WHY THE UNIVERSITY AMENDMENT.

Judge R. L. Batts is chairman of the board of university regents. He is a native Texan. He is a product of the university. He is proud of the university and its history.

Now why the need for enactment of the University investments amendment? Well first its adoption will assure that the school revenues from the permanent fund to the available fund will be continued after approximately the present interest rate of 3 1/2 per cent a year.

Chairman Batts has made it clear the regents plan to limit their municipal and county purchases to cities and counties of large population and diversified interests in order to assure complete safety of investment.

Skipping from prohibition to economics Professor Fisher of Yale advised the American world that it is just as easy to own a home on the installment plan as it is to buy an automobile on the installment plan.

England is an uncomfortable place for the professional crook from other lands. His reputation precedes him and he knows that he will be met the moment he leaves his ship. WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER, NIA Service Writer. WASHINGTON—No other member of the Hoover cabinet had had anywhere near as hard going as Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, who took a leave of absence from the Presidency of Leland Stanford University to become secretary of the Interior.

Considering the auspicious circumstances under which Wilbur entered political life, it all seems rather remarkable. A year and a half ago he was generally regarded as an idealist and a liberal of great ability and intellectual attainment.

But now it must be admitted that Dr. Wilbur, who as a trusted adviser has had to watch Mr. Hoover decline in popularity, is himself rated not much higher than his brother Curtis, who was secretary of the navy. Everyone in Washington has heard the story that Coolidge appointed Curtis under the impression that he was selecting Hay. Whether that was true or not it was always generally admitted that Curtis was rather a mistake, even if not exactly that kind of a mistake.

It often takes a man a long time to gain credit for successful accomplishment of a constructive program whereas it takes no time at all to get into hot water. But Dr. Wilbur may be unable to stay and reap glory. The Stanford Daily at Palo Alto, student publication, says his leave of absence from Stanford has expired, that the trustees will refuse it and that Dr. Wilbur will have to return to his old job or resign.

It Always Pays to Plan Even a Lone Home Lunch

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept.,
H. J. Heinz Company

Too often, women who are alone for the noon-day meal either neglect to eat anything, or just take a few bites of cold food and then hurry right back to their tasks. This is a serious mistake! A full noon hour of relaxation and rest—both mental and physical—is needed to avoid distressing fatigue at the close of the day. And the luncheon itself, no matter how light it may be, should include at least one hot dish.

It is amazing, too, what can be done to left-over food, in just a few minutes, to make it attractive and appetizing. Very often the refrigerator will yield a small quantity of food that requires only a bit of hasty "dressing up" to become just the dish that a busy woman requires for lunch.

Below are a number of recipes for one. Try them and see how easily they will suggest yet other ways to obtain a better noon-day meal for the woman who lunches alone!

Let us suppose you have some of these leftovers in the refrigerator:

- 1 broiled meat cake
- 1 spoon Oven Baked Beans
- 1 serving cold roast pork or veal
- 1 spoon Cooked Spaghetti
- 1 serving cold broiled or baked ham
- 1 spoon apple sauce
- 1 serving Cream of Tomato Soup
- 1 sausage cake

Now for some suggested ways to use these left-overs:

a. Meat Cake with Tomato Sauce: Pour a small can of Cream of Tomato Soup over the meat. Allow to simmer until the sauce is thick and rich, adding a few drops of onion juice and a small amount of thickening, if desired. Serve with hearts of lettuce and French or Mayonnaise Salad Dressing.

b. Oven Baked Beans with Poached Egg: Heat the beans, then place them on a slice of buttered toast, and top with a poached egg. Serve with whole wheat bread and fruit to make a well-balanced luncheon.

c. Roast Veal or Pork Salad: Chop the meat, season well with salt and pepper, and add an equal amount of shredded cabbage, or celery. Moisten with Mayonnaise Salad Dressing and use as filling for a Stuffed Tomato Salad, or mound attractively in a nest of lettuce.

d. Spaghetti with Bacon: Fry several slices of bacon until almost crisp. Drain off almost all of the fat, add a spoon of Cooked Spaghetti, and cook until the spaghetti is heated through. Serve with a green salad.

e. Scrambled Egg with Ham and Chili Sauce: Chop the ham and combine it with 1 table-spoon Chili Sauce. Add to a scrambled egg when partially cooked, and stir gently until finished.

f. Apple Sauce Betty: Arrange alternate layers of Rice Flakes and apple sauce in a serving dish and serve with cream and sugar.

g. Tomato Rabbit: Heat Tomato Soup, add a small amount of grated cheese, and allow to melt over a slow fire. Stir in 1 beaten egg. Serve on a slice of buttered toast.

h. Cuban Egg: Chop a left-over sausage cake and add to it 1 table-spoon Tomato Ketchup. Heat in a skillet, add 1 beaten egg, salt and pepper, and stir until cooked. Garnish with parsley and serve.

