Removal of Walker as Mayor of New York Is Demanded

COMMITTEE DEMAND SENT TO ROOSEVELT

ALBANY, N. Y., March 18. — Removal from office of James J. Walker, serving his second term as mayor of New York City, was demanded today on charges of incompetence and incompetence in office on investigation involving 10 departments in his administration as asked by the city affairs committee headed by a rabbi and a minister.

Franklin D. Roosevelt in Albany made public the accusation against Walker by the Rev. John Holmes and Rabbi Stephen Wise, chairman and vice-chairman, respectively, of the city affairs committee.

Roosevelt gave no intimation whether he would order an investigation of Walker's administration.

The mayor himself was a contestant away at the Palm Springs, California, estate of Samuel Untermyer, noted attorney, where he went to recuperate after illness.

Five were reported killed by a cave-in of the new tunnel being constructed for the Western Pacific Division near Keddie.

According to messages sent to officials over the railroad's telegraph from L. H. Jones, engineer in charge of the tunnel, six men were trapped in the landslide shortly before dawn. By frantic digging one was rescued alive.

Workers had hopes of finding the five alive so the digging went at full speed.

Don Burger will give a class-lesson talk on the hotel business this week.

Rogers left this morning for Dallas, Texas, to visit his daughter, J. T. Gardner. He will be gone about April 1.

Building Permits Gain in February

AUSTIN, March 18. — Building permits granted in 35 Texas cities during February amounted to $5,993,900, compared to $3,647,000 in January and $6,107,900 in February 1930, according to the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Texas.

"This increase from January to February represented a gain of 64 per cent, compared to an average seasonal increase of less than 1 per cent during this period," the Bureau's report said. "Much of the improvement is explained by the granting of permits for the construction of public utility buildings in 1930 in Dallas, but even with this factor removed, the February building total exceeded that of January by 17 per cent."

"When adjusted for changes in the cost of building materials, the permits for February, 1931, exceeded those of the corresponding month of 1930 by only a fraction."

PORTO RICANS GET AID FROM SAINT PATRICK

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, March 18.—March 17 is not kept as a "dia de fiesta" in Puerto Rico, but according to a legend this island as well as Ireland shared in the benedictions of Saint Patrick. A thousand years after he drove the snakes from the Emerald Isle he is credited with freeing Puerto Rico from a scourge of insects.

The story of Saint Patrick's intervention is told by the late Cayetano M. Colly Toste for many years the island's official historian in Porto Rican traditions and legends. According to Dr. Colly Toste about the middle of the 16th century, during a period of prolonged drought, there was a plague of plant destroying insects and ferocious ants. The latter made their way into the homes and tormented and even endangered the lives of the children. Bishop Alonzo Manso was urged by his parishioners to seek the intercession of a powerful saint to rid the island of the pest.

The bishop called a council meeting and put the matter before his associates who decided that it would be discreet and proper to draw lots to discover to what saint supplication should be made.

The names of the different saints of the church were written on slips of paper and drawn from a box. After a fervent prayer a slip was drawn and passed to Don Alonso's secretary who read in a loud voice "Saint Patrick."

Since Ireland's patron was hardly known here those present naturally gazed at each other with astonishment. They expected, the historian states, the name of Saint Joseph, or some other, well known saint.

Although they were disposed "to respect the will of heaven" when one of their number suggested that it might be well to repeat the drawing they agreed. Thereupon a slip was drawn from the box again and for the second time it read "Saint Patrick." So the congregation advised to address their prayers to Ireland's apostle. Saint Patrick's intercession was effective for there came torrential rains that ended the drought and the insect scourge.

Devotions to St. Patrick continued for about a century, the historian states, but later fell into disuse.

NOTE DEMANDS $1,252 FROM CLYDE FARMER

Callahan county officers today were investigating a case of attempted extortion in which Will Young, prosperous farmer living four miles west of Clyde, was threatened unless he left a sum of $1,252 in an old bucket at a designated spot on Young's farm. The letter received Monday demanded that the money be left Tuesday afternoon.

Young reported receipt of the letter to the sheriff's office at Baird. Some money was placed in the bucket as demanded and an officer was concealed nearby to keep watch. No effort to secure the money was made.

The note demanding the money was mailed in the train and received Monday afternoon. It was written in pencil on common writing paper and in a fairly good hand.

BRIGHTER ERA IS SEEN FOR CATTLEMEN

CORPUS CHRISTI, March 18. — Cattlemen of the United States have just emerged from the darkest decade in the history of the industry.

Charles A. Ewing, of Chicago president of the National Livestock Marketing association, told the 2,000 delegates at the 55th annual convention of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers association here today.

He predicted better conditions this year.

"The cattle industry is in need of a stable market at reasonable profit," he said. "The least production is the most profitable. The new era of the cattleman can be forwarded by cooperation against overproduction."

