Intended Abduction Victim Shoots Down 4 Assailants

THREE DEAD AND FOURTH MAY SUCCUMB

ATLANTA, Tex., Sept. 18.—The men were arrested this afternoon in connection with the attempted kidnaping of J. H. Boyd, 56, who killed three men, frustrating the kidnaping. J. N. Alexander, living near the gasoline service station of Boyd, and Joe Luce, of Bloomsburg, brother of one of the dead men, were arrested on charges of assault to murder and kidnaping.

ATLANTA, Tex., Sept. 18.—A shooting spree between four purported abductors and their intended victim resulted today in the death of three of the supposed kidnapers, perhaps fatal wounding of the fourth and the wounding of the victim, J. H. Boyd, 56, filling station operator.

The first that was known of the killing was when Boyd staggered into a doctor's office about midnight, seeking medical attention, and told of the attempt to kidnap him, resulting in the death of: Hary Luce, 45; Bill Fish, 38, Boyd's stepson, and Early Sullivan. A brother of Early Sullivan, Bill, is in a Shreveport hospital and may not recover.

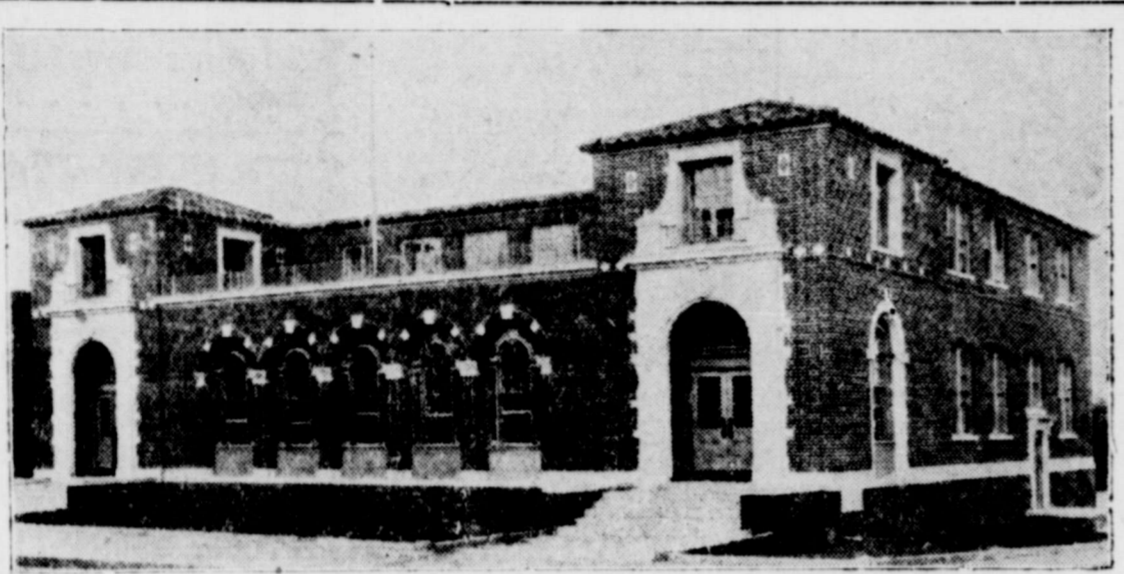

"One of the men came to my station about 11 last night," said Boyd, "and declared they had run out of gasoline. I went to the station and returned with him with a can of gasoline." "Two men were in the parked car and one on the road. One grabbed me and struck me over the head, but I did not knock me unconscious." Boyd drew his 38 calibre revolver and started shooting. As he fired four shots two men slumped. A bullet then tore into his right arm, breaking it as his attackers returned the fire. He changed the pistol to his left hand and fired two more shots, one killing the third attacker and the other perhaps fatally wounding Bill Sullivan.

Another bullet laid a furrow across Boyd's chest, but so quickly did he wipe them that his assailants had little time to shoot back. Boyd then drove back to Atlanta for police and medical attention, leaving the dead and wounded where they had fallen. In the struggle Boyd said they produced what appeared to be a sack, but he avoided their attempt to enmesh him in it. Boyd is expected to recover.