Demoralized Cisco Team Loses to Breckenridge Friday

ABSENCE OF TWO STARS FATAL BLOW

Disrupted Cisco 11 Unable to Stop Magness, et al

The Breckenridge Buckaroos won a football game Friday afternoon but the victory should taste exceedingly bitter in the mouths of the last year's champions. They defeated a team that represented Cisco, but it was not the team that defeated Breckenridge 77 to 0 that smashed the powerful Spur Bulldogs 20 to 0 in a wet field, that turned back the Eastland threat 26 to 0 and swept irresistibly through a Big Spring eleven which had held the Buckaroos crew to a margin of two touchdowns. It was an outfit demoralized, deprived, robbed of the mainstays of its attack and defense, the very backbone of what until last Wednesday night had been one of the most powerful and versatile elevens in state high school circles.

The root of the end of that debacle before 3,000 fans was 35 to 6. But if it had been 70 to 0 the score would not have overcome the fact of the fundamental reason for the defeat. That the Loboes, with their powerful, machine-like organization disrupted at the last moment, held the Buckaroos to a margin of four touchdowns Friday afternoon is remarkable in the face of the disaster which they received Wednesday night. The team was beaten Wednesday evening, and disgraced Friday afternoon, one Lobo supporter put it.

With Boyce Magness and Griffin, Breckenridge play parts in the Breckenridge team identical to those played by Connell and O. C. Ray, out of the Breckenridge lineup yesterday and Connell and Ray in the Cisco lineup, the situation would have been exactly reversed.

A football team cannot be built in four days. Black, substituting at center for Ray, did his best but the type of the Cisco offense calls for perfect timing at center and Black had been groomed for a guard position where he is an outstanding man. The same condition holds true in the backfield where the swift, powerful Cisco plays, calling for perfect coordination had been built around Connell. The shifts demoralized the whole system of attack. Defensively the Cisco line played well against running and driving plays, but the rearrangement threw out of adjustment at the last moment, the defense that Chapman had built up against the deadly Breckenridge passing attack. As a result the green-shirted boys got away with three losses for four.

Breckenridge on the other hand had been developing slowly but surely through the weeks, winning their games by sufficient margins, but pointing all along to the Loboes. Their defense was planned especially for the Cisco attack. Their flanks enveloped the Cisco reverses like the jaws of a pincher, closing in on the formations slowed up by inaccurate and slow snap-backs, until the Cisco backfield men were continually running into a circle of defensive Buckaroos before they could get their hands on the ball. Had Cisco had the attack which it had against other teams that it has played this season, if the team could have executed its plays with the speed and precision with which they were executed against Spur, Big Spring, and other elevens, there would have been a different story to write here. The Loboes fought with every bit of their strength Friday afternoon but their organization was gone and without organization such an eleven as Breckenridge put on the field Friday cannot be defeated, no matter how earnest may be the boys. To add to the misfortune of losing two men slated undoubtedly for all-district berths, the Cisco boys sustained other misfortunes in injuries to Steen and Cole, bulwarks in the line. Steen had to be taken from the game in the second half but Cole stuck through the contest, although seriously handicapped by a bad knee.

In the last quarter the Cisco eleven opened up with something of its accustomed power, showing conclusively that it had the stuff, if given but half a chance. For a brief period the golden-clad boys were irresistible. For the first time they marched through the Buckaroo defense, ripping the line to shreds, to carry the ball deep into Breckenridge territory. Turknett, spinning through holes in the left side of the green line, stepped brilliantly through the Breckenridge secondary on two plays that carried the ball to the 12-yard line. They were parking runs, one of them as long as Magness' most spectacular one of the evening, 24 yards. The Buckaroo defense stiffened at this point and the Ciscoans were held. But not for long. Magness, sweeping around his right end, fumbled, and McCall pounced upon the ball on the Breckenridge 22-yard line.