H. G. Boice, of Phoenix, Arizona, president of the American National Livestock association, told the delegates that his organization is attempting to do nationally what the Texas organization does for this state. F. E. Melin, Denver, secretary of the American association, also spoke.

"HOME RULE" AMENDMENT IS ENGROSSED

AUSTIN, March 18.—Representative Walter Beck's proposal for a constitutional amendment to permit home rule for counties with possible joint city-county government was engrossed by the house of representatives today by a vote of 78 to 47.

The vote leaves its ultimate fate in much doubt. To be effective it must secure 100 votes when it comes up for final action. C. A. Farmer, Ft. Worth representative opposing it, said the vote indicates ultimate defeat. Beck, also from Ft. Worth, says it is favorable and that the amendment will receive more support as it becomes better understood.

Community Dividends.

(An Editorial)

You do not judge a farmer by the number of acres he cultivates. You rate his ability by what he gets out of his acres. The man who cultivates ten may often be more prosperous than the one who cultivates fifty.

Likewise you cannot judge a community by the sum total of its commerce. You must rate its desirability upon the ratio of prosperity to the individual. There is potentially as much wealth per individual in a city of 6,000 as in a city of twenty times that number. It all depends upon the cultivation of possibilities, the realization of latent resources.

You would not feed a neighbor's dog who catches your chickens. Yet many of us are doing just that thing by supporting the business of rival cities which are robbing our own community of its substance, depriving our home institutions, and ourselves, of any hope of security.

Supporting home merchants is not a gesture of humanitarianism. It is a common-sense doctrine of personal survival. It is an investment in personal profit, not a patriotic contribution to local pride. Not aims to charity, but an economic religion sacred to the time proven truth that God helps those who help themselves.

Cisco is an institution with 6,000 stockholders. The sum total of its profits may not be so great as the sum total of the profits of a city of 200,000 but there should be but little difference in the individual dividends.

The most valuable asset Cisco has is its buying power. Its 6,000 stockholders cannot realize their rightful personal dividends if this buying power is dissipated. Every time they contribute a dollar to the business turnover of a rival city they are robbing themselves of just that much in the community dividend check. Not only that but they are weakening the security of their investment.

They are sacrificing permanency for a chimera of immediate gain. Like the man in the story book they are killing the goose that lays the golden egg.

It is not going too far to say that the person who makes his money in one town and spends it in another is living beyond his means, spending more than comes in because he is correspondingly lessening his prospect of income. The only present remedy for his indiscretion is the other sap who trades patriotism with him and spends his money in Cisco.

The chamber of commerce and other civic bodies devoted to local welfare could undertake no saner program than the fullest development of the resources that exist at present. Making available capital active is the shortest cut to overcoming economic depression.

TEXAS RURAL SECTIONS NEEDING NEW INDUSTRIES

DALLAS, March 18.—With the steady growth of crop diversification in Texas rural sections of the state are in need of many new industries to utilize agricultural raw materials, the Dallas News said today.

A survey of the state conducted by the News reveals, the paper said, that a demand has arisen for the establishment of various industries to care for the abundance of raw materials produced in Texas.

"Texas is steadily developing its agriculture and ranching," the News said. "That there should be wool scouring plants, or woolen mills in the nation's leading wool and mohair state, seems logical.

"With the steady growth of crop diversification there has arisen a demand for establishing creameries and milk processing plants, canning plants for fruits and vegetables, cotton oil mills, poultry dressing plants, meat packing establishments, sweet potato curing plants, black-eyed pea processing plants, syrup, rice, paper, flour and lumber mills, soap factories, woolen and cotton mills, peanut mills, bloom factories and other establishments using the wide variety of Texas-grown products.

Bonuses Offered: Many counties through their respective chambers of-commerce are offering substantial bonuses to bring such plants to their towns and cities assuring an abundant supply of raw materials. Others offer local private capital for investment in any needed industry.

"Development of Texas ranching and farming will be stimulated with proper extension of needful industrial enterprises. Such development should be preceded by careful surveys as to raw materials, suitable location, out-let for finished commodities and transportation facilities. They will have to be ably managed, as experience in the past has shown that many unwaranted small, and sometimes large industries, have failed because of unwise promotion, or incompetent management.

Steady Development: Texas is steadily developing its agriculture and ranching. That there should be wool scouring plants or woolen mills in the nation's leading wool and mohair state seems logical. As to more cotton mills at this time there may be some doubt, but when conditions warrant such extension may be feasible.

"Texas as the largest pecan-growing state could easily support more pecan shelling, and manufacturing plants in a vast area of Central and Southwest Texas where that nut is native.

EIGHT OTHERS ARE INJURED IN HOLOCAUST

LYNN, Mass., March 18. — Fire said by police to have started in a basement miniature golf course resulted in at least three deaths, seven injured to eight other persons and virtually destroyed the 40-year-old hotel Lenox here today.

