Cisco Schools Begin New Term Monday at 9 o'Clock

CHANGES IN COURSES OF STUDY MADE

The public schools of Cisco will open their doors to students for the 1931-32 term tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock with exercises at the various school buildings.

This will include explanations of the various changes that have been made in the system of instruction and the organization of the school, as well as information on other and minor details concerning the operation of the institutions.

Enrollment of pupils will not begin until Monday morning immediately after the exercises. Experience has shown, Mr. Cluck stated, that registration of students before the opening day does not eliminate the necessity of devoting the opening day to this work because of the large number of students who do not present themselves before hand.

In view of the reorganization of the courses of study, freshmen should advise with their parents before determining upon the courses they are to take, Mr. Cluck said.

This new grouping of courses of study has been announced as follows: Beginning with the session 1931-32, students in the high school will be graduated from departments. Special attention of sophomores and freshmen is directed to these new groupings as outlined below, so that there will be no difficulty in meeting the requirements. The change, although instituted this year will be applied flexibly for the first year so as to assist the students in adjusting their work to its requirements, it was pointed out.

Under the provisions of the change a student who has taken a certain course for a year, will be permitted to change, if he desires, but in such case he must meet all of the requirements of the new course and this, in instances, may entail loss of units already obtained.

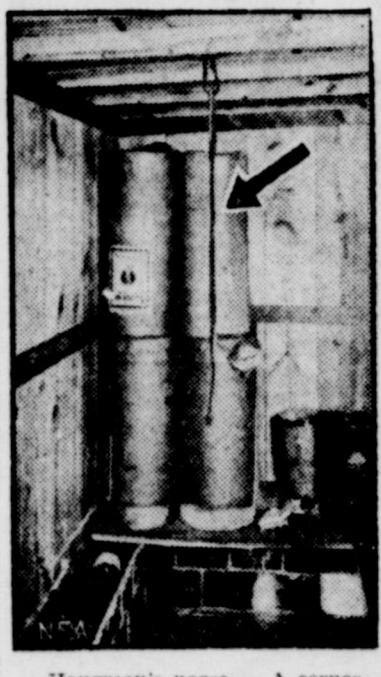

The first three courses outlined here are designed for pupils expecting to attend college after completion of the high school work.

AS "BLUEBEARD" TOLD HOW HE KILLED FIVE

As "bluebeard" confessed - Harry F. Powers, suave 45-year-old West Virginian, is shown here, right, with Detective Carl Southern of Clarksburg as the confessed mass murderer of five signed the confession in which he told how he lured his women victims through a matrimonial agency and then hanged them in his garage.

Hangman's noose - A corner of Powers' garage where he says he hanged his victims with the rope indicated by the arrow and then dropped them into his subterranean chamber.

CISCO SCHOOL PRINCIPALS SEEK TO ESTABLISH CLOSER CONTACT BETWEEN SCHOOLS AND PATRONS

In response to request of the Daily News the following principals of the schools in the Cisco system have written articles dealing with various questions concerning the relation of the public to the schools. By this means the News has endeavored to bring closer together the public and those charged with responsibility for the successful conduct of the schools and to increase a sense of cooperation between patrons and school officials and teachers.

CHANGES IN POLICY By H. BRANDON Principal of High School. Realizing that certain changes in the administrative policy of the high school are greatly needed in order to promote higher scholastic attainment, we think it wise to make changes relative to our recitation periods and the plan of graduation. It is hoped that these changes will create an incentive on the part of the students to reach a higher scholastic level and that the patrons will cooperate with the administration in raising the standards of our school.

The Hour Recitation Plan The experiments of other schools have proven this plan to be very effective in making the pupils more efficient in their work. Under this plan, approximately one-third of the time will be devoted to supervised study. If the teacher makes it the proper use of this time, the pupil who is ordinarily slow in grasping the work will have an opportunity for a more thorough explanation than could be given in the old forty-five minute period. Not only will it be an advantage for the slow pupil, but it will tend to make the more alert child more efficient.

The Plan For Graduation In order to give public recognition to the attainments of the graduates, the class will be graduated in groups as follows: those who graduate with high honors; those graduating with honors; and those who merely graduate. To facilitate the proper grouping, we are instituting the Point System. Under this plan a grade of 90 and above will have a value of 3 credit points; 82 through 89 a value of 2 credit points; and 75 through 81 a value of 1 credit point. The semester grades of each pupil that are recorded will be converted to credit points as an early date in order that each pupil may know his or her official standing.

To be eligible for graduation, a student must have earned 16 affiliated units and a minimum of 45 credit points, 32 of which must be based upon literary work. The remaining 13 points may be earned either through extra-curricular activities or superior grades. A minimum of 4 credit points for extra-curricular activities will be required of all graduates.

STERLING TO CALL COTTON SESSION TUES.

HOUSTON, Sept. 5. - Governor Ross Sterling said tonight that he will call the Texas legislature in special session at noon Tuesday to consider remedies for the cotton situation. The governor was at his home here.

"It will be a farmers' session and they'll have to ramrod it themselves," said the governor. "I'm going fishing tomorrow."

"They say 19 of the 31 state senators favor a special session for acreage reduction, but I haven't heard from that many," said the executive.