Chambliss stepped back and tossed a 15-yard pass to Jeter who wove through a field of Breckenridge defensive men to cross the goal line standing up. That was the brightest spot in the Cisco story and it proved that the Loboes were capable of going places and doing things if given a fair chance. The Loboes might not have beaten Breckenridge if they could have put their full strength on the field. They probably would.

BIG DAM CHATTER

The result of the Loboes disastrous game with Breckenridge demonstrates conclusively just the difference that two good men make in a team. O. C. Ray and Johnny Connell were vastly important to the Cisco team simply because they had been thoroughly drilled in the position they were to have filled. Had they been declared ineligible at the first of the season their absence from the game Friday would not have been felt to any great extent, perhaps. But after the team had been constructed with these boys as important cogs after they had played with the team until just a few days before the crucial contest, their removal from the machine disorganized the entire eleven. It was impossible to fill their places with substitutes, to reconstruct the team in four days.

The Loboes needed every bit of their strength against Breckenridge Friday. The power and precision of the Buckaroo eleven was too clearly demonstrated. There are none who saw Boyce Magness perform, none who witnessed the effective blocking and tackling of the last year's champions but who will admit that it was plain the Breckenridge team had been playing its earlier games with one thing in mind, "Beat the Loboes."

There is no use to drill men for places on a team if a coach cannot be confident that he will be permitted to use them. The state of affairs upon which this district has come is such that no coach can look ahead with any reasonable assurance that the team he is coaching will be the team that will represent his school in the final analysis. No matter how careful a mentor may be the cases against Connell and O. C. Ray demonstrate that something can be found which, coupled with prejudices, can work to the disaster of his efforts.

The district owes it to itself to see that the best within its borders emerges to represent it against the other districts of the state. The attitude of those who hold the destinies of the district in their hands appears to be directly antagonistic to this. If Cisco had been free to play its best against Breckenridge Friday, and if Cisco had lost, the Cisco people would have taken their defeat with a grin and wished luck to the Buckaroos. But as the case stands now there is a feeling of bitterness among local fans, not against Breckenridge, but against the spirit and system that governs oil belt football, hanging like a nightmare over every team that shows evidences of strength.

Coch W. B. Chapman cannot be blamed for building his team this year with Connell and Ray as important cogs. He owed it to Cisco and the team to make the best out of the material. No football critic who witnessed his team perform before the Breckenridge game can deny that he had certainly done this thing. Extreme caution had been taken to insure that every man on the team was eligible. But in spite of this the charges upheld last week struck the Lobo hopes like a thunderbolt and in one stroke undid all the splendid work that had gone on at Chesley field. And the injustice of the thing is emphasized in the fact that the two boys were not given the benefit of the doubt.

Probably the Lobo mentors should have said to Connell and Ray earlier in the season, "You are too good. We can't use you because you will probably be protested and cause the team to be wrecked." Would't that have been a fine state of affairs! Yet it would not have been unreasonable in the light of what has taken place.

Incidentally these two youngsters are the first that Cisco has ever had removed by an ineligibility ruling.

Again Cisco fans should remember that the Loboes have been beaten as they were yesterday only three times in eight years. Once by Oak Cliff in 1924, by Abilene in 1927 and by the Buckaroos this year. All of the remaining games in which they have participated have either been won or lost by fairly narrow margins. Most of them have been won by wide margins.

STIN. Oct. 25. — Bob Holliday, university regent, says the College of Mines at his home city. El Paso will get $25,000 as a scholarship fund from the Will C. Hogg estate. He stopped over here on a fly-trip to Houston to talk it over with Rep. Mike Hogg, brother of the late benefactor of the schools.

...the prison system doesn't have enough printers among its population according to Fred Horton, who is a change to get a job by taking in down at the walls. ...four or five printers to man the new plant being installed, and Horton said it will probably be necessary to train a dozen others to work in the new plant.

...one member was pressing forward with industrialization of the penitentiary colony. Chmn. W. Paddock was here working on a plan to have oil royalties do the penal institution what they do for Texas university. ...for its physical development, and lift the burden of financial worry. ...Chmn. Paddock and the prison oil land lease board are working out plans to have oil leases put on the market. ...And Mr. Lee Simmons is gathering the last of nearly two bales of cotton, which the stem is selling at 12 cents a pound, well above the open quotations on cotton.