The bodies of the day clerk and two guests had been found in the ruins at 10:30 a. m. when police and firemen still sought two guests who remained unaccounted for.

Police and firemen announced that all other 99 occupants of the hotel had been located. At first a dozen persons had been reported missing, following the $200,000 blaze.

PEOPLE ASKED TO COOPERATE WITH CENSUS

Parents and guardians whose children have not yet been enumerated in the annual scholastic census of the Cisco Independent School district, are asked to call an official of the public system and so notify the official so that the children may be included in the census.

The fullest enumeration is desired so that the local schools may secure all the state appropriations to which they are entitled. The money obtained from the state is based upon the number of scholars in the district. This year $17.50 was given to the schools for each scholar in the district and a similar appropriation is hoped for next year. For that reason every child enumerated is worth $17.50 to the schools.

PLEASANT HILL MAN SUDDENLY DEAD TUESDAY

A coroner's verdict of death by natural causes was returned by Justice of the Peace J. H. McDonald, of Cisco, this morning after an inquest into the sudden death yesterday of Jim Spillers, 64, of near Pleasant Hill, 11 miles southeast of Cisco.

Attending physicians ascribed death to heart failure.

Mr. Spillers, a bachelor, made his home with the Warner family at Pleasant Hill and with whom he had been living for some time. He owned a farm of 80 acres near by which he cultivated.

Late yesterday afternoon he left the house to go to the barn. He was found dead a short while later.

He had no known relatives. Justice McDonald conducted an inquest at 8:30 this morning.

FORMER CLERK, FACING CHARGE, KILLS HIMSELF

DALLAS, March 18. — E. Porter Barnes, former clerk C. A. Pippen's criminal court here, killed himself today at a lake he owned near Winona, Smith county, when officers appeared to arrest him in connection with the investigation of $100,000 to $150,000 in forged witness fees.

Grady Kennedy, special investigator, reported that Barnes went into another room and shot himself to death with a single charge of a shotgun when Kennedy appeared to arrest him on a charge of forgery filed in Peace Justice John Baldwin's court late yesterday.

NIGHT INDUSTRY IN NORTH CAROLINA MILLS.

American textile manufacturers are going to prohibit the employment of women and children for night work in mills and factories the country over. This at least is the program announced early in the year. North Carolina lawmakers beat them to it. Night work in industry for women under 18 years of age will be prohibited under a bill passed by the senate. It had already passed the house. The English of this is that the North Carolina lawmakers did not go all the way. They will not prohibit the employment of women over 18 for night work in the textile mills or factories of their commonwealth. It will be recalled that the late Senator F. N. Simmons, who bolted to Hoover in 1928, led the fight in the senate against the enactment of a national child labor law. Now children will not be permitted to work in the North Carolina mills, as doers of night work, but 18 is the age limit fixed by the lawmakers.

RED CROSS DRIVE NEARING THE FINISH.

It required the combined efforts of the Hoover administration, Alfred E. Smith, John W. Davis, James M. Cox, Will Rogers and a million others to make successful the Hoover Red Cross drive for $10,000,000 to provide shelter for the shelterless, clothing for the naked and food for the starving. Well, the sum total fixed has gone above the 10 million mark. As for the World war veterans they are borrowing millions on their certificates and placing the money in the channels of trade. They won their battle for recognition but in winning it they had to sidetrack the president of the United States, the secretary of the treasury and the stalwart reactionaries who remained loyal to the chief magistrate of the republic. Now the economists of the country predict a return of prosperity next year. Push the cause along.

VARIATION IS SPICE.

One may travel up and down a city and find no two houses exactly alike unless they be members of a row of dwellings.

The different makes and models of automobiles number into the hundreds.

Women insist that their dresses, coats and hats be exclusive, but neither will two men be found in identical haberdashery.

What is true of houses, automobiles and clothing is also true of breakfast foods, furniture, shoes and virtually all of man's possessions.

The reason is obvious. No two people have identical tastes. That which one finds attractive repels another. The person whose discernment you criticize probably thinks even less of yours.

Life would be a monotonous existence but for this conflict of tastes. Nothing bores like uniformity. What interest would the world hold for humanity if every house was built alike, if the choice of the ten million was good enough for the world, if the wardrobe of the modern woman had as little variation as Eve's, if what one wanted everybody wanted?

If all humanity was of the same opinion on all things, the free-for-all argument would be as extinct as the Roc, but why live if you can't argue?

EXAMPLE.

Every man has some power over others that is exercised without conscious effort on his part. It is a responsibility he cannot dodge. If he is a strong man, others will strive to emulate his strength. If he is a weak man, others, in passing, will shudder at the thought of being like him. Both serve the noble cause of uplift.