Through the spectacular Long plan came a week after Governor Huey P. Long rushed here by airplane a copy of his plan for a ban on cotton growing in 1932 which had already been approved by the Louisiana legislature.

Through the largest cotton producing state in the country advocates of legislative curbs on cotton tonight saw in the call the possibility of relief from the overproduction which had sent the price of cotton to 6 cents.

Officials of the Texas cotton cooperative association tonight said that the so-called McDonald plan of a 50 per cent reduction in acreage had been favored by 20,000 farmers at mass meetings this week in preference to the Long plan of a complete ban on cotton for a year.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 5. - A special session of the Georgia legislature to consider cotton relief became a mere formality late today when Governor Ross Sterling of Texas announced he would call the Texas legislature in special session for September 8. Governor Richard B. Russell, Jr., of Georgia, announced earlier in the week that all he was waiting upon was the announcement from Texas.

HOUSTON, Sept. 5. - C. A. Jones and his pretty wife were slain to avenge the killing of Johnny Cherris. That was the theory advanced by officers today as they sought one of the two men charged with Cherris' murder.

School Organization Changes Explained

By R. N. CLUCK Superintendent of Schools. The opening of a new school year is at hand. As we enter this new year, our object should be to make it the very best school year in the history of Cisco.

The object of it is that the teacher may supervise her own pupils in her own work and in her own individual way. Under the old plan, the large number of students in the study hall made it impossible for all of them to get the advice and help on the various subjects which they actually needed.

It is a false, yet very prevalent attitude among parents here and elsewhere that they have no part in the education of the child. Their task, as they conceive it, is to send the boy or girl to school, place him in the hands of the teacher, and expect these two, the teacher and pupil, to work out a successful educational program for the child. This is a mistaken conception of what actually constitutes the essential elements of education.

Another element which is certain to make for a stronger school in the literary phase is the honor point system. As has been explained elsewhere, the honor point system means that a student graduating from this school must have a certain number of honor points. At the concluding exercises of the school, there will be three types of graduates: first, the high honor graduates, composed of the boys and girls who have highest honors; second, honor graduates, those who have a certain number of honor points; third, graduates, those who have completed the course prescribed for the eleventh grade.

The Lobo band, which is an outside school activity financed by an Old-time chamber of commerce, has proven a very valuable asset to the school. This organization is directed by Professor G. W. Collum, who has been very actively engaged in teaching music for 19 years, having studied piano and music theory under Anthony Stankovitch, instructor in Tulsa School of Music at Tulsa, Okla., also completed course in band music at Conn School of Music in Chicago.

Through this organization, free instruction including private lessons, class lessons and rehearsals are available to any boy or girl in Cisco who have reasonable amount of musical promise. About 60 students are kept in training all the time of which about 45 are senior members. Aside from the educational value of this band, they give their services to the school athletic activities and to the city and chamber of commerce and whenever called upon, they are anxious to give support and assistance to any civic project connected with the interests of our city, and it is unnecessary to say they have brought credit that has done honor to Cisco in the past.

The prospects for a good band this coming season are very promising, says Mr. Collum, notwithstanding the loss of trained students this year has been unusually heavy. He has fortunately had in training a larger number of recruits which is due to increased interest in the band, therefore the personnel is now larger than last year. It has been said that "the boy who blows a horn is less likely to blow safe."

For this and other reasons the band fills a great need for boys and girls, and through it Cisco is able to boost its school, foot ball team and the town.

NEW CITIZEN Rigdon Edwards, of Abilene, moved to Cisco to become manager of the Magnolia service station, D avenue. Mr. Edwards is a graduate of McMurry college at Abilene. Cisco welcomes this young man into its business circles.

PROPERTY AT SIXTH AND E IS ACCEPTED

The treasury department of the United States government Saturday announced selection of the Guy Dabney proposal property as the site for the federal building to be located here. Mr. Dabney served as agent for three participating owners of the property, which will be purchased for an announced price of $2,500, according to the United Press dispatch.

The property abuts the north and west lines of the intersection of E avenue and Sixth street, fronting 230 feet on Sixth street and 115 feet on E avenue. It contains 28,200 square feet and consists of lots seven, eight, nine and ten of block 53 of the original townsite.

Plans for the Cisco building are practically completed. It is understood actual work is expected to begin on the structure by the first of January.

WES HODGES, YOUNG BRECK EDITOR, DIES

Wesley D. Hodges, 24 editor of the Breckenridge American died Saturday morning at 9:30 a.m. at a Breckenridge sanitarium from an attack of peritonitis following an appendicitis operation Thursday. His condition until Friday evening was considered normal but the complication which set in at that time rapidly became grave. Saturday morning at 9 o'clock attending physicians announced that hope of his recovery had been abandoned. Forty minutes later the youth's newspaperman expired.

Funeral services will be held this afternoon at 5 o'clock from the Methodist church at Breckenridge. Interment in the Breckenridge cemetery will follow. The Rev. Kenneth Pope, pastor of the First Methodist church, and the Rev. Ross Smith, pastor of the First Baptist church, of this city, will officiate. The funeral will be preceded by prayer services for the family at the home.