...Chmn. W. R. Ely, successfully closing his first session as chairman of the highway commission, goes back to West Texas ready to meet the impact of an unprecedented call for construction as the federal government advances its available aid above $10,000,000. ...If the state of highway bonds now, Comr. Johnson said, it could do still more construction and cut the four-cent gasoline tax in half.

...Mr. Moore, senator from Greenville, sat for a few minutes at the table in the quiet senate chamber.

...How different it'll be in January," he mused. He will be forecasting and doing his part to hamper any economic constructive achievements in the 42nd legislature. ...One of the first bills unless congress beats Texas to it will be to provide West Texas counties with enough money to keep the farmers, hard-hit by this year's crop failure, from having to move away.

...Mr. Sterling has lost his seat," Chmn. W. R. Ely of the highway commission countered, when Ernest O. Thompson, mayor of Marilla, pointed out that the nominee for governor had expressed approval of a project to eliminate the city's worst grade crossing.

...But Ely hastened to tell the present commission is favorable to the work, if it can do it fully.

...Texas ought to have the statesmanship to solve problems like this; if it has, it should direct that statesmanship to the relief of an emergency situation among some of the farmers from the drought situation.

...This was plain talk from Arthur Love of Midland to Gov. Dan Moody in a drought conference at Austin.

...Gen. John A. Hulen, commander of the 36th division, Texas National Guard, came near mixing oil and powder here. ...He is interested in the oil production nearby; he was concerned to get good highway built to the gulf at Camp Hulen, Palacios, where the guard trains its men in annual encampment. ...and he gave thought to military matters in connection with the adjacent general's office. He is wholeheartedly behind the plan to establish a military branch R. O. T. C. unit at Camp Mabry, Austin, under supervision of the University of Texas and staffed by the war department.

...The handful of local republicans at the state capital drummed up some enthusiasm in a pep rally arranged for the campaign address here Thursday night of Col. W. E. Talbot, crusading nominee for governor.

...P. B. Walthall worked away in the board of control while Adrian Poole of El Paso was on his way here, after rumors of Mr. Poole's appointment as his successor came to a focus. ...Governor Moody, the only one who could make the report official, hadn't spoken, as Poole hastened to the capital as fast as the T. P. would bring him from his far-west home.

...There's harmony in the Brazos county legislative contingent, old and new. Speaker Barron and Mrs. Lee Bountree, who in January will succeed him, were both here on a highway project. ...Mr. Barron decided he had had enough and declined to seek re-election.

...The house will have one former speaker, in Lee Satterwhite of Odessa. ...It will have at least one former state senator, and possibly two with T. H. McGregor of Austin and former Sen. F. C. Weinst. Secuin, the democratic nominee.

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, presiding prelate, is expected to appoint a committee of 12 to investigate the charges, the nature of which have not been revealed.

The Electric Man Shows You a Delightful New Breakfast Method

"Through the use of electric toasters, waffle irons, percolators, egg boilers, electric grills and many other small appliances, the task of cooking breakfast has been made thoroughly enjoyable.

"And now, with the new Home Comfort rate, the low cost of operation adds another advantage to the electrically-prepared breakfast.

"You see, this new schedule of rates makes all service over the first 45 kilowatt-hours, for a five-room house, cost only 4c per kilowatt-hour—3c where service is also used for heating or cooking.

"Just think of the possibilities of this new rate. All the service you want to use, and yet your bill will always be quite moderate, compared with other necessities of the home.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Adventure enters the life of Celia Mitchell, 17, when she learns the father she has supposed dead is alive and wealthy. She leaves her unpretentious home in Baltimore to live in New York with her father, John Mitchell, and her aristocratic grandmother.

Margaret Rogers, Celia's mother, is now a widow, having divorced Mitchell and remarried later, Barney Shields, young newspaper photographer, is in love with the girl and before leaving Baltimore Celia promised to be loyal to his love. Mitchell asks Evelyn Parsons, beautiful widow, to introduce the girl to young people. Mrs. Parsons agrees, considering Celia a means to win Mitchell's affections though she is jealous and at once begins scheming to get rid of the girl.