In almost every group, organization or community there is one man who walks his chosen way without thought for the preferences, opinions and will of others. He is a strong man; original, dominant, cocksure. If he has looked the world over and decided against it; if it is his custom to attribute the worst possible motives to all men; if he is, in short, a cynic, those who come within his influence are almost certain to find themselves sneering at mankind and calling the world a failure.

But if this strong man is a conservative with a well-lined nest and a conviction that all who advocate change or a disturbing of dividends are dangerous, cranks who should be jailed or deported, those who associate with him soon learn to use his pet phrase in denunciation of dreamers and to feel a certain awe of money in large piles.

Therefore, since it is a certainty that the average man, who lacks a dominating personality, will be remade after the image of the strong man within whose orbit he moves, why shouldn't he exercise what little discretion he has in the matter and attach himself to men who now are what he would like to be?

STYLISH.

Fireplaces are coming back. Architectural journals say

Banishment of the family hearthstone has proven brief. The old urge to gather around a fire for cheer and comfort, regardless of heating facilities, is reasserting itself and the old fireplace is fashionable. We, therefore, for once are fashionable, too.

It is easy for skinny people to be modest.

OTHER OPINIONS

THE CIVIC WORM TURNS

Popular dissatisfaction over the way Tammany officials have been investigating or declining to investigate, Tammany officials in New York has reached the point where a committee of 1,000 is being formed to support a city-wide inquiry. The creation of such a committee indicates to the rest of the country, perhaps more clearly than any previous development has done, the seriousness of the situation in New York. Public indignation in this country is slow to find organized expression. As a people we Americans have adopted a thoroughly cynical attitude toward political corruption and only when conditions become virtually intolerable are we likely to be stirred to action.

The Tammany Hall ticket, headed by Mayor Jimmy Walker, swept into office in New York City on a landslide in 1929. The mayor led his nearest rival by 1-2 million votes. After a while rumors of corruption in the municipal judiciary and several departments of the city government began to be heard. The mayor and District Attorney Thonas Chain showed little interest. But investigations were started by the United States district attorney and by the time of the state election last year a considerable amount of evidence had been uncovered. The campaign was fought by the Republican candidate on the issue of Tammany corruption, and so completely was the city over the situation even as late as last November that Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, as the democratic candidate, carried it by more than 550,000.

The evidence of corruption, however, has continued to accumulate. The governor has ordered an investigation of charges of incompetency against the district attorney, and the counsel for the society for the prevention of crime is asking that the official acts of Mayor Walker be brought into the scope of the inquiry. And now private citizens are preparing to take a hand. It is a sad commentary upon the political intelligence of the American people that crises like this are so often permitted to arise in their city governments; but at least some check is imposed upon such organizations as Tammany Hall by the knowledge that they can be pushed too far. — Kansas City Star.

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Sen. James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois "one of the outstanding opponents of the 18th amendment" appeared in the city of Washington in the role of a political prophet. First he predicted prohibition will be subordinated to economic issues in the 1932 presidential campaign. Second, he predicted neither the republican nor democratic party will advocate repeal. Third, he predicted the democratic convention will omit prohibition to the states on the theory no repeal of the 18th amendment or the Volstead act is possible now. Fourth, he asserted each state should be left free to elect members of the senate and the house on such principles as they desire. Fifth he "expected" the republican platform to be the usual straddle on the question with a pronouncement on virtue of law enforcement. Lastly, he predicted Herbert Hoover will be renominated "because of his control of the convention delegates."

As for the standard-bearer of the democratic party in 1932 as declared to be a prophet and resolved himself into a commentator, saying "Picking a presidential nominee this long before the convention is like gathering chickens from eggs that never have been laid." Feeling into the future the fastidious and scholarly as well as unique James Hamilton Lewis, spats and loud vest and all, tossed a big upheaval in politics next year with probably four candidates in the field, one a fusion candidate supported chiefly by dissatisfied republicans and one the nominee of the prohibition party. This much is certain, demagogues and progressive republicans will control the economic legislation of the 72nd congress which will begin its session next December. There will be a senate majority against the policies of the president as well as a house majority. This is a reminder there is a big job of re-districting before the Texas lawmakers or else three congressmen will be elected at large by the Texas voters in the month of November, 1932.

well as a house majority. This is a reminder there is a big job of re-districting before the Texas lawmakers or else three congressmen will be elected at large by the Texas voters in the month of November, 1932.

New York has a democratic governor and a republican legislature. New York City is overwhelmingly democratic. New York is a pivotal state. A presidential election is coming next year. Prohibition Director Woodcock has let it be known that the largest number of new agents have been thrown into the Empire state of the east. He has let it be known that when the full force is at work 90 new men will be operating "in that section in addition to the 249 already there making it by far the largest unit in the country."

Eighty more agents will cover the Chicago district which embraces Illinois and Wisconsin and Indiana—all three republican states. Chicago is said to be the wettest city in the world. Chicago is the political preserves or camping ground of "Big Bill" Thompson. Chicago voters will go to the polls April 7 and make their choice.