Trouble over the division of family property is believed to have prompted the attempted kidnaping. The alleged abductors were led by Fish, Boyd's stepson.

From Boyd police learned today that the trouble was of several years standing and as a result of the marriage of Fish's mother to Boyd. The division of property belonging to Mrs. Boyd as Mrs. Fish was the basis of that trouble, police said.

BANKER KEPT CAPTIVE; $5,000 IS OBTAINED

MILTON JUNCTION, Wis., Sept. 18.—Four bandits who installed themselves in the home of John A. Paul, president of the Farmer's bank late yesterday, and held Paul and his family captives all night obtained $5,000 from the bank today and escaped.

Paul was at home alone when the bank bandits arrived, threatened him with guns and forced him into a bedroom. When his two sons and a daughter arrived they were herded into the bedroom with him. The daughter, Miss Janet Paul, a former University of Wisconsin co-ed, said today she was amazed at the bandits' courtesy.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

THE ROAD TO WANT.—He that oppreseth the poor to increase his riches, and he that giveth to the rich, shall surely come to want.—Prov. 22: 16.

GIVE GOD THE BEST.—Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase.—Proverbs 3: 9.

THEY'LL WORK IF THEY EAT.

Williamson county's grand jury wants prisoners put to work, rather than left lying out sentences in the comfortable shade of the jail. The body recommended restoring what has come to be known as the chain-gang, that is, use of prisoners on county roads. It wants prisoners to work if they are to eat at county expense.

This type of labor hasn't proved very useful, at best. Old abuses of hiring out prisoners to private enterprises have been abolished permanently.

The main effect would be spent upon the prisoners themselves.

Compulsory work would make Eastland county considerably more unpleasant for the vagrant, the prowler and the petty criminal, than the prospect of resting up at county expense in a comfortable jail. The men would come out in better shape, and the county would be a little better off. Nobody would be deprived of employment.

The more important feature of such a policy is that it would serve as a preventative for crime. Parodying Ben Franklin's celebrated axiom we have a saying not untrue that if you take care of the misdemeanors the felonies will take care of themselves. In other words vagrancy is the breeding ground for serious crimes. Prisoners who discover that a jail sentence means a work sentence are not apt to make the same mistake again.

USELESS TAXING.

A third of a million dollars saving is worth thinking about as a measure of farm relief or citizens' relief.

The people of Texas are now being compelled to pay out that much uselessly, and neither the county nor the state receives any part of it.

They are paying out that amount each year to buy the compulsory headlight certificate required before the annual registration of automobiles.

The testing stations get 15 cents of the amount. A county headlight license supervisor gets 10 cents.

In Eastland county, about $2,400 a year is taken out of the pockets of the citizens for headlight certificates on 9,500 trucks and cars.

The testing of headlights is perfunctory. In a few cases a light will be tilted down. The volume of light is not investigated, and the blinding glare of light that makes highways dangerous is never remedied by the tests. The driver, five minutes after the receipt is issued, could tilt his lights sky-high, and for another year nothing would be done about it.

Members of the legislature have attacked the law as worthless, and as unjust and inexcusable levy of money from citizens without benefit to the state or county, but have taken no action to repeal the law. When new registrations start for 1932, every old car in the state will be subject to a 25-cent assessment. All new cars also must be tested before initial license is granted.

It has been estimated there are 100 people in Texas being supported as county headlight supervisors, by this law. The supervisor issues permits to anywhere from one to 100 stations in a county, then has little to do but sit down and draw his yearly salary, occasionally furnishing one of the stations a pad of blanks, when requested.

Eastland county officials have pointed out that the county fund gets no part of the revenues from the headlight law's levy.

BLUEBONNET VINDICATED.

The Texas bluebonnet, official flower of Texas, has been acquitted of a grave charge. It has been vindicated; and it will flourish in all the glory of its majestic beauty.

It was accused of being a killer.

Cattle growers had claimed that the bluebonnet poisoned livestock that fed upon it.

A. & M. college extension service sat as judge and jury. The charge was a grave one. If sustained, beauty would have had to give way to the beast; the bluebonnet, instead of gratifying one's eye, arousing his patriotism and uplifting his soul in rapture, would have been frowned upon with suspicion and outlawed.

