FINISH OF KNUTE ROCKNE'S BRILLIANT CAREER.

Civilized man the world over must have been given a genuine shock when the wires carried the story of the death of Knute Rockne in an airplane catastrophe under the Kansas skies.

Knute Rockne was remarkable as a boy, remarkable as a youth ambitious to excel, remarkable as a handler and developer of athletes, remarkable for his manliness, his ruggedness, his high personal integrity, his devotion to the cause of clean lives and clean living and clean athletes.

He was a giant in his chosen field. He was a leader as well as a builder of athletics. He was a man among men and the wide popularity that he enjoyed was due to the record that he had made, to the life that he had lived, to the square dealing methods that he had employed and his absolute fairness at all times in dealing with conflicting factions in the world of athletes and athletics.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE Shawnee, Oklahoma.

H. G. Moody, editor of the Redding (Calif.) Searchlight, says: "That business men and citizens generally should not fail to realize that newspapers are in the public service; that they are not parasites living for their own profits and that the community needs for a newspaper are such that, should there be no newspapers as a private enterprise, then the public must for its own good tax itself to provide them."

The newspaper is a function, a conscientious, reciprocating service in the community it lives in, an integral factor in everything it helps to motivate, hence is as worthy of its place as the judge in his docket, the sheriff or the tax collector.

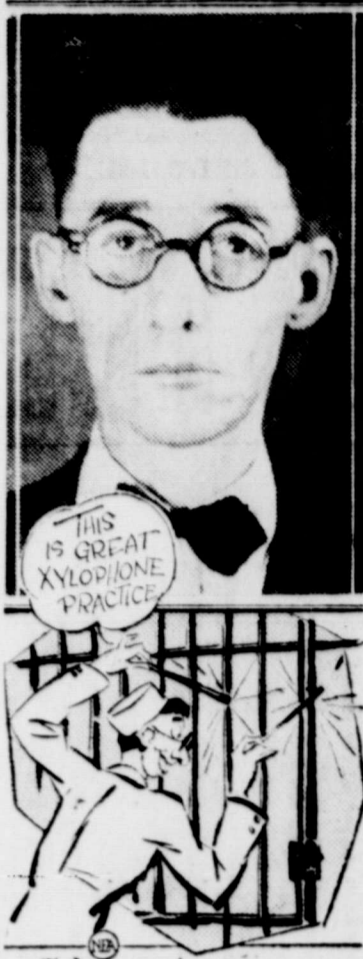

Such facts are recognized by advanced persons but sometimes ignored by the ignorant or the indifferent. They aim to keep the newspaper "in its place" by withholding a just tribute, they have their own inferiority complex to deal with and their only object is a kind of self-satisfaction that comes from retarding the wheels of progress.

These opponents of printed enlightenment usually demonstrate that they need the incantation of the very spirit that makes a newspaper. While they are keeping the newspaper in its place, they are keeping themselves there also.

Let the community that wishes to step ahead make its newspapers the staunchly supported banner carriers of its forward movement. The newspaper gladly undertakes the challenge to leadership and invariably will push onward against every obstacle.

HOW TAX SUITS ARE HANDLED IS EXPLAINED

The following article, dealing with the methods by which delinquent tax suits are handled for the city of Cisco, was submitted to the Daily News by J. D. Barker, attorney in charge of the collection of delinquent taxes for the city.

How the delinquent tax suits are handled.

1. On or about the first day of May, the date when the unpaid taxes are delinquent, the city secretary sends to each owner a statement showing the amount due.

2. On or about July 1st, the city secretary delivers a statement to the attorney of all the unpaid at that time.

3. Thereupon the attorney mails another notice.

4. The attorney invites the delinquent tax payer to call and make some kind of arrangement. Either pay or begin paying by the month.

5. Those that do not respond within 30 to 60 days are sued regardless of his name or his standing in the community.

6. When citation is served, another opportunity is given the delinquent to pay or begin paying by the month.

7. A big percentage have responded by this time.

8. When the term of court begins, judgments are taken against all those who have not responded.

9. The attorney then sends out another notice, inviting the delinquent to call and make adjustments.

10. To this call another large percentage will respond.

11. After a reasonable time, the attorney has an order of sale issued and on receipt of same from the clerk, another notice is mailed, telling the delinquent that his property is to be advertised for sale. Another percentage then responds.

12. Then, the constable signs the notice of sale and one copy of the notice is mailed to the delinquent. A still larger percentage respond to this call.

13. The sale then proceeds on the tract of land belonging to those who have not responded.

The attorney has authority to make any reasonable adjustment as to value, and has made several hundred in the last two years.

The delinquent has two years in which to redeem his property. The judgment bears interest at 6 per cent per annum.