Col. Alfonso Capone is said to be the king bee murderer, the vice overlord and the head devil of all the underworld devils in the city of Chicago. He has been in the open for years. All the dragnets, federal and state and city, have been thrown to bring him in. He was sent to everlasting doom the other day he was hauled before a federal judge and sentenced to six months imprisonment for contempt of the aforesaid judge and his court. It is to laugh. If he is the dictator of all the American underworlds, the head of all the conspiracies against government, directly or indirectly responsible for all the crimes committed by so-called underworld criminals, why six months imprisonment for contempt. Really Mayor J. Waddy Tate kept close to the trail when he said that Chicago officials needed a division of Texas rangers to manhandle and bring in the so-called "public enemies" branded daily as "an organized menace to honest and efficient and law-abiding people."

man who is the head of the Home Protector association which functions in the city of Chicago. In his last report to the Chicago public he declared that booze kings had a corruption fund of $2,000,000 a week to make the trade easy — or in other words to bribe public servants. This would furnish a sum total of $104,000,000 a year. There are some reform business in this glorious land of the free and the brave and the incorruptible. Walpole said in the long ago: "Every man has his price." There are millions of Americans who believe that Walpole, eminent Britisher of the dead ages was a most accomplished prevaricator. That is he was a most versatile liar when the science of lying was at its high peak.

Rhode Island is a republican state. It has a republican legislature, two republican United States senators and two republican representatives. A joint legislative committee approved a republican resolution demanding that congress enact legislation for the repeal of the 18th amendment. Is this treason or just plain nullification? As for the two

Expert Explains Rodent Remedies

FORT WORTH, March 12. — Hint to city folk on how to get rid of rodents that eat up their flower beds, as well as lessons to the farmer on rodents that destroy crops were given here recently by A. E. Omsor, U. S. biological survey representative.

To get rid of moles that burrow into flower beds, he suggested the following remedy to home owners: Put a tablespoonful of lye flakes into each hole and cover it so no air can get in. Continue this at intervals until the moles have been killed.

Most of his rural demonstrations were with traps that have been built to catch the small rodents.

She goes to the theater alone and encounters Crosby with Mrs. Langley. There is a scene. Mrs. Langley drives away alone and Crosby and Gypsy go home together, quarreling all the way. Next day Gypsy attempts to apologize. Crosby returns to his romance as a boy and girl affair, now outgrown. Gypsy is crushed. When she is criticized for carelessness at the office, she resigns.

To forget her misery she accepts a dinner invitation from her wealthy cousin, Anne Trowbridge. The dinner is a bore. While the others are playing bridge Gypsy goes for her wraps, determined to leave. She hears a noise in the next room, opens the door and sees a man climbing in the window. He is James Wallace, guest of the Trowbridges, who entered by the fire-escape. He tells Gypsy he has been jilted, too, and has lost her job. Wallace asks Gypsy to marry him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XI

"Is that supposed to be a joke?"

Gypsy asked. She was not smiling.

"No, it's a hundred times better than the girl who was about to interrupt and hurried on—'Doesn't it strike you as a coincidence that out of this whole city full of people you and I should meet tonight?'"

"And that both of us should be forgetting somebody else? Forgetting—say, you and I are just a couple of saps who don't realize how lucky we are! Do you want that guy, whoever he is, to know you're miserable, wishing he would come back to you?"

"No," said Gypsy emphatically.

"Then instead of mooning over him prepare for your wedding night."

"I see what you mean," the girl said slowly. "You want to marry me to make—her—sorry she treated you so badly. That's what you're thinking out, isn't it?"

"Well, what if I am? It works the same way for you, doesn't it? And it's a hundred times better than the girl who was about to interrupt and hurried on—'Doesn't it strike you as a coincidence that out of this whole city full of people you and I should meet tonight?'"

"Do you like this town?" Wallace asked.

Gypsy considered. "I thought so," she said. "I've always lived here. But now I hate it!"

"Getting out of here tomorrow morning, myself," said the young man. "Glad of it. Two days of New York is plenty. Lord—I'll be glad to be on my way back to Forest City."

"What's it like there?"

"Oh, you probably wouldn't think it was so much. Little place compared with New York. We think it's quite a metropolis out there." He told her about the city 500 miles westward where the Wallaces had always lived. Forest City boasted a population of 200,000 citizens. It had a chamber of commerce that was "boasting" it had two country clubs.

"I'll get there," he said, "at 8:30 tomorrow night. Then I'll go to the house and before I've had a chance to get off my coat and hat Ellen will be telling me that she is getting cold and to hurry and come to the table." Wallace laughed shortly. "There's one person who's getting a break—Ellen! I've lived with her since I was a kid. Parents dead. She was going to move next week. Rented a little place across the street but I don't think she really liked the idea. Fond of the old house. Well—she's not need to move now!"

