MURRAY THREATENS OIL SHUTDOWN

One Dead, Two Critically Injured, In Fire at Kilgore

ENTIRE CITY THREATENED AFTER BLAST

KILGORE, July 28.—Clyde Erbe, an oil well driller, was killed and two companions seriously burned when an oil storage tank and derrick caught fire in the center of a mushroom town.

Firemen today feared for the entire city of 10,000 persons should the fire itself catch fire and high wind of the fire under control. Practically all the buildings in town are wooden shacks and should the fire started there would be little chance of stopping it.

Charles Tomlinson, another driller, was so seriously burned that it is feared he might die. William Erbe was severely burned but not critically.

The storage tank, only two blocks from the business district, and larger than that of the derrick exploded last night with a blast that shook the town and sprayed flames about the neighborhood.

Undaunted by the danger that faced in the vicinity, residents rushed by the score to the flaming tank. Among them was "Blackie" Jones, famous oil fire fighter, who snatched up his asbestos suit and ran to do what he could.

The situation was a strange one, as well is the "occasional" variety, one which flows at certain intervals without being pumped. The explosion of the near by tank occurred at one of the "off" periods so that although fire was scattered over a wide area, the well itself was not ignited.

FLIERS HOLD INTEREST OF THE NATION

Long distance fliers all over the globe were cutting time and space today in flights by airplanes and dirigibles while an undersea craft followed an uncharted course that led under the ice to the Arctic.

Two planes started from New York. In one were Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon, headed around the world to break the Post-Gazette record. In the other were Russell Beardman and John Polando, headed for Istanbul, Turkey.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh shared interest in the aviation activities, the New York Times said. Lindbergh helped to stir up four years ago as they took off from Washington on their summer vacation aerial tour of the Orient via the front yard of the Arctic.

Amy Johnson, daring English girl flyer, hoped to reach Moscow today and Tokyo, her destination, within ten days.

Meanwhile the submarine Nautilus, commanded by Sir Hubert Wilkins, Arctic explorer, was en route from Plymouth, England where it has been undergoing repairs to Bergen, Norway, a stopping point on its cruise to the Arctic under ice.

LINDBERGH START TRIP LATE TODAY

WASHINGTON, July 28.—Chas. A. Lindbergh made last preparations today for the flight upon which he and his wife will pioneer a north-west air trail from the Atlantic seaboard to the Orient.

The Lindberghs flew here yesterday, fully equipped for the 17,000 mile flight. They expected to start on the next leg of the trip this afternoon or tomorrow.

Their route lies through northern Canada, Alaska, Eastern Siberia and thence to Japan and China.

Running Gun Fight Wounds Young Girl

CINCINNATI, July 28.—A running gun fight through the streets of Newport, Kentucky, resulted today in the capture and wounding of Doris Baldwin, 21, pretty daughter of Arthur Baldwin, St. Louis steamboat carrier and the arrest of two men and two other women accused of committing numerous road robberies.

LOWER LIGHT RATES GIVEN CISCO GROUP

A lower rate for electricity used by the city in lighting streets of Cisco was allowed Monday afternoon at the regular meeting of the city commission, by the West Texas Utilities company.

P. W. Campbell, Abilene, representative of the utilities concern, appeared before the body and allowed the reduction.

The slash was on electricity consumed by the use of 400 candlepower and sixty candle power lamps. The new scale is $3 and $3.75 for the 400 and $1.12 for the 60 candlepower.

A material saving to the city will be realized, city officials declared.

The commissioners also discussed the signing of a new contract between the city and the Lake Cisco Amusement company.

George D. Fee, J. T. Elliott and J. R. Burnett were appointed to study the matter and make recommendations for the new agreement.

The contract will, in all probability, embody clauses relative to the price of water used in the swimming pool at the lake.

J. T. Elliott, J. R. Burnett and Joe Clements were appointed as a committee to investigate the delinquent tax debts and make recommendations to the commission.

F. D. Wright, city attorney, was instructed by the body to file answers to the suits of the Humble Oil & Refining company and W. H. Craddock.

Mayor Berry, and Fee and Burnett will work in conjunction with Wright in regard to the city bond situation. It was decided at the meeting.

The commission voted to install a street light at the intersection of West Fifth and Avenue H, and to place one in the negro residential section.

Mayor Berry, within the near future, will confer with officials of surrounding towns, in regard to taking action relative to obtaining a lower gas rate for this territory.

L. E. Vaughn was named night desk sergeant of the police department. His salary was placed at $100 a month, effective August 15.

The commission voted to cut the brush at Lake Cisco immediately.

A sanitary ordinance, passed as an emergency, was approved by the body.