She introduces Celia to Tod Jordan, fascinating but of dubious character, and does all she can to encourage this match. Lisi Duncan, socially prominent, becomes Celia's loyal friend. Mitchell learns Jordan is paying his daughter attentions and forbids her to see him. Celia offends her grandmother and the elderly Mrs. Mitchell feigns illness and departs for a rest. The girl goes to Mrs. Parsons' Long Island home for a lengthy visit. Jordan calls there frequently.

Celia visits the Mitchell home in the city and tries to learn from Martha, a trusted servant, why her parents, John and Margaret Mitchell, separated. This attempt is unsuccessful. Meanwhile, Mrs. Parsons lunches with Mitchell and he tells her he has been investigating Jordan's past.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

(CHAPTER XXXVI)

John Mitchell rested one arm on the table. He eyed his companion as he spoke slowly.

"The man's a gambler," he said. "Works the fashionable resorts, trans-Atlantic liners and any place he's likely to find real cash. I understand he has a number of moon and women of high social rank among his acquaintances—particularly women. Must be rather a slick character."

Evelyn Parsons was leaning forward. She looked astonished.

"Oh, John, how terrible! Imagine Celia becoming interested in such a—such an impostor!"

"Well, I can thank you for helping me break up that affair. Getting her out at your home was what did it. She's so busy now with tennis and fooling around the garden and getting a good healthy tan she hasn't any time left for sentimental nonsense. Of course, I don't blame the child. She doesn't know anything about the world."

"But I think this is dreadful!" Evelyn persisted. "How did you find out about this, John?"

"Through an agency. After the night of her birthday party I was worried. Wanted to be sure, and so I made an investigation. The thing took quite a little time. Jordan is shrewd enough so that he's only once gotten into legal entanglements. The people he fleeces, you understand, aren't the sort who care to rush into court or the newspapers."

"You're sure he really is as bad as you say?"

"My information is authentic. No question about it."

Mrs. Parsons was not eating.

"But how—where did Celia come to know such a man?"

"He's the one who pulled her out of the water that time she nearly drowned at the Boat Club. Must say I have to give him credit for that. You know it seems to me—er—seems to me Celia said before that she met him at your home. Could that be right, Evelyn?"

"At my home? Oh, no, John, you must be mistaken. Celia couldn't have said that. Why—ridiculous!"

Mitchell nodded.

"Probably my mistake," he said. "I don't remember very clearly. Well, now that I know this young man for what he is, you can believe me I feel lucky to have" things turn out as they have. Yes, sir, getting her into the country is what did it! Something else to thank you for, too."

Evelyn Parsons' glance was meaningful.

"If I've helped, I'm glad, but we did it together, John."

"You're a wonderful helper."

Evelyn waited. Mitchell did not speak. After a few moments the woman's azure gaze met his again.

"You're understanding, John," she said earnestly. "I feel that I can talk to you as to the one else. There's a little confession I ought to make. Then perhaps you'll see what this summer has meant to me."

There was an instant's pause and then Evelyn continued:

"Three months ago when I returned from Paris I was a broken-hearted woman. You know the happiness that Dwight and I—God bless him!—had always known. Never a cross word between us in 20 years. You understand what his passing meant to me."

She touched a handkerchief daintily to her eyes before going on. "I felt so alone! There was no one to whom I could turn. In desperation I left everything and sailed for France. Those months were miserable. I had friends, but they had gone abroad for pleasure. I kept to myself and mourned. Yes, it was a dreadful winter. I think I am fairly brave, John, but I have never been so unhappy!"

"My dear, if this hurts you, don't go on—"

"But I must, John. I want you to understand. Besides telling it to you—doesn't hurt. It helps! After I came back to New York I made a new effort to forget myself. I told myself that what was past was past and I must carry on. There were business affairs to tend to. Then you came to me—with Celia."

Evelyn paused dramatically.

"From that first night you came to see me everything has been different. I felt that here was someone who needed me. Here was something to which I could give little Celia. I was trying to make dear little Celia happy, so I gathered young people about. Their laughter and brightness were the very things I needed. Don't you see? What I've tried to do for Celia—and for you—has given me a new life. I'm alone no longer because I have—"

The noiselessly moving waiter was at Mrs. Parsons' side. He held a tray of muffins shrouded in napkins.

"Will you have a muffin, madam?"

What Evelyn Parsons would have liked to wish that tray of muffins may be guessed. The fine climax of her dramatic scene had been ruined by a plate of bakery stuff.

She looked up startled. If there was a glint of fire in her blue eyes only the waiter saw it. Then, with an effort, Evelyn controlled herself.