A. & M. college officials have reported that a test was made of the charge that eating the bluebonnet gave cattle paralysis. An animal was led to the sacrificial altar of feeding upon the ambrosial flower. That animal, a fat steer, was fed on bluebonnet seed for 120 days, a total of 13 pounds of the seed. He showed no effects. He stands as supreme proof of the innocence of Lupinus Subcarneus.

Didn't they know that in the horny-handed lariat days of Texas the bluebonnet was known as buffalo clover, and recognized as an important part of the food of the herds? Didn't they know a flower so beautiful, one that on its merits compelled official recognition of the Texas legislature, would even lift a Texas longhorn into the realm of the ethereal for having grazed upon it?

More glory to the cerulean flower that brings gladness to man and no longer withers under the suspicion of causing harm to any beast. Maybe it was marihuana those cows ate.

Some Folks Don't Know When They're Lucky!

OTHER OPINIONS

A MENACE TO THE ROAD

People differed about the abolition of slavery and they differ on the questions of abolition of war and prohibition, but there is no difference of opinion about the abolition of automobile accidents. The constant rising tide of death is not a theory but a fact. The daily list of dead and wounded tells its own story. The question which confronts this state and every other state is, "What are we going to do about it?" Are we going to accept the present situation as inevitable and as part of each day's toll of the machinery of civilization, as part of the price we must pay for progress? Are we simply to say the auto has come to stay, and let it go at that, or are we to band all our energies and all our minds to the task of making the automobile see a safe one in which to live?

Traffic is at its peak again, with longer lists of weekend accident casualties and more talk about accident prevention. It is a foregone conclusion that many of these traffic accidents, with their high percentage of fatalities are the result of defective motor cars. The amazing thing is that the public has suffered thousands of these death cars to carry on so long without inquiry into their inherent capacity for mischief. Only a few states have undertaken a universal inspection of motor vehicles. If railroads used such defective equipment, they would soon have no passengers. But for years automobiles lacking safety equipment have been permitted to dash up and down the streets and highways.

What is society to do with the driver who, to save the price of an adjustment of his brakes, lights or steering mechanism, will risk not only his own life, but the lives of many others? — Paris News.

LONG TELEPHONE CABLE

MALMO, Sweden, Sept. 18. — Sweden's longest submarine telephone cable has been laid between Harsback, near here, and Charlottenlund, in Denmark. It carries 54 wires in addition to a special wire for radio transmission. The cable weighs 300 metric tons and measures 22.2 kilometers (14 miles).

THE CLAIM IS MADE NOW

The claim is being made now that legislative haste or something akin to it put a joker over the legislature and the governor in the attempts to curb the serious abuses of the delinquent tax contract tax collection that brought such a furore a year ago when the state was paying contract tax-gatherers up to one-third for dealing misery to those behind with taxes on their homes or farms.

Now it is claimed that the legislature fixed a rate of 15 per cent on these contracts, but in the same bill turned around and took the limit off where contracts were made.

Since all of it is by contract, it seemed the law actually gave sanction to what it tried to remedy.

And that was while both houses had hired themselves lawyers to keep them straight on the serious business of law-making.

Rep. Alfred Petch of Fredericksburg has offered a bill, late in the session authorizing and fixing procedure for cities and counties to refund high-rate warrants and bonds into lower-rate issues. It specifies that no election shall be necessary, and none of the formalities of referendum.

Publication of official notices is required.

A 40-year limit was placed on the refunding issues and a 6 per cent rate of interest.

Archer county may become a large land owner. With deposits of $1,000,000 in a failed bank, the county is sponsoring a special law to permit it to buy in the assets of the bank consisting of large tracts of land among other assets.

Pay of several thousand school teachers and instructors in the institutions of higher learning is regulated under contract that the legislature cannot interfere with. Compensation of many statutory officers is fixed by law, separate from the appropriations bills.

The pay of the lower-salaried workers of the state should be regarded as fixed by the state's good faith in employing these people, and certainly ought not to be trimmed by coercive action of department heads without legislative sanction. That sanction was specifically denied and refused by the senate, and the principle disapproved. The state officials should remember that their employees now are paying a 2 per cent income tax and paying it to the banks, rather than to the state—in the discount of their warrants.