"There was a brief silence. Then Gypsy said: 'Were you—to be married soon?'"

"Next month. But instead of getting a month for me the young man is going to stroll up to the city one week from next Saturday with young Brock Phillips, a professional player, bon vivant and awfully well fixed with cash. He'll be papa's millions."

"Was it just tonight that she told you?"

Wallace nodded. He glanced at his watch on his wrist. "Approximately one hour and a half ago," he said. "You can imagine that it changed my plans for the evening. I'm not so badly off, you give up one of a job? Why don't you know that was foolish?"

"Yes," said Gypsy. "And I'd do the same tomorrow."

"What was the matter with the girl?"

"Nothing. Everything! I've worked for the MacNamara company three years. Pounding type, filling letters. Dictation, and of typewriters—rushing to work mornings and rushing home at night—that I don't see how I can go back to it. I'm sick of New York, too! I'd like to get away and forget there is such a place. That town you were telling about—Forest City—sounds wonderful. You'll be glad to get back there, I guess."

Wallace leaned forward. "You can come along," he said. "My offer still holds. And that's something I've never done before—ask a girl to marry me after she's refused once."

The girl looked at him. What she would have answered must remain a mystery, for as Gypsy was about to speak each of them suddenly became aware of the presence of a third person. Standing in the doorway in her crimson evening gown, amazed and disapproving, was Anne Trowbridge.

"What in the world—" Anne began and seemed at a loss for more words.

Of course, it was unconventional. Gypsy, reading her cousin's shocked expression, realized this.

"Hello, Anne," she said. "Come in and hear the news. Mr. Wallace and I are going to be married."

"Gypsy?"

"Congratulations, won't you?" Wallace broke in. "You and Phil are invited to the wedding. It's going to be tomorrow. Tomorrow morning."

Anne had recovered the power of speech. "Are you two crazy?" she asked. "You don't even know each other! How did you get here, Jim? I thought you were having dinner with your fiancée?"

"And instead you find me the accepted suitor of Fiancee No. 2. Not had at all for one evening, is it?"

Had any of them been in a mood to appreciate it young Mrs. Trowbridge's discomfiture would have been amusing.

"Gypsy McBride!" she exclaimed. "You can't do a thing like this! Why, you must be out of your head!"

Gypsy's tone rose to a higher pitch. "That settles it!" she declared. "Anne, I'm not coming back to your party. I'm going to get out of this dress and into my own clothes and go home. Tomorrow morning I'm going to marry this young man—if he still wants me—and leave New York and forget there ever was such a place. If you and Phil want to come with me, fine. If not, all right. If you don't, well, I'll get my landlady and one of the other roomers."

Color was burning in Gypsy's cheeks. With head high she rushed from the room and into the hall. Then a door slammed.

It was 10 minutes later when the girl emerged. There had been a transformation. Instead of the fragile, flattering chiffon she wore the tweed coat and brown beret in which she looked exactly like a thousand other girl office workers. There was a run in one of her chiffon hose and the brown oxford shoes needed a shine.

She stopped abruptly. "Oh! I didn't expect to find you here!" she addressed the tall young man who was blocking the way.

Wallace wore his hat and overcoat. "I thought if you were ready to leave New York, home," he said. "You don't mind?"

Gypsy shook her head. "Not at all. It's very nice of you."

Wallace hesitated. "Mrs. Trowbridge went back to her guests," he said. "It might cause a little comment if we went out that way." He motioned with his hand toward the living room. "I suppose you wouldn't consider using the fire escape? I mean going up to the next floor—the way I came in? It's quite simple but I don't suppose—"

Gypsy looked down at her worn coat. "Let's go to it," she said. "Don't I look just like Cinderella running away from the ball? Yes, I think the fire escape by all means!"

He helped her through the window and she was not as frightened as she had expected to be. High places had always terrified the girl. They went up the slanting front stairway and Wallace climbed into the building again. Gypsy scrambled after him.

Both were embarrassed. The smile with which Gypsy tried to hide her confusion was patently self-conscious. Wallace glanced up and down the corridor. No one was in.

"And to be in luck," he said. "The elevator is over this way—"

"There was no more conversation until they had reached the street and were in a taxicab headed for Mrs. O'Hare's rooming house. Then Gypsy glanced up from the enveloping shadows.

"I was sort of excited—when I was talking to Anne," she said softly. "Maybe we'd better just forget about tonight."

"Gave your word, didn't you?" Wallace reminded her. "Back out if you want to. I thought you were serious."

"You mean—you really mean it?"

"Of course I do. There's a train at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning that I'd like to catch. If I come for you at 9:30 can you be ready? City Hall's the best place to get it over with, I guess. I'll get Phil to come along."