"No muffins," she said.

Mitchell helped himself to the hot bread and the waiter moved away.

"What you've told me is a wonderful lesson," he said slowly. "But it is more than that. It's the record of a beautiful spirit. Your love for Dwight will be enshrined in a multitude of unselfish deeds for others."

Evelyn stirred.

"Dwight," she said. Then, catching herself, she added quickly, "Oh, of course."

If this was an odd speech from a widow of 10 months Mitchell did not notice it. He was finishing his coffee. When he put down his cup he seemed to look at his companion with a new interest.

"Evelyn," he said, "you're a wonderful woman."

The luncheon was soon over. There was no opportunity for Evelyn Parsons, try as she would, to reach again the high dramatic moment which she had built up before. From personalities the conversation veered sharply to practical affairs.

It was nearly 2:30 when John Mitchell, on the curb, lifted his hat and bowed as Evelyn's motor car moved away. She had offered to leave him at his office but Mitchell said he had an engagement nearby.

Celia was watching from the window when the limousine reached Grammercy Square. She had tired of her book and began to grow anxious. Between a hero on the printed page and John Barrymore on the motion picture screen there was a world of difference, and the advantage was all with the actor. So far Celia's day in the city had been rather dull.

The car stopped. Celia called to Martha that she was leaving. Then she gathered up her sweater and books, opened the door and ran down the steps.

"Too late for what?" she asked eagerly as she stepped into the car beside Mrs. Parsons.

"The picture. You know—John Barrymore. I looked in the morning paper and found the name of the theater. It's on Forty-third street."

"Oh, I'd forgotten. Really, I think we'd better put that off until another day. We can come in any afternoon, and you see it's getting on after three o'clock now. We won't be home as it is until five."

"No, I suppose not."

Celia was not of the temperament to sulk. Nevertheless she could not hide her disappointment. It was Mrs. Parsons who had mentioned the play that morning and made the girl look forward to it. She knew, furthermore, that "coming in any afternoon" was the sort of vague plan likely not to materialize.

If Evelyn noticed that the girl was unusually quiet during the drive home she did not mention the fact. Mrs. Parsons, having embarked on a career of "making others happy," devoted her thoughts to herself. The "beautiful spirit" seemed a trifle short-tempered during the rest of the afternoon and evening.

They did not go to the country club, but had dinner at home. Afterward Celia, inspired by Martha's reminiscences, wrote a letter to her mother. Then she curled up on the davenport and became absorbed in her book.

Lisi Duncan paid an unexpected call at Larchwood next morning. She drove up wearing the loose white duck trousers, checkered shirt and beret which was her favorite hot weather costume.

"Take you on for a set of tennis!" she called to Celia as she opened the door and let herself into the house.

"Why, Lisi! Where did you come from?"

"Oh, I had a row with Kate and decided to clear out for a while. You don't know what you're spared. Celia, not having to live with a lot of low relatives! Honestly, I don't know how I stand it."

"What was the trouble?"

"This time? Oh, Kate knew I had a date last night. I wouldn't tell her who with, though, and so she got mad. She took every single pair of slippers from my shoe rack and hid them in the garage. When I got ready to put on my brocade sandals there wasn't a shoe in sight except the golf oxfords I had on. Can you imagine it? Kate had looked everything of hers up and mother's shoes won't fit me. I could have killed her!"

Lisi looked so ferocious that Celia laughed.

"What did you do?" she asked.

"Went in my bedroom slippers! Mother caught me coming in later, and didn't we have a pretty picnic! More fun at our house!"

Celia was on her way to get the racket.

"Come on," she said. "I'd love to play and it will cool you off—even if the sun is hot."

For two hours Lisi patiently batted balls over the net which Celia could return, and gave the beginner helpful instructions. At one o'clock Mrs. Parsons appeared to tell them luncheon was ready. Lisi accepted her invitation to remain. While they were eating a telephone message came for Celia. She excused herself and reappeared a moment later smiling.

"It was Tod," she said. "He's coming to take me to the races, and you're going, too, Lisi. I told him you would."

"Love to—but look at me!"

It was decided that one of Celia's dresses would serve in the emergency. Fortunately Lisi wore a pair of linen pumps and would not need to go in bedroom slippers.