In the Political Arena

By THE POLITICAL ANALYST

Atty. Gen. James V. Allred called upon the county and district attorneys throughout Texas to investigate an avalanche of complaints from farmers into asserted violations by ginners and cottonseed buyers of anti-trust laws. He has invited all the officials to bring penalty suits wherever evidence is shown that unlawful agreements were made as to the price of ginning or the price paid for cottonseed. The suits have to be by authority and in the name of the attorney general's department, and Mr. Allred said he will issue specific authorization in each case.

Recently Mr. Allred himself filed the first of the suits against ginners of Travis, Williamson and Bastrop counties, and an oil mill at Elgin.

"Since filing these suits," Mr. Allred said, "we have been overwhelmed with complaints from farmers all over Texas, and it is an impossibility for us to investigate all of them in the near future, and give to the farmers the relief to which they are entitled.

"The law authorizes a county or district attorney to investigate these violations of the law through course of inquiry or the grand jury, or otherwise, under direction of the attorney general. I will appreciate their cooperation in this matter and suggest that any farmer or other person desiring to make a complaint take the same up with the county or district attorney at once. In this way they can probably get quicker action than through this department," he said.

"Some of the ginners," Mr. Allred said, "have tried to justify their action in fixing prices by stating that public utilities furnishing them power were making the same charges as when the farmers were receiving more for their cotton, and consequently paying more for having it ginned. No one objects more than I to the high rates charged by some of our public utilities but this does not justify any ginners or cottonseed men in getting together and making an agreement to hold up the price for their service to the farmer.

"I have detailed investigators to call on Congressman Wright Patman and secure any and all of evidence which he may have of the existence of a cottonseed trust. I appreciate his interest in the matter, and if anybody else knows any facts tending to show a monopoly, I will thank them to notify me at once."

Sunday Services at The Churches

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
Sunday school at 9:45 a. m. A message for every age. A work for every age. Dr. Stuart Pearce of El Paso will preach at 11 a. m. and also at 1:30 p. m. A cordial invitation is extended to all to hear Dr. Pearce, who is recognized as an able and mental preacher.

HOLY ROSARY CHURCH
Mass will be at 10 a. m. by Rev. Banno. This is the seventeenth Sunday after Pentecost and the 23rd from St. Matthew XXIII. We are told that the two last commandments are to love God and our neighbor. We must love our neighbor as ourself. This is easier said than done. Some try to defraud and steal from the general state, county or city government without apparently thinking that they are defrauding or stealing from their neighbors because the government means every man, woman and child in the country. So when we act thus we are acting unkindly towards our fellowman. Want to love our fellow man? The real cause of the present depression. There is enough for all in this world but many are not satisfied with enough. — REV. M. COLLINS.

GRACE LUTHERAN CHURCH
Corner Sixteenth street and F avenue. Sunday school and Bible class at 9:30 a. m. Morning service at 10:30 a. m. Evening service at 8 p. m. Topic for morning service: Jesus Teaching the Sadducees Concerning the Resurrection; for evening service: "The Good Angels." We welcome you to these services.—ARTHUR RATHJEN, pastor.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH
The subject of the lesson sermon "Matter" in all Churches of Christ. Scientist, Sunday, September 20. Matthew 24:35 furnishes the golden text: "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." The following passages from the Bible (Psalms 39:6-7) are included in the lesson sermon: "Surely every man walketh in a vain show; surely they are disquieted in vain; he heareth up riches, and saith: I have gathered much, and knoweth not who shall gather them. And now, Lord, what wait I for? my hope is in thee."

EPISCOPAL CHURCH
706 West Fifth street. Evening prayer and sermon at 7:30 p. m., the Rev. C. A. Beasley, priest in charge.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH
Broadway and H avenue. Sunday school at 9:30 a. m. The pastor, Rev. H. D. Tucker, will preach as follows: 10:50 a. m. "A Heartbreaking Lock" and 7:30 p. m. "Fence Straddlers." Leagues meet at 6:30. You are invited to worship with us.—H. D. TUCKER, pastor.

