served three terms and was elected lieutenant governor in 1924, serving three terms there. He managed the senatorial campaigns of the late Senator Charles Culbertson three times, personally stumbling the state for the senator. He and Mrs. Miller have four children: Tom B., William B., Phillip R. and Mrs. Evelyn Miller Pierce. He has just ended service as Grand Master of Texas Odd Fellows, delaying his campaign until he finished that term. He is also a Master Mason and Knight of Pythias.

The girls training school at Gainesville asks for a $50,000 dormitory $20,000 equipment, $10,000 for a gymnasium and $10,000 for a laundry and ice plant.

"REACH FOR A LUCKY INSTEAD"

Be moderate—be moderate in all things, even in smoking. Avoid that future shadow* by avoiding over-indulgence, if you would maintain that modern, ever-youthful figure. "Reach for a Lucky instead."

CONOCO'S recent victories with the celebrated new Germ-Processed oil have all been sensational in their theory-blasting results. ... And what is even more important, every fact about these victories has been verified and attested to by that great impartial body, the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association. So, when you read that Germ-Processed oil is the first really stock oil to "place" in the Indianapolis Speedway Race ... when you learn the remarkably good condition of this oil after that motor-punishing grind ... when you are advised that you can buy this same oil at your own near-by CONOCO Station, you know it's true! The AAA Contest Board says! You remember, too, how the Pike's Peak Tests disclosed such startling facts about CONOCO'S superiority as to literally upset many preconceived ideas about motor lubrication. Germ-Processed excelled three nationally known oils in the Pike's Peak Test on many vital points, particularly reducing motor wear 76.4% over the average of the three other oils! After the Pike's Peak Tests, the AAA Contest Board issued their official Test Certificate No. 2268 verifying every result which we made public. CONOCO'S chief competition at Indianapolis was specially blended castor oils unsuited for every-day driving ... oils made for racing motors. MACKINTOSH, CLAN CHARRON CHIEFTAIN, 79

INVERNESS, Scotland, June 24.—The Mackintosh of Mackintosh, chief of the Clan Charran, a confederation of 16 clans, including Mackintosh and MacPherson, celebrated his 79th birthday today. It is one of the most ancient chieftainships and is said to descend from Sheagh of Shaw, a son of Duncan Macduff, third Earl of Fife, who acquired the designation Mac-in-toch-ich, or The Thane's Son.

Although his title is The Mackintosh of Mackintosh, one addresses him simply as Mackintosh, and it is said that the only thing that makes him cross is to be addressed as "Mr. Mackintosh." His wife, however, is always addressed as "Mrs. Mackintosh," although some of the gillies and servants call her "Your Ladyship." The Mackintosh—his other names are Alfred Donald—spent today at Moy Hall, his ancient palace-like house in the center of about 250,000 acres of estate, including some of the finest grouse-shooting moors in the world. He has entertained kings and princes during the season and King George was at one time a regular visitor, even as far back as 1906, when he was Prince of Wales. The present Prince of Wales and the Duke of York have both been guests of The Mackintosh for the shooting.

Memories and legends cluster thickly around Moy Hall. It has been in possession of the Mackintoshs for nearly 600 years and has seen many bloody clan feuds. At one time it housed Bonnie Prince Charlie, the pretender to the Scottish throne, and the present Mackintosh still has in his possession Prince Charlie's blue bonnet, and the table from which he dined on the eve of the battle of Culloden.

Gone now are the days when the chieftain of the clan was all powerful, with even the right to execute, but The Mackintosh still preserves many of the old customs. He still wears the kilt and the Mackintosh tartan of red and dark blue, and his own pipe plays the bagpipes around the house in the morning and evening and in the dining room after dinner.

The Mackintosh, who is lord lieutenant and governor of the county of Inverness-shire, is the 25th chief of the Clan Mackintosh. He was born June 24, 1851, and succeeded his brother to the title in 1876.

In 1899 he married Ella Richards, only child and heiress of the late Edward Priest, Richards of Plas Newydd, Glamorganshire. The Mackintoshs celebrated their golden wedding last April 14.

Pillory Held Last Victim Century Ago

LONDON, June 24.—One hundred years ago today Peter James Buxey stretched his cramped, sore body and groaned.

He walked slowly away from the outside of Old Bailey. His pillory sentence was over.

Buxey was the last pillory prisoner of London. The instrument of punishment, popular for 1000 years, but which already was being frowned upon here, was abolished by statute seven years later.

The pillory originally was instituted to punish butchers and bakers for giving short-weight to their customers. Later its use was extended to other culprits.

The underworld knew it as "stretchneck" just as the gangsters in the United States playfully call the electric chair the "hot seat."

In extreme cases a pillory prisoner might also suffer removal of his ears, slit nose or lips and other barbarities. It was, of course, the privilege of passersby to stop and taunt the unfortunate victim.