At the end of two years, a writ of possession will issue and the sheriff put the city or person buying the property into possession.

It is argued by the uninformed that a person could not be ejected from a homestead on account of taxes. The homestead is liable for purchase money and taxes, and some good people in Cisco are being misled by this chimney corner law that you do not have to pay taxes on your home.

Out of some 700 suits that have been filed, only 50 sales have been made to date.

Coach Shotwell said the mail Wednesday morning brought overflowing entry lists from Abilene Snyder and Cisco.

Another school has asked permission to send a team here for the meet. Colorado officials called Coach Shotwell Tuesday and asked if three or four members of the crack Colorado crew can be entered in the meet, which is attracting much attention throughout West Texas. Coach Shotwell invited the Colorado crew over.

The names of the schools likely to be represented here at the meet now include Abilene, Cisco, Ranger, Eastland, Breckenridge, Colorado and Snyder.

Angelo Declines

San Angelo school officials announced late Wednesday that they could not be here for the meet.

The Abilene entry blank contains the names of 21 boys, headed by the winged-footed Howard Green. Abilene's crack dash man in all events through the 440-yard event. Green will also be entered in the broad jumping event.

Green has been clocked at around 22 seconds in the 220 events and is believed to be the fastest kid 440 leper in the state.

Cisco's entry blanks were completely filled. Eastland will have more than 20 entered and Eastland is due to have a small but rather impressive outfit here for the meet.

Colorado plans to enter, primarily, three outstanding stars, a mile runner, a half-mile and a weight man. Coach John Patton has had little chance all this week to give his spiked shoe outfit any special training due to cold and rainy weather.

STAGE STARS WITH MARION IN WISE CHILD

Marion Davies surrounded herself with a cast of Broadway celebrities in the supporting parts of "It's a Wise Child," which will begin its local engagement Sunday at the Palace theatre.

Prominent on the list of supporting players are Sidney Blackmer, who temporarily gave up the stage to appear in "The Bad Man"; James Gleason, identified with such Broadway stage hits as "The Shannons of Broadway" and "Is Zat So?" and Lester Vail, who has receded in a long string of footlight productions.

Fully Moran and Marie Prevost have character roles of widely different natures. Clara Blandick, Robert McWade, Johnny Arthur, Hilda Vaughn, Ben Alexander and Emily Fitzroy are the remaining members of the imposing cast.

Miss Davies expressed herself as delighted with the results obtained with the picturization of "It's a Wise Child," and preview reviewers have been especially enthusiastic about the star's work in this photoplay. The picture was adapted from one of the most successful of recent New York stage hits, a David Belasco production which ran for a year on Broadway and was equally popular on tour.

In "It's a Wise Child" Miss Davies is said to have a part which fits her even better than her successful roles in "Not So Dumb" and "The Bachelor Father." The story concerns the building of a molehill into a mountain through the devastating effects of small town gossip.

Robert Z. Leonard has directed the star in five earlier productions. Laurence E. Johnson, who adapted the story of "It's a Wise Child" to the screen, is the author of the original play.

MODERN ADVERTISING INDEX TO VALUES IN FOODSTUFFS

By ELIZABETH BENSON

Experienced Household Buyers Not Confused By Low Price Appeal.

Wise buying is a very important part of a woman's job today. There has been, and still is, a highly significant readjustment of commodity prices in many lines of industry. The cost of living has been reduced to the lowest scale since 1921.

During periods of this kind, "prices" are frequently confused with "values." Often a quantity of inferior merchandise is put on the market simply to sell "at a price."

Sometimes this type of merchandise has merit. But more often it consists largely of "imitations" designed to trade on the acceptance of well-known, advertised products.

The experienced buyer for the home—like the experienced purchasing agent for a business house—must know how to judge "values" in order to adjust her budget to best advantage.

One of the best of all shopping guides is to read the advertisements in the newspapers daily—and to buy advertised products.

Stores and firms which advertise spend their money to hold their merchandise up for public inspection. Their products must be worthy, must give true value, or they could not stand this publicity.

Also, most newspapers today are quick to detect a fraud and to refuse its columns to any except the worthy advertiser.

Therefore, in deciding how you will get the greatest value in the products you buy for your home, you can be very certain of satisfaction by following the guides offered you in the advertising columns of the newspaper.

THE ANSWER TO SUBSTITUTION
IS ALWAYS....
"NO"

HOW CAN YOU JUDGE THE VALUE BEHIND AN UNKNOWN LABEL?

IT IS EASY enough to buy wisely when you can see what you are getting.

But how about those products that you can't see?

Foods, drugs, toilet necessities—all hidden by a bottle or a package.

If you do not recognize the name on the label, how can you judge the value behind it?

You can't!

Shopping experience has proved this to millions of women. But experience uses bitter methods. Costly methods.