Locked the Stable After the Horse Was Stolen

We are all familiar with the above saying which means, Action came too late. Now, that is the way with many people about their insurance—they think about it when it is too late—they lock the stable too late.

All kinds of Insurance.

FRENCH SOCIAL INSURANCE LAW IS UNPOPULAR

PARIS, Sept. 18.—The newest development in French social legislation, the compulsory social insurance for all workers whose annual salary does not exceed $800, is meeting with growing unpopularity and there is a growing movement outside of party lines, for the repeal of this legislation.

Theoretically the scheme sounded ideal to the political groups of the left and they forced its passage through Parliament. All workers employed at a minor wage were to contribute five per cent of their salary to the state insurance fund, their employers contributing the same, and thereafter the workers and their families were to live happily.

Practically, the scheme has not worked out so well. Many laborers refused to contribute and asked for five per cent wage increases so that the insurance payments would not come from their wage envelopes. That brought an immediate reaction in living costs.

Injured Workers

Workers who were injured and sought to collect insurance on their claims found that they had run into endless red tape. Under this insurance scheme, workers who are injured pay but 15 per cent of their druggist's bill, the state paying the remainder. In case of serious injury, insured workers can be put on half salary for six months, thereafter receiving a pension during any absence up to five years.

Women workers about to become mothers are excused from work and pensioned at half salary for six weeks before the date of birth and six weeks after the birth. There is a definite pension for workers reaching 60 for the remainder of their lives. The pension at 70 averages less than $5 a month.

Death Duties

There is also a demand for a downward revision of the heavy death duties which the state charges on all estates. These duties vary according to the degree of parentage of the heirs, but in some cases have run as high as 97 per cent of the heritage.

Heirs of the first degree, sons inheriting from fathers, pay three to 15 per cent on estates from one franc to 50 millions.

Widows inheriting from husbands or vice versa, pay 33 per cent to 15.6 per cent. Nephews and nieces inheriting from aunts or uncles pay 20 to 44 per cent, all other degrees of parentage pay from 32 to 56.4 per cent. There is a supplementary tax of 39 per cent when there are no direct children among the heirs.

Claim Again, Feller!

LEON SEE, on behalf of his behemoth, Primo Carnera, stood right up the other day and claimed the world's heavyweight championship. The reason: Schmeling failed to fulfill his contract to meet Carnera Sept. 17. Well, anyway, you'll have to admit that Leon See's is the real, dyed-in-the-wool heavyweight championship claim.

Is This a Clew?

HACK WILSON was left on the bench the other day by Manager Hornsby, and a pitcher, Bud Teachout, was sent to the outfield. Hornsby's explanation was, "Hack knows he is through as a Cub, so it would hardly be fair either to the team or himself to play him." Just the same, it was a somewhat surprising move, and behind it you may or may not see a clew to one of the reasons why Hack hasn't been at his best this year. Hack is a guy who has to have a lot of kindly cooperation.

EXPERIMENT IN HEALTH EDUCATION

TENARKANA, Sept. 18.—An experiment in health education, which is looked to by educators of the state for a pattern for Texas public schools, will be carried on in the Texarkana, Texas, public schools this year by the Bureau of Nutrition and Health Education of the University of Texas extension service.

Miss Nancy Hunters Pettus, field worker, is in charge of the experiment here. H. W. Stilwell, superintendent of the local school system, has given his encouragement to tentative plans made by Miss Pettus.

A system of public health education that will prove highly attractive to teachers and pupils, and can be carried out by teachers under direction of the bureau at Austin is most desired, and experiments to be made this year will point in that direction, Miss Pettus explained.

Progress already made locally in public health education led to the selection of Texarkana as a base for the experiment. The program will be carried on through the elementary, sixth and seventh grades. Conferences with teachers will be held during this week and the early part of next week in order that the experiment might be launched with all teachers and pupils participating, Miss Pettus said.

Adoption of the better features of health education already included in regular work of the schools of the state, but which heretofore has been done without a standard program for all of the schools, will be made a part of the experiment.

An effort to raise the standard of health teaching in the schools, to lead attractively to the health program, and to base the health program on activities in which the pupils are most likely to become interested will be made here, Miss Pettus said.