Thus Gates was condemned to the most fearful of all pillory sentences. He had to appear each year to do a five-day sentence.

TAIHQ WIDOW 46 YEARS OLD TOMORROW

By MILES W. VAUGHAN, United Press Staff Correspondent. TOKYO, June 24.—Dowager Empress Sadako, widow of the late Emperor Taisho, will celebrate her 46th birthday tomorrow. To Japanese, however, it will be her 47th anniversary as the Japanese, in common with other Orientals, consider a child one year old at birth.

The Dowager Empress, long active in Japanese politics, owing to the illness of her husband, still keeps in active touch with affairs and is understood to be one of the closest advisers of her grandson, Emperor Hirohito. She is in good health but lives a secluded life, rarely appearing at public functions. Her Tokyo residence is in the Aoyama Higashi Gochu, or Blue Hill Eastern Palace where she maintains her own suite. She is active in the Red Cross and other welfare organizations.

Her sons Emperor Hirohito, Prince Chichibu, her presumptive, and Prince Sumi, probably will visit her tomorrow to pay their respects. Prince Takamihito, her third son, is abroad in Europe.

The Dowager Empress was born June 23, 1864, fourth daughter of the late Prince Kijyo and married the late Emperor Yoshihito—posthumously known as Emperor Taisho—May 10, 1900. Her husband was ill for many years of a brain disease and died on Christmas morning, 1926. Hirohito, who had been Prince Regent since November, 1921, immediately ascended the throne. His mother personally had supervised his education, and was said to have favored strongly his tour abroad—the first ever taken by an heir apparent to the Japanese throne. The Dowager Empress always has favored modernization of Japan and the adoption of such western customs as are suitable for the country.

Japanese generally credit the Dowager Empress for arranging the marriage of Prince Chichibu to a commoner, Miss Sasa Matsudaira, daughter of the ambassador in London. Tsuneo Matsudaira, Miss Matsudaira's father, was educated in the United States and long was a favorite of Empress Sadako before her marriage to the Prince.

Court Holds Board Exceeded Powers

MADISON, Wis., June 24.—Task of the official Wisconsin committee inspecting Texas irrigation projects had been easier today by action of the state supreme court.

The court found that the Wisconsin real estate brokers' board had exceeded its powers in denying the application of the Progress Development company, Westlake and Houston, for a license to sell Rio Grande valley land in Wisconsin.

By ordering a reconsideration of the company's application and imposing strict limitation on the board's powers, the high court hoped to avert difficulties arising from the Texas legislature's recommendation of a boycott on Wisconsin products so long as the sale of Texas land was barred here.

MEETING JUDITH

ORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN
COPYRIGHT 1930 BY CHELSEA HOUSE

The third morning she received a letter from Gideon, asking her to talk over a "business proposition."

everything at the cafe about this. It was the most mysterious fact of Chummy's condition. The "nice, handsome boy" whom she had met before her illness had evidently, in her reawakened mind, not the slightest connection with Alan Steyne. And yet, when she had dreamed of him during her illness, it had been as he was now, and not as the pallid, half-starved failure who gave up the hopeless struggle and went away.

When she thought over her evening with Bruce Gideon, Judy could find nothing amiss with it and nothing particularly in the favor.

It has already been said that she knew life, but she knew it chiefly in one respect as far as men were concerned. To her all men were alike—except the "boys" at the cafe, Bastien Dumont, Alan Steyne, and extraordinary characters like Max Dickbread and Doctor O'Shane. None of those had ever made love to her. All others had tried to, and it was the kind of love that she did not want.

But Gideon was different. He disarmed her from the beginning by his deferential attitude. He continued to consult her, to seek her opinion, to treat her as he might have treated a girl of his own world. He took her to a swell restaurant, and never saw that her clothes were out of place, or that she did not wear gloves, or that her makeup was badly put on.

Judy had resumed her likeness to a dyed narcissus, and that night she looked as gaudy and terrible as it was possible to be. She knew all that—knew it by comparing herself with the other women. There was a silence, during with their strikingly simple clothes and their sparse but splendid jewelry. She was nervous and laughed loudly. She spilled a glass of wine over the cloth—which brought three waiters to mop it up and juggle the table into order again.

But Gideon had only elaborated that idea of his that they were two friends, exploring each other's separate domain. This was his world, or a part of it. The next time they met he wanted to come to hers, to bring a glass of wine and dance at the Lemon Grove.

A day or two later she nerved herself to talk with Chummy. She had not seen Alan Steyne since she left him after luncheon to go out to Vincent Stornaway's. Chummy had come in, alert and vigorous, like the young Diana with whom Stornaway had compared her. She had been making arrangements to return to Welford's-art school and take up her painting again. A few hours spent at an easel had proved to her that neither hand nor eye nor brain had lost its craft.