Active pall bearers will be Mr. Smith, L. D. Deere, J. D. Sandiford, Jr., Porter Daniel, John Ward and E. Hendrix.

Surviving are his widow, whom married at Breckenridge about year ago; his mother and father Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Hodges, of San Angelo, and two brothers, Robt. of San Angelo and Allen, of Tyler. Mr. Hodges came to Breckenridge from San Angelo in 1928 as a porter on the American. In that capacity he served until about 4 years ago when, with the resignation of A. Garland Adair as editor, he was promoted to that position. As editor of the Breckenridge paper he early gained the esteem of his townspeople his contemporaries in the oil belt and elsewhere, and proved himself an energetic, and conscientious journalist, and a great booster and believer in his city and one who promised with a bright future in the profession.

A SAFE FORTRESS:—A safe fortress is round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even for ever.—Psalm 125: 2.

A SECRET RETREAT:—Hear my voice, O God, in my prayer; preserve my life. Hide me from the secret counsel of the wicked.—Psalm 64: 1, 2.

WE NEED ACTION.

Some time ago the Daily News spoke editorially upon the urgency of undertaking a satisfactory settlement of our municipal bonded debt question. The News pointed out that the uncertain and threatening conditions that hang over the city as the result of this question are stifling our municipal spirit and restricting the natural growth to which, by advantages of location and resources, Cisco is entitled. It further pointed out that the responsibility for undertaking a settlement of this question is indubitably imposed upon the city commission. The members of that commission were elected with that responsibility in mind, and every citizen who cast a vote, cast it in the conviction that he was voting for action. He was not voting simply to give some other citizen a job, or to provide the elected with a political sinecure to be perpetuated through carefully constructed political rings and machines ironically justified by the "voice of the people."

Cisco has had enough of political rings. The great mass of its citizens, the real mind of the public, which is not expressed through anonymous, ill-informed and purposely destructive propaganda inspired purely for a political purpose, is deeply resentful of the very term.

Yet there are conscientious public officials who tremble every time some self-styled spokesman of the "masses" mentions the "voice of the people," and vacillate on issues that demand above everything common sense and honest, single-minded effort. For the benefit of these it should be pointed out that "the voice of the people," as sacred a thing as it is, does not know how to get what it wants. The very system of government under which we operate is evidence of that fact. The public, bearing in mind its constitutional guarantees of the rights of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," denies its mass ability to achieve these objects and delegates powers to constitutionally authorized agents whose responsibility it is to provide the means, recognizing at the same time their stewardship and the necessity of giving an accounting of it at regular intervals.

It should be clear to our commission that it cannot look without itself for a solution to the pressing question that confronts it. In view of the very object of its existence it alone can undertake that solution. It cannot sit supinely down and wait for the solution to come to it. Its duty is to make an honest effort, regardless of thought of political consequences, and unless it does that it is shirking its responsibilities.

The News has always sought to support the elected representatives of the people. It has and will continue to exert its influence to help them in the performance of their duties for the interests of Cisco. It has not made a practice of carping criticism, of unjust censure that hampers them. The men who compose our present body are fine, able men, conscientious and, above all, honest. They deserve the support of the public and they will gain that support in a definite, determined movement toward the accomplishment of the purpose for which they were elected.

Obviously the first essential to a settlement of this problem is a well-defined, flexible, plan of operation. Some eager steps have been taken in this direction but the lack of a united purpose seems to be the most apparent feature of these steps. If the commission has not and is unable to provide itself with such a suitable program, its members by all means should consult capable and experienced authorities for direction.

The News deems it its duty, as the recognized medium of local public expression and information, to point out these facts, kindly, but none the less firmly. To censure is no part of its intention. Instead it stands willing and eager to do in any able program of relief. But, on the other hand, it does not intend to stand supinely by and countenance, unopposed, delay and uncertainty that threaten to prevent the necessary action until it is too late.

LAW ENFORCEMENT.

"London, the largest city in the world—larger by two million inhabitants than New York—is deeply humiliated by the fact that there were 21 murders in that city during '30," comments the Marshall Morning News editorially. The cause for this is the fact that the number of murders jumped from 10 in 1929. We wonder how deep would be the millation if London approached the terrible slaughter that exists in this country. Chicago had 364 murders in 1930 and New York followed with 346. But, as the Denison Herald points out, Southern cities, many of them at least, have a rather murder record, according to population, than either of two great American metropolises.

"Of the 21 men who committed murders in London," continues the Marshall News by way of contrasting English law enforcement results with our own, "20 of them were apprehended, six of them committed suicide before their trial, seven were given the death penalty, two were given long sentences and one was declared justifiable homicide."

The Marshall paper then quotes the Denison Herald in pointing for the vast difference in the number of murders in England and the United States, as follows:

"In England a convicted murderer, unless it is proven he has been justifiable homicide, gets the death penalty, and the death penalty means just that. Instead of appeals, retrials, legal technicalities and delays, the sentence is given and carried out with dispatch. To commit murder and draw conviction means the gallows. The murderer knows that and he is loath to risk it. Over here conviction means little. There are too many ways to defeat the law. That is why many small cities in America have more murders in one year than the great city of London."