China Hears of Broadway

The Broadway of America highway, on which this city is located, is even being heard of in far-away China. The August 12th issue of the "North China Star" published in Tientsin, China, carries a story by Edison R. Waite, internationally known columnist, on the Broadway through Texas and other southwest territory.

Basis for the story is laid on a trip taken with Grady Bell, secretary of the Odessa, Texas, Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Bell is now field representative of the Broadway association. Mr. Waite, who syndicates his articles to more than 3,000 daily and weekly papers throughout the United States and foreign countries, recently made a trip over the Broadway from Memphis, Tenn., to San Diego and as a result frequent references to the Broadway have been made in his articles giving this highway unrivaled publicity.

It is improbable that the story appearing in the Tientsin paper will help much in increasing travel over the Broadway," said F. O. Mackey, president of the association. "However, we are not passing up any bet to attract tourists, even from China. We are looking for a big revival in tourist travel this fall and winter and the Broadway now more than 83 per cent improved, is ready to take care of this travel and offer the tourist the maximum in good roads, courteous service along the way, fine accommodations and interesting scenic and historic points."

LAURA LOU BROOKMAN Author of "MAD MARRIAGE"

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 Pretty Norma Kent, 20-year-old beauty, marries Mark Travers, of F. M. Travers, millionaire estate dealer, in spite of the opposition and threats to her life.

The story opens in Marlboro, a small town in Marlboro, where a metropolis. Mark Travers is the owner of the expensive roadster to get to the honeymoon and he and Norma go to fashionable Blue Springs. There Norma meets Hiram Sykes, and it is evident from the manner that she has known him before and for some reason she fears him.

Her money is son gone, partly because of Mark's gambling. With the money borrowed from Stone the couple return to Marlboro. Mark goes out on a round of pleasure hunting instead of hunting a job. He introduces Norma to Natalie, a debutante who he long ago deflowered. Mark and Norma move to a cheap apartment. Mark begins to hunt work. He gets one job and then he becomes a floorwalker in Blossomdale's department store. On the anniversary of her marriage two months before, Norma returns. She is outraged at this extravagance and quarrel. Norma threatens to leave him but Mark's mother argues Mrs. Travers urges Mark to a reconciliation with his father but he refuses.

HOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
 CHAPTER XXVI
 Norma spread the newspaper on the living room table. She set over it, frowning slightly as she studied a column. The words were in fine print and very black. Norma pursed her lips as she read.

"Truss the bird. Rub a little butter over it and dredge with salt and pepper. Put in roasting pan and place in hot oven. Bake at frequent intervals."

The three little wrinkles in the bird's forehead deepened. Some of the instructions sounded un-pleasant. She went on reading until she had finished the column. It was not until she had finished the column that she had finished the column. It was not until she had finished the column that she had finished the column.

What would Bob be doing tomorrow? she wondered. How little she had thought of him lately and how much he had occupied her thoughts a few months ago! Norma reached the apartment and immediately stray fancies vanished. There was work to be done and the girl settled down to it immediately. The whole apartment must be made immaculate. She was in the midst of the sweeping when there was a ring at the door. It was the boy from the store who waited outside. Norma set the groceries on the kitchen table and returned the basket. Then she put the duck in the ice box and went on with her sweeping.

Dinner that evening was late. Mark did not arrive home until after six. He threw down his hat and coat and told Norma it had been a tiresome day. More people in the store because of the coming holiday. Customers, keyed to excitement, a little more impatient than usual. Yes, Mark was weary. He had been at Blossomdale's for three weeks now. There had been two $25 pay checks and on Saturday there would be another. The young Traverses, though they had little on the credit side of the ledger, were at least meeting their debts, paying their living expenses and, remarkably as it might seem, quite happy. There had been no quarrels since the night Mark brought home the roses. Both Mark and Norma were too tired at the end of a day to regret the fact they had no money for recreation.

"I'm so glad you'll be home all day tomorrow," Norma said as she set the last dish on the table. "You really need the rest, Mark. You've been over-doing."

"Oh, it isn't that! Just that I'm new at this stuff. Not used to being on my feet all day and don't know enough about the store. Boy, when the Christmas rush starts I suppose I'll think this was a picnic! After the second week in December the store is open from nine in the morning until nine at night."