Aimee Ties Knot as Son Weds

"I now pronounce you man and wife," said Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist extemporaneously, as she officiated at the marriage of her son, Refl, 18, to Lorna Dee Smith, 20, of Abilene.

Okla., before thousands who jammed her Angelus Temple at Los Angeles. Here you see Aimee with the bride and groom and below the newlyweds showing how all married couples should act.

MILITARY POLICE TO BE CALLED

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., July 28.—Unless the price of crude petroleum reaches $1 a barrel by Saturday all flush fields in the state of Oklahoma will be closed, Governor W. H. Murray announced today.

The order will be enforced by military police if all companies ignore his edict, the governor said.

The shutdown order will become effective Saturday night.

The shutdown order is not an attempt to fix the price of oil but a move to conserve the state's resources, thereby protecting Oklahoma's school fund and tax incomes derived from petroleum production, the governor said.

The governor's order expected for more than a week came after more than 1,500 oil operators met in Tulsa and voted for a voluntary shutdown of Oklahoma and Kansas fields until petroleum prices arrived at the $1 mark.

MISS HORTON IS SELECTED BY RANDOLPH

With the acceptance of Miss Blanche Horton as head of the English department, Randolph's faculty is complete for next year, Miss Horton is the only new member of the regular faculty.

Miss Horton has a B. A. and an M. A. degree from the University of Texas and has completed about half the work necessary for her Ph. D. degree from the same institution. Her major subject both for her Bachelor's and for her Masters degree was English in which she completed over eight full courses. Her minors were mathematics and foreign languages. She completed six and two-thirds courses in foreign languages, five years of which were French. During her entire student career of over six years at the University, her grades have averaged nearly a straight A. This excellent school record earned her membership in Phi Beta Kappa, scholarship society.

Her teaching experience includes five years in Texas high schools, two years in junior college, and one summer in the University of Texas. During her graduate year, she held a fellowship in English in the University of Texas. During the summer of 1917 she was instructor in English in the University of Texas. She comes to Randolph from Edinburg the president and dean of that institution's recommendation Miss Horton highly.

In addition to her scholastic qualifications, Miss Horton is interested in extra-curricular activities and is expected to be a valuable help to the institution in helping to sponsor this important phase of a college education.

Dean Isaacks says "The addition of Miss Horton gives us the best rounded faculty we have ever had, the equal of any to be found in a like institution anywhere, we believe. Every member, except one has at least a M. A. degree and all are tried and proven teachers. All except Miss Horton have taught at least one year in Randolph and have proven not only their ability to teach subject matter but also their interest in and devotion to the character building ideals of the institution. Miss Horton's credentials show that she has these same ideals. This makes us feel that we now have a faculty second to none that can give the boy or girl just out of high school advantages in scholastic character, and citizenship training that cannot be surpassed anywhere."

OHIO PEN PAPER COMPILES LIST OF NICKNAMES

COLUMBUS, O., July 28.—Nicknames and colorful appellations used by Ohio penitentiary convicts have been compiled by George Bennett, editor of Ohio Penitentiary News, a weekly publication.

The group of prisoners known as "bad boys," who are kept in solitary confinement, are known as Bettman's Shirt Circuits. This name apparently means they are known in blaming the penitentiary for 1930 upon faulty electric wiring when questioned by Attorney General Gilbert Bettman.

Warden Dubbed "Good Time" Warden Preston E. Thomas is called "Good Time" Thomas because of his efforts in behalf of "good time" law, which allows prisoners with good records to apply for parole before completion of their minimum sentences.

The Protestant chaplain, Rev. E. K. Wall, is referred to as "Holy Joe" and "The Sky Pilot."

The board of psychology and psychiatry members are called the "fortune tellers," and the clemency board is known as the "extension department."

Barbers are "Butchers" Kitchen workers are called "robbers." Barbers are known as "butchers." Members of the head rest squad are known as "head cutters."

Dr. George W. Kell, prison physician, has been given the names "Dr. Kill'em" and "The Croaker." Bank robbers are "jug heisters" the prison parlance; pickpockets are "camions"; forgers are "paper fingers," and any loud or unusual noise is known as "passive resistance."

SMUGGLERS ARM WITH ICE PICKS

EL PASO, July 28.—A variety of weapons is used by the liquor smuggler, but the ice pick is about as effective as any when it comes to a fight in close quarters, border patrolmen claim.

A collection of curious types of weapons has been seized by border patrolmen. These weapons range from nail pullers to ice picks with a small number of obsolete pistols. Occasionally, however, remarkably good firearms are taken from smugglers and persons seeking to enter the United States illegally. The ice pick is sometimes sharpened to a needle's point.