Her aunt, Miss Morley, had insisted on giving her an allowance until she found her feet. It was very little, but it seemed a fortune to Chummy. She was 25, she had just come to life again, and she had such wonderful friends!

"Judy, I shall do something—I know I shall!" she cried, flinging away her battered hat and throwing out her long, thin arms in a sweeping gesture of victory.

"Have you seen Mr. Steyne today?" asked Judy, all smiles of admiring devotion. "Of course, you will be a great artist—the best of the lot!"

"Yes, I saw Alan this morning. He's gone back to Welford's too.

He's going to take up painting again.

"He says he never could paint." "That's rubbish. Of course he can!" And Chummy flushed gloriously in praise of her beloved.

"And when are you going to be married, you two?" asked Judy. Chummy's face put on the reserved look that always slightly awed her friend.

"Please don't talk about that, Judy," she said. "You see, it's still all so strange. I mean"—she paused a moment, because all her instincts were against hurting in the very faintest degree the feelings of this friend who had been her guardian angel in her time of distress—"I mean that Alan and I must get used to each other all over again."

Judy, frankly speaking, could not understand these reticences, these subtle delicacies of her friend's mind.

"But you ARE going to marry him?" she asked, her purple eyes opening wide.

"Oh, yes!" And Chummy's face glowed with soft rapture.

"You love him most awfully, don't you, Chummy darling?" There was an almost hysterical catch in Judy's voice.

The elder girl came up to her, took her hand, and held it for a moment against her own cheek. Then she spoke, and her voice was solemn.

"Judy, do you know, it's rather like a dream to me, but it seems to me that all the time was queer—and you know it was years and years—I was only living for the day when Alan came back. Of course, I didn't know it, but it was there deep down inside me. Though I loved him when he went away, I love him so much more now that I can't express it. And that's what makes me a little afraid of happiness, don't you see? It's come upon me so suddenly, even though it's so old."

There was a silence, during which Judy heard her own heart-beats.

"Darling Chummy," she said, "you're going to be the happiest girl in the world!"

"I am," answered Chummy in a low voice, and with a deep sigh.

The next evening Judy took Bruce Gideon to a dance at the Lemon Grove. She made him known to various friends. Neither Chummy nor Alan Steyne was there. Gideon did not dance, but he encouraged Judy to dance with other men.

Bastien Dumont was a faultless dancer, and the rich man watched the pair gyrating in perfect rhythm and harmony to the tunes of a wheezy but powerful phonograph between the yellow-washed walls of a large, disused garage, on which were painted rows of stiff lemon trees in full flower. The floor was excellent, the company heterogeneous. The refreshments were very poor and very high priced.

Judy wore black, and seemed to float like a little storm cloud among the multicolored figures about her, drawn largely from the foreign residents in the village.

"You love dancing, don't you?" asked Gideon, as he left the club with her, followed by the furious eyes of Dumont.

"I adore it," she replied. "And you dance like—well, I don't know what. My vocabulary fails me. Have you never thought of dancing on the stage?"

"I've done it—in a chorus; but I've never had a chance on my own. I'm too small, and I can't sing. And I've got no pull."

"I'll see to that," said Gideon in a businesslike tone. "I don't mean what you think. Dancers shouldn't sing. You shall have the best show in New York. I can arrange it. What do you say to that?"

Judy had nothing to say to Bruce Gideon's proposal just then. To begin with, she was tired to death, and in some way the evening had jarred on her. The rich man was undoubtedly as much out of place at the Lemon Grove as he had been at the Cafe Ture. It was not his behavior—it was himself. She felt that she was ungrateful, because he was very kind and obviously interested in everything around him. He was anxious to be on the friendliest terms, not only with herself, but with the little band of artists, and with Clara Jenks and the other girls Judy knew.

That was the trouble. These others responded to his advances. They ate and drank at his expense; they showed him around; but they set him apart as belonging to Judy, as an admirer out of another world whom she had picked up. They were not in the least unfriendly, but they were not very much interested—all but Bastien Dumont, who was furiously jealous, and made Judy half miserable and half angry with his darkly accusing eyes, even while she danced with him.

She and Gideon reached the doorway of her building before he had time to say anything more about the career he was suggesting for her. She bade him good night, and he asked her to think it over.

The next two days passed without incident. On the third morning she received the following letter:

Dear Miss Judy: I have been thinking over your career as a dancer. It appeals to me as a business proposition. I believe you would have an enormous success. I should like to talk it over seriously with you. Will you lunch with me at the Piccadilly Hotel at two o'clock today? Yours sincerely,
Bruce Gideon.