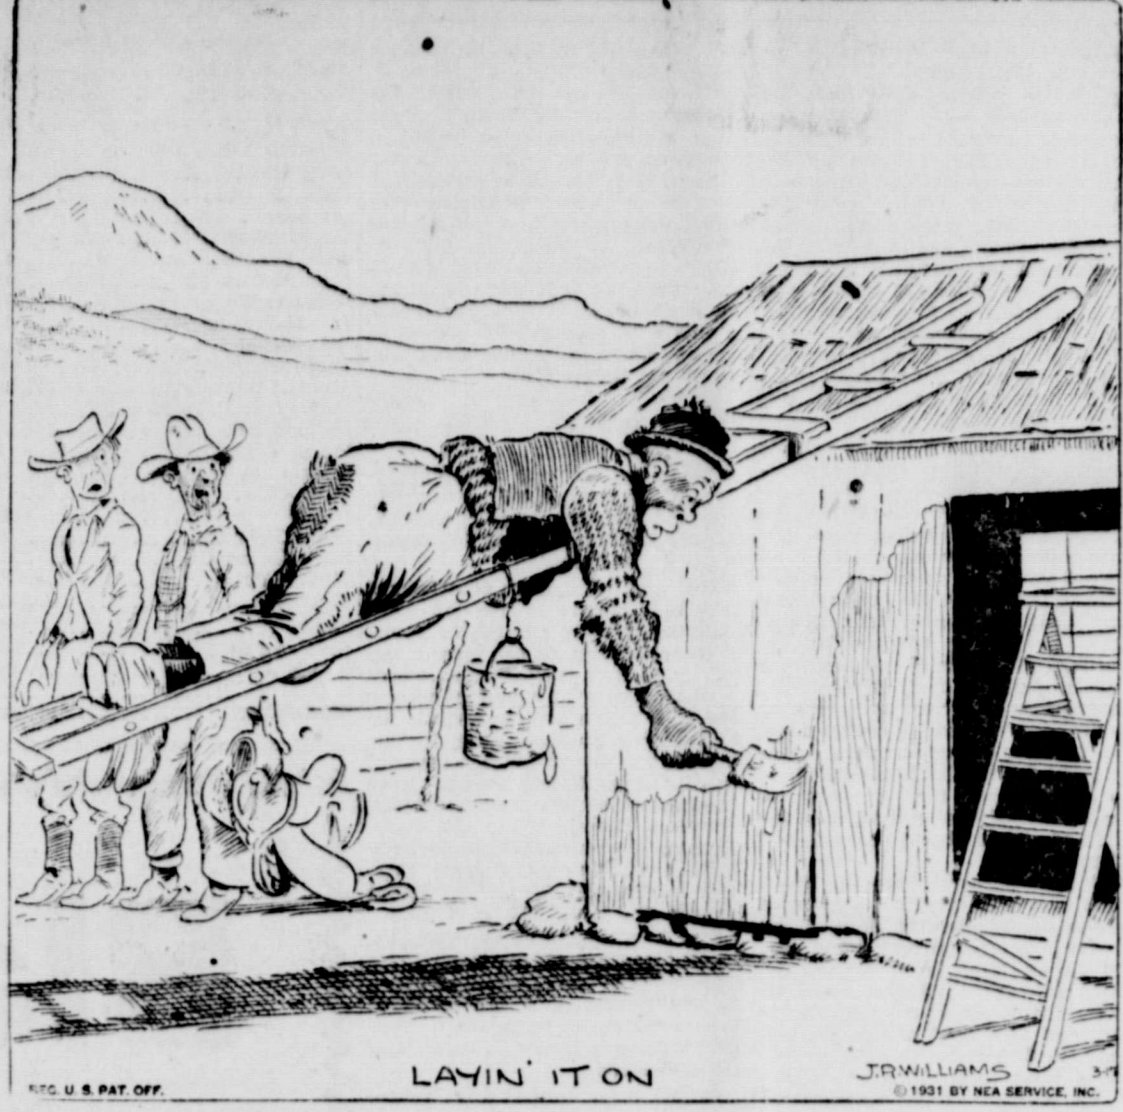

"I'll be ready," Gypsy promised. At the door of the rooming house Wallace touched his hat and said good night. Gypsy went inside, climbed the long flight slowly. Dozens of jumbled, incoherent thoughts were tumbling through her brain. She was going to marry a man she had never seen before tonight. She had promised to marry him. Packing. She had better do that tonight! At 9:30 in the morning James Wallace her bridegroom, was coming. What was the name of that place? Forest City. Mrs. O'Hare would have to be notified—

Ten hours later Gypsy McBride stood beside a tall young man in a blue suit and listened to a hoarse civic official who was saying, "I pronounce you husband and wife."

Gypsy looked up into Jim Wallace's blue eyes. As she did so the vision of another face—dark and mocking—danced before her.