Persons seeking to enter the country illegally usually arm themselves with some sort of weapon, border patrolmen report.

But it is believed that most illegal entries carry weapons more for moral support than anything else. Few of them would use them except when they have an absolute advantage over the officers.

MAN WITH SIX WIVES CHARGED WITH MURDER OF ONE ON HONEYMOON

By WINTHROP LYMAN
United Press Staff Correspondent
EAGLE RIVER, Wis., July 28.—In this north woods village, a few miles south of the Lac Du Flambeau Indian reservation, George W. E. "Jiggs" Perry, son of a well-to-do family, is charged with murdering Mrs. Cora Belle Hackett, one of his six bigamous wives.

Miss Mary Nickels (only legal wife), Jan. 23, 1912, Milwaukee. Mrs. Kathryn Gebhart, Jan. 9, 1920, Kewaunee, Ill. Mrs. Cora Belle Hackett, June 13, 1920, Chicago, Ill. Miss Lydia Downey, Aug. 16, 1930, Carmel, Ill. Miss Elizabeth Morrison, Aug. 27, 1930, Harrisburg, Ill. Mrs. Harriet Milligan, Oct. 6, 1930, Belleville, Ill. Miss Annie Marie Gutierrez, 1931, San Francisco (married under the name of Frank J. Moran.)

When Mrs. Hackett's body was found last October in the woods near here, there was no indication of the revelations that were to follow.

Her death ended what had appeared on the surface as a "perfect honeymoon."

Mrs. Hackett met Perry through a want ad, which sought the services of a woman to act as his companion on a trip to California. The ad was "blind" and Mrs. Hackett thought it had been inserted by a woman.

The friendship ripened, and through the strength of a remarkable personality and promises of wealth, Perry won the former Milwaukee school teacher as his wife.

Using the bride's automobile and money, Perry having no funds, the couple left for Eagle River on their honeymoon. All was serene for two weeks and Houston W. Parker, proprietor of the resort where the couple stayed, reported later that he had never seen a happier or more contented pair.

On July 6 Perry borrowed a rifle

Mrs. Belcher's husband died in 1915.

Mrs. Belcher was the mother of nine children and is survived by 24 grand children and one great grand child. The surviving children are: G. W. Belcher, Eastland; Mrs. Mattie Maxwell, Olden; Henry Belcher, Stephenville; Charlie Belcher, Huckabay; Mrs. Hattie Apple, Mrs. Gracie Stem, Mrs. Minnie White and Mrs. W. B. Guthrie, all of Stephenville. All of the children, except Mrs. Guthrie who is in the hospital, were at their mother's bedside when she died.

Companions of Dead Prohibition Officer Summoned to Probe

PORT WORTH, July 28.—Companions of Prohibition Agent Raymond L. Ezzell, shot to death last night in a gun battle with Robert Whitehead, 24, negro, who also was slain, today were summoned for an inquest investigation.

Prohibition Agent J. W. Boyd said that he and Ezzell had an appointment to buy liquor from Whitehead, a bootlegger, in an alley.

"When Whitehead arrived in a car we waited for him to get out. When he did it Ezzell walked around in front of the machine," Boyd explained. "The negro opened fire, shooting twice. Ezzell fired just as the negro fired his second shot."

Whitehead was shot through the body near the heart. He died instantly. Ezzell was shot in the head and arm. He died at Harris hospital just as his wife arrived.

Prohibition Agent J. E. Hamilton accompanied by his wife had driven up behind Whitehead's machine but took no part in the brief encounter. A gallon of whisky and several cases of empty fruit jars were found in the car.

Varnier blinked a few times at the severity of the sentence, which was contrary to the expectations that he would be sent to a boy's school until he had reached 21, but otherwise displayed no emotion as he stood silently before Judge Sabath in the crowded courtroom.

His mother and father occupying a front row seat, trembled then closed their eyes and cried as Judge Sabath criticized them for the boy's weeping, which he pronounced responsible for Varnier's inability to distinguish between right and wrong.

YOUTH GIVEN 18 YEARS IN PENITENTIARY

CHICAGO, July 28.—Fifteen-year-old Varnier Corry, who killed a policeman when caught stealing a swim in a high school building, was sentenced today to 18 years in the Illinois state penitentiary at Joliet.

Judge Joseph Sabath passed the sentence on the youth "who never cried" with the explanation that he had consulted Warden Henry C. Hill of the penitentiary and assured himself that young Corry would not be brought into contact with other hardened criminals.

MORE ADVERTISING FOR WIDE OPEN NEVADA.