May we suggest that the real reason for the small percentage of illegal homicides in London and other English cities is fundamentally one of attitude. Contrasting English and American methods of law enforcement there is one salient difference that stands out. The public and the police cooperate. The men who guard the public peace of the English commonwealth have the confidence and the moral support of the citizens. Why? Fundamentally because English police do not rely on brute force but on intelligence. They have not brought back outlawed inquisitional methods under cover, they have not usurped trial functions, disciplinary powers or the right of corporal punishment. They, in other words, do not regard themselves as charged with the suppression of crime. Their operations remain strictly within the legal guarantees to the citizens whose safety it is their duty to guard; and they leave trials to the court and punishment to the authorized agents of the commonwealth who perform their duties in accordance with the constitutional requirements.

There are no "third degrees" in England; no predetermination of the guilt or innocence of the accused in the secrecy of police court star chamber sessions. He is held strictly innocent until he has been legally proven otherwise in the proper court. Evidence is established before, not after, the arrest.

There has been much criticism of the high cost of the Wickensham commission's investigation of law enforcement in America. Outcries against the alleged extravagance of the commission have been heard from all sides. But its report on the methods of constabulary functioning in our American cities is an illuminating document.

If, by clearly revealing the weakness of the American system of law enforcement as responsible for the near-anarchic conditions of crime that prevail, the commission has opened the way for effective revision of the system, then its huge cost is a major economy.

There is no tendency here to censure the men who compose our American police forces. They are brave men for the most part, conscientious in the discharge of their duties and subjected to constant dangers which make their everyday work acts of heroism. The censure is of the system. It is a system that seems to have developed from the recent frontier character of American life and thinking, a system predicated upon the intense individualism of that day. The idea of force was then a predominant one; the self-sufficiency of the individual was of major importance in the single-handed struggle for existence in a virile and new land. The traditions of that day still color our national thinking.

It has been too recent that the common enemy was physically without, consequently we have not been able to revise our attitude and system to meet the new enemy that arises within the legal guarantees of our national organization.

OTHER OPINIONS

HOW IS YOUR HEALTH?

It is always easier to prevent than to cure disease, and the advice, "See a doctor," is always timely because periodic physical examinations are infinitely better than periodical illnesses.

Just now, however, it seems to us that safeguarding the health is more important than ever before in the experience of most of us, because of the increased value of health from an economic standpoint and the increased menace to health of conditions under which most of us are laboring from day to day.

All of us are carrying greater burdens than ever before, and they have a direct bearing upon the condition of our health. We are doing more work, serving longer hours and under greater nerve strain than ever before. Days filled with labor and with anxiety are followed by nights of restlessness, and although many of us are unconscious of it, our over-taxed nerves are beginning to protest. Unsuspected organic disorders probably are beginning to undermine the strength of body that is invaluable from an economic point of view because it is so vitally necessary to the continued functioning of the bread winner of the family.

The human body is a delicate piece of machinery. Just now it is carrying heavier loads over steeper grades and longer distances than at any other time in the memory of most of us. We are poor business men and women if we neglect to care for our bodies under such conditions. Health preservation, at the cost of the doctor's fee, is worth many times its cost. Under any conditions, health is a precious asset. Now it is a vitally necessary asset, and should be cared for according to its value.—Brownwood Bulletin.

ROGERS GAY PLAYBOY IN NEW PICTURE

In "Young As You Feel," his latest Fox starring picture, Will Rogers discards the personal habits of a lifetime on stage or screen as a well-groomed, Bond Street tailored gentleman.

Rogers has not gone Hollywood. His striking wardrobe is a definite part of the very human characterization Rogers portrays as "Lemuel Morehouse," dyspeptic, grouchy old fogey who is compelled to turn ultra modern as an example for his two sons.

"Young As You Feel" which is the screen version of George Ade's hilarious play, "Father And The Boys" and which opens today at the Palace theatre deals with the widowed father of two modern sons, a man who has devoted his life to their interest and who wishes them to settle down to business and become happy, contented husbands.

The boys, however, have other ideas. One goes in heavily for sport while the other makes of sport a mania. Then Rogers resorts to desperate measures. A revolution takes place in his character, brought about by a chance meeting with a professional entertainer, portrayed by Phil Dorsay, with whom Rogers made so much hilarity in "They Had To See Paris."

From a staid, opinionated despondent, set-in-his ways old fogey Rogers changes overnight into a gay blade. His neglect of business is appalling to his general manager, played by Lucien Littlefield, and a decided shock to his sons; but Rogers and Phil Dorsay, with whom Rogers made so much hilarity in "They Had To See Paris."

Geesop begins to fly which is just the needed element to bring his sons to their senses and makes them settle down to business.

"Young As You Feel" is reported to be the best picture Will Rogers has made to date. It combines the homespun wit of George Ade's characteristic slang and the infectious humor of Rogers.

In addition to Phil Dorsay and Lucien Littlefield, Rogers' support-

"SERVICE THAT SATISFIES"

You Can Make Your Own Electric Rate

Your true electric rate is not the amount paid per kilowatt-hour for service used on the first or top step—but the net average cost per kilowatt-hour for all current consumed. Residential customers of the West Texas Utilities Company paid, during 1930, an average of only 6.5c per kilowatt-hour—and those customers using an electric range and electric refrigerator received service at an average rate of approximately 4c per kilowatt-hour!