WITH THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

WHAT SCHOOLS SHOULD DO FOR CHILDREN

By H. BRANDON, H. S. Principal
The purpose of public education has been constantly changing since the responsibility of educating the children was assumed by the public. The history of public education reveals that the original aim of the secondary school was to prepare the young men for university entrance. This idea remained the central goal of the schools up to a recent date, the only change coming was a result of the admission of women into the universities, and is to a very great degree the dominant force in our present day school.

Believing that our public schools should prepare the mass of children, most of whom will not enter college, for a more complete living of the life that is before them, the outstanding educators of the past decade have set up rather definite aims or goals that the public school should strive to accomplish. These goals have been adopted by the National Educational Commission and by the National Educational association, and are as follows: health and immediate command of the common fundamentals, preparation for worthy home membership, worthy use of leisure time, development of ethical character, and good citizenship.

We will all agree that the above objectives are equally important in the life of any individual if he or she is to enjoy a happy and useful career. This being true, the Cisco schools should give each boy and girl the proper training in the care and treatment of the physical body; a thorough training in the use of those tools which one needs in his or her everyday associations; in developing proper attitudes toward the home with a knowledge of the duties and responsibilities of same; a clear insight into the various fields of vocations, the demands made and the opportunities offered in each; training in the use of that time which we call our own that it may be well spent; the development of that type of character upon which the progress of society rests; and an opportunity to practice some of the rights and duties that are closely related to those one will be called upon to perform in later life.

When we reach the point in the development of our system where proper training in these fields of education can be given to every student, then we will be serving the interests of the community for which the public school system was established. It should be our endeavor to improve our local schools along lines that will lead toward the accomplishment of the given goals. If this is to be done, the efforts of patrons and the faculty must be united for this purpose.

WIVES LEAD TO DIVORCE

CHICAGO, March 18.—Because her husband enjoyed leaving notes saying he had committed suicide and played other similar tricks, Mrs. Mary Steinke, 21, was granted a divorce.

FOR LUNCHEON

The luncheon salad is often the main course. So it should be rather substantial... like this Tuna Fish Salad: After removing the tuna fish from the can marinate it.

Pack the fish into small cups to mold it, and place in the ice-box for several hours. Unmold the tuna fish on beds of crisp lettuce and serve with Devilled Dressing which is made like this:

Mash two cooked egg yolks smooth and blend with two tablespoons of Wesson Oil. Stir into this two tablespoons of cream, one and one-half tablespoons of vinegar and seasoning of a teaspoon of salt, a fourth teaspoon each of paprika, and onion juice. Add one tablespoon each of chopped green pepper and minced pimiento.

To marinate: Mix six tablespoons of Wesson Oil and two tablespoons of vinegar or lemon juice. Add a teaspoon of salt, one-eighth teaspoon of pepper. Pour this over the salad material and set aside in the refrigerator for several hours.

FOR BRIDGE

Your bridge guests will prefer a salad that is a happy medium between sweet and sour... a pleasant appetizer for their evening meal... such as grape fruit and orange salad. Alternate skinless sections of grape-fruit and orange arranged with a garnish of pimiento-strips, make a salad that is mellowed by Cream Cheese Dressing.

To make Cream Cheese Dressing: soften a package of cream cheese with four tablespoons of Wesson Oil. Add a teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon each of white pepper and sugar, and thin with two tablespoons of lemon juice. Pour over salad and dust with paprika.

FOR DINNER

Gowns are more sophisticated for dinner. Salads too! Served as a separate course, the simple salad is best. Perfect, tender asparagus tips, slipped through a ring of green pepper or lemon-rind, placed on a single thick slice of red-ripe tomato. Serve with Chiffonade Dressing, which is made like this:

Beat together eight tablespoons Wesson Oil, two tablespoons vinegar, half teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper and paprika; tablespoon chopped pimientos, half tablespoon chopped parsley, and a minced hard-boiled egg.

Just as no one dress is correct for all occasions, no one salad dressing is suitable for all salad flavors. There are dressings for all tastes, dressings as different as lemon is from honey and honey from cheese. So...

mix a dressing appropriate to the salad

Here are three suggestions. Three dressings that go with their salads just as cranberry goes with turkey, mint goes with lamb and cream goes with peaches. Try them.

AN INTERESTING LITTLE BOOK. Mary B. Murray has written a new little book filled with helpful salad suggestions. It suggests the right kind of salads for each occasion and the dressings that go best with each kind of salad. It also contains many new and interesting ideas that will help you make all your dinners and parties the successful affairs you want them to be. We will be very happy to send you your copy if you will write us. Address: The Wesson Oil and Snowdrift People, 210 Baronne Street, New Orleans, La.

A CORRECTION ON BAKERY PRICES

I wish to make a correction on the price advertised in my copy yesterday in which I quoted the retail price of Butter-Kist Bread as 6 cents.

The retail price by all grocery stores is as low as can be sold, which leaves very little profit for any of us, but regardless of profit we want the Butter-Kist loaf to stand for the highest quality of health standard in our city.