Delegates of the Presbyterian Synod of California and Nevada in convention at Sacramento extended sympathy to their fellow Christians who must live and labor to "promote morality in Nevada under the unhappy handicap which the moral breakdown of the state presents." Also the Synod condemned as un-American and traitors to the best moral interest of American and the national those responsible for moral conditions in Nevada.

A HINT TO THE TAXPAYERS

Col. Robert R. Penn, said to be one of the wise men of the oil industry, remarked to the house investigators "East Texas has been unfortunate in having unwise advisers; its production has caused the oil industry to collapse; unless checked it will cause Texas to lose hundreds of millions of dollars in the price of oil and hundreds of millions more in unrecoverable oil." Col. Penn spoke his mind freely as to the cause or the alleged cause. He said, "Texas is now losing $20,000 a day in the reduction of its oil taxes on account of low prices. Duty of enforcement is now in the hands of the railroad commission. With political pandemonium involved it is not remarkable that an elective commission failed to go into the east Texas proration enforcement especially when not all the oil men themselves could agree."

MAGNOLIA BOOSTS THE PRICE OF CRUDE.

There is a legislative investigation grinding away under the big dome on Capitol Hill, and on July 22, from headquarters in the city of Dallas, the Magnolia Petroleum company announced that effective immediately that its price for North and North Central and Oklahoma crude will be 40 cents a barrel at the wells. Also that until further notice the Magnolia would withdraw its present posted price in Kansas. There are signs of price awakening in the oil vales of the Southwest.

A FORMER TEXAN IN THE PRO PICTURE.

Prohibition Director Andrew McCampbell of New York and his raiders captured the largest brewery in that city uncovered in recent years. It is said the plant has the value of a million dollars. There were thousands of barrels of beer neatly stacked; well oiled and polished machinery, automatic fillers and refrigerating machinery. There were ledgers for each borough in New York city and books containing customers' lists are in the hands of Andy along with the other spoils.

A RAINBOW IN THE SKY

Montgomery Ward and company reported a profit of $107,706 for the quarter ended June 30, as compared with loss of $185,473 for the same period of 1930. Yes, the new world is coming back and the old world is approaching stabilization thanks to an Anglo-American program of rehabilitation financing.

ANOTHER ECONOMIC REVERSE REPORTED

It is announced by a news hound who appears to know about the illicit traffic world that beer has reached a low price level in the city of Austin. It was 25 cents a bottle for years. Now it is 15 cents and some places furnish two bottles for a quarter. Speaking for the thirsty, where are the two bottles for a quarter? Information solicited and no questions asked. Furthermore, whiskey has tumbled to a low price level. It is said to be selling as low as $4 a gallon. This, with a great crop of corn and plenty of rye the country over.

Too Much Tail for the Kite!

OTHER OPINIONS

MORE CHECKING THAN POLITICS

All the good news London has been getting out of Paris in the last week, has not been concerned with international politics; even more cheering — and possibly more interesting to some sections of the British public — must have been the unexpected victory of the English team in its Davis Cup matches with the United States. This means that for the first time since 1912 Britain enters the challenge round for the trophy of world tennis supremacy.

While the French veterans are expected to defeat Britain's young team in the final battle, the splendid showing so far made must encourage hopes that the long-dreaded supremacy of British tennis is over. The original great developer of outdoor sports, Britain has not been able to meet with complete complacency the "foreign" domination of "English tennis," particularly tennis, which the last few years have witnessed.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON E. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma.

Col. M. Foster, editor & manager of the Mount Carroll (Ill.) Mirror Democrat says: "That in any city in which a newspaper is published the merchants are always urging the editor to ask the people to stop at home, no matter whether they are advertisers in the paper or whether they send out their letters and statements on paper not printed at the office where they make their request, or not. And in most places the merchants many of them, receive their stationery from wholesale houses from which they buy goods, thus going away from home themselves and depriving the local newspaper of that which is merely their own."

Sometimes it is very hard to keep from telling the one who makes the request that they should consider what they preach. Many merchants send away for their own personal requirements. Even dry-goods and ready-to-wear merchants will allow their wives and daughters to go out of town for their own personal needs. People learn of this and do not take kindly to the advice that they should buy at home. All in all it does not argue well — neither with the reader nor the editor. That people should buy at home is as true as gospel, for the home merchant is a tax payer in a free state to this, that and the other public enterprise for which he is taxed every day, and the money spent at home remains there, while if sent to distant cities it is gone forever from the community. But we newspaper men would feel more like squaring away if the merchants themselves would have their stationery printed at home and not sent away when solicited for an advertisement as if they were printing it more as an act of charity than as a boost for their business, and there are many such merchants.

play British tennis. Better facilities have been provided for the game on playing fields; the public schools have been used to divide with tennis some of the attention given to cricket. The victory over America may be a result. Certainly the manner of it carried special satisfaction for the young men chiefly responsible. H. W. Austin and Frederick J. Ferry. Both had failed to step last month's American invasion of their own Championship at Wimbledon, where Francis X. Shields defeated the singles finale to his Davis Cup team mate, Sidney B. Wood.