The statement, then, that "you can make your own electric rate" is obviously true, for the more you take advantage of the many conveniences and comforts of electric service, the more inexpensive your service will become. The addition of new Electrical Servants will reduce your average cost per kilowatt-hour and bring you new comforts and conveniences worth far more than the slight cost of the additional service required.

The average residential customer now uses fifty kilowatt-hours per month. He could increase his service to three times that amount and only increase his total bill by approximately 10c a day.

Investigate the possibilities of complete household electrification. You will be surprised to find the equipment exceedingly moderate in first cost, and the operating expense ridiculously low.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON--One sure way to get into trouble is to propose a remedy for some situation. Two to one, it will be acclaimed on one side and hooted on the other. The Federal Farm Board is in the cross-fire at present. When the proposal was made to trade 25,000,000 bushels of wheat for 1,050,000 bags of Brazilian coffee, the great American prairies could have reverberated with joy.

But now the American Shippers' Association is howling. All the carrying of the exchange commodities is to be done in Brazilian ships. They will bring cargoes of coffee to New York and take cargoes of wheat back to Brazil, and American ships will not participate--at a time, says the association, when shipping is particularly bad. So they yell.

And if millions of persons start raising their own food, the farmers raising the food for them now will balk. So will the grocers, middlemen, railroads, butchers, canners, and so on.

THE Farm Board was at one time trying to whoop up a greater consumption of wheat. Raisers of other foods from the farm protested that this was discrimination against them because the more wheat people ate the less they would eat of other products. So the Farm Board piped down. The board's co-operation activities are supposed to be good for the farmers, but they threaten the large and important grain trade. So the board and the grain trade consider themselves in a war to the death. Prohibition was undoubtedly a boon to rum-hounds and makers of furniture, automobiles, radio sets and what not, but it was tough on the liquor and beer business and their hundreds of thousands of employees--as well as on the U. S. Treasury.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON TURNING TO THE GENTILES

Text: Acts 13:42-52 The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Sept. 6 Turning to the Gentiles. Acts 13:42-52.

By WM. E. GILFOY, D. D. Editor of The Congregationalist

The success of the early missionary activities in the Island of Cyprus led quickly to larger plans for the first missionary journey in Asia Minor. Paul, apart from going out constantly in the quest of new fields, must have had an interest in preaching the Gospel in the region of his birthplace. Thus it was that leaving Paphos in Cyprus, Paul and Barnabas crossed to the mainland, landing at Pergo in Pamphylia. Here for some reason John Mark, Barnabas' nephew, left them, returning to Jerusalem. The cause of his leaving them is not indicated. Apparently there was some disagreement. Later Paul and Barnabas went different ways because of contention about whether or not they should take John Mark with them.

Apparently they did not stay long in Pergo but came to Antioch in Pisidia -- a city that is to be distinguished from Antioch in Syria where the disciples were first called "Christians." Here at Antioch they went into the synagogue on the Sabbath Day, and Paul spoke to the Jews summarizing the great developments in religious life of the Jewish people and placing in that setting the mission and work of Jesus. Either some Gentiles were present in the synagogue or they heard of Paul's address, for they requested that on the following Sabbath that he should preach to them also.

The preaching of the Gospel in this way had the effect that it seemed to have wherever Paul had preached it -- some were responsive and believed, others were aroused with the fury of prejudice. Paul's preaching was full of hope and grace to some, but full of blasphemy to others. Apparently, also, as is usually the case where old and new ideas come in conflict, there were mixed motives in those who were stirred to opposition and persecution. They were moved partly by prejudice in favor of their former beliefs and partly by seeing Paul's preaching attaining marked effect.

The outstanding point here is the effect of this situation upon Paul and Barnabas themselves. Paul saw the attitude of the Jews were opposing him and the responsiveness of the Gentiles and determined that his mission was to be among the Gentiles. Thus the early Christian missionary enterprise became world-wide and universal in its appeal and its effect.

It was a great thing when the new experience in Christ extended beyond the territorial bounds, and spreading from Jerusalem to Antioch pushed beyond to the islands and through Asia Minor into Europe. It was a much greater thing when the spirit of this new movement burst the bonds of all narrow, sectarian and racial prejudice.

The Christian missionary enterprise began with largeness of vision, with breadth in its setting, and with a largeness of spiritual outlook to match its world-wide vision. The world has grown vastly in size since the days when Paul and Barnabas came into Asia Minor and Paul turned to the Gentiles. If some rejects the missionary enterprise and the missionary spirit have not quickened pace with the growth of the world and with increasing opportunity. The Christian church of today, to be worthy of its Master, must meet these new situations in the spirit of Paul and Barnabas, with the patience of the pioneer exploring new fields and with the depth of the prophet seeking the largest conception of truth.

GIANT EAST TEXAS OIL FIELD OPENS

KILGORE, Sept. 5. -- The great East Texas oil field, a modern El Dorado that threatened to destroy itself and the entire petroleum industry today was reopened for production.