Two hours later at the finish of a thrilling steeplechase a figure in front of her caught Celia's Mitchell's eye. She stared. Could it be possible? The girl leaned forward.

"Take you on for a set of tennis!" she called to Celia as she opened the door and let herself into the house.

"Why, Lisi! Where did you come from?"

"Oh, I had a row with Kate and decided to clear out for a while. You don't know what you're spared. Celia, not having to live with a lot of low relatives! Honestly, I don't know how I stand it."

"What was the trouble?"

"This time? Oh, Kate knew I had a date last night. I wouldn't tell her who with, though, and so she got mad. She took every single pair of slippers from my shoe rack and hid them in the garage. When I got ready to put on my brocade sandals there wasn't a shoe in sight except the golf oxfords I had on. Can you imagine it? Kate had looked everything of hers up and mother's shoes won't fit me. I could have killed her!"

Lisi looked so ferocious that Celia laughed.

"What did you do?" she asked.

"Went in my bedroom slippers! Mother caught me coming in later, and didn't we have a pretty picnic! More fun at our house!"

Celia was on her way to get the racket.

"Come on," she said. "I'd love to play and it will cool you off—even if the sun is hot."

For two hours Lisi patiently batted balls over the net which Celia could return, and gave the beginner helpful instructions. At one o'clock Mrs. Parsons appeared to tell them luncheon was ready. Lisi accepted her invitation to remain. While they were eating a telephone message came for Celia. She excused herself and reappeared a moment later smiling.

"It was Tod," she said. "He's coming to take me to the races, and you're going, too, Lisi. I told him you would."

"Love to—but look at me!"

It was decided that one of Celia's dresses would serve in the emergency. Fortunately Lisi wore a pair of linen pumps and would not need to go in bedroom slippers.

Two hours later at the finish of a thrilling steeplechase a figure in front of her caught Celia's Mitchell's eye. She stared. Could it be possible? The girl leaned forward.

CAPONE IS RECOGNIZED AS GANG MOGUL

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—A fugitive who never daring to leave his hideout unless under heavy guard, unable even to go to his home, Scarface Al Capone recognized by police today as the ruler of the Chicago underworld.

John Aiello and Jack Zuta claim and their once powerful gangster ally, George "Bugs" Moran, dodging from hiding place to place in fear of his life, believed Capone was near realization of his Napoleonic ambition to extend his power through the city, perhaps the nation.

Through the years of underworld strife, the officers traced the rise of Capone, whose rule was confined to the south and Cicero. They recalled names of the north side gangsters who had opposed him and that one after another, they were shot to death.

All the north side leaders had dared oppose Capone. Don O'Banion was killed in 1924, only Moran remaining and police predicted it would be long until he too would be trapped and the last menace to Capone's rule removed.

Moran was broken when seven of his gangsters were killed in the Valentine's Day massacre and he says he has never recovered.

Although they hold no hopes for the Aiello slaying of Thursday night would be solved any more than that of O'Banion or his successors, police conducted their investigations today, tracing their search for Pasquale Stasiano, better known as Al Presto, and for several Capone gangsters known to be expert gunmen.

Stepping from Presto's hideout where he had been in hiding for two weeks, was literally shot with machine gun bullets during the long enmity between him and Aiello, whose gang was said to extend throughout the country, officers concluded yesterday it was "another Capone" who disappeared just after the Thursday night and the officers thought it possible that, stepped with death himself if he did not do so, he had "tipped" Capone men as to Aiello's hideout and the probable time he would leave it.

Child in Girl's Disappearance

DETROIT, Oct. 25.—Albert Dodson, an ex-convict, was arrested today for questioning in the case of Alice "Toots" Collier, who disappeared while on an errand for her mother August 2.

Her body was found late yesterday by a hunter, in a wooded spot on the outskirts of the city. She had been strangled to death several hours after the hunter trailed over the body as it lay in twin oak trees, the girl's hair appeared at the county jail. She looked at remnants of blue and white dress that were worn when she disappeared and identified the girl through a team of her teeth.

Homicide detectives said Dodson had been from the Detroit House of Correction about the time the girl disappeared.

Text: Galatians 5:13-26.

For, brethren, ye have been called into liberty; only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another.

For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another.

This I say then, Walk in the spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh.

For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other; so that ye cannot do the things that ye would.

But if ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law.

Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these, Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness.

Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, revenge, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like; of the which I tell you before, as if I have also told you in time past, that they who do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God.