Blessing as the win at Paris must have been to Britain, it was extremely disconcerting to the United States, which has not failed for 11 years to be the starter or the runner-up in Davis Cup competition. There has been some effort to explain the defeat on the ground that Shields and Wood are "only youngsters." It is pointed out, too, that John H. Doug, the national champion, was not on the American team which also for the first time in a decade was Tildenless. Such reflections may discourage American hopes for another year, but they should in no wise be allowed to detract from British satisfaction in this year's splendid victory, which in so far as it indicates that Britain is coming back in tennis — also gives satisfaction to many Americans — Christian Science Monitor.

ITALIAN PERFECTS MOTOR USING SEA WAVE POWER

ROME, July 28.—Signor Giovanni Cottugno, musical instrument maker of Ancona, has invented what he calls a hydrodynamic motor for using the energy in the waves of the sea. He has given the following particulars to the United Press.

"My apparatus consists in a wooden shaft about 14 feet long and weighing eight kilograms. The auto-propeller weighs only 200 grammes, and consists of two steel blades about one-fifth of a millimeter in thickness. When thrown into the sea, after a moment, it begins to move. The tiny waves break against the head of the machine, and instead of driving it to right and left, impress it with continued energy in a certain direction. Left in the open sea, the wooden apparatus would continue to move ahead for a long time even against the wind or current."

The apparatus has been tried in the sea off Ancona, and the reports as to its effectiveness have been satisfactory.

Signor Giovanni Cottugno told the United Press it was his intention to donate his invention to the Italian Red Cross to exploit it as they think best.

HOLES IN WALL ACTED AS VAULTS FOR INDIAN MAIDS

COLORADO SPRINGS, July 28.—Indian maidens who lived in New Mexico a thousand or more years ago did not have safety deposit vaults in which to store their jewelry so they hid it in the walls of their pueblos instead.

W. W. Postlewaite, treasurer of Colorado College, recently returned from an expedition during which he excavated the ancient pueblo of Chetro Keti in Chaco canyon in the New Mexican Navajo desert. He said that an Indian workman opened up a small hole in the adobe wall of a house and found a string of 1,045 jet and white beads. In a nearby pocket a large number of small bits of turquoise were discovered.

Postlewaite believes that the discovery of the ornaments means that it was the custom to secret valuables in the masonry of structures when Chetro Keti was inhabited hundreds of years ago.

MRS SKUNK AND BABES DELAY GOLF TOURS

BINGHAM, Wash., July 28.—Bingo golfers love their game. When river turtles parade across the tenth green, as river turtles sometimes do, the players think nothing of it.

But when a foursome approached the green and saw another skunk and five cubs playing playfully gamboling on the green, they held up their game until the visitors were safely away.

HERO UNABLE TO GET AID IN BUYING HIS WOODEN LEG

GARY, Ind., July 28.—George Stark, who literally broke his leg, is bemoaning the fact that, although the loss was suffered in a valiant rescue effort, no one appears willing to pay him for a new one.

Hobbin on crutches, he has made the rounds of city and county offices and charitable institutions, but after scanning statutes and by-laws, none was able to find specifications for providing aid to men with splintered wooden legs.

Stark even went to the Pennsylvania Railroad company, in whose interest, he said, he scattered his artificial leg. He pointed out that when he saw an auto bearing three men roll onto the tracks at a cross-

BOULDER DAM'S SQUATTER CITY "SNAPPIEST COLONY" IN WEST

WILLIAMSVILLE, Nev., July 28.—Homeless vagrants from many states migrating to southern Nevada, in hope of employment at Boulder Dam, pitched tents and built shacks here among the sage brush and Joshua trees on the site of an old squatter settlement and blossomed into the most up-to-date snappy squatter colony in the west.

The squalid huts of the original squatter colony at the mouth of Black Canyon have been replaced by clever little shacks made of powder boxes, carted away from the dam workings by the settler.

Claude Williams, of Williamsville, is the commanding genius of the squatter camp and his efforts have been a controlling force in bringing the colony into the eyes of the nation. Officially he is a United States deputy marshal, but literally he has made himself dictator of Williamsville.