When you buy only those products which you see advertised regularly week after week, in newspapers and magazines—when you are guided by the names you know—you are safe.

But when you experiment with untried brands—substitute products which you are told are "just as good"—you may be sorry.

The manufacturer who knows the wisdom of advertising also knows the folly of false claims.

His integrity is the integrity of his product. Your good will is the rock on which he stands. If it crumbles, his success goes with it into dust.

The truthful, consistent advertising of any manufacturer is proof of his pride in the merchandise he offers you.

But it is even more than that. It is his promise of constant quality and definite purity. Of honest weight. Of full value in return for your money and your confidence.

These facts are published by this newspaper in an earnest attempt to help you buy more wisely.

When you shop, accurate information is your best protection against the disappointment which often hides behind an unknown label.

MAD MARRIAGE

LAURA LOU BROOKMAN Author of "HEART THROBBS," etc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Missy McBride, 19-year-old typist at a New York office, meets Wallace at the home of her healthy cousin, Anne Trowbridge. She is miserable because she has married Alan Crosby, back from a war and a half in Paris studying no longer cares for her. Wallace tells Gypsy that he has been waiting for her since she was a child by his fiancée. To spite the fact that she asks Gypsy to marry him, she first refuses to accept. She is married the morning and departs for Forest City, his home town.

At Jim's home they are greeted by his aunt, Miss Ellen Wallace, who immediately becomes friendly to the girl. After a few days Miss Wallace moves to a cottage down the street. She arranges a family dinner party where Gypsy is snubbed by other relatives. This angers Jim and they leave. Next Gypsy receives a letter from Alan Crosby and after some indecision returns it. Jim undertakes the defense of Nina Roberts, accused of murdering her employer, Fowler. The case is sensational with circumstantial evidence against the girl. Gypsy becomes deeply interested in the case. She and Jim are at breakfast when a headline in the morning newspaper attracts Gypsy's attention.

famous Canadian mountain resort.

The last paragraph read: "Mrs. Phillips and her parents formerly lived in Forest City. Since the death of her father a year ago Mrs. Phillips and her mother have made their home at Great Neck, L. I. Brock Phillips is a graduate of Princeton University, where he was a member of the tennis team and prominent in other sports. He is now associated with his father, Henry B. Phillips, owner of the Phillips Breakfast Flakes Co."

On an inside page beside a column headed "Society News" there was a picture of a blond girl in a drooping picture hat. Above was the caption, "Becomes Bride of Brock Phillips."

Gypsy bent forward, staring at the picture. It was a face that generally would have been accorded lovely. The features were regular. Marcia—this other girl who had held Jim Wallace's heart so carelessly her slim fingers and shattered it—was not smiling. The eyes were large and well placed, accented by beautifully curved brows. The nose was fastidious. If there were a flaw in her face, Gypsy thought, it was in the lips which drew together rather tightly. They suggested arrogance. There was about Marcia Loring—now Marcia Phillips—a definite aristocratic air. It was evident in the way she held her chin. Or was that merely a trick of the photographer to show off an uncommonly well moulded throat?

The paragraph below stated that Mrs. Brock Phillips, nee Loring, had formerly resided in Forest City and that she and her husband were to spend several weeks in Canada before returning to New York where they would make their home.

Matilda entered the dining room and paused, surprised to see Gypsy still at the table.

"I haven't quite finished," the girl said and the cook disappeared. The coffee was cold but Gypsy finished her cup and nibbled at a piece of toast. She could not take her eyes from the picture in the newspaper.

If one had deliberately set out to search the world, Gypsy thought, it would have been impossible to find anyone more totally unlike herself. Here was the girl whom Jim worshipped—blond, aristocratic, probably tall and slim. Resentment against this fair girl who had been so cruel walled up in Gypsy's heart.

At last she arose and went about her morning's duties. By 10:15, when Abbie Manley rang the door bell, the girl was ready for the shopping trip.

If Abbie had seen the morning newspaper she said nothing about the Loring-Phillips wedding. Abbie was driving the coupe and as soon as she and Gypsy were inside she began an energetic discourse on the roses at the Charles was trying to build. He wanted to do it himself and he and Abbie had conflicting ideas of architecture.

Gypsy was amused. She was grateful for such friendly, unpretentious companionship. They reached the store and before the dazzling array of beautiful tableware she forgot her earlier mood. Abbie bought the gleaming crystal goblets and a dozen salad plates. Gypsy's purchases were humbler.

They lunched at the Carlton and it was after 2 o'clock when the coupe stopped again before the Wallace home.

Gypsy planned a dinner that evening to appeal particularly to Jim's palate. Her efforts were unrewarded. If the young man noticed at all what he was eating he gave no sign of it. He looked tired, Gypsy thought. As soon as the meal was ended Jim went to the library which had now become his home office.