But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, Meekness, temperance; against such there is no law.

And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts.

If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit.

Let us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another, envying one another.

the situation both with regard to temperance in general and in relation to prohibition in particular are fairly well brought out in the lesson. Paul, in his letter to the Galatians is dealing with the matter of freedom and the wise use of freedom. He points out what is perfectly true, that law exists for higher ends, and that law can never be fulfilled by merely formal obedience.

The moral law is fulfilled only in the exercise of love for one's neighbor. There is a course of life, however, which may be said to be neither law-abiding nor law-defying. It is a course that is above the law—a way of life so true, so noble, so careful in its consideration for others that if everyone lived in such a way laws would not be necessary. So Paul says, "If ye are led by the spirit ye are not under the law." He does not mean by this to say that lawless people can claim privileges and exemptions for themselves on the plea that they are led by the spirit.

The Real Test

What he means, rather, is that the life that is truly in the spirit is of such a high and noble sort that the law does not affect it. The test of spiritual guidance Paul puts very definitely in the manifestation of the fruits of the spirit. These fruits of the spirit he defines as love, joy, peace, long-suffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, self-control; and against these he says, quite truly, there is no law.

There are people who seem to think that if all laws were wiped out this higher course of life would naturally be followed, and there are those who think that this higher course of life is rendered less free and noble through the fact that there are laws governing conduct. Now and again one finds a man who says that he would refrain from a certain course of action voluntarily, but as the law forbids it he feels inclined to do it. That may be a widespread psychology, but it is a wrong psychology.

Why should not a man do what he feels is best regardless of law? Not to do a thing simply because the law says that he must do it seems absurd if the thing in itself is worthy. There is a great need of seeing such matters through and of establishing a new psychology in our American life and customs. What is psychology, after all, but spiritual life and spiritual attitude?

Freedom is a matter of the spirit, and the man who is doing what he approves as right is following the course that is rendered no less right and no less noble because of any law that exists concerning the matter. To do something that the law enjoins is no less worthy because the law happens to enjoin it. This is a simple fact that is not adequately expressed and emphasized today.

Proration Order Validity Argued

AUSTIN, Oct. 25.—The validity of the state's proration oil orders is defended in a motion filed by Assistant Attorney General Dewey Lawrence in 3rd district court here today asking the court to dissolve an injunction against proration.

The temporary injunction was obtained by Dancier Oil and Refining company, attacking proration in the panhandle.

The state motion asserts that the proration order is a valid exercise of police power to prevent actual waste.

SINCERITY

This is the BANK that SERVICE is Building

MEMBER Federal Reserve SYSTEM

First National Bank

IN CISCO, TEXAS

The business of this bank is administered by men to whom banking is a life study and work. They render depositors a sincere banking service; they mean it; they are emphatic about it.

To them the enviable regard in which this bank is held, not only by those it serves, but by the community at large, is a thing of personal pride and personal honor.

And for this reason the patronage of the First National Bank has steadily increased—just as the quality of its service has been bettered month after month and year after year.

Moran Legion Post Names New Officers

MORAN, Oct. 25.—Ernest F. Pettit Post No. 343, American Legion, met Monday night October 20, for the purpose of electing officers for 1931. The following were elected:

W. O. Hunt, post commander.
 J. W. Booth, 1st vice commander.
 Jno. Pettit, 2nd vice commander.
 Carroll Anderson, adjutant.
 V. F. Pennington, chaplain.
 V. M. Hitt, sergeant-at-arms.
 Fred C. Smith, service officer.

The last named office is one established by the Legion several years after its organization. Each state now has a state service officer paid by the Veterans' bureau and each post should have a post service officer of one of its members. The duties of the ex-service officer are to help the ex-service men of the community in any business they may have with the Veterans' Bureau such as getting loans on their adjusted service certificates, filing claims for compensation or disability allowances or for hospital treatment or in case of death of a veteran to assist the dependents in cashing the adjusted service certificates and getting burial expenses, etc.

The members present Monday night decided to meet twice each month from now on, the second Monday night in each month to be the regular business meeting of the post and the fourth Monday night in each month to be a social meeting to which the wives, mothers, fathers, sisters and sweethearts of the members are invited. The purpose of this meeting is just a social get-together of the members and their families and to play games, etc. Be sure and come to these meetings and get some life in the Legion.