Williams laid out Williamsville streets carefully and went so far as to name the two principal ones, "Main" and "Broadway." They are nothing but dust and sagebrush, but there is not an old tin can to be seen on one of them—or, for that matter, within miles of Williamsville.

The powder box houses, with the addition of few bolts and a couple of strips of canvas, makes high-topped squatters' quarters. The houses all have been set at regular intervals since the influx of squatters to the colony this year. This boom in Williamsville's population was caused, apparently, by the commercial depression, which has sent whole families, not only from all parts of the States, but from Mexico and Canada, looking for a new start. Hope of getting employment at Boulder Dam drew them here.

The population is about 600, and out of that number a great many have been unable to get work at the dam. There are no clothes for the destitute, no medicine for the sick, and those who have no shack or car make their beds with the jack rabbits.

EIGHTY-TWO YEAR OLD BOY WAS JUST "HER MAN"

WISE COURTHOUSE, Va., July 28.—"Uncle" John Gilliam, 82 former lumberman and veteran of the Spanish-American War, has brought home to Wise County his bride, former Miss Elva Laney, 22.

The trip from Bristol was made under difficulties, for after the wedding, Gilliam and his bride went to Fort Blackmore to board a train for Norton, their nearest station, only to miss it.

"Well," said the old man, "I could walk across the mountain in 15 minutes from here." "Let's do," said the bride, and they followed the old "Chief" Brainerd across High Knob to Norton, from where they took a taxicab home.

The couple met while "Uncle" John was buying timber on Stone Creek.

"From the first time I saw him," said the bride, "I couldn't love any of the other boys."

Heart of Liane

By MABEL McELLIOTT

HERE TODAY Barrett is fascinated by the casual love to her. Management is announcing Liane's debutante to forget him. Merrett, an actress, is on a traveling company. Liane leaves her home on Long street back to health. She is against accepting the offer of the rich Mrs. Cleespaugh. Liane's convalescence accepts the proposal of her father's son. It is a case of convenience. In sum, she has had a very busy day.

Shane blustered. He was watching with the tail of his eye as the men marshaled Mary Powjeski and the two men into a police car. Officer McHugh was busy bossing them. He was having the time of his life.

"The muddled that," Shane said absently. "Comes from having too many women in these racket!"

Liane's eyes were dancing. "You don't hold with women?"

The big man stared at her, squaring that formidable Irish jaw of his. "They're all right. In their place."

Clive's foot found the starter. He was racing the engine now. He leaned out, said to Shane above the roar, "Can't thank you, McDermid! If you hadn't been on the job—" He choked on the words.

"I want to come to see you tomorrow," he added.

"Any time. You'll want to prefer charges, maybe. But we have these fellows on other counts, anyhow. Dope peddlers, they are." The lieutenant waved to them. Liane could hear him blustering, as they drove away.

"Well, well, that's a good night's work."

Clive drove as if the demon were after him.

"You didn't let mother know about all this?" Liane exclaimed above the wind and the motor.

Clive shook his head. The girl glanced at the dashboard clock. "Only three," she marveled. It seemed impossible that two short hours before she had been dancing at the Hunt Club, fresh and carefree in a rose pink gown. So much had happened since. She reached for the vanity mirror in the car's pocket and gazed at herself in horror. A bedraggled bandage decorated her brow. It was stained with blood.

Clive turned to her, asking, "Head ache?"

"A little."

"We'll stop in the village and get out Doctor McNeill. I want to be sure no infection sets in."

The old doctor, roused from his slumbers, dressed and rebanded the wound. It was a brief cut, far up under the hairline. "No scar will mar your looks," the old man assured her gravely.

As he worked Liane could hear Clive's voice, speaking over the telephone in reassuring accents.

"Quite all right. Really, she is. We'll be home in 15 minutes."

"That was mother," he said, returning. "She was on her ear but I soothed her down. Thought you must surely be dead."

The old doctor looked at them with shrewd, bright eyes.

"Bit of an accident, that was," he said then. "Didn't know you were one of these one-arm drivers, Mr. Cleespaugh."

"I'm not," Clive laughed shortly. He said, "Some thugs tried to carry off Miss Barrett here. You may read of it in the papers although I hope we can manage to keep it out."

"Ah!" The physician shook his head. "There're a lot of rogues about these days ready to do harm to anyone."

At home, they found all rights burning and a worried little group assembled. Fortunately Cass had not been told exactly what had happened. She was still sufficiently an invalid to have facts served up to her in diluted form and she had retired early, unaware of the turmoil around her.

Mrs. Cleespaugh, still in her ball gown, met them in the hall. Liane had not supposed the self-contained old lady was capable of such emotion.