The whole house was quiet. If she turned on the radio it would disturb Jim's work. Gypsy stood before one of the living room windows and looked out at the sky. The window was half-opened. Her night breeze was cool against her slightly clad shoulders but it had the scent of spring. In the east the round gold moon was just visible over the edge of the tree tops. Its rays, lighter the down and made it shiny except here and there where shrubs cast black shadows. Somewhere in the distance she heard a violin.

Oh, it was a night for youth and love and gay laughter! Gypsy closed the window behind her and moved away. A new magazine was lying on the table. She turned through its pages and sat down to read.

At 11 o'clock Jim was still in the library. Gypsy went to the kitchen and filled a plate with the ginger cookies he was fond of. She poured a tall glass of cold milk and set it on a tray with the cookies. Then she took them to the library door and knocked softly.

"Come in."

Gypsy opened the door. "Don't you think you've worked long enough, Jim?" she asked. "You're going to wear yourself out." She entered and set the tray down on one corner of the desk. It was the only corner available. The desk top was a tumbled mass of books and manuscripts.

Jim leaned back in his chair. "That looks good," he said, smiling and reaching for the glass. "Where's yours?"

"Oh, I don't care for any. Mind if I sit down? I don't want to disturb you!"

He waved toward the chair. "Go ahead, I'm not getting anywhere anyhow." Jim munched a cookie, frowning.

It was the Roberts case, of course. There were questions Gypsy wanted to ask but she felt hesitant. Before she could think of the right beginning Jim continued: "Here's a funny thing about that bird, Fowler. Three-fourths of his patients were women. I went to a famous Canadian mountain resort. The last paragraph read: "Mrs. Phillips and her parents formerly lived in Forest City. Since the death of her father a year ago Mrs. Phillips and her mother have made their home at Great Neck, L. I. GOOD FRIDAY OBSERVED BY PASSION PLAYS

ROME, April 3. — In many villages and small towns of Italy today processions were held through the streets in memory of the death of Christ on the Cross.

In some of the villages of Sicily, the scene of the crucifixion was re-enacted in the form of a small passion play.

Near Rome, in the village of Anticoli Corrado, the annual Good Friday ceremony of carrying a coffin supposed to contain the body of Christ was carried out in the presence of a group of foreigners who had driven out from Rome for the event and crowds of peasants from near-by villages.

Coffin Carried Afloat

The coffin, symbolic of Christ's death, was carried afloat along the rough narrow village streets by the "faithful apostles." The Virgin Mary, represented by a devout mother of Anticoli, was comforted by other women of the village. Judas Iscariot, impersonated by the village half wit, took part in the curious procession, and was the butt of all. Blows from sticks and words of reproach were his lot, until frightened, but unharmed, he fled for refuge into a friar's house.

The coffin supposed to contain the body of Christ was taken from the village church by the arch priest and carried through the village to the accompaniment of hymns and mourning plaints, some of them belonging to the church hymnology, others characteristic peasant laments. The result was extraordinarily impressive.

Miniature Oberammergau

Anticoli is a kind of small unpretentious Oberammergau, the famous Bavarian village which gives its Passion Play every ten years. But everything is simple and home-like and pure, unspoiled folk-love, with no tourist agencies, no hotels or restaurants and very few tourists.

The little village has artistic traditions, for the same actors play their roles each year until they are too old and then their children replace them. Anticoli is also the village from which most of the Rome artists' models come. It was here that the American sculptor Maure Sterne found models for his gigantic monument in Worcester, Mass.

Acolytes ringing bells preceded the procession today, and as the coffin passed along, the streets were peopled with men in reverence. The actors made only simple attempts to dress their parts, using lengths of colored cloth for mantles, while the women wore picturesque shawls.

Notice voters. One of the leaders, in the ranks of the opposition, has caused to be published and circulated among the voters a printed dummy ballot bearing the names of J. T. Berry and J. R. Burnett, for mayor and E. P. Crawford, H. S. Stubbiefield, Joe Clements and J. T. Elliott for commissioners. The names of J. R. Burnett, H. S. Stubbiefield and Joe Clements had been marked out by heavy printed lines, leaving the names of J. T. Berry, for mayor and E. P. Crawford and J. T. Elliott, for commissioners. Furthermore it was reliably reported that a meeting was held last night in the colored section of the city in order that the negroes might learn which candidate to vote for in the coming city election next Tuesday.

Article 242 of the Penal Code of the state of Texas provides, among other things, the following: "Any person who gives, receives or secures an official ballot or any paper whatever, on which is marked, printed or written the name of any person for whom he has agreed to vote, or for whom he has been requested to vote, etc. shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars, and be confined in jail for thirty days."