"But they'll pay you extra, won't they?"

"Hope so. I haven't found out yet. Well, what's the program for tomorrow?"

"Dinner at two. I thought you'd want to sleep late. Is that all right?"

"O. K. with me. Say, you know that one thing I'm mighty glad about—won't have to sit across from Aunt Matilda and hear her talk about what happened the summer of '72 in Progress City and how Great-Uncle Hiram humped the Indians out of their land?"

"I don't know! God forbid, I never listened! Aunt Matilda's nearly 80 but she can out-talk anyone I ever met. What do you say, kid? Shall we step out to a movie?"

Norma dimpled. "There's Jack O'Leary in that new one at the Century."

"Let's see it!"

Perhaps the roast duck Norma drew from the oven next day was not seasoned exactly to the taste of the French chef. Perhaps its dressing could have been improved. Nevertheless the bird was beautifully roasted. It was well cooked and, according to Mark Travers, it was the finest fare he had ever eaten. The duck was after all only a part of the carefully prepared meal. That it was a success was enough to put Norma into the true spirit of Thanksgiving Day. She knew the candied sweet potatoes, the salad and rolls and the mince pie were as they should be. Hearing Mark praise her cooking—at least did praise it—was more than reward for the hours she had spent in the tiny kitchen.

They dined by

Prince's Principal Partner

The fruit centerpiece was as colorful and attractive as though it had been arranged on a silver platter instead of one of the plates from the "five and ten."

At the other side of the city in a palatial dining room an elaborate dinner was being served. Mark's father and mother sat at either end of that dining table. Half a dozen servants had spent their efforts preparing and serving the repast. It was the sort of Thanksgiving dinner to which Mark Travers had been accustomed all his life.

There could have been no greater contrast than the simple meal Norma had cooked and the one at which Mark's parents sat. Perhaps Mark was thinking something of this sort.

He leaned forward across the table and found the girl's hand. As he pressed it, Mark said in a lowered voice. "You—you make me awfully happy. You're so sweet, Norma!"

All of which was ample reason for Norma Travers to rise next morning feeling the world was a grand place in which to live. She finished her tasks in the apartment. Then she dressed, putting on the old polo coat and snug hat she had worn so often on daily trips to the law office. She had erred to attend to downtown and was anxious to finish them and be home by noon.

The street car was not crowded and Norma found a seat immediately. That was because the morning rush had ended. She rode to Broad street and Eighth avenue and then left the car.

Norma walked rapidly. Mentally she was reviewing her list of purchases—first the saucer to replace the one she had broken, then the oil cloth and the yard of ribbon."

Her thoughts were interrupted by a shrill, familiar voice.

Pageant Lauds Ax Wielder

SOMERSET Pa., Sept. 18.—"Tony Beaver," mythical character known and loved by lumbermen wherever an ax is chipped into a tree, was created in actual life here by the combined efforts of a peasant writer and an actor.

In a natural emphaizer, the prodigious "Tony" himself, his character and that of the equally extraordinary "Johnny Inkslinger," were portrayed for the Allegheny Tableland Association Music festival held here Sept. 5 and 6.

An audience from eight counties in West Virginia and Pennsylvania—comprising the plateau famed for maple sugar and syrup, potatoes, buckwheat cakes and blackberry jam—applauded the feats of the timberman's traditional hero.

It was "Tony Beaver" who logged the Tableland and "Johnny Inkslinger" who felled it. "Tony" seven years, four months, two weeks, five days, 17 hours, four minutes, and 46 1-2 seconds to take a log of the Tableland, following, as he did, "the slippin' and slidin' of Beaver as she traveled all over the plateau country."

"Nobody but Tony Beaver could 'ax' 'em!" the tradition continues. "an' even he couldn't 'ax' 'em if it hadn't been for Babe, the blue ox, who wuz born the year of the blue snow and measured 47 ax handles and a plug o' tobacco between the horns."

"Johnny Inkslinger," the time-keeper of bunkhouse tales, is the lad who saved 229 barrels of ink the year of the ink shortage by remembering not to cross his t's and dot his i's.