"My dear, my dear!" she kept saying, nipping at her eyes with a cobwebby handkerchief. "It's a miracle we have you safe and sound!"

The servants clustered around, big-eyed and examining. Clive demanded peremptorily that Liane should be packed off to bed at once and all the female contingent hastened to obey, with offers of hot water bags, spirits of ammonia, and what not.

"She's had a severe shock, the poor child," Mrs. Cleespaugh said, when she and Clive were alone in the study 20 minutes later. "I've asked Nora to sleep on the couch in her room on the chance she might wake and be frightened. What a dreadful experience!"

Clive was pacing up and down like a caged animal.

"And all the time I was thrash about doing nothing—" he burst out after a minute. "I lost my head. Didn't know what to do or where to turn. If it hadn't been for that fellow McDermid!"

His mother shrilled.

"Don't think of what might have happened," she cried. "It's too frightful. They've got the men, you say?"

"They have," Clive told her grimly. "They'll be punished to the limit of the law."

They sat silent for a few minutes. Then the old woman spoke again. Her voice held a new quality. "The marriage must take place soon," she said firmly. "It's dangerous letting things go along this way. Who knows what might happen to the poor child with all these cranks about? That is what they must be. I feel sure of it."

"McDermid seemed to think Liane has enemies," he said with some reluctance.

"Nonsense," declared the old

CONCENTRATE SALES SHOW BIG INCREASE

SAN FRANCISCO, July 28 - Despite reported threats of Al Capone and protests of ardent prohibitionists, sales of grape concentrates, a by-product of California wine grapes sold for making "grape beverages" in the home, are increasing tremendously and are far ahead of expectations, Donald Conn, managing director of a grape concentrate cooperative, said today.

The concern, a nation-wide merger of similar firms now organized as a growers' cooperative, first started marketing concentrates in Milwaukee two years ago. Despite warnings of wine and beer selling gangsters not to enter Chicago, merchandising in that and other cities of the east followed swiftly. Marketing in California was started this year.

Attacked by Drss.

Attacked by prohibitionists for selling products which could be made into wine and at the same time borrowing from the Federal Farm Board, the cooperative countered with the statement that it had never used the word wine, never referred to it and only sold a product designed for the manufacture of "grape beverages" in the home.

A grape juice in the same form as when the grapes are crushed and blended for certain wine flavors, constitutes the bulk of the sales, Conn said. Two new products sold in cans forming a concentrated syrup were recently placed on the market and are rapidly gaining in favor, according to Conn. The syrup is diluted by the consumer to make his "beverage."

Just Wholesaling

Conn revealed that his concern now has given up the retail distribution of the concentrates, finding it more profitable to act as wholesaler only, with the retailing done by drug stores, grocers and chain stores.

The concern plans within the next three years to increase the sales until they will be a profitable outlet for the entire surplus of California's $35,000,000 grape industry.

No figures were given showing the amount of concentrates now being marketed.

from Parker, saying he wished to do a "little shooting." Bride and bridegroom left together on the hunting trip.

A few hours later, Perry returned Parker's rifle, paid his bill, packed Mrs. Hackett's clothes, and drove away in her automobile.

This was the last time the bride was seen alive.

From Eagle River, Perry went to Cleveland, O., where the first of his bigamous wives, Mrs. Kathryn Gebhart, lived.

He stayed only a few days, however, and she later reported finding a woman's clothes in the back of Mrs. Hackett's automobile.

Married in Illinois. Nothing further was heard from Perry until Aug. 16, when he obtained a license in Carmel, Ill., to wed Miss Lydia Dawney.

Soon he tired of her, however, and on Aug. 27 he married Miss Elizabeth Morrison at Harrisburg, Ill.

Next he met Mrs. Herbert Milligan at Belleville, Ill., and she became his sixth wife on Oct. 6, a few days after the body of Mrs. Hackett was found.

Identification of the body sent police of every city on his trail. He went to Blytheville, Ark., where Mrs. Hackett's automobile was recognized and where he barely eluded arrest.

Police traced him to St. Louis, but he escaped again.

Found in San Francisco. In May 1931, two San Francisco Cal. detectives read a story of Perry's life in a detective story magazine.

They recognized a picture of him as a man who had reported the theft of a coat.

Perry was found at the home of Annie Marie Guitierrez, a rooming house owner, whom he had married under the name of Frank J. Moran.

It was her coat that had been stolen and Perry had boldly gone to the police station with a report of the loss.

He was taken into custody and stoutly and successfully denied he was Perry. He said he had been employed as agent for a labor union and that his name was Frank Moran.

The Vilas county murder warrant was found and extradition papers were signed by the governors of Wisconsin and California.