Col. L. S. Davidson, second in command to Brig. Gen. Jacob F. Walters, leading the 600 troops occupying the area, announced that the fields far-flung wells had been opened at 7 a. m. pursuant to the railroad commission's order. Giant wells, many of them capable of yielding as high as 40,000 barrels daily, were restricted to the puny output of 225 barrels per day. The entire field containing more than 1,300 wells in an area measuring more than 600 square miles and sprawling over four counties, was under a railroad commission proration order giving the field a daily total production of about 340,000 barrels daily.

Armed troops remained in the field as the martial law order was not lifted. A kelton detail of the state's cavalrymen will remain until a promise of continued orderly production under the new proration order is given.

Actress Dies in Fall From Window NEW YORK, Sept. 5. -- Myra Langford, 35, actress who scattered her husband's ashes over Times square from an airplane last year, leaped or fell to her death today from her hotel window, just off Times square.

The actress a year ago, February 10, complied with the odd request of her husband, made just before his death. He wanted his body cremated and tossed over Times square from an airplane.

Fire in Theater Endangers Hundreds

NEW YORK, Sept. 5. -- Labor troubles were blamed by police today for fire which imperiled the lives of 1,800 persons in a theater last night.

The fire burst from a package of phosphorous which had been dropped by a man sitting in a front row.

IN THE AFRIKAN JUNGLE

In my last yarn I told you about th' time Perky Swipes and I had gone ashore in Africa to hunt lions, how a lion had chased us, and how, just as he was about to grab us, we had tripped over a log near where our boat was moored; how th' lion had sailed over our heads, landed in th' boat and drifted out, while we were stranded in th' jungle with no way to get back to our ship.

Well s'r, th' only way to get back to th' ship was to hike through th' jungle, so off we went. But later on we traveled another way, and that's what this yarn's about. We saw lots of wild animals, but we were shy and didn't let 'em see us if we could help it. But a dadd-ratted elephant spotted us and then th' fun began—for th' elephant.

He sort of rumbled over th' ground, and was gainin' on us so we shinned up a tree and were just goin' to give him th' raspberry when I'll be kicked if he didn't wrap his trunk around th' tree, pulled it up by th' roots, galloped away with it and dumped tree and all into a nearby river. And there we were hangin' on like a couple of scared coons, driftin' along. Wasn't that a pretty fix for a couple of lion hunters to be in?

In my next yarn you'll hear something that'll make you snicker

WEIRD EFFECTS PLANNED FOR CHICAGO FAIR

By JULIAN T. BENTLEY
United Press Staff Correspondent
CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Modern wizardry of light and shadow will produce weird, beautiful illuminating effects at the lake front Century of Progress Exposition, Chicago's World Fair of 1933.

Fantastic, almost eerie, lighting arrangements will throw into sharp relief of ever changing colors the buildings of revolutionary design, which are rising upon the man-made land of the exposition site.

In the basement workshop in the administration building, the secrets are revealed. Here electrical experts under Edwin D. Tilson, illuminating engineer, are at work on the problem of supplying the light.

Here, with miniature models of the exposition buildings, the engineers work, playing intricate patterns of many colored light beams on tower and facade; shifting the angle of reflection, experimenting with shades which ran the gamut of the spectrum; noting each effect carefully; and producing startling and beautiful effects.

Prisms, slowly revolving cylinders bearing long neon tubes, fans and motors throw ever changing beams of light, tongues of flame and complex whirling patterns of light and shadow upon the building models.

Gay, bizarre cut-out patterns for wall niches gleam with an almost barbaric splendor as the brilliant shades from the gas-burning bulbs shine through from behind. Then slowly the dazzling colors give place to softer shades as a revolving cylinder of long neon tubes begins to turn behind the pattern. A "Columbus of Fire" burns within a tall glass cylinder, the strange flames rising and falling, ever licking upward.

With simplicity and economy the watchwords of the engineers, the secret of the lighting effects often is quite simple.

So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them."—Genesis 1:26, 27.

INTERVIEWS SUGGESTED
By HOWARD H. COSS
Principal of West Ward

As much as I am a new man in Cisco, and entirely unfamiliar with the details of your educational program, it will not be my purpose, study, they may safely expect a happy and busy year. If teachers and patrons resolve to maintain a spirit of helpful cooperation through out the year our problems will be largely solved in the beginning.

It seems to me this year offers unusual opportunities for valuable P. T. A. work. Our South Ward P. T. A. has been a very live factor in our success in this Ward for many years. We have a splendid group of cooperative mothers standing by to give us the commendable feeling of knowing they are always there to lend a helping hand in any situation.

Let us get going early and make this a banner year for Cisco schools.

There will be a number of parents who will want to talk with me about their child, or about some special problem in connection with the child. In a great many cases some work and trouble for all parties concerned can be avoided by an interview between parent and teacher. In view of the fact that the first day of school is a very busy one, probably the most trying one of the year, I will set aside the entire morning of Saturday, September 12, and will be in the office at West Ward for the purpose of talking with parents. Whether you have a particular purpose in calling or not, I will be glad to have you call and get acquainted.

Although the teachers will not have a great deal of time to talk with you on the first day of school, in this article, to comment on such, but to make a suggestion to the public, the obedience of which will help me and the other teachers of West Ward during the first few days of school.