Judy decided to go. After all, it could do no harm to hear what he had to say. She was not enamored of her life as a model. It was very hard work, and men either made love to you or looked on you as a mere lay figure. At least, that was Judy's experience of them, with the exception of Stornaway; who seemed to be frankly friendly, for no particular reason. She adored dancing. If it was really a business proposition, there could be nothing sinister in it. She did not like Mr. Punch, but she had never been afraid of any man.

No Sanctuary for Card Playing

SAN ANTONIO, June 24.—"I'll take two" and "I'll pass" were the words floating from the pulpit of an old church on West Travis when Station Officer Bert Long stepped through the front door.

Six boys playing cards on the pulpit scooped up the "stakes" and fled through a side window as the officer entered the front door. They fled into the arms of Patrolman L. R. Parks, who was stationed outside in anticipation of such a move.

Five of the boys were lodged in the city jail and one in the county jail after they were taken to the police station. "Gambling with cards" was the charge with which they were booked.

OIL NEWS OF SOUTHWEST

Most of the locations are near the town of Blanco, Adams and Lyles, Meeks and Anderson and J. B. Dickenson et al are among those who are reported ready to drill wells.

The No. 1 Kaston of A. S. Mowbride in Kendall county is down to 700 feet. P. B. Sterling's No. 1 McCrocklin, northeast of the Berger test, is down 400 feet.

SAN ANTONIO, June 24.—Richburg No. 3, drilled by Magnolia Petroleum company, is the newest producer in the Darst creek area in Guadalupe county. It is producing between 600 and 700 barrels per day.

SAN ANTONIO, June 24.—Zapata county's first "gusher" came in Monday, flowing between 400 and 500 barrels per day after a gate valve had been installed and the well choked down. The well came in while workmen were bailing it at 1,237 feet.

Norden and Norris drilled the well in block 6, section 63. It is in the Muckleroy field.

Fliers Half Way

crossed Ireland and headed out over the ocean toward Newfoundland and possibly New York.

The plane was encountering "rather strong headwinds" but flying well when last reported today, some 300 miles off the Irish coast.

At 11:05 a. m. (5:05 a. m. EST) the Southern Cross reported by radio that she was at 53.15 north, 16.57 west.

Kingsford-Smith was accompanied on the flight—which is rated as the most hazardous in trans-Atlantic flying—by Captain John P. Saul, of the Irish Free State army air corps, pilot; M. E. Van Dyk, assistant pilot; and J. W. Stannard, radio operator.

Complete Wireless

The Southern Cross was equipped with a more complete wireless than any of its predecessors on the westward trans-Atlantic flight. Kingsford-Smith hoped to keep in touch with land stations.

The departure from Marnock differed from the start of most ocean flights. The 5,000 persons who sat up all night to watch preparations for the take-off sang folk songs and played musical instruments.

Mechanics worked calmly but rapidly putting the plane in final condition. Capt. Kingsford-Smith and his companions slept in a nearby hotel until a short while before their departure.

Before boarding the plane, Capt. Kingsford-Smith gave the United Press the following message for his friends in New York:

"I wish to greet all my good friends in New York, and I will definitely meet them after the flight, which I hope, will not last longer than 38 hours.

"I will not guarantee a non-stop flight to New York, but probably will refuel in Old Orchard, Maine, or in the air off the Maine coast.

"I am definitely certain of making the flight."

Kingsford-Smith carried as good luck tokens a cigarette case and a pound sterling note which were carried across the ocean in the German plane Bremen, the only airplane to make the westward crossing of the Atlantic.

APPEAL FILED

AUSTIN, June 24.—An appeal from a 25 year murder sentence was filed in the court of criminal appeals here today for Allen Fifer. Fifer was convicted in Kerr county of killing Mose Crawford on Dec. 24, 1929.

Foul Blow Costs Godfrey License

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—The license of George Godfrey, negro heavyweight, was revoked as a result of his foul blow against Primo Carnera last night and the Italian was suspended indefinitely because of difficulties between William Duffy, his American manager, and an inspector of the Pennsylvania Athletic commission today.

One-half of Godfrey's purse was forfeited as a fine by the commission because of the low blow in the fifth round of last night's event. Carnera was absolved of any blame in connection with the foul blow.

"Chicago" Flying After 300 Hours

CHICAGO, June 24.—Safely past its 300th hour of continuous flight, the Hunter family endurance airplane, City of Chicago, rode high over Sky Harbor airport today to escape "Humpy" air caused by heat waves.

The endurance plane completed 300 hours of constant flight at 4:40 a. m. C. D. H., today as the pilots, John and Kenneth Hunter, brothers, signalled "all's well" to three other members of the family who are aiding in the attempt to establish a refueling record for sustained flight.

"We're good for 500 hours longer," the pilots declared in a message dropped to the field shortly after midnight.