Perry was returned to Eagle River, where he entered a plea of not guilty to the murder charge, but readily admitted his identity.

repeated finding a woman's clothes in the back of Mrs. Hackett's automobile. Perry explained she said that the articles belonged to an aunt.

APPLE ORCHARD PRAYER AIDED CARRIE NATION

MONTGOMERY, Mo., July 28.—A fervent prayer in an apple orchard and the fact that liquor caused her to lose her own home led Carrie Nation into her fight against alcoholic beverages and the licensed saloon, her former manager, Harry C. Turner, has revealed.

A dogged determination — her will was personified by her initials "C. A. N." — carried the woman through her struggle, a struggle that started agitation for passage of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act, Turner said. He now is a newspaper man working here.

Her Story. Turner recalled the following story regarding the crusader: "I lost all the hopes of my young life through drink," Turner quoted the famous woman as saying. "I felt desperate and took it to the Lord in prayer on June 5, 1899, at my home at Medicine Lodge, Kan. I went behind my home and prayed in the apple orchard.

"The next day, I heard a voice: 'Go to Kiowa. Go to Kiowa, take something in your hands, and smash every place that is selling liquor.'

Turner revealed that, contrary to popular belief, Carrie Nation did not use a hatchet in her first anti-saloon raids. Rather, he said, she used bricks and rocks wrapped in paper to resemble packages.

Wrecked Three Saloons. "I broke three dives my first day," Turner said. Nation recalled when telling in later years of her experiences. "I broke the windows on the outside, smashed all the bottles I could find and threw bricks through the mirrors.

"At this time a crowd had gathered. I took advantage of the spectators to tell them of the work I was determined to do — to go away with the remaining saloons in Kansas and spread the gospel of temperance throughout the nation."

Mrs. Nation sometimes grew discouraged when she was faced with persecution, Turner said, but she always exhibited a bull-dog determination and carried on for her cause until her death 20 years ago.

MEXICAN GOVERNMENT AIDS OLYMPIC WORKERS

MEXICO CITY, July 28.—The Mexican Olympic committee in charge of arrangements for sending representatives to the Olympic games in Los Angeles next year has obtained financial aid for the purpose from the government.

The secretary of public education, Jose Manuel Ruiz Casaurane, has appointed as his representative Professor Miguel Ramirez, Jr., head of the department of physics of the department of fine arts. He has also agreed to secure funds for sending athletes to the United States. Other sporting organizations and clubs are working with the committee to complete plans.

PROFESSOR'S SPECIMENS PRESERVED IN WHISKY

MARIETTA, O., July 28.—Professor H. R. Eggleston, Marietta college biologist, recently went about the business of putting a collection of preserved snakes and beetles in new containers. When the task was completed, Professor Eggleston was the owner of five gallons of an extinct species of American drink — whisky.

The specimens were put up in 1949. It was liquor more than 80 years old.

The professor said he had attributed the peculiar color of the preserving fluid to disintegration because of extreme age of the specimens.

"I have read old biological reports in which field men requisitioned a keg of whisky for preservative, since it was cheaper than alcohol then," the professor said, "but until now I had been skeptical about the contents of these kegs."

COLUMBIA GAME SWITCHED.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 28.—The 1931 Brown-Columbia football game, scheduled for Baker Field, New York, November 14, has been transferred to Providence.

Another change in the Brown gridiron program for the coming season sees the Bruins playing Holy Cross at Worcester on October 31, instead of here.

"Uter poppycock, I hope he didn't say that to her. She might get fateful about it and that would never do. No, she needs your name, your protection."

"Thanks!" The young man's short laugh was bitter.

His mother ignored this. "The Prince telephoned just before you came in," she said. "He said his car was mired in some swamp out near Babylon. They were following the discription and discovered there were two young policemen in it. He was very much chagrined."

"No more than I," Clive admitted. "Although even if McDermond hadn't come in time perhaps I should have been able to save Liane."

The thought rankled that he had been too late to be her rescuer. "Go to sleep and forget about it," his mother advised. She patted his shoulder. He kissed her awkwardly. What a really good sort she was, he reflected. Perhaps he had never appreciated her until now.

Silent Indians Balk Probe Of Girl's Slaying

WHITE RIVER, Ariz., July 28.—The traditional silence of the redskins appeared today to have broken in the mysterious slaying of Henrietta Schmeidler, Columbia university co-ed who went to live among the Indians to learn about their habits and manners.

More than 1,000 Apaches from the Indian reservation on which the crime took place were in the possession which searched the rugged country side for clues but it was freely admitted that the murderer probably was among the searchers and neither he nor his companions would talk.