I fully realize the responsibility placed on me. Like the motor of an automobile is placed in the hands of some five hundred children, been, partially entrusted to me, and in directing the minds of these children I am asking your cooperation, and hope you will help the pupils to do the same.

The system of teaching music is copyrighted and taught only by authorized instructors. A written guarantee is given that the pupil will play three grades of music or more within 30 days.

The regular periods of instruction are one hour lessons each week with all further instruction free.

discouragement so necessary to his development.

We urge that the parents see that the child is as nearly perfect to his physical being as is possible, for with the long school term confronting him every possible advantage should be given him.

Help your child arrange his hours of work and recreation so that ample time will be allotted in each case. Visit the school as often as you can, this will enable you to become acquainted with the school habits of your child and enable you to cooperate with the teachers in helping solve his difficulties.

It is very desirable that the parents guide the children in the selection of their supplementary reading. Unfortunately the school has little available library material and it becomes necessary that the pupil depend upon the home or his friend for books. In several instances the teachers have discovered "circulating" libraries of "trashy" reading matter that should certainly have been replaced by good wholesome material. Books and stories make a lasting impression on the grammar school boy or girl, let us try to make that impression worth while.

TEAMWORK NECESSARY
By MRS. IRENE HALLMARK
Principal of South Ward
The summer vacation is over for Cisco school boys and girls and Monday morning marks the opening of our 1931 and '32 school year. I hope each and every one has spent a pleasant and profitable summer and is ready to come back to work with zest, expecting to make the most of each opportunity. All pulling together as one great team to make this the most successful school year possible.

GUILTY LIPS

Laura Lou Brookman Author of "MAD MARRIAGE"

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 Betty Norma Kent, 20-year-old daughter of a lawyer, marries Mark Travers, son of F. M. Travers, millionaire real estate dealer, the father has sworn to cut off without a penny if the marriage takes place. Norma has known Mark only a few weeks, did not know during the courtship that she was marrying a millionaire's son.

As the train speeds south through the western metropolis, Chris Saunders, with whom Norma had an apartment, and Bradley, Chris' employer, are with her at the wedding. Before this she at the wedding refused to go with her. Bob Farrell, young lawyer whom she is fond of as a friend, Mark tells his expensive road to get money for the honeymoon. He and Norma depart Blue Springs, fashionable resort town, where there is something forgotten to mention.

GO ON WITH THE STORY
 CHAPTER XV
 Mark dug one hand down into his waistcoat pocket before he drew out a box. A tiny box of dazzling white diamonds. He snapped the lid back and forth, and a brilliant diamond sparkled. They were set in a band of platinum. "Almost forgot about this," he said. "Let's see if it fits."

He slipped the jeweled band on the third finger of Norma's hand. The ring glowed and she became a disc of fire. They were set in a band of platinum. "Almost forgot about this," he said. "Let's see if it fits."

At Blue Springs there began a world of only Norma and Mark with dimly visionary strangers occasionally drifting in and out of the background. Waiters who served their meals, chauffeurs who drove the motor cars in which they rode, golf caddies, an orchestra, other dancers who might have been miles away for all their presence on the dance floor meant to these two.

Blue Springs was completely perfect and it was completely theirs. It was nearly noon when they arrived. True to Mark's prediction the sun was shining. Great fleecy clouds, moving so slowly that they seemed stationary, darkened the azure sky by their whiteness. It had been crisp October in Blue Springs. Blue Springs was cool enough for light wraps, warm enough that seasoned bathers were still taking their daily dips.

The arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Travers had not been unheralded. Clicking cameras were the first indication of the welcoming committee. Newspaper photographers, having secured informal photographs, asked the newly married couple to pose. White Norma hesitated Mark gave cheerful consent. There was a girl reporter on hand. She asked details of the romance. Mark's replies to her questions were sketchy, satisfactory because about them the young woman was able to weave a glowing, modern Cinderella story about the beautiful stenographer who married a millionaire's son.

"And do your parents approve the marriage?" the reporter asked. "Oh, yes! Certainly!"
 The other side of this story reached telegraphic press services shortly after F. M. Travers, in Marlboro, saw reproductions of his morning newspaper. Parent and brief were F. M. Travers' remarks.

Neither Mark nor Norma read these comments. They posed for the photographers again the second day because the young man had proved friendly when it seemed a simple favor to grant. And since Norma's blond beauty happened to be the sort which photographs ideally, and young love is a subject universally appealing, the pictures appeared in newspapers from coast to coast.

of Blue Springs neither had ever seen before. Small homes far from the fashionable resort section. Rain had brightened even the dull, cleaned it and made it almost respectable.

"Time to turn back, Norma?" "I suppose so."
 They retraced their steps but before they reached the Inn lightning flashes and a sharp crack of thunder sent them running again. It was raining, not heavily, when Mark and Norma made their final dash up the steps of the hotel.

"Oh, that was fun, Mark. Fun!" Norma leaned weakly against a heavy porch chair.
 It was at that moment a tall man in brown approached the pair. "Travers!" he exclaimed. "I didn't know that you were here. When'd you arrive?"

Mark was returning the energetic hand-shake. "Glad to see you, Stone," he said. "Oh, we've been here almost a week. Norma—he turned toward the girl, "here's someone I want you to know. Hollis Stone—old friend. Stone, this is Mrs. Travers, my wife."
 Norma offered her hand. How she managed it she never knew. She raised two blue eyes beneath fluttering lids. Her face had gone paper-white.

"How do you do," she said in a voice that was certainly not her own. She tried to meet the newcomer's eyes again.
 In that glance she knew he had recognized her.

ARE YOU GOING TO SCHOOL THIS FALL.
 If you contemplate attending a business college this fall, and take a business course, it will be of interest to you to ask about a scholarship which we have to one of the best institutions in the Southwest. This scholarship can be secured at a size saving to you—saving enough to pay a portion of your other expenses. Ask us about it if you are interested.

OUT OUR WAY
 A matron with gray hair whom Norma had chatted with the day before bustled up to the couple as they stood in the doorway.
 "Oh, do join our table, you two!" she trilled. "Mr. Clark's disappeared and Madge and I must have a third and fourth."
 "Shall we—?" Mark asked hesitatingly. "I suppose it's contract." "But I don't play contract."

"Really? My dear child, how quaint!"
 Mark grinned. "Afraid you'll have to count us out!" he said. "Goodthing, I guess. I never have luck on a stormy day."
 "You can play, Mark—I don't mind. I can amuse myself," said Norma.

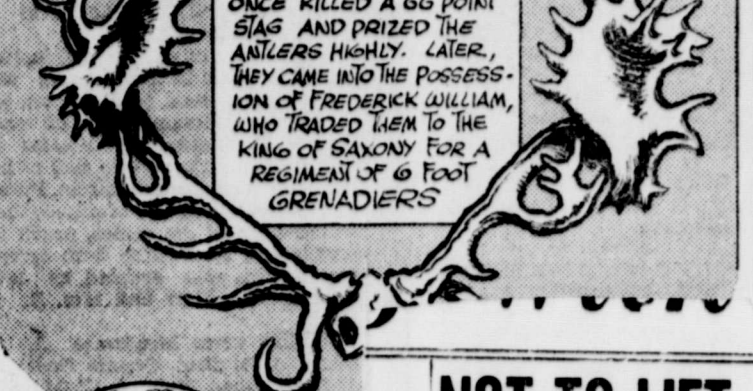

He shook her arm playfully. "Nonsense. Did I say I wanted to play bridge? Well, I don't. Some of these days, though, you'll have to have some lessons. Everybody plays contract! Half the women I know eat, drink and breathe it. Young one as had as the old—"
 They wandered through the lobby into a reading room. Norma could see that Mark was restless. She had been so contented that this disturbed her.

A new magazine—one Mark liked particularly—saved the day. He stepped it on a newsstand, returned a moment later with the gaudy-covered periodical.
 "Look, Norma—look at Bradwell's latest!"
 Bradwell's latest was a drawing in highly stylized vein. Having glanced this prize Mark sank back into a huge club chair and forgot everything else. The girl found a book she had glanced through the day before and settled down to read also.

Yes, This is a Collateral Bank

This is the BANK that SERVICE is Building

We do require ample collateral or a justifying financial statement on practically all loans we make. In the final analysis most of the money we lend belongs to our depositors and we most certainly expect to get it back for them when they come to get it.

If the borrower expects to pay the loan he does not object to giving collateral if he has it. If he does not expect to pay it we are not looking for his kind.

The safety of our depositors' money is our first thought and comes first ahead of everything else.

If your bank asks for collateral or a financial statement in making you a loan give it cheerfully. Remember they are entitled to it and that they are only trying to run a safe bank and to protect you as well as other depositors.

School Changes---

other words, we are regrouping and rearranging the requirements for graduation in order that the student may have a more balance course of study. An outline of these requirements appears in this issue of the News. The purpose of this arrangement is to aid the student in selecting his course along the lines where his interest lies. The student will take only those courses which have a direct bearing or connection with the line of work or vocation he chooses.

Four Types of Courses
Under our arrangement, there are four types of courses for graduation which are explained. Each required subject and each elective subject under these courses has a direct relationship upon the course itself. This arrangement will help the student in finding himself and prepare him better for the vocation he chooses by concentrating on the subjects which are related to this vocation.

Since this is the first year of the arrangement, we will expect the students to conform to the requirements only so far as is possible. The succeeding year will see the complete installation of this plan and no exceptions will be made.

This arrangement applies only to the 9, 10 and 11 grades. The freshman may choose his freshman course as far as is practical for him to do. This gives the freshman liberty to experiment with himself and find just what he is interested in. Then after a year of finding himself, as he enters his sophomore year, he is more interested in certain kind of work than other, consequently, he chooses the course in which he has become the most interested during his freshman year. The course is outlined for him showing both the required and elective courses. Thus he can start to work in his sophomore year knowing exactly what courses he will take to complete the specific type of course he has chosen for graduation.

No student will be permitted to take the non-college going courses without presenting a written statement from his or her parents that it is not their intention to send the child to college.

The purpose behind these changes and revisions is simply that of making Cisco high school serve the needs and demands of Cisco to the fullest possible extent. These needs have been studied carefully and the changes announced have been made on the basis of what this study has revealed.

We invite your cooperation and your interest to the end that they may be effective in accomplishing that purpose.
